Digitized by the Internet Archive
in 2013

http://archive.org/details/worksoflearnedjo01bing

Scriptorium Amherst 20/4/96 3.

THE WORKS

Of the LEARNED

JOSEPH BINGHAM, M.A.

1668-1723

Late Rector of Havant, and ſometime Fellow of UNIVERSITY-COLLEGE in Oxford.

CONTAINING,

I. ORIGINES ECCLESIASTICÆ: Or, The ANTIQUITIES of the CHRISTIAN CHURCH. In twenty three Books.

II. A Scholaſtical Hiſtory of LAY-BAPTISM. In two Parts.

III. The French Churches APOLOGY for the Church of England.

IV. A Diſcourſe concerning the Mercy of GOD to Penitent Sinners.

In TWO VOLUMES.

LONDON:

Printed for ROBERT KNAPLOCK at the Biſhop's-Head in St. Paul's Church-yard.

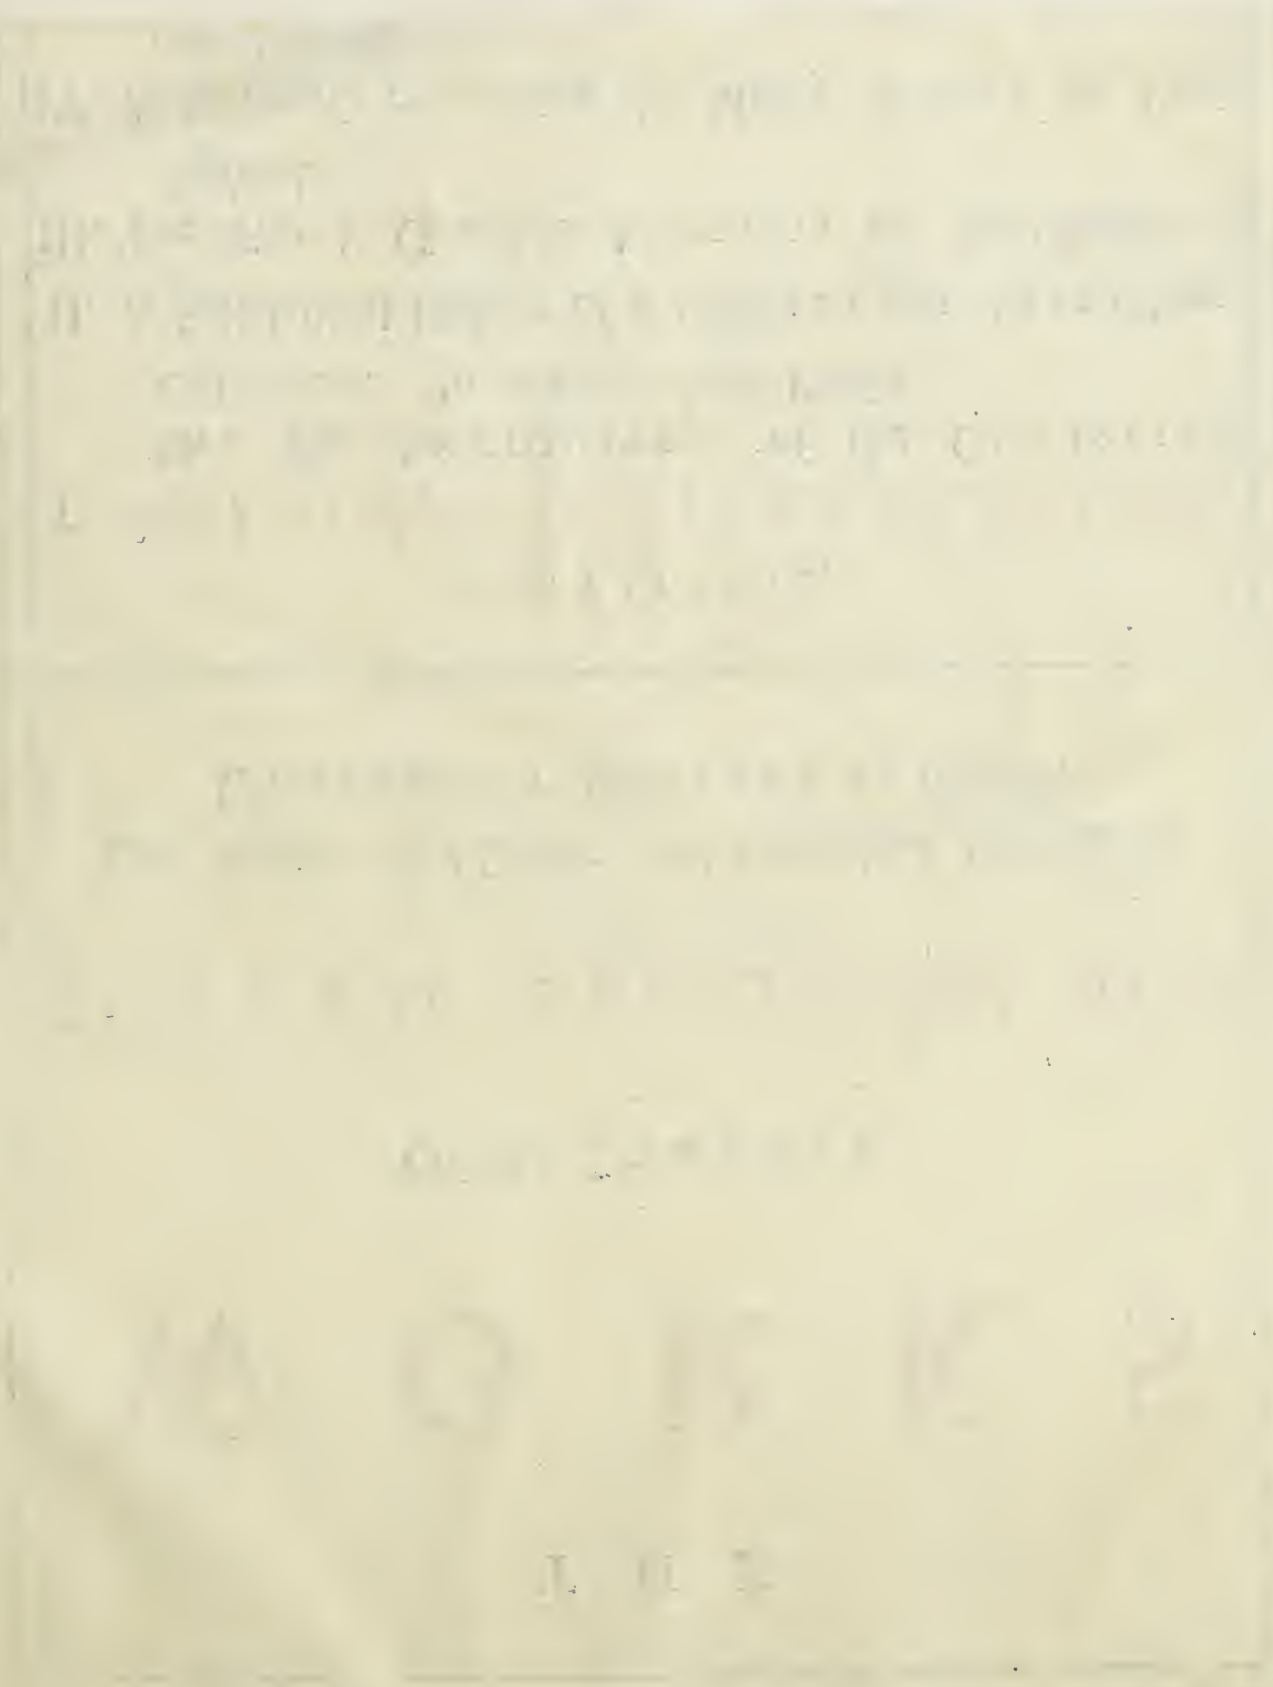
M DCC XXVI.



To the Right Reverend Father in GOD,

JONATHAN,

Lord Biſhop of WINCHESTER,

And PRELATE of the Moſt Noble Order of the GARTER.

My Lord,

HAVING once determined with my ſelf to make theſe Collections Publick, I needed no long time to conſider, to whom I ſhould firſt Addreſs and Preſent them. They are, my Lord, the firſt Fruits of my Labour under Your Lordſhip's Government and Inſpection: And I was willing to think, and do preſume I did not think amiſs, that Your Lordſhip had a ſort of Title to the firſt Fruits of any of Your Clergy's Labour; eſpecially if the Subject, on which they were employed, was ſuitable to their Calling, and had any direct Tendency to promote Chriſtian Knowledge in the World. The Subject of the preſent Diſcourſe, being an Eſſay upon the antient Uſages and Cuſtoms of the Primitive Church, and a particular Account of the State of her Clergy, is ſuch, as being conſidered barely in its own Nature, I know cannot but be approved by a Perſon of Your Lordſhip's Character; whoſe Care is concerned not only in Preſerving the Purity of the Primitive Faith, but alſo in Reviving the Spirit of the Antient Diſcipline and Primitive Practice: And were the Management any ways anſwerable to the Greatneſs of the Subject, That would doubly recommend it to Your Lordſhip's Favour; ſince Apples of Gold are ſomething the more beautiful for being ſet in Pictures of Silver. But I am ſenſible the Subject is too Sublime and Copio[illegible]oo

Nice and Difficult, to have Juſtice done it from any ſingle Hand, much leſs from mine: All therefore I can pretend to hope for from Your Lordſhip, is, That Your Candour and Goodneſs will make juſt Allowances for the Failings, which Your Sagacity and Quickneſs will eaſily perceive to be in this Performance. I am not, I confeſs, without Hopes, that as well the Abſtruſeneſs and Difficulty of the Subject it ſelf, as my own difficult Circumſtances, under which I was forced to labour, for want of proper Aſſiſtance of abundance of Books, may be ſome Apology for the Defects of the Work: And if I can but ſo far obtain Your Lordſhip's good Opinion, as to be thought to have deſigned well; as I am already conſcious of my own good Intentions to conſecrate all my Labours to the publick Service of the Church; that will inſpire me with freſh Vigour, notwithſtanding theſe Difficulties, to proceed with Cheerfulneſs and Alacrity in the remaining Parts of this Work, which are yet behind, and which I ſhall be the more willing to ſet about, if I can perceive that it has Your Lordſhip's Approbation. The Countenance and Encouragement of ſuch a Judge may perhaps have a more univerſal Influence, to excite the Zeal of many others, who have greater Abilities to ſerve the Church: And I know not how better to congratulate Your Lordſhip upon Your happy Acceſſion to the Epiſcopal Throne of this Dioceſe, than by wiſhing You the Bleſſing and Satisfaction of ſuch a Clergy, whoſe Learning and Induſtry, Piety and Religion, influenced by the Wiſdom of Your Conduct, and animated by the Example of Your Zeal and Perſeverance, even to Impriſonment in Times of greateſt Difficulty, may ſo qualify them to diſcharge every Office of their Function, as may make Your Dioceſe one of the ſhining Glories of the Preſent Church, and a provoking Example to the Future: Which is the hearty Prayer and Deſire of,

MY LORD,

Your Lordſhip's Faithful, and Obedient Servant,

J. BINGHAM.

THE

PREFACE

[To the First Volume, when printed in 8vo.]

THIS Volume, which is now publiſhed, being only a Part of a larger Work, the Reader, I preſume, will expect I ſhould give him ſome little Account of the whole Deſign, and the Reaſons which engaged me upon this Undertaking. The Deſign which I have formed to myſelf, is to give ſuch a Methodical Account of the Antiquities of the Chriſtian Church, as others have done of the Greek, and Roman, and Jewiſh Antiquities; not by writing an Hiſtorical, or continued Chronological Account of all Tranſactions, as they happened in the Church, (of which kind of Books there is no great want) but by reducing the antient Cuſtoms, Uſages and Practices of the Church under certain proper Heads, whereby the Reader may take a View at once of any particular Uſage or Cuſtom of Chriſtians, for four or five of the firſt Centuries, to which I have generally confined my Enquiries in this Diſcourſe. I cannot but own, I was moved with a ſort of Emulation (not an Unholy one, I hope) to ſee ſo many Learned Men with ſo much Zeal employed in Collecting and Publiſhing the Antiquities of Greece and Rome; whilſt in the mean time we had Nothing (ſo far as I was able to learn) that could be called a Compleat Collection of the Antiquities of the Church, in the Method that is now propoſed. The Compilers of Church-Hiſtory indeed have taken Notice of many Things of this kind, as they paſs along in the Courſe of their Hiſtory, as Baronius, and the Centuriators, and ſeveral others: But then the Things lie ſcattered in ſo many Places in large Volumes, that there are few Readers of thoſe few that enter upon Reading thoſe Books, that will be at the Pains to Collect their Accounts of Things into one View, or Digeſt and Methodize their ſcattered Obſervations. There are a great many other Authors, who have written ſeveral Excellent Diſcourſes upon particular Subjects of Church-Antiquity, out of which perhaps a Gronovius or a Grævius might make a more Noble Collection of Antiquities, than any yet Extant in the World: But as no One has yet attempted ſuch a Work, ſo neither, when it was effected, would it be for the Purchaſe or Peruſal of every ordinary Reader, for whoſe Uſe chiefly my own Collections are intended. There are a third Sort of Writers, who have alſo done very good Service in Explaining and Illuſtrating ſeveral Parts of Church-Antiquity, in the Occaſional Notes and Obſervations upon many of the antient Writers; of which kind are the curious Obſervations of Albaſpiny, Juſtellus, Petavius, Valeſius, Cotelerius, Baluzius, Sirmondus, Gothofred, Fabrotus, Biſhop Beverege, and many others, who have publiſhed the Works of the antient Fathers, and Canons of the Councils, with very Excellent and Judicious Remarks upon them But theſe again lie ſcattered in ſo many and ſo large Volumes, without any other Order, than as the Authors on whom they commented, would admit of, that they are not to be reckoned upon, or uſed as any Methodized or Digeſted Collection of Church Antiquities, even by thoſe who have Ability to Purchaſe, or Opportunity to Read them. Beſides theſe there are another ſort of Writers, who have purpoſely undertaken to give an Account of the antient Uſages of the Church, in Treatiſes written particularly upon that Subject; ſuch as Gavantus, Caſalius, Durantus, and ſeveral others of the Roman Communion: But theſe Writers do by no means ſatisfy a Judicious and Inquiſitive Reader, for ſeveral Reaſons; 1. Becauſe their Accounts are very Imperfect, being con- fined chiefly to the Liturgical Part of Church-Antiquity, beſide which there are a great many other Things neceſſary to be explained, which they do not ſo much as touch upon, or once mention. 2. Becauſe in treating of that Part they build much upon the Collections of Gratian, and ſuch Modern Writers, and uſe the Authority of the ſpurious Epiſtles of the antient Popes, which have been exploded long ago, as having no pretence to Antiquity in the Judgment of all Candid and Judicious Writers. But chiefly their Accounts are unſatisfactory, becauſe, 3. Their whole Deſign is to varniſh over the Novel Practices of the Romiſh Church, and put a Face of Antiquity upon them: To which purpoſe they many times repreſent antient Cuſtoms in diſguiſe, to make them look like the Practices of the preſent Age, and offer them to the Reader's View not in their own Native Dreſs, but in the Similitude and Reſemblance of Modern Cuſtoms. Cardinal Bona himſelf could not forbear making this Reflection upon ſome ſuch Writers as theſe, whom he juſtly cenſures, as deſerving very ill * of the Sacred Rites of the Church, and their venerable Antiquity, who meaſure all antient Cuſtoms by the Practice of the preſent Times, and judge of the Primitive Diſcipline only by the Rule and Cuſtoms of the Age they live in; being deceived by a falſe Perſuaſion, that the Practice of the Church never differed in any Point from the Cuſtoms which they learned from their Forefathers and Teachers, and which they have been inured to from their tender Years: Whereas we retain many Words in common with the antient Fathers, but in a Senſe as different from theirs, as our Times are remote from the firſt Ages after Chriſt; as will appear (ſays he) when we come to diſcourſe of the Oblation, Communion, and other Parts of Divine Service. This is an ingenuous Confeſſion, and withal a juſt Reflection upon the Partiality of the Writers of his own Church; and a good Reaſon, in my Opinion, why we are not to expect any exact Accounts of Antiquity from any Writers of that Communion; though ſome are leſs tainted with her Errors than others, and can allow themſelves to be a little more Liberal and Free upon ſome Occaſions than the reſt of their Brethren: Yet even Bona himſelf, after the Reflection he has made upon others, runs into the very ſame Error, and falls under his own Cenſure: And Habertus, though otherwiſe a very Learned and Ingenuous Perſon, who has written about the Greek Liturgicks, as Bona has of the Latin; is often through Prejudice carried away with the common Failing of the Writers of that Side, whoſe Talents are chiefly employed in Palliating the Faults of the Communion and Cauſe they are engaged in. So that if we are to expect any exact Account of Church-Antiquities, it muſt be from ſome Proteſtant Authors, who can write with greater Freedom and leſs Prejudice concerning the Uſages and Cuſtoms of the Primitive Church. But among theſe there are very few that have travelled very far in this Way; the Generality of our Writers contenting themſelves to collect and explain ſo much of Church-Antiquity, as was neceſſary to ſhew the Errors and Novelties of Popery; but not deſcending to any more Minute and Particular Conſideration of things, which did not come within the Compaſs of the Controverſy they had with the Romiſh Church. Hoſpinian indeed, in the beginning of the Reformation, wrote ſeveral large Volumes of the Origin of Temples, Feſtivals, Monachiſm, with the Hiſtory of the Euchariſt. But as theſe take in but very few Subjects, ſo they are too full of Modern Relations; which make them ſomething tedious to an ordinary Reader, and no compleat Account of Primitive Cuſtoms neither. Spalatenſis in his Books de Republica Eccleſiaſtica has gone a little farther; yet he generally confines himſelf to the Popiſh Controverſy, and has much out of Gratian and the Canon Law; which indeed ſerved him as good Arguments ad Hominem againſt thoſe whom he had to deal with, but it will not paſs for Authentick Hiſtory in other Caſes. Suicerus's Theſaurus Eccleſiaſticus is abundantly more Particular, and indeed the beſt Treaſure of this ſort of Learning, that has yet been publiſhed: But his Collections are chiefly out of the Greek Fathers; and only in the Method of a Vocabulary or Lexicon, explaining Words and Things preciſely in the Order of the Alphabet. The moſt Methodical Account of Things of this kind, that I have yet ſeen, is that of our Learned Countryman Dr. Cave, in his Excellent Book of Primitive Chriſtianity; wherein he has given a ſuccinct but clear Account of many antient Cuſtoms and Practices, not ordinarily to be met with elſewhere. But his Deſign being chiefly to recommend the Moral Part of Primitive Chriſtianity to the Obſervation and Practice of Men, he was not obliged to be very particular in explaining many other Things, which though uſeful in themſelves, yet might be looked upon as foreign to his Deſign; and for that reaſon, I preſume, he induſtriouſly omitted omitted them. There are ſome other Books, which I have not yet ſeen, but only gueſs by the Titles that they may be of this kind; ſuch as Bebelius's Antiquitates Eccleſiaſticæ, Martinay de Ritibus Eccleſiæ, Hendecius de Antiquitatibus Eccleſiaſticis, Quenſtedt Antiquitates Biblicæ & Eccleſiaſticæ: But I preſume, whatever they are, they will not foreſtall my Deſign, which is chiefly to gratify the Engliſh Reader with an entire Collection of Church-Antiquities in our own Language, of which this Volume is publiſhed as a Specimen. And if this proves uſeful to the Publick, and finds a favourable Acceptance, it will be followed with the remaining Parts of the Work (as my Time and Occaſions will give me leave) according to the Scheme here laid down, or with as little Variation as may be. I ſhall next treat of the Inferior Orders of the Clergy, as I have here done of the Superior: Then of the Elections and Ordinations of the Clergy: And the ſeveral Qualifications of thoſe that were to be ordained: Of the Privileges, Immunities, and Revenues of the Clergy, and the ſeveral Laws and Rules which particularly reſpected their Function. To which I ſhall ſubjoin an Account of the antient Aſceticks, Monks, Virgins and Widows, who were a ſort of Retainers to the Church. After this ſhall follow an Account of the antient Churches, and their ſeveral Parts, Utenſils, Conſecrations, Immunities, together with a Notitia of the antient Diviſion of the Church into Provinces, Dioceſes, Pariſhes, and the Original of theſe. After which I ſhall ſpeak of the Service of the Church, beginning with the Inſtitution and Inſtruction of the Catechumens, and deſcribing their ſeveral Stages before Baptiſm; then ſpeak of Baptiſm it ſelf, and its ordinary Concomitant, Confirmation. Then proceed to the other ſolemn Services of Pſalmody, Reading of the Scripture, and Preaching, which were the firſt Part of the antient Church-Service: Then ſpeak of their Prayers, and the ſeveral Rites and Cuſtoms obſerved therein; where of the Uſe of Liturgies and the Lord's Prayer; and of the Prayers of Catechumens, Energumens and Penitents; all which part of the Service thus far was commonly called by the Name of the Miſſa Catechumenorum; then of the Miſſa Fidelium, or Communion-Service; where of the Manner of their Oblations and Celebration of the Euchariſt, which was always the Cloſe of the ordinary Church-Service. After this I ſhall proceed to give a particular Account of their Faſts, and Feſtivals, their Marriage Rites, and Funeral Rites, and the Exerciſe of antient Church Diſcipline; their Manner of holding Councils and Synods, Provincial, Patriarchal, Oecumenical; the Power of Chriſtian Princes in Councils, and out of them: The Manner and Uſe of their Literæ Formatæ, and the ſeveral ſorts of them: Their different ways of Computation of Time: To which I ſhall add an Account of their Schools, Libraries, and Methods of Educating and Training up Perſons for the Miniſtry; and ſay ſomething of the ſeveral Tranſlations of the Bible in uſe among them, and ſeveral other Miſcellaneous Rites and Things, which would properly come under none of the forementioned Heads; ſuch as their Manner of taking Oaths, their Abſtinence from Blood, their frequent Uſe of the Sign of the Croſs, their ſeveral ſorts of publick Charities, the Honours which they paid to their Martyrs, together with an Account of their Sufferings, and the ſeveral Inſtruments of Cruelty uſed by the Heathen to haraſs and torment them. In treating of all which, or any other ſuch-like Matters, as ſhall offer themſelves, I ſhall obſerve the ſame Method that I have done in this Volume; illuſtrating the antient Cuſtoms from the Original Records of Antiquity, and joining the Opinions of the beſt Modern Authors that I can have Opportunity to peruſe, for unfolding Points of greateſt Difficulty. I confeſs, indeed, this Work will ſuffer ſomething in my Hands, for want of ſeveral Books, which I have no Opportunity to ſee, nor Ability to purchaſe: But that perhaps may tempt ſome others, who are at the Fountains of Learning, and have all manner of Books at Command, to add to my Labours, and improve this Eſſay to a much greater Perfection; ſince it is a Subject that will never be exhauſted, but ſtill be capable of Additions and Improvement. The chief Aſſiſtance I have hitherto had, is from the noble Benefaction of one, who being dead, yet ſpeaketh; I mean the renowned Biſhop Morley, whoſe Memory will for ever remain freſh in the Hearts of the Learned and the Good; who, among many other Eminent Works of Charity and Generoſity, becoming his great Soul, and high Station in the Church; ſuch as the Augmentation of ſeveral ſmall Benefices, and Proviſion of a decent Habitation and Maintenance for the Widows of Poor Clergymen in his Dioceſe, &c. has alſo bequeathed a very valuable Collection of Books to the Church of Wincheſter, for the Advancement of Learning among the Parochial Clergy: And I reckon it none of the leaſt Part of my Happineſs, that Providence removing me early from the Univerſity, (where the beſt Supplies of Learning are to be had) had) placed me by the Hands of a Generous Benefactor, without any Importunity or Seeking of my own, in such a Station, as gives me Liberty and Opportunity to make use of so good a Library, tho' not so perfect as I could wish. But the very mentioning this, as it is but a just Debt to the Memory of that great Prelate, so perhaps it may provoke some other generous Spirit, of like Abilities and Fortune with him, to add new Supplies of Modern Books published since his Death, to augment and compleat his Benefaction. Which would be an Addition of new Succours and Auxiliaries to my self, and others in my Circumstances, and better enable us to serve the Publick. In the mean time, the Reader may with Ease enjoy, what with no small Pains and Industry I have collected and put together; and he may make Additions from his own Reading and Observation, as I have done upon several Authors, whom I have had occasion to peruse and mention. From some of which, and those of great Fame and Learning, I have sometimes thought myself obliged to dissent, upon some nice and peculiar Questions: But I have never done it, without giving my Reasons, and treating them with that Decency and Respect, which is due to their great Learning and Character. If in any thing I have made Mistakes of my own, (as I cannot be so vain as to think I have made none) every Intelligent Reader may make himself Judge, and correct them with Ingenuity and Candor. All I can say, is, That I have been as careful to avoid Mistakes as I could, in so Critical and Curious a Subject; and I hope there will not be found so many, but that this Essay may prove Useful both to the Learned and Unlearned; to instruct the one, who cannot read these Things in their Originals; and refresh the Memories of the other, who may know many things, that they cannot always readily have recourse to. Or, if it be of no use to greater Proficients, it may at least be some Help to Young Students and New Beginners, and both provoke them to the Study of antient Learning, and a little prepare them for their Entrance upon it. Besides, I considered, there were some who might have a good Inclination toward the Study of these things, who yet have neither Ability to purchase, nor Time and Opportunity to read over many antient Fathers and Councils: And to such, a Work of this Nature composed ready to their Hands, might be of considerable Use, to acquaint them with the State and Practice of the Primitive Church, when they have no better Opportunities to be informed about it. If in any of these Respects, these Collections (which were designed for the Honour of the antient Church, and the Benefit of the Present,) may prove serviceable toward those Ends, I shall not think my Time and Pains ill bestowed.

* Bona Rerum Liturgic. lib. 1. c. 18. n. 1.

Dr. Radcliffe.

THE

THE CONTENTS.

BOOK I.

Of the ſeveral Names and Orders of Men in the Chriſtian Church.

CHAP. I.

Of thoſe Titles and Appellations which Chriſtians owned, and diſtinguiſhed themſelves by.

Sect. 1. Chriſtians at firſt called Jeſſeans, Therapeutæ, Electi, &c. Sect. 2. Chriſt called by a Technical Name ΙΧΘΥΣ; and Chriſtians, Piſciculi, from that. Sect. 3. Chriſtians, why called Gnoſtici by ſome Authors. Sect. 4. Theophori, and Chriſtophori. Sect. 5. Sometimes, but very rarely, Chriſti. Sect. 6. Chriſtians great Enemies to all Party-Names, and Human Appellations. Chriſtian, the Name they chiefly gloried in. Sect. 7. Of the Name Catholick, and its Antiquity. Sect. 8. In what Senſe the Name Eccleſiaſticks given to all Chriſtians. Sect. 9. The Chriſtian Religion called Δόγμα, and Chriſtians ὁι τῦ ΔόγμαΓ@. Sect. 10. Chriſtians called Jews by the Heathens. Sect. 11. Chriſt commonly called Chreſtus by the Heathens; and Chriſtians, Chreſtians. Pag. 1

CHAP. II.

Of the Names of Reproach, which Jews, Infidels, and Hereticks, caſt upon the Chriſtians.

Sect. 1. Chriſtians commonly called Nazarens by Jews and Heathens. Sect. 2. And Galilæans. Sect. 3. And Atheiſts. Sect. 4. Greeks and Impoſtors. Sect. 5. Magicians. Sect. 6. The new Superſtition. Sect. 7. Sibylliſts. Sect. 8. Biothanati. Sect. 9. Parabolarii, and Deſperati. Sect. 10. Sarmentitii, and Semaxii. Sect. 11. Lucifugax Natio. Sect. 12. Plautina Proſapia. Sect. 13. Chriſtians called Capitolins, Synedrians, and Apoſtaticks, by the Novatians. Sect. 14. Pſychici, by the Montaniſts and Valentinians. Sect. 15. Allegoriſts by the Millenaries. Sect. 16. Chronitæ by the Aetians, Simplices by the Manichees, Anthropolatræ by the Apollinarians. Sect. 17. Philoſarcæ, and Peluſiotæ, by the Origenians. Sect. 18. The Synagogue of Satan and Antichriſt, by the Luciferians. p. 5

CHAP. III.

Of the ſeveral Orders of Men in the Chriſtian Church.

Sect. 1. Three ſorts of Members of the Chriſtian Church; the ἡγέμμοι, πιϛοῖ, and κατηχέμμοι; Rulers, Believers, and Catechumens. Sect. 2. The Name, Believers, ſtrictly taken for the baptized Laity, in Oppoſition to the Catechumens. Sect. 3. Catechumens owned as Imperfect Members of the Church. Sect. 4. Hereticks not reputed Chriſtians. Sect. 5. Penitents and Energumens ranked in the ſame Claſs with Catechumens. p. 9

CHAP. IV.

A more particular Account of the Πιϛοὶ, or Believers, and their ſeveral Titles of Honour, and Privileges above the Catechumens.

Sect. 1. Believers otherwiſe called φωτιζόμμοι, The Illuminate. Sect. 2. And ὁι μεμυημμόι, The Initiated. Sect. 3. And τέλιοι, The Perfect. Sect. 4. Chari Dei, ἅγιοι, &c. Sect. 5. The Privileges of Believers. Firſt, To partake of the Euchariſt. Sect. 6. Secondly, To ſtay and join in all the Prayers of the Church. Sect. 7. Thirdly, Their ſole Prerogative to uſe the Lord's-Prayer. Whence that Prayer was called ἐυχὴ πιϛῶν, the Prayer of Believers. Sect. 8. Fourthly, They were admitted to hear Diſcourſes upon the moſt Profound Myſteries of Religion. All which Privileges were denied to the Catechumens. p. 11

CHAP. V.

Of the Diſtinction of Believers from the Rulers. Where, of the Diſtinction obſerved in the Names and Offices of Laity and Clergy; and of the Antiquity of theſe Diſtinctions.

Sect. 1. Believers otherwiſe called Laici, Laymen, to diſtinguiſh them from the Clergy. Sect. 2. The Antiquity of this Diſtinction in the Names, proved againſt Rigaltius, Salmaſius, and Selden. Sect. 3. The Objection from 1 Pet. 5. 3. anſwered.

ed. Sect. 4. A Distinction in the Offices of Laity and Clergy always observed. Sect. 5. Laymen otherwise called Βιωτικοὶ, Seculars. Sect. 6. Also ἰδιῶται, Private Men. Sect. 7. What Persons properly called Clerici. Sect. 8. The Name Clerici, sometimes appropriated to the inferior Orders. Sect. 9. The Reason of the Name Clerici. Sect. 10. All the Clergy antiently called Canonici, and the Reason of it. Sect. 11. Also τάξις τῆς βήματος, The Order of the Sanctuary. p. 13

BOOK II.

Of the several Superior Orders of the Clergy in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the Original of Bishops; and that they were a distinct Order from Presbyters in the Primitive Church.

Sect. 1. What the Ancients mean by different Orders of Bishops and Presbyters. Sect. 2. The Order of Bishops always owned to be superior to that of Presbyters. Sect. 3. The Order of Bishops reckon'd by all Antient Writers to be of Apostolical and Divine Institution. Sect. 4. A List or Catalogue of Bishops ordained by the Apostles. p. 17

CHAP. II.

Of the several Titles of Honour given to Bishops in the Primitive Church.

Sect. 1. All Bishops at first called Apostles. Sect. 2. After that, Successors of the Apostles. Sect. 3. Whence every Bishop's See called Sedes Apostolica. Sect. 4. Bishops called Princes of the People. Sect. 5. Præpositi, πρόεδροι, πρόεδροι, ἔφοροι. Sect. 6. Principes Sacerdotum, Summi Sacerdotes, Pontifices Maximi, &c. Sect. 7. Every Bishop antiently called Papa, Father, or Pope. Sect. 8. Pater Patrum, and Episcopus Episcoporum; a Title given to others beside the Bishop of Rome. Sect. 9. Bishops sometimes called Patriarchs. Sect. 10. All Bishops stiled Vicars of Christ. Sect. 11. And Angels of the Churches. p. 21

CHAP. III.

Of the Offices of Bishops, as distinct from Presbyters.

Sect. 1. A Threefold Difference between Bishops and Presbyters, in the Discharge of their Office and Function. Sect. 2. First, In the common Offices that might be performed by both; the Bishop acted by an Independent Power, but Presbyters in Dependance upon, and Subordination to him. Sect. 3. This specify'd in the Offices of Baptism, and the Lord's-Supper. Sect. 4. And in the Office of Preaching. Sect. 5. Secondly, Some Offices never intrusted in the Hands of Presbyters; such as the Office and Power of Ordination. Sect. 6. Instances of Ordinations by Presbyters disannulled by the Church. Sect. 7. Some Allegations to the contrary examined. Where, of the Difference made between the Ordinations of Schismatical Bishops, and those of mere Presbyters. Sect. 8. A Third Difference between Bishops and Presbyters, was, That Presbyters were always accountable to their Bishops; not Bishops to their Presbyters. Sect. 9. Yet Bishops Power not arbitrary, but limited by Canon in various Respects. p. 25

CHAP. IV.

Of the Power of Bishops over the Laity, Monks, subordinate Magistrates, and all Persons within their Diocese: And of their Office in disposing of the Revenues of the Church.

Sect. 1. No Exemption from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop in the Primitive Church. Sect. 2. All Monks subject to the Bishop of the Diocese where they lived. Sect. 3. As also all subordinate Magistrates in Matters of Spiritual Jurisdiction. Sect. 4. Of the Distinction between Temporal and Spiritual Jurisdiction. Bishops Power wholly confined to the latter. Sect. 5. The Bishop's Prerogative in granting the Litteræ Formatæ to all Persons. Sect. 6. Of the Bishop's Power in disposing of the Revenues of the Church. p. 30

CHAP. V.

Of the Office of Bishops, in relation to the whole Catholick Church.

Sect. 1. In what Sense every Bishop supposed to be Bishop of the whole Catholick Church. Sect. 2. In what Respect the whole World but one Diocese, and but one Bishoprick in the Church. Sect. 3. Some particular Instances of private Bishops acting as Bishops of the whole Universal Church. p. 33

CHAP. VI.

Of the Independency of Bishops; especially in the Cyprianick Age, and in the African Churches.

Sect. 1. What meant by the Independency of Bishops one of another, and their absolute Power in their own Church. Sect. 2. All Bishops had Liberty to form their own Liturgies. Sect. 3. And to express the same Catholick Creed in different Forms, as to what concerned Method or Expression. Sect. 4. And to appoint particular Days of Fasting in their own Churches. Sect. 5. The Independency of Bishops most conspicuous in the African Churches; proved by several Instances out of Cyprian. p. 34

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Power of Biſhops, in hearing and determining ſecular Cauſes.

Sect. 1. Biſhops commonly choſen Arbitrators of Men's Differences in the Primitive Church. Sect. 2. The Original of this Cuſtom. Where, of the true meaning of thoſe Words in St. Paul, τὸς ἐξουθενημένους ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ; 1 Cor. 6. 4. Sect. 3. This Power of Biſhops confirmed by the Imperial Laws. Sect. 4. Yet not allowed in Capital and Criminal Cauſes; nor in any Cauſes, but when the Litigants both agreed to take them for Arbitrators. Sect. 5. Biſhops ſometimes made their Presbyters and Deacons, and ſometimes Laymen, their Subſtitutes in this Affair. A Conjecture about the Original of Lay-Chancellors. p. 37

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Privilege of Biſhops to intercede for Criminals.

Sect. 1. Several Inſtances of Biſhops interceding for Criminals to the Secular Magiſtrate. Sect. 2. The Reaſons why they interceded for ſome Criminals, and not others. Sect. 3 That they never interceded in Civil Matters, and Pecuniary Caſes. p. 38

CHAP. IX.

Of ſome particular Honours and Inſtances of Reſpect, ſhewed to Biſhops by all Perſons in general.

Sect. 1. Of the antient Cuſtom of bowing the Head, to receive the Benediction of Biſhops. Sect. 2. Of Kiſſing their Hands. Sect. 3. The Cuſtom of ſinging Hoſanna's to them ſometimes uſed, but not approved. Sect. 4. What meant by the Corona Sacerdotalis, and the Form of ſaluting Biſhops per Coronam. Sect. 5. Whether Biſhops antiently wore a Mitre? Sect. 6. Of the Titles Ἁγιώτατοι, Beatiſſimi, &c. moſt Holy and moſt Bleſſed Fathers, common to all Biſhops. Sect. 7. Biſhops diſtinguiſhed by their Throne in the Church. p. 40

CHAP. X.

Of the Age, and ſome other particular Qualifications required in ſuch as were to be ordained Biſhops.

Sect. 1. Biſhops not to be Ordained under 30 Years of Age, except they were Men of extraordinary Worth. Sect. 2. To be choſen out of the Clergy of the ſame Church, or Dioceſe, to which they were to be ordained. Sect. 3. Some Exceptions to this Rule, in three ſpecial Caſes. Sect. 4. Biſhops ordinarily to be ſuch as had regularly gone through the Inferior Orders of the Church. Sect. 5. This to be underſtood of the Orders below that of Deacon: For Deacons were qualify'd to be ordained Biſhops, without being made Presbyters. Sect. 6. In Caſes of Neceſſity, Biſhops choſen out of the inferior Orders. Sect. 7. And in ſome extraordinary Caſes ordained immediately from Laymen. The Cuſtom of going through all the Orders of the Church in five or ſix Days time, a Novel Practice never uſed in the Primitive Ages. p. 42

CHAP. XI.

Of ſome particular Laws and Cuſtoms obſerved about the Ordination of Biſhops.

Sect. 1. Biſhopricks not to remain void above three Months. Sect. 2. In ſome Places a new Biſhop was always choſen, before the old was interr'd. Sect. 3. Some Inſtances of longer Vacancies, in times of Difficulty and Perſecution. Sect. 4. Three Biſhops ordinarily required to a Canonical Ordination of a Biſhop. Sect. 5. Yet Ordinations by one Biſhop allowed to be valid, though not Canonical. Sect. 6. The Biſhop of Rome not privileged to ordain alone, any more than any other ſingle Biſhop. Sect. 7. Every Biſhop to be ordained in his own Church. Sect. 8. The antient Manner of ordaining Biſhops. Sect. 9. One of the Forms of Prayer uſed at their Conſecration. Sect. 10. Of their Enthronement; their Homiliæ Enthroniſticæ, and Literæ Enthroniſticæ, otherwiſe called Synodicæ, and Communicatoriæ. p. 46

CHAP. XII.

Of the Rule which prohibits Biſhops to be ordained in ſmall Cities.

Sect. 1. The Reaſon of the Law againſt placing Biſhops in ſmall Cities. Sect. 2. Some Exceptions to this Rule in Ægypt, Libya, Cyprus, Arabia, and eſpecially in the Province of Aſia Minor. Sect. 3. Reaſons which engaged the Ancients ſometimes to erect Biſhopricks in ſmall Places. p. 50

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Rule which forbids two Biſhops to be ordained in one City.

Sect. 1. The general Rule and Practice of the Church to have but one Biſhop in any City. Sect. 2. Yet two Biſhops ſometimes allowed by Compromiſe to end a Diſpute, or cure an inveterate Schiſm. Where of the famous Offer made by the Catholick Biſhops to the Donatiſts in the Collation of Carthage. Sect. 3. The Opinions of learned Men concerning two Biſhops in a City in the Apoſtolical Age, one of the Jews, and the other of the Gentiles. Sect. 4. The Caſe of Coadjutors. p. 52

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Chorepiſcopi, Περιοδευταὶ, and Suffragan Biſhops: And how theſe differed from one another.

Sect. 1. Of the Reaſon of the Name Chorepiſcopi, and the Miſtake of ſome about it. Sect. 2. Three different Opinions about the Nature of this Order. The firſt Opinion, that they were mere Presbyters. Sect. 3. The 2*d Opinion, that ſome of them were Presbyters, and ſome Biſhops.* Sect. 4. The 3*d Opinion moſt probable, that they were all Biſhops.* Sect. 5. Some Objections againſt this anſwered. Sect. 6. Of the Offices of the Chorepiſcopi. Firſt, they were allowed to ordain the inferior Clergy, Subdeacons, Readers, &c. but not Presbyters byters or Deacons, without special License from the City-Bishop. Sect. 7. Secondly, they had Power to minister Confirmation. Sect. 8. Thirdly, Power to grant Letters Dimissory to the Country-Clergy. Sect. 9. Fourthly, they might officiate in the Presence of the City-Bishop. Sect. 10. Fifthly, they might sit as Bishops and vote in Councils. Sect. 11. The Power of the Chorepiscopi not the same in all Times and Places. Sect. 12. Their Power first struck at by the Council of Laodicea, which set up Περιοδευταὶ, or Visiting-Presbyters, in their Room. Their Power wholly taken away in the Western Church in the 9th Century. Sect. 13. Of the Attempt made in England to restore this Order under the Name of Suffragan Bishops. Sect. 14. That Suffragan Bishops in the Primitive Church were not the Chorepiscopi, but all the Bishops in any Province under a Metropolitan. Sect. 15. Why the Suffragan Bishops of the Roman Province were particularly called by the Technical Name, Libra. p. 55

CHAP. XV.

Of the Intercessores and Interventores in the African Churches.

Sect. 1. The Reason why some Bishops were called by these Names in the African Church, and what their Office was. Sect. 2. Their Office not to last above one Year. Sect. 3. No Intercessor to be made Bishop of the Place, where he was constituted Intercessor. p. 58

CHAP. XVI.

Of Primates or Metropolitans.

Sect. 1. The Original of Metropolitans, by some derived from Apostolical Constitution. Sect. 2. By others from the Age next after the Apostles. Sect. 3. Confessed by all to have been long before the Council of Nice. Sect. 4. Proofs of Metropolitans in the 2d Century. Sect. 5. By what Names Metropolitans were antiently called. Sect. 6. In Africk they were commonly called Senes, because the oldest Bishop of the Province (excepting the Province where Carthage stood) was always the Metropolitan by vertue of his Seniority. Sect. 7. How the African Bishops might forfeit their Title to the Primacy, and lose their Right of Seniority. Sect. 8. A Register of Ordinations to be kept in the Primate's Church, and all Bishops to take place by Seniority, that there might be no Disputes about the Primacy. Sect. 9. Three sorts of Honorary Metropolitans beside the Metropolitans in Power. First, the Primates Ævo. Sect. 10. Secondly, Titular Metropolitans. Sect. 11. Thirdly, the Bishop of some Mother-Churches, which were honoured by antient Custom. Sect. 12. The Offices of Metropolitans. First, to ordain their Suffragan Bishops. Sect. 13. This Power continued to them after the setting up of Patriarchs in all Places, except in the Patriarchate of Alexandria. Sect. 14. The Power of Metropolitans not arbitrary in this respect, but to be concluded by the Major Vote of a Provincial Council. Sect. 15. Metropolitans themselves to be chosen and ordained by their own Provincial Synod, and not obliged to go to Rome for Ordination. Sect. 16. The 2d Office of Metropolitans, to decide Controversies arising among their Provincial Bishops, and to take Appeals from them. Sect. 17. Their third Office was to call Provincial Synods, which all their Suffragans were obliged to attend. Sect. 18. Fourthly, they were to publish such Imperial Laws as concerned the Church, together with the Canons that were made in Councils, and to see them executed; for which end they were to visit any Dioceses, and correct Abuses, as occasion required. Sect. 19. Fifthly, all Bishops were obliged to have recourse to the Metropolitans, and take his Formatæ or Letters of Commendation, whenever they travelled into a Foreign Country. Sect. 20. Sixthly, it belonged to Metropolitans to take care of vacant Sees within their Province. Sect. 21. Lastly, they were to calculate the Time of Easter, and give Notice of it to the whole Province. Sect. 22. How the Power of Metropolitans grew in After-Ages. Sect. 23. The Metropolitan of Alexandria had the greatest Power of any other in the World. Sect. 24. All Metropolitans called Apostolici, and their Sees Sedes Apostolicæ. p. 59

CHAP. XVII.

Of Patriarchs.

Sect. 1. Patriarchs antiently called Archbishops. Sect. 2. And Exarchs of the Diocese. Sect. 3. Salmasius's Mistake about the first Use of the Name Patriarch. Sect. 4. Of the Jewish Patriarchs, their first Rise, Duration, and Extinction. Sect. 5. Of the Patriarchs amongst the Montanists. Sect. 6. The Name Patriarch first used in the proper Sense by Socrates and the Council of Chalcedon. Sect. 7. Four different Opinions concerning the first Rise of Patriarchal Power. Sect. 8. The Opinion of Spalatensis and St. Jerom preferred. Some probable Proofs of Patriarchal Power before the Council of Nice, offered to Consideration. Sect. 9. Patriarchal Power confirmed in three General Councils successively after the Council of Nice. Sect. 10. The Power of Patriarchs not exactly the same in all Churches. The Patriarch of Constantinople had some peculiar Privileges. Sect. 11. As also the Patriarch of Alexandria had his: Wherein they both exceeded the Bishop of Rome. Sect. 12. The Powers and Privileges of Patriarchs. First, they were to ordain all the Metropolitans of the whole Diocese, and to receive their own Ordination from a Diocesan Synod. Sect. 13. Secondly, they were to call Diocesan Synods, and preside in them. Sect 14. Thirdly, they might receive Appeals from Metropolitans and Provincial Synods. Sect. 15. Fourthly, they might censure Metropolitans, and their Suffragan Bishops, if Metropolitans were remiss in censuring them. Sect. 16. Fifthly, they had Power to delegate Metropolitans, as their Commissioners, to hear Ecclesiastical Causes in any Part of the Diocese. Sect. 17. Sixthly, they were to be consulted by their Metropolitans in all matters of Moment. A remarkable Instance in the Egyptian Bishops. Sect. 18. Seventhly, they were to notify and communicate to their Metropolitans such Imperial Laws as concerned the Church, in like manner as the Metropolitans were to notify to the Provincial Bishops. Sect. 19. Lastly, the Absolution of greater Criminals was reserved to them. Sect. 20. The number of Patriarchs throughout the World, reckoned to be about Fourteen, answerable to the number of Capital Cities in the several Dioceses of the Roman Empire: All which at first were absolute and independent of one another, till Rome by Usurpation, and Constantinople by Law, got some of their Neighbours to be subject to them. Sect. 21. The Patriarch of Constantinople commonly dignified with the Title of Oecumenical, and his Church called the Head of all Churches: And that he was Equal in all Respects to the Bishop of Rome. Sect. 22. What Figure the subordinate Patriarchs of Ephesus and Cæsarea made in the Church: And that they were not mere Titular Patriarchs, as some in After-Ages. p. 66

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the Αὐτοκέφαλοι, or Independent Bishops.

Sect 1. All Metropolitans antiently stiled αὐτοκέφαλοι. Sect. 2. Some Metropolitans Independent after the setting up of Patriarchal Power, as those of Cyprus, Iberia, Armenia, and the Britannick Church. Sect. 3. A third sort of Αὐτοκέφαλοι, such Bishops as were subject to no Metropolitan, but only to the Patriarch of the Diocese. These in the Greek Notitia's dignified with the Title, though they had not the Power of Archbishops and Metropolitans. Sect. 4. Valesius's Mistake corrected. p. 73

CHAP. XIX.

Of Presbyters.

Sect. 1. The meaning of the Name Presbyter. Sect. 2. Apostles and Bishops sometimes called Presbyters Sect. 3. The Original of Presbyters, as taken more strictly for the 2d Order in the Church. Sect. 4. The Powers and Privileges of Presbyters. Sect. 5. Presbyters allowed to sit with the Bishop on Thrones in the Church. Whence ὁ ἐπὶ τῷ δευτέρῳ θρόνῳ, denotes a Presbyter, one that sits on the 2d Throne. Sect. 6. The form of their sitting in a Semi-circle; whence they were called Corona Presbyterii. Sect. 7. Presbyters esteemed a sort of Ecclesiastical Senate, or Council of the Church, whom the Bishop consulted and advised with upon all Occasions. Sect. 8. Evidences of this Prerogative, out of Ignatius, Cyprian, and others. Sect. 9. The Power of Presbyters thought by some to be a little restrained in the 4th Century, and not so great in some places as in the 2d. Sect. 10. Yet still they were admitted to join with the Bishop in the Imposition of Hands upon those that were ordained to their own Order. Sect. 11. And allowed to sit in Consistory with their Bishops. Sect. 12. As also in Provincial Councils. Sect. 13. And in general Councils likewise. Sect. 14. An Account of the Titles of Honour given to Presbyters, and how they differed from the same Title as applied to Bishops. Sect. 15. In what Sense Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons called Priests. Sect. 16. Why Priests called Mediators between God and Men. Sect. 17. The antient Form and Manner of ordaining Presbyters. Sect. 18. Of the Archipresbyteri. That these were more antient than the Cardinales Presbyteri, which some erroneously confound with them. Sect. 19. Of the Seniores Ecclesiæ. That these were not Lay-elders in the modern Acceptation. p. 74

CHAP. XX.

Of Deacons.

Sect. 1. Deacons always reckoned one of the Sacred Orders of the Church. Sect. 2. Yet not generally called Priests, but Ministers and Levites. Sect. 3. And for this Reason the Bishop was not tied to have the Assistance of any Presbyters to ordain them. Sect. 4. The first Office of Deacons to take care of the Vessels and Utensils of the Altar. Sect. 5. 2*dly, to receive the Oblations of the People, and present them to the Priest, and recite publickly the Names of those that Offered.* Sect. 6. 3*dly, To read the Gospel in some Churches.* Sect. 7. 4*thly, To minister the Cup to the People.* Sect. 8. But not to consecrate the Elements at the Altar. Sect. 9. 5*thly, Deacons allowed to baptize in some places by the Bishop's Authority.* Sect. 10. 6*thly, Deacons to bid Prayer in the Congregation.* Sect. 11. 7*thly, Allowed to preach upon some Occasions.* Sect. 12. 8*thly, And to reconcile Penitents in Cases of extreme Necessity.* Sect. 13. 9*thly, to attend their Bishops in Councils, and sometimes represent them as their Proxies.* Sect. 14. 10*thly, Deacons empowered to correct Men that behaved themselves irregularly in the Church.* Sect. 15. Deacons antiently performed the Offices of all the inferior Orders of the Church. Sect. 16. 12*thly, Deacons the Bishop's Sub-Almoners.* Sect. 17. Deacons to inform the Bishop of the Misdemeanors of the People. Sect. 18. Hence Deacons commonly called the Bishop's Eyes and Ears, his Mouth, his Angels and Prophets. Sect. 19. Deacons to be multiplied according to the Necessities of the Church. The Roman Church precise to the number of seven. Sect. 20. Of the Age at which Deacons might be ordained. Sect. 21. Of the Respect which Deacons paid to Presbyters, and received from the inferior Orders. p. 83

CHAP. XXI.

Of Archdeacons.

Sect. 1. Archdeacons antiently of the same Order with Deacons. Sect. 2. Elected by the Bishop, and not made by Seniority. Sect. 3. Commonly Persons of such Interest in the Church, that they were often chosen the Bishop's Successors. Sect. 4. The Archdeacons Offices; 1st, to assist the Bishop at the Altar, and order the other Deacons and inferior Clergy to their several Stations and Services of the Church. Sect. 5. Secondly, to assist the Bishop in managing the Church's Revenues. Sect. 6. Thirdly, to assist him in Preaching. Sect. 7. Fourthly, in ordaining the inferior Clergy. Sect. 8. Fifthly, the Archdeacon had

Power to cenſure the other Deacons, but not Presbyters, much leſs the Archpresbyter of the Church, as ſome miſtake. Sect. 9. What meant by the Name Apantita, and whether it denotes the Archdeacon's Power over the whole Dioceſe. Sect. 10. Why the Archdeacon called Cor-Epiſcopi. Sect. 11. The Opinions of learned Men concerning the firſt Inſtitution of this Office and Dignity in the Church. p. 92

CHAP. XXII.

Of Deaconeſſes.

Sect. 1. The antient Names of Deaconeſſes, διάκονοι πρεσβύτιδες, Viduæ, Miniſtræ. Sect. 2. Deaconeſſes by ſome Laws required to be Widows. Sect. 3. And ſuch Widows as had Children. Sect. 4. To be 60 Years of Age. Sect. 5. And ſuch as had been only the Wives of one Man. Sect. 6. Deaconeſſes always ordained by Impoſition of Hands. Sect. 7. Yet not conſecrated to any Office of the Prieſthood. Sect. 8. Their Offices, 1. To aſſiſt at the Baptiſm of Women. Sect. 9. 2. To be a ſort of private Catechiſts to the Women Catechumens. Sect. 10. 3. To viſit and attend Women in Sickneſs and Diſtreſs. Sect. 11. 4. To Miniſter to the Martyrs in Priſon. Sect. 12. 5. To keep the Womens Gate in the Church. Sect. 13. Laſtly, To preſide over the Widows, &c. Sect. 14. How long this Order continued both in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Church. Sect. 15. Another Notion of the Name Diaconiſſa, in the middle Ages of the Church, in which it ſignifies a Deacon's Wife, as Presbytera does a Presbyter's Wife, and Epiſcopa a Biſhop's Wife. The contrary Errors of Gentilletus and Baronius about theſe, corrected. p. 93

BOOK III.

Of the Inferior Orders of the Clergy in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the firſt Original of the Inferior Orders, and the Number and Uſe of them: And how they differed from the Superior Orders of Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons.

Sect. 1. The Inferior Orders not of Apoſtolical, but only Eccleſiaſtical Inſtitution, proved againſt Baronius, and the Council of Trent. Sect. 2. No certain Number of them in the Primitive Church. Sect. 3. Not inſtituted in all Churches at the ſame time. Sect. 4. The Principal Uſe of them in the Primitive Church, to be a ſort of Nurſery for the Hierarchy. Sect. 5. None of theſe allowed to forſake their Service, and return to a mere ſecular Life again. Sect. 6. How they differ'd from the Superior Orders in Name, in Office, and manner of Ordination. p. 107

CHAP. II.

Of Subdeacons.

Sect. 1. No mention of Subdeacons till the 3d Century. Sect. 2. Their Ordination performed without Impoſition of Hands in the Latin Church. Sect. 3. A brief Account of their Offices. Sect. 4. What Offices they might not perform. Sect. 5. The Singularity of the Church of Rome in keeping to the preciſe Number of ſeven Subdeacons. p. 110

CHAP. III.

Of Acolythiſts.

Sect. 1. Acolythiſts, an Order peculiar to the Latin Church, and never mentioned by any Greek Writer for 4 Centuries. Sect. 2. Their Ordination and Office. Sect. 3. The Origination of the Name. Sect. 4. Whether Acolythiſts be the ſame with the Deputati and Ceroferaij of later Ages? p. 111

CHAP. IV.

Of Exorciſts.

Sect. 1. Exorciſts, at firſt no peculiar Order of the Clergy. Sect. 2. Biſhops and Presbyters, for the three firſt Centuries, the uſual Exorciſts of the Church. Sect. 3. In what Senſe every Man his own Exorciſt. Sect. 4. Exorciſts conſtituted into an Order in the latter end of the 3d Century. Sect. 5. Their Ordination and Office. Sect. 6. A ſhort Account of the Energumens, their Names, and Station in the Church. Sect. 7. The Exorciſts chiefly concerned in the Care of them. Sect. 8. The Duty of Exorciſts in reference to the Catechumens. p. 112

CHAP. V.

Of Lectors or Readers.

Sect. 1. The Order of Readers not inſtituted till the 3d Century. Sect. 2. By whom the Scriptures were read in the Church before the Inſtitution of that Order. Sect. 3. The manner of ordaining Readers. Sect. 4. Their Station and Office in the Church. Sect. 5. The Age at which they might be ordained. p. 115

CHAP. VI.

Of the Oſtiarij or Door-keepers.

Sect. 1. No mention of this Order till the 3d or 4th Century. Sect. 2. The manner of their Ordination in the Latin Church. Sect. 3. Their Office and Function. p. 117

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.
Of the Pſalmiſtæ or Singers.

Sect. 1. The Singers a diſtinct Order from Readers in the Primitive Church. Sect. 2. Their Inſtitution and Office. Sect. 3. Why called ὑποβολεῖς. Sect. 4. What ſort of Ordination they had. p. 118

CHAP. VIII.
Of the Copiatæ or Foſſarij.

Sect. 1. The Copiatæ or Foſſarij reckoned among the Clerici of the Primitive Church. Sect. 2. Firſt inſtituted in the Time of Conſtantine. Sect. 3. Why called Decani and Collegiati. Sect. 4. Their Office and Privileges. p. 119

CHAP. IX.
Of the Parabolani.

Sect. 1. The Parabolani ranked by ſome among the Clerici. Sect. 2. Their Inſtitution and Office. Sect. 3. The Reaſon of the Name Parabolani. Sect. 4. Some Laws and Rules relating to their Behaviour. p. 121

CHAP. X.
Of the Catechiſts.

Sect. 1. Catechiſts no diſtinct Order of the Clergy, but choſen out of any other Order. Sect. 2. Readers ſometimes made Catechiſts. Sect. 3. Why called ναυσολόγοι by ſome Greek Writers. Sect. 4. Whether all Catechiſts taught publickly in the Church? Sect. 5. Of the Succeſſion in the Catechetick School at Alexandria. p. 122

CHAP. XI.
Of the Defenſores or Syndicks of the Church.

Sect. 1. Five ſorts of Defenſores noted, whereof two only belonged to the Church. Sect. 2. Of the Defenſores Pauperum. Sect. 3. Of the Defenſores Eccleſiæ, their Office and Function. Sect. 4. Of their Quality. Whether they were Clergymen or Lay-men. Sect. 5. The ἔκδικοι and ἐκκλησιέκδικοι among the Greeks the ſame with the Defenſores of the Latin Church. Sect. 6. Chancellors and Defenſors not the ſame in the Primitive Church. Sect. 7. Whether the Defenſor's Office was the ſame with that of our Modern Chancellors? p. 124

CHAP. XII.
Of the Oeconomi, or Stewards and Guardians of the Church.

Sect. 1. The Oeconomi inſtituted in the 4th Century. The Reaſons of their Inſtitution. Sect. 2. Theſe always to be choſen out of the Clergy. Sect. 3. Their Office to take care of the Revenues of the Church, eſpecially in the Vacancy of the Biſhoprick. Sect. 4. The Conſent of the Clergy required in the Choice of them. p. 127

CHAP. XIII.
A brief Account of ſome other Inferior Officers in the Church.

Sect. 1. Of the παραμονάριοι or Manſionarii. Sect. 2. Of the Cuſtodes Eccleſiarum, & Cuſtodes Locorum Sanctorum: And how thoſe differed from each other. Sect. 3. Of the Sceuophylaces or Ceimeliarchæ. Sect. 4. Of the Hermeneutæ or Interpreters. Sect. 5. Of the Notarii. Sect. 6. Of the Apocriſarii or Reſponſales. p. 128

BOOK IV.

Of the Elections and Ordinations of the Clergy, and the particular Qualifications of ſuch as were to be ordained.

CHAP. I.
Of the ſeveral ways of deſigning Perſons to the Miniſtry, in the Apoſtolical and Primitive Ages of the Church.

Sect. 1. Four ſeveral ways of deſigning Perſons to the Miniſtry. Of the firſt way by caſting Lots. Sect 2. The ſecond way by making choice of the Firſtfruits of the Gentile Converts. Sect. 3. The third way by particular Direction of the Holy Ghoſt. Sect. 4. The fourth way by common Suffrage and Election. p. 132

CHAP. II.
A more particular Account of the antient Manner and Method of Elections of the Clergy.

Sect. 1. The different Opinions of learned Men concerning the Popular Power antiently in Elections. Sect. 2. The Power of the People equal to that of Inferior Clergy in the Election of a Biſhop. Sect. 3. This Power not barely Teſtimonial, but Elective. Sect. 4. Evidences of this Power from ſome antient Rules and Cuſtoms of the Church. As 1ſt, that no Biſhop was ordinarily to be ob-

truded

truded on an Orthodox People without their Consent. Sect. 5. 2dly, This farther confirmed from Examples of the Bishops complying with the Voice of the People against their own Inclination. Sect. 6. 3dly, From the manner of the Peoples voting at Elections. Sect. 7. 4thly, From the Use and Office of Interventors. Sect. 8. 5thly, From the Custom of the Peoples taking Persons and having them ordained by force. Sect. 9. 6thly, From the Title of Fathers, which some Bishops upon this Account by way of Compliment gave to their People. Sect. 10. What Power the People had in the Designation of Presbyters. Sect. 11. Whether the Council of Nice made any Alteration in these Matters. Sect. 12. Some Exceptions to the general Rule. 1st, In case the greatest Part of the Church were Hereticks or Schismaticks. Sect. 13. 2dly, In case of ordaining Bishops to far distant Churches, or barbarous Nations. Sect. 14. 3dly, In case an Interventor or any other Bishop intruded himself into any See without the Consent of a Provincial Synod. Sect. 15. 4thly, In case of Factions and Divisions among the People. Sect. 16. 5thly, The Emperors sometimes interposed their Authority, to prevent Tumults in the like Cases. Sect. 17. 6thly, The People sometimes restrained to the Choice of one out of three, that were nominated by the Bishops. Sect. 18. Lastly, By Justinian's Laws the Power of Electing was confined to the Optimates, and the inferior People wholly excluded. Sect. 19. How and when Princes and Patrons came to have the chief Power of Election. p. 135

CHAP. III.

Of the Examination and Qualifications of Persons to be ordained in the Primitive Church. And first of their Faith and Morals.

Sect. 1. Three Enquiries made about Persons to be ordained, respecting, 1. Their Faith and Learning: 2. Their Morals: 3. Their outward Quality and Condition in the World. Sect. 2. The Rule and Method of examining their Faith and Learning. Sect. 3. The irregular Ordination of Synesius considered. Sect. 4. A strict Enquiry made into the Morals of such as were to be ordained. Sect. 5. For which Reason no Stranger to be ordained in a foreign Church. Sect. 6. Nor any one who had done publick Penance in the Church. Sect. 7. No Murderer, nor Adulterer, nor one that had lapsed in time of Persecution. Sect. 8. No Usurer or seditious Person. Sect. 9. Nor one who had voluntarily dismembred his own Body. Sect. 10. Men only accountable for Crimes committed after Baptism, as to what concerned their Ordination. Sect. 11. Except any great Irregularity happened in their Baptism itself. As in Clinick Baptism: Sect. 12. And Heretical Baptism: Both which unqualified Men for Ordination. Sect. 13. No Man to be ordained who had not first made all his Family Catholick Christians. Sect. 14. What Methods were antiently taken to prevent Simoniacal Promotions. p. 143

CHAP. IV.

Of the Qualifications of Persons to be ordained, respecting their outward State and Condition in the World.

Sect. 1. No Soldier to be ordained Presbyter or Deacon. Sect. 2. Nor any Slave or Freed-man without the Consent of his Patron. Sect. 3. Nor any Member of a Civil Society, or Company of Tradesmen, who were tied to the Service of the Common-wealth. Sect. 4. Nor any of the Curiales or Decuriones of the Roman Government. Sect. 5. Nor any Proctor or Guardian, till his Office was expired. Sect. 6. Pleaders at Law denied Ordination in the Roman Church. Sect. 7. And Energumens, Actors, and Stage-players in all Churches. p. 149

CHAP. V.

Of the State of Digamy and Celibacy in particular: And of the Laws of the Church about these in reference to the antient Clergy.

Sect. 1. No Digamist to be ordained, by the Rule of the Apostle. Sect. 2. Three different Opinions among the Antients about Digamy. 1. That all Persons were to be refus'd Orders as Digamists, who were twice Married after Baptism. Sect. 3. 2dly, Others extended the Rule to all Persons twice married before Baptism. Sect. 4. 3dly, The most probable Opinion of those who thought the Apostle by Digamists meant Polygamists, and such as married after Divorce. Sect. 5. No Vow of Celibacy required of the Clergy, as a Condition of their Ordination, for the three first Ages. Sect. 6. The Vanity of the contrary Pretences. Sect. 7. The Clergy left to their Liberty by the Nicene Council. Sect. 8. And other Councils of that Age. p. 152

CHAP. VI.

Of the Ordinations of the Primitive Clergy, and the Laws and Customs generally observed therein.

Sect. 1. The Canons of the Church to be read to the Clerk, before the Bishops ordained him. The Reason of making this Law. Sect. 2. No Clerk to be ordained ἀπολελυμμένως, without being fixt to some Church. Sect. 3. Exceptions to this Rule very rare. Sect. 4. No Bishop to ordain another Man's Clerk without his Consent. Sect. 5. No Bishop to ordain in another Man's Diocese. Sect. 6. The Original of the four solemn times of Ordination. Sect. 7. Ordinations indifferently given on any Day of the Week for the three first Centuries. Sect. 8. Usually performed in the time of the Oblation or Morning-Service. Sect. 9. The Church the only regular Place of Ordination. Sect. 10. Ordinations received kneeling at the Altar. Sect. 11. Given by Imposition of Hands and Prayer. Sect. 12. The Sign of the Cross used in Ordination. Sect. 13. But no Unction, nor the Ceremony of delivering Vessels into the Hands of Presbyters and Deacons. Sect. 14. Ordinations concluded with the Kiss of Peace. Sect. 15.

The

The Anniversary Day of a Bishop's Ordination kept a Festival. p. 156

CHAP. VII.

The Case of forced Ordinations and Reordinations considered.

Sect. 1. Forced Ordinations very frequent in the Primitive Church. Sect. 2. No Excuse admitted in that Case, except a Man protested upon Oath that he would not be ordained. Sect. 3. This Practice afterward prohibited by the Imperial Laws and Canons of the Church. Sect. 4. Yet a Bishop ordained against his Will had not the Privilege to Relinquish. Sect. 5. Reordinations generally condemned. Sect. 6. The Proposal made by Cecilian Bishop of Carthage to the Donatists examined. Sect. 7. Schismaticks sometimes reordained. Sect. 8. And Hereticks also upon their return to the Church, in some Places. p. 161

BOOK V.

Of the Privileges, Immunities, and Revenues of the Clergy in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Some Instances of Respect, which the Clergy paid mutually to one another.

Sect. 1. The Clergy obliged to give Entertainment to their Brethren, travelling upon necessary Occasions. Sect. 2. And to give them the Honorary Privilege of Consecrating the Eucharist in the Church. Sect. 3. The Use of the Literæ Formatæ, or Commendatory Letters, upon this Occasion. Sect. 4. The Clergy obliged to end all their own Controversies among themselves. Sect. 5. What Care was taken in receiving Accusations against the Bishops and Clergy of the Church. p. 166

CHAP. II.

Instances of Respect shewed to the Clergy by the Civil Government. Where particularly of their Exemption from the Cognisance of the Secular Courts in Ecclesiastical Causes.

Sect. 1. Bishops not to be called into any Secular Court to give their Testimony. Sect. 2. Nor obliged to give their Testimony upon Oath, by the Laws of Justinian. Sect. 3. Whether the single Evidence of one Bishop was good in Law against the Testimony of many others. Sect. 4. Presbyters privileged against being questioned by Torture, as other Witnesses were. Sect. 5. The Clergy exempt from the ordinary Cognisance of the Secular Courts in all Ecclesiastical Causes. Sect. 6. This evidenced from the Laws of Constantius. Sect. 7. And those of Valentinian and Gratian. Sect. 8. And Theodosius the Great. Sect. 9. And Arcadius and Honorius. Sect. 10. And Valentinian III. and Justinian. Sect. 11. The Clergy also exempt in lesser Criminal Causes. Sect. 12. But not in greater Criminal Causes. Sect. 13. Nor in Pecuniary Causes with Laymen. Sect. 14. Of the necessary distinction between the supreme and subordinate Magistrates in this Business of Exemptions. p. 169

CHAP. III.

Of the Immunities of the Clergy in reference to Taxes, and Civil Offices, and other burthensome Employments in the Roman Empire.

Sect. 1. No Divine Right pleaded by the antient Clergy to exempt themselves from Taxes. Sect. 2. Yet generally excused from personal Taxes, or Headmoney. Sect. 3. But not excused for their Lands and Possessions. Sect. 4. Of the Tribute called Aurum Tyronicum, Equi Canonici, &c. and the Clergy's Exemption from it. Sect. 5. The Church obliged to such Burthens as Lands were tied to before their Donation. Sect. 6. Of the Chrysargyrum or Lustral Tax, and the Clergy's Exemption from it. Sect. 7. Of the Metatum. What meant thereby, and of the Clergy's Exemption from it. Sect. 8. Of the Superindicta and Extraordinaria. The Clergy exempt from them. Sect. 9. The Clergy sometimes exempt from contributing to the Reparation of High-ways and Bridges. Sect. 10. Also from the Duty called Angariæ and Parangariæ, &c. Sect. 11. Of the Tribute called Denarismus, Unciæ, and Descriptio Lucrativorum: And the Church's Exemption from it. Sect. 12. The Clergy exempt from all civil personal Offices. Sect. 13. And from sordid Offices both Predial and Personal. Sect. 14. Also from Curial or Municipal Offices. Sect. 15. This last Privilege confined to such of the Clergy as had no Estates but what belonged to the Church, by the Laws of Constantine. Sect. 16. Constantine's Laws a little altered by the succeeding Emperors in Favour of the Church. p. 174

CHAP. IV.

Of the Revenues of the antient Clergy.

Sect. 1. Several ways of providing a Fund for the Maintenance of the Clergy. First, by Oblations; some of which were Weekly: Sect. 2. And others Monthly. Sect. 3. Whence came the Custom of a Monthly Division among the Clergy. Sect. 4. Secondly,

Secondly, other Revenues arising from the Lands and Poſſeſſions of the Church. Sect. 5. Theſe very much augmented by the Laws of Conſtantine: Sect. 6. Whoſe Laws were confirmed, and not revoked by the ſucceeding Emperors, as ſome miſtake. Sect. 7. Thirdly, another Part of Church Revenues raiſed by Allowances out of the Emperor's Exchequer. Sect. 8. Fourthly, the Eſtates of Martyrs and Confeſſors, dying without Heirs, ſettled upon the Church by Conſtantine. Sect. 9. Fifthly, the Eſtates of Clergymen dying without Heirs and Will, ſettled in like manner. Sect. 10. Sixthly, Heathen Temples and their Revenues ſometimes given to the Church. Sect. 11. As alſo Seventhly, Heretical Conventicles and their Revenues. Sect. 12. Laſtly, the Eſtates of Clerks deſerting the Church, to be forfeited to the Church. Sect. 13. No diſreputable ways of augmenting Church-Revenues encouraged. Fathers not to diſinherit their Children to make the Church their Heirs. Sect. 14. Nothing to be demanded for Adminiſtring the Sacraments of the Church, nor for Confirmation, nor for Conſecrating of Churches, nor for Interment of the Dead. Sect. 15. The Oblations of the People antiently eſteemed one of the moſt valuable Parts of Church Revenues. p. 185

CHAP. V.

Of Tithes and Firſt-fruits in particular.

Sect. 1. Tithes antiently reckoned to be due by Divine Right. Sect. 2. Why not exacted then in the Apoſtolical Age, and thoſe that followed. Sect. 3. In what Age they were firſt generally ſettled upon the Church. Sect. 4. The Original of Firſt-fruits, and manner of offering them. p. 191

CHAP. VI.

Of the Management and Diſtribution of the Revenues of the antient Clergy.

Sect. 1. The Revenues of the whole Dioceſe antiently in the Hands of the Biſhop. Sect. 2. And by his Care diſtributed among the Clergy. Sect. 3. Rules about the Diviſion of Church-Revenues. Sect. 4. In ſome Churches the Clergy lived all in common. Sect. 5. Alterations made in theſe Matters by the Endowment of Parochial Churches. Sect. 6. No Alienations to be made of the Goods or Revenues of the Church, but upon extraordinary Occaſions. Sect. 7. And that by the joint Conſent of the Biſhop and his Clergy, with the Approbation of the Metropolitan or ſome Provincial Biſhops. p. 193

BOOK VI.

An Account of ſeveral Laws and Rules relating to the Employment, Life, and Converſation of the Primitive Clergy.

CHAP. I.

Of the Excellency of theſe Rules in general, and the Exemplarineſs of the Clergy in Conforming to them.

Sect. 1. The Excellency of the Chriſtian Rules atteſted and envied by the Heathens. Sect. 2. The Character of the Clergy, from Chriſtian Writers. Sect. 3. Particular Exceptions no Derogation to their general good Character. Sect. 4. An Account of ſome antient Writers, which treat of the Duties of the Clergy. p. 197

CHAP. II.

Of Laws relating to the Life and Converſation of the Primitive Clergy.

Sect. 1. Exemplary Purity required in the Clergy above other Men. Reaſons for it. Sect. 2. Church Cenſures more ſevere againſt them than any others. Sect. 3. What Crimes puniſhed with Degradation, viz. Theft, Murder, Perjury, Fraud, Sacrilege, Fornication and Adultery. Sect. 4. Alſo Lapſing in time of Perſecution. Sect. 5. And Drinking and Gaming. Sect. 6. And Negotiating upon Uſury. The Nature of this Crime enquired into. Sect. 7. Of the Hoſpitality of the Clergy. Sect. 8. Of their Frugality and Contempt of the World. Sect. 9. Whether the Clergy were antiently obliged by any Law to part with their Temporal Poſſeſſions. Sect. 10. Of their great Care to be inoffenſive with their Tongues. Sect. 11. Of their Care to guard againſt ſuſpicion of Evil. Sect. 12. Laws relating to this Matter. Sect. 13. An Account of the Agapetæ and συνείσακτοι, and the Laws of the Church made againſt them. Sect. 14. Malevolent and unavoidable Suſpicions to be contemned. p. 199

CHAP. III.

Of Laws more particularly relating to the Exerciſe of the Duties and Offices of their Function.

Sect. 1. The Clergy obliged to lead a Studious Life. Sect. 2. No Pleas allowed as juſt Apologies for the contrary. Sect. 3. Their chief Studies to be the Holy Scriptures, and the approved Writers and Canons of the Church. Sect. 4. How far the Study of Heathen or Heretical Books allowed. Sect. 5. Of their Piety and Devotion in their publick Addreſſes to God. Sect. 6. The Cenſure of ſuch as neglected the Daily Service of the Church. Sect. 7. Their Rules about Preaching to Edification. Sect. 8. Of their Fidelity, Diligence, and Prudence in their private Addreſſes and Applications. Sect. 9. Of their Prudence and Candor

Candor in compoſing unneceſſary Controverſies in the Church. Sect. 10. Of their Zeal and Courage in defending the Truth. Sect. 11. Of their Obligations to maintain the Unity of the Church: And of the Cenſure of ſuch as fell into Hereſy or Schiſm. p. 209

CHAP. IV.

An Account of ſome other Laws and Rules, which were a ſort of Out-guards and Fences to the former.

Sect. 1. No Clergyman allowed to deſert or relinquiſh his Station without juſt Grounds and Leave. Sect. 2. Yet in ſome Caſes a Reſignation was allowed of. Sect. 3. And Canonical Penſions ſometimes granted upon ſuch Occaſions. Sect. 4. No Clergyman to remove from one Dioceſe to another without the Conſent and Letters Diſmiſſory of his own Biſhop. Sect. 5. Laws againſt the Βακάντιοι or Wandring Clergy. Sect. 6. Laws againſt the Tranſlations of Biſhops from one See to another how to be limited and underſtood. Sect. 7. Laws concerning the Reſidence of the Clergy. Sect. 8. Of Pluralities, and the Laws made about them. Sect. 9. Laws prohibiting the Clergy to take upon them ſecular Buſineſs and Civil Offices. Sect. 10. Laws prohibiting the Clergy to be Tutors and Guardians, how far extended. Sect. 11. Laws againſt their being Sureties, and pleading Cauſes at the Bar in behalf of themſelves or their Churches. Sect. 12. Laws againſt their following ſecular Trades and Merchandize. Sect. 13. What Limitations and Exceptions theſe Laws admitted of. Sect. 14. Laws reſpecting their outward Converſation. Sect. 15. Laws relating to their Habit. Sect. 16. The Tonſure of the Ancients very different from that of the Romiſh Church. Sect. 17. Of the Corona Clericalis, and why the Clergy called Coronati. Sect 18. Whether the Clergy were diſtinguiſhed in their Apparel from Laymen. Sect. 19. A particular Account of the Birrus and Pallium Sect. 20. Of the Collobium, Dalmatica, Caracalla, Hemiphorium and Linea. p. 220

CHAP. V.

Some Reflections on the foregoing Diſcourſe, concluding with an Addreſs to the Clergy of the preſent Church.

Sect. 1. Reflect. 1. All Laws and Rules of the antient Church not neceſſary to be obſerved by the preſent Church and Clergy. Sect. 2. Reflect. 2. Some antient Rules would be of excellent Uſe, if revived by juſt Authority Sect. 3. Reflect. 3. Some antient Laws may be complied with, though not Laws of the preſent Church. Sect. 4. Reflect. 4. Of the Influence of great Examples, and Laws of perpetual Obligation. Sect. 5. Some particular Rules recommended to Obſervation: Firſt, relating to the antient Method of training up Perſons for the Miniſtry. Sect. 6. Secondly, Their Rules for examining the Qualificatious of the Candidates for the Miniſtry. Sect. 7. Thirdly, Their Rules about private Addreſs, and the Exerciſe of private Diſcipline. Sect. 8. Laſtly, Their Rules for exerciſing publick Diſcipline upon delinquent Clergymen, who were convict of ſcandalous Offences. Sect. 9. Julian's Deſign to reform the Heathen Prieſts by the Rules of the Primitive Clergy, an Argument to provoke our Zeal in the preſent Age. Sect. 10. The Concluſion, by way of Addreſs to the Clergy of the preſent Church. p. 233

BOOK VII.

Of the Aſceticks in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the Difference between the firſt Aſceticks and Monks: And of the firſt Original of the Monaſtick Life.

Sect. 1. Aſceticks always in the Church; Monks not ſo. Sect. 2. This Difference acknowledged by ſome ingenuous Writers of the Romiſh Church. Sect. 3. What the Primitive Aſceticks were. Sect. 4. When the Monaſtick Life firſt began. Sect. 5. In what the antient Aſceticks differed from Monks. Sect. 6. What other Names they were called by. p. 243

CHAP. II.

Of the ſeveral ſorts of Monks, and their different Ways of living in the Church.

Sect. 1. Several ſorts of Monks diſtinguiſhed by their different Ways of living. Sect. 2. Some called ἀναχωρηταὶ, Anchorets. Sect. 3. Others, Cenobites or Synodites. Sect. 4. Others, Saraibaitæ and Remboth. Sect. 5. A fourth ſort Stylitæ, or Pillariſts. Sect. 6. Of ſecular Monks. Sect. 7. All Monks originally no more than Laymen. Sect. 8. In what Caſes the Clerical and Monaſtick Life might be conjoyned together. Sect. 9. The Original of Canons Regular. Sect. 10. Of the Monks called Acœmetæ, or Watchers. Sect. 11. Of thoſe called Βοσκοὶ, or Grazers. Sect. 12. Of the Benedictines and Gyrovagi in Italy. Sect. 13. Of the Apoſtolicks in Britain and Ireland. Sect. 14. Of ſome uncommon Names of Monks in the antient Church, Heſychaſtæ, Continentes, Silentiarii, Renunciantes, Philothei, Therapeutæ, Cellulani, and ſuch like. p. 246

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

An Account of such antient Laws and Rules, as relate to the Monastick Life, and chiefly that of the Cenobites.

Sect. 1. The Curiales not allowed to turn Monks. Sect. 2. Nor Servants without their Master's Consent. Sect. 3. Nor Husbands and Wives without mutual Consent of each other. Sect. 4. Nor Children without the Consent of their Parents. Sect. 5. Children, though offered by their Parents, not to be retained against their own Consent. Sect. 6. Of the Tonsure and Habit of Monks. Sect. 7. No solemn Vow or Profession required of them. Sect. 8. What meant by their Renunciation of the World. Sect. 9. Of the Difference between the Renunciative and the Communicative Life. Sect. 10. All Monks antiently maintained by their own Labour. Sect. 11. Proper Officers appointed in Monasteries for this Purpose, viz. Decani, Centenarii, Patres, &c. Sect. 12 The Power of the Abbots or Fathers very great in Point of Discipline over the rest. Sect. 13. Allowed also some peculiar Privileges in the Church. Sect. 14. Yet always subordinate to the Power of Bishops. Sect. 15. The spiritual Exercises of Monks: First, Perpetual Repentance. Sect. 16. Secondly, Extraordinary Fasting. Sect. 17. Thirdly, Extraordinary Devotions. Sect. 18. Of Laws excluding Monks from Offices both Ecclesiastical and Civil. Sect. 19. No Monks antiently encroaching on the Duties or Rights of the secular Clergy. Sect. 20. Not allowed at first to dwell in Cities, but confined to the Wilderness. Sect. 21. What Exceptions that Rule admitted of. Sect. 22. Whether Monks might betake themselves to a secular Life again? Sect. 23. Marriage of Monks antiently not annulled. Sect. 24. What Punishments ordinarily inflicted on Deserters. p. 253

CHAP. IV.

The Case and State of Virgins and Widows in the antient Church.

Sect. 1. Of the Distinction between Ecclesiastical and Monastical Virgins. Sect. 2. Whether they were under any Profession of perpetual Virginity. Sect. 3. When first made liable to the Censures of the Church for marrying against their Profession. Sect. 4. The Marriage of professed Virgins never declared Null. Sect. 5. Liberty granted by some Laws to marry, if they were consecrated before the Age of forty. Sect. 6. Of their Habit, and Form, and manner of Consecration. Sect. 7. Of some Privileges bestowed on them by the Imperial Laws and Custom of the Church. Sect. 8. Of the Name νονὶς & Nonnæ, and its Signification. Sect. 9. Some particular Observations relating to the Widows of the Church. p. 266

BOOK VIII.

An Account of the antient Churches, their Original, Names, Parts, Utensils, Consecrations, Immunities, &c.

CHAP. I.

Of the several Names and first Original of Churches among Christians.

Sect. 1. Of the Names Ecclesia, and ἐκκλησιαστήριον, and the Difference between them. Sect. 2. Of the Names Dominicum, whence comes Dohm; and κυριακὸν, whence Kirk and Church; and Domus Columbæ. Sect. 3. Of the Distinction between Domus Dei, Domus Divina, and Domus Ecclesiæ. Sect. 4. Churches called Oratories and Houses of Prayer. Sect. 5. Why called Basilicæ and Ἀνάκλορα. Sect. 6. When first called Temples. Sect. 7. Sometimes called Synodi, Concilia, Conciliabula & Conventicula. Sect. 8. Why some Churches called Martyria, Memoriæ, Apostolæa & Propheteia. Sect. 9. Why called Cœmiteria, Mensæ & Areæ. Sect. 10. Why Casæ, Trophæa & Tituli. Sect. 11. Of Tabernacles and Minsters, and some other less usual Names of Churches. Sect. 12. Of the Distinction between Ecclesia Matrix and Diocesana. Sect. 13. Proofs of Churches in the 1st Century, collected by Mr. Mede. Sect. 14. Proofs in the 2d Century. Sect. 15. Proofs in the 3d Century. Sect. 16. The Objection from Arnobius and Lactantius answered. Sect. 17. Some additional Collections on this Head out of Lactantius de Mortibus Persecutorum, and others. p. 272

CHAP. II.

Of the Difference between Churches in the first Ages and those that followed: And of Heathen Temples and Jewish Synagogues turned into Christian Churches.

Sect. 1. The first Churches very simple and plain. Sect. 2. Reasons for altering the State of Ecclesiastical Structures. Sect. 3. The Munificence particularly of Christian Emperors contributed much toward this. Sect. 4. As also their Orders for converting Heathen Temples and publick Halls into Churches. p. 284

CHAP. III.

Of the different Forms and Parts of the antient Churches: And first of the Exterior Narthex, or outward Ante-Temple.

Sect. 1. Churches antiently of different Forms. Sect. 2. And different Situation from one another. Sect.

Sect. 3. Commonly divided into three Parts, and ſometimes four or five in a large Acceptation. Sect. 4. Each of theſe ſubdivided into other Parts. The Exterior Narthex, or Ante-Temple included, firſt the προπύλον or Veſtibulum Magnum, the High Porch. Sect. 5. Secondly, the μεσαύλιον, Atrium or Area, the Court before the Church ſurrounded with Portico's or Cloyſters. Sect. 6. Thirdly, The Cantharus or Phiala, the Fountain in the middle of this Court, for waſhing as they went into the Church. Sect. 7. Whether the ſuperſtitious Uſe of Holy-Water be not a Corruption of this antient Cuſtom. Sect. 8. The Atrium and Portico's in the Ante-Temple made uſe of for burying the Dead, before they were admitted into Churches. p. 287

CHAP. IV.

Of the Interior Narthex, and the Parts and Uſes of it.

Sect. 1. Of the leſſer προπύλα, or Porches before the Doors of the Church. Sect. 2. Of the Narthex, Pronaos, or Ferula. Sect. 3. The Uſe of it for the Catechumens, Energumens, and Penitents of the 2d Order. Sect. 4. Alſo for Jews, Heathens, Hereticks and Schiſmaticks to hear in. Sect. 5. This not the Place of the Font or Baptiſtery, as in our Modern Churches. Sect. 6. Why it was called Narthex, and of the different ſort of Nartheces in ſeveral Churches. p. 291

CHAP. V.

Of the Naos or Nave and Body of the Church, and its Parts and Uſes.

Sect. 1. Of the beautiful and Royal Gates. Why ſo called. Sect. 2. The Nave of the Church uſually a ſquare Building, called by ſome the Oratory of Laymen. Sect. 3. In the loweſt Part of this ſtood the Subſtrati, or Penitents of the 3d Order. Sect. 4. And the Ambo, or Reading Desk. Sect. 5. Above theſe the Fideles, or Communicants, and the 4th Order of Penitents, called Conſiſtentes, had their Places. Sect. 6. The Places of Men and Women uſually ſeparate from each other. Sect. 7. Why the Places of the Women called καλιχάμμα and ὑπερῶα. Sect. 8. Private Cells for Meditation, Reading and Prayer on the back of theſe. Sect. 9. The Place of the Virgins and Widows diſtinguiſh'd from others. Sect. 10. The Solea or σωλεῖον, the Magiſtrate's Throne in this Part of the Church. What meant by the Senatorium in ſome Modern Churches. p. 292

CHAP. VI.

Of the Bema, or 3d Part of the Temple, called the Altar-Part, or Sanctuary, and the Parts and Uſes of it.

Sect. 1. The Chancel antiently called Bema, or Tribunal. Sect. 2. Alſo ἅγιον, ἱεραῖον, and Sacrarium, the Holy, or the Sanctuary. Sect. 3. And Θυσιαστήριον, the Altar-Part. Sect. 4. And Presbyterium & Diaconicum. Sect. 5. Alſo Chorus, or Quire. Sect. 6. This Place ſeparated from the reſt by Rails, called Cancelli, whence comes Chancel. Sect. 7. And kept inacceſſible to the Multitude, whence called Adyta. Sect. 8. The Holy Gates, and Veils or Hangings dividing the Chancel from the reſt of the Church. Sect. 9. The upper End of the Chancel called Apſis, Exedra, and Conchula Bematis. The Reaſon of theſe Names. Sect. 10. This antiently the Place of the Thrones of the Biſhops and Preſbyters. Sect. 11. And of the Altar, or Communion-Table, encompaſſed with the Thrones in a Semi-circle. Sect. 12. The Names Altar and Table indifferently uſed in the Primitive Church. Sect. 13. In what Senſe the Ancients ſay they had no Altars. Sect. 14. Of the Names Holy Table, Myſtical Table, &c. Sect. 15. Altars generally made of Wood till the time of Conſtantine. Sect. 16. But one Altar antiently in a Church. Sect. 17. And ſometimes but one in a City, though ſeveral Churches, according to ſome Authors. Sect. 18. Of the Ciborium, or Canopy of the Altar. Sect. 19. Of the firſt Uſe of the Periſterion or Silver Doves over the Altar. Sect. 20. When firſt the figure of the Croſs ſet upon the Altar. Sect. 21. Of the Coverings and Veſſels of the Altar. The firſt Original of Lamps and Tapers burning by Day at the Altar. The Original of Incenſe and Cenſers. The Altare Portatile & Antimenſia, Modern Inventions of later Ages. The ῥιπίδια, or Flabella, as old as the Author of the Conſtitutions. Sect. 22. Of the Oblationarium, Paratorium, or Protheſis. Sect. 23. Of the Sceuophylacium, or Diaconicum Bematis. p. 297

CHAP. VII.

Of the Baptiſteries, and other outer Buildings, called the Exedræ of the Church.

Sect. 1. Baptiſteries, antiently Buildings diſtinct from the Church. Sect. 2. Theſe very capacious, and the Reaſons of it. Sect. 3. Why called φωτιστήρια, Places of Illumination. Sect. 4. Of the Difference between a Baptiſtery and a Font. And why the Font called Piſcina and κολυμβήθρα. Sect. 5. How Fonts and Baptiſteries antiently adorned. Sect. 6. Baptiſteries antiently more peculiar to the Mother-Church. Sect. 7. Of the Secretarium or Diaconicum Magnum, The Veſtry of the Church. Sect. 8. Why this otherwiſe called Receptorium & Salutatorium, The Greeting-Houſe. Sect. 9. Of the Decanica, or Priſons of the Church. Sect. 10. Of the Mitatorium or Meſatorium. Sect. 11. Of the Gazophylacium & Paſtophoria. Sect. 12. Of the Schools and Libraries of the Church. Sect. 13. In what Senſe Dwelling-Houſes, Gardens and Baths, reckoned to be Parts of the Church. Sect. 14. Of the Original of Organs, and when they firſt came to be uſed in the Church. Sect. 15. Of the Original of Bells, and how Church-Aſſemblies were called before their Invention. p. 308

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Donaria & Anathemata, and other Ornaments of the antient Churches.

Sect. 1. What the Ancients meant by the Anathemata in Churches. Sect. 2. Why one particular kind of these called ἐκλυπώμενα, and when brought first into Churches. Sect. 3. Churches antiently adorned with Portions of Scripture written upon the Walls. Sect. 4. And with other Inscriptions of Human Composition. Sect. 5. Gilding and Mosaick Work used in the antient Churches. Sect. 6. No Pictures or Images allowed in Churches for the first 300 Years. Sect. 7. First brought in by Paulinus and his Cotemporaries, privately and by Degrees, in the latter end of the 4*th Century.* Sect. 8. The Picture of Kings and Bishops brought into the Church about the same time. Sect. 9. But neither the Pictures of the Living nor the Dead designed for Worship. Sect. 10. No Images of God or the Trinity allowed in Churches till after the 2d Nicene Council. Sect. 11. Nor usually Statues or Massy Images, but only Paintings and Pictures, and those rather Symbolical than any other. Sect. 12. Of adorning the Churches with Flowers and Branches. p. 317

CHAP. IX.

Of the Consecration of Churches.

Sect. 1. What the Ancients meant by Consecration of Churches. Sect. 2. The first authentick Accounts of this to be fetched from the 4*th Century.* Sect. 3. The Bishop of every Diocese the ordinary Minister of these Consecrations. Sect. 4. No Church to be built without the Bishop's Leave. Sect. 5. Nor till the Bishop had first made a solemn Prayer, and fixed the Sign of the Cross in the Place where it was to be built, by the Laws of Justinian. Sect. 6. No Bishop to Consecrate a Church in another Man's Diocese, except Necessity required it. Sect. 7. No Necessity of a Licence from the Bishop of Rome in former Ages for a Bishop to Consecrate Churches in his own Diocese. Sect. 8. Churches always dedicated to God, and not to Saints, though sometimes distinguished by their Names for a Memorial of them. Sect. 9. Churches sometimes named from their Founders, or other Circumstances in their Building. Sect. 10. When Altars first began to have a particular Consecration with new Ceremonies distinct from Churches. Sect. 11. No Church to be built or Consecrated before it was endowed. Sect. 12. Yet Bishops not to demand any thing for Consecration. Sect. 13. Consecrations performed indifferently upon any Day. Sect. 14. The Day of Consecration usually celebrated among their Anniversary Festivals. p. 323

CHAP. X.

Of the Respect and Reverence which the Primitive Christians paid to their Churches.

Sect. 1. Churches never put to any profane Use, but only Sacred and Religious Service. Sect. 2. The like Caution observed about the Sacred Vessels and Utensils of the Church. Sect. 3. What Difference made between Churches and Private Houses. Sect. 4. How some chose rather to die, than to deliver up Churches to be prophaned by Hereticks. Sect. 5. The Ceremony of washing their Hands when they went into the Church. Sect. 6. The Ceremony of putting off the Shoes used by some; but this no general Custom. Sect. 7. Whether the Ancients used the Ceremony of bowing toward the Altar at their Entrance into the Church. Sect. 8. Kings laid aside their Crowns, and Arms, and Guards, when they went into the House of the King of Kings. Sect. 9. The Doors and Pillars of the Church and Altar often kissed and embraced in Token of Love and Respect to them. Sect. 10. Churches used for Private Meditation and Prayer, as well as Publick. Sect. 11. Their publick Behaviour in the Church expressive of great Reverence. Sect. 12. Churches the safest Repository for things of any Value, and the securest Retreat for Men in times of great Distress. p. 329

CHAP. XI.

Of the first Original of Asylums, or Places of Sanctuary and Refuge, with the Laws relating to them in Christian Churches.

Sect. 1. The Original of this Privilege to be deduced from the time of Constantine, but not from his Laws. Sect. 2. At first only the Altar and inner Fabrick of the Church the Place of Refuge; but afterwards any outer-Buildings or Precincts of the Church invested with the same Privilege. Sect. 3. What Persons allowed to take Sanctuary. Sect. 4. What Persons and Criminals denied this Privilege. First, Publick Debtors. Sect. 5. Secondly, Jews that pretended to turn Christians only to avoid paying their Debts, or suffering Legal Punishment for their Crimes. Sect. 6. Thirdly, Hereticks and Apostates. Sect. 7. Fourthly, Slaves that fled from their Masters. Sect. 8. Fifthly, Robbers, Murderers, Conspirators, Ravishers of Virgins, Adulterers, and other Criminals of the like Nature. Sect. 9. A just Reflection upon the great Abuse of Modern Sanctuaries, in exempting Men from legal Punishment, and enervating the Force of Civil Laws. Sect. 10. Conditions antiently to be observed by such as fled for Sanctuary to the Church, otherwise they were not to have the Benefit of it. First, No one to fly with Arms into the Church. Sect. 11. Secondly, No one to raise a seditious Clamour or Tumult as he fled thither. Sect. 12. Thirdly, No one to eat or sleep in the Church, because of the Sacredness of the Place, but to have his Entertainment in some outward Building. p. 334

BOOK IX.

A Geographical Deſcription of the Diſtricts of the antient Church, or an Account of its Diviſion into Provinces, Dioceſes, and Pariſhes. And of the firſt Original of theſe.

CHAP. I.

Of the State and Diviſion of the Roman Empire, and of the Church's Conformity to That in Modelling her own External Polity and Government.

SECT. 1. The State of the Roman Empire in the Days of the Apoſtles. Sect. 2. The State of the Church made conformable to it. Sect. 3. The Diviſion of the Roman Empire into Provinces and Dioceſes. Sect. 4. The ſame Model followed by the Church. Sect. 5. This evidenced by the Civil Notitia of the Empire. Sect. 6. Compared with the moſt antient Accounts of the Diviſion of Provinces in the Church. Sect. 7. This evidenced farther from the Rules and Canons of the Church. Sect. 8. Yet the Church not ty'd preciſely to uſe this Model, but uſed her Liberty ſometimes in varying from it. Sect. 9. An Account of the Eccleſiæ Suburbicariæ in the Diſtricts of the Roman Church. Sect. 10. This moſt probably the true antient Limits of the Biſhop of Rome's both Metropolitical and Patriarchal Juriſdiction. Sect. 11. Some evident Proofs of this, ſhewing the Churches of Milan, Africa, Spain, France and Britain, to be independent of the Pope's Patriarchal Power. Sect. 12. The contrary Exceptions of Schelſtrate, relating particularly to the Britannick Church, examin'd and refuted. p 340

CHAP. II.

A more particular Account of the Nature and Extent of Dioceſes, or Epiſcopal Churches, in Africa, Egypt, Arabia, Paleſtine, Syria, Phœnicia and other Eaſtern Provinces.

Sect. 1. Dioceſes antiently called παροικίαι, Parochiæ. Sect. 2. When the Name Dioceſe began firſt to be uſed. Sect. 3. What meant by the περάσεια, or Suburbs of a City, which were reckoned Part of the City-Dioceſe. Sect. 4. Dioceſes not generally ſo large in Nations of the firſt Ages Converſion, as in thoſe converted in the middle Ages of the Church. Sect. 5. A particular Account of the Extent of Dioceſes in the African Provinces. Sect. 6. Of the Dioceſes of Libya, Pentapolis and Ægyptus. Sect. 7. Of the Dioceſes of Arabia. And why theſe more frequently in Villages, than in other Places. Sect. 8. Of the Dioceſes in Paleſtine, or the Patriarchate of Jeruſalem. Sect. 9. A Catalogue of the Provinces and Dioceſes under the Patriarch of Antioch. Sect. 10. Obſervations on the Dioceſes of Cyprus. Sect. 11. Of the Dioceſes of Syria Prima and Secunda. Sect. 12. Of the Province of Phœnicia Prima and Secunda. Sect. 13. Of the Province of Theodorias. Sect. 14. Of Euphrateſia or Comagene. Sect. 15. Of Oſrhoena, and Meſopotamia, or Armenia Quarta. Sect. 16. Of Armenia Perſica, otherwiſe called Magna. Sect. 17. Of Aſſyria, Adiabene and Chaldæa. Sect. 18. Of the Immerini in Perſia, and the Homeritæ in Arabia Felix. Sect. 19. Of Biſhops among the Saracens in Arabia. Sect. 20. Of Biſhops of the Axumites, or Indians beyond Egypt. No particular Account of Dioceſes in Iberia, Parthia, or India Orientalis, to be had out of the Monuments of the antient Church. p. 351

CHAP. III.

A Continuation of this Account of Dioceſes in the Provinces of Aſia Minor.

Sect. 1. Of the Extent of Aſia Minor, and the number of Dioceſes contained therein. Sect. 2. Of Cappadocia and Armenia Minor. Sect. 3. Of Pontus Polemoniacus. Sect. 4. Of Helenopontus. Sect. 5. Of Paphlagonia and Galatia. Sect. 6. Of Honorias. Sect. 7. Of Bithynia. Sect. 8. Of Helleſpontus. Sect. 9. Of Aſia and Lydia Proconſularis. Sect. 10. Of Caria. Sect. 11. Of Lycia. Sect. 12. Of Pamphylia Prima and Secunda. Sect. 13. Of Lycaonia. Sect. 14. Of Piſidia. Sect. 15. Of Phrygia Pacatiana & Salutaris. Sect. 16. Of Iſauria and Cilicia. Sect. 17. Of Lazica, or Colchis. Sect. 18. Of the Iſle of Lesbos and the Cyclades. p. 365

CHAP. IV.

A Continuation of the former Account in the European Provinces of Thracia, Macedonia, Greece, Illyricum, &c.

Sect. 1. Of the ſix Provinces of Thrace. Firſt of Scythia. Sect. 2. Of Europa. Where particularly of the Dioceſe of Conſtantinople in this Province. Sect. 3. Of Thracia, properly ſo called. Sect. 4. Of Hœmimontis. Sect. 5. Of Rhodope. Sect. 6. Of Mœſia Secunda. Sect. 7. Of the ſeven Provinces of Macedonia and Greece. Of Macedonia Prima and Secunda. Sect. 8. Of Theſſalia. Sect. 9. Of Achaia, or Attica, Peloponeſus and the Iſle of Eubœa. Sect. 10. Of Epirus Vetus, and Epirus Nova. Sect. 11. Of the Iſle of Crete. Sect. 12. Of the five Provinces in the Dioceſe of Dacia. Of Prevalitana. Sect. 13. Of Mœſia Superior. Sect. 14. Of Dacia Mediterranea and Dacia Ripenſis. Sect. 15. Of Dardania and Gothia. Sect. 16. Of the ſix Provinces vinces in the Dioceſe of Illyricum Occidentale. Of Dalmatia. Sect. 17. Of Savia. Sect. 18. Of Pannonia Superior and Inferior. Sect. 19. Of Noricum Mediterraneum, and Noricum Ripenſe. p. 373

CHAP. V.

A particular Account of the ſeventeen Provinces of the Roman and Italick Dioceſes, and of the Epiſcopal Dioceſes contained in them.

Sect. 1. Of the Extent of the Dioceſe of the Biſhop of Rome. Sect. 2. Of Dioceſes in Tuſcia and Umbria. Sect. 3. Of the Province of Valeria. Sect. 4. Of Picenum Suburbicarium. Sect. 5. Of Latium and Campania. Sect. 6. Of Samnium. Sect. 7. Of Apulia and Calabria. Sect. 8. Of Lucania and Brutia. Sect. 9. Of the Iſles of Sicily, Melita and Lipara. Sect. 10. Of Sardinia and Corſica. Sect. 11. Of Picenum Annonarium and Flaminia. Sect. 12. Of Æmylia. Sect. 13. Of Alpes Cottiæ. Sect. 14. Of Liguria. Sect. 15. Of Rhætia Prima and Secunda. Sect. 16. Of Venetia and Hiſtria. p. 377

CHAP. VI.

Of the Dioceſes in France, Spain, and the Britiſh Iſles.

Sect. 1. Of the antient Bounds and Diviſion of Gallia into ſeventeen Provinces. Of Gallia & Septem Provinciæ. Sect. 2. Of the Dioceſes in the Province of Alpes Maritimæ. Sect. 3. Of Alpes Graiæ, or Penninæ. Sect. 4. Of Viennenſis Prima and Secunda. Sect. 5. Of Narbonenſis Prima and Secunda. Sect. 6. Of Novempopulania. Sect. 7. Of Aquitania Prima and Secunda. Sect. 8. Of Lugdunenſis Prima, Secunda, Tertia, Quarta, and Maxima Sequanorum. Sect. 9. Of Belgica Prima and Secunda. Sect. 10. Of Germanica Prima and Secunda. Sect. 11. The antient Diviſion of the Spaniſh Provinces. Sect. 12. Of Tarraconenſis. Sect. 13. Of Carthaginenſis. Sect. 14. Of Bœtica. Sect. 15. Of Luſitania. Sect. 16. Of Gallæcia. Sect. 17. Of the Iſlands of Majorca, Minorca, &c. Sect. 18. The State of the Spaniſh Church evidenced from ſome of her moſt antient Councils. Sect. 19. Of Ireland and Scotland. Sect. 20. Of the Britiſh Church in England and Wales. Sect. 21. This whole Account confirmed from ſome antient Canons of the Church. Sect. 22. And from the Biſhop's Obligation to Viſit their Dioceſes once a Year, and confirm Children in the Country-Region. p. 387

CHAP. VII.

The Notitia, or Geographical Deſcription of the Biſhopricks of the antient Church, as firſt made by the Order of Leo Sapiens in the IXth Century, compared with ſome others. p. 396

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Diviſion of the Dioceſes into Pariſhes, and the firſt Original of them.

Sect. 1. Of the antient Names of Pariſh-Churches, Parochiæ, Dioceſes, Eccleſiæ Diœceſanæ, Tituli, &c. Sect. 2. The Original of Pariſh-Churches owing to Neceſſity, and founded upon the Apoſtolical Rules of Chriſtian Communion. Sect. 3. Some of them probably as antient as the times of the Apoſtles, in the greater Cities of the Roman Empire. Sect. 4. Leſſer Cities had Country Pariſhes even in times of Perſecution. The Original of Country Pariſhes in England. Sect. 5. The City Pariſhes not always aſſign'd to particular Presbyters, but ſerved in common by the Clergy of the Biſhop's Church. This otherwiſe in Country Pariſhes which had fixed Presbyters from their firſt Inſtitution. Sect. 6. Settled Revenues not immediately fixed upon Pariſhes at their firſt Diviſion, but paid into the common Stock of the Biſhop's Church. When firſt appropriated Revenues began to be ſettled upon Pariſh-Churches in the Eaſt, in Spain, France, Germany, and the Engliſh Church. p. 404

The CONCLUSION.

Wherein is propos'd an eaſy and honourable Method for eſtabliſhing a Primitive Dioceſan Epiſcopacy, conformable to the Model of the ſmaller ſort of antient Dioceſes, in all the Proteſtant Churches. p. 408

APPENDIX. p. 410

BOOK X.

Of the Inſtitution of the Catechumens, and the firſt Uſe of the Creeds in the Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the ſeveral Names of the Catechumens, and the Solemnity that was uſed in admitting them to that State in the Church. Alſo of Catechizing, and the time of their Continuance in that Exerciſe.

SECT. 1. The Reaſon of the Names Κατηχούμενοι, Novitioli, Tyrones, &c, Sect. 2. Impoſition of Hands and Prayer uſed in the firſt Admiſſion of Catechumens. Sect. 3. And Conſignation with the Sign of the Croſs. Sect. 4. At what Age Perſons were admitted to be Catechumens. Sect. 5. How long they continued in this State. Sect. 6. The Subſtance of the antient Catechiſms, and Method of Inſtruction. Sect. 7. The Catechumens allowed to read the Scriptures. p. 419

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

Of the ſeveral Claſſes or Degrees of Catechumens, and the gradual Exerciſes and Diſcipline of every Order.

Sect. 1. Four Orders or Degrees of Catechumens among the Ancients. Sect. 2. Firſt, the Ἐξωθούμενοι, or Catechumens privately inſtructed without the Church. Sect. 3. Secondly, the ἀκροώμενοι, Audientes or Hearers. Sect. 4. Thirdly, the γονυκλίνοντες, or Genu-flectentes and Subſtrati, the Kneelers. Sect. 5. Fourthly, the Competentes or Electi, the immediate Candidates of Baptiſm. Sect. 6. How this laſt Order were particularly diſciplined and prepared for Baptiſm. Sect. 7. Partly by frequent Examinations, from which ſuch as approved themſelves had the Name of Electi, the Choſen. Sect. 8. Partly by Exorciſm, accompanied with Impoſition of Hands and the Sign of the Croſs, and Inſufflation. Sect. 9. Partly by the Exerciſes of Faſting and Abſtinence, and Confeſſion and Repentance, &c. Sect. 10. Partly by learning the Words of the Creed and Lord's-Prayer. Sect. 11. And the Form of Renunciation of the Devil, and Covenanting with Chriſt, with other Reſponſes relating to their Baptiſm. Sect. 12. What meant by the Competentes going veiled before Baptiſm. Sect. 13. Of the Ceremony called Ephphata, or opening of the Ears of the Catechumens. Sect. 14. Of putting Clay upon their Eyes. What meant by it. Sect. 15. Whether the Catechumens held a lighted Taper in their Hands in the time of Exorciſm. Sect. 16. What meant by the Sacrament of the Catechumens. Sect. 17. How the Catechumens were puniſhed, if they fell into groſs Sins. Sect. 18. How they were treated by the Church, if they died without Baptiſm. Sect. 19. What Opinion the Ancients had of the Neceſſity of Baptiſm. Sect. 20. The want of Baptiſm ſupplied by Martyrdom. Sect. 21. And by Faith and Repentance, in ſuch Catechumens as were piouſly preparing for Baptiſm. Sect. 22. The Caſe of Hereticks returning to the Unity of the Church: How far Charity in that Caſe was thought to ſupply the want of Baptiſm. Sect. 23. The Caſe of Perſons Communicating for a long time without Baptiſm: How far that was thought to ſupply the want of Baptiſm. Sect. 24. The Caſe of Infants dying unbaptized: The Opinion of the Ancients concerning it. p. 423

CHAP. III.

Of the Original, Nature, and Names of the antient Creeds of the Church.

Sect. 1. Why the Creed called Symbolum. Sect. 2. Why called Canon, and Regula Fidei. Sect. 3. Why called Mathema. Sect. 4. Why called γραφὴ and γράμμα. Sect. 5. Whether that which is commonly called the Apoſtles Creed, was compoſed by the Apoſtles in the preſent Form of Words. Sect. 6. That probably the Apoſtles uſed ſeveral Creeds, differing in Form, not in Subſtance. Sect. 7. What Articles were contained in the Apoſtolical Creeds. p. 437

CHAP. IV.

A Collection of ſeveral antient Forms of the Creed out of the Primitive Records of the Church.

Sect. 1. The Fragments of the Creed in Irenæus. Sect. 2. The Creed of Origen. Sect. 3. The Fragments of the Creed in Tertullian. Sect. 4. The Fragments of the Creed in Cyprian. Sect. 5. The Creed of Gregory Thaumaturgus. Sect. 6. The Creed of Lucian the Martyr. Sect. 7. The Creed of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions. Sect. 8. The Creed of Jeruſalem. Sect. 9. The Creed of Cæſarea in Paleſtine. Sect. 10. The Creed of Alexandria. Sect. 11. The Creed of Antioch. Sect. 12. The Roman Creed, commonly called the Apoſtles Creed. Sect. 13. The Creed of Aquileia. Sect. 14. The Nicene Creed, as firſt publiſhed by the Council of Nice. Sect. 15. The Creeds in Epiphanius, compleating the Nicene Creed. Sect. 16. The Nicene Creed was compleated by the Council of Conſtantinople. An. 381. Sect. 17. Of the Uſe of the Nicene Creed in the antient Service of the Church: And when it was firſt taken in to be a Part of the Liturgy in the Communion Office. Sect. 18. Of the Athanaſian Creed. p. 443

CHAP. V.

Of the Original, Nature, and Reaſons of that antient Diſcipline of concealing the ſacred Myſteries of the Church from the Sight and Knowledge of the Catechumens.

Sect. 1. The Errors and Pretences of the Romaniſts upon this Point. Sect. 2. This Diſcipline not ſtrictly obſerved in the very firſt Ages of the Church. Sect. 3. But introduced about the time of Tertullian, for other Reaſons than what the Romaniſts pretend. Sect. 4. This proved from a particular Account of the things which they concealed from the Catechumens. Which were, Firſt, The Manner of Adminiſtring Baptiſm. Sect. 5. Secondly, The Manner of Adminiſtring the Holy Unction or Confirmation. Sect. 6. Thirdly, The Ordination of Prieſts. Sect. 7. Fourthly, The Liturgy, or publick Prayers of the Church, ſuch as the Prayers for the Energumens, Penitents, and the Faithful. Sect. 8. Fifthly, The Manner of Celebrating the Euchariſt. Sect. 9. Sixthly, The Myſtery of the Trinity, the Creed, and the Lord's-Prayer from the firſt ſort of Catechumens. Sect. 10. Reaſons for concealing theſe things from the Catechumens. 1ſt, That the Plainneſs and Simplicity of them might not be contemned. Sect. 11. 2dly, To conciliate a Reverence for them. Sect. 12. 3dly, To make the Catechumens more deſirous to know them. p. 455

BOOK XI.

Of the Rites and Cuſtoms obſerved in the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the ſeveral Names and Appellations of Baptiſm in the Primitive Church.

SECT. 1. The Names of Baptiſm moſt commonly taken from the ſpiritual Effects of it. Sect. 2. Hence Baptiſm called Indulgentia, Indulgence or Abſolution. Sect. 3. And παλιγγενεσία, Regeneration; and χρῖσμα, the Unction. Sect. 4. And φωτισμὸς, Illumination. Sect. 5. And Salus, Salvation. Sect. 6. From the Nature and Subſtance of it, it was called Myſterium Sacramentum, and σφραγὶς. Sect. 7. And Character Dominicus, the Mark or Character of the Lord. Sect. 8. Why called the Sacrament of Faith and Repentance. Sect. 9. The Notation of the Names Baptiſm, Tinction, Laver. That they do not univerſally denote Immerſion. Sect. 10. Of ſome other Names given to Baptiſm. The great Circumciſion, δῶρον and χάρισμα, the Gift of the Lord. Viaticum and Phylacterium, τελείωσις, μύησις and Symbola. p. 461

CHAP. II.

Of the Matter of Baptiſm: With an Account of ſuch Hereticks as rejected or corrupted Baptiſm by Water.

Sect. 1. Baptiſm wholly rejected by the Hereticks called Aſcodrutæ, and Marcoſians, and Valentinians, and Quintilians. Sect. 2. And by the Archontici. Sect. 3. And the Seleucians and Hermians. Sect. 4. And Manichees and Paulicians. Sect. 5. What Opinion the Meſſalians or Euchites had of Baptiſm. p. 466

CHAP. III.

Of the antient Form of Baptiſm: And of ſuch Hereticks as altered or corrupted it.

Sect. 1. The uſual Form of baptizing in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. Sect. 2. This Form of Words generally thought neceſſary to be uſed in Baptiſm. Sect. 3. Whether Baptiſm in the Name of Chriſt alone was ever allowed in the Church. Sect. 4. Of Alterations made in the Form of Baptiſm. Firſt, By the Tritheiſts and Priſcillianiſts. Sect. 5. Secondly, By the Menandrians. Sect. 6. Thirdly, By the Elceſeans. Sect. 7. Fourthly, By the Sabellians and Montaniſts. Sect. 8. Fifthly, By the Marcoſians. Sect. 9. Sixthly, By the Paulianiſts. Sect. 10. Seventhly, By the Eunomians and others who baptized into the Death of Chriſt. Sect. 11. Whether all the Arians were guilty of the ſame Innovation. Sect. 12. Whether any Additions were made to the Form of Baptiſm in the Catholick Church. p. 469

CHAP. IV.

Of the Subjects of Baptiſm, or an Account of what Perſons were antiently allowed to be baptized. Where particularly of Infant-Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. Why the Queſtion about the Adminiſtrators of Baptiſm is here omitted. Sect. 2. Who were antiently reckoned the proper Subjects of Baptiſm. Where of the corrupt Cuſtom of baptizing inanimate things, as Bells, in the Roman Church. Sect. 3. Baptiſm not to be given to the Dead. Sect. 4. Nor to the Living for the Dead. Where of the Apoſtle's Meaning of being baptized for the Dead, 1 Cor. 15. 29. Sect. 5. Proof of Infant Baptiſm from the antient Records of the Church. Sect. 6. From Clemens Romanus and Hermes Paſtor. Sect. 7. From Juſtin Martyr. Sect. 8. And the Author of the Recognitions, contemporary with Juſtin Martyr. Sect. 9. From Irenæus. Sect. 10. And Tertullian. Sect. 11. And Origen. Sect. 12. And Cyprian, with the Council of Carthage under him. Sect. 13. Infant-Baptiſm not to be delayed to the eighth Day, after the Example of Circumciſion. Nor till three Years, as Gregory Nazianzen would have had it. Sect. 14. Yet in ſome Churches it was deferred to the time of an approaching Feſtival. Sect. 15. A Reſolution of ſome Queſtions concerning Infant-Baptiſm. Whether Children might be baptized when only one Parent was Chriſtian? Sect. 16. Whether the Children of Excommunicated Parents might be baptized? Sect. 17. Whether expoſed Children, whoſe Parents were unknown, might be baptized. Sect. 18. Whether the Children of Jews or Heathens might be baptized in any Caſe whatſoever? Sect. 19. Whether Children born while their Parents were Heathen, might be baptized? p. 476

CHAP. V.

Of the Baptiſm of Adult Perſons.

Sect. 1. No Adult Perſon to be baptized without previous Inſtruction, to qualify them to anſwer for themſelves. Sect. 2. Yet dumb Perſons allowed to be baptized in ſome certain Caſes. Sect. 3. And Energumens in Caſes of Extremity. Sect. 4. No Slave to be baptized without the Teſtimony of his Maſter. Sect. 5. Yet Baptiſm to be a voluntary Act, and no one to be compelled to receive it by force. Sect. 6. What Perſons were rejected from Baptiſm: With a particular Account of ſome certain Trades and Vocations, which kept Men from it. Such were Image-making and Stage-

Stage-playing. Sect. 7. Gladiators, Charioteers, and other Gameſters. Sect. 8. Aſtrologers, and Practiſers of ſuch other curious Arts. Sect. 9. Frequenters of the publick Games and Theatre. Sect. 10. In what Caſe the Military Life might unqualify Men for Baptiſm. Sect. 11. Whether Perſons might be baptized who lived in the State of Concubinage. Sect. 12. The peculiar Error of the Marcionites in rejecting all married Perſons from Baptiſm. p. 486

CHAP. VI.

Of the Time and Place of Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. Why Adult Perſons ſometimes delayed Baptiſm by Order of the Church. Sect. 2. Private Reaſons for deferring Baptiſm againſt the Rules of the Church. Firſt, Supinity and Negligence of Salvation. Sect. 3. Secondly, An Unwillingneſs to renounce the World, and ſubmit to the Severities of Religion. Sect. 4. Thirdly, A Fear of falling after Baptiſm. Sect. 5. Fourthly, Superſtitious Fancies in reference to the Time, and Place, and Miniſters of Baptiſm. Sect. 6. Fifthly, A Pretence of following the Example of Chriſt, who was baptized at thirty Years of Age. Sect. 7. The ſolemn Times appointed for Baptiſm by the Church, were Eaſter, Pentecoſt, and Epiphany. Sect. 8. And in ſome Places the Feſtivals of the Apoſtles and Martyrs, and the Anniverſary Days of the Dedication of Churches prevailed alſo. Sect. 9. No ſuch ſtated times in the Days of the Apoſtles. Sect. 10. How far theſe Rules obliging in future Ages. Sect. 11. Baptiſm not confined to any Place in the Apoſtolical Ages. Sect. 12. But in After-ages confined to the Baptiſteries of the Church. Sect. 13. Except in the Caſe of Sickneſs, or with the Biſhop's Licence to the contrary, upon ſome ſpecial Occaſions. p. 494

CHAP. VII.

Of the Renunciations and Profeſſions made by all Perſons immediately before their Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. Three things required of all Perſons at their Baptiſm. 1ſt, To renounce the Devil. Sect. 2. The Form of this Renunciation, and the Import of it. Sect. 3. The Antiquity of this Renunciation. By ſome derived from the Apoſtles. Sect. 4. This Renunciation made by Perſons ſtanding with their Face toward the Weſt. The Reaſon of this Practice, with ſome other Ceremonies. Sect. 5. Why this Renunciation made three times. Sect. 6. The ſecond thing required of Men at their Baptiſm, was a Vow or Covenant of Obedience to Chriſt. Sect. 7. This Vow of Obedience made by turning to the Eaſt. And why. Sect. 8. The third thing required of the Party to be baptized, was a Profeſſion of Faith in the uſual Words of the Creed. Sect. 9. This Confeſſion made in the moſt ſolemn and publick manner. Sect. 10. With Hands and Eyes lift up to Heaven. Sect. 11. Repeated three times. Sect. 12. And ſubſcribed with their own Hands in the Books of the Church, as ſome think. Sect. 13. The Uſe of all theſe Ceremonies and Engagements, to make Men ſenſible of their Obligation, and ſtedfaſt to their Profeſſion. Sect. 14. Whether publick and particular Confeſſion of Sins was required of Men at their Baptiſm. p. 501

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Uſe of Sponſors or Sureties in Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. Three ſorts of Sponſors in the Primitive Church. Firſt for Children. Sect. 2. Parents commonly Sponſors for their own Children. Sect. 3. Other Sureties not bound to maintain the Children for whom they were Sponſors. Sect. 4. But only to anſwer for them to the ſeveral Interrogatories in Baptiſm. Sect. 5. And to be Guardians of their ſpiritual Life for the future. Sect. 6. The ſecond ſort of Sponſors for ſuch Adult Perſons as could not anſwer for themſelves. Sect. 7. The third ſort of Sponſors for all Adult Perſons in general. Sect. 8. Whoſe Duty was not to anſwer in their Names, but only to admoniſh and inſtruct them before and after Baptiſm. Sect. 9. This Office chiefly impoſed upon Deacons and Deaconneſſes. Sect. 10. What Perſons prohibited from being Sponſors. Sect. 11. But one Sponſor required, and that a Man for a Man, and a Woman for a Woman. Sect. 12. When firſt it became a Law that Sponſors might not marry a ſpiritual Relation. Sect. 13. Why the Names of the Sponſors ordered to be regiſtred in the Books of the Church. p. 509

CHAP. IX.

Of the Unction and the Sign of the Croſs in Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. Of the firſt Original of Unction in Baptiſm. Sect. 2. Of the Difference between this and Chriſm in Confirmation. Sect. 3. The Deſign of this Unction, and the Reaſon of it. Sect. 4. The Sign of the Croſs frequently uſed in the Ceremonies of Baptiſm. Firſt, In the Admiſſion of Catechumens; and Secondly, in the time of Exorciſm. Sect. 5. Thirdly, In this Unction before Baptiſm. Sect. 6. Fourthly, In the Unction of Confirmation. p. 514

CHAP. X.

Of the Conſecration of the Water in Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. The Conſecration of the Water made by Prayer. Sect. 2. An antient Form of this Prayer in the Conſtitutions. Sect. 3. The Sign of the Croſs uſed in the Conſecration. Sect. 4. The Effects and Change wrought by this Conſecration, the ſame as in the Bread and Wine in the Euchariſt. Sect. 5. How far theſe Prayers of Conſecration reckoned neceſſary in the Church. p. 517

CHAP. XI.

Of the different Ways of baptizing by Immerſion, Trine Immerſion, and Aſperſion in the Caſe of Clinick Baptiſm.

Sect. 1. All Perſons antiently diveſted in order to be baptized. Sect. 2. No Exception in this Caſe, either with reſpect to Women or Children. Sect. 3. Yet

3. Yet Matters were ſo ordered, as that no Indecency might be committed. Sect. 4. Baptiſm uſually performed by Immerſion. Sect. 5. Yet Aſperſion allowed in ſome extraordinary Caſes. Sect. 6. Trine Immerſion the general Practice for ſeveral Ages. The Reaſons of this. Sect. 7. The Original of this Practice. Sect. 8. When firſt the Church allowed of any Alteration in it. p. 521

BOOK XII.

Of Confirmation, and other Ceremonies following Baptiſm, before Men were made Partakers of the Euchariſt.

CHAP. I.

Of the Time when, and the Perſons to whom Confirmation was adminiſtred.

Sect. 1. Confirmation antiently given immediately after Baptiſm, if the Biſhop were preſent. Sect. 2. And this as well to Infants as Adult Perſons. Which is evidenced firſt from ſome plain Teſtimonies. Sect. 3. And, ſecondly, from the Cuſtom of giving the Euchariſt to Infants for many Ages. Sect. 4. Whence it appears, that Confirmation was not eſteemed a proper Sacrament diſtinct from Baptiſm. Sect. 5. No not when it was ſeparate from Baptiſm, as in the Caſe of Hereticks who were baptized out of the Church. Sect. 6. No Neceſſity of giving Confirmation to Infants now, any more than the Euchariſt, from the Example of the Primitive Church. p. 527

CHAP. II.

Of the Miniſter of Confirmation.

Sect. 1. The Conſecration of Chriſm reſerved only to the Office of Biſhops by the Canons. Sect. 2. The Uſe of the Chriſm divided between the Office of Biſhops and Presbyters. Sect. 3. The other Ceremony of Impoſition of Hands, reſerved more ſtrictly to the Office of Biſhops. Sect. 4. Yet in ſome ſpecial Caſes Presbyters by Commiſſion allowed to miniſter it alſo. As Firſt, when Biſhops particularly required their Presbyters to do it to ſuch as were baptized in the Church. Sect. 5. Secondly, Presbyters might adminiſter it to the Energumens, who were baptized at a diſtance from the Biſhop's Church. Sect. 6. And Thirdly, to ſuch as were baptized in Hereſy or Schiſm, in caſe they were in Danger of Death. p. 531

CHAP. III.

Of the Manner of Adminiſtring Confirmation, and the Ceremonies uſed in the Celebration of it.

Sect. 1. The firſt Ceremony of Confirmation was the Unction of Chriſm. Sect. 2. The Original of this Unction. Sect. 3. The Form and Manner of Adminiſtring it, together with the Effects of it. Sect. 4. The ſecond Ceremony of Confirmation was the Sign of the Croſs. Sect. 5. The third and moſt noted Ceremony of Confirmation, was Impoſition of Hands; and the fourth, Prayer joyned therewith. Sect. 6. The Original of the Ceremony of Impoſition of Hands. Sect. 7. What Opinion the Ancients had of the Neceſſity of Confirmation. Sect. 8. How they puniſhed thoſe that neglected it. p. 535

CHAP. IV.

Of the remaining Ceremonies of Baptiſm following Confirmation.

Sect. 1. Perſons newly baptized, cloathed in white Garments. Sect. 2. Theſe ſometimes delivered to them with a ſolemn Form of Words. Sect. 3. Worn eight Days, and then laid up in the Church. Sect. 4. The Ceremony of Lights and Tapers. What intended by it: And at whoſe Charge both theſe were provided. Sect. 5. The Kiſs of Peace given to Perſons newly baptized. Sect. 6. And a taſte of Honey and Milk in Token of their new Birth. Sect. 7. Then they were required to repeat the Lord's Prayer. Sect. 8. And received into the Church with Pſalmody. Sect. 9. And admitted immediately to the Communion of the Altar. Sect. 10. Of the Ceremony of waſhing the Feet, retained in ſome Churches. Sect. 11. A general Reflection upon the whole preceding Diſcourſe, with relation to the Practice of the preſent Church. p. 541

CHAP. V.

Of the Laws againſt Rebaptization both in Church and State.

Sect. 1. But one Baptiſm, properly ſo called, allowed by the Church. Sect. 2. Only the Marcionites allowed Baptiſm to be thrice repeated. Sect. 3. What the Church did in doubtful Caſes, not reckoned a Rebaptization. Sect. 4. Nor when ſhe baptized thoſe who had been unduly baptized before in Hereſy or Schiſm. Sect. 5. Apoſtates never rebaptized in the Catholick Church. Sect. 6. What Hereticks rebaptized the Catholicks. Sect. 7. What Puniſhments were inflicted on Rebaptizers by the Laws of Church and State. p. 546

BOOK XIII.

General Obſervations relating to Divine Worſhip in the antient Church.

CHAP. I.

Some neceſſary Remarks upon the antient Names of Divine Service, which Modern Corruptions have rendred Ambiguous.

Sect. 1. The Partition of this Work. Sect. 2. Of the Miſſa Catechumenorum, or Ante-Communion Service, to which all Orders of Men were admitted. Sect. 3. Of the Miſſa Fidelium, or Communion-Service, peculiar to Communicants only. Sect. 4. The true Original and Meaning of the antient Name Miſſa, the Maſs, which in its primitive Uſe denotes every part of Divine Service; but no where an Expiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and the Dead. Sect. 5. In what Senſe Divine Service antiently called Sacrifice, Sacrificium. Sect. 6. And Sacramenta. Sect. 7. And Curſus Eccleſiaſticus. Sect. 8. The Names Λειτουργία, Ἱερουργία, Ἱερά, and Μυσταγωγία, moſt uſual in the Greek Church. Sect. 9. Liturgies ſometimes taken for ſet Forms of Prayer. Sect. 10. Of Litanies. This at firſt a general Name of Prayers. How and when it came to be appropriated to certain particular Forms of Worſhip, called Rogations. Sect. 11. Of the diſtinction between greater and leſſer Litanies. Sect. 12. Of their Proceſſions. p. 553

CHAP. II.

That the Devotions of the antient Church were paid to every Perſon of the Bleſſed Trinity.

Sect. 1. Proofs of the Worſhip of Chriſt, as the Son of God, or ſecond Perſon of the Bleſſed Trinity, in the firſt Century. Sect. 2. Proofs of the ſame in the ſecond Century, from the Teſtimony of Pliny, Ignatius, Polycarp, and the Acts of Polycarp, the Epiſtle of the Church of Smyrna, Juſtin Martyr, Athenagoras, Lucian, Irenæus, Theophilus Antiochenus, Clemens of Alexandria, Athenogenes, the Acts of Andronicus, Tertullian. Sect. 3. Proofs of the Worſhip of Chriſt in the third Century out of Caius Romanus, the Council of Antioch, Dionyſius of Alexandria, Origen, Novatian, Cyprian, Arnobius, Lactantius, the Acts of the Martyrs in Euſebius, the Acts of Felix, Thelica, Emeritus, Glycerius, Olympius, and many others. The Force of this Argument to prove the Divinity of Chriſt upon this Chriſtian Principle, That Divine Honour was to be given to none but God only. Sect. 4. The Proofs of the Worſhip of the Holy Ghoſt, from the Teſtimony of Polycarp, Juſtin Martyr, Lucian, Theophilus, Clemens of Alexandria, Athenogenes, Origen, the Author of the Recognitions, under the Name of Clemens Romanus. The Ancients charged with Tritheiſm by Praxeas and the Sabellians, upon the Account of their Worſhipping the Holy Trinity. The Worſhip of the Holy Ghoſt proved farther from the Teſtimony of Cyprian, Firmilian, and Gregory Thaumaturgus. Sect. 5. In what Senſe all Prayers are ordered to be directed to the Father. p. 562

CHAP. III.

That in the antient Church Religious Worſhip was given to no Creature, Saint or Angel, Croſs, Image or Relick, but to God alone.

Sect. 1. This Poſition proved firſt from their general Declarations againſt giving religious Worſhip to any Creature. Sect. 2. Secondly, from their denying the Worſhip of Saints and Angels in particular, and condemning it as Idolatry. Sect. 3. Thirdly, from their charging the Practice of it upon Hereticks and Heathens only. p. 574

CHAP. IV.

That antiently Divine Service was always performed in the Vulgar Tongue, underſtood by the People.

Sect. 1. This proved, Firſt, from plain Teſtimonies of the Ancients aſſerting it. Sect. 2. Secondly, from the People's joining in Pſalmody and Prayer, and making their proper Reſponſes in the Liturgy. Sect. 3. Thirdly, from the frequent Exhortations of the Fathers to the People, to hear, and read, and pray with Underſtanding. Sect. 4. Fourthly, from the References made by the Fathers in their Sermons to the Prayers and Leſſons in the Service of the Church. Sect. 5. Fifthly, from the Scriptures being tranſlated into all Languages from the firſt Foundation of Churches. Sect. 6. Sixthly, from the Uſe of the Order of Interpreters in the Church. Sect. 7. Seventhly, from the Cuſtom of having Bibles laid in Churches, for the People to read in private. Sect. 8. Eighthly, from the general Allowance granted to all Men to have, and read the Scriptures in their Mother Tongue. Which Privilege was never infringed by any but the Heathen Perſecutors. Sect. 9. From the Liberty granted to Children and Catechumens to join in publick Prayers, and read the Scriptures. Sect. 10. From the Form and Tenour of the Ordination of Readers in the Church. p. 579

CHAP. V.

Of the Original and Uſe of Liturgies in Stated and Set Forms of Prayer in the Primitive Church.

Sect. 1. Every Biſhop at Liberty in the firſt Ages to order the Form of Divine Service in his own Church. Sect. 2. In After-ages the Churches of a whole Province by Conſent conformed to the Liturgy of the Metropolitical Church. Sect. 3. Why none of the antient Liturgies are now remaining maining perfect and entire as they were in their first Original. Sect. 4. What Forms were used in the Apostles Days. Where of the antient Forms used by the Jews in their Temple-Worship and Synagogue-Service. How our Saviour and his Apostles complied with the Use of them. What new Forms were introduced by the Apostles into the Christian Service. Sect. 5. What Evidence there is of the Use of set Forms in the second Century, from the Testimony of Pliny, Ignatius, Lucian, Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertullian, and the Acts of St. Perpetua and Felicitas. Sect. 6. Evidence of set Forms in the third Century, from the Testimony of Hippolytus, Origen, Cyprian, Firmilian, Gregory Thaumaturgus, the Council of Antioch, Caius Romanus, Nepos, Dionysius of Alexandria, Athenogenes, and Cornelius Bishop of Rome. Sect. 7. Evidences of set Forms in the fourth Century, from the Testimony of Arnobius, Lactantius, Eusebius, the Forms of Licinius, and Constantine, Athanasius, Juvencus, Pachomius, Flavian Bishop of Antioch, Cyril of Jerusalem, Hilary of Poictiers, the Council of Laodicea, Epiphanius, Optatus, Basil, Ephrem Syrus, the Practice of Arius and Eunomius, St. Ambrose, St. Jerom, and St. Austin, the Council of Carthage and Milevis. p. 586

CHAP. VI.

An Extract of the several Parts of the antient Liturgy out of the Genuine Writings of St. Chrysostom, following the Order of his Works.

Sect. 1. Parts of the Liturgy in the first Tome. Sect. 2. Parts of the Liturgy in the second Tome of St. Chrysostom's Works. Sect. 3. Part of the antient Liturgy in the third Tome. Sect. 4. Part of the antient Liturgy in the fourth Tome of St. Chrysostom's Works. Sect. 5. In the fifth Tome. Sect. 6. In the sixth Tome. Sect. 7. In the seventh Tome of his Homilies on St. Matthew. Sect. 8. In the eighth Tome on St. John and the Acts of the Apostles. Sect. 9. In the ninth Tome on Romans, on the first and second to the Corinthians. Sect. 10. In the tenth Tome. p. 611

CHAP. VII.

Of the Use of the Lord's Prayer in the Liturgy of the antient Church.

Sect. 1. The Lord's Prayer esteemed by all the Ancients a Form given by Christ to be used by all his Disciples. Sect. 2. Accordingly it was used by the Primitive Church in all her publick Offices: Particularly in the Administration of Baptism. Sect. 3. And in the Celebration of the Eucharist. Sect. 4. And in their Morning and Evening Prayers. Sect. 5. And in their private Devotions. Sect. 6. Whence it had the Name of Oratio Quotidiana, the Christian's daily Prayer. Sect. 7. And was used by all Hereticks and Schismaticks as well as Catholicks. Sect. 8. That it was esteemed a divine and spiritual Form of Prayer. Sect. 9. And the Use of it esteemed a peculiar Privilege, allowed only to Communicants and perfect Christians. p. 622

CHAP. VIII.

Of the use of Habits, and Gesture, and other Rites and Ceremonies in the antient Church.

Sect. 1. No certain Evidences for the Use of distinct Habits in the Apostolical Age, or the two following Ages. Sect. 2. What Evidence there is for them in the fourth Century. Sect. 3. Four Postures of Devotion spoken of by the Ancients. First, Standing, which was particularly injoined on the Lord's Day, and all the time between Easter and Pentecost. Sect. 4. Secondly, Kneeling at all other times, especially on the Stationary Days, and other times of Devotion. Sect. 5. Thirdly, Bowing down the Head, or Inclination of the Body. Sect. 6. Fourthly, Prostration. Sect. 7. Sitting not an allowed Posture of Devotion. Sect. 8. Some superstitious Practices in Devotion noted by Tertullian, as bathing the Body, and putting off their Cloaks when they went to Prayer. Sect. 9. That the Ancients always prayed uncovered. Sect. 10. And lifted up their Hands toward Heaven, sometimes in the Form of a Cross. Sect. 11. But yet were great Enemies to all Theatrical Gestures. Sect. 12. What Ceremonies they used at their Entrance into the Church. Sect. 13. That the Bishop saluted the People with the Form, Pax vobis, at his Entrance into the Church. Sect. 14. And the People gave Alms to the Poor, who stood before the Gates of the Church for this Purpose. Sect. 15. That they worshipped toward the East, with the Reasons for this Practice. p. 627

CHAP. IX.

Of the Times of their Religious Assemblies, and the several Parts of Divine Service performed in them.

Sect. 1. No certain Rule for meeting in Publick, except upon the Lord's Day, in times of Persecution, for the two first Ages. Sect. 2. The Original of the Stationary Days, or Church-Assemblies on Wednesdays and Fridays, and what Divine Service was performed on those Days. Sect. 3. Saturday or the Sabbath antiently observed with great Solemnity, as a Day of publick Devotion. Sect. 4. How they observed the Vigils of the Sabbath and Lord's Day, and other incidental Festivals of Martyrs. Sect. 5. Of the Festivals of Martyrs, their Original, and what Divine Service was performed on those Days. Sect. 6. Solemn Assemblies for Preaching, and other Acts of Divine Worship, held every Day during the whole forty Days of Lent, and the fifty Days between Easter and Pentecost. Sect. 7. Publick Prayer Morning and Evening every Day in the third Century. Sect. 8. The Original of the Canonical Hours of Prayer. No notice of them for publick Prayer, but only for private, in the three first Ages. Sect. 9. What Service was allotted to these Canonical Hours by the Church in the fourth Century. Sect. 10. Of the Matutina, or Prima, called the New Morning Service. Sect. 11. Of the Tertia, or third Hour of Prayer. Sect. 12. Of the sixth Hour, or Noon-day Service.

vice. Sect. 13. Of the ninth Hour, or three in the Afternoon. p. 636

CHAP. X.

The Order of their Daily Morning Service.

Sect. 1. The Order of Morning Service, as described in the Constitutions. This began with the lxiiid Psalm. Sect. 2. What Notice there is of this Morning Psalm in other Writers. Sect. 3. Next to the Psalm followed the Prayers for the Catechumens, Energumens, Competentes, and Penitents. Sect. 4. Then the Prayers for the Faithful, the Peace of the World, and the whole State of Christ's Church. Sect. 5. What Notice we have of these Prayers in other Writers. Sect. 6. After the general Prayer for the whole State of the Church, followed a short Bidding-Prayer for Preservation in the ensuing Day. Sect. 7. Then the Bishop's Commendation or Thanksgiving. Sect. 8. And his Imposition of Hands or Benediction, with the Deacon's Dismission of the Assembly. Sect. 9. Whether the Morning Hymn was part of the publick Service every Day. Sect. 10. Whether the Psalms and Lessons were read at the daily Morning Service. Sect. 11. The Original of the Ante-lucan or Night Assemblies in time of Persecution. Sect. 12. These continued when the Persecutions were over. Sect. 13. The Order of Divine Service, which was performed in them, as described by St. Basil. Sect. 14. The Account of them out of Cassian. Sect. 15. This Morning Service much frequented by the Laity as well as the Clergy. p. 646

CHAP. XI.

The Order of their Daily Evening Service.

Sect. 1. The Evening Service in most things conformed to that of the Morning. Sect. 2. But they differed, first, in that a proper Psalm (the cxli) was appointed for the Evening Service. This Psalm called the Evening Psalm by the Author of the Constitutions. Sect. 3. This Psalm mentioned by Chrysostom, and other Writers, under the same Denomination. Sect. 4. Secondly, they had proper Prayers for the Evening Service. Sect. 5. The Evening Hymn. Sect. 6. Whether there were any Hymns, or Psalms, or Lessons read in the Evening Service, beside the cxlist Psalm. Sect. 7. The Lord's Prayer used in many Churches, as the Conclusion of the daily Morning and Evening Service. p. 654

BOOK XIV.

Of that Part of Divine Service which the Ancients comprized under the general Name of Missa Catechumenorum, The Service of the Catechumens, or Ante-Communion Service on the Lord's Day.

CHAP. I.

Of the Psalmody of the antient Church.

Sect. 1. That the Service of the antient Church on the Lord's Day usually began with Psalmody. Sect. 2. The Psalms intermixed with Lessons and Prayers in some Churches. Sect. 3. These Psalms called by a peculiar Name, Psalmi Responsorij. Sect. 4. Some Psalms appropriated to particular Services. Sect. 5. Others sung in the ordinary Course as they lay in Order, without being appropriated to any Time or Day. Sect. 6. And some appointed occasionally, at the Discretion of the Bishop or Precentor. Sect. 7. Prayers in some Places between every Psalm instead of a Lesson. Sect. 8. The Gloria Patri added at the end of every Psalm in the Western Church, but not in the Greek or Oriental Church. Sect. 9. The Psalms sometimes sung by one Person only. Sect. 10. Sometimes by the whole Assembly joyning altogether. Sect. 11. Sometimes alternately by the Congregation divided into two Parts, and answering Verse for Verse to one another. Sect. 12. Sometimes by a single Precentor repeating the first Part of the Verse, and the People all joyning with him in the Close. This was called ὑπηχεῖν, and ὑπαχεῖν. What meant by Diapsalms, Acroteleuticks, and Acrosticks in Psalmody. Sect. 13. An Answer to a Popish Objection against the Peoples bearing a Part in Psalmody. Sect. 14. Psalmody always performed in the standing Posture. Sect. 15. Of the use of plain Song, and its Commendation among the Ancients. Sect. 16. Artificial and melodious tuning of the Voice allowed in Singing, when managed with Sobriety and Discretion. Sect. 17. No Objection made against Psalms or Hymns of human Composition, barely as such. Sect. 18. But two Corruptions severely inveighed against. First, over-great Niceness and Curiosity in Singing, in Imitation of the Modes and Musick of the Theatre. Sect. 19. And Secondly, pleasing the Ear without raising the Affections of the Soul. p. 661

CHAP. II.

A particular Account of some of the most noted Hymns used in the Service of the antient Church.

Sect. 1. Of the lesser Doxology, or Hymn, Glory be to the Father, &c. Sect. 2. Of the great Doxology, Glory be to God on high, &c. Sect. 3. Of the Trisagion, or Cherubical Hymn, Holy, Holy, Holy, &c. Sect. 4. Of the Allelujah,

Sancta Sanctis, and the Hymn, Glory be to God on high, Hosanna, &c. Sect. 32. Of the Invitatory Psalm sung before the Communion. Sect. 33. That the Consecration antiently was always performed with an audible Voice. Sect. 34. And with the Ceremony of breaking the Bread, to represent our Saviour's Passion. p. 741

CHAP. IV.

Of Communicants, or Persons who were allowed to receive this Sacrament, and the manner of receiving it.

Sect. 1. All Persons, except Catechumens and Penitents, obliged to receive the Eucharist. Sect. 2. When and how this Discipline began first to relax. Sect. 3. When first the use of Eulogiæ came in, instead of the Eucharist, for such as would not communicate. Sect. 4. The Corruption of private and solitary Mass unknown to former Ages. Sect. 5. Other Corruptions countenanced in the Roman Church, such as the Missa Sicca and Nautica, and those called Bifaciata and Trifaciata, &c. Sect. 6. The Communion not given to Hereticks and Schismaticks, without Confessions and Reconciliation. Sect. 7. Yet given to Infants and Children for several Ages. Sect. 8 And sent to the absent Members of their own and other Churches. Sect. 9. And to those that were sick, or in Prison, or under any Confinement, or in Penance at the Point of Death. Sect. 10. The Eucharist sometimes consecrated in private Houses for these Purposes. Sect. 11. And commonly reserved in the Church for the same Uses. Sect. 12. And also for publick use upon some Days, when they made no new Consecration. This called Missa Præsanctificatorium. Its Use and Original. Sect. 13. The Eucharist sometimes reserved in private by private Men, for daily Participations. Sect. 14. Yet this never allowed in the publick Service. Sect. 15. A novel Custom noted of reserving the Eucharist for forty Days, and the Inconveniences attending it. Sect. 16. The Eucharist sometimes given to the Energumens in the Interval of their Distemper. Sect. 17. All Men debarred from it that were guilty of any great or notorious Crime, of what Rank or Degree soever. Sect. 18. The Question of Digamy or second Marriage stated. Whether it debarred Men at any time from the Communion. Sect. 19. The corrupt Custom of some, who gave the Eucharist to the Dead, censured by the Ancients. Sect. 20. Parallel to which is the abuse of burying the Eucharist with the Dead. Sect. 21. The Order of Communicating. Sect. 22. Some Rules observed for distinction of Places in Communicating. p. 769

CHAP. V.

A Resolution of several Questions relating farther to the manner of Communicating in the antient Church.

Sect. 1. That the People were always admitted to receive the Communion in both Kinds. Sect. 2. That in receiving in both Kinds they always received the Elements distinctly, and not the one dipped in the other. Sect. 3. That the Ancients received sometimes standing, sometimes kneeling, but never sitting. Sect. 4 No Elevation of the Host for divine Adoration in the antient Church for many Ages, till the rise of Transubstantiation. Sect. 5. The People allowed to receive the Eucharist into their own Hands. Sect. 6. The same Custom observed in delivering it to Women and Children. Sect. 7. The Eucharist usually delivered to the People with a certain Form of Words, to which they answered Amen. Sect. 8. How, Novatian and others abused the Communion to wicked Purposes. Sect. 9. Proper Psalms for the Occasion usually sung while the People were communicating. p. 785

CHAP. VI.

Of their Post-Communion Service.

Sect. 1. The Communion Service closed with several sorts of Thanksgiving. The Deacon's Bidding-Prayer or Thanksgiving. Sect. 2. The Bishop's Thanksgiving, or Commendation of the People to God. Sect. 3. The Bishop's Benediction. Sect. 4. The Deacon's Form of dismissing the People with the short Prayer, Go in Peace. Sect. 5. What Account we have of these Prayers in other Writers besides the Constitutions. Sect. 6. These Thanksgivings always made in the Plural Number by and for the whole Body of Communicants. And so they are still remaining in the Roman Mass-Book, to the reproach of the great abuse of private and solitary Mass. p. 802

CHAP. VII.

How the Remains of the Eucharist were disposed of: And of their common Entertainment called Agape, or Feast of Charity.

Sect. 1. Part of the Eucharist antiently reserved for particular Uses. Sect. 2. The rest divided among the Communicants. Sect 3. This Division of the consecrated Elements, a distinct thing from the Division of the other Oblations. Sect. 4. The Remains of the Eucharist sometimes given to innocent Children. Sect. 5. And sometimes burnt in the Fire. Sect. 6. Some part of the other Oblations disposed of in a Feast of Charity, which all the Ancients reckon an Apostolical Rite accompanying the Communion. Sect. 7. Whether this Feast was before or after the Communion in the Apostles Days. Sect. 8. How observed in the following Ages; when the Eucharist was commonly received fasting, and before this Feast, except upon some particular Occasions. Sect. 9. These Love-Feasts at first held in the Church; but afterward forbidden to be kept in the Church by Orders of Councils. Sect. 10. How the Christians were at first abused and calumniated by some of the Heathen, but admired and envied by others upon the Account of these Feasts of Charity. p. 805

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Preparation which the Ancients required as neceſſary in Communicants, to qualify them for a worthy Reception.

Sect. 1. A general Anſwer to this Queſtion, by referring to the Profeſſions of Repentance, Faith, and holy Obedience, made by every Chriſtian in Baptiſm; in the Obſervation of which Profeſſions every one was preſumed to be qualified for the Communion. Sect. 2. What Failings were deemed conſiſtent with theſe Profeſſions, and a State of Grace, and a continual Preparation for the Communion. Sect. 3. What Repentance required for ſuch Failings. Sect. 4. What Crimes unqualified Men abſolutely for the Communion, and what ſort of Repentance was required for them. Sect. 5. Miniſters not to admit ſcandalous and notorious Sinners to the Communion, without ſatisfactory Evidences of their Repentance, in ſuch Caſes as ſubjected them to the publick Diſcipline: In other Caſes, where the publick Diſcipline was not concerned, they were only to admoniſh them to abſtain from Communion, but not obliged abſolutely to repel them from it. Sect. 6. Auricular Confeſſion of private Sins not neceſſary to be made to the Prieſt, as an indiſpenſible Qualification for the Communion. Sect. 7. That Preparation conſiſts not in coming to Communion at certain holy Seaſons, Eaſter, Chriſtmas, &c. but in Sanctity and Purity at all times. Sect. 8. What Faith they required in Communicants. Sect. 9. What Purity of Soul by Repentance and Obedience. How far Faſting uſeful or neceſſary to this Purpoſe. Sect. 10 The Neceſſity of Juſtice and Reſtitution in a worthy Communicant. Sect. 11. The Neceſſity of Peace and Unity. Sect. 12. The Neceſſity of Charity to the Poor. Sect. 13. The Neceſſity of forgiving Enemies, and pardoning Offences. Sect. 14. What Behaviour required in the Act of Communicating: And what Deportment afterwards. p. 811

CHAP. IX.

Of frequent Communion, and the Times of Celebrating it in the antient Church.

Sect. 1. All Perſons, except Penitents under Cenſure, obliged antiently to receive the Communion every Lord's-Day, by the Canons of the Church. Sect. 2. This ſhewed to be the conſtant Practice for the three firſt Ages. Sect. 3. The Euchariſt celebrated on other Days beſide the Lord's-Day in many Churches. Sect. 4. And in ſome Places every Day. Sect. 5. When firſt it came to be ſettled to three times a Year. Sect. 6. And afterward to once a Year by the Council of Lateran. Sect. 7. What Attempt was made to reſtore frequent and full Communions at the Reformation. Sect. 8. Wherein this is ſtill deficient: And what ſeems yet neceſſary to be done in order to reduce Communion to the Primitive Standard. p. 824

AFter theſe Collections were printed off, I had occaſion to make one Remark upon a Word uſed in the 1ſt Book, Chap. 2. Sect. 17. which becauſe I have no Opportunity to mention elſewhere; the Reader may pleaſe to take it in this Place. The Name Piloſiotæ, which I ſay the Origenians uſed as a Term of Reproach for the Catholicks, ought rather to be read Peluſiotæ, from πήλος, Lutum; in which Senſe it ſignifies Earthly, Senſual, Carnally-minded Men, which were the Names the Origenians beſtowed upon the Orthodox, becauſe they had not the ſame Apprehenſions of Spiritual and Heavenly Bodies as they had. St. Jerom gives this Explication in expreſs Terms, in a Paſſage which has lately occurr'd to my Obſervation, where he uſes [*] the Greek Word πηλωσιώτας, which explains his Meaning in other Places, and puts the Matter beyond all Diſpute. So that though Baronius from ſome Copies reads it Piloſiotæ, yet the true reading is Peluſiotæ, as the Paſſage cited in the Margin does evince.

[*] Hieron. Com. in Jerom. 29. p. 407. Quæ cum audiunt Diſcipuli ejus (Origenis) & Grunnianæ Familiæ Stercora, putant ſe Divina audire Myſteria: Noſque quòd iſta contemnimus, quaſi pro brutis habent animantibus, & vocant πηλωσιώτας, eò quod in Luto iſtius corporis conſtituti, non poſſimus ſentere cœleſtia.

THE ANTIQUITIES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

BOOK I.

Of the ſeveral NAMES and ORDERS of Men in the CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

CHAP. I.

Of the ſeveral Titles and Appellations of Chriſtians, which they owned, and diſtinguiſhed themſelves by.

SECT. I. Chriſtians at firſt called Jeſſeans, and Therapeutæ, Πιστοὶ, ἐκλεκτοὶ, &c.

WHEN Chriſtianity was firſt planted in the World, they who embraced it were commonly known among themſelves by the Names of Diſciples, Believers, Elect, Saints, and Brethren; before they aſſumed the Title and Appellation of Chriſtians. Epiphanius [a] ſays they were alſo called Ἰεσσαῖοι, Jeſſeans; either from Jeſſe the Father of David, or, which is more probable, from the Name of the Lord Jeſus. He adds, that Philo ſpeaks of them under this Appellation, in his Book περὶ Ἰεσσαίων; which he affirms to be no other but Chriſtians, who went by that Name in Ægypt, whilſt St. Mark preached the Goſpel at Alexandria. This Book of Philo's is now extant under another Title; περὶ βίου θεωρητικοῦ, Of the Contemplative Life: And ſo it is cited by Euſebius [b]; who is alſo of Opinion, that it is nothing but a Deſcription of the Chriſtians in Ægypt, whom he calls Therapeutæ; which ſignifies either Worſhippers of the True God, or Spiritual Phyſicians, who undertook to cure Men's Minds of all vicious and corrupt Affections. But whether this Name was invented by Philo, as moſt proper to expreſs their ways of living, or was then the common Name of Believers in Ægypt, before the Name Chriſtian was ſpread over all the World, Euſebius does not undertake to determine: However, he concludes it was a Name given to the Chriſtians; and St. Jerom [c] is ſo poſitive in it, that for this Reaſon he gives Philo a Place in his Catalogue of Eccleſiaſtical Writers; telling us, that he wrote a Book concerning the firſt Church of St. Mark at Alexandria.

SOME Learned Criticks of the laſt Age, call this whole Matter [d] into Queſtion: But their Arguments are anſwered by others [e] as Learned; and therefore I ſhall enter no farther into this Diſpute, but refer the Reader, that is curious, thither for Satisfaction. That which I here take notice of farther, is only this; That theſe

[a] Epiphan. Hær. 29. n. 4. [b]. Euſeb. Hiſt. Lib. 2. c. 17. [c] Hieron de Scriptor. c. 21. [d] Scaliger & Valeſius in Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 17. Dallæus de Jejun. & Quadrageſ. Lib. 2. c. 4. [e] Bevereg. Cod. Can. Vind. Lib. 3. c. 5. n. 4.

Names, Therapeutæ and Jeſſæi, were ſcarce ever uſed in After-Ages; but the other Names, Ἅγιοι, Πιστοὶ, Ἐκλεκτοὶ, Saints, Believers, Elect, &c. occur frequently in Eccleſiaſtical Writers; and ſignify not any ſelect Number of Chriſtians, (as now the Words, Saints and Elect, are often uſed to ſignify only the Predeſtinate;) but all Chriſtians in general, who were enter'd into the Communion of the Church by the Waters of Baptiſm. For ſo Theodoret [f] and others explain the Word Ἅγιοι, Saints, to be ſuch as were vouchſafed the Honour and Privilege of Baptiſm.

SECT. II. Of the Technical Names, ΙΧΘΥΣ and Piſciculi.

AND upon this Account, becauſe the Chriſtian Life took its Original from the Waters of Baptiſm, and depended upon the Obſervance of the Covenant made therein, the Chriſtians were wont to pleaſe themſelves with the Artificial Name Piſciculi, Fiſhes; to denote, as Tertullian [g] words it, that they were regenerate, or born again into Chriſt's Religion by Water, and could not be ſaved but by continuing therein. And this Name was the rather choſen by them, becauſe the Initial Letters of our Saviour's Names and Titles in Greek, Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς, Θεοῦ Υἱὸς, Σωτὴρ, Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of God, our Saviour, Technically put together, make up the Name ΙΧΘΥΣ; which ſignifies a Fiſh, and is alluded to both by Tertullian, and [h] Optatus.

SECT. III. Chriſtians why called Gnoſtici.

SOMETIMES Chriſtians alſo ſtile themſelves by the Name of Gnoſticks, Γνωστικοὶ, Men of Underſtanding and Knowledge; becauſe the Chriſtian Religion was the trueſt Wiſdom, and the Knowledge of the moſt Divine and Heavenly things. This Name was aped and abuſed by a perverſe ſort of Hereticks, who are commonly known and diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Gnoſticks, becauſe of their great Pretences to Knowledge and Science falſly ſo called. Yet this did not hinder but that the Chriſtians ſometimes laid claim to it, as having indeed the only juſt and proper Right to make uſe of it. For which Reaſon, Clemens Alexandrinus [i] in all his Writings, gives the Chriſtian Philoſopher the Appellation of Γνωστικός. Athanaſius [k] calls the Aſceticks of Ægypt, who were of the Contemplative Life, by the ſame Name, Γνωστικοί: And Socrates tells us, Evagrius Ponticus wrote a Book for the Uſe of theſe Aſceticks, which he entituled, The Gnoſtick, i. e. Rules for the Contemplative Life; ſome Fragments of which are yet extant in Socrates [l], and ſome others publiſhed by Cotelerius, in his Monuments of the Greek Church. In one of theſe Fragments, there is mention made of a Monk, who is ſtiled Μοναχὸς τῆ Παρεμβολῆς, τῶν Γνωστικῶν ὁ δοκιμώτατος; which the firſt Tranſlators of Socrates not underſtanding, render, A Monk of great Renown, of the Sect of the Gnoſticks; as if he had been one of the Gnoſtick Hereticks; whereas, it means no more than a Monk of the Contemplative Life, who inhabited in a Village called the Parembole, not far from Alexandria; being one of thoſe Aſceticks, whom Evagrius and all the reſt call by the then known Name of Chriſtian Gnoſticks. See Valeſius's Note upon Socrates.

SECT. IV. Sometimes called Theophori & Chriſtophori.

ANOTHER Name which frequently occurs in the Writings of the Ancients, is that of Θεοφόροι which ſignifies Temples of God, and is as old as Ignatius, who uſually gave himſelf this Title; as appears, both from the Inſcriptions of his Epiſtles, each of which begins, Ἰγνάτιος ὁ καὶ Θεοφόρος; as alſo from the ancient Acts of his Martyrdom, where [m] the Reaſon of the Name is explained in his Dialogue with Trajan; who hearing him ſtile himſelf Theophorus, asked what that Name meant? To which Ignatius replied, That it meant one that carried Chriſt in his Heart. Doſt thou then, ſaid Trajan, carry him that was crucify'd in thy Heart? Ignatius anſwered, Yes: For it is written, I will dwell in them, and walk in them. Anaſtaſius Bibliothecarius indeed gives another Reaſon, why Ignatius was called Theophorus; becauſe he was the Child whom our Saviour took, and ſet in the midſt of his Diſciples, laying his Hands upon him; and therefore the Apoſtles would never preſume to Ordain him again by Impoſition of Hands after Chriſt. But as Biſhop Pearſon [n] and others have obſerved, this was a meer Invention of the modern Greeks, from whom Anaſtaſius took it without farther Enquiry. Much more ridiculous and abſurd, is the Reaſon which is aſſigned by Vincentius [o] Bellovacenſis and ſome others; That Ignatius was ſo called, becauſe the Name of Jeſus Chriſt was found written in Golden Letters in his Heart. Both theſe Fancies are ſufficiently refelled by the Genuine Acts of his Martyrdom; which give a more Rational Account of the Name, and ſuch as plainly intimates that it was no peculiar Title of Ignatius, but common to him with all other Chriſtians: As indeed Biſhop Pearſon does abundantly prove from ſeveral Paſſages of Clemens Alexandrinus, Gregory Nazianzen, Palladius, Eulogius, Theodoret, Cyril of Alexandria, Photius, Maximus, and others. Particularly Clemens [p] aſſigns the ſame Reaſon of the Name, as Ignatius does; That the [f] Theodor. Com. in Philip. 1. i. [g] Tertul. de Bapt. c. 1. Nos Piſciculi ſecundum ἰχθὺν noſtrum Jeſum Chriſtum in aqua naſcimur; nec aliter quam in aqua permanendo ſalvi ſumus. [h] Optat. cont. Parmen. Lib. 3. p. 62. Hic eſt Piſcis qui in Baptiſmate per invocationem Fontalibus undis inſeritur, ut quæ aqua fuerat. à Piſce etiam Piſcina vocitetur. Cujus Piſcis nomen, ſecundum Appellationem Græcam in uno nomine per ſingulas Literas turbam ſanctorum nominum continet, ἰχθὺς, quod eſt latinè, Jeſus Chriſtus Dei Filius Salvator. [i] Clem. Alex. Strom. 1. p. 294. Strom. 2. p. 383. Strom. 6. p. 665. Strom. 7. p. 748. [k] Athan. ap. Socrat. Hiſt. Eccl. Lib. 4. c. 23. [l] Socrat. ibid. [m] Acta Ignat. ap. Grabe Spicil. T. 2. p. 10. [n] Pearſon Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 12. p. 397. Cave's Life of Ignatius. Grabe Spicil. T. 2. p. 2. [o] Vincent. Specul. Lib. 10. c. 7. [p] Clem. Strom. Lib. 7. p. 748.

Chriſtian

Christian is therefore called Θεοφορῶν and Θεοφεράμμων, because as the Apostle says, he is the Temple of God. We sometimes also meet with the Name Christophori in the same Sense; as in the Epistle of Phileas, Bishop of Thumis, recorded by Eusebius; where speaking of the Martyrs of his own time, he gives them the Title of χριστοφόροις μάρτυσι, [q] because they were Temples of Christ, and acted by his Holy Spirit.

SECT. V. And sometimes, but very rarely, Christi.

St. Ambrose, in one place, gives them the Name of Christi, in a qualify'd Sense; alluding to the Signification of the Word Christus in Scripture; where it sometimes signifies any one that is anointed with Oyl, or receives any Commission from God by a Spiritual Unction. In which Sense, every Christian is the Lord's Anointed. And therefore he says, it is no Injury [r] for the Servant to bear the Character of the Lord, nor for the Soldier to be called by the Name of his General; forasmuch as God himself hath said, Touch not mine anointed, or my Christs; Christos meos, as now the Vulgar Translation reads it, (Psal. 105. 15.) And St. Jerom also, who in his Notes upon the Place [s] observes, That all Men are called Christs, who are anointed with the Holy Ghost; as the Ancient Patriarchs before the Law, who had no other Unction. Yet we do not find that the Christians generally took this Name upon them, but rather reserved it to their Lord, as his peculiar Name and Title.

SECT. VI. Christians great Enemies to all Party-Names, and Human Appellations.

YET it is very observable, That in all the Names they chose, there was still some peculiar Relation to Christ and God, from whom they would be named, and not from any Mortal Man, how great or eminent soever. Party-Names, and Human Appellations, they ever professed to abhor. We take not our Denomination from Men, says Chrysostom; [t] We have no Leaders, as the Followers of Marcion, or Manichæus, or Arius. No, says Epiphanius [u], The Church was never called so much as by the Name of any Apostle: We never heard of Petrians, or Paulians, or Bartholomæans, or Thaddæans; but only of Christians, from Christ. I honour Peter, says another Father [w], but I am not called a Petrian; I honour Paul, but I am not called a Paulian; I cannot bear to be named from any Man, who am the Creature of God. They observe, that this was only the Property of Sects and Heresies, to take Party-Names, and denominate themselves from their Leaders. The great and venerable Name of Christians was neglected by them, whilst they prophanely divided themselves into Human Appellations; as Gregory Nyssen [x] and Nazianzen complain. Thus Basil observes [y] how the Marcionites and Valentinians rejected the Name of Christians, to be called after the Names of Marcion and Valentinus, their Leaders. Optatus [z] and St. Austin [a] bring the same Charge against the Donatists. Optatus says, it was the usual Question of Donatus to all Foreigners; Quid apud vos agitur de Parte mea? How go the Affairs of my Party among you? And the Bishops who were his Followers, were used to subscribe themselves, Ex Parte Donati. Epiphanius observes the same of the Audians, [b] Colluthians, and Arians: And he tells us more particularly of Meletius and his Followers, [c] That having formed a Schism, they left the old Name of the Catholick Church, and stiled themselves by a distinguishing Character, The Church of the Martyrs; with an invidious Design, to cast a Reproach upon all others that were not of their Party. In like manner, as the Arians stiled themselves Lucianists [d] and Conlucianists, pretending to follow the Doctrine of Lucian the Martyr.

BUT the Church of Christ still kept to the Name of Christian. This was the Name they gloried in as most expressive of their Unity and Relation to Christ. Eusebius [e] records a memorable Story out of the Epistle of the Churches of Lyons and Vienna, in France; concerning one Sanctus a Deacon of the Church of Vienna, who suffer'd in the Persecution under Antonine; That being put to the Rack, and examined by the Magistrates concerning his Name, his Country, his City, his Quality, whether he were bond or free; his Answer to all their Questions was, I am a Christian: This, he said, was to him both Name, and City, and Kindred, and every thing. Nor could the Heathen with all their Skill extort any other Answer from him. St. Chrysostom [f] gives the like Account of the Behaviour of Lucian the Martyr before his Persecutors; and there are some other Instances of the same Nature, by which we may judge how great a Veneration they had for the Name Christian.

SECT. VII. Of the Name Catholick, and its Antiquity.

The Importunity of Hereticks made them add another Name to this, viz. that of Catholick; which was as it were their Sirname, or Characteristick, to distinguish them from all Sects, who though they had Party-Names, yet sometimes sheltered themselves under the common Name of Christians. This we learn from Pacian's Epistle [g] to Sempronian the No-

[q] Euseb. Lib. 8. c. 10. [r] Ambros. de Obit. Valentin. T. 3. p. 12. Nec injuriam putes, Characteri Domini inscribuntur & Servuli, & nomine Imperatoris signantur Milites. Denique & ipse Dominus dixit, Nolite tangere Christos meos. [s] Hieron. Com. in Psal. 104. Ecce ante Legem Patriarchæ non uncti Regali unguento, Christi dicuntur. Christi autem sunt, qui Spiritu Sancto unguntur. [t] Chrysost. Hom. 33. in Act. [u] Epiphan. Hær. 42. Marcionit. Item. Hær. 10. [w] Greg. Naz. Orat. 31. p. 506. See also Athan. Orat. 2. contra Arian. Greg. Nyss. de Perfect. Christ. T. 3. p. 276. [x] Nyss. contra Apollin. T. 3. p. 261. Naz. Orat. ad Episcop. [y] Basil. Com. in Psal. 48. p. 245. [z] Optat. Lib. 3. p. 66. [a] Aug. Ep. 68. ad Januar. [b] Epiph. Hær. 70. Audianor. Id. Hær. 69. Arian. [c] Epiph. Hær. 68. Meletian. [d] Theodor. Hist. Eccl. Lib. 1. c. 5. Epiphan. Hær. 69. Arian. [e] Euseb. Lib. 5. c. 1. [f] Chrysost. Homil. 46. in Lucian. T. 1. p. 602. [g] Pacian. Ep. 1. ad Sempronian. Christianus mihi nomen est, Catholicus Cognomen. Illud me nuncupat, Istud ostendit.

vatian

vatian Heretick, who demanding of him the Reaſon why Chriſtians called themſelves Catholicks; He anſwers, that it was to diſcern them from Hereticks, who went by the Name of Chriſtians. Chriſtian is my Name, ſays he, and Catholick my Sirname: The one is my Title, the other my Character or Mark of Diſtinction. Hereticks commonly confined Religion, either to a particular Region, or ſome ſelect Party of Men, and therefore had no Pretence to ſtile themſelves Catholicks: But the Church of Chriſt had a juſt Title to this Name, being called Catholick (as Optatus [h] obſerves) becauſe it was univerſally diffuſed over all the World. And in this Senſe the Name is as ancient almoſt as the Church it ſelf. For we meet with it in the Paſſion of Polycarp [i] in Euſebius, in Clemens [k] Alexandrinus, and Ignatius [l]. And ſo great a Regard had they for this Name, that they would own none to be Chriſtians, who did not profeſs themſelves to be of the Catholick Church. As we may ſee in the [m] Acts of Pionius the Martyr, who being asked by Polemo the Judge, Of what Church he was? Anſwered, I am of the Catholick Church: For Chriſt has no other.

SECT. VIII. In what Senſe the Name Eccleſiaſticks given to all Chriſtians.

I muſt here obſerve farther, that the Name of Eccleſiaſticks was ſometimes attributed to all Chriſtians in general. For though this was a peculiar Name of the Clergy, as contradiſtinct from the Laity in the Chriſtian Church; yet when Chriſtians in general are ſpoken of, in Oppoſition to Jews, Infidels and Hereticks, then they have all the Name of Eccleſiaſticks, or Men of the Church; as being neither of the Jewiſh Synagogues, nor of the Heathen Temples, nor Heretical Conventicles, but Members of the Church of Chriſt. In this Senſe ἀνδρὲς ἐκκλησιαστικοὶ is often uſed by [n] Euſebius and Cyril [o] of Jeruſalem. And Valeſius [p] obſerves the ſame in Origen, Epiphanius, St. Jerome and others.

SECT. IX. The Chriſtian Religion called Δόγμα, and Chriſtians ὁι τῦ Δόγματος.

Sometimes alſo we find the Word Δόγμα put abſolutely to ſignify the Chriſtian Religion; as Chryſoſtom [q] and Theodoret [r] ſay, St. Paul himſelf uſes the Word in his Epiſtle to the Epheſians, 2. 15. And Eſtius [s] aſſures us it was the common Interpretation of all Ancient Expoſitors, both Greek and Latin, upon that Place. And hence it was that Chriſtians were called ſometimes ὁι τῦ Δόγματος, Men of the Faith, meaning the Faith of Chriſt. As in the Reſcript of Aurelian the Emperor againſt Paulus Samoſatenſis, recorded by [t] Euſebius, the Biſhops of Italy and Rome are ſtiled Ἐπίσκοποι τῦ δόγματος, Biſhops of the Faith, that is, the Chriſtian Faith.

SECT. X. Chriſtians called Jews by the Heathen.

The Heathens alſo were uſed to confound the Names of Jews and Chriſtians together; Whence in Heathen Authors the Name of Jews by miſtake is often given to the Chriſtians. Thus Dio in the Life of Domitian [u] ſpeaking of Acilius Glabrio, a Man of Conſular Dignity, ſays he was accuſed of Atheiſm, and put to Death for turning to the Jews Religion: Which, as Baronius [w] and others obſerve, muſt mean the Chriſtian Religion, for which he was a Martyr. So when Suetonius [x] ſays, that Claudius expelled the Jews from Rome, becauſe they grew tumultuous by the Inſtigations of Chreſtus; 'tis generally concluded by Learned [y] Men, that under the Name of Jews he alſo comprehends the Chriſtians. In like manner when Spartian [z] ſays of Caracalla's Playfellow, that he was of the Jewiſh Religion, he doubtleſs means the Chriſtian: Forasmuch as Tertullian [a] tells us that Caracalla himſelf was nurſed by a Chriſtian.

SECT. XI. Chriſt by the Heathens commonly called Chreſtus, and Chriſtians, Chreſtians.

The Heathens committed another miſtake in the Pronunciation of our Saviour's Name, whom they generally called Chreſtus inſtead of Chriſtus; and his Followers Chreſtians for Chriſtians: Which is taken notice of by Juſtin Martyr [b], Tertullian [c], Lactantius [d], and ſome others: who correct their Miſtake, tho' they have no great Quarrel with them upon this Account; for both Names are of good Signification. Chriſtus is the ſame with the Hebrew Meſſias, and ſignifies a Perſon anointed to be a Prieſt or King; and Chreſtus being the ſame with the Greek Χρηστὸς, implies Sweetneſs and Goodneſs. Whence Tertullian [e] tells them, that they were unpardonable for proſecuting Chriſtians merely for their Name, becauſe both Names were Innocent and of excellent Signification.

The Chriſtians therefore did not wholly reject this Name, though it was none of their own Impoſing. As neither did they refuſe to be called Jews, in that Senſe as the Scripture uſes the Word, to diſtinguiſh the People of God from the Synagogue of Satan, Rev. 2. 9. Though to avoid the Subtilties of the Ebionites and Nazarens, who were for blending the Ceremonies of the Law with the Faith of the Goſpel, they rather choſe to avoid that Name, and ſtuck to the Name of Chriſtians.

[h] Optat. Lib. 2. p. 46. Cum inde dicta ſit Catholica, quod ſit Rationalis & ubique diffuſa. [i] Euſeb. lib. 4. c. 15. [k] Clem. Alex. Strom. lib. 7. [l] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 8. [m] Act. Pionii ap. Baron. an 254. n. 9. Cujus, inquit Polemo, es Eccleſiæ? Reſpondit Pionius, Catholicæ: Nulla enim eſt alia apud Chriſtum. [n] Euſeb. lib. 4. c. 7. lib. 5. cap. 27. [o] Cyril Catech. 15. n. 4. [p] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. lib. 2. cap. 25. [q] Chryſ. Hom. 5. in Epheſ. [r] Theod. Com. in Epheſ. 2. 15. [s] Eſt. Com. in Eph. 2. 14. [t] Euſeb. l. 7. c. 30. [u] Dio in Domit. [w] Baron. an. 94. n. 1. [x] Sueton. Claud. c. 26. Judæos Impulſore Chreſto aſſidue tumultuantes Roma expulit. [y] Hotting Hiſt. Eccl. T. 1. p. 37. Baſnag. Exerc. in Baron. p. 139. Selden. de Synedr. Lib. 1. c. 8. who cites Lipſius, Petavius, and many others. [z] Spartian. in Caracal. c. 1. [a] Tertul. ad Scapul. c. 4. Lacte Chriſtiano educatus. [b] Juſt. M. Apol. 2. [c] Tertul. Apol. c. 3. [d] Lact. lib. 4. c. 7. [e] Tertul. ibid. Chriſtianus quantum interpretatio eſt, de Unctione deducitur. Sed & cum perperam Chreſtianus pronunciatur à vobis (nam nec Nominis certa eſt notitia penes vos) de ſuavitate vel benignitate compoſitum eſt. Oditur ergo in hominibus innocuis etiam nomen innocuum.

CHAP. II.

Of the Names of Reproach which the Jews, Infidels, and Hereticks caſt upon the Chriſtians.

SECT. I. Chriſtians called Nazarens by the Jews and Heathens;

BESIDES the Names already ſpoken of, there were ſome other reproachful Names caſt upon them by their Adverſaries, which it will not be improper here to mention. The firſt of theſe was Nazarens, a Name of Reproach given them firſt by the Jews, by whom they are ſtiled the Sect of the Nazarens, Acts 24. 5. There was indeed a particular Hereſy, who call'd themſelves Ναζωραῖοι: And Epiphanius [f] thinks the Jews had a more eſpecial Spite at them, becauſe they were a ſort of Jewiſh Apoſtates, who kept Circumciſion and the Moſaical Rites together with the Chriſtian Religion: And therefore, he ſays, they were uſed to Curſe and Anathematize them Three times a-day, Morning, Noon and Evening, when they met in their Synagogues to pray, in this direful Form of Execration, ἐπικατάρασαι ὁ Θεὸς τὰς ναζωραίους, Send thy Curſe, O God, upon the Nazarens. But St. Jerom [g] ſays this was levelled at Chriſtians in general, whom they thus anathematized under the Name of Nazarens. And this ſeems moſt probable, becauſe as both St. Jerom [h] and Epiphanius himſelf [i] obſerves, the Jews termed all Chriſtians by way of Reproach, Nazarens. And the Gentiles took it from the Jews, as appears from that of Datianus the Prætor in Prudentius, [k] where ſpeaking to the Chriſtians, he gives them the Name of Nazarens. Some [l] think the Chriſtians at firſt were very free to own this Name, and eſteemed it no Reproach, till ſuch time as the Hereſy of the Nazarens broke out, and then in Deteſtation of that Hereſy they forſook that Name, and called themſelves Chriſtians, Acts 11. 26. But whether this be ſaid according to the exact Rules of Chronology, I leave thoſe that are better skilled to determine.

SECT. II. And Galilæans:

ANOTHER Name of Reproach was that of Galilæans, which was Julian's ordinary Stile, whenever he ſpake of Chriſt or Chriſtians. Thus in his Dialogue with old Maris a blind Chriſtian Biſhop, mentioned by Sozomen [m] he told him by way of Scoff, Thy Galilæan God will not cure thee. And again, in his Epiſtle [n] to Arſacius High-Prieſt of Galatia, The Galilæans maintain their own Poor and ours alſo. The like may be obſerved in Socrates [o], Theodoret [p], Chryſoſtom [q], and Gregory Nazianzen [r], who adds, That he not only called them Galilæans himſelf, but made a Law that no one ſhould call them by any other Name; thinking thereby to aboliſh the Name of Chriſtians.

SECT. III. Alſo Atheiſts;

THEY alſo called them Atheiſts, and their Religion the Atheiſm, or Impiety, becauſe they derided the Worſhip of the Heathen Gods. Dio [s] ſays, Acilius Glabrio was put to Death for Atheiſm, meaning the Chriſtian Religion. And the Chriſtian Apologiſts, Athenagoras [t], Juſtin Martyr [u], Arnobius [w], and others, reckon this among the Crimes which the Heathens uſually lay to their Charge. Euſebius ſays [x] the Name was become ſo common, that when the Perſecuting Magiſtrates would oblige a Chriſtian to renounce his Religion, they bad him abjure it in this Form, by ſaying among other things, αἶρε τὰς Ἀθέους, Confuſion to the Atheiſts, Away with the Impious, meaning the Chriſtians.

SECT. IV. And Greeks and Impoſtors.

TO this they added the Name of Greeks and Impoſtors. Which is noted by St. Jerom [y] who ſays, Whereſoever they ſaw a Chriſtian, they would preſently cry out, ὁ γραικὸς ἀπατεὼν, Behold a Grecian Impoſtor! This was the Character which the Jews gave our Saviour, ὁ πλάνος, That Deceiver, Mat. 27. 63. And Juſtin [z] Martyr ſays, they endeavoured to propagate it to Poſterity, ſending their Apoſtles or Emiſſaries from Jeruſalem to all the Synagogues in the World, to bid them beware of a certain Impious, Lawleſs Sect, lately riſen up under one Jeſus a Galilæan Impoſtor. Hence Lucian [a] took occaſion in his Blaſphemous Raillery to ſtile him the Crucifyed Sophiſter. And Celſus [b] commonly gives him and his Followers the Name of γόητας, Deceivers. So Aſclepiades the Judge in Prudentius, [c] compliments them with the Appellation of Sophiſters; And Ulpian [d] pro[f] Epiphan. Hær 22. n. 9. [g] Hieron. Com. in Eſa. 49. T. 5. p. 178. Ter per ſingulos dies ſub nomine Nazarenorum maledicunt in Synagogis ſuis. [h] Id. de Loc. Hebr. T. 3. p. 289. Nos apud veteres, quaſi opprobrio Nazaræi decebamur, quos nunc Chriſtianos vocant. [i] Epiphan. ibid. [k] Prudent. περὶ στεφανῶν. Carm. 5. de S. Vincent.

Vos Nazareni aſſiſtite, Rudemq; ritum ſpernite. Id. Hymno 9. de Rom. Mart.

[l] Junius Parallel. lib. 1. c. 8. Godwyn Jew. Rites. lib. 1. c. 8. [m] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 4. [n] Ap. Sozom. lib. 5. c. 16. [o] Socrat. lib. 3. c. 12. [p] Theodor. lib. 3. c. 7. & 21. [q] Chryſ. Hom. 63. Tom. 5. [r] Naz. 1. Invectiv. [s] Dio in Domitian. [t] Athen. Legat. pro Chriſt. [u] Juſt. Apol. 1. p. 47. [w] Arnob. lib. 1. [x] Euſeb. lib. 4. c. 15. [y] Hieron. Ep. 10. ad Furiam. Ubicunque viderint Chriſtianum, ſtatim illud de Trivio, ὁ γραικὸς ἀπατεὼν, vocant Impoſtorem. [z] Juſtin. Dial. Tryph. p. 335. [a] Lucian. Peregrin. [b] Celſ. ap. Orig. lib. 1. p. 6. [c] Prudent. περὶ στεφ. Carm. 9. de Romano Mart. Quis hos Sophiſtas error invexit novus? &c.

[d] Digeſt. lib. 50. Tit. 13. c. 1. Si incantavit, ſi inprecatus eſt, ſi (ut vulgari verbo Impoſtorum utar) exorciſavit.

ſcribes them in a Law by the Name of Impoſtors.

The Reaſon why they added the Name of Greek to that of Impoſtors, was (as Learned Men [e] conjecture) becauſe many of the Chriſtian Philoſophers took upon them the Grecian or Philoſophick Habit, which was the Φιλόσοφον or Pallium: Whence the Greeks were called Palliati, as the Romans were called Togati, or Gens Togata, from their proper Habit, which was the Toga. Now it being ſome Offence to the Romans to ſee the Chriſtians quit the Roman Gown, to wear the Grecian Cloak; they thence took occaſion to mock and deride them with the ſcurrilous Names of Greeks, and Grecian Impoſtors. Tertullian's Book de Pallio was written to ſhew the ſpiteful Malice of this fooliſh Objection.

SECT. V. Magicians. BUT the Heathens went one ſtep farther in their Malice: and becauſe our Saviour and his Followers did many Miracles, which they imputed to Evil Arts and the Power of Magick; they therefore generally declaimed againſt them as Magicians, and under that Character expoſed them to the Fury of the Vulgar. Celſus [f] and others pretended that our Saviour ſtudied Magick in Egypt: And St. Auſtin [g] ſays, it was generally believed among the Heathen, that he wrote ſome Books about Magick too, which he delivered to Peter and Paul for the uſe of his Diſciples. Hence it was that Suetonius [h] ſpeaking in the Language of his Party, calls the Chriſtians Genus hominum Superſtitionis Maleficæ, The Men of the Magical Superſtition. As Aſclepiades the Judge in Prudentius [i] ſtiles St. Romanus the Martyr, Arch-Magician. And St. Ambroſe obſerves in the Paſſion of St. Agnes [k] how the People cryed out againſt her, Away with the Sorcereſs! Away with the Enchanter! Nothing being more common, than to term all Chriſtians, eſpecially ſuch as wrought Miracles, [l] by the odious Name of Sorcerers and Magicians.

SECT. VI. The New Superſtition. THE New Superſtition was another Name of Reproach for the Chriſtian Religion. Suetonius gives it that Title [m], and Pliny and Tacitus add to it [n] the Opprobrious Terms of wicked and unreaſonable Superſtition. By which Name alſo Nero triumphed over it, in his Trophies which he ſet up at Rome, when he had haraſſed the Chriſtians with a moſt ſevere Perſecution. He gloried that he had purged the Country of Robbers, and thoſe that obtruded and inculcated the new Superſtition [o] upon Mankind. By this, there can be no doubt he meant the Chriſtians, whoſe Religion is called the Superſtition in other Inſcriptions of the like nature. See that of Dioclefian cited in Baronius, An. 304. from Occo. Superſtitione Chriſtianorum ubique deleta, &c.

Not much unlike this was that other Name which Porphyry [p] and ſome others give it, when they call it the Barbarous, New, and Strange Religion. In the Acts of the Famous Martyrs of Lyons, who ſuffered under Antoninus Pius, the Heathens ſcornfully inſult it with this Character. For having burnt the Martyrs to Aſhes, and ſcattered their Remains into the River Rhone, they ſaid, they did it to cut off their Hopes of a Reſurrection, upon the ſtrength of which they ſought to obtrude [q] the New and Strange Religion upon Mankind. But now let us ſee whether they will riſe again, and whether their God can help and deliver them out of our Hands.

SECT. VII. Chriſtians, why called Sibyllifts. Celſus gives them the Name of Sibyllifts [r], becauſe the Chriſtians in their Diſputes with the Heathens, ſometimes made uſe of the Authority of Sibylla their own Propheteſs againſt them; whoſe Writings they urged with ſo much Advantage to the Chriſtian Cauſe, and Prejudice to the Heathen, that Juſtin Martyr [s] ſays, the Roman Governors made it Death for any one to read them, or Hyſtaſpes, or the Writings of the Prophets.

SECT. VIII. Biathanati. THEY alſo reproached them with the Appellation of Βιαθάνατοι, Self-Murderers, becauſe they readily offered themſelves up to Martyrdom, and chearfully underwent any violent Death, which the Heathens could inflict upon them. With what Eagerneſs they courted Death, we learn not only from the Chriſtian [t] Writers themſelves, but from the Teſtimonies of the Heathens [u] concerning them. Lucian [w] ſays they not only deſpiſed Death, but many of them voluntarily offered themſelves to it, out of a Perſuaſion that they ſhould be made Immortal, and live for ever. This he reckons Folly, and therefore gives them the Name of Κακοδαίμονες, the Miſerable Wretches that threw away their Lives. In which Senſe Porphyry [x] alſo ſtiles the Chriſtian Religion, Βάρβαρον τόλμημα, The Barbarous Boldneſs. As [e] Kortholt. de Morib. Chriſtian. c. 3. p. 23. Baron. an. 56. n. 11. [f] Origen. cont. Celſ. lib. 2. Arnobius lib. 1. pag. 36. [g] Aug. de Conſenſu Evang. lib. 1. c. 9. [h] Sueton. Neron. c. 16. [i] Prudent. περὶ στεφ. Hymn. 9. de S. Romano. Quouſque tandem ſummus hic nobis Magus illudit? [k] Ambr. Serm. 90. in S. Agnen. Tolle Magam! Tolle Maleficam! [l] See Kortholt de Morib. Chriſt. c. 4. [m] Sueton. Nero. c. 16. [n] Plin. lib. 10. Ep. 97. Nihil aliud inveni, quam Superſtitionem Pravam & Immodicam. Tacit. Annal. 15. c. 44. Exitiabilis ſuperſtitio. [o] Inſcript. Antiq. ad Calcem. Sueton. Oxon. NERONI. CLAUD. CAIS. AUG. PONT. MAX. OB. PROVINC. LATRONIB. ET. HIS. QUI. NOVAM. GENERI. HUM. SUPERSTITION. INCULCAB. PURGAT. [p] Ap. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. lib. 6. c. 19. Βάρβαρον τόλμημα. [q] Act. Mart. Lugd. ap. Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 1. Θρησκείαν ξένην καὶ καινήν. [r] Origen. c. Celſ. lib. 5. p. 272. [s] Juſt. Apol. 2. p. 82. [t] See theſe Collected in Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 9. p. 384. [u] Arrius Antonin. ap. Tertul. ad Scap. c. 4. Tiberian. in Joh. Malela Chronic. [w] Lucian. de Mort. Peregrin. [x] Porphyr. ap. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 6. c. 19.

Arrius

Arrius Antoninus [y] terms the Profeſſors of it, ὦ δαλοὶ, The Stupid Wretches, that had ſuch a mind to die; And the Heathen in Minucius [z], Homines deplorate ac deſperatæ Factionis, The Men of the Forlorn and Deſperate Faction. All which agrees with the Name Biathanati, or Biæothanati, as Baronius [a] underſtands it. Though it may ſignify not only Self-Murderers, but (as a Learned Critick [b] notes) Men that expect to live after Death. In which Senſe the Heathens probably might uſe it likewiſe, to ridicule the Chriſtian Doctrine of the Reſurrection; on which, they knew, all their fearleſs and undaunted Courage was founded. For ſo the ſame Heathen in Minucius endeavours to expoſe at once both their Reſolution and their Belief: O Strange Folly, and incredible Madneſs! ſays he; they deſpiſe all preſent Torments, and yet fear thoſe that are Future and Uncertain: They are afraid of dying after Death, but in the mean time do not fear to die. So vainly do they flatter themſelves, and allay their Fears, with the hopes of ſome reviving Comforts after Death. For one of theſe Reaſons then they gave them the Name of Biothanati, which Word expreſly occurs in ſome of the Acts of the ancient Martyrs. Baronius obſerves [c] out of Bede's Martyrology, that when the ſeven Sons of Symphoroſa were martyred under Hadrian, their Bodies were all caſt into one Pit together, which the Temple-Prieſts named from them, Ad ſeptem Biothanatos, The Grave of the Seven Biothanati.

SECT. IX. Parabolarii, and Deſperati.

FOR the ſame Reaſon they gave them the Names of Parabolarii and Deſperati, The Bold and Deſperate Men. The Parabolarii or Parabolani among the Romans, were thoſe bold adventurous Men, who hired out themſelves to fight with wild Beaſts upon the Stage or Amphitheatre, whence they had alſo the Name of Beſtiarii, and Confectores. Now becauſe the Chriſtians were put to fight for their Lives in the ſame manner, and they rather choſe to do it than deny their Religion, they therefore got the Name of Paraboli, and Parabolani: Which though it was intended as a Name of Reproach and Mockery, yet the Chriſtians were not unwilling to take it to themſelves, being one of the trueſt Characters that the Heathens ever gave them. And therefore they ſometimes gave themſelves this Name by way of Alluſion to the Roman Paraboli, as in the Paſſion [*] of Abdo and Senne in the time of Valerian, the Martyrs who were expoſed to be devoured by Wild Beaſts in the Amphitheatre, are ſaid to enter, Ut audaciſſimi Parabolani, as moſt reſolute Champions, that deſpiſed their own Lives for their Religion's ſake. But the other Name of Deſperati they rejected as a Calumny, retorting it back upon their Adverſaries, who more juſtly deſerved it. Thoſe, ſays Lactantius [d], who ſet a Value upon their Faith, and will not deny their God, they firſt torment and butcher them with all their might, and then call them Deſperado's, becauſe they will not ſpare their own Bodies: As if any thing could be more Deſperate, than to torture and tear in pieces thoſe whom you cannot but know to be Innocent.

SECT. X. Sarmentitii, and Semaxii.

Tertullian mentions another Name, which was likewiſe occaſioned by their Sufferings. The Martyrs which were burnt alive, were uſually tied to a Board or Stake of about Six Foot long, which the Romans called Semaxis; and then they were ſurrounded or covered with Faggots of ſmall Wood, which they called Sarmenta. From this their Puniſhment, the Heathen who turned every thing into Mockery, gave all Chriſtians the diſpiteful Name of Sarmentitii and Semaxii [e].

SECT. XI. Lucifugax Natio.

THE Heathen in Minucius [f] takes occaſion alſo to reproach them under the Name of the Sculking Generation, or the Men that loved to prate in Corners and the Dark. The ground of which ſcurrilous Reflection was only this, That they were forced to hold their Religious Aſſemblies in the Night to avoid the Fury of the Perſecutions. Which Celſus [g] himſelf owns, though otherwiſe prone enough to load them with hard Names and odious Reflections.

SECT. XII. Plautina Proſapia, and Piſtores.

THE ſame Heathen in Minucius gives them one ſcurrilous Name more, which it is not very eaſy to gueſs the meaning of. He calls them Plautinians [h], Homines Plautinæ Proſapiæ. Rigaltius [i] takes it for a Ridicule upon the Poverty and Simplicity of the Chriſtians, whom the Heathens commonly repreſented as a Company of poor ignorant Mechanicks, Bakers, Taylors, and the like; Men of the ſame Quality with Plautus, who as St. Jerom [k] obſerves, was ſo poor, that in a time of Famine he was forced to hire out himſelf to a Baker to grind at his Mill, during which time he wrote three of his Plays in the Intervals of his Labour. Such ſort of Men Cæcilius ſays the Chriſtians were; and therefore he ſtiles Octavius in the Dialogue, Homo Plautinæ Proſapiæ, & Piſtorum præcipuus, A Plautinian, a chief Man among the Illiterate Bakers, but no Philoſopher. The ſame Reflection is often made by Celſus. You ſhall ſee, ſays he [l], Weavers, [y] Tertul. ibid. [z] Minuc. Octav. pag. 25. [a] Baron. an. 138. n. 5. [b] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſiaſt. T. 1. p. 690. [c] Baron. an. 138. n. 6. [*] Acta Abdon. & Sennes ap. Suicer. [d] Lact. Inſtit. lib. 5. c. 9. Deſperatos vocant, quia corpori ſuo minime parcunt, &c. [e] Tertul. Apol. c. 50. Licet nunc Sarmentitios & Semaxios appelletis, quia ad Stipitem dimidii Axis revincti, Sarmentorum ambitu exurimur. [f] Minuc. Octav. p. 25. Latebroſa & Lucifugax Natio, in publicum muta in angulis garrula. [g] Origen. c. Celſ. lib. 1. p. 5. [h] Minuc. p. 37. Quid ad hæc audet Octavius homo Plautinæ Proſapiæ, ut Piſtorum præcipuus ita poſtremus Philoſophorum? [i] Rigalt. in Loc. [k] Hieron. Chronic. an. 1. Olymp. 145. [l] Origen. c. Celſ. lib. 3. p. 144.

Tay-

Taylors, Fullers, and the moſt Illiterate and Ruſtick Fellows, who dare not ſpeak a Word before Wiſe Men, when they can get a Company of Children and ſilly Women together, ſet up to teach ſtrange Paradoxes amongſt them. This is one of their Rules, ſays he again [n], Let no Man that is Learned, Wiſe, or Prudent, come among us; but if any be Unlearned, or a Child, or an Idiot, let him freely come; ſo they openly declare, that none but Fools and Sots, and ſuch as want Senſe, Slaves, Women and Children, are fit Diſciples for the God they worſhip.

SECT. XIII. With what Names the Hereticks reproached the Orthodox Chriſtians.

NOR was it only the Heathens that thus reviled them, but commonly every perverſe Sect among the Chriſtians had ſome reproachful Name to caſt upon them. The Novatian Party called them Cornelians [o], becauſe they communicated with Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, rather than with Novatianus his Antagoniſt. They alſo termed them Apoſtaticks, Capitolins, Synedrians, becauſe [p] they charitably decreed in their Synods to receive Apoſtates, and ſuch as went to the Capitol to Sacrifice, into their Communion again upon their ſincere Repentance. The Neſtorians [q] termed the Orthodox Cyrillians; and the Arians [r] called them Euſtathians and Paulinians, from Euſtathius and Paulinus Biſhops of Antioch. As alſo Homoouſians, becauſe they kept to the Doctrine of the ὁμοούσιον, which declared the Son of God to be of the ſame Subſtance with the Father. The Author of the Opus Imperfectum on St. Matthew, under the Name of Chryſoſtom [s] ſtiles them expreſly, Hæreſis Homoouſianorum, The Hereſy of the Homoouſians. And ſo Serapion in his Conflict with Arnobius [t] calls them Homoouſianates, which the Printed Copy reads corruptly Homuncionates, which was a Name for the Neſtorians.

SECT. XIV. Chriſtians called Pſychici by the Montaniſts.

The Cataphrygians or Montaniſts commonly called the Orthodox Ψυχικοὺς, Carnal; becauſe they rejected the Prophecies and pretended Inſpirations of Montanus, and would not receive his Rigid Laws about Faſting, nor abſtain from Second Marriages, and obſerve Four Lents in a Year, &c. This was Tertullian's ordinary Compliment to the Chriſtians in all his Books [u] written after he was fallen into the Errors of Montanus. He calls his own Party The Spiritual, and the Orthodox the Carnal: And ſome of his Books [w] are expreſly entituled, Adverſus Pſychicos. Clemens Alexandrinus [x] obſerves, the ſame Reproach was alſo uſed by other Hereticks beſide the Montaniſts. And it appears from Irenæus, that this was an ancient Calumny of the Valentinians, who ſtiled themſelves the Spiritual and the Perfect, and the Orthodox the Secular and Carnal, [y] who had need of Abſtinence and Good Works, which were not neceſſary for them that were Perfect.

SECT. XV. Allegoriſts by the Millenaries.

THE Millenaries ſtiled them Allegoriſts, becauſe they expounded the Prophecy of the Saints Reigning a Thouſand Years with Chriſt, Rev. xx. 4. to a Myſtical and Allegorical Senſe. Whence Euſebius [z] obſerves of Nepos the Egyptian Biſhop, who wrote for the Millennium, that he entituled his Book, Ἔλεγχος Ἀλληγοριστῶν, A Confutation of the Allegoriſts.

SECT. XVI. Chronitæ by the Aetians; Simplices by the Manichees; Anthropolatræ by the Apollinarians.

Aetius the Arian gives them the abuſive Name of Χρονῖται; by which he ſeems to intimate, that their Religion was but Temporary, and would ſhortly have an end; when as the Character was much more applicable to the Arians themſelves, whoſe Faith was ſo lately ſprung up in the World; as the Author of the Dialogues de Trinitate, under the Name of Athanaſius, who confutes Aetius, [a] juſtly retorts upon him.

The Manichees, as they gave themſelves the moſt Glorious Names of Electi, Macarii, Catharиſtæ, mentioned by [b] St. Auſtin; ſo they reproached the Catholicks with the moſt contemptible Name of Simplices, Idiots; which is the Term that Manichæus himſelf uſed in his Diſpute [c] with Archelaus the Meſopotamian Biſhop, ſtiling the Chriſtian Teachers, Simpliciorum Magiſtros, Guides of the Simple; becauſe they could not reliſh his Execrable Doctrine concerning Two Principles of Good and Evil.

The Apollinarians were no leſs injurious to the Catholicks, in fixing on them the odious Name of Anthropolatræ, Man-Worſhippers; becauſe they maintained that Chriſt was a Perfect Man, and had a Reaſonable Soul and Body, of the ſame Nature with ours; which Apollinarius denied. Gregory Nazianzen [d] takes notice of this Abuſe, and ſharply replies to it; telling the Apollinarians, that they themſelves much better deſerved the Name of Sarcolatræ, Fleſh-Worſhippers: For if Chriſt had no Human Soul, they muſt be concluded to worſhip his Fleſh only.

SECT. XVII. Philofarcæ, and Peluſiotæ, &c. by the Origenians.

THE Origenians, who denied the Truth of the Reſurrection, and aſſerted that Men ſhould have only Aerial and Spiritual Bodies in the next World, made Jeſts upon the Catholicks, becauſe they maintain'd the contrary, That our Bodies ſhould be the ſame Individual Bodies, and of the ſame Nature that they are now, with [n] Ibid. p. 137. [o] Eulog. ap. Phot. Cod. 280. [p] Pacian. Ep. 2. ad Sempronian. [q] Ep. Legat. Schiſmat. ad ſuos in Epheſo in Act. Con. Epheſ. Con. T. 3. p. 746. [r] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 21. [s] Opus Imperf. Hom. 48. [t] Conflict. Arnob. & Serap. ad calcem Irenæi. p. 519. [u] Tertul. adv. Prax. c. 1. Nos quidem agnitio Paracleti disjunxit à Pſychicis. Id. de Monogam. c. 1. Hæretici nuptias auferunt, Pſychici ingerunt. See alſo c. 11. and 16. [w] De Jejuniis adv. Pſychicos. De Pudicitia, &c. [x] Clem. Alex. Strom. lib 4. p. 511. [y] Iren. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 29 Nobis quidem, quos Pſychicos vocant, & de ſeculo eſſe dicunt, neceſſariam continemiam, &c. [z] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 24. [a] Athan. Dial. 2. de Trinit. T. 2. p. 193. [b] Aug. de Hær. c. 46. [c] Archel. Diſp. adv. Manichæum ad calcem Sozomen. Ed. Valeſ. p. 197. [d] Naz. Ep. 1. ad Cledon.

Fleſh

Flesh and Bones, and all the Members in the same Form and Structure, only alter'd in Quality, not in Substance. For this they gave them the opprobrious Names of Simplices and Philosarcæ [e] Idiots, and Lovers of the Flesh; Carnei, Animales, Jumenta, Carnal, Sensual, Animals; Lutei, Earthy; Pelusiotes [f], which is a Term of the same Importance, from the Greek Word Lutum, as St. Jerom himself [*] explains it. So that though Baronius from some Copies reads this Name, Pilosiotæ, yet the true Reading is Pelusiotæ, as the Passage cited in the Margin plainly evinces.

SECT. XVIII. The Synagogue of Antichrist and Satan, by the Luciferians.

BUT of all others the Luciferians gave the Church the rudest Language; stiling her the Brothel-house, and Synagogue of Antichrist and Satan; because she allow'd those Bishops to retain their Honour and Places, who were cajoled by the Arians to subscribe the fraudulent Confession of the Council of Ariminum. The Luciferian in St. Jerom runs out in this manner against the Church; and St. Jerom says, he spake but the sense of the whole Party, for this was the ordinary Stile [g] and Language of all the rest.

These are some of those Reproachful Names, which Hereticks, concurring with Jews and Infidels, endeavoured to fasten upon the Christian Church; which I should not so much as have mentioned, but that they serve to give some Light to Antiquity, and therefore were not wholly to be passed over in a Treatise of this Nature.

CHAP. III.

Of the several Orders of Men in the Christian Church.

SECT. I. Three sorts of Members of the Christian Church, the Ἡγούμενοι, Πιστοὶ, and Κατηχούμενοι.

HAVING given an Account of the several Names of Christians, I proceed now to speak of the Persons, and several Orders of Men in the Christian Church. Some divide them into Three Ranks, others into Four, others into Five; which yet come much to the same account, when they are compared together. Eusebius reckons but Three Orders, viz. the Ἡγούμενοι, Πιστοὶ, and Κατηχούμενοι. Rulers, Believers, and Catechumen. There are in every Church, says he, Three Orders of Men, [h] One of the Rulers or Guides, and Two of those that are subject to them: For the People are divided into Two Classes; the Πιστοὶ, Believers, and the Unbaptized, by whom he means the Catechumens. St. Jerom [i] makes Five Orders; but then he divides the Clergy into Three Orders, to make up the Number; reckoning them thus, Bishops, Presbyters, Deacons, Believers, and Catechumens. In which Account he follows Origen, who [k] makes Five Degrees subordinate to one another in the Church; saying, Every one shall be punished according to the Difference of his Degree. If a Bishop or President of the Church sins, he shall have the greater Punishment. A Catechumen will deserve Mercy, in comparison of a Believer; and a Layman, in comparison of a Deacon; and a Deacon, in comparison of a Presbyter. Here are plainly St. Jerom's Five Orders; first Bishops, under the Name of Presidents of the Church; then Presbyters; after them Deacons; then Believers or Laymen; and last of all the Catechumens.

SECT. II. Believers here strictly taken for the Laity that were baptized.

IN all which Accounts, these Four Things are proper to be remarked. 1. That the Name, Believers, Πιστοὶ, and Fideles, is here taken in a more strict Sense only for One Order of Christians, The Believing or Baptized Laity, in Contradistinction to the Clergy and the Catechumens, the Two other Orders of Men in the Church. And in this Sense the Words Πιστοὶ and Fideles are commonly used in the ancient Liturgies [l] and Canons, to distinguish those that were baptized, and allowed to partake of the Holy Mysteries, from the Catechumens. Whence came that ancient Di[e] Hieron. Ep. 61. ad Pammach. T. 2. p. 171. Nos Simplices & Philosarcas dicere, quod eadem Ossa, & Sanguis, & Caro, id est, Vultus & Membra, totiusque Compago corporis resurgat in novissima die. [f] Id. Ep. 65. ad Pammach. & Ocean. de Error. Orig. p. 192. Pelusiotas nos appellant, & Luteos, Animalesque & Carneos, quod non recipiamus ea quæ Spiritus sunt. [*] Id. Com. in Jerem. 29. p. 407. Quæ cum audiunt Discipuli ejus (Origenis) & Grunnianæ Familiæ Stercora, putant se Divina audire Mysteria: Nosque qui ista contemnimus, quasi pro brutis habent animantibus, & vocant πηλσιώτας, eo quod in Luto istius Corporis constituti, non possimus sentire cœlestia. [g] Hieron. Dial. adv. Lucifer. T. 2. p. 135. Asserebat universum mundum esse Diaboli: Et, ut jam familiare est eis dicere, factum de Ecclesia Lupanar —— Quod Antichristi magis Synagoga, quàm Ecclesia Christi debeat nuncupari. [h] Euseb. Demonst. Evang. lib. 7. c. 2. p. 323. Τεία καθ' ἑκάστην ἐκκλησίαν τάγματα, ἓν μὲν τὸ τῶν ἡγουμένων, δύο δὲ τὰ τῶν ὑποβεβηκότων. [i] Hieron. Com. in Esai. 19. p. 64. Quinque Ecclesiæ Ordines, Episcopos, Presbyteros, Diaconos, Fideles, Catechumenos. [k] Origen. Hom. 5. in Ezek. Pro modo graduum unusquisque torquebitur. Majorem pœnam habet, qui Ecclesiæ præsidet & delinquit. Annon magis misericordiam promeretur ad comparationem Fidelis, Catechumenus? Non magis venia dignus est Laicus, si ad Diaconum conferatur? Et rursus comparatione Presbyteri Diaconus veniam plus meretur. [l] See Con. Nic. Can. 11. Con. Eliber. c. 12, 46, 51. Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 34. Cyril. Hierosol. Præf. Catech. n. 2.

ſtinction of the Service of the Church into the Miſſa Catechumenorum, and Miſſa [m] Fidelium; of which more in its proper Place.

SECT. III. Catechumens owned as Imperfect Members of the Church.

2*dly*, WE may hence obſerve, that the Catechumens, though but imperfect Chriſtians, were in ſome meaſure owned to be within the Pale of the Church. Foraſmuch as Euſebius, Origen, and St. Jerom, reckon them one of the Three Orders of the Church. And the Councils of Eliberis [n] and Conſtantinople [o] give them expreſly the Name of Chriſtians. Tho' as St. Auſtin [p] ſays, They were not yet Sons, but Servants: They belonged to the Houſe of God, but were not yet admitted to all the Privileges of it; being only Chriſtians at large, and not in the moſt ſtrict and proper Acceptation.

SECT. IV. Hereticks not reckoned among Chriſtians.

AND yet this is more than can be ſaid of Hereticks properly ſo called. For we may obſerve, 3*dly*, That in the forementioned Diviſion, Hereticks come into no Account among Chriſtians. They were not eſteemed of, either as Catechumens, or Believers, but as mere Jews, or Pagans; neither having the true Faith, nor being willing to learn it. Tertullian [q] ſays in general, If they be Hereticks, they cannot be Chriſtians. And St. Jerom [r] diſputing with a Luciferian, ſays the ſame in expreſs Terms, That Hereticks are no Chriſtians; nor to be ſpoken of, but as we would do of Heathens. Lactantius [s] ſpecifies in the Montaniſts, Novatians, Valentinians, Marcionites, Anthropians, Arians, ſaying, That they are no Chriſtians, who forſaking the Name of Chriſt, call themſelves by other Denominations. Athanaſius [t] and Hilary [u] ſay the ſame of the Arians, That they are not Chriſtians. Conſtantine [w] therefore enacted it into a Law, That they ſhould not be called Chriſtians, but Porphyrians; from Porphyry that infamous Heathen, whoſe Practice they ſo much reſembled in their impious Blaſphemies and Reproaches of Chriſt and the Chriſtian Religion. And in Imitation of this, Theodoſius [x] Junior made another Law to the ſame Effect, againſt Neſtorius and his Followers; That they ſhould not abuſe the Name of Chriſtians; but be called Simonians, from Simon Magus the Arch Heretick. To which we may add that Decree of the General Council of Sardica, in their Synodical Epiſtle [y] againſt the Arians; where they require all Catholicks, not only to deny the Arian Biſhops the Title of Biſhops, but even that of Chriſtians. All which evidently proves, that the Ancients put a manifeſt Difference betwixt thoſe who were Apoſtates from the Faith, and thoſe who as yet had never made any ſolemn Profeſſion of their Faith in Baptiſm: They allowed the Catechumens the Name of Chriſtians, becauſe they were Candidates of Heaven; but they judged Hereticks unworthy of that Name, becauſe they corrupted the common Faith of Chriſtians, and denied the Lord, by whoſe Name they were called.

SECT. V. Penitents and Energumens rank'd in the ſame Claſs with Catechumens.

4*thly*, WE may obſerve in the laſt place, that there were no Chriſtians, but what might be reduced to ſome one or other of the Three forementioned Orders; For the Penitents, and Energumens, as they called thoſe that were poſſeſſed with Evil Spirits, may be ranked among the Catechumens, being commonly treated and diſciplined by the Church in the ſame manner as they were, and placed in the ſame Claſs with them; and the Monks and other Aſceticks may be ranked under the common Head of Believers, though they had ſome peculiar Marks of Diſtinction in the Church. Yet I ſhall not confine my ſelf to ſpeak of all thoſe preciſely in this Order, and under theſe Heads, but give each a diſtinct and proper Place in this Diſcourſe; ſpeaking here only of Believers in general, as they ſtood diſtinguiſhed from the Catechumens and the Clergy of the Church, and treating of the reſt as occaſion ſhall require in the following parts of this Diſcourſe.

---

[m] Con. Carth. 4. c. 84. Con. Valent. Hiſpan. c. 1. [n] Con. Elib. Can. 39. [o] Con. Conſt. 1. Can. 7. [p] Aug. Tract. 11. in Joh. T. 9. p. 41. Quod ſignum Crucis in fronte habent Catechumeni, jam de Domo magna ſunt, ſed fiant ex ſervis Filii. Non enim nihil ſunt, quia ad magnam Domum pertinent. [q] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 37. Si Hæretici ſunt, Chriſtiani eſſe non poſſunt. [r] Hieron. Dial. c. Lucif. T. 2. p. 135. Hæretici Chriſtiani non ſunt —— Igitur præfixum inter nos habemus, de Hæretico ſic loquendum ſicut de Gentili. [s] Lact. Inſtit. lib. 4. c. 30. [t] Athan. Orat. 2. adv. Arian. T. 1. p. 316. Ἀρειανοὶ ὄντες, οὐκ εἰσὶ χριστιανοί. [u] Hilar. ad Conſt. lib. 1. p. 98. Chriſtianus ſum, non Arianus. [w] Conſt. Imp. Ep. ad Epiſc. ap. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 9. [x] Cod. Theod. lib. 16. Tit. 5. de Hæret. c. 66. Damnato portentoſæ Superſtitionis. Auctore Neſtorio, nota congrui nominis ejus inuratur Gregalibus, ne Chriſtianorum, Appellatione abutantur: Sed quemadmodum Ariani Lege divæ memoriæ Conſtantini ob ſimilitudinem impietatis Porfyriani à Porfyrio nuncupantur; ſic ubique participes nefariæ Sectæ Neſtorii Simoniani vocentur. See the ſame in the Acts of the General Council of Epheſus, Part. 3. c. 45. Con. Tom. 3. p. 1209.
[y] Con. Sardic. Ep. Synod. ap. Theod. lib. 2. c. 8.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

A more particular Account of the Πιστοὶ, or Believers; Their Titles of Honour and Privileges above the Catechumens.

SECT. I. Believers otherwise called φωτιζόμενοι, the Illuminate.

THE Πιστοὶ, or Fideles, being such as were baptized, and thereby made compleat and perfect Christians, were upon that account dignified with several Titles of Honour and Marks of Distinction above the Catchumens. They were hence called φωτιζόμενοι, The Illuminate: So the Council of Laodicea [z] terms those that were newly Baptized, προσφάτως φωτισθέντας. And Jobius [a] in Photius, οἱ φωτιζόμενοι. As St. Paul himself in the Epistle to the Hebrews twice uses the word Illuminate for Baptized, in the Opinion of most [b] Interpreters. The Reason of the Name is given by Justin Martyr, who says [c] they were so called, because their Understandings were enlightned by the Knowledge that was consequent to Baptism. For all the Mysteries of Religion were unveiled to the Baptized, which were kept secret from the Catechumens: And sometimes also Baptism was attended with extraordinary Illuminations of the Holy Ghost, as in those whom St. Paul caused to be Baptized at Ephesus: Act. xix. 6. They spake with Tongues and prophesied.

SECT. II. And οἱ μεμυημένοι, the Initiated.

2. THEY were hence also stiled οἱ μεμυημένοι, which the Latins call Initiati, the Initiated, that is, Admitted to the Use of the Sacred Offices, and Knowledge of the Sacred Mysteries of the Christian Religion. Hence came that Form of Speaking, so frequently used by St. Chrysostom and other ancient Writers [d] when they touched upon any Doctrines or Mysteries which the Catechumens understood not, Ἴσασιν οἱ μεμυημένοι, The Initiated know what is spoken. St. Ambrose writes a Book to these [e] Initiati. Isidore [f] of Pelusium, and Hesychius [g] call them μυσαὶ, and others μυσαγώγητοι: Whence the Catechumens have the contrary Names, Ἄμυσοι, Ἀμύητοι, and Ἀμυσαγώγητοι; The Uninitiated, or Unbaptized.

SECT. III. And τέλειοι, The Perfect.

3. BELIEVERS were otherwise called τέλειοι and τελεσμύρσι, The Perfect; because they were Consummate Christians, who had a Right to participate of the Holy Eucharist; the τὸ τέλειον, as it is frequently called in the Canons [h] of the Ancient Councils; where ὁπὶ τὸ τέλειον ἐλθεῖν, and τῶ τελείω μετέχειν, always signify Participation of the Holy Eucharist, that Sacred Mystery that unites us to Christ, and gives us the most Consummate Perfection that we are capable of in this World.

SECT. IV. Chari Dei, Filii Dei, Ἅγιοι, &c.

4. Tertullian adds to these the Name of Chari Dei, The Favourites of Heaven; because their Prayers and Intercessions were powerful with God, to obtain Pardon for others, that should address Heaven by them. Therefore, in his Instructions to the Penitents, he bids them, Charis Dei adgeniculari, fall down at the Feet of those Favourites, and commend their Suit to all the Brethren, desiring them to intercede with God for them. Tertul. de Pœnit. c. 9.

All these Names (and many others that might be added, which are obvious to every Reader, such as Saints, and Sons of God, &c.) were peculiar Titles of Honour and Respect given only to those who were πιστοὶ, or Believers.

SECT. V. The Privileges of the Fideles. 1. To partake of the Eucharist;

AND hence it was, that correspondent to these Names, the Fideles had their peculiar Privileges in the Church above the Catechumens. For, First, it was their sole Prerogative to partake of the Lord's Table, and communicate with one another in the Symbols of Christ's Body and Blood at the Altar. Hither none came, but such as were first initiated by Baptism. Whence the Custom was, before they went to celebrate the Eucharist, for a Deacon to proclaim Ἅγια Ἁγίοις, Holy Things for Holy Men: Ye Catechumens go forth, [i] as the Author of the Constitutions, and St. Chrysostom and some others word it.

SECT. VI. 2. To join in all the Prayers of the Church:

2. ANOTHER of their Prerogatives above Catechumens, was, to stay and join with the Minister in all the Prayers of the Church; which the Catechumens were not allowed to do. For in the Ancient Service of the Church, there were no Prayers preceding the Communion Office; but only such as particularly related, either to the several Classes of Penitents, or the Energumeni, that is, Persons possessed with Evil Spirits, or the Catechumens themselves. When these Prayers were ended, the Catechumens and all others were commanded to withdraw, and then began the Communion-Service at the Altar; where none were admitted so much as to be [z] Con. Laodic. Can. 3. [a] Phot. Cod. 222. p. 595. & 598. [b] See Grot. Hammond. Estius in Heb. 6. 4. & 10. 32. [c] Justin. Apol. 2. p. 94. [d] Casaubon Exerc. 16. in Baron. p. 399. observes this Phrase to occur no less than 50 times in St. Chrysostom and St. Austin. [e] Ambrose De his qui initiantur Mysteriis. [f] Isidor. Lib. 4. Ep. 162. Ἴσασιν οἱ μυσαὶ τὸ λεγόμενον. [g] Hesych. Voce μυσαὶ. [h] Con. Ancyran. Can. 4, 5, 6, &c. [i] Constit. Apost. Lib. 8. c. 8. & 12. Chrysost. Hom. in Parab. de Filio Prodig. Tom. 6. μή τις τῶν κατηχεμένων, &c.

Spectators,

Spectators, ſave thoſe who were to Communicate in the Euchariſt. For to join in Prayers and Participation of the Euchariſt, were then Privileges of the ſame Perſons; and no one was qualify'd for the Prayers of the Church, that was not qualify'd for the Communion.

SECT. VII.

3. The Uſe of the Lord's Prayer another Prerogative of the Πιστοὶ: Whence it was call'd εὐχὴ πιστῶν. The Prayer of Believers.

3. MORE particularly, the Uſe of the Lord's Prayer, was the ſole Prerogative of the Πιστοὶ, or Believers. For then it was no Crime, or Argument of Weakneſs, or Want of the Spirit, to uſe it; but an Honour and Privilege of the moſt Conſummate and Perfect Chriſtians. The Catechumens were not allow'd to ſay, Our Father, till they had firſt made themſelves Sons by Regeneration in the Waters of Baptiſm. This is expreſly ſaid by St. Chryſoſtom [k], St. Auſtin [l], Theodoret [m] and ſeveral others. And for this Reaſon, Chryſoſtom [n] calls it εὐχὴ πιστῶν; and St Auſtin [o], Oratio Fidelium, The Prayer of the Regenerate, or Believers; becauſe it was their Privilege and Birth-right: It was given to them as their Property, he [p] ſays, and therefore they made uſe of it; having a Right to ſay, Our Father which art in Heaven, who were born again to ſuch a Father, by Water and the Holy Ghoſt.

SECT. VIII.

4. They were admitted to hear Diſcourſes upon the moſt profound Myſteries of Religion.

4. LASTLY, They were admitted to be Auditors of all Diſcourſes made in the Church, even thoſe that treated of the moſt abſtruſe Points and profound Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion; which the Catechumens were ſtrictly prohibited from hearing. The Catechumens were allowed to hear the Scriptures, and the ordinary popular Diſcourſes that were made upon them; which was no more than what ſome Councils [q] allow even to Jews and Gentiles: For in thoſe Diſcourſes they never treated plainly of their Myſteries, but in ſuch a covert way, as the Catechumens could not underſtand them. But when the Catechumens were diſmiſſed, then they diſcourſed more openly of their Myſteries before the Fideles, whoſe Privilege it was to be the ſole Auditors of ſuch Diſcourſes. This we learn from St. Ambroſe; [r] who ſays, His common Diſcourſes to the Unbaptized, were only upon Points of Morality; but when they were Baptized, then was the time to open to them the Myſteries and Sacraments of Religion: To have diſcourſed to them of thoſe Things before, had been more like Expoſing Myſteries, than Explaining them. St. Auſtin ſpeaks to the ſame purpoſe, in one of his Sermons [s] to the newly Baptized: Having now diſmiſſed the Catechumens, ſays he, we have retained you only to be our Hearers: Becauſe, beſide thoſe Things which belong to all Chriſtians in common, we are now to diſcourſe more particularly of the Heavenly Myſteries, or Sacraments; which none are qualify'd to hear, but ſuch as by God's Gift are made Partakers of them. And therefore ye ought to hear them with the greater Reverence, by how much more ſublime thoſe Doctrines are, which are committed only to the Baptized and Believing Auditors, than thoſe which the Catechumens alſo are wont to hear. Theodoret [t] takes notice of the ſame Diſtinction made in their Diſcourſes, according to the Difference of their Auditors; ſaying, We diſcourſe obſcurely of Divine Myſteries before the Unbaptized; but when they are departed, we ſpeak plainly to the Baptized. From all which it is evident, that the Fideles were ſingled out, as the only proper Auditors fit to hear Diſcourſes upon the ſublime Doctrines and Myſteries of Religion. And in theſe and the like Privileges, conſiſted their Prerogative above the Catechumens.

---

[k] Chryſoſt. Hom. 2. in 2 Cor. p. 740. [l] Aug. Hom. 29. de Verb. Apoſt. [m] Theodor. Epit. Div. Dogm. c. 24. [n] Chryſoſt. Hom. 10. in Coloſ. p. 1385. [o] Aug. Enchirid. c. 71. [p] Aug. Com. in Pſal. 142. Orabant utique jam Fideles, jam Apoſtoli. Nam iſta Oratio Dominica magis Fidelibus datur. Id. Enchirid. ad Laurent. c. 71. De quotidianis, brevibus levibuſq; peccatis —— quotidiana Oratio Fidelium ſatisfacit. Eorum eſt enim dicere, Pater noſter qui es in Cœlis; qui jam Patri tali regenerati ſunt, ex aqua & Spiritu Sancto. [q] Con. Carthag. 4. Can. 14. Ut Epiſcopus nullum prohibeat ingredi Eccleſiam, & audire Verbum Dei, ſive Gentilem, ſive Hæreticum, ſive Judæum, uſque ad Miſſam Catechumenorum. [r] Ambroſ. de his qui Myſteriis initiantur, c. 1. De Moralibus quotidianum Sermonem habuimus —— Nunc de Myſteriis dicere tempus admonet, atque ipſam Sacramentorum rationem edere, quam ante Baptiſmum ſi putaſſemus inſinuandam nondum initiatis, prodidiſſe potius quam ediciſſe æſtimaremur. [s] Aug. Serm. 1. ad Neophytos in Append. T. 10. p. 845. Dimiſſis jam Catechumenis, vos tantum ad audiendum retinuimus: Quia præter illa, quæ omnes Chriſtianos convenit in commune ſervare, ſpecialiter de cœleſtibus Myſteriis locuturi ſumus, quæ audire non poſſunt, niſi qui eo donante jam Domino perceperunt. Tanto ergo majore reverentia debetis audire quæ dicimus, quanto majore iſta ſunt, quæ ſolis Baptizatis & Fidelibus Auditoribus committuntur; quàm illa quæ etiam Catechumeni audire conſueverunt. [t] Theod. Quæſt. 15. in Num.

CHAP. V.

Of the Distinction betwixt the Laity and Clergy; and of the Antiquity of that Distinction.

SECT. I. The Fideles otherwise called Laici, to distinguish them from the Clergy.

WE have hitherto considered the Great Body of the Christian Church, the Fideles, as opposed to the Catechumens: We are now to view them in another Relation, as contradistinct to the Clergy: in which Relation they went by other Names; such as those of Laici, Laymen; Βιωτικοὶ, Seculars; Ἰδιῶται, Private Men. The most common and ancient Name, was that of Laici; which every where occurs in the Writings of Origen, Cyprian, and Tertullian, and others of the Third Century: Which is a thing so evident, that the greatest Enemies of this Distinction, Rigaltius [u], Salmasius, and Selden, do not pretend to dispute it; but only say, There was originally no such Distinction in the Church; but that it is a Novelty, and owing to the Ambition of the Clergy of the Third Century, in which Cyprian and Tertullian lived.

SECT. II. The Antiquity of this Distinction proved against Rigaltius, Salmasius, and Selden.

THIS Accusation reflects highly upon St. Cyprian, and other Holy Martyrs his Cotemporaries; who were as far from the Ambition that is charged upon them, as the Authors are from Truth, that bring the Charge. For indeed the Distinction was none of their inventing; but derived from the Jewish Church, and adopted into the Christian by the Apostles themselves. Clemens Alexandrinus [w] speaking of St. John, says, That after his Return from Banishment in the Isle of Patmos, he settled at Ephesus; whence being often invited to visit the Neighbouring Regions, he Ordained them Bishops, and set apart such Men for the Clergy, as were signify'd to him by the Holy Ghost. Whence it appears, that the Name Κλῆρος, Clergy, was always a peculiar Title of those that were set apart for the Ministry and Service of God. And that this Distinction came from the Jewish Church, is evident from what Clemens Romanus [x] says of the Jewish Oeconomy; That as the High-Priest had his Office assigned him, and the Priests also their proper Station, and the Levites their peculiar Service; so Laymen in like manner were under the Obligation of Precepts proper for Laymen. These Instances evidently prove, that a Distinction was always observed in these Names, Laity and Clergy, from the first Foundation of the Christian Church.

SECT. III. An Objection from 1 Pet. 5. 3. answered.

THERE is but one Objection of any moment against this: Which is taken from the Words of St. Peter; where he bids the Elders of the Church not lord it over God's Heritage. The Original is, μηδ' ὡς κατακυριεύοντες τῶν κλήρων; which (as some Learned [y] Criticks observe) may as well signify the Possessions of the Church, as the People. But admit that it means the People; this is no more than is said of the People of Israel, who are called God's κλῆρος, and λαὸς ἔγκληρος, his Inheritance, or his Clergy; Deut. 4. 20. 9. 29. as both the Jews and Christians were, in opposition to the Heathen: Notwithstanding which, God had his peculiar Κλῆρος among his own People, who were his Lot or Inheritance, and distinguished by that Name from the Laici, or remaining Body of the People. As we have observed before in the Name Πιστοὶ, Fideles, or Believers; all Persons within the Pale of the Church were called Believers, in opposition to Infidels and Pagans; but when they would distinguish one Order of Men in the Church from another, then the Name Believers was given peculiarly to such as were Baptized, and the rest were called Catechumens: So here, all Christian People are God's Κλῆρος, his Lot, his Inheritance, or his Clergy: But when his Ministers are to be distinguished from the rest of the People in the Church, then the Name Clerici, or Clergy, was their appropriate Title, and the Name of the other, Laymen.

SECT. IV. A Distinction in the Offices of Laity and Clergy always observed.

AND this Observation will help to set another sort of Persons right, who confound not only the Name, but the Offices of Laity and Clergy together; and plead that originally there was no Distinction between them. The Name of Priesthood, indeed, is sometimes given in common to the whole Body of Christian People; 1 Pet. 2. 9. Rev. 1. 6. but so it was to the Jewish People, Exod. 19. 6. Ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests, and an Holy Nation. Yet every one knows, that the Offices of the Priests and Levites among the Jews, were very distinct from those of the common People, not by Usurpation, but by God's Appointment. And so it was among Christians, from the first Foundation of the Church. Where-ever any Number of Converts were made, as soon as they were capable of being formed into an Organical [u] Rigalt. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 3. [w] Clem. Alexand. Quis Dives salvetur. ap. Combefis. Auctar. Noviss. p. 185. & ap. Eusb. Lib. 3. c. 23. Κλήρῳ ἕνα γέ τινα κληρώσων τῷ Θεῷ πνεύματι σημαινομένῳ. [x] Clem. Rom. Ep. 1. ad Corinth. n. 40. ὁ λαϊκὸς ἄνθρωπος τοῖς λαϊκοῖς προστάγμασιν δέδεται. [y] Dodwel. Differt. 1. in Cyprian.

Church; a Biſhop, or a Presbyter, with a Deacon, was ordained to miniſter to them, as Epiphanius [z] delivers from the ancient Hiſtories of the Church. The ſame may be obſerved in the forementioned Paſſage of Clemens Alexandrinus, where he ſays St. John ordained Biſhops and other Clergy, in the Churches which he regulated, by the Direction of the Holy Ghoſt. Hence it is that Ignatius ſo frequently in all his Epiſtles charges the People to do nothing without the Biſhops [a], Presbyters and Deacons. Tertullian [b] ſays it was cuſtomary among Hereticks to confound the Offices of Clergy and Laity together: They made one a Biſhop to-day, and an other to-morrow; to-day a Deacon, and to-morrow a Reader; to-day a Presbyter, and to-morrow a Layman. For Laymen among them performed the Offices of the Prieſthood. But this was not the Cuſtom of the Catholick Church. For as St. Jerom [c] obſerves, they reckoned that to be no Church, which had no Prieſts. They were of no eſteem with them, who were both Laymen and Biſhops together. And by this we may judge how ingenuouſly they deal with St. Jerom and Tertullian, who alledge their Authorities to prove that every Chriſtian is as much a Prieſt as another. St. Jerom indeed ſays [d] there is a Laical Prieſthood; but then he explains himſelf to mean no more by that, than Chriſtian Baptiſm, whereby we are made Kings and Prieſts to God. And Tertullian [e] grants no other Prieſthood to Laymen, ſave that they may baptize in caſe of abſolute Neceſſity, when none of the Eccleſiaſtical Order can be had; which was according to the Principles and Practice of the Primitive Church; but does by no means confound the Offices of Laity and Clergy together, unleſs any one can think Caſes Ordinary and Extraordinary all one. The ancient Hiſtorians [f] Socrates and Ruffin tell us, that Frumentius and Ædeſius, two young Men, who had no external Call or Commiſſion to preach the Goſpel, being carried Captive into India, converted the Nation, and ſettled ſeveral Churches among them. And the ſame Socrates [g] and Theodoret ſay, that the Iberians were firſt converted by a Captive Woman, who made the King and Queen of the Nation Preachers of the Goſpel to their People. Yet a Man would argue very weakly, that ſhould hence conclude, that therefore there was no Diſtinction betwixt Clergy and Laity in the Primitive Church; or that Laymen might Preach without a Call, and Women Ordain Miniſters of the Goſpel. The Author of the Comments upon St. Paul's Epiſtles, under the Name [h] of St. Ambroſe, ſeems to ſay indeed, that at firſt all Chriſt's Diſciples were Clergy, and had all a general Commiſſion to preach the Goſpel and Baptize: But that was in order to Convert the World, and before any Multitude of People were gathered, or Churches founded, wherein to make a Diſtinction. But as ſoon as the Church began to ſpread it ſelf over the World, and ſufficient Numbers were Converted to form themſelves into a Regular Society, then Rulers and other Eccleſiaſtical Officers were appointed among them, and a Diſtinction made, that no one, no, not of the Clergy themſelves, might preſume to meddle with any Office not committed to him, and to which he knew himſelf not Ordained. So that for ought that appears to the contrary, we may conclude, that the Names and Offices of Laymen and Clergy were always diſtinct from one another, from the firſt Foundation of Chriſtian Churches.

SECT. V. Laymen alſo called Βιωτικοὶ, Seculars.

THE Laymen were diſtinguiſhed alſo by the Name of Βιωτικοὶ, Seculars, from Βίος, which ſignifies a Secular Life. And by this Title they are diſcerned not only from the Clergy, but alſo from the Aſceticks and thoſe of a more retired Life, who bid adieu to the World, and disburdened themſelves of all Secular Cares and Buſineſs. Thus St. Chryſoſtom [i] exhorting all Men to read the Scriptures, ſays, Let no Man think to excuſe himſelf by ſaying, I am a Secular, οὐκ ἐμὸν βιωτικὸς, it belongs not to me to read the Scriptures, but to thoſe that have retired from the World, and have taken up their abode in the Tops of the Mountains. And in another place commenting on thoſe Words of St. Paul, Let every Soul be ſubject to the higher Powers: he ſays, This Command is given to the Clergy, and to the Monks, and not to the Seculars [ii] only. And ſo they are ſtiled in the Author [k] who goes under the Name of Juſtin Martyr, and others.

SECT. VI. And ἰδιῶται, Private Men.

IN ſome Writers they are termed ἰδιῶται, Private Men, as being only in a Private Capacity, and not acting as Publick Miniſters. So it was another Name to diſtinguiſh them from the Clergy who were in the Publick Office and Em-[z] Epiphan. Hær. 75. Aerian. n. 5. [a] Ignat. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 6, & 7. Ep. ad. Trall. n. 2. Ep. ad Philad. n. 7.

[b] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 41. Alius hodie Epiſcopus, cras alius: Hodie Diaconus, qui cras Lector: Hodie Presbyter, qui cras Laicus. Nam & Laicis ſacerdotalia munera injungunt. [c] Hieron. Dial. c. Lucifer. T. 2. p. 145. Eccleſia non eſt quæ non habet Sacerdotes. Ibid. Omiſſis paucis homunculis, qui ipſi ſibi & Laici ſunt & Epiſcopi. [d] Hieron. ibid. p. 136. Sacerdotium Laici, id eſt, Baptiſma. Scriptum eſt enim, Regnum & Sacerdotes nos fecit, &c. [e] Tertul. Exhort. ad Caſt. c. 7. Nonne & Laici Sacerdotes ſumus? Scriptum eſt, Regnum quoque nos & Sacerdotes Deo & Patri ſuo fecit. —— Ubi Eccleſiaſtici Ordinis eſt Conſeſſus, & offert & tinguit Sacerdos, qui eſt ibi, ſolus. Sed ubi tres, Eccleſia eſt; licet Laici. [f] Ruffin. Lib. 1. c. 9. Socrat. Lib. 1. c. 19.
[g] Socrat. Lib. 1. c. 20. Ἀμφότεροι κήρυκες τοῦ γένους, &c. Theodor. Lib. 1. c. 23. [h] Ambroſ. ſive Hilar. Diacon. Com. in Eph. 4. p. 248. Ut creſceret Plebs & multiplicaretur, omnibus inter initia conceſſum eſt & evangelizare, & baptizare, & Scripturas in Eccleſia explanare. At ubi autem omnia loco circumplexa eſt Eccleſia, Conventicula conſtituta ſunt, & Rectores & cætera Officia in Eccleſiis ſunt ordinata, ut nullus de Clero auderet, qui ordinatus non eſſet, præſumere Officium quod ſciret non ſibi creditum.
[i] Chryſ. Hom. 3. in Laz. T. 5. [ii] Chryſ. Hom. 23. in Rom. ταῦτα διατάττεται ἱερεῦσι, καὶ μοναχοῖς, οὐχὶ τοῖς βιωτικοῖς μόνον. [k] Juſt. M. Reſp. ad Quæſt. 19. τῷ βιωτικῷ ἀνθρώπῳ, &c.

ploy-

ployment of the Church. St. Chryſoſtom [l] and Theodoret [m] ſay the Word ἰδιώτης is ſo uſed by St. Paul himſelf, 1 Cor. 14. 16. which we tranſlate, Unlearned; but they ſay, it ſignifies no more than a Layman, or one in a Private Capacity, whether Learned or Unlearned, who is not a Publick Miniſter of the Church. And ſo Origen alſo uſes the Name ἰδιώτης, not for Perſons Unlearned, but for Laymen, who had Power as well as other Chriſtians to caſt out Devils in the Name of Chriſt [n]. And Syneſius oppoſes the Names, ἰδιώτης and ἱερεὺς, to one another, making [o] the one to denote thoſe who miniſtred in the Sacred Service of the Church; and the other, thoſe who had no ſuch Office, but ſerved God only in a private Capacity, as Laymen. Whence alſo ſpeaking of ſome Clergymen who deſerved to be Degraded, he ſays, [p] they were to be treated publickly by all, ὡς ἁπλοῦς ἰδιώτας, as meer Private Men, that is, no longer as Clergymen, but Laymen. Whence we may collect, that this was a common Name for all ſuch as had no Publick Office or Miniſtry in the Church.

SECT. VII. What Perſons properly called Clerici.

ON the other hand, all Perſons who had any publick Employment in the Church, were called by the common Name of Clerici; which Name at firſt was given only to the Three Superior Orders of Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, becauſe there were then no other Orders in the Church. But in the Third Century many Inferior Orders were appointed, as ſubſervient to the Deacons Office, ſuch as Sub-Deacons, Acolythiſts, Readers, &c. And then thoſe alſo had the common Name of Clerici too, having no farther Concern with Secular Affairs, but wholly attending the Service of the Church. St. Cyprian always gives theſe the Name of Clerici [q]: As where he ſpeaks of Optatus a Sub-Deacon, and Saturus a Reader, he ſtiles them both Clerici. The Ordination of ſuch he [r] calls Ordinationes Clericæ. And hence the Letters which he had Occaſion to ſend to foreign Parts by their Hands, had the Name of Literæ [s] Clericæ. Lucian the Martyr, and Cyprian's Cotemporary, ſpeaks in the ſame Stile concerning Exorciſts [t] and Readers.

The Council of Nice it ſelf [u] gives the Appellation of Κληρος, to others beſides Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons. And the Third Council of Carthage, made a Canon [w] on purpoſe to confirm the Title to them.

SECT. VIII. The Name Clerici ſometimes appropriate to the Inferior Orders.

YEA, the ſame Council [x] ſeems rather to appropriate the Name Clerici to the Inferior Orders, by way of Diſtinction from the Superior, firſt naming Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, and then the Clerici, or Clerks; that is, the Inferior Orders. And the ſame is done by St. Ambroſe [y] and Hilary [z] under his Name, more expreſly, who ſpeak of the Clerici as diſtinct from the Deacons. As alſo Epiphanius [a], who ſpeaking of thoſe that lapſed in Egypt in the Dioclefian Perſecution, he ſays, ſome of them were Soldiers, ſome Clerks of divers Orders, ſome Presbyters, and ſome Deacons. Where the Clerici are ſpoken of as diſtinct from Presbyters and Deacons. And ſo in the Council of Laodicea [b] and many other Places.

SECT. IX. The Reaſon of the Name Clerici.

AS to the Reaſon of the Name Clerici and Clerus, St. Jerom [c] rightly obſerves, that it comes from the Greek Κλῆρος, which ſignifies a Lot; and thence he ſays, God's Miniſters were called Clerici, either becauſe they are the Lot and Portion of the Lord, or becauſe the Lord is their Lot, that is, their Inheritance. Others [d] think ſome regard was had to the ancient Cuſtom of chuſing Perſons into Sacred Offices by Lot, both among Jews and Gentiles; which is not improbable, though that Cuſtom never generally prevailed among Chriſtians, as ſhall be ſhewed hereafter.

SECT. X. All the Clergy called Canonici.

THERE is another Name for the Clergy, very commonly to be met with in the ancient Councils, which is that of Canonici, a Name derived from the Greek Word Κανὼν, which ſignifies among other things, the Roll or Catalogue of every Church, wherein the Names of all the Eccleſiaſticks were written, and which was as it were the Rule of knowing to what Church they belonged. In this Senſe the Word Κανὼν is often uſed by the Council [e] of Nice. The Council of Antioch [f] calls it ἁγιος Κανὼν, the Sacred Roll; the Apoſtolical Canons, καταλογος ἱερατικὸς [g], the Catalogue of the Clergy. Which is the ſame that Sidonius Apollinaris

[l] Chryſ. Hom. 35. in 1 Cor. 14. ἰδιώτην δὲ λαικὸν λέγει. [m] Theod. Com. in 1 Cor. 14. 16. ἰδιώτην καλεῖ τὸν ἐν τῷ λαικῷ τάγματι τεταγμένον [n] Orig. c. Celſ. Lib. 7. p. 334. [o] Syneſ. Ep. 54. ad Theoph. p. 144. [p] Syneſ. Ep. 67. p. 259. [q] Cypr. Ep. 24. al. 29. Ed. Ox. Quoniam oportuit me per Clericos ſcribere, &c. feciſſe me ſciatis Lectorem Saturum, & Hypodiaconum Optatum. [r] Id. Ep. 33. al. 38. [s] See Fell. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 23. [t] Lucian. Ep. 17. al. 23. ap. Cypr. Præſente de Clero, & Exorciſta & Lectore, Lucianus ſcripſit. [u] Con. Nic. Can. 3. [w] Con. Carth. 3. can. 21. Clericorum nomen etiam Lectores & Pſalmiſtæ & Oſtiarii retineant. [x] Con. Carth. 3. t. 15. Placuit ut Epiſcopi, & Presbyteri, & Diaconi, vel Clerici non ſint Conductores. [y] Ambr. de Dignit. Sacerd. c. 3. Aliud eſt quod ab Epiſcopo requirit Deus, aliud quod à Presbytero, & aliud quod à Diacono, & aliud quod à Clerico, & aliud quod à Laico. [z] Pſeud. Ambr. in Eph. 4. Nunc neque Diaconi in Populo prædicant; neque Clerici vel Laici baptizant. [a] Epiphan. Her. 68. Melet. [b] Con. Laodic. can. 20. [c] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad. Nepot. Cleros græcè, Sors Latinè appellatur: propterea vocantur Clerici, vel quia de Sorte ſunt Domini, vel quia ipſe Dominus Sors, id eſt, Pars Clericorum eſt. [d] Dodwel. Diſſert. 1. in Cypr. §. 51. [e] Con. Nic. Can. 16, 17, 19. [f] Con. Antioch. c. 1. [g] Can. Apoſtol. c. 13, 14, 15, 50, &c.

[b] calls

[h] calls Albus; and the Council of Agde [i] by the Name of Matricula; and St. Auſtin [k], Tabula Clericorum. Now becauſe the Names of all the Clergy were enrolled in this Catalogue or Canon, they were hence called Canonici. As in St. Cyril [l] κανονικῶν παρεσία ſignifies the Preſence of the Clergy. And κανονικοὶ ψαλταὶ in the Council of Laodicea [m] ſignifies ſuch of the Clergy as were ordered to ſing in the Church. And ſo generally in the Councils of Nice [n] and Antioch, οἱ ἐν τῷ κανόνι, is put to denote the Clergy of the Church. And upon the ſame Account all others, whoſe Names were ſet down in the Churches Books, to entitle them to receive Maintenance from the Church, were called by the ſame Name, Canonici, ſuch as the Monks, Virgins, Widows, &c. whom St. Baſil [o] ſpeaks of under this Name, as Balſamon and Zonaras underſtand him.

SECT. XI. And Τάξις τῦ Βήματος, the Order of the Sanctuary.

I paſs over many other Names of the Clergy, which are obvious to every Reader; ſuch as that of Eccleſiaſticks, and ἱερατικοὶ, or τάξις ἱερατικὴ, the Holy Order, &c. and ſhall but take notice of one more, which rarely occurs any where but in Gregory Nazianzen, who gives the Clergy, eſpecially the ſuperior Clergy, the Name of Τάξις τῦ Βήματος, the Order of the Sanctuary [p]. Which Name was given them from their Privilege of entering into that Part of the Church where the Altar ſtood, which (as we ſhall ſee when we come to ſpeak of Churches) was called Βῆμα or ἱερατεῖον, The Sanctuary. Hither none might come but the Clergy, who were therefore called the Order of the Sanctuary. Whence in the ſame Author [q] τῷ ῥήματι προσάγειν ſignifies to give a Man Ordination, or make him a Clergyman: And ὁ ἀπὸ βήματος, is one of the Sacred Order [r], or one of the Clergy.

[h] Sidon. Lib. 6. Ep. 8. Nomen Lectorum Albus nuper excepit. [i] Con. Agathenſ. can. 2. Reſcripti in Matricula gradum ſuum dignitatemque ſuſcipiant. [k] Aug. Hom. 50. de Diverſis. T. 10. p. 523. Delebo eum de Tabula Clericorum. [l] Cyril. Præf. Catech. n. 3. [m] Con. Laodic. can. 15. [n] Con. Antioch. can. 2. & 6. Con. Nic. can. 16, & 17. [o] Baſil. Ep. Canonic. c. 6. [p] Naz. Orat. 20. in Laud. Baſil. p. 336. [q] Id. Orat. 19. de Fun Patr. [r] Naz. Orat. 19. p. 310, & 311. Orat. 20. p. 351.

BOOK

BOOK II.

Of the ſeveral Orders of the Clergy in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Of the Original of Biſhops: And that they were a diſtinct Order from Presbyters in the Primitive Church.

SECT. I. What the Ancients mean by different Orders of Biſhops and Presbyters.

WE have hitherto conſidered the Clergy in general, as diſtinct from the Laity, and come now to examine by what Names or Offices they were diſtinguiſhed from one another. And here the moſt ancient Diſtinction that occurs, is, that of the Superior Clergy into the Three diſtinct Orders of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons. That there were no other Orders in the Church but theſe Three at firſt, will be evidenced in its proper Place, when I come to give an Account of the firſt Riſe and Original of the Inferior Orders; and that Deacons were always a Sacred and Standing Order, will be proved likewiſe when I ſpeak particularly of them: Here then it remains that our Enquiry be made only into the Diſtinction betwixt the Orders of Biſhops and Presbyters. And this, ſo far as concerns Matter of Fact, and the Practice of the Church (which is the thing I have undertaken to give an Account of) will be moſt fairly and fully reſolved, by conſidering only theſe three Things. 1. That the Ancient Writers of the Church always ſpeak of theſe as diſtinct Orders. 2. That they derive the Original of Biſhops from Divine Authority, and Apoſtolical Conſtitution. 3. That they give us particular Accounts and Catalogues of ſuch Biſhops as were firſt Settled and Conſecrated, in the new-founded Churches, by the Hands of the Apoſtles.

But before I proceed to the Proof of theſe things, I muſt premiſe one Particular, to avoid all Ambiguity; That I take the Word Order in that Senſe as the Ancients uſe it, and not as many of the Schoolmen do, who for Reaſons of their own diſtinguiſh between Order and Juriſdiction, and make Biſhops and Presbyters to be one and the ſame Order, only differing in Power and Juriſdiction. This Diſtinction was unknown to the Ancients; among whom the words, Order, Degree, Office, Power and Juriſdiction, when they ſpeak of the Superiority of Biſhops above Presbyters, mean but one and the ſame thing, viz. The Power of the Supreme Governors of the Church, conferred upon them in their Ordination, over Presbyters, who are to do nothing but in Subordination to them. St. Jerom, who will be allowed to ſpeak the Senſe of the Ancients, makes no Difference in theſe Words, Ordo, Gradus, Officium, but uſes them promiſcuouſly to ſignify the Power and Juriſdiction of Biſhops above Presbyters and the whole Church, which is, properly ſpeaking, the very Eſſence of their Order. Therefore ſometimes he calls them different Orders, as in his Book againſt Jovinian [s] where he ſays, that both in the Old and New Teſtament the High-Prieſts are one Order, the Prieſts another, and the Levites another. So in his Epiſtles [t] to Ruſticus, and Fabiola [u], where he joins Ordo and Gradus together. In other places he uſes the Word Gradus only. As in his Epiſtle to Euſtochium [w] he calls Presbyters Prieſts of the Inferior Degree: And in his Epiſtle to Heliodore [x], Deacons the Third Degree: And in his Comment upon Micah [y], Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, the Degrees in the Church. At other times he expreſſes his meaning by the Word Offices. As where [z] he ſays, That Biſhop, Presbyter and Deacon are not Names of Men's Merit, but of their Offices. So that it is all one according to St. Jerom, whether we ſay the Order, or the Degree, or the Office, or the Power and Juriſdiction of a Biſhop: For all theſe are intended to expreſs the ſame thing, viz. The Authority of Biſhops over their Presbyters and the whole Church. And in this Senſe I uſe the Word Order, in this Diſcourſe, to expreſs the Opinion of the Ancients, concerning the different Powers of Biſhops and Presbyters in the Church.

[s] Hieron. cont. Jovin. Lib. 2. p. 89. In veteri Teſtamento & in Novo alium Ordinem Pontifex tenet, alium Sacerdotes, alium Levitæ. [t] Id. Ep. ad Ruſtic. T. 1. p. 46. Singuli Eccleſiarum Epiſcopi, ſinguli Archipresbyteri, ſinguli Archidiaconi, & omnis Ordo Eccleſiaſticus ſuis Rectoribus nititur. [u] Id. ad Fabiol. de 42. Manſion. Iſrael. T. 3. p. 44. Ipſos ſecundi Ordinis intelligimus Præceptores, Luca Evangeliſta teſtante, Duodecim fuiſſe Apoſtolos, & ſeptuaginta Diſcipulos minoris Gradus. [w] Ep. 27. ad Euſtoch Aderant Hieroſolymarum & aliarum Urbium Epiſcopi, & Sacerdotum Inferioris Gradus, & Levitarum innumerabilis multitudo. [x] Ep. 1. ad Heliodor. Non minorem in Tertio Gradu adhibuit diligentiam, &c. [y] Com. in Mic. 7. p. 162. Non hoc dico, quod iſtiuſmodi Gradibus in Eccleſia non debeatis eſſe ſubjecti. [z] Cont. Jovin. Lib. 1. p. 41. Epiſcopus, Presbyter, & Diaconus non ſunt Meritorum nomina, ſed Officiorum—— Si Diaconus ſanctior Epiſcopo ſuo fuerit, non ex eo quod inferior Gradu eſt, apud Chriſtum deterior eſt.

SECT. II. The Order of Biſhops always owned to be Superior to that of Presbyters.

Now that there was ſuch a Diſtinction always obſerved in the Church, is evident, 1ſt, From the Teſtimony of the moſt Ancient Writers; who ſpeak of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, as diſtinct Degrees in the Church, and the two latter as Subordinate to the firſt. The Teſtimonies of Ignatius to this purpoſe [a] are ſo full and evident, that nothing was ever pretended to be ſaid againſt them, ſave only that they are not the Genuine Remains of that Ancient Author; which has been ſo often conſidered and replied to by Learned [b] Men, that there is no Pretence left to favour ſuch an Imagination. The Citations are too numerous to be here inſerted at large, and therefore I ſhall only give the Reader a Specimen in one ſingle Teſtimony, by which he may judge of all the reſt. In his Epiſtle to the Magneſians, he exhorts them [c] to do all things in Unity, under the Biſhop preſiding in the place of God, and the Presbyters in the place of the Apoſtolical Senate, and the Deacons to whom is committed the Miniſtry and Service of Jeſus Chriſt.

The Author of the Acts of the Martyrdom of Ignatius [d], lately publiſhed from an Ancient Greek Copy, ſpeaks exactly in the ſame manner, of theſe Three Orders, when he ſays, That as Ignatius was on his Journey to Rome, all the Cities and Churches of Aſia ſent to ſalute him by their Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons. Not long after theſe Authors, lived Pius Biſhop of Rome, whoſe Authority I cite, becauſe Blondel [e] allows it to be Genuine. This Author in his Epiſtle to Juſtus of Vienna, gives him the Title of Biſhop [f], and ſpeaks of Presbyters and Deacons under him. In the beginning of the next Age we have the Teſtimonies of Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, and Tertullian, all agreeing in the ſame thing, that there were then in their own Times the different Orders of Biſhops and Presbyters in the Church. There are here in the Church, ſays Clemens [g] the different Degrees or Progreſſions of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, in imitation of the Angelical Glory. Origen takes notice of this Diſtinction above ten times [h] in his Works, which thoſe that pleaſe may read at large in Biſhop Pearſon. I ſhall only recite Two Paſſages, one out of his Homilies upon St. Luke, written whilſt he was a Layman, where he ſays, That [i] Digamy excludes Men from all Eccleſiaſtical Dignities: For one that is Twice Married can neither be made Biſhop, Presbyter, nor Deacon. Here he calls them different Dignities; in the other [k] Place he calls them different Degrees, ſaying, Every one ſhall be puniſhed according to his Degree: If the Supreme Governor of the Church offends, he ſhall have the greater Puniſhment. A Layman will deſerve Mercy in compariſon of a Deacon, and a Deacon in compariſon of a Presbyter. So that Biſhops, in his Opinion, were then a Degree above Presbyters and Deacons. Tertullian frequently [l] mentions the ſame Diſtinction, but more eſpecially in his Book de Baptiſmo, where he ſays [m] The Right of Baptizing belongs to the Chief Prieſt, who is the Biſhop; and after him to Presbyters and Deacons, yet not without the Authority of the Biſhop, for the Honour of the Church, in the Preſervation of which conſiſts the Church's Peace.

Theſe Allegations are ſufficient Evidences, as to Matter of Fact, and the Practice of the Church in the Three firſt Ages, that there was then an Order of Chief Prieſts, or Biſhops, ſuperior to Presbyters, ſettled and allowed in the Chriſtian Church.

SECT. III. The Order of Biſhops of Apoſtolical Inſtitution.

If we proceed a little farther into this Enquiry, and examine from what Original this Appointment came, whether from Eccleſiaſtical or Apoſtolical Inſtitution; which is another Queſtion concerning Matter of Fact, that will in ſome meaſure determine the Right alſo: The ſame Authors, with the unanimous Conſent of all others, declare, That it was no Human Invention, but an Original Settlement of the Apoſtles themſelves, which they made by Divine Appointment. The Order of Biſhops, ſays Tertullian, [n] when it is traced up to its Original, will be found to have St. John for one of its Authors. This agrees exactly with what Clemens Alexandrinus [o] has recorded of him, That when he was ſettled at Epheſus, he went about the neighbouring Regions, Ordaining Biſhops, and ſetting apart ſuch Men for the Clergy, as were ſignified to him by the Holy Ghoſt. Theſe were thoſe Aſiatick Biſhops that St. Je-

[a] Ignat. Ep. ad Epheſ. n. 2, 3, 4. Ep. ad Philad. n. 4, 7, 10. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 8, & 12. Ep. ad Trall. n. 2, 7, 12, 13. Ep. ad Polycarp. n. 6. [b] Pearſon Vind. Ignat. Uſſer de Epiſt. Ignat. Voſſ. Epiſt. ad Rivet. Coteler. Præf. & Not. in Ignat. Bull. Defenſ. Fid. Nic. Sect. 3. n. 6. p. 290, &c. [c] Ignat. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 6. [d] Martyr. Ignat. ap. Grabe Spicil. Sæcul. 2. T. 1. p. 11. [e] Blondel. Apol. p. 18. [f] Pius Ep. 2. ad Juſt. Vien. Tu vero apud Senatoriam Viennam —— Colobio Epiſcoporum veſtitus, &c. Presbyteri & Diaconi te obſervent. [g] Clem. Alex. Strom. Lib. 6. p. 667. ἐνταῦθα καὶ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν περιοπαὶ ἐπισκόπων, πρεσβυτέρων, διακόνων. &c. Id. Pædag. Lib. 3. c. 12. p. 264. [h] Origen. Hom. 2. in Num. Hom. 2. in Cantic. Hom. 6. in Eſai. Hom. 5, & 16. in Ezek. Con. in Mat. 19, & 21. De Orat. ap. Pearſon. Vindic. Ignat. Part. 1. c. 11. p. 320. [i] Orig. Hom. 17. in Luc. Ab Eccleſiaſticis Dignitatibus non ſolum Fornicatio ſed & Nuptiæ repellunt. Neque enim Epiſcopus, nec Presbyter, nec Diaconus, nec Vidua poſſunt eſſe Digami. [k] Orig. Hom. 5. in Ezek. Pro modo Graduum unuſquiſque torquebitur, &c. [l] Tertul. de Monogam. c. 11. De Fuga. c. 11. De Præſcript. c. 41. [m] Tertul. de Bapt. c. 17. Dandi quidem jus habet ſummus Sacerdos, qui eſt Epiſcopus: Dehinc Presbyteri & Diaconi, non tamen ſine Epiſcopi auctoritate, propter Eccleſiæ honorem; quo ſalvo ſalva Pax eſt. [n] Tertull. adv. Marcion. Lib. 4. c. 5. Ordo Epiſcoporum ad originem recenſus, in Joannem ſtabit Auctorem. [o] Clem. Alex. Quis dives Salvetur. ap. Combefiſ. Auctar. Noviſſim. p. 185. & ap. Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 23.

rom

rom [p] ſpeaks of, who ſays that at their requeſt St. John wrote his Goſpel againſt the Hereſies of Ebion and Cerinthus. Whence it follows, that according to this Account, the Order of Biſhops was ſettled before the Canon of Scripture was concluded. Whence Clemens of Alexandria [q] farther obſerves, That there are many Precepts in Scripture appertaining to particular ſorts of Perſons, ſome to Presbyters, ſome to Deacons, and ſome to Biſhops alſo. Irenæus declares himſelf of the ſame Opinion, that there were Biſhops as well as Presbyters in the Apoſtles Days. For the Aſſembly of Miletus, he ſays, [r] was compoſed of Biſhops and Presbyters, that were of Epheſus, and the neighbouring Cities of Aſia. And therefore agreeably to that Hypotheſis, he always derives the Succeſſion of Biſhops and their Original from the Apoſtles. As where he ſays [s] that Hyginus Biſhop of Rome was the Ninth in order of Epiſcopal Succeſſion from the Apoſtles [t]. And in another Place [u] giving an exact Catalogue of the 12 Biſhops of Rome that governed ſucceſſively in that See to his own time, he ſays of Linus the firſt of them, that he was ordained Biſhop immediately by the Apoſtles, upon the firſt Foundation of the Church; and of Eleutherius the laſt of them, that he was the Twelfth Biſhop from the Apoſtles. Tertullian [w] inſiſts much upon the ſame Argument, and makes a Challenge to all ſorts of Hereticks upon it: Let them ſhew us the Original of their Churches, and give us a Catalogue of their Biſhops in an exact Succeſſion from Firſt to Laſt, whereby it may appear, that their firſt Biſhop had either ſome Apoſtle, or ſome Apoſtolical Man, living in the time of the Apoſtles, for his Author or immediate Predeceſſor. For thus it is that Apoſtolical Churches make their Reckoning. The Church of Smyrna counts up to Polycarp ordained by St. John; The Church of Rome to Clemens ordained by St. Peter; And ſo all other Churches in like manner exhibit their firſt Biſhops ordained by the Apoſtles, by whom the Apoſtolical Seed was propagated and conveyed to others. This implies that the Apoſtles, as they founded Churches, ſettled Biſhops in them; and that this might be proved from the Records and Archives of every Church, the moſt of which were probably then remaining, when Tertullian made this Challenge to all Hereticks, and appealed to theſe Original Records in behalf of the Catholick Church.

SECT. IV.

A Liſt or Catalogue of ſuch Biſhops as were firſt Ordained by the Apoſtles.

AN Exact and Authentick Catalogue of theſe firſt Foundations, would be a very uſeful and entertaining thing: But at this Diſtance of Time, it is impoſſible to gratifie the World with any ſuch Curioſity, whatever Pains ſhould be taken about it. Yet there are ſome ſcatter'd Remains and Fragments to be collected out of the Ancient Writers, which will ſufficiently anſwer our preſent Deſign; which is, to evidence that the Apoſtles ſettled Biſhops in all Churches upon their firſt Plantation.

To begin with the Church of Rome: We have already heard Irenæus and Tertullian declaring, that the Apoſtles Ordained a Biſhop there. And the ſame is aſſerted by St. Chryſoſtom [x], and Euſebius [y], and Ruffin [z], and St. Jerom [a], and Optatus [b], and Epiphanius [c], and St. Auſtin; who ſays, [d] If the Order of Biſhops ſucceeding one another be of any Conſideration, we take the ſureſt and ſoundeſt way, who begin to number from St. Peter: For Linus ſucceeded Peter; and Clemens, Linus; and Anacletus, Clemens, &c.

'Tis true, there is a little difference in the Account which theſe Authors give of the Succeſſion; for ſome reckon Linus firſt, then Anacletus, then Clemens: Others begin with Clemens, and reckon him the firſt in Order from St. Peter. But this is eaſily reconciled by learned [e] Men; who make it appear, that Linus and Anacletus died whilſt St. Peter lived; and that Clemens was Ordained their Succeſſor by St. Peter alſo. So that we have Two or Three Perſons, by this Account, Ordained ſucceſſively Biſhops of Rome by the Hands of the Apoſtles.

Next, for the Church of Jeruſalem; it is unanimouſly deliver'd by all Ancient Writers, that James the Lord's Brother was the Firſt Biſhop thereof. St. Jerom [f] ſays, He was Ordained by the Apoſtles immediately after our Lord's Crucifixion. Epiphanius [g] calls him therefore the Firſt Biſhop; the Firſt who had an Epiſcopal Chair, the Firſt to whom Chriſt committed his own Throne upon Earth. Chryſoſtom [h] ſays, He was made Biſhop by Chriſt himſelf: The Author [i] of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions; both by Chriſt, and the Apoſtles. In like manner, Euſebius [k] always ſpeaks of him under that Character, as Firſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem, Ordained by the Apoſtles. So Hegeſippus [l], Clemens [m] Alexandrinus, and Dionyſius [n] Biſhop of Corinth, all cited by Euſebius. To whom we may add St. Auſtin [o], who ſtiles John Biſhop of Jeruſalem St. James's Succeſſor, and Poſſeſſor of the Chair wherein he ſat as firſt Biſhop of the Place. And it is remarkable, what Clemens, one of the ancienteſt of theſe Writers ſays, That this was deſigned as a peculiar Honour to St. James, in regard that he was the Brother of Chriſt: For tho' our Saviour uſually gave the Preference to Peter and John, and James his Brother; yet none of thoſe contended about this Honour, but choſe this James, ſirnamed Juſtus, to be Biſhop of the Place; where he lived a Saint, and died a Martyr.

[p] Hieron. Catal. Scriptor. Eccleſ. in Joanne. Noviſſimus omnium ſcripſit Evangelium, rogatus ab Aſiæ Epiſcopis. [q] Clem. Alex. Pædag. lib. 3. c. 12. p. 264. [r] Iren. lib. 3. c. 14. In Mileto convocatis Epiſcopis & Presbyteris, qui erant ab Epheſo & à reliquis proximis Civitatibus. [s] Id. lib. 1. c. 28. Hyginus nonum locum Epiſcopatus per ſucceſſionem ab Apoſtolis habuit. [t] Euſeb. lib. 4. c. 11. cites the ſame out of Irenæus. [u] Iren. lib. 3. c. 3. Fundantes & inſtruentes beati Apoſtoli Eccleſiam, Lino Epiſcoparum adminiſtrandæ Eccleſiæ tradiderunt. Cited alſo by Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 6. [w] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 32. Edant Origines Eccleſiarum ſuarum: Evolvant ordinem Epiſcoporum ſuorum, ita per ſucceſſiones ab initio decurrentem, ut primus ille Epiſcopus aliquem ex Apoſtolis, vel Apoſtolicis viris, qui tamen cum Apoſtolis perſeveraverint, habuerit Auctorem & Anteceſſorem. Hoc enim modo Eccleſiæ Apoſtolicæ cenſus ſuos deferunt: Sicut Smyrnæorum Eccleſia Polycarpum ab Joanne conlocatum refert: Sicut Romanorum Clementem à Petro ordinatum edit: Proinde utique & cæteræ exhibent, quos ab Apoſtolis in Epiſcopatum conſtitutos, Apoſtolici ſeminis Traduces habent. See alſo c. 36. ibid. Polycrat. Epiſt. ap. Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 24. Cyprian. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 104. Cum Fabiani Locus, id eſt, Locus Petri, & gradus Cathedræ ſacerdotalis vacaret. Id. Ep. 27. al. 33. ed. Oxon. [x] Chryſ. Hom. 10. in 2 Tim. [y] Euſeb. lib. 3. c. 4. [z] Ruffin. ap. Hieron. Apol. 2. p. 219. [a] Hieron. Catal. Script. in Clemen. [b] Optat. lib. 2. p. 48. [c] Epiph. Hær. 27. [d] Aug. Ep. 165. Si Ordo Epiſcoporum ſibi ſuccedentium conſiderandus eſt; quanto certius & vere ſalubriter ab ipſo Petro numeramus? —— Petro enim ſucceſſit Linus, Lino Clemens, Clementi Anacletus, &c. [e] Cotel. Not. in Conſt. Apoſt. Lib. 7. c. 46. Pearſon de Succeſſ. Rom. Pontif. Differt. 2. c. 2. Cave Hiſt. Lit. Vol. 1. in Clem. [f] Hieron. Catal. Script. c. 3. Poſt Paſſionem Domini, ſtatim ab Apoſtolis Hieroſolymorum Epiſcopus ordinatus. Id. Com. in Gal. 1. p. 165. Hic Jacobus primus Hieroſolymorum Epiſcopus fuit. [g] Epiphan. Hær. 78. Antidicomar. n. 7. Id. Hær. 29. Nazor. n. 3. Hær. 66. Manich. n. 19.

Some time after his Death, as Euſebius [p] relates from Ancient Tradition, the Apoſtles and Diſciples of our Lord, as many as were yet in being, met together with our Saviour's Kinſmen (ſeveral of which were then alive) to conſult about chuſing a Succeſſor in St. James's room; and they unanimouſly agreed upon Simeon, Son of Cleopas, our Saviour's Couſin according to the Fleſh; thinking him the moſt fit and worthy Perſon to ſit upon the Epiſcopal Throne. The ſame is aſſerted by Euſebius in other [q] Places, and the Author [r] of the Conſtitutions under the Name of Clemens Romanus.

From Jeruſalem, if we paſs to Antioch, there again we find Euodius firſt, and after him Ignatius, Ordained Biſhops by the Hands of the Apoſtles. Baronius [s] and ſome others fancy, that they ſat both at the ſame time; the one as Biſhop of the Jews, and the other of the Gentiles: But Euſebius [t] ſays expreſly, that Euodius was the firſt, and Ignatius the ſecond, after Euodius was dead. And it is agreed by all Ancient Writers, that they were both conſecrated before St. Peter's Death. Of Euodius there can be no queſtion made, if it appears that Ignatius was ordained by the Apoſtles in his room. Now this is moſt expreſly ſaid by Theodoret [u], That he received the Gift of the High-Prieſthood, ἀρχιερωσύνης χάριν from the Hand of the Great Peter. In like manner, Chryſoſtom in his Encomium [w] upon him, ſays, He does not only admire him, becauſe he was thought worthy of ſo high a Degree; but that he was Ordained to it by thoſe Holy Men, and had the Hands of the Bleſſed Apoſtles laid upon his Sacred Head. The ſame is ſaid in effect by Athanaſius [x], when he calls him the firſt Biſhop of Antioch after the Apoſtles; and Origen [y] who calls him the ſecond after St. Peter; and Jerom [z], the third: For tho' they count differently, yet they mean the ſame thing; That Ignatius was Ordained Succeſſor to Euodius while the Apoſtles lived, and ſo might be called either ſecond or third after the Apoſtles, according as St. Peter and Euodius were included, or excluded out of the Number.

From Antioch let us go to Smyrna; where we ſhall find Polycarp, another Apoſtolical Biſhop, Ordained by the Apoſtles. St Jerom aſcribes his Ordination [a] to St. John, whoſe Diſciple he was. Irenæus ſays, he himſelf knew him; and therefore could not miſtake in what he relates of him; which is, That he was Ordained Biſhop by the [b] Apoſtles. Tertullian [c] and Euſebius [d] witneſs the ſame; the one ſaying, that he was Ordained by St. John; and the other, by thoſe that had ſeen the Lord.

Papias was another Diſciple of St. John, [e] as both Irenæus and St. Jerom witneſs: And he was cotemporary with Ignatius and Polycarp, and Biſhop of Hierapolis about the ſame time: that is, in the beginning of the Second Century. So that it is probable, he was another of thoſe Biſhops which St. John Ordained in Aſia, tho' we have no expreſs Teſtimony to prove it.

But it is aſſerted by all Ancient Writers, That Timothy was Ordained Biſhop of Epheſus by St. Paul. Euſebius [f], Chryſoſtom [g], Epiphanius [h], Jerom [i], Hilary the Deacon [k], and the Author of the Paſſion of Timothy in Photius [l], unanimouſly atteſt it. And Theodoret [m] affirms moreover, That he was Biſhop, under the Title of an Apoſtle.

Moſt of the ſame Authors agree in the ſame Evidence for Titus [n], That he was made Biſhop of Crete by St. Paul alſo. And Chryſoſtom [o] with Euſebius, ſeems to give both him and Timothy the Power of Metropolitans; of which more hereafter.

Others ſay, that Dionyſius the Areopagite was made firſt Biſhop of Athens. Euſebius [p] more [b] Chryſ. Hom. 38. in 1 Cor. 15. [i] Conſt. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 35. [k] Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 23. Lib. 3. c. 5, & 7. Lib. 7. c. 19. [l] Hegeſip. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 23. [m] Clem. Hypotypoſ. Lib. 6. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 1. [n] Dionyſ. Ep. ad Athenienſ. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 4. c. 23. [o] Aug. contra Creſcon. Lib. 2. c. 37. Hieroſolymitanam Eccleſiam primus Apoſtolus Jacobus Epiſcopatu ſuo rexit. Id. cont. Liter. Petil. Lib. 2. c. 51. Cathedra Eccleſiæ Hieroſolymitanæ, in qua Jacobus ſedit, & in qua hodie Joannes ſedet. See alſo Cyril. Catechiſm. 4. n. 17. Catech. 14. n. 13. [p] Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 11. [q] Idem Chronic. [r] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 7. c. 46. [s] Baron. an. 45. n. 14. an. 71. n. 11. Halloix Vit. Ignat. c. 2. p. 394. [t] Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 22. [u] Theod. Dial. 1. T. 5. p. 33. [w] Chryſoſt. Hom. 42. in Ignat. Tom. 1. p. 563. Ed. Front. Duc. [x] Athan. de Synod. Arim. T. 1. p. 922. [y] Orig. Hom. 6. in Luc. Ignatium dico Epiſcopum Antiochiæ poſt Petrum Secundum. [z] Hieron. Catal. Scriptor. in Ignat. Tertius poſt Petrum Apoſtolum Epiſcopus. [a] Hieron. Catal. Script. c. 17. Polycarpus Joannis Apoſtoli Diſcipulus, ab eo Smyrnæ Epiſcopus ordinatus. [b] Iren. Lib. 3. c. 3. Ab Apoſtolis in Aſia, in ea quæ eſt Smyrnis Eccleſia, conſtitutus Epiſcopus, quem & nos vidimus in prima noſtra ætate. [c] Tertul. de Præſcrip. c. 32. [d] Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 36. & Lib. 4. c. 14. [e] Iren. Lib. 5. c. 33. Papias Joannis Auditor, Polycarpi Contubernalis. Hieron. Ep. 29. ad Theodor. It. de Scriptor. [f] Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 4. [g] Chryſ. Hom. 1. in Philip. [h] Epiph. Hær. 75. Aerian. [i] Hieron. Catal. Scriptor. in Timotheo. [k] Pſeudo-Ambroſ. Præf. in Tim. It. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. [l] Phot. Cod. 254. [m] Theodor. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. 1. [n] Euſeb. & Chryſoſt. loc. cit. Hieron. de ſcriptor. in Tito. Pſeudo-Ambroſ. Præf. in Tit. Theodor. loc. cit. [o] Chryſ. Hom. 1. in Tit. It. Hom. 15. in 1 Tim. [p] Euſeb. Lib. 3. c. 4. It. Lib. 4. c. 23.

than

than once mentions an Epiſtle of Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth, a very ancient Writer of the Second Century, wherein this is expreſly aſſerted. So that he muſt be Ordained, either by St. Paul himſelf, as Suidas and others [q] think, or by ſome other Apoſtle. 'Tis generally agreed, that this Dionyſius died ſome time before St. John, and was ſucceeded in his Biſhoprick by Publius, and he by Quadratus, whom St. Jerom [r] calls a Diſciple of the Apoſtles; which, in all probability, refers to his being tutor'd by St. John. Now if Quadratus himſelf was St. John's Diſciple, (as he might be, who was Biſhop in the time of the Emperor Hadrian, to whom he preſented his Apology;) then there might be Three Biſhops ſucceſſively at Athens, all trained up by the Apoſtles, and Two of them conſecrated by their Hands, or at leaſt with their Conſent and Approbation.

I ſhall end this Catalogue of Primitive Biſhops, with what Theodoret [s] ſays of Epaphroditus; That as Timothy and Titus were Biſhops of Epheſus and Crete under the Name of Apoſtles, ſo Epaphroditus was Biſhop of Philippi under the ſame Title; which was then the common Name of all that were properly Biſhops: Of which I ſay no more in this Place, becauſe I give a more particular Account of it in the following Chapter.

CHAP. II.

Of the ſeveral Titles of Honour given to Biſhops in the Primitive Church.

SECT. I. All Biſhops at firſt called Apoſtles.

FOR farther Confirmation of what has been aſſerted in the foregoing Chapter, it will not be amiſs here to ſubjoin next a ſhort Account of the ſeveral Titles of Honour which were given to Biſhops in the Primitive Church. The moſt Ancient of theſe, is the Title of Apoſtles; which, in a large and ſecondary Senſe, is thought by many to have been the Original Name for Biſhops, before the Name Biſhop was appropriated to their Order. For at firſt they ſuppoſe, the Names Biſhop and Presbyter, to have been common Names for all of the Firſt and Second Order; during which time, the appropriate Name for Biſhops, to diſtinguiſh them from mere Presbyters, was that of Apoſtles. Thus Theodoret [t] ſays expreſly, The ſame Perſons were anciently called promiſcuouſly both Biſhops and Presbyters, whilſt thoſe who are now called Biſhops, were called Apoſtles. But ſhortly after, the Name of Apoſtles was appropriated to ſuch only as were Apoſtles indeed; and then the Name Biſhop was given to thoſe who before were called Apoſtles. Thus, he ſays, Epaphroditus was the Apoſtle of the Philippians, and Titus the Apoſtle of the Cretians, and Timothy the Apoſtle of the Aſiaticks. And this he repeats [u] in ſeveral other Places of his Writings.

The Author under the Name of St. Ambroſe [w] aſſerts the ſame thing; That all Biſhops were called Apoſtles at firſt. And therefore, he ſays, [x] that St. Paul, to diſtinguiſh himſelf from ſuch Apoſtles, calls himſelf an Apoſtle, not of Man, nor ſent by Man to Preach, as thoſe others were, who were choſen and ſent by the Apoſtles to confirm the Churches. Amalarius [y] cites another Paſſage out of this ſame Author, which ſpeaks more fully to the purpoſe: They, ſays he, who are now called Biſhops, were originally called Apoſtles: But the Holy Apoſtles being dead, they who were ordained after them to govern the Churches, could not arrive to the Excellency of thoſe Firſt; nor had they the Teſtimony of Miracles, but were in many other reſpects inferior to them: Therefore they thought it not decent to aſſume to themſelves the Name of Apoſtles; but dividing the Names, they left to Presbyters the Name of the Presbytery, and they themſelves were called Biſhops.

This is what thoſe Authors infer from the Identity of the Names, Biſhop and Presbyter, in the firſt Age: They do not thence argue (as ſome who abuſe their Authority have done ſince) that therefore Biſhops and Presbyters were all one; but they think that Biſhops were then diſtinguiſhed by a more appropriate Name, and more expreſſive of their Superiority, which was that of Secondary Apoſtles.

SECT. II. After that, Succeſſors of the Apoſtles.

AFTERWARD Biſhops thought it Honour enough for them to be ſtiled the Apoſtles Succeſſors. As Cyprian [z], and Firmilian [a], and the Biſhops in the Council [b] of Carthage call themſelves and others. And St. Jerom [c] ſpeaks of them in the ſame Stile, ſaying, Whereſoever a Biſhop is, whether at Rome, or Eugubium; at Conſtanti-

[q] Suidas in Voce Dionyſ. Maxim. Prolog. ad Oper. Dionyſii. [r] Hieron. de Scriptor. c. 19. Quadratus Apoſtolorum Diſcipulus, Publio Athenarum Epiſcopo ob Chriſti fidem Martyrio coronato, in locum ejus ſubſtituitur. [s] Theod. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. 1. [t] Theodor. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. 1. [u] Theodor. Com. in Phil. 1. 1. It. in Phil. 2. 25. [w] Ambroſ. Com. in Eph. 4. Apoſtoli Epiſcopi ſunt. [x] Id. Com. in Gal. 1. 1. [y] Amalar. de Offic. Eccleſ. Lib. 2. c. 13. Qui nunc Epiſcopi nominantur, illi tunc Apoſtoli dicebantur, &c. [z] Cypr. Ep. 69. al. 66. ad Florent. Qui Apoſtolis vicaria Ordinatione ſuccedunt. Id. Ep. 42. al. 45. ad Cornel. Laborare debemus, ut unitatem à Domino, & per Apoſtolos nobis Succeſſoribus traditam, obtinere curemus. [a] Firmil. Ep. 75. ap. Cypr. p. 225. [b] Con. Carthag. ap. Cypr. in Suffragio Clari à Maſcula. [c] Hieron. Epiſt. 85. ad Evagr. It. in Pſal. 44. 16.

nople, or at Rhegium; at Alexandria, or at Tanis; they are all of equal Merit, their Prieſthood is the ſame; they are all Succeſſors to the Apoſtles. And both he and St. Auſtin [d] draw that of the Pſalmiſt to this Senſe; Inſtead of thy Fathers thou ſhalt have Children, whom thou may'ſt make Princes in all Lands: They ſay, Biſhops are the Sons of the Apoſtles, and Princes and Fathers in the Church.

SECT. III. Whence every Biſhop's See called Sedes Apoſtolica.

AND hence it was that anciently every Biſhop's See was dignify'd with the Title of Sedes Apoſtolica, an Apoſtolical See; which in thoſe days was no peculiar Title of the Biſhop of Rome, but given to all Biſhops in general, as deriving their Original, and counting their Succeſſion from the Apoſtles. The Catholick Church, ſays St. Auſtin, [e] is propagated and diffuſed over all the World by the Apoſtolical Sees, and the Succeſſion of Biſhops in them. 'Tis plain, this is not ſpoken only of the Biſhop of Rome, but of all other Biſhops whatſoever. Sidonius Apollinaris [f] uſes the ſame Expreſſion, in ſpeaking of a private French Biſhop, who ſat five and forty Years, he ſays, in his Apoſtolical See. And Paulinus [g] makes no more but the uſual Compliment to Alipius, when he tells him, That God had deſervedly placed him in an Apoſtolical See with the Princes of his People.

SECT. IV. Biſhops called Princes of the People.

WHERE we muſt alſo note, that Paulinus ſpeaks in the uſual Phraſe and Stile of thoſe ancient Times, when he calls Biſhops Princes of the People. For that was another uſual Title that was given them; as appears from Optatus [h], and ſeveral Paſſages in St. Jerom [i]; who, to diſtinguiſh them from Secular Princes, uſually ſtiles them Principes Eccleſiæ, [k] Princes of the Church; applying to them that Prophecy of Iſaiah 60. 17. which according to his Tranſlation, is, I will make thy Princes Peace, and thy Biſhops Righteouſneſs: Upon which he [l] has this Note; That the Majeſty of the Holy Scripture is to be admired, in that it calls thoſe who were to be Biſhops in future Ages, by the Name of Princes. In the Greek Writers they are ſtiled ἄρχοντες ἐκκλησῶν, Governors and Princes likewiſe; as frequently in [m] Euſebius, Origen [n], Chryſoſtom [o], and many others.

SECT. V. Præpoſiti, προεστῶτες, πρόεδροι, ἔφοροι.

IN the ſame Senſe, Cyprian [p], and Tertullian [q] commonly call them Preſidents, or Provoſts of the Church; which Euſebius [r] and Juſtin [s] Martyr call προεστῶτες, and ſometimes πρόεδροι [t], and others ἔφοροι [u], Inſpectors; all which are proper Characters of Biſhops, who have the Care, Preſidency, and Inſpection of the Church.

SECT. VI. Principes Sacerdotum, Pontifices Maximi, Summi Sacerdotes, &c.

AND becauſe this Preſidency was not only over the People, but alſo over the Clergy; they were dignify'd upon that account with the diſtinguiſhing Characters of Summi Sacerdotes, Pontifices Maximi, and Principes Sacerdotum, Chief Prieſts, and Princes of the Clergy. The Author under the Name of St. Ambroſe [w] gives the Biſhop expreſly the Title of Chief Prieſt, and Prince of the Prieſts. And ſo frequently, the Name Summus Sacerdos is uſed by St. Jerom: As, where ſpeaking of himſelf, he ſays, In the Opinion of all Men he was thought worthy of the High-Prieſthood; he explains [x] himſelf to a mean Biſhoprick. And in another place [y]; The Proſperity of the Church depends upon the Honour of the Chief Prieſt. The ſame Title is given to all Biſhops, by the Author [z] of the Queſtions upon the Old and New Teſtament under the Name of St. Auſtin. Sidonius [a] calls them Summi Pontifices; where he ſpeaks only of the Biſhops of France. And therefore, when Tertullian [b] gives the Title of Pontifex Maximus to the Biſhop of Rome, he does him no greater Honour, than in thoſe days was done to every Biſhop in the World: And ſome think he meant not the Biſhop of Rome in particular, but comprehended all others under that Title. As it is certain the Council of Agde does, when it orders [c] every Metropolitan to call his Suffragans, ad Ordinationem ſummi Pontificis; which means not, to the Ordination of the Pope of Rome, but to the Ordination of any French Biſhop within the Metropolitan's Province or Juriſdiction. For then, as we have ſeen, Summus Pontifex was the ordinary Title of every Biſhop whatſoever.

---

[d] Aug. Com. in Pſal. 44. 16. p. 169. Pro Apoſtolis nati ſunt Filii tibi, conſtituit ſunt Epiſcopi.—— Ipſa Eccleſia Patres illos appellat. [e] Aug. Ep. 42. ad. Fratres Madaurenſ. Chriſtiana Societas per ſedes Apoſtolorum & ſucceſſiones Epiſcoporum certa per orbem propagatione diffunditur. [f] Sidon. lib. 6. Ep. 1. ad Lup. Tricaſſin. In Apoſtolica ſede novem jam decurſa Quinquennia. [g] Paulin. Ep. 45. ad Alypium. Cum Principibus populi ſui ſede Apoſtolica meritò collocavit Dominus. See alſo Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 36. Ipſæ adhuc Cathedræ Apoſtolorum ſuis Locis præſidentur. —— Habes Corinthum. ——— Habes Philippos, &c. [h] Optat. lib. 1. p. 39. Ipſi Apices & Principes omnium Epiſcopi. [i] Hieron. Com. in Eſa. 3. [k] Hieron. Com. in Pſal. 44. Principes Eccleſiæ, id eſt, Epiſcopi. Id. Com. in Eſa. 5. & Tit. 1. [l] Hieron. Com. in Eſa. 60. Scripturæ S. admiranda Majeſtas, quod Principes futuros Eccleſiæ Epiſcopos nominavit. [m] Euſeb. Hiſt. lib. 6. c. 28. lib. 8. c. 1. & 3. It. de Martyr. Paleſt. c. 1. [n] Origen. Hom. 11. in Jerem. Cont. Celſ. lib. 3. p. 129. [o] Chryſ. de Sacerdot. lib 3. c. 15. Id. Hom. 3. ad Pop. Antioch. T. 1. p. 48. [p] Cypr. Ep. 3, 9, 13, 27, 81. Ed. Oxon. Præpoſiti. [q] Tertul. Apol. c. 39. Ad Uxor. lib. 1. c. 7. De Cor. Mil. c. 3. [r] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 3, 8, 10. lib. 7. c. 13. lib. 8. c. 6. [s] Juſt. Apol. 2. Chryſoſt. Hom. 3. in Coloſ. [t] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 2. It. de Martyr. Palæſt. c. 2. [u] Philoſtorg. Hiſt. lib. 3. c. 6. [w] Ambroſ. Com. in Eph. 4. In Epiſcopo omnes Ordines ſunt, quia Primus Sacerdos eſt, hoc eſt Princeps Sacerdotum. [x] Hieron. Ep. 99. ad Aſellam. Omnium pene judicio dignus ſummo Sacerdotio decernebat. [y] Id. Dial. c. Lucifer. p. 139. Eccleſiæ ſalus in ſummi Sacerdotis dignitate pendet. [z] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & N. Teſt. c. 101. Quid eſt Epiſcopus niſi primus Presbyter, id eſt, ſummus Sacerdos? [a] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 11. lib. 7. Ep. 5. [b] Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 1. [c] Con. Agathenſ. c. 35.

AND

SECT. VII. Every Bishop anciently called Papa, Father, or Pope.

AND so was the Name of Papa, tho' now it is become the pretended Prerogative and sole Privilege of the Bishop of Rome. Some Historians [d] indeed are so vain as to assert confidently, That Cyril of Alexandria was the first Bishop in those Parts who had the Honour of being called Papa, and that because he was Pope Celestine's Legate in the Council of Ephesus. The Arabick Writers, Homaidius, and Abubacrus Habasides, cited by Echellensis and Bishop Pearson [e], deliver a quite contrary Story; That the Name was first given to the Patriarch of Alexandria, and thence carried to Rome: Which seems to be said, in answer to the Romish Pretences. But the Truth of the Matter is, That it was no peculiar Privilege of one Patriarch or other, but the common Title of all Bishops, who were called Fathers [f] of the Church, and Fathers [g] of the Clergy; and Papa means no more. Therefore Tertullian, in his Book de Pudicitia, c. 13. speaking indefinitely of any Christian Bishop, who absolves Penitents, gives him the Name of Benedictus Papa. Or if we suppose, as some do, that he speaks particularly of the Bishop of Rome; yet there is nothing singular in it: For at the same time, Dionysius, Presbyter of Alexandria, speaking of Heraclas his Bishop, gives him the very same Title [h], The Blessed Pope Heraclas. And Arius himself [i], in one of his Epistles, speaks of his Bishop Alexander in the same stile. St. Jerom gives the Title [k] to Athanasius, Epiphanius, and Paulinus: And writing often to St. Austin, he always inscribes [l] his Epistles, Beatissimo Papæ Augustino. So among Cyprian's Epistles, those that are written to him are usually inscribed [m] in the same manner, Cypriano Papæ. And the Clergy of Rome themselves [n] give him the Title of Benedictus Papa, and Beatissimus and Glorioſissimus Papa Cyprianus. It were easy to add many other Testimonies out of Epiphanius, and Constantine's Epistles, and the Theodosian Code, and especially Sidonius Apollinaris [o], who always gives the French Bishops the Stile of Dominus Papa. But in so plain a Case I need not insist any longer, especially since a Learned Romanist [p] has undertaken to prove, out of Authors as late as Photius and Gregory of Tours, That Papa was the common Name of all Bishops for several Ages: Who also notes out of Balsamon, That this Name was sometimes given to the Inferior Clergy; who were called Papæ Pisinni, Little Fathers; and their Tonsure or Crown thence called παπαλήτρα, The Tonsure of the Fathers. In comparison of whom, Balsamon [q] calls Presbyters and the Chorepiscopi, Protopapæ and Protopapades, Chief-Fathers; speaking in the Language of his own Times, when the Chorepiscopi and Presbyters were become all one.

SECT. VIII. Pater Patrum, and Episcopus Episcoporum.

BUT Bishops had still a more Honourable Title than that of Papa: For they were commonly called Patres Patrum, and Episcopi Episcoporum, Fathers of Fathers, and Bishops of Bishops. The first that had this Title was James Bishop of Jerusalem; which made the Counterfeit Author under the Name of Clemens Romanus [r] inscribe an Epistle (as directed to him) with this Title; Clemens Jacobo Domino, Episcopo Episcoporum, &c. To which Sidonius Apollinaris [s] alludes plainly, when writing to Lupus an eminent French Bishop, he tells him, He was Father of Fathers, and Bishop of Bishops, and another James of his Age. By this we understand what Tertullian [t] means, when speaking ironically of the Catholick Bishops, who admitted Adulterers into Communion again upon their Repentance, he says, I hear there is a Decree published, and that a peremptory one; The Chief Pontiff, the Bishop of Bishops saith, I forgive the Sins of Adultery and Fornication, to all those that repent of them. Some [u] take this for a peculiar Character of the Bishop of Rome; and I will not deny, but that Tertullian might intend more especially to reflect upon him: But yet there is nothing singular in the Title, which did not belong to other Bishops as well as him; as appears from what has been already cited out of Sidonius. To which we may add the Testimony of Athanasius [w], who stiles Hosius, The Father of Bishops: And Gregory Nazianzen [x] gives the same Title to his own Father, as St. Jerom [y] does to Epiphanius, stiling him the Father of all Bishops. Cotelerius [z] observes, that Gregory Nyssen is called πατὴρ πατέρων, Father of Fathers, by the Second Council of Nice; and others [a] say, Theodosius the Emperor gave Chrysostom the same Honourable Title after Death. As to the Reason of these Names, it is probable some Bishops might have

[d] Nicephorus is cited and chastised by Savaro for this. Vid. Savaro Not. in Sidon. lib. 6. Ep. 1. [e] Pearson Vind. Ignat. Part 1. c. 11. p. 330. [f] Aug. Com. in Psal. 44. p. 169. Ipsa Ecclesia Patres illos appellat. Chrysost. Hom. 3. ad Popul. Antioch. T. 1. p. 43. [g] Hieron. Ep. 62. ad Theoph. Episcopi contenti sint Honore suo: Patres se sciant esse, non Dominos. Id. Ep. 2. & 3. ad Nepotian. Com. in Psal. 44. &c. [h] Dionys. Ep. ad Philemon. ap. Euseb. lib. 7. c. 7. Παρὰ τῷ μακαρίᾳ Πάπα ἐμῶν Ἡρακλᾷ. [i] Arius Ep. ad Euseb. Nicom. ap. Theod. lib. 1. c. 5. & ap. Epiphan. Hær. 69. Arian. [k] Hieron. Ep. 61. ad Pammach. p. 163. [l] Id. Ep. 17, 18, 25, 30. inter Epist. Augustini. [m] Cypr. Ep. 23, 31, 36. Edit. Oxon. [n] Ep. S Cleri Rom. ad Cler. Carthag. ibid. Didicimus feceſſiſſe Benedictum Papam Cyprianum. Ep. 30. Cler. Rom. ad Cypr. Beatissime ac Glorioſiſſime Papa. [o] Sidon. lib. 6. Epist. 1. Domino Papæ Lupo. Lib. 6. Ep. 2. Papæ Pragmatio. Lib. 6. Ep. 3. Domino Papæ Leontio. And so for 12 Epistles together. [p] Savaro Comment. in Sidon. lib. 6. Ep. 1. p. 379. [q] Balsam. Com. in Can. Apost. c. 59. It. in Con. Antioch. Can. 10. [r] Pseudo-Clem. Ep. 1. ad Jacob. [s] Sidon. lib. 6. Ep. 1. Tu Pater Patrum, & Episcopus Episcoporum, & alter Sæculi tui Jacobus. [t] Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 1. Audio etiam Edictum esse propositum, & quidem peremptorium, Pontifex scilicet Maximus, Episcopus Episcoporum dicit, Ego & Mechiæ & Fornicationis delicta Pœnitentia defunctis dimitto. [u] Baron. an. 142. n. 4. an. 216. n. 4. Georg. Ambianas Observ. in Tertul. T. 3. p. 633. [w] Athan. Epist. ad solit. Vit. agentes. T. 1. p. 837. [x] Naz. Orat. 19. de Fun. Patr. p. 314. [y] Hieron. Ep. 61. p. 167. [z] Coteler. Not. in Ep. Clem. p. 605. [a] Nicephor. lib. 14. c. 43.

them

them upon the account of Perſonal Merit; and others from the Eminency of their Sees; as the Biſhop of Alexandria, to whom Balſamon [b] gives the Title of Pater Patrum, many Ages after: But there was a more general Reaſon why all Biſhops ſhould be called ſo, as may be collected from [c] Epiphanius; who ſays, That the Order of Biſhops, was an Order that begat Fathers to the Church; that is, Biſhops made Biſhops by Ordination; whereas Presbyters could only beget Sons, by the Power which they had of Baptizing. And therefore, tho' we ſometimes find Presbyters called Fathers, yet we no where find the Title of Pater Patrum given to any of their Order. Yet I muſt here alſo obſerve, that ſeveral of theſe Titles were never kindly received among the African Fathers; becauſe the Biſhops of Rome began to abuſe them, to eſtabliſh an uſurped Authority over their Neighbours. Therefore, in Two African Councils held at Carthage, the one under [d] Cyprian, the other [e] in St. Auſtin's time, theſe Titles, Epiſcopus Epiſcoporum, Princeps Sacerdotum, and Summus Sacerdos, were diſcountenanc'd and forbid, inſomuch that the Primates themſelves were not allowed to uſe them. But of this more hereafter, when we come to ſpeak of Metropolitans.

SECT. IX. Biſhops ſometimes called Patriarchs.

Gregory Nazianzen in his Rhetorical way uſually gives Biſhops the Title of Patriarchs; by which he means not Patriarchs in the proper Senſe, as the Word came afterward to be uſed in the Church, to ſignify Biſhops of the larger Sees, who had Primates and Metropolitans under them: but any Biſhops whatſoever, that were Heads of their own Family; that is, the Church ſubject to them. Thus he ſtiles his own Father Patriarch, [f] though he was but Biſhop of Nazianzum, a very ſmall City in Cappadocia, under Cæſarea the Metropolis. And in his Oration [g] before the Council of Conſtantinople he gives the ſame Title to all other Biſhops, complaining of the Arian Cruelties againſt them: Have we not had, ſays he, our ancient Biſhops, or to ſpeak more properly, our Patriarchs publickly murder'd by them? In another place complaining of the corrupt Promotions and Practices of ſome Biſhops of his Age, he thus takes his leave of them [h], Velete; Inſolentes eſtote: Patriarchatus per ſortes inter vos diſtribuite. Farewel; Go on in your Inſolence: Divide the Patriarchial Dignities among you: Tranſlate yourſelves from See to See: Set up ſome, pull down others. Where it is evident he ſpeaks not of Patriarchs properly ſo called, but only of ſome Ambitious Spirits among the Biſhops, who turned all things into Confuſion, and did what they pleaſed with the Preferments of the Church. Gregory Nyſſen uſes the ſame Term for Biſhops, in his Funeral Oration upon Meletius, which he made in the Council of Conſtantinople, where he gives all the Biſhops then in Council the Title of Patriarchs: Behold [i] theſe Patriarchs, All theſe are the Sons of our Jacob; meaning Meletius, whom he calls Jacob for his Age, and the reſt Patriarchs, in alluſion to the Twelve Patriarchs who were Jacob's Children. Thus Biſhops were commonly ſtiled, till ſuch times as the Name Patriarch became the appropriate Title of the moſt eminent Biſhops, ſuch as Rome, Conſtantinople, &c. And even ſome Ages after that, de Marca [k] obſerves, that Ithalaricus and the reſt of the Gothiſh Kings in Italy gave the Name of Patriarchs to all Biſhops within their Dominions.

SECT. X. And Vicars of Chriſt.

IT muſt not here be forgotten, that all Biſhops anciently were ſtiled alſo Vicars of Chriſt, and had as much Intereſt in that Name as he that has ſince laid ſo much Claim to the Title. The Author of the Queſtions [l] under the Name of St. Auſtin, ſays expreſly, That every Biſhop is the Vicar of God. Cyprian ſays the ſame in ſeveral of his Epiſtles [m], that every Biſhop is Vice Chriſti, Chriſt's Vicar or Vicegerent. And this is his meaning in that noted Paſſage to Cornelius, where [n] he ſays, All Hereſies and Schiſms take their Original from hence, that Men do not ſubmit to God's Prieſt, and conſider that there ought to be but one Biſhop in a Church at a time, and one Judge as the Vicar of Chriſt. This is ſpoken of every Individual Biſhop throughout the World, as Rigaltius [o] freely owns; and they groſly miſtake Cyprian's Meaning, and abuſe his Authority, who apply it only to the Biſhop of Rome. St. Baſil [p] extends the Title to all Biſhops; and ſo does the Author under the Name of St. Ambroſe [q], who is ſuppoſed to be Hilary, a Deacon of the Church of Rome; which would have been an unpardonable Overſight in him, had it not been then the Cuſtom of the World to give all others this Title as well as the Biſhop of Rome.

---

[b] Balſam. Reſp. ad Interrogat. Marci ap. Leunclav. Jus Gr. Rom. T. 1. lib. 5. p. 362. Κύριε Μάρκε πατέρων πατὴρ ὑπάρχων &c. [c] Epiphan. Hær. 75. Aerian. Πατέρων γεννητικὴ τάξις. Πατέρας γὰρ γεννᾷ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. [d] Con. Carthag. ap. Cypr. p. 229. Neque enim quiſquam noſtrum Epiſcopum ſe Epiſcoporum conſtituit, aut Tyrannico terrore ad oblequendi neceſſitatem Collegas ſuos adigit. [e] Con. Carth. 3. c. 26. Ut Primæ ſedis Epiſcopus non appelletur Princeps Sacerdotum, aut Summus Sacerdos, aut aliquid hujuſmodi, ſed tantum Primæ ſedis Epiſcopus.

[f] Naz. Orat. 19. p. 312. Or. 20. de Laud. Baſil. p. 342. Orat. 41. p. 675. [g] Orat. 32. p. 525. [h] Naz. Cygn. Carm. de Epiſcopis T. 2. p. 308. [i] Greg. Nyſſ. Orat. de Fun. Melet. T. 3. p. 589. [k] Marca Diſſert. de Primatib. n. 20. p. 112.

[l] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 127. Antiſtitem Dei puriorem cæteris eſſe oportet. —— Eſt enim Vicarius ejus.

[m] Cypr. Ep. 63. ad Cæcil. Ille Sacerdos Vice Chriſti vere fungitur, qui id quod Chriſtus fecit imitatur. [n] Ep. 55. al. 59. ad Cornel. p. 129. Neque enim aliunde Hæreſes obortæ ſunt, aut nata ſunt ſchiſmata, quam inde quod Sacerdoti Dei non obtemperatur, nec unus in Eccleſia ad tempus Sacerdos, & ad tempus Judex Vice Chriſti cogitatur. [o] Rigalt. in Loc. Ecce autem Epiſcopos ævo jam Cypriani vicarios Chriſti. [p] Baſil. Conſtit. Monach. c. 22. T. 2. p. 792. [q] Ambr. Com. in 1 Cor. 11. 10. Epiſcopus Perſonam habet Chriſti. —— Vicarius Domini eſt, &c. The Author of the Conſtitutions, lib. 2. c. 26. ſtiles the Biſhop Θεὸν ἐπίγειον.

SECT. XI. And Angels of the Churches.

I shall but take notice of one Title more given to Bishops, which is that of Angels of the Churches; a Name which some Authors [r] suppose to be used by St. Paul, 1 Cor. 11. 10. where he says, Women ought to be covered in the Church because of the Angels; that is, Bishops, says Hilary the Deacon, in the place last mentioned. And so the same Author understands that of St. John, Rev. 1. 20. the seven Stars are the Angels [s] of the seven Churches. Which is also the Interpretation of St. Austin [t] and Epiphanius [u], who say that by Angels we are not there to understand the Celestial Angels (as Origen thought, who assigns a Guardian Angel [w] to every Church) but the Bishops or Governors of those Seven Churches. Hence in After-Ages Bishops were called Angels of the Churches: As Socrates [x] terms Seraphion, who was Bishop of Thmuis, The Angel of the Church of Thmuis: And the Author of the short Notes [y] upon Timothy, under the Name of St. Jerom, says of every Bishop, That he is the Angel of God Almighty. In this Sense Dr. Hammond [z] observes out of a Saxon MS. that in our own Language anciently Bishops were called God's Bydels, that is, Messengers or Officers, as he explains it from Sir Henry Spelman's Glossary, in the word Bedellus. And thus much of those ancient Titles of Honour, which were given to all Bishops indifferently in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. III.

Of the Offices of Bishops as distinct from Presbyters.

SECT. I. A threefold difference between Bishops and Presbyters in the Discharge of their Office and Function.

I Come now to consider the Episcopal Office and Function it self: Where, to do Justice to Antiquity, it is necessary for me to observe a Threefold Distinction between Bishops and Presbyters in the discharge of Ecclesiastical Offices. For 1*st*, In the common Offices, which were ordinarily intrusted in the Hands of Presbyters, such as Preaching, Baptizing, Administring the Eucharist, &c. there was this obvious difference betwixt a Bishop and a Presbyter; that the one acted by an Absolute and Independent Power, the other in Dependance upon, and Subordination to his Bishop; by whose Authority and Directions under God he was to be Governed, and do nothing without his Consent or against it: So that though there was no difference in the things that were done, yet there was an Essential Difference in the Power of doing them. This is an Observation not commonly made, but it is of very great use, both for Establishing the just Bounds of Episcopal and Presbyterial Power, and clearing the Practice of the Primitive Church. 2*dly*, Some Offices were never intrusted in the hands of Presbyters; nor allowed, if performed by them; such as the Ordination of Bishops, Presbyters, &c. 3*dly*, Bishops always retained the Power of calling their Presbyters to an Account, and Censuring them for their Misdemeanors in the discharge of their Office; which Presbyters could not do by their Bishop, being always subject and subordinate to him as their Superior. These things cleared and set in a fair Light will give us a just Account of the Office of a Bishop, as distinct from that of a Presbyter in the Primitive Church.

SECT. II. 1. In the common Offices which might be performed by Both; the Bishop acted by an Independent Power, but Presbyters in Dependance upon and Subordination to him.

First then we are to observe, that in such ordinary and common Offices as might be performed by both, Bishops and Presbyters acted by a different Power; the Bishop was the Absolute, Independent Minister of the Church, and did whatever he did by his own Authority solely inherent in himself; but the Presbyters were only his Assistants, authorised to perform such Offices as he intrusted them with, or gave them Commission and Directions to perform, which they still did by his Authority, and in Dependance upon, and Subordination to him as their Superior; and might do nothing against his Will, or Independent of him. This is clear from many Passages in Ignatius, Cyprian, and the Canons of the ancient Councils, which all agree in this, That nothing is to be done without the Bishop; that is, without his Knowledge, without his Consent, Directions or Approbation. Thus [a] Ignatius in his Epistle to the Church of Smyrna: Let no one perform any Ecclesiastical Office without the Bishop. Which he explains both there and elsewhere [b] to mean, without his Authority and Permission. So in the Council [c] of Laodicea it is expressed the same way: The Presbyters shall do nothing without the Consent of the Bishop. The Council [d] of [r] Ambrosiaster, ibid. Angelos Episcopos dicit, sicut docetur in Apocalypsi Joannis. [s] Pseudo-Ambros. in 1 Cor. 11. 10. [t] Aug. Ep. 162. Divina voce laudatur sub Angeli nomine Præpositus Ecclesiæ. [u] Epiph. Hær. 25. Nicolait. [w] Orig. Hom. 20. in Num. T. 1. p. 251. So also Andreas Cæsarien. Ἄγγελοι φύλακες. Com. in Apoc. 1. 20. [x] Socrat. Lib. 4. c. 23. [y] Hieron. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. [z] Ham. Annot. on Rev. 1. 20. [a] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 8. Μηδὲὶς χωρὶς τῦ ἐπισκόπυ τι πρασσέτω τῶν ἀνηκόντων εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν. [b] Id. Ep. ad Polycarp. n. 4. Μηδὲν ἄνευ γνώμης συ γινέσθω. [c] Con. Laodic. Can. 56. Ἄνευ γνώμης τῦ ἐπισκόπυ. [d] Con. Arelat. 1. can. 19. Ut Presbyteri sine Conscientia Episcoporum nihil faciant.

Arles and Toledo [e] say, without his Privity or Knowledge. And the Apostolical Canons [f] give a Reason for all this, Because the Bishop is the Man to whom the Lord's People are committed, and he must give an Account of their Souls.

SECT. III. This specified in the Offices of Baptism, and the Lord's Supper.

THIS Rule they particularly apply to the Offices of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. A Presbyter might ordinarily administer both these Sacraments; but not against the Will of his Bishop, or in Opposition and Contradiction to him, but by his Consent and Authority, in a due Subordination to him as his Superior. It is not lawful, says [g] Ignatius, either to baptize or celebrate the Eucharist without the Bishop: But that which he allows, is well-pleasing to God. He does not say, that none but a Bishop might administer these Sacraments, but that none was to do it without his Allowance and Approbation. And that is plainly the meaning of [h] Tertullian and St. Jerom [i] when they say, that Presbyters and Deacons have no Power to baptize, without the Command and Authority of the Bishop or Chief Priest; and that this is for the Honour of the Church, and the Preservation of Peace and Unity. St. Ambrose [ii] asserts the same, that though Presbyters do baptize, yet they derive their Authority from their Superior.

SECT. IV. And in the Office of Preaching.

THE like Observation may be made upon the Office of Preaching. This [k] was in the first place the Bishops Office, which they commonly discharged themselves, especially in the African Churches. Which is the Reason we so often meet with the Phrase, Tractante Episcopo, the Bishops Preaching, in the Writings [l] of St. Cyprian: For then it was so much the Office and Custom of Bishops to Preach, that no Presbyter was permitted to preach in their Presence, till the time of St. Austin, who whilst he was a Presbyter was authorized by Valerius his Bishop to preach before him: But that, as Possidius [m] the Writer of his Life observes, was so contrary to the Use and Custom of the African Churches, that many Bishops were highly offended at it, and spake against it; till the Consequence proved that such a Permission was of good Use and Service to the Church; and then several other Bishops granted their Presbyters Power and Privilege to preach before them. So that it was then a Favour for Presbyters to preach in the Presence of their Bishops, and wholly at the Bishops Discretion whether they would permit them or not; and when they did preach, it was Potestate accepta, by the Power and Authority of the Bishops that appointed them. In the Eastern Churches Presbyters were more commonly employed to preach, as Possidius [n] observes, when he says Valerius brought the Custom into Africk from their Example: And St. Jerom intimates as much, when he complains [o] of it as an ill Custom only in some Churches to forbid Presbyters to preach. Chrysostom preached several of his elaborate Discourses at Antioch whilst he was but a Presbyter, and so did Atticus [p] at Constantinople: And the same is observed to have been granted to the Presbyters [q] of Alexandria, and Cæsarea, in Cappadocia [r] and Cyprus, and other places. But still it was but a Grant of the Bishops, and Presbyters did it by their Authority and Commission: And whenever Bishops saw just Reason to forbid them, they had Power to limit or withdraw their Commission again: As both Socrates [s] and Sozomen [t] testify, who say that at Alexandria Presbyters were forbidden to preach, from the time that Arius raised a Disturbance in the Church. Thus we see what Power Bishops anciently challenged and exercised over Presbyters in the common and ordinary Offices of the Church: Particularly for Preaching, Bishops always esteemed it their Office, as much as any other. Such a vast difference was there between the Practice of the Primitive Church and the Bishops of Rome in After-Ages! When, as Blondel observes out of Surius, there was a time when the Bishops of Rome were not known to preach for Five hundred Years together: Insomuch that when Pius Quintus made a Sermon, it was looked upon as a Prodigy, and was indeed a greater Rarity than the Sæculares Ludi were in Old Rome. See Blondel Apolog. p. 58. and Surius Comment. Rer. in Orbe gestar.

SECT. V. 2. The Office and Power of Ordination never intrusted in the hands of Presbyters.

BUT to return to the Bishops of the Primitive Church. There were other Offices, which they very rarely intrusted in the hands of Presbyters; and if ever they granted them Commission to perform them, it was only in Cases of great Necessity: Such were the Offices of Reconciling Penitents, Confirmation of Neophites, Consecration of Churches, Virgins and Widows, with some others of the like nature; of which I shall [e] Con. Tolet. 1. Can. 20. Sine Conscientia Episcopi nihil penitus Presbyteri agere præsumant. [f] Can. Apost. c. 39. [g] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 8. [h] Tertul. de Bapt. c. 17. Dandi jus quidem habet summus Sacerdos, qui est Episcopus: Dehinc Presbyteri & Diaconi; non tamen sine Episcopi Auctoritate, propter Ecclesiæ honorem, quo salvo salva Pax est. [i] Hieron. Dial. cont. Lucifer. p. 139. Inde venit, ut sine Jussione Episcopi, neque Presbyter neque Diaconus jus habeant baptisandi. [ii] Ambros. de Sacram. lib. 3. c. 1. Licet Presbyteri fecerint, tamen Exordium Ministerii a summo est Sacerdote. [k] Vid. Can. Apost. c. 58. [l] Cypr. Ep. 52, 56, 83. Ed. Oxon. It. Pontius Vit. Cypr. ibid. [m] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 5. Eidem Presbytero Potestatem dedit coram se in Ecclesia Evangelium prædicandi, ac frequentissime tractandi, contra usum quidem ac consuetudinem Africanarum Ecclesiarum. Unde etiam ei nonnulli Episcopi detrahebant.—— Postea bono præcedente exemplo, accepta ab Episcopis Potestate, Presbyteri nonnulli coram Episcopis populo tractare cœperunt verbum Dei. [n] Ille in Orientalibus Ecclesiis id ex more fieri sciens, obtrectantium non curabat Linguas, &c. Possid. ibid. [o] Pessimæ consuetudinis est in quibusdam Ecclesiis tacere Presbyteros, & præsentibus Episcopis non loqui, &c. [p] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 2. [q] Theodor. Lib. 1. c. 2. [r] Socrat. Lib. 5. c. 22. [s] Socrat. ibid. [t] Sozom. Lib. 7. c. 17.

speak

ſpeak nothing more particularly here now, becauſe they will come more properly under Conſideration in other Places. But there was one Office which they never intruſted in the hands of Presbyters, nor ever gave them any Commiſſion to perform; which was the Office of Ordaining the Superior Clergy, Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons. The utmoſt that Presbyters could pretend to in this matter, was to lay on their hands together with the Biſhop in the Ordination of a Presbyter, whilſt the Biſhop by his Prayer performed the Office of Conſecration. Thus much is allowed them by one of the Councils [u] of Carthage, which yet expreſly reſerves the Benediction or Ordination-Prayer to the Biſhop only. In the Ordination of Biſhops they had no concern at all; which was always performed by a Synod of Biſhops, as ſhall be ſhewed more particularly when we come to ſpeak of the Rites and Cuſtoms obſerved in their Ordinations. Here in this place it will be ſufficient to prove in general, that the Power of Ordinations was the Prerogative of Biſhops, and that they never communicated this Privilege to any Preſbyters. St. Jerom's [uu] Teſtimony is irrefragable Evidence in this Caſe. For in the ſame place where he ſets off the Office of Presbyters to the beſt advantage, he ſtill excepts the Power of Ordination. What is it, ſays he, that a Biſhop does more than a Presbyter, ſetting aſide the Buſineſs of Ordination? St. Chryſoſtom [w] ſpeaks much after the ſame manner, where he advances the Power of Presbyters to the higheſt. Biſhops and Presbyters, ſays he, differ not much from one another. For Presbyters are admitted to preach and govern the Church: And the ſame Qualifications that the Apoſtle requires in Biſhops, are required in Presbyters alſo. For Biſhops are Superior to them only in the Power of Ordination, and have that one thing more than they. In another place [x] he proves that Timothy was a Biſhop, becauſe the Apoſtle ſpeaks of his Power to ordain, bidding him lay hands ſuddenly on no Man. And he adds both there and elſewhere [y] that the Presbytery which ordained Timothy was a Synod of Biſhops, becauſe meer Presbyters had no Power to ordain a Biſhop. I might here produce all thoſe Canons of the ancient Councils, which ſpeak of Biſhops Ordaining [z], but never of Presbyters; which Rule was ſo preciſely obſerved in the Primitive Church, that Novatian himſelf would not preſume to break it, but ſent for Three Biſhops [a] from the fartheſt Corners of Italy, rather than want a Canonical Number of Biſhops to ordain him. I only add that Obſervation of Epiphanius [aa], grounded upon the general Practice of the Church, That the Order of Biſhops begets Fathers to the Church, which the Order of Preſbyters cannot do, but only begets Sons by the Regeneration of Baptiſm.

I know, ſome urge the Authority of St. Jerom [b] to prove that the Presbyters of Alexandria ordained their own Biſhop, from the days of St. Mark to the time of Heraclas and Dionyſius; and others think the ſame Words prove that he had no new Ordination at all: But they both miſtake St. Jerom's Meaning, who ſpeaks not of the Ordination of the Biſhop, but of his Election; who was choſen by the Presbyters, out of their own Body, and by them placed upon the Biſhop's Throne; which in thoſe days was no more than a Token of his Election, and was ſometimes done by the People; but the Ordination came after that, and was always reſerved for the Provincial Biſhops to perform, as ſhall be ſhewed hereafter.

SECT. VI. Ordinations by Presbyters diſannulled by the Church.

BUT it may be enquired, what was the Practice of the Church in caſe any Presbyters took upon them to ordain? Were their Ordinations allowed to ſtand good or not? I anſwer, They were commonly reverſed and diſannulled. As in the known Caſe of Iſchyras [c] who was depoſed by the Synod of Alexandria, becauſe Colluthus who ordained him, was no more than a Presbyter, though pretending to be a Biſhop: And in the caſe of thoſe Presbyters who were reduced to the Quality of Laymen by the Council [d] of Sardica, becauſe Eutychianus and Muſæus who ordained them, were only pretended Biſhops. The Council of Sevil in Spain [e] went a little farther: They depoſed a Presbyter and two Deacons, becauſe the Biſhop only laid his hands upon them, whilſt a Presbyter pronounced the Bleſſing or Conſecration-Prayer over them. And ſome other Inſtances might be added of the like Nature, which ſhew that then they did not allow Biſhops ſo much as to delegate or commiſſion Presbyters to ordain in their Name, but reſerved this entirely to the Epiſcopal Function.

SECT. VII. Some Allegations to the contrary examined.

THE common Pleas which ſome urge to the contrary, derogate nothing from the Truth of this Obſervation. For whereas it is [u] Con. Carth. 4. can. 3. Presbyter cum ordinatur, Epiſcopo eum benedicente, & manum ſuper caput ejus tenente, etiam omnes Presbyteri, qui præſentes ſunt, manus ſuas juxta manum Epiſcopi ſuper caput illius teneant. [uu] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Quid enim facit, excepta Ordinatione, Epiſcopus, quod Presbyter non facit? [w] Chryſ. Hom. 11. in 1 Tim. 2. 8. [x] Id. Hom. 1. in Philip. 1. [y] Hom. 13. in 1 Tim. 4. 14. ὁ γὰρ καὶ πρεσβύτεροι ἐπίσκοπον ἐχειροτόνουν. [z] See Con. Nic. c. 19. Con. Antioch. c. 9. Con. Chalced c. 2, & 6. Con. Carth. 3. c. 45. Can. Apoſt. c. 1. [a] Cornel. Ep. ad Fabium ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 23. [aa] Epiph. Hær. 75. Aerian. [b] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Alexandriæ à Marco Evangeliſta uſque ad Heraclam & Dionyſium Epiſcopus, Presbyteri ſemper unum ex ſe electum, in excelſiori gradu collocatum Epiſcopum nominabant; quomodo ſi Exercitus Imperatorem faciat. [c] Athan. Apol. 2. p. 732. Epiſt. Cler. Mareot. ibid. p. 784. [d] Con. Sard. Can. 20. [e] Con. Hiſpal. 2. Can 5. Relatum eſt nobis de quibuſdam Clericis, quorum dum unus ad Presbyterum, duo ad Levitarum miniſterium ſacrarentur, Epiſcopus oculorum dolore detentus fertur manum ſuam ſuper eos tantum impoſuiſſe, & Presbyter quidam illis contra Eccleſiaſticum ordinem Benedictionem dediſſe, &c. Hi gradum Sacerdotii vel Levitici ordinis, quem perverſe adepti ſunt, amittunt.

ſaid,

ſaid, 1ſt, That the Chorepiſcopi were only Preſbyters, and yet had Power to ordain: That ſeems to be a plain miſtake; for all the Chorepiſcopi of the Ancient Church were Real Biſhops, tho' Subordinate to other Biſhops; as I ſhall ſhew more particularly hereafter, when I come to ſpeak of their Order. 2. It is ſaid, That the City-Presbyters had Power to ordain by the Biſhop's Licenſe; and that this was eſtabliſhed by Canon in the Council of [f] Ancyra. But this is grounded only upon a very ambiguous Senſe, if not a corrupt Reading of that Canon. For all the old Tranſlators render it much otherwiſe, That the City-Presbyters ſhall do nothing [g] without the Licenſe and Authority of the Biſhop, in any Part of the Paroch or Dioceſe belonging to his Juriſdiction. Which agrees with what I have cited before out of the Council of Laodicea, and ſeveral other Canons, which make Presbyters dependent upon their Biſhops in the ordinary Exerciſe of their Function. (See before §. 2. of this Chapter.) And ſome Greek Copies [h] read it, ὂν ἐπέρᾳ παροικίᾳ, which ſeems to ſignify that Presbyters ſhall not officiate in another Dioceſe without Letters Dimiſſory from their own Biſhop.

3. It is urged further, that Novatus, a Presbyter of Carthage, ordained Feliciſſimus a Deacon. But this ſeems to be no more than procuring him to be ordained by ſome Biſhop. For Cyprian ſays he made Novatian [i] Biſhop of Rome after the ſame manner as he had done Feliciſſimus Deacon at Carthage. But now it is certain he did not ordain Novatian, but only was inſtrumental in procuring three obſcure Italian Biſhops to come and ordain him. And in that Senſe he might ordain Feliciſſimus too. But admit it were otherwiſe, it was only a Schiſmatical Act, condemned by Cyprian and the whole Church.

4. 'Tis pleaded out of Caſſian, That Paphnutius an Egyptian Abbot, ordained one Daniel a Presbyter. But if Caſſian's Words be rightly conſidered, he ſays no ſuch thing, but only [k] that Paphnutius firſt promoted him to be made a Deacon before ſeveral of his Seniors, and then intending to make him his Succeſſor, he alſo preferred him to the Dignity of a Presbyter. Which Preference or Promotion does not at all exclude the Biſhop's Ordination. It may reaſonably ſignify the Abbot's Choice, which he had power to make; but it cannot ſo reaſonably be interpreted that he ordained him; ſince this was contrary to the Rules and Practice of the Church: And conſidering where and when Paphnutius lived, in the midſt of Egypt, among an hundred Biſhops, in the Fifth Century, it is not likely he would tranſgreſs the Canons in ſo plain a Caſe. Therefore I cannot ſubſcribe to a Learned Man [l], who ſays, Nothing is more plain and evident, than that here a Presbyter ordained a Preſbyter, which we no where read was pronounced Null by Theophilus then Biſhop of Alexandria, nor any others at that time. I conceive the contrary was rather evident to them, and therefore they had no Reaſon to pronounce it Null, knowing it to be a juſt and regular Ordination.

5. I remember but one Inſtance more in Ancient Church-Hiſtory (for Modern Inſtances I wholly paſs by) that ſeems to make any thing for the Ordination of Presbyters; and that is in the Anſwer given by Pope Leo to a Queſtion put to him by Ruſticus Narbonenſis, Whether the Ordination of certain Perſons might ſtand good, who were only ordained by ſome Pſeudo-Epiſcopi, Falſe Biſhops, who had no Legal and Canonical Right to their Places? To this he anſwers, [m] That if the Lawful Biſhops of thoſe Churches gave their Conſent to their Ordination, it might be eſteemed valid and allowed; otherwiſe to be diſannulled. But here it is to be conſidered that theſe Pſeudo-Epiſcopi were in ſome Senſe Biſhops, as being ordained, though illegally, to their Places: For they ſeem to be ſuch as had Schiſmatically intruded themſelves into other Men's Sees, or at leaſt obtained them by ſome corrupt and irregular Practices. Now the Church did not always reſcind and cancel the Acts of ſuch Biſhops, but uſed a Liberty either to reverſe and diſannul the Ordinations made by them, or otherwiſe to confirm and ratify them, as ſhe ſaw occaſion. Therefore though the General Council [n] of Conſtantinople depoſed all ſuch as were ordained by Maximus, who had ſimonically intruded himſelf into Gregory Nazianzen's See at Conſtantinople; yet the Novatian Clergy were admitted by the Council of Nice, [o] though ordained by Schiſmatical Biſhops; and the African Councils [p] allowed the Ordinations of the Donatiſt Biſhops, though they had long continued in Schiſm, and given Schiſmatical Orders to others alſo. Which ſhews that the Primitive Church made ſome difference between Orders conferred by Schiſmatical Biſhops, and thoſe conferred by mere Presbyters. I enquire not now into the Grounds and Reaſons of this, but only relate the Church's Practice. From which upon the whole matter it appears, that this was another Difference betwixt Biſhops and Preſbyters, that the one had Power to ordain, but the other were never authoriſed or commiſſioned to do it.

[f] Con. Ancyr. can. 13. [g] Id. ex Verſione Dionyſii Exigui: Sed nec Presbyteris Civitatis, ſine Præcepto Epiſcopi, amplius aliquid imperare, nec ſine authoritate Literarum ejus in unaquaque Parochia aliquid agere. [h] Cod. Can. edit. Ehinger. [i] Cypr. Ep. 49. al. 52. ad Cornel. p. 97. ed. Oxon. Quoniam pro magnitudine ſua debeat Carthaginem Roma præcedere, illic majora & graviora commiſit. Qui iſtic adverſus Eccleſiam Diaconum fecerat, illic Epiſcopum fecit. [k] Caſſian. Collat. 4. c. 1. A beato Paphnutio ſolitudinis ejuſdem Presbytero, & quidem cum multis junior eſſet ætate, ad Diaconii eſt prælatus Officium. —— Optanſque ſibimet ſucceſſorem digniſſimum providere, ſuperſtes eum Presbyterii honore provexit. —— [l] Stilling. Irenic. Par. 2. c. 7. n. 8. p. 380. [m] Leo Ep. 92. ad Ruſtic. c. 1. Si qui autem Clerici ab iſtis Pſeudo-epiſcopis in eis Eccleſiis ordinati ſunt, quæ ad proprios Epiſcopos pertinebant, & Ordinatio eorum cum Conſenſu & Judicio Præſidentium facta eſt, poteſt rata haberi, &c. [n] Con. Conſtant. can. 4. [o] Con. Nic. c. 8. [p] Collat. Carthag. 1. Die, c. 16.

SECT. VIII. A 3d Difference between Bishops and Presbyters: Presbyters accountable to their Bishops, not Bishops to their Presbyters.

3. BESIDES this, there was a Third Difference between Bishops and Presbyters in point of Jurisdiction: Bishops always retained to themselves the Power of calling Presbyters to an Account, and Censuring them for their Miscarriages in the Discharge of their Office; but Presbyters had no Power to censure their Bishops, or set up an Independent Power in opposition to their Authority and Jurisdiction. When Felicissimus and Augendus set up a separate Communion at Carthage against Cyprian, threatning to excommunicate all that communicated with him, Cyprian gave Orders to his Deputies (being himself then in Banishment) to execute first their own Sentence upon them, and let them for their Contempt of him and the Church [q] feel the Power of Excommunication; which was accordingly done by his Delegates, as appears from their Answer [r] to him. In another place, writing to Rogatian a Bishop, who made Complaint to Cyprian and the Synod, of an unruly Deacon; he tells him, It was his singular Modesty to refer the Case to them, when he might by vertue of his own Episcopal Authority himself have punished the [s] Delinquent; against whom, if he persisted in his Contempt, he should use the Power which belonged to his Order, and either depose or suspend him. Nothing can be more plain and evident, than that in Cyprian's time all Bishops were invested with this Power of Censuring Delinquents among the Clergy. And any one that looks into the Councils of the following Age, will find nothing more common, than Canons, which both suppose and confirm this Power. As when the Apostolical Canons say [w], That no Presbyter, or Deacon, excommunicated by his own Bishop, should be received by any other: That supposes all Bishops to have Power to inflict Ecclesiastical Censures upon their Clergy. The like may be seen in the Canons of the Council of Nice [x] which allows an Appeal in such a Case to a Provincial Synod; and the Council of Sardica [y], which orders the Metropolitan to hear and redress the Grievance: So also in the Councils of Antioch [z], Chalcedon [a], and many others.

SECT. IX. Yet Bishop's Power not Arbitrary, but limited by Canon in various Respects.

YET it must be own'd, that according to the Discipline and Custom of those Times, Bishops seldom did any thing of this nature, without the Advice and Consent of their Presbyters, who were their Assessors, and (as it were) the Ecclesiastical Senate and Council of the Church: Of which I shall give a more particular Account, when I come to speak of the Honour and Privileges of the Order of Presbyters. And here it is to be further noted out of the preceding Canons, That if any Clergyman thought himself injur'd by his Bishop, he had Liberty to appeal [b] either to the Metropolitan, or a Provincial Synod: And in some Places, the better to avoid Arbitrary Power, the Canons provided, That no Bishop should proceed to censure a Presbyter, or Deacon, without the Concurrence of some Neighbouring Bishops to join with him in the Sentence. The first Council of Carthage [c] requires Three to censure a Deacon, and Six to censure a Presbyter. The Second Council of Carthage [d] requires the same Number, according to all correct Editions of it: For Crab's Edition is palpably false; and yet Blondel [e] lays hold of that Corruption, to prove that Presbyters and Deacons were to be Judges of their own Bishop; which make the Canons speak mere Nonsense, and appoints the Bishop to judge himself also. The true Reading of the Canon is this: The Criminal Cause of a Bishop shall be heard by Twelve Bishops; the Cause of a Presbyter, by Six; the Cause of a Deacon, by Three joined with his own Bishop. This obliges every Bishop to take other Bishops into Commission with him in Criminal Causes, but does not authorize Presbyters and Deacons to sit as Judges upon their own Bishop. Which may be farther evidenced from another Canon [f] of the next Council of Carthage; which speaks of a Legal Number of Bishops to judge a Presbyter, or Deacon; and assigns Six for a Presbyter, and Three for a Deacon, as the former Canons appointed. But for the Inferior Clergy, there was no such Restraint laid upon the Bishop, that I can find; but he alone, by the same Canon [g], is allowed to hear their Causes, and end them. Only they had Liberty to appeal, as all others, in case of Injury done them, to the Metropolitan, or a Provincial Synod; which the Nicene Council [h], and many others, appoint to be held once or twice a Year for that very purpose; That if any Clergyman chanced to be unjustly censured by the Passion of his Bishop, he might have recourse to a Superior Court, and there have Justice done him. This is the true State and Account of the Power of Bishops over their Clergy, as near as I can collect it out of the Genuine Records of the Ancient Church.

[q] Cypr. Ep. 38. al. 41. p. 80. Cum Felicissimus comminatus sit, non communicaturos in Monte (al. Morte) secum, qui nobis communicarent: Accipiat sententiam quam prior dixit; ut abstentum a se nobis sciat. [r] Ep. 39. al. 42. ad Cypr. Abstinuimus Communicatione Felicissimum & Augendum, &c.

[s] Cypr. Ep. 65. al. 3. ad Rogatian. Tu quidem pro solita tua humilitate fecisti, ut malles de eo nobis conqueri, cum pro Episcopatus vigore & Cathedræ auctoritate haberes potestatem, qua posses de illo statim vindicari —— Quod si ultra te contumeliis suis provocaverit, fungeris circa eum Potestate honoris tui, ut eum vel deponas vel abstineas. See also Cypr. Ep. 10. al. 16. Ed. Oxon.

[w] Canon. Apost. c. 33. [x] Con. Nic. Can. 5. [y] Con. Sard. Can. 13, 14. [z] Con. Antioc. Can. 3, & 4. [a] Chalced. Can. 9. [b] See for the Liberty of Appeals: Con. Carthag. 2. c. 8. Carthag. 4. c. 29, & 66. Antioch. c. 12. Vasion. c. 5. Venetic. Can. 9. [c] Con. Carthag. 1. Can. 11. Si quis aliquam Causam habuerit, à tribus vicinis Episcopis, si Diaconus est, arguatur: Presbyter à sex. [d] Con. Carth. 2. Can. 10. Placet ut Causa criminalis Episcopi à duodecim Episcopis audiatur: Causa Presbyteri à sex; Causa vero Diaconi a tribus cum propric Episcopo. [e] Blondel. Apol. p. 137. And Crab thus reads it corruptly: Episcopus à duodecim Episcopis audiatur, & à sex Presbyteris, & à tribus Diaconibus cum proprio suo Episcopo. c [f] Con. Carth. 3. c. 8. Si Presbyteri vel Diaconi fuerint a cusati, adjuncto sibi ex vicinis locis Legitimo numero Collegarum —— in Presbyteri nomine sex, in Diaconi tribus, ipsorum Causas discutiant. [g] Ibid. c. 8. Reliquorum Clericorum Causas solus Episcopus loci agnoscat & finiat. [h] Con. Nic. Can. 5.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Power of Bishops over the Laity, Monks, Subordinate Magistrates, and all Persons within their Diocese: And of their Office in disposing of the Revenues of the Church.

SECT. I. No Exemptions from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop in the Primitive Church.

THE next thing to be considered, is, The Power of Bishops over the People; which, upon Enquiry, will be found to extend it self over all Persons, of what Rank or Quality soever, within their Diocese, or the Bounds and Limits of their Jurisdiction. The Extent of Dioceses themselves, and the Reasons why some were much greater than others, I do not here consider; but reserve that for a more proper Place, to be treated of when we come to speak of Churches. What I observe in this place, is, That all Orders of Men within the Diocese, were subject to the Bishop: For, Privileges to exempt Men from the Jurisdiction of their Diocesan, were Things unknown to former Ages. Ignatius makes bold to say [i], That as he that honours his Bishop, is honoured of God; so he that does any thing covertly in Opposition to him, is the Servant of Satan. And Cyprian defines the Church [k] to be a People united to its Bishop, a Flock adhering to its Pastor. Whence the Church may be said to be in the Bishop, and the Bishop in the Church; and if any are not with their Bishop, they are not in the Church.

SECT. II. All Monks subject to the Bishop of the Diocese where they lived.

PARTICULARLY, we may observe of all Asceticks, and Monks, and Hermits; That the Laws, both Ecclesiastical and Civil, subjected them to the Bishop of the Place where they lived. For Ecclesiastical Laws, we have Two Canons in the Council of Chalcedon [l] to this purpose; the first of which prescribes, That all Monks, whether in City or Country, shall be subject to the Bishop, and concern themselves in no Business (Sacred or Civil) out of their own Monastery; except they have his License and Permission, upon urgent Occasion so to do. And if any withdraw themselves from his Obedience, the other Canon pronounces Excommunication against them. The same Injunctions may be read in the Councils of Orleans [m], Agde [n], Lerida [o], and others; which subject the Abbots as well as Monks to the Bishop's Care and Correction. Justinian confirms all this by a Law in the Code; which says [p], All Monasteries are to be reckoned under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of the Territories where they are; and that the Abbots themselves are part of their Care. In one of his Novels [q], the Election of Abbots is put into the Bishop's Hands. And by other Laws [r], no new Cells, or Monasteries, were to be erected, but by the Consent and License of the Bishop, to whose Jurisdiction they belonged. It is therefore a very just Reflection, which Bede, and some others [s] from him, make upon the State of the Scottish Church; That Things were in a very unusual and preposterous Order, when instead of Abbots being subject to the Bishops, the Bishops were subject to a single Abbot. This was Ordini inusitato, as Bede [t] rightly observes: For there was no such Practice allowed in the Primitive Church.

SECT. III. As also all subordinate Magistrates in matters of Spiritual Jurisdiction.

IN those days, the Authority of Bishops was so highly esteemed, and venerable in the Eyes of all Men, that even the Subordinate Magistrates themselves were subject to their Spiritual Discipline and Correction. The Prefects and Governors of Cities and Provinces, were obliged to take their Communicatory Letters along with them to the Bishop of the Place, whither the Government sent them; and whilst they continued in their Office there, they were to be under the Bishop's Care; who, if they transgressed against the publick Discipline of the Church, was authorised by the Imperial Laws to punish them with Excommunication. This we learn from a Canon of the first Council of Arles [u]; which was called by Constantine himself, who ratify'd its Canons, and gave them as [i] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 9. ὁ λάθρα ἐπισκόπε τι πράσσων, τῷ διαβόλῳ λατρεύει. [k] Cypr. Epist. 69. al. 66. ad Pupian. p. 168. Ecclesia Plebs Sacerdoti unita, & Pastori suo Grex adhærens. Unde scire debes Episcopum in Ecclesia esse, & Ecclesiam in Episcopo; Et si qui cum Episcopo non sint, in Ecclesia non esse, &c. [l] Con. Chalced. Can. 4. & 8. [m] Con. Aurel. 1. c. 21. [n] Agathens. Can. 38. [o] Ilerdens. c. 3. [p] Cod. Just. Lib. 1. Tit. 3. de Episcop. Leg. 40. [q] Justin. Novel. 5. c. 9. [r] Con. Chalced. Can. 4. Con. Agath. c. 58. [s] Pearson Vind. Ignat. Part. 1. c. 11. p. 333. [t] Bed. Hist. Gent. Anglor. Lib. 3. c. 4. Cujus juri & omnis Provincia, & ipsi etiam Episcopi Ordine inusitato debeant esse subjecti. [u] Con. Arelat. 2. c. 7. De Præsidibus —— ita placuit, ut cum promoti fuerint, Literas accipiant Ecclesiasticas Communicatorias. Ita tamen ut in quibuscunque locis gesserint, ab Episcopo ejusdem loci Cura de illis agatur; ut cum cœperint contra Disciplinam publicam agere, tunc demum a Communione excludantur. Similiter & de his fiat, qui Rempublicam agere volunt.

it

it were the Force of Imperial Sanctions. And by Virtue of this Power, they ſometimes unſheathed the Spiritual Sword againſt Impious and Prophane Magiſtrates, and cut them off from all Communion with the Church. Of which we have an Inſtance in Syneſius Biſhop of Ptolemais [w] excommunicating Andronicus the Governor, for his Cruelties and Blaſphemies; and many other ſuch Examples, which will be mentioned when we come to treat particularly of the Diſcipline of the Church. As to what concerns the Biſhops Power to inſpect and examine the Acts and Decrees of Subordinate Magiſtrates; Socrates [x] aſſures us it was practiſed by Cyril of Alexandria, in reference to Oreſtes the Præfectus Auguſtalis of Egypt; tho', as he intimates, it was ſome Grievance to him to be under his Inſpection.

SECT. IV. Of the Diſtinction between Temporal and Spiritual Juriſdiction; Biſhops Power wholly confined to the latter.

BUT it muſt be owned and ſpoken to the Glory of thoſe Primitive Biſhops, that they challenged no Power, as of Right belonging to them, but only that which was Spiritual. They did not as yet lay claim to both Swords, much leſs endeavour to wreſt the Temporal Sword out of the Magiſtrates Hand, and dethrone Princes under pretence of Excommunication. The ancient Biſhops of Rome themſelves, always profeſſed Obedience and Subjection to the Emperor's Laws: Which I ſhall not ſtand here to prove, ſince it has ſo frequently and ſo ſubſtantially been done by ſeveral of our Learned [y] Writers: And it is confeſſed by the more Ingenuous of the Romiſh Writers [z] themſelves, That Gregory the VIIth was the firſt Pope that pretended to depoſe Chriſtian Princes. The ancient Biſhops of the Church laid no Claim to a Coercive Power over the Bodies or Eſtates of Men; but if ever they had occaſion to make uſe of it, they applied themſelves to the Secular Magiſtrate, for his Aſſiſtance. As in the Caſe of Paulus Samoſatenſis, who kept poſſeſſion of the Biſhop's Houſe, after he was depoſed from his Biſhoprick by the Council of Antioch. The Fathers in that Council having no Power to remove him, petitioned the Emperor Aurelian [a] againſt him; who tho' an Heathen, gave Judgement on their ſide, and ordered his Officers to ſee his Sentence put in Execution. And thus the Caſe ſtood, as to the Power of Biſhops, for ſome Ages after under Chriſtian Emperors: Inſomuch that Socrates [b] notes it as a very ſingular thing in Cyril Biſhop of Alexandria, That he undertook by his own Power to ſhut up the Novatian Churches, ſeizing upon their Plate and Sacred Utenſils, and depriving their Biſhop Theopemptus of his Subſtance. This was done παρὰ τὴν ἱερατικῆς τάξεως, beyond any ordinary Power that Biſhops were then inveſted with: And tho' in After-ages they attained to this Power, yet it was not by any inherent Right of their Order, but by the Favour and Indulgence of Secular Princes. It muſt here alſo be farther noted, That it was ever eſteemed diſhonourable for Biſhops ſo much as to petition the Secular Power againſt the Life of any Man, whom they had condemned by Spiritual Cenſures. And therefore, when Ithacius and ſome other Spaniſh Biſhops prevailed with Maximus to ſlay the Heretick Priſcillian, St. Martin and many other pious Biſhops petitioned againſt it, ſaying, It was was enough to expel Hereticks [c] from the Churches: And when they could not prevail, they ſhewed their Reſentments of the Fact againſt the Author of it, refuſing to admit Ithacius the Sanguinary Biſhop to their Communion. So great a Concern had thoſe Holy Men to keep within the Bounds of their Spiritual Juriſdiction.

SECT. V. An Account of the Literæ Formatæ, and the Biſhops Prerogative in granting them to all Perſons.

AND it may be obſerved, that the Authority of Biſhops was never greater in the World, than when they concerned themſelves only in the Exerciſe of their own proper Spiritual Power. For then they had an univerſal Reſpect paid them by all ſorts of Men; inſomuch that no Chriſtian would pretend to travel, without taking Letters of Credence with him from his own Biſhop, if he meant to communicate with the Chriſtian Church in a Foreign Country. Such was the admirable Unity of the Church Catholick in thoſe days, and the bleſſed Harmony and Conſent of her Biſhops among one another! Theſe Letters were of divers ſorts, according to the different Occaſions or Quality of the Perſons that carried them. They are generally reduced to Three Kinds; The Epiſtolæ Commendatoriæ, Communicatoriæ, and Dimiſſoriæ. The firſt were ſuch as were granted only to Perſons of Quality, or elſe Perſons whoſe Reputation had been called in Queſtion, or to the Clergy who had occaſion to travel into Foreign Countries. The Second ſort were granted to all who were in the Peace and Communion of the Church; whence they were alſo called Pacificæ, and Eccleſiaſticæ, and ſometimes Canonicæ. The Third ſort were ſuch as were only given to the Clergy, when they were to remove from their own Dioceſe, and ſettle in another; and they were to teſtify that they had their Biſhop's Leave to depart; whence they were called Dimiſſoriæ, and ſometimes Pacificæ likewiſe. All theſe went under the general Name of Formatæ; becauſe they were written in a peculiar Form, with ſome particular Marks and Characters, which ſerved as ſpecial Signatures to diſtinguiſh them from Counterfeits,

[w] Syneſ. Ep. 58. ad Epiſcopos, p. 198. [x] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 13. [y] See Biſhop Morton's Grand Impoſt. of the Church of Rome, c. 11. Joh. Roſſenſ. de Poteſt. Papæ in Temporal. Lib. 2. c. 2. [z] Otho Friſingenſ. Chron. Lib. 6. c. 35. Greg. Tholoſan. de Repub. Lib. 26. c. 5. [a] Euſeb. Lib. 7. c. 30. [b] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 7. [c] Sulp. Sever. Lib. 2. p. 119. Maximum orare, ut Sanguine Infelicium abſtineret: Satis ſuperque ſufficere, ut Epiſcopali ſententia Hæretici judicati Eccleſiis pellerentur.

terfeits. I shall not stand now to give any further account of them here, but only observe that it was the Bishop's sole Prerogative to grant them; and none might presume to do it, at least without his Authority and Commission. The Council of Antioch [d] allows Country-Bishops to write them; but expresly forbids Presbyters the Privilege. And whereas in Times of Persecution, some Confessors who were of great Esteem in the Church, would take upon them to grant such Letters by their own Authority, and in their own Names; the Councils of [e] Arles, and Eliberis [f], forbad them to do it; and ordered all Persons who had such Letters, to take new Communicatory Letters from the Bishop. Baronius [g] and the common Editors of the Councils, who follow him, mistake these Letters for the Libels which the Confessors were used to grant to the Lapsi, to have them admitted into the Communion of the Church again: But Albaspiny [h] corrects this Mistake; and rightly observes, That those Councils speak not of such Libels as were given to the Lapsi, but of such as were given to all Christians, who had occasion to travel into Foreign Countries; which it belonged to the Bishops to grant, and not to the Confessors, whatever Authority they might otherwise have obtained by their honourable Confession of Christ in time of Persecution. The Council of Eliberis [i] takes notice of another Abuse of this nature, and corrects it; which was, That some Women of famous Renown in the Church, Clergymens Wives, as Albaspiny thinks, or rather the Wives of Bishops, would presume both to grant and receive such Letters by their own Authority: All which the Council orders to be sunk, as being dangerous to the Discipline and Communion of the Church, and an Encroachment upon the Bishops Power, to whom alone it belonged to grant them. For by all ancient Canons, this Privilege is reserved entirely to Bishops, and this set their Authority very high in the Church: For no one, either Clergy or Laity, could communicate in any Church beside his own, without these Testimonials from his Bishop; as may be seen in the Councils of Carthage [k], and Agde [l], and many others.

SECT. VI. Of the Bishops Power in Disposing of the Revenues of the Church.

I have but one thing more to observe concerning the Power of Bishops over the Church; and that is, their Authority and Concern in Disposing of the Revenues of the Church. I intend not here to enter upon the Discourse of Ecclesiastical Revenues, (which has its proper Place in this Work hereafter) but only to suggest now, That it was part of the Bishops Office and Care, to see them managed and disposed of to the best Advantage. The Councils of Antioch [m], and Gangra [n], have several Canons to this purpose; That all the Incomes and Oblations of the Church shall be dispensed at the Will and Discretion of the Bishop; to whom the People, and the Souls of Men are committed. Those called the Apostolical [o] Canons, and Constitutions [p], speak of the same Power. And Cyprian [q] notes, That all who received Maintenance from the Church, had it, Episcopo dispensante, by the Order and Appointment of the Bishop. He did not indeed always dispense with his own Hands, but by proper Assistants, such as his Archdeacon, and the Oeconomus; which some Canons [r] order to be one of the Clergy of every Church: But these Officers were only Stewards under him, both of his appointing, as St. Jerom [s] observes, and also accountable to him as the Supreme Governor of the Church. Whence Possidius takes notice of the Practice of St. Austin; that tho' neither Seal nor Keys was ever seen in his Hand, but some of his Clergy were always his Administrators; yet he had his certain Times to audit their Accounts: So that all was still his Act, tho' administred and dispensed by the Hands of others. And this was agreeable to the Primitive Rule and Practice of the Apostles, to whose Care and Custody the Peoples Oblations, and Things consecrated to God, were committed: They chose Deacons to be their Assistants, as Bishops did afterwards; still retaining Power in their own Hands to direct and regulate them in the Disposal of the Publick Charity, as Prime Stewards of God's Revenue, and chief Masters of his Household.

[d] Con. Antioch. Can. 8. [e] Con. Arelat. 1. c. 9. De his, qui Confessorum Literas offerunt, placuit, ut sublatis eis Literis, alias accipiant Communicatorias. [f] Con. Elib. c. 25. [g] Baron. an. 142. Loaysa Not. in Con. Elib. c. 25. [h] Albasp. Not. in Con. Elib. c. 25. [i] Con. Elib. c. 81. [k] Con. Carth. 1. Can. 7. Clericus vel Laicus non communicet in aliena Plebe sine Literis Episcopi sui. [l] Agath. Can. 53. Epaun. c. 6. Laodic. c. 41. Milevit. c. 20. Con. Antioch. c. 7. [m] Con. Antioch. c. 24. & 25. [n] Con. Gangr. c. 7. & 8. [o] Canon. Apost. c. 31. & 38. [p] Constit. Apostol. L. 2. c. 25. [q] Cypr. Ep. 38. al. 41. Just. Mart. Apol. 2. [r] Con. Chalced. c. 26. [s] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Sciat Episcopus, cui commissa est Ecclesia, quem Dispensationi Pauperum, Curæque præficiat.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

Of the Office of Biſhops, in relation to the whole Catholick Church.

SECT. I. In what ſenſe every Biſhop ſuppoſed to be Biſhop of the whole Catholick Church.

WE have hitherto conſidered the Office and Power of Biſhops over the Clergy and People of their own particular Churches: But there is yet a more eminent Branch of their Paſtoral Office and Care behind, which is, their Superintendency over the whole Catholick Church; in which every Biſhop was ſuppoſed to have an equal Share; not as to what concerned External Polity and Government, but the Prime Eſſential Part of Religion, the Preſervation of the Chriſtian Faith. Whenever the Faith was in danger of being ſubverted by Hereſy, or deſtroyed by Perſecution, then every Biſhop thought it part of his Duty and Office to put to his helping Hand, and labour as much for any other Diocele as his own. Dioceſes were but Limits of Convenience, for the Preſervation of Order in times of Peace: But the Faith was a more univerſal thing; and when War was made upon that, then the whole World was but one Dioceſe, and the whole Church but one Flock; and every Paſtor thought himſelf obliged to feed his great Maſter's Sheep, according to his Power, whatever Part of the World they were ſcattered in. In this ſenſe, every Biſhop was an univerſal Paſtor, and Biſhop of the whole World; as having a common Care and Concern for the whole Church of Chriſt. This is what St. Auſtin [t] told Boniface Biſhop of Rome; That the Paſtoral Care was common to all thoſe who had the Office of Biſhop; and tho' he was a little higher advanced toward the Top of Chriſt's Watch-tower, yet all others had an equal Concern in it. St. Cyprian teſtifies [u] for the Practice of his own time, That all Biſhops were ſo united in one Body, that if any of the Body broached any Hereſy, or began to lay waſte and tear the Flock of Chriſt, all the reſt immediately came in to its Reſcue: For though they were many Paſtors, yet they had but one Flock to feed; and every one was obliged to take care of all the Sheep of Chriſt, which he had purchaſed with his Blood. In this ſenſe Gregory Nazianzen [w] ſays of Cyprian, That he was an univerſal Biſhop; That he preſided not only over the Church of Carthage and Africk, but over all the Regions of the Weſt, and over the Eaſt, and South, and Northern Parts of the World alſo. He ſays the ſame of Athanaſius [x]; That in being made Biſhop of Alexandria, he was made Biſhop of the whole World. Which agrees with St. Baſil's Obſervation [y] concerning him; That he had the Care of all Churches, as much as that which was peculiarly committed to him. Chryſoſtom [z] in like manner ſtiles Timothy Biſhop of the Univerſe: And in compliance with this Cuſtomary Character, the Author under the Name of Clemens Romanus [zz], gives St. James Biſhop of Jeruſalem the Title of Governor of all Churches, as well as that of Jeruſalem. Chryſoſtom [a] ſays, St. Paul had the whole World committed to his Care, and every City under the Sun; That he was the Teacher [b] of the Univerſe, and preſided [c] over all Churches: Which he repeats in many Places of his Writings. Nor was this Prerogative ſo peculiar to the Apoſtles, but that every Biſhop (in ſome meaſure) had a Right and Title to the ſame Character.

SECT. II. In what Reſpect the whole World but one Dioceſe, and but one Biſhoprick in the Church.

HENCE came that current Notion, ſo frequently to be met with in Cyprian, of but one Biſhoprick in the Church; wherein every ſingle Biſhop had his Share in ſuch a manner, as to have an equal Concern in the whole: Epiſcopatus unus eſt, cujus à ſingulis in ſolidum pars tenetur. [d] There is but one Biſhoprick in the Church: and every Biſhop has an undivided Portion in it. He does not ſay, it was a Monarchy, in the Hands of any ſingle Biſhop; but a diffuſive Power, that lay in the whole College of Biſhops, [e] every one of which had a Title to feed the whole Church of God, and drive away Hereſy out of any Part of it. In this Senſe, the Biſhop of Eugubium's Power extended as far as the Biſhop of Rome's; The Biſhop of Rhegium was as much Biſhop of the whole Church, as Conſtantinople; and Tanis equal to Alexandria: For in St. Jerom's [f] Language, they were all Ejuſdem Meriti, and ejuſdem Sacerdotii; of the ſame Merit, and equal in their Prieſthood, which was but one. In Things that did not appertain to the Faith, they were not to meddle with other Men's Dioceſes, but only to mind the Buſineſs of their own: But when the Faith or Welfare of the Church lay at ſtake, and Religion was manifeſtly invaded; then, by this Rule of there being but one Epiſcopacy, every other Biſhoprick was as much their Dioceſe as their own; And no Human Laws or Canon could tie up their Hands from performing ſuch Acts of their Epiſcopal Office in any part of the World, as they thought neceſſary for the Preſervation of Religion.

[t] Aug. cont. Epiſt. Pelag in Præfat. ad Bonifac. Communis eſt nobis omnibus, qui fungimur Epiſcopatus Officio (quamvis ipſe in eo celſiore faſtigio præmineas) Specula Paſtoralis.
[u] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Steph. p. 178. Iccirco copioſum Corpus eſt Sacerdotum, concordiæ mutuæ glutino atque Unitatis vinculo copulatum, ut ſi quis ex Collegio noſtro Hæreſin facere, & gregem Chriſti lacerare & vaſtare tentaverit, ſubveniant cæteri —— Nam etſi Paſtores multi ſumus, unum tamen Gregem paſcimus, & Oves univerſas, quas Chriſtus Sanguine ſuo & Paſſione quæſivit, colligere & fovere debemus. [w] Greg. Naz. Orat. 18. in Laud. Cypr. [x] Naz. in Laud. Athan. Or. 21. p. 377. τὴν οἰκουμένην πᾶσαν ἐπισασίαν πισδ'ξ. [y] Baſil. Ep. 52. ad Athanaſ. [z] Chryſ. Hom. 6. adv. Jud. T. 1. p. 542. τὴν τὴ οἰκουμένης πρεσβυσίαν ἐγκεχειρισμένον. [zz] Pſeudo-Clem. Ep. ad Jacob. ap. Coteler. Patr. Apoſt. T. 1. p. 611. Clemens Jacobo —— Regenti Hebræorum ſanctam Eccleſiam in Hieroſolymis; ſed & omnes Eccleſias, quæ ubique Dei Providentia fundatæ ſunt. [a] Chryſ. Hom. 17. in illud, Salutate Priſcillam. T. 5. p. 241. τὴν οἰκυμένην ἅπασ ἐγκεχειρισμένον, &c. [b] Id. Hom. 6. in Terræmotum & Lazar. T. 5. p. 107. τὴ οἰκυμένης διδάσκαλον. [c] Id. Hom. 17. in Priſcillam. p. 248. [d] Cypr. de Unit. Eccl. p. 108. [e] Id. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 112. Epiſcopatus unus, Epiſcoporum multorum concordi numeroſitate diffuſus, &c. In the ſame Epiſtle, he often mentions the Collegium Sacerdotale. It. Epiſt. 59. & 68. [f] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr.

SECT. III. Some particular Inſtances of Private Biſhops acting as Biſhops of the whole Univerſal Church.

FOR the better underſtanding the Church's Practice in this Point, I ſhall illuſtrate it in two or three particular Inſtances. It was a Rule in the Primitive Church, That no Biſhop ſhould Ordain in another's Dioceſe, without his Leave: And tho' this was a ſort of Confinement of the Epiſcopal Power to a ſingle Dioceſe, yet for Order ſake it was generally obſerved. But then it might happen, that in ſome Caſes there might be a Neceſſity to do otherwiſe: As in caſe the Biſhop of any Dioceſe was turned Heretick, and would Ordain none but Heretical Clergy, and perſecute and drive away the Orthodox: In that Caſe, any Catholick Biſhop, as being a Biſhop of the Univerſal Church, was authoriſed to Ordain Orthodox Men in ſuch a Dioceſe, tho' contrary to the common Rule; becauſe this was evidently for the Preſervation of the Faith, which is the Supreme Rule of all; and therefore that other Rule muſt give way to this ſuperior Obligation. Upon this account, when the Church was in danger of being over-run with Arianiſm, the great Athanaſius as he returned from his Exile, made no Scruple to Ordain in ſeveral Cities [g] as he went along, tho' they were not in his own Dioceſe. And the famous Euſebius of Samoſata did the like, in the Times of the Arian Perſecution under Valens. Theodoret [h] ſays, He went about all Syria, Phœnicia, and Paleſtine, in a Soldier's Habit; Ordaining Presbyters and Deacons, and ſetting in Order whatever he found wanting in the Churches. He Ordained Biſhops alſo in Syria and Cilicia, and other Places; whoſe Names Theodoret [i] has recorded. Now all this was contrary to the common Rules, but the Neceſſities of the Church required it; and That gave them Authority in ſuch a Caſe to exert their Power, and act as Biſhops of the whole Catholick Church. Epiphanius made uſe of the ſame Power and Privilege in a like Caſe; Ordaining Paulinianus, St. Jerom's Brother, firſt Deacon, and then Presbyter, in a Monaſtery out of his own Dioceſe in Paleſtine; againſt which, when ſome of his Adverſaries objected, that it was done contrary to Canon; he vindicated [k] his Practice upon the Strength of this Principle; That in Caſes of preſſing Neceſſity, ſuch as this was, where the Intereſt of God was to be ſerved, every Biſhop had Power to act in any part of the Church: For though all Biſhops had their particular Churches to officiate in, and were not ordinarily to exceed their own Bounds; yet the Love of Chriſt was a Rule above all: And therefore Men were not barely to conſider the thing that was done, but the Circumſtances of the Action, the Time, the Manner, the Perſons for whoſe ſake, and the End for which it was done. Thus Epiphanius apologizes for the Exerciſe of his Epiſcopal Power in the Dioceſe of another Man. Now from all this it appears, that every Biſhop was as much an Univerſal Biſhop, and had as much the Care of the whole Church, as the Biſhop of Rome himſelf; there being no Acts of the Epiſcopal Office, which they could not perform in any part of the World, when need required, without a Diſpenſation, as well as he. All that he enjoyed above others, was only the Rights of a Metropolitan, or a Patriarch, and thoſe confined by the Canons to a certain Diſtrict; of which more hereafter in their proper place.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Independency of Biſhops, eſpecially in the Cyprianick Age, and in the African Churches.

SECT. I. What meant by the Independency of Biſhops one of another, and their abſolute Power in their own Church.

THERE is one thing more muſt be taken notice of, whilſt we are conſidering the proper Office of Biſhops, which is the Abſolute Power of every Biſhop in his own Church, Independent of all others. For the right underſtanding the juſt Limits of this [g] Socrat. Lib. 2. c. 24. [h] Theod. Lib. 4. c. 13. [i] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 4. [k] Epiphan. Ep. ad Joan. Hieroſol. Ob Dei timorem hoc ſumus facere compulſi: Maximè cum nulla ſit diverſitas in Sacerdotio Dei, & ubi utilitati Dei providetur. Nam etſi ſinguli Eccleſiarum Epiſcopi habent ſub ſe Eccleſias, quibus cura videntur impendere, & nemo ſuper alienam menſuram extenditur; tamen præponitur omnibus Charitas Chriſti, in qua nulla ſimulatio eſt: nec conſiderandum quid factum ſit, ſed quo Tempore, & quo Modo, & in quibus, & quare factum ſit.

Power,

Power, we are to distinguish between the Substantial and the Ritual Part of Religion. For it was in the latter chiefly that Bishops had an absolute Power in their own Church, being at Liberty to use what indifferent Rites they thought fit in their own Church, without being accountable for their Practice to any other. In matters of Faith indeed, when they corrupted the Truth by Heretical Doctrines, or introduced any Rituals that were destructive of it, there they were obnoxious to the Censure of all other Bishops; and every individual of the whole Catholick College of Bishops (as has been noted in the last Chapter) was authorised to oppose them: But in such indifferent Rites as were Lawful to be used in the Church, every Bishop was allowed to chuse for himself, and his own Church, such as he thought fit and expedient in his own Wisdom and Discretion.

SECT. II. All Bishops had Liberty to form their own Liturgies.

THUS for Instance, though there was but one Form of Worship throughout the whole Church, as to what concerned the Substance of Christian Worship; yet every Bishop was at Liberty to form his own Liturgy in what Method and Words he thought proper, only keeping to the Analogy of Faith and sound Doctrine. Thus Gregory Nazianzen observes of St. Basil, that among other good Services which he did for the Church of Cæsarea, whilst he was but a Presbyter in it, one was [m] the composing of Forms of Prayer, which by the Consent and Authority of his Bishop Eusebius were used by the Church. And this is thought not improbably by some [n] to be the first Draught of that Liturgy, which bears his Name to this day. The Church of Neo-Cæsarea in Pontus, where St. Basil was born, had a Liturgy peculiar to themselves, which St. Basil [o] speaks of in one of his Epistles. Chrysostom's Liturgy, which he composed for the Church of Constantinople, differed from these. The Ambrosian Form differed from the Roman, and the Roman from others. The Africans had peculiar Forms of their own, differing from the Roman, as appears from some Passages cited by Victorinus Afer and Fulgentius, out of the African Liturgies, which Cardinal Bona [p] owns are not to be found in the Roman.

SECT. III. And express the same Creed in different Forms.

THE like Observation may be made upon the Creeds used in divers Churches. There was but one Rule of Faith, as Tertullian [q] calls it, and that fixt and unalterable, as to the Substance, throughout the whole Church. Yet there were different ways of Expressing it, as appears from the several Forms still extant, which differ something from one another. Those in [r] Irenæus, in [s] Cyprian, and Tertullian [t], are not exactly in the same Method nor Form of Words. The Creed of Eusebius [u] and his Church of Cæsarea differed from that of Jerusalem; upon which Cyril [w] comments; And that of Cyril's from that in St. James's [x] Liturgy. And to omit abundance more that might here be mentioned, the Creed of Aquileia recited by Ruffin [y] differs from the Roman Creed, which is that we commonly call the Apostles Creed. Now the Reason of all this Difference could be no other but this, that all Bishops had Power to frame the Creeds of their own Churches, and express them in such Terms as suited best their own Convenience, and to meet with the Heresies they were most in danger from: As Ruffin observes that the Words Invisible and Impassible were added to the first Article in the Creed of Aquileia, in Opposition to the Patripassim or Sabellian Hereticks, who asserted that the Father was Visible and Passible in Human Flesh, as well as the Son. And it is evident the Bishops of other Churches used the same Liberty, as they saw Occasion.

SECT. IV. And appoint particular Days of Fasting in their own Churches.

IT were easy to confirm this Observation by many other Instances of the like Nature; but I shall only name one more, which is the Power every Bishop had to appoint particular Days of Fasting in his own Church. This we learn from St. Austin's Answer to Casulanus about the Saturday Fast. Casulanus was very much troubled and perplexed about it, because he observed in Africk some Churches keep it a Fast, and others a Festival; nay sometimes in the same Church Men were divided in their Practice, and one part dined on that Day, whilst another fasted. Now to remove Casulanus his Scruple, St. Austin gives him [z] this Answer: That the best way in this case was to follow those who were the Rulers of every Church. Therefore if he would take his Advice, he should never resist his Bishop in this Matter, but do as he did without Doubt or Scruple. Which plainly implies, That it was then in every Bishop's Power to Order or not Order this Fast in his own Church, as he saw most convenient.

SECT. V. The Independency of Bishops most conspicuous in the African Churches.

AND indeed these Privileges of Bishops, and their Absolute and Independent Power in all such Matters, were no where more fully reserved to them, than in the African Churches, from the time of Cyprian, [m] Naz. Orat. 20. in Laud. Basil. p. 340. ἐυχῶν διατάξεις, καὶ ἐυλογιάς τε βήματος. [n] Billius Not. in Loc. Cave Hist. Liter. Vol. 1. p. 194. [o] Basil. Ep. 63. ad Neocæsar. [p] Bona Rer. Liturgic. Lib. 1. c. 7. n. 3. [q] Tertul. de veland. Virg. c. 1. Regula Fidei una omnium est, sola immobilis & irreformabilis, &c. [r] Iren. Lib. 1. c. 2. [s] Cypr. Ep. 70. ad Episc. Numid. p. 190. It. Ep. 76. al. 69. ad Magnum. p. 183. ed. Oxon. [t] Tertul. Ibid. [u] Euseb. Ep. ad Cæsarien. ap. Socrat. Lib. 1. c. 8. [w] Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. 4. [x] Liturg. Jacobi. Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. T. 2. p. 7. [y] Ruffin. in Symbol. Credo in Deum Patrem Omnipotentem, Invisibilem & Impassibilem. [z] Aug. Ep. 86. ad Casulan. Mos eorum mihi sequendus videtur, quibus eorum Populorum Congregatio regenda commissa est. Quapropter si Consilio meo acquiescis: Episcopo tuo in hac re noli resistere, & quod facit ipse, sine ullo scrupulo vel disceptatione sectare.

who

who frequently makes mention of this Independent Power; which extended not only to meer Rituals, but to ſeveral momentous Points of Diſcipline; ſuch as the Caſe of Rebaptizing Hereticks, admitting Adulterers to the Communion of the Church again, and the Queſtion about the Validity of Clinick Baptiſm. In theſe Points Cyprian's Opinion and Practice differed from others of his Fellow-Biſhops: But yet he aſſumed no Power of Cenſuring thoſe that acted differently from what he did, nor ſeparated from their Communion upon it; but left every one to give an Account of his own Practice to God the Judge of all. For the Caſe of Re-baptizing ſuch as were baptized by Hereticks, he was intirely for it, as is ſufficiently known to all: But he was not ſo Zealous for it, as to exerciſe any Judicial Power of Depoſing or Excommunicating thoſe who practiſed otherwiſe; but declares he left every Biſhop to his Liberty, to act according to his Judgment, and anſwer for what he did to God alone. To this purpoſe he expreſſes himſelf in his Letter to Pope [a] Stephen, and that to [b] Jubaianus; but moſt fully in his Speech delivered at the opening of the great Council of Carthage, which met to conſider this very Queſtion. Let us every one now, ſays he, give our Opinion of this Matter; [bb] Judging no Man, nor Repelling any from our Communion, that ſhall think otherwiſe. For no one of us makes himſelf Biſhop of Biſhops, or compels his Collegues by Tyrannical Terror to a Neceſſity of Complying; foraſmuch as every Biſhop, according to the Liberty and Power that is granted him, is free to act as he ſees fit; and can no more be judged by others, than he can judge them. But let us all expect the Judgment of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who only hath Power both to inveſt us with the Government of his Church, and to paſs Sentence upon our Actions. Thus far Cyprian in full and open Council declares for the Independent Power of every Biſhop, tacitly reflecting upon the Biſhop of Rome, who pretended to excommunicate thoſe who differed in Opinion and Practice from him, which Cyprian condemns as a Tyrannical way of proceeding.

FOR the next Point, that is, the Caſe of admitting Adulterers to Communion again, Cyprian ſays his Predeceſſors in Africk were divided upon the Queſtion; but they did not divide Communion upon it: For though ſome Biſhops admitted Adulterers to Penance, and others refuſed to do it, yet they did not Cenſure each others Practice, but preſerved Peace and Concord among [c] themſelves, leaving every one to anſwer to God for his Actions. I know indeed ſome Learned Perſons [d] interpret this Liberty of the African Biſhops ſo, as to make it mean no more than a Liberty to follow their own Judgment, till ſuch times as the Church ſhould determine the Matter in Diſpute, by making ſome Publick Decree about it: But I muſt own, I cannot but think Cyprian meant ſomething more, becauſe he pleads for the ſame Liberty even after the Decrees of a Plenary Council; as we have ſeen in his Preface to the Council of Carthage.

As to the Third Queſtion, about the Validity of Clinick Baptiſm, that is, whether Perſons who were only ſprinkled with Water in their Beds in time of Sickneſs, and not immerſed or waſhed all over the Body in Baptiſm, were to be looked upon as compleat Chriſtians; Cyprian for his own part reſolves it in the Affirmative: But yet, if any Biſhops were otherwiſe perſuaded, that it was not Lawful Baptiſm, and upon that ground gave ſuch Perſons a new Immerſion, he profeſſes [e] that he preſcribes to none, but leaves every one to act according to his own Judgment and Diſcretion. This was that ancient Liberty of the Cyprianick Age, of which I have diſcourſed a little more particularly in this place, becauſe it ſhews us what was then the uncontеſted Power and Privilege of every Biſhop in the African Church, which is not ſo commonly underſtood in theſe latter Ages.

[a] Cypr. Ep. 72. ad Steph. p. 197. Qua in re nec nos vim cuiquam facimus, aut Legem damus, cum habeat in Eccleſiæ adminiſtratione voluntatis ſuæ arbitrium liberum unuſquiſque præpoſitus, rationem actus ſui Domino redditurus. [b] Ep. 73. ad Jubaian. p. 210. [bb] Con. Carth. ap. Cypr. p. 229. Supereſt ut de hac ipſa re ſinguli quid ſentiamus, proferamus; neminem judicantes, aut à jure Communionis aliquem, ſi diverſum ſenſerit, amoventes. Neque enim quiſquam noſtrum Epiſcopum ſe Epiſcoporum conſtituit, aut Tyrannico terrore ad obſequendi neceſſitatem Collegas ſuos adigit; quando habeat omnis Epiſcopus pro licentia Libertatis & Poteſtatis ſuæ, arbitrium proprium; tamque judicari ab alio non poſſit, quam nec ipſe poteſt judicare. Sed exſpectemus univerſi Judicium Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti, qui unus & ſolus habet poteſtatem & præponendi nos in Eccleſiæ ſuæ Gubernatione, & de actu noſtro judicandi. [c] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 110. [d] Biſhop Fell, Not. in Loc. citat. [e] Cypr. Ep. 76. al. 69. ad Magnum. p. 186. Qua in parte nemini verecundia & modeſtia noſtra præjudicat, quo minus unuſquiſque quod putat, ſentiat, & quod ſenſerit, faciat. It. p. 188. Nemini præſcribentes, quo minus ſtatuat quod putat unuſquiſque præpoſitus; actus ſui rationem Domino redditurus.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Power of Biſhops in Hearing and Determining Secular Cauſes.

SECT. I. Biſhops commonly choſen Arbitrators of Mens Differences in the Primitive Church

WE have hitherto conſidered ſuch Offices of the Epiſcopal Function, as belonged to all Biſhops by the Laws of God and the Canons of the Church: Beſides theſe there was one Office more impoſed upon them by Cuſtom, and the Laws of the State; which was the Hearing and Determining Secular Cauſes, upon the continual Applications and Addreſſes that People made to them. For ſuch was the Singular Character and Repute of Biſhops, and ſuch the entire Confidence Men generally repoſed in them for their Integrity and Juſtice, that they were commonly appealed to, as the beſt Arbitrators of Men's Differences, and the moſt Impartial Judges of the common Diſputes that happened among them. Sidonius Apollinaris [f] often refers to this Cuſtom: And Syneſius calls it [g] part of his own Epiſcopal Office and Function. St. Ambroſe teſtifies for himſelf [h] that he was uſed to be appealed to upon ſuch Occaſions; and St. Auſtin [i] ſays of him, that he was often ſo much employed in hearing Cauſes, that he had ſcarce time for other Buſineſs. And this was St. Auſtin's Caſe alſo, who frequently complains of the Burden [k] that lay upon him in this reſpect. For not only Chriſtians, but Men of all Sects applied to him: Inſomuch that as Poſſidius [l] notes in his Life, he often ſpent all the Morning, and ſometimes the whold Day Faſting and Hearing their Cauſes; which though it was a great Fatigue to him, yet he was willing to bear it, becauſe it gave him frequent Opportunities of inſtilling the Principles of Truth and Virtue into the Minds of the Parties that applied themſelves to him.

SECT. II. The Original of this Cuſtom What meant by the Word ἐξουθενημένοι in St. Paul, 1 Cor. 6. 4.

AND it is to be obſerved, that though there be no expreſs Text in the New Teſtament that commands Biſhops to be Judges in Secular Cauſes, yet St. Auſtin was of Opinion, that St. Paul in prohibiting Men to go to Law before the Unbelievers, did virtually lay this Obligation upon them. For he ſays once and again [m] that it was the Apoſtle that inſtituted Eccleſiaſtical Judges, and laid the Burden of Secular Cauſes upon them. By which he means, that the Apoſtle gave a general Direction to Chriſtians to chuſe Arbitrators among themſelves; and that Cuſtom determined this Office particularly to the Biſhops, as the beſt qualified by their Wiſdom and Probity to diſcharge it. And this is very agreeable to St. Paul's meaning, 1 Cor. 6. 4. as ſome very Learned and Judicious Criticks [n] underſtand him. For though all the common Tranſlations render the Words, ἐξουθενημένους ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, Perſons that are leaſt eſteemed in the Church: Yet Dr. Lightfoot obſerves, that they may as well ſignify Perſons of the greateſt Eſteem. For the Original Word, ἐξουθενημένους, ſignifies only private Judges, or Arbitrators of Men's own chuſing, ſuch as were in uſe among the Jews, who called them יחידים, & non-Authentici, not becauſe they were of the Meaneſt and moſt Contemptible of the People, but becauſe they were the loweſt Rank of Judges, and not ſettled as a ſtanding Court by the Sanhedrim, but choſen by the Litigants themſelves to arbitrate their Cauſes. Such Private Judges the Apoſtle directs the Chriſtians to chuſe in the Church, and refer their Controverſies to them: Which is not any Injunction to chuſe Judges out of the pooreſt and meaneſt, and moſt ignorant of the People, but rather the contrary, Perſons that were well qualified by their Wiſdom and Authority, to take upon them to be Judges, and end Controverſies among their Brethren. Now becauſe none were thought better qualified in theſe Reſpects than Biſhops, the Office of Judging upon that account was commonly impoſed upon them, and they in Decency and Charity could not well refuſe it. This ſeems to be the true Original of this part of the Epiſcopal Office and Function.

SECT. III. This Power of Biſhops confirmed by the Imperial Laws.

BUT what was thus begun by Cuſtom, while the Civil Governours were Heathens, was afterward confirmed and eſtabliſhed by Law, when the Emperors became Chriſtians. Euſebius [o] ſays, Conſtantine made a Law to confirm all ſuch Deciſions of Biſhops in their Conſiſtories, and that no Secular Judges ſhould have any Power to reverſe or diſannul them; Foraſmuch as the Prieſts of God were to be preferred before any other Judge. And Sozomen [p] adds, that he gave leave to all Litigants to refer their Cauſes to the Determination of Biſhops, whoſe Sentence ſhould ſtand good, and be as Authentick as if it had been the Deciſion of the Emperor himſelf: And that the Governors of every Province and their Officers ſhould be obliged to put their Decrees in Execution. There is a Law now added at the end of the Theodoſian Code, which ſome take for this very Law of Conſtantine mentioned by theſe Authors. Selden himſelf reckons [q] it a genuine Piece; but I think Gothofred's Arguments are ſtronger to prove it ſpurious. For it grants Biſhops ſuch a Power, as neither Euſebius nor Sozomen mention, and all other Laws contradict: viz. That if either of the contending Parties, the Poſſeſſor [r] or the Plaintiff, was minded to bring the Cauſe before a Biſhop, either when it was before a Secular Court, or when it was determined, he might do it, though the other Party was againſt it. Whereas all Laws and Hiſtory are againſt this Practice: For no Cauſe was to be brought before a Biſhop, except both Parties agreed by way of Com-promiſe to take him for their Arbitrator. In this Caſe the Biſhop's Sentence was Valid, and to be executed by the Secular Power, but not otherwiſe. So that either this was not the Genuine Law of Conſtantine, to which Euſebius and Sozomen refer, or elſe it was revoked and contradicted by all others. Gothofred produces a great many contrary Laws: I ſhall content my ſelf with a ſingle Inſtance.

[f] Sidon. Lib. 3. Ep. 12. Lib. 6. Ep. 2, & 4. [g] Syneſ. Ep. 105. p. 399. [h] Ambroſ. Ep. 24. ad Marcellum. [i] Aug. Confeſſ. Lib. 6. c. 3. [k] Aug. Ep. 110. & 147. It. de Opere Monach. c. 29. [l] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 19. [m] Aug. Ser. 24. in Pſal. 118. Conſtituit talibus Cauſis Eccleſiaſticos Apoſtolus Cognitores, in Foro prohibens jurgare Chriſtianos. Id. de Oper. Monach. c. 29. Quibus nos moleſtiis affixit Apoſtolus, &c. [n] Lightfoot, & Lud. de Dieu in 1 Cor. 6. 4. [o] Euſeb. de vit. Conſtant. Lib. 4. c. 27. [p] Sozom. Lib. 1. c. 9.

SECT. IV. Yet not allowed in Criminal Cauſes; nor in any Cauſes, but when the Litigants both agreed to take them for Arbitrators.

IN the Juſtinian Code [s] we have two Laws of the Emperors Arcadius and Honorius about the ſame Matter, which may ſerve to explain the Law of Conſtantine. For there any Biſhops are allowed to judge, and their Judgment is ordered to be Final, ſo as no Appeal ſhould be made from it; and the Officers of the Secular Judges are appointed to execute the Biſhops Sentence: But then there are theſe Two Limitations expreſly put: 1ſt, That they ſhall only have Power to judge, when both Parties agree by Conſent to refer their Cauſes to their Arbitration. And, 2dly, where Cauſes are purely Civil, and not Criminal Cauſes, where perhaps Life and Death might be concerned. For in ſuch Cauſes the Clergy were prohibited by the Canons [t] of the Church, as well as the Laws of the State, from being concerned as Judges. Therefore Biſhops never ſuffered any Criminal Cauſes to come before them, except ſuch as were to be puniſhed with Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures.

SECT. V. Biſhops ſometimes made their Presbyters, and ſometimes Laymen their Subſtitutes in this Affair.

BUT they had commonly Civil Cauſes more than enough flowing in upon them. So that they were forced ſometimes to let part of this Care devolve upon ſome other Perſon, whoſe Integrity and Prudence they could confide in. This was commonly one of their Clergy, a Preſbyter or a Principal Deacon. St. Auſtin, when he found the Burden of this Affair begin to preſs too hard upon him, ſubſtituted Eradius his Presbyter [u] in his room. And the Council of Tarragone ſpeaks not only of Presbyters but [w] Deacons alſo, who were deputed to hear Secular Cauſes. And Socrates ſays, [x] Sylvanus Biſhop of Troas took the Power wholly out of the Hands of his Clergy, becauſe he had found ſome of them faulty in making an unlawful Gain of the Cauſes that were brought before them; for which Reaſon he never deputed any one of them to be Judge, but made ſome Layman his Delegate, whom he knew to be a Man of Integrity, and ſtrict Lover of Juſtice. I leave the Learned to enquire, whether Lay-Chancellors in the Church had not their firſt Riſe and Original from ſome ſuch Occaſion as this, whilſt Biſhops deputed Laymen to hear Secular Cauſes in their Name, ſtill reſerving the proper Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Power entirely to themſelves.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Privilege of Biſhops to intercede for Criminals.

SECT. I. Of the great Power and Intereſt of Biſhops in Interceding to the Secular Magiſtrates.

I Have obſerved in the foregoing Chapter, that Biſhops were never allowed to be Judges in Capital or Criminal Cauſes, becauſe they were not to be concerned in Blood: They were to be ſo far from having any thing to do in the Death of any Man, that Cuſtom made it almoſt a piece of their Office and Duty to ſave Men from Death, by Interceding to the Secular Magiſtrates for Criminals that were condemned to die. St. Ambroſe often made uſe of this Privilege, as the Author of his Life obſerves; frequently addreſſing himſelf to [y] Macedonius, and Stilico [z], and other great Miniſters of the Age, in behalf of poor Delinquents, to obtain Pardon for them. St. Auſtin did the ſame for the Circumcellions, when they were convicted and [q] Selden Uxor. Hebr. Lib. 3. c. 28. p. 564. [r] Extravag. de Elect. Judicii Epiſcop. ad Calcem Cod. Theod. T. 4. p. 303. Quicunque Litem habens, ſive Poſſeſſor, ſive Petitor erit, inter initia Litis, vel decurſis temporum curriculis, ſive cum negotium peroratur, ſive cum jam cœperit promi ſententia, Judicium eligit ſacroſanctæ Legis Antiſtitis, ilico ſine aliqua dubitatione, etiamſi alia Pars refragatur, ad Epiſcopum cum ſermone Litigantium dirigatur. Vid. Gothofred. Comment. in Loc.

[s] Cod. Juſtin. Lib. 1. Tit. 4. Leg. 7. Si qui ex Conſenſu apud Sacræ Legis Antiſtitem litigare voluerint, non vetabuntur. Sed experientur illius in Civili duntaxat negotio, more Arbitri ſponte reſidentis Judicium. Ibid. Leg. 8. Epiſcopale judicium ratum ſit omnibus, qui ſe audiri à Sacerdotibus elegerint; eamque eorum Judicationi adhibendam eſſe reverentiam jubemus, quam veſtris deferri neceſſe eſt Potestatibus, à quibus non licet provocare, &c.

[t] Concil. Tarracon. can. 4. Habeant Licentiam Judicandi, exceptis Criminalibus Negotiis. [u] Aug. Ep. 110. [w] Con. Tarracon. c. 4. Nullus Epiſcoporum, Presbyterorum, vel Clericorum, Die Dominico propoſitum cujuſcunque cauſæ negotium audeat judicare. [x] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 37. [y] Paulin. vit. Ambroſ. p. 8. [z] Ibid. p. 12.

con-

condemned for Murdering ſome of the Catholick Clergy: He wrote two Pathetick Letters [a] to the African Magiſtrates, Marcellinus Comes, and Apringius, deſiring that their Lives might be ſpared, and that they might only be puniſhed with cloſe Cuſtody and Confinement, where they might be ſet to Work, and have time allowed them for Repentance. The Council [b] of Sardica ſeems to ſpeak of it as the Duty of all Biſhops to intercede for ſuch as implored the Mercy of the Church, when they were Condemned to be Tranſported or Baniſhed, or any the like Puniſhment. And the Cuſtom was become ſo general, that it began to be conſidered as a Condition in the Election of a Biſhop, whether he were qualified to diſcharge this part of his Office as well as others. Sidonius Apollinaris [c] inſtances in ſuch a Caſe, where it was made an Objection by the People againſt the Election of a certain Biſhop, that being a Man of a Monkiſh and retired Life, he was fitter to be an Abbot than a Biſhop: He might intercede, they ſaid, indeed with the heavenly Judge for their Souls, but he was not qualified to intercede with the earthly Judges for their Bodies. He was not a Man of Addreſs, which they then thought neceſſary to diſcharge this part of the Office of a Biſhop. They might perhaps judge wrong, as thoſe in St. Jerom [d] did, who pretended that Clergymen ought to give ſplendid Entertainments to the Secular Judges, that they might gain an Intereſt in them: whom St. Jerom juſtly reproves, telling them, that any Judge would pay a greater Reverence to a Pious and Sober Clergyman, than to a Wealthy one, and would reſpect him more for his Holineſs than his Riches. However, this ſhews what was then the common Cuſtom, and how great an Intereſt Biſhops generally had in the Secular Magiſtrate, who ſeldom rejected any Petitions of this Nature. Socrates notes, that even ſome of the Novatian Biſhops enjoyed this Privilege, as Paulus [e] of Conſtantinople, and Leontius [f] of Rome, at whoſe Interceſſion Theodoſius the Emperor pardoned Symmachus, who had been guilty of Treaſon, in making a Panegyrick upon Maximus the Tyrant, but was after his Death fled for Sanctuary to a Chriſtian Church.

SECT. II. The Reaſons why Biſhops interceded for ſome Criminals, and not others.

WE may here obſerve that Crimes in themſelves of a very heinous Nature, ſuch as Treaſon and Murder, were ſometimes pardoned at their Requeſt: But we are not to imagine that Biſhops at any time turned Patrons for Criminals, to the Obſtruction of Publick Juſtice (which would have been to have cut the Sinews of Government) but only in ſuch Caſes, where Pardon would manifeſtly be for the Benefit and Honour both of the Church and Commonwealth; or elſe where the Crimes themſelves had ſome ſuch alleviating Circumſtances, as might incline a compaſſionate Judge to grant a Pardon. As when St. Ambroſe interceded with Stilico for the Pardon of ſome poor deluded Wretches, whom Stilico's own Servant by Forgery had drawn into an Error. Their Ignorance might reaſonably be pleaded in their behalf. And when St. Auſtin petitioned for favour to be ſhewed to the Circumcellions, it was, he thought, for the Honour of the Church, to free her from the Suſpicion and Charge of Revenge and Cruelty, which the Donatiſts were ſo ready to caſt upon her. And therefore he deſired Apringius [g] the Proconſul, to ſpare them for the ſake of Chriſt and his Church, as well as to give them time to ſee their Error, and repent of it.

SECT. III. They never interceded in Civil Matters, and Pecuniary Cauſes.

IT muſt farther be noted from St. Ambroſe, that Biſhops, though they themſelves were ſometimes choſen Judges in Civil Cauſes; yet never interceded for any Man in ſuch Cauſes to the Secular Judges. And he gives a very good Reaſon [h] for it: Becauſe, in pecuniary Cauſes, where Two Parties are concern'd, a Biſhop could not intercede for one Party, but the other would be injured, and have Reaſon to think he loſt his Cauſe by the Intereſt and Favour of the Interceſſor inclining to the adverſe Party. For which Reaſon, there are no Examples of their Interceding in ſuch Caſes.

[a] Aug. Ep. 159, & 160. [b] Con. Sardic. Can. 7. [c] Sidon. Lib. 7. Ep. 9. p. 443. Hic qui nominatur, inquiunt, non Epiſcopi, ſed potius Abbatis complet officium: Et intercedere magis pro Animabus apud Cœleſtem, quam pro Corporibus apud Terrenum Judicem poteſt. [d] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. p. 15. Quod ſi obtenderis te facere hæc, ut roges pro miſeris atque ſubjectis: Judex Seculi plus deferet Clerico Continenti, quam Diviti, & magis ſanctitatem tuam venerabitur quam opes. [e] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 17. [f] Id. Lib. 5. cap. 14. [g] Aug. Ep. 160. Illi impio ferro fuderunt Sanguinem Chriſtianum: Tu ab eorum Sanguine etiam Juridicum gladium cohibe propter Chriſtum ——— Tu inimicis Eccleſiæ Viventibus relaxa ſpatium pœnitendi. [h] Ambroſ. de Offic. Lib. 3. c. 9. In Cauſis Pecuniariis intervenire non eſt Sacerdotis, &c.

CHAP. IX.

Of ſome particular Honours and Inſtances of Reſpect ſhewed to Biſhops, by all Perſons in general.

SECT. I. Of the ancient Cuſtom of Bowing the Head, to receive the Benediction of Biſhops.

THERE are ſeveral other Privileges belonging to Biſhops, in common with the reſt of the Clergy; ſuch as their Exemption from Burdenſome Offices, and ſome ſort of Taxes, and the Cognizance of the Secular Courts in ſome Caſes; of which I ſhall ſay nothing particularly here, becauſe they will be conſider'd when we treat of the Privileges of the Clergy in general. But there are two or three Cuſtoms, which argued a particular Reſpect paid to Biſhops, and therefore I muſt not here wholly paſs them over. One of theſe was the ancient Cuſtom of Bowing the Head before them, to receive their Bleſſing: A Cuſtom ſo univerſally prevailing, that the Emperors themſelves did not refuſe to comply with it: As may appear from that Diſcourſe of Hilary [i] to Conſtantius; where he tells him, He entertained the Biſhop with a Kiſs, with which Chriſt was betrayed; and bowed his Head to receive their Benediction, whilſt he trampled on their Faith. This plainly refers to the Cuſtom we are ſpeaking of. And by it we may underſtand the meaning of Theodoret, when he ſays [k], The Emperor Valentinian gave Orders to the Biſhops, who were met to make choice of the Biſhop of Milan; That they ſhould place ſuch an one on the Biſhop's Throne, of that Eminency for Life and Doctrine, that the Emperors themſelves might not be aſhamed to bow their Heads to him. The ſame Cuſtom is more plainly hinted by St. Chryſoſtom, in one of his Homilies [l] to the People of Antioch; where ſpeaking of Flavian their Biſhop, who was gone to the Emperor to procure a Pardon for them; he ſays, Flavian was a Prince, and a more Honourable Prince than the other: Foraſmuch as the Sacred Laws made the Emperor ſubmit his Head to the Hands of the Biſhop. He ſpeaks of no other Submiſſion, but only this, in receiving the Biſhop's Benediction. For in other reſpects, the Prieſts in thoſe Days were always ſubject to the Emperors. He that would ſee more Proofs of this Cuſtom, may conſult Valeſius, who [m] has collected a great many Paſſages out of other Authors relating to it. I ſhall only add here that Reſcript of Honorius and Valentinian, which ſays, Biſhops were the Perſons to whom all the World bow'd the Head; Quibus omnis terra caput inclinat.

SECT. II. Of Kiſſing their Hands.

SUCH another Cuſtomary Reſpect was paid them, by Kiſſing their Hand; which ſeems to have accompany'd the former Ceremony: For St. Ambroſe [n] joins them both together, ſaying, That Kings and Princes did not diſdain to bend and bow their Necks to the Knees of the Prieſts, and kiſs their Hands; thinking themſelves protected by their Prayers. Paulinus ſays [o], the People paid this Reſpect commonly to St. Ambroſe. And Chryſoſtom ſpeaking of Meletius Biſhop of Antioch, ſays [p], At his firſt coming to the City, the whole Multitude went out to meet him, and as many as could come near him, laid hold on his Feet, and kiſſed his Hands. They that pleaſe to ſee more of this Cuſtom, may conſult Sidonius [q] Apollinaris, and Savaro's Learned Notes [r] upon him; who cites Ennodius, and ſeveral other Authors to the ſame purpoſe.

SECT. III. The Cuſtom, of Singing Hoſanna's to them ſometimes uſed, but not approved.

St. Jerom mentions another Cuſtom, which he condemns, as [s] doing too great an Honour to mere Mortal Men; which was, The People's Singing Hoſanna's to their Biſhops, as the Multitude did to our Saviour at his Entrance into Jeruſalem. Valeſius [t] cites a Paſſage out of Antonius's Itinerary to the ſame purpoſe; where the Form of Words is, Bleſſed be ye of the Lord, and bleſſed be your Coming; Hoſanna in the Higheſt. Some alſo underſtand Hegeſippus [u] in the ſame Senſe; where ſpeaking of the Preaching of James Biſhop of Jeruſalem, he ſays, The People that were converted by his Diſcourſe, cried out, Hoſanna to the Son of David. Scaliger underſtands this as ſpoken to James himſelf: But others [w] take it for a Doxology, or Acclamation to Chriſt, whom they glorify'd upon the Teſtimony that James had given him: And this ſeems to be the truer Senſe of that place; however, in the other Acceptation there is nothing contrary to Cuſtom in it, as appears from what [i] Hilar. adv. Conſtant. p. 95. Oſculo Sacerdotes excipis, quo & Chriſtus eſt proditus: Caput Benedictioni ſummittis, ut Fidem calces. [k] Theod. Lib. 4. c. 6. ὅπως αὐτῷ τὰς ἡμετέρας ὑποκλίνωμεν κεφαλάς. [l] Chryſ. Hom. 3. ad Pop. Antioch. T. 1. p. 48. [m] Valeſ. Not. in Theod. Lib. 4. c. 6. [n] Ambroſ. de Dignit. Sacerd. c. 2. Quippe cum videas Regum colla & Principum ſubmitti gentibus Sacerdotum, & exoſculatis eorum dexteris, Orationibus eorum credant ſe communiri. [o] Paulin. Vit. Ambroſ. p. 2, & 3. [p] Chryſ. Hom. 45. in Melet. T. 1. p. 593. [q] Sidon. Lib. 7. Ep. 11. Sancti Gallicini manu oſculata. Id. Lib. 7. Ep. 11. [r] Savaro Not. in Sidon. Lib. 8. Epiſt. 11. p. 532. [s] Hieron. in Mat. 21. T. 9. p. 62. Videant ergo Epiſcopi, & quantumlibet Sancti homines, cum quanto periculo dici iſta ſibi patiantur, &c. [t] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 23. [u] Hegeſip. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 2. c. 23. Πολλῶν δοξαζόντων ἐπὶ τῇ μαρτυρίᾳ τῷ Ιακώβῳ, καὶ λεγόντων, ὡσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δαβίδ. [w] Grabe Spicileg. Sæc. 2. p. 207. tranſlates it thus: Multi hoc Jacobi Teſtimonio confirmati glorificabant (Jeſum) dicentes, Hoſanna Filio David.

has

has been ſaid. I do not inſiſt upon what St. Jerom in another place ſays [x] farther of this Biſhop of Jeruſalem; That he was a Man of ſuch celebrated Fame among the People, for his great Sanctity, that they ambitiouſly ſtrove to touch the Hem of his Garment: For this Honour was not paid him as a Biſhop, but as a moſt Holy Man; who was indeed, according to the Character given him by Hegeſippus and Epiphanius, a Man of ſingular Abſtinence and Piety, and one of the Miracles of the Age he lived in. So that this was a ſingular Honour done to him, for his ſingular Holineſs and Virtue.

SECT. IV. What meant by the Corona Sacerdotalis, and the Form of Saluting Biſhops per Coronam.

BUT to proceed with the common Honours paid to Biſhops. Another Inſtance of Reſpect, may be obſerved in the uſual Forms of Addreſſing them: For when Men ſpake to them, they commonly prefaced their Diſcourſe with ſome Title of Honour, ſuch as that of Precor Coronam, and Per Coronam veſtram; which we may Engliſh, Your Honour and Dignity; literally, Your Crown. This Form often occurrs in Sidonius Apollinaris, Ennodius, St. Jerom [y] and others. St. Auſtin ſays, Both the Catholicks [z] and Donatiſts uſed it, when they ſpake to the Biſhops of either Party; giving them very reſpectful Titles, and intreating, or rather adjuring them Per Coronam, that they would hear and determine their Secular Cauſes.

SECT. V. Whether Biſhops anciently wore a Mitre, or any the like Ornament.

THE Uſe of this Form of Speech then is plain, but the Reaſon of it is not ſo evident. Savaro [a] and ſome others fancy it reſpected the Ancient Figure of the Clerical Tonſure; by which the Hair was cut into a Round from the Crown of the Head downwards. Others think it came from the Ornament which Biſhops wore upon their Head; and that they will needs have to be a Crown or Mitre. Whereas, it does not appear that Biſhops had any ſuch Ornament in thoſe Days. I know indeed, both Valeſius [b] and Petavius [c] are very confident, that all Biſhops (from the very firſt) had an appendant Badge of Honour on their Foreheads, which they ſay was the ſame with the Petalum, or Golden Plate, which the Jewiſh High-Prieſts wore: And it cannot be denied, but that as ancient an Author as Polycrates [d], mentioned both by Euſebius and St. Jerom ſays, That St. John was a Prieſt, wearing a Petalum: And Epiphanius [e] ſays the ſame of James Biſhop of Jeruſalem. But this was not ſpoken of them as Chriſtian Biſhops, but on Preſumption of their having been Jewiſh Prieſts, and of the Family of Aaron. Valeſius himſelf cites a MS. Paſſion of St. Mark, which ſets the ſame Ornament on his Head, and gives this very Reaſon for it: It is reported, ſays he, that St. Mark, according to the Rites of the Carnal Sacrifice, wore the Chief Prieſt's Petalum among the Jews: which gives us plainly to [f] underſtand, ſays that Author, that he was one of the Tribe of Levi, and of the Family of Aaron. So he did not take this for the Ornament of a Chriſtian Biſhop, but a Jewiſh Prieſt; and that opens the way for us to underſtand what the other Authors meant by it, however Valeſius chanced not to obſerve it. Now if it cannot be proved, that Biſhops anciently wore any ſuch Ornament as this, it will much leſs follow that they wore a Royal Crown, or Mitre, as Spondanus [g] aſſerts they did, and thence deduces the Cuſtom of addreſſing them Per Coronam; therein deſerting his great Maſter Baronius, who aſſigns another Reaſon for it. After all, it ſeems moſt probable, that it was no more than a Metaphorical Expreſſion, uſed to denote the Honour and Dignity of the Epiſcopal Order: Tho' I do not deny that the Clerical Tonſure was ſometimes called Corona; but that was not peculiar to Biſhops, but common to all the Clergy.

SECT. VI. Of the Titles Ἁγιώτατοι, Sanctiſſimi, &c.

IT will not be improper to add, while we are upon this Point, that it was uſual in Men's Addreſſes to Biſhops, or in ſpeaking of them, to mention their Names with ſome Additional Title of Reſpect, ſuch as Θεοφιλέστατοι, and Ἁγιώτατοι, moſt Dear to God, and moſt Holy Fathers: Which Titles occur frequently in the Emperor's Reſcripts in the Civil [h] Law, and were of ſuch common Uſe in thoſe Times, that Socrates (when he comes to the Sixth Book of his Hiſtory, which treats of his own times) thinks himſelf obliged to make ſome Apology [i] for not giving the Biſhops that were then living theſe Titles. Which I the rather note, becauſe of the Vanity of ſome, who reckon the Title, Moſt Holy Father, the Pope's ſole prerogative; and to correct the Malice of others, who will not allow a Proteſtant Biſhop to receive that Title, without the Suſpicion and Imputation of Popery. As if St. Auſtin and St. Jerom had been to blame, becauſe the one wrote, and the other received Epiſtles always thus inſcribed; Domino vere Sancto, & Beatiſſimo Papæ Auguſti-

[x] Hieron. Com. in Gal. 1. Jacobus Epiſcopus Hieroſolymorum primus fuit, cognomento Juſtus; Vir tantæ ſanctitatis & rumoris in populo, ut Fimbriam veſtimenti ejus certatim cuperent attingere. [y] Sidon. Lib. 6. Ep. 3. Auctoritas Coronæ tuæ, &c. Id. Lib. 7. Ep. 8. ad Euphron. De minimis rebus Coronam tuam maximiſque conſulerem. Ennod. Lib. 4. Ep. 29. ad Symmac. Lib. 5. Ep. 17. ad Marcellinum. Lib. 9. Ep. 27. ad Aurelian. Hieron. Ep. 26. ad Auguſt. inter Epiſt. Aug. Precor Coronam tuam. [z] Aug. Ep. 147. ad Proculeian. Epiſc. partis Donati. Honorant nos veſtri, honorant vos noſtri. Per Coronam noſtram nos adjurant veſtri; per Coronam veſtram, vos adjurant noſtri. [a] Savaro Not. in Sidon. Lib. 6. Ep. 3. Baron. an. 58. n. 134. [b] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. Lib. 5. c. 24. [c] Petav. Not. in Epiph. Hær. 78. n. 14. [d] Polycrat. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 5. c. 24. [e] Epiphan. Hær. 29. n. 2. It. 78. n. 14. [f] Auctor MS. Paſſion. S. Marc. ap. Valeſ. ibid. B. Marcum juxta ritum carnalis Sacrificii, Pontificalis apicis Petalum in populo geſtaſſe Judæorum, illuſtrium virorum Syngraphæ declarant: Ex quo manifeſtè datur intelligi, de ſtirpe eum Levitica, imo Pontificis Aaron ſacræ Succeſſionis Originem habuiſſe. [g] Spondan. Epitom. Baron. an. 58. n. 54. [h] Juſtin. Novel. 8, 40, 42, 67, 86, &c. Concil. Chalced. Act. 10. [i] Socrat. Procem. ad Lib. 6.

no. See St. Auſtin's Epiſt. 11, 13, 14, 17, 18, 21. where St. Jerom and others give him thoſe honourable Titles.

SECT. VII. Biſhops diſtinguiſhed by their Throne in the Church.

THERE is one thing more that muſt not be omitted, becauſe it was the common Honour and Privilege of all Biſhops, to be diſtinguiſhed in the Church by a Chair, or Seat, which was commonly called their Throne. Thus [k] Euſebius calls the Biſhop of Jeruſalem's Seat, Θρόνον Αποστολικὸν, the Apoſtolical Throne; becauſe St. James, Biſhop of Jeruſalem, firſt ſat in it. And for the ſame Reaſon, Gregory Nazianzen [l] calls the Biſhop of Alexandria's Seat, the Throne of St. Mark. It was otherwiſe called Βῆμα, and Θρόνος ὑψηλὸς, the High Throne; becauſe it was exalted ſomething higher than the Seats of the Presbyters, which were on each ſide of it, and were called the Second Thrones; as we ſhall ſee hereafter, when we come to ſpeak of Presbyters. All that I ſhall obſerve farther here concerning this Throne of the Biſhop, is, That tho' it be ſometimes called the High and Lofty Throne, eſpecially by thoſe Writers [m] who ſpeak in a Rhetorical Strain; yet that is only meant comparatively, in reſpect of the lower Seats of Presbyters: For otherwiſe, it was a Fault in any Biſhop to build himſelf a Pompous and Splendid Throne, in Imitation of the State and Grandeur of the Secular Magiſtrates. This was one of the Crimes which the Council of Antioch [n], in their Synodical Epiſtle againſt Paulus Samoſatenſis, laid to his Charge, That he built himſelf an high and ſtately Tribunal, not as a Diſciple of Chriſt, but as one of the Rulers of the World; making a Secretum to it, in Imitation of the Secular Magiſtrates; whoſe Tribunals had a Place railed out from the reſt, and ſeparated by a Veil, which they called the Secretum; and the Ambitious Biſhop gave his the ſame Name; by which and ſome other ſuch like Practices, he raiſed the Envy and Hatred of the Heathens againſt the Chriſtians, as they there complain of him. It was then the great Care of the Chriſtian Church, to obſerve a Decorum in the Honours which ſhe beſtowed upon her Biſhops; that they might be ſuch as might ſet them above Contempt, but keep them below Envy; make them Venerable, but not miniſter to Vanity, or the outward Pomp and Oſtentation of Secular Greatneſs.

CHAP. X.

Of the Age, and ſome particular Qualifications required in ſuch as were to be Ordained Biſhops.

SECT. I. Biſhops not to be Ordained under 30 Years of Age, except they were Men of extraordinary worth.

THOSE Qualifications of Biſhops, which were common to them with the reſt of the Clergy, ſhall be ſpoken of hereafter: Here I ſhall only take notice of a few that were more peculiar to them. Such as, firſt, their Age; which by the Canons was required to be at leaſt Thirty Years. The Council of Neocæſarea [o] requires Thirty in Presbyters; which is a certain Argument that the ſame Age was requiſite in a Biſhop. The Council of Agde [p] more expreſly limits their Age to that time; requiring all Metropolitans to inſiſt upon it in their Ordination. The Reaſons given by theſe Councils are; Becauſe our Saviour himſelf did not begin to teach before he was Thirty Years old; and becauſe that is the perfect Age of Man. Therefore, tho' a Man was otherwiſe never ſo well qualify'd, the Council of Neocæſarea ſays, he ſhall wait, and not be Ordained ſo much as Presbyter before that time. But whether this Rule was always obſerved from the days of the Apoſtles, may be queſtioned: For there is no ſuch Rule given by the Apoſtles in Scripture. That which goes under their Name in the Conſtitutions [q], requires a Biſhop to be fifty Years Old before he is Ordained; except he be a Man of ſingular Merit and Worth, which may compenſate for the want of Years. This ſhews, that the Cuſtom of the Church varied in this Matter; and that Perſons of extraordinary Qualifications were not always ty'd to be of ſuch an Age. Timothy was Ordained young; as may be collected from what the Apoſtle ſays to him, 1 Tim. 4. 12. Let no Man deſpiſe thy Youth. The Hiſtory of the Church affords many other ſuch Inſtances. Euſebius [r] ſays, Gregory Thaumaturgus and his Brother Athenodorus were both Ordained Biſhops very young; ἔτι νέους ἄμφω. St. Ambroſe [s] ſays the ſame of Acholius Biſhop of Theſſalonica; That he was young in Years, but of mature Age in reſpect of his Virtues. And Socrates [t] gives the like Account of Paulus Biſhop of Conſtantinople. Theodoret [u] obſerves alſo of Athanaſius, That he was but young when [k] Euſeb. Lib. 7. c. 19, & 32. [l] Naz. Orat. 21. in laud. Athanaſ. T. 1. p. 377. [m] Naz. Somnium de Eccl. Anaſtaſ. Sublimi Throno inſidere mihi videbar. Id. Orat. 20. in Laud. Baſil. p. 342. ἐπὶ τὸν ὑψηλὸν τ ὁμοκοσμῆς θρόνον. &c. [n] Ap. Euſeb. Lib. 7. c. 30. [o] Con. Neocæſ. Can. 11. [p] Concil. Agathen. c. 17. Presbyterum vel Epiſcopum ante Triginta annos, id eſt, antequam ad viri perfecti ætatem perveniat, nullus Metropolitanorum ordinare præſumat. See alſo Con. Tolet. 4. c. 18, & 19. [q] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 1. [r] Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 30. [s] Ambr. Ep. 60. ad Anyſium. Benedictus proceſſus Juventutis ipſius, in qua ad ſummum electus eſt Sacerdotium, maturo jam probatus virtutum ſtipendio. [t] Socrat. Lib. 2. c. 6. Ἀνδρὶ νέον μὲν τ ἡλικίαν, πρεσβυτικὸτα δ ταῖς φρεσίν, [u] Theod. Lib. 1. c. 26. νέῳ μὲν ὢν τὴν ἡλικίαν.

he

he attended his Bishop Alexander at the Council of Nice; and yet within Five Months after, he was chosen his Successor at Alexandria. Which probably was before he was Thirty Years old: For the Council of Nice was not above 20 Years after the Persecution under Maximian; and yet Athanasius was so young, as not to remember the beginning of that Persecution, Anno 303. but only as he heard it from his Fathers. For when he speaks of it, he says [w], He learn'd of his Parents, that the Persecution was raised by Maximian, Grandfather to Constantius. So that if we compute from that time, we can hardly suppose him to be 30 Years old, when he was Ordained Bishop, Anno 326. 'Tis agreed by all Authors [x], That Remigius Bishop of Rhemes was but 22 Years old when he was Ordained, Anno 471. and Cotelerius [y], after Nicephorus, says, St. Eleutherius, an Illyrican Bishop, was consecrated at twenty. Ignatius gives a plain Intimation, That Damas Bishop of the Magnesians, was but a very young Bishop; tho' he does not expresly mention his Age. He calls his [z] Ordination, νεωτερικὴν τάξιν, a youthful Ordination; and therefore cautions the People not to despise him for his Age, but to reverence and give place to him in the Lord. Salmasius [a] and Ludovicus Capellus miserably pervert this Passage, and force a Sense upon it, which the Author never so much as dreamt of: They will needs have it, that by the Words νεωτερικὴν τάξιν, Ignatius means the Novelty of Episcopacy in general, that it was but a new and late Institution: Which is not only contrary to the whole Tenor and Design of all Ignatius's Epistles, but to the plain Sense of this Passage in particular; which speaks nothing of the Institution of Episcopacy, but of the Age of this Bishop, who was but young when he was Ordained.

Now from all this it appears, That tho' there was a Rule in the Church, requiring Bishops to be 30 Years old when they were Ordained; yet it was frequently dispensed with, either in Cases of Necessity, or in order to promote Persons of more extraordinary Worth and singular Qualifications. Yet such Dispensations, as qualify Boys of Eleven or Twelve Years old to be made Bishops, are no where to be met with in the Primitive Church; tho' the History of the Papacy affords frequent Instances of such Promotions, as those that please may see in a Catalogue of them, collected by Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Mason, two [b] Learned Writers of our Church.

SECT. II. Bishops to be chosen out of the Clergy of the Church to which they were Ordained.

BUT to return to the Bishops of the Primitive Church: Another Qualification in a Bishop, anciently very much insisted on, was, That he should be one of the Clergy of the same Church, over which he was to be made Bishop. For Strangers, who were unknown to the People, were not reckoned qualify'd by the Canons. This is plainly imply'd by Cyprian [c], when he says, The Bishop was to be chosen in the Presence of the People; who had perfect Knowledge of every Man's Life and Actions, by their Conversation among them. St. Jerom observes, That this was the constant Custom of Alexandria [d], from St. Mark, to Dionysius and Heraclas, for the Presbyters of the Church to chuse a Bishop out of their own Body. And therefore Julius [e] makes it a strong Objection against Gregory, whom the Arians obtruded on the Church of Alexandria in the room of Athanasius; That he was a perfect Stranger to the Place; neither baptized there, nor known to any: Whereas, the Ordination of a Bishop ought not to be so Uncanonical; but he should be Ordained by the Bishops of the Province in his own Church, and be ἀπ' αὐτῆς τῆς ἱερατείας, ἀπ' αὐτῆς τῆς κλήρου, one of the Clergy of the Church to which he was Ordained. The ancient Bishops of Rome were all of the same mind, so long as they thought themselves obliged to walk by the Laws of the Church: For Celestin [f], and Hilary [g], and Leo [h], insist upon the same thing, as the common Rule and Canon of the Church. And we find a Law as late as Charles the Great, and Ludovicus Pius, to the same purpose. For in one of their Capitulars [i] it is ordered, That Bishops shall be chosen out of their own Diocese, by the Election of the Clergy and the People. Tho', as Baluzius [k] notes, this Law did not extend to very many Dioceses: For by this time, the French Kings had the Disposal of all Bishopricks in their Dominions, (except some few Churches, which by special Privilege retained the old way of Electing:) And they did not bind themselves to nominate Bishops always out of the Clergy of that Church which was vacant, but used their Liberty to chuse them out of any other; as now it is become the Privilege and Custom of Kings and Princes almost in all Nations: Which is the Occasion of the Difference betwixt the Ancient and Modern Practice in this Particular. For while the ancient way of Elections continued, the General Rule was for every Church to make choice of one of her own Clergy to be her Bishop, and not a Stranger.

SECT. III. Some Exceptions to this Rule.

YET in some extraordinary Cases this Rule admitted of Legal Exceptions; particularly in [w] Athan. Ep. ad Solitar. T. 1. p. 853. [x] Hincmar. Vit. Remig. Baron. an. 471. p. 298. [y] Coteler. Not. in Const. Apost. Lib. 2. c. 1. Niceph. Lib. 3. c. 29. [z] Ignat. Ep ad Magnes. n. 3. [a] Vid. Pearson. Vindic. Ignat. Præf. ad Lector. [b] Vid. Rainoldi Apolog. Thes. n. 26. Mason of the Consecrat. of Bishops. Lib. 1. c. 5. [c] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Fratr. Hispan. p. 172. Episcopus deligatur Plebe præsente quæ singulorum vitam plenissimè novit, & uniuscujusque actum de ejus Conversatione perspexit. [d] Hieron. Epist. 85. ad Evagr. Alexandriæ à Marco Evangelista usque ad Heraclam & Dionysium Episcopos, Presbyteri semper unum ex se electum, in excelsiori Gradu collocatum Episcopum nominabant. [e] Jul. Ep. ad Oriental. ap. Athan. Apol. 2. T. 1. p. 749. [f] Cælestin. Ep. 2. ad Episc. Narbon. c. 4, & 5. [g] Hilar. Pap. Epist. 1. ad Ascan. Tarracon. c. 3. [h] Leo Ep. 84. ad Anastas. c. 6. [i] Capitular. Karoli & Ludov. Lib. 1. c. 84. Episcopi per Electionem Cleri & Populi, secundum Statuta Canonum, de propria Diœcesi eligantur. [k] Baluz. Not. ad Concilia Gall. Narbon. p. 34. It. Not. ad Gratian. Dist. 63. c. 34. p. 47.

these

theſe Three Caſes: 1. When it was found for the Benefit of the Church to tranſlate Biſhops from one See to another. In this Caſe though the Biſhop was a Stranger, yet his Tranſlation being Canonical, was reckoned no Violation of this Law. 2. When the Church could not unanimouſly agree upon one in their own Body, then to pacify their Heats and end their Controverſies, the Emperor or a Council propoſed one of another Church to their Choice, or promoted him by their own Authority. Upon this ground Nectarius, Chryſoſtom, and Neſtorius, all Strangers, were made Biſhops of Conſtantinople. It was to end the Diſputes that aroſe in the Church, which was divided in their Elections, as Socrates [l] and Sozomen give an account of them. 3. Sometimes Men's extraordinary Merit gave them Preference, though Strangers, before all the Members of the Church to which they were choſen. As St. Ambroſe [m] obſerves of Euſebius Vercellenſis, that he was choſen, poſthabitis Civibus, before all that were Citizens or bred in the Place, though none of the Electors had ever ſeen him before, but only heard of his Fame and Character: And there are many other Inſtances of the like Nature. But excepting ſome ſuch Caſes as theſe, the Rule was generally obſerved, to chuſe no one Biſhop of any Place, who was not known to the People, and a Member of the ſame Church before.

SECT. IV. Biſhops to go thro' the Inferior Orders of the Church.

ANOTHER Qualification required in a Biſhop was, that he ſhould ariſe gradually to his Honour, and not come to the Throne per Saltum; but firſt paſs through ſome, if not all the Inferior Orders of the Church. The Council of Sardica has a Canon [n] very full to this purpoſe: If any Rich Man or Pleader at the Law deſire to be made a Biſhop, he ſhall not be ordained till he has firſt gone through the Offices of Reader, Deacon, and Presbyter: That behaving himſelf worthily in each of theſe Offices, he may aſcend gradually to the Height of the Epiſcopal Function: And in every one of theſe Degrees he ſhall continue ſome conſiderable time, that his Faith, and good Converſation, and Conſtancy, and Moderation may be known. The ſame Rule is preſcribed by the Council of Bracara [o] and ſome others. And that it was the Ancient Practice of the Church, appears from what Cyprian ſays [p] of Cornelius, that he was not made Biſhop of Rome all of a ſudden, but went gradually through all the Offices of the Church, till his Merits advanced him to the Epiſcopal Throne. Theodoret [q] commends Athanaſius upon the ſame Account; and Gregory Nazianzen [r] ſpeaks it to the Honour of St. Baſil, with ſome Reflection on ſeveral Biſhops of his Age, that he did not as ſoon as he was Baptized leap into a Biſhoprick, as ſome other Ambitious Perſons did, but riſe to his Honour by Degrees. He adds, that in Military Affairs this Rule was generally obſerved; every great General is firſt a common Soldier, then a Captain, then a Commander: And it would be happy for the Church, ſays he, if Matters were always ſo ordered in it. By this time it ſeems this Rule was frequently tranſgreſſed, without any Reaſon or Neceſſity; but only by the Ambition of ſome who affected the Office of Biſhop, yet were not willing to undergo the Inferior Offices that were preparative to it.

SECT. V. Deacons might be ordained Biſhops, tho' never ordained Presbyters.

BUT I muſt obſerve, that it was not always neceſſarily required that a Man ſhould be ordained Presbyter firſt in order to be made a Biſhop: For Deacons were as commonly made Biſhops as any other. Cæcilian was no more than Archdeacon [s] of Carthage, when he was ordained Biſhop, as we learn from Optatus. And both Theodoret [t] and Epiphanius [u] ſay, that Athanaſius was but a Deacon, when he was made Biſhop of Alexandria. Liberatus obſerves the ſame [w] of Peter Moggus and Eſaias, two other Biſhops of Alexandria: As alſo of Agapetus [x] and Vigilius, Biſhops of Rome. Socrates [y] and Theodoret [z] relate the ſame of Felix Biſhop of Rome, who was ordained in the Place of Liberius. Euſebius [a] takes notice of one of his own Name, a Deacon of Alexandria, who was made Biſhop of Laodicea. And Socrates [b] ſays, Chryſoſtom made Heraclides, one of his own Deacons, Biſhop of Epheſus, and Serapion Biſhop of Heraclea. And that this was a general Practice, and agreeable to Canon, appears alſo from a Letter of Pope Leo, where ſpeaking of the Election of a Metropolitan, he ſays [c] he ought to be choſen either out of the Presbyters, or out of the Deacons of the Church.

SECT. VI. Biſhops in Caſes of Neceſſity choſen out of the Inferior Orders.

SOMETIMES in Caſes of Neceſſity Biſhops were choſen out of the Inferior Orders, Subdeacons, Readers, &c. Liberatus ſays, Silverius, who was Competitor with Vigilius for the Biſhoprick of Rome, was but a [d] Subdeacon. And St. Auſtin himſelf, when he erected his new Biſhoprick at Fuſſala, being diſappointed of the Perſon whom he intended to have had conſecrated Biſhop, offered one Antonius a Reader to the Primate to be ordained Biſhop in his room; and the Primate without any Scruple immediately ordained him; though as [l] Socrat. Lib. 6. c. 2. Lib. 7. c. 29. Sozom. Lib. 8. c. 2. [m] Ambroſ. Ep. 82. ad Eccl. Vercel. [n] Concil. Sardic. Can. 10. [o] Concil. Bracar. 1. c. 39. Per ſingulos Gradus eruditus, ad Sacerdotium veniat. [p] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 103. Non iſte ad Epiſcopatum ſubitò pervenit, ſed per omnia Eccleſiaſtica Officia promotus, & in divinis Adminiſtrationibus Dominum ſæpe promeritus, ad Sacerdotii ſublime faſtigium cunctis Religionis Gradibus aſcendit. [q] Theod. Lib. 1. c. 25. [r] Naz. Orat. 20. in laud. Baſil. p. 335. [s] Optat. Lib. 1. p. 41. [t] Theodor. Lib. 1. c. 25. [u] Epiphan. Hær. 69. Arian. [w] Liberat. Breviar. c. 16, & 18. [x] Liberat. ibid. c. 21, & 22. [y] Socrat. Lib. 2. c. 37. [z] Theod. Lib. 2. c. 17. [a] Euſeb. Lib. 7. c. 11. [b] Socrat. Lib. 6. c. 11. Lib. 6. c. 4, & 17. [c] Leo. Ep. 84. c. 6. Ex Presbyteris ejuſdem Eccleſiæ, vel ex Diaconibus eligatur. [d] Liberat. Brev. c. 22.

St.

St. Auſtin [e] teſtifies, he was but a young Man, who had never ſhewed himſelf in any other Office of the Church beſide that of Reader.

SECT. VII. And in ſome extraordinary Caſes ordained immediately from Laymen.

THERE want not alſo ſeveral Inſtances of Perſons, who were ordained Biſhops immediately of Laymen, when God by his particular Providence ſeemed to point them out as the fitteſt Men in ſome certain Junctures, to be employed in his Service. Thus it was in the known Caſe of St. Ambroſe, who was but newly baptized, when he was ordained Biſhop, as both Paulinus [f] and all the Hiſtorians teſtify. When the People of Milan were ſo divided in the Election of a Biſhop, that the whole City was in an Uproar, he being Prætor of the Place, came in upon them to appeaſe the Tumult, as by vertue of his Office he thought himſelf obliged to do; and making an Eloquent Speech to them, it had a ſort of Miraculous Effect upon them: For they all immediately left off their Diſpute, and unanimouſly cried out, They would have Ambroſe to be their Biſhop. Which the Emperor underſtanding, and looking upon it as a Providential Call, he ordered him to be baptized (for he was yet but a Catechumen) and in a few Days after to be ordained their Biſhop. St. Cyprian was another Inſtance of the like Providential Diſpenſation. For Pontius [g] ſays in his Life, that he was choſen Biſhop by the Judgment of God and the Favour of the People, though he was but a Neophite, or newly baptized. Socrates [h] and Sozomen [i] ſay the ſame of Nectarius, Gregory Nazianzen's Succeſſor at Conſtantinople, that he was choſen Biſhop by the Second General Council, whilſt he had his Myſtical Garments on him, meaning thoſe White Garments which the newly Baptized were uſed to wear. Euſebius, Biſhop of Cæſarea in Pontus, St. Baſil's Predeceſſor, was not Baptized, but only a Catechumen, when he was choſen Biſhop, as Nazianzen himſelf [k] informs us. And Eucherius was but a Monk, that is, a Layman, when he was choſen and ordained Biſhop of Lions, as Baronius [l] ſays, from Hilarius Arelatenſis in the Life of Honoratus. Chryſoſtom [m] ſeems to ſay the ſame of Philogonius Biſhop of Antioch, when he reports of him, that he was taken from the Court of Judicature, and carried from the Judges Bench to the Biſhops Throne, ἀπὸ βήματος δικαστικοῦ ἐπὶ βῆμα ἱερόν. In all theſe Inſtances there ſeems to have been the Hand of God and the Direction of Providence, which ſuperſedes all ordinary Rules and Canons: And therefore theſe Ordinations were never cenſured as Uncanonical or Irregular, though contrary to the Letter of a common Rule; becauſe the Rule it ſelf was to be underſtood with this Limitation and Exception, as one of the ancient Canons [n] explains it ſelf, and all others that relate to this Matter; ſaying, One that is newly converted from Gentiliſm, or a Vicious Life, ought not preſently to be advanced to a Biſhoprick: For it is not fit, that he who has yet given no Proof of himſelf, ſhould be made a Teacher of others; unleſs it be ſo ordered by the Grace and Appointment of God himſelf, ἐὰ μή πς κατ' θείαν χάριν τοῦτο γένοιτο. For in this Caſe there could be no Diſpute; the Will of God being Superior to all Human Canons whatſoever. And therefore though the ſame Limitation be not expreſs'd in other Canons, yet it is evident that they are always to be underſtood with this Exception. Upon which account it was not reckoned any Breach of Canon, to make a Layman Biſhop, when Providence ſeemed firſt to grant a Diſpenſation, by directing the Church to be unanimous in the Choice of ſuch a Perſon. They did not in ſuch caſes make a Layman receive one Order one day, and another the next, and ſo go through the ſeveral Orders in the compaſs of a Week, but made him Biſhop at once, when need required, without any other Ordination. The contrary Cuſtom is a Modern Practice, ſcarce ever heard of till the time of Photius, Ann. 858, who to avoid the Imputation of not coming gradually to his Biſhoprick, was on the firſt day made a Monk, on the 2d a Reader, on the 3d a Subdeacon, on the 4th a Deacon, on the 5th a Presbyter, and on the 6th a Patriarch, as Nicetas David [o] a Writer of that Age informs us in the Life of Ignatius. Spalatenſis [p] obſerves the ſame Practice to be continued in the Romiſh Church, under pretence of complying with the ancient Canons; though nothing can be more contrary to the true Intent and Meaning of them; which was, That Men ſhould continue ſome Years in every Order, to give ſome Proof of their Behaviour to the Church, and not paſs curſorily through all Orders in Five or Six Days time; which Practice, as it does not anſwer the End of the Canons, ſo it is altogether without Precedent in the Primitive Church.

[e] Aug. Ep. 261. ad Cæleſtin. [f] Paulin. Vit. Ambroſ. p. 3. Ruffin. Lib. 2. c. 11. Theod. Lib. 4. c. 6. & 7. Socrat. Lib. 4. c. 30. Sozom. Lib. 6. c. 24. [g] Pont. Vit. Cypr. p. 2. Judicio Dei & Plebis favore ad Officium Sacerdotii & Epiſcopatus Gradum adhuc Neophytus, & ut putabatur Novellus electus eſt. [h] Socrat. Lib. 5. c. 8. [i] Sozom. Lib. 7. c. 8. τὴν μυσικὴν ἐσθῆτα ἔτι ἠμφιέσμενον, &c. [k] Naz. Orat. 19. de Laud. Patr. T. 1. p. 308. [l] Baron. an 441. p. 9. [m] Chryſ. Hom. 31. de S. Philogon. T. 1. p. 397. [n] Canon. Apoſt. c. 80. [o] Nicet. Vit. Ignat. Concil. Tom. 8. p. 1199. [p] Spalat. de Repub. Lib. 3. c. 4. n. 19. p. 430.

CHAP. XI.

Of some particular Laws and Customs observed about the Ordination of Bishops.

SECT. I. Bishopricks not to be void above Three Months.

WHEN any Bishoprick became void by the Death or Cession of its Bishop, then forasmuch as Bishops were looked upon as a necessary constituent Part of the Church, all imaginable Care was taken to fill up the Vacancy with all convenient Speed. In the African Churches a Year was the utmost Limits that was allowed for a Vacancy; for if within that time a new Election was not made, he that was appointed Administrator of the Church during the Vacancy, whose Business it was to procure and hasten the Election, was to be turned out of his Office, and a new one put in his room, by a Canon of the 5th Council [q] of Carthage, which is also confirmed in the African [r] Code. But in other Places this was limited to a much shorter Time: For by a Canon [s] of the General Council of Chalcedon, every Metropolitan is obliged to ordain a new Bishop in the vacant See within the space of Three Months, under pain of Ecclesiastical Censure, unless some unavoidable Necessity forced him to defer it longer.

SECT. II. In some Places a new Bishop was chosen before the old one was Buried.

AT Alexandria the Custom was to proceed immediately to Election as soon as the Bishop was dead, and before he was interred. Epiphanius [t] hints at this Custom when he says, They were used to make no delay after the Decease of a Bishop, but chuse one presently, to preserve Peace among the People, that they might not run into Factions about the Choice of a Successor. But Liberatus [u] is a little more particular in describing the Circumstances of it: He says, it was customary for the Successor to watch over the Body of the Deceased Bishop, and to lay his Right Hand upon his Head, and to bury him with his own Hands, and then take the Pall of St. Mark, and put it upon himself, and so sit in his Throne. To these Authorities we may add that of Socrates, who [w] says, That Cyril of Alexandria was inthroned the third Day after the Death of Theophilus: And he intimates, that the same thing was practised in other Places: For Proclus Bishop of Constantinople [x] was inthroned before Maximian his Predecessor was interred, and after his Inthronement he performed the Funeral Office for him. And this was done at the Instance and Command of the Emperor Theodosius, that there might be no Dispute or Tumult raised in the Church about the Election of a Bishop.

SECT. III. Some Instances of longer Vacancies in Times of Difficulty and Persecution.

YET notwithstanding this Care and Diligence of the Church in filling up vacant Sees, it sometimes happened, that the Election of Bishops was deferred to a much longer Season. For in Africk at the time of the Collation of Carthage there were no less than Threescore Bishopricks void at once, which was above an Eighth part of the whole. For the whole Number of Bishops was but 466, whereof 286 were then present at the Conference, and 120 were absent by reason of Sickness or old Age; besides which, there were 60 Vacant Sees, which were unprovided of Bishops at that time, as the Catholicks told [y] the Donatists, who pretended to vie Numbers with them, though they were but 279. What was the particular Reason of so many Vacancies at that Juncture, is not said: but probably it might be the Difficulty of the Times, that Catholick Bishops could not there be placed, where the Donatists had gotten full Possession. Or perhaps it might be the Negligence of the People, who contented themselves with Administrators during the Vacancy, and would not admit of a new Bishop. The Council of Macriana mentioned by Fulgentius Ferrandus [z] takes notice of this Dilatory Practice in some Churches, and censures it by a Canon, which orders the Administrators, who were always some Neighbouring Bishops, to be removed; and condemns such Churches to continue without Administrators, till they sought for a Bishop of their own. Another Reason of long Vacancies in some Times and Places, was the difficult Circumstances the Churches lay under in time of Persecution. For the Bishops were the Men chiefly aimed at by the Persecutors: And therefore when one Bishop was Martyred, the Church sometimes was forced to defer the Ordination of another, either because it was scarce possible to go about it in such times of Exigency, or because she was unwilling to expose another Bishop immediately to the implacable Fury of a raging Adversary, and bring upon her self a more violent Storm of Persecution.

[q] Con. Carth. 5. Can. 8. [r] Cod. Can. Eccl. Afric. can. 75. [s] Con. Chalced. Can. 25. [t] Epiphan. Hær. 69. Arian. n. 11. μὴ χρονίζειν μετὰ τελευτὴν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, &c. [u] Liberat. Breviar. c. 20. Consuetudo quidem est Alexandriæ, illum, qui defuncto succedit, excubias super defuncti corpus agere, manumque dexteram ejus capiti suo imponere, & sepulto manibus suis, accipere collo suo Beati Marci Pallium, & tunc legitime sedere. [w] Socrat. Lib. 7. c. 7. [x] Id. Lib. 7. c. 40. [y] Aug. Brevic. Collat. primæ Diei, c. 14. Sane propter Cathedras quas Episcopis vacuas apud se esse dixerunt, responsum est a Catholicis, sexaginta esse quibus successores Episcopi nondum fuerant ordinati. [z] Ferrand. Brev. Canon. c. 23. ap. Justel. T. 1. p. 449. Ut Interventores Episcopi conveniant Plebis quæ Episcopum non habent, ut Episcopum accipiant; Quod si accipere neglexerint, remoto Interventore sic remaneant, quam diu sibi Episcopum quærant.

ſecution. The Roman [a] Clergy give this for their Reaſon to Cyprian, why after the Martyrdom of Fabian they did not immediately proceed to a new Election: The State of Affairs, and the Difficulty of the Times was ſuch as would not permit it. Baronius [b] reckons the time of this Vacancy a Year and Three Months, but others [c] who are more exact in the Calculation, make it a Year and Five Months: By either of which Accounts it was above a Year beyond the time limited by the Canons. But this was nothing in Compariſon of that long Vacancy of the Biſhoprick of Carthage, in the time of the Arian Perſecution under Genſericus and Hunericus, two Heretical Kings of the Vandals, which Victor Uticenſis [d] ſays was no leſs than 24 Years, during all which time the Church of Carthage had no Biſhop. But theſe were Difficulties upon the Church, and Matters of Force, not her Choice: For in times of Peace ſhe always acted otherwiſe, and did not think ſuch extraordinary Inſtances fit Precedents to be drawn into Example; much leſs to be drawn into Conſequence and argued upon, as ſome [e] have done, that therefore the Church may be without Biſhops, becauſe ſhe ſubſiſted in ſome extraordinary Vacancies without them, when ſhe could not have them: Which Argument would hold as well againſt any other Order as that of Biſhops, did but they who urge this Argument, rightly conſider it.

SECT. IV. Three Biſhops required to the Ordination of a Biſhop.

BUT to return to the Ordination of Biſhops: At the time appointed for Ordination, the Metropolitan was uſed to ſend forth his Circular Letters, and ſummon all the Biſhops of the Province to meet at the Place where the new Biſhop was to be ordained, and aſſiſt at his Conſecration. The Preſence of them all was required, if they could conveniently attend; if not, they were to ſend their Conſent in Writing: In which caſe Three Biſhops, with the Aſſiſtance or Conſent of the Metropolitan, were reckoned a ſufficient Canonical Number to perform the Ceremony of Conſecration. St. Cyprian [f] ſpeaks of it as the general Practice of the Church in his time, to have all the Biſhops of the Province preſent at any ſuch Ordination. And Euſebius [g] particularly takes notice of the Ordination of Alexander Biſhop of Jeruſalem, who ſucceeded Narciſſus, that he was ordained μετὰ κοινῆς τῶν ἐπισκόπων γνώμης, with the common Conſent of the Biſhops of his Province. The Council of Chalcedon [h] calls this a Canonical Ordination, when the Metropolitan with all or moſt of his Provincial Biſhops ordain the Biſhops of their own Province, as the Canons have appointed. And the General Council of Conſtantinople [i] juſtified the Ordinations of Flavian Biſhop of Antioch, and Cyril of Jeruſalem, as Canonical in this reſpect, becauſe they were ordained by the Biſhops of their Provinces Synodically met together. This was the ancient Rule of the Council of Nice, which requires the Aſſiſtance of all the Biſhops of the Province, if they could conveniently [k] attend the Ordination: But foraſmuch as that either through urgent Neceſſity, or by reaſon of their great Diſtance it might happen that all of them could not be preſent, it is added, That in that caſe Three Biſhops ſhould be ſufficient to ordain, provided the Metropolitan and the reſt ſent their Conſent in Writing. But under Three the Canons did not generally allow of. The firſt Council [l] of Arles, and the third of Carthage [m] require Three beſides the Metropolitan. And the ſecond Council of Arles [n] does not allow the Metropolitan to be one of the three, but ſaith expreſly, That he ſhall take the Aſſiſtance of Three Provincial Biſhops beſide himſelf, and not preſume to ordain a Biſhop without them. 'Tis true, thoſe called the Apoſtolical [o] Canons and Conſtitutions [p], allow the Ordination that is performed by Two Biſhops only: But this is contrary to all other Canons; which are ſo far from allowing Two Biſhops to ordain by themſelves, that the Council of Orange [q] orders both the Ordaining Biſhops and the Ordained to be depoſed: And the Council of Riez [r] actually depoſed Armentarius for this very thing, becauſe he had not Three Biſhops to ordain him. All Churches indeed did not puniſh ſuch Ordinations with the ſame Severity, but in all Places they were reckoned Uncanonical. When Paulinus ordained Evagrius Biſhop of Antioch, Theodoret [s] takes notice that this was done againſt the Laws of the Church, becauſe he was ordained by a ſingle Perſon, and without the Conſent of the Provincial Biſhops. And Syneſius [t] ſays the ſame of the Ordination of Siderius Biſhop of Palæbiſca, that it was Irregular, becauſe he neither had the Conſent of the Biſhop of Alexandria his Metropolitan, nor Three Biſhops to ordain him. It was to avoid this Cenſure of Irregularity, that Novatian when he ſet himſelf up to be Biſhop of Rome againſt

[a] Ep. 31. al. 30. ap. Cyprian. p. 58. Poſt exceſſum nobiliſſimæ memoriæ viri Fabiani, nondum eſt Epiſcopus propter rerum & temporum difficultates conſtitutus. [b] Baron. an. 253. n. 6. an. 254. n. 46. [c] Pearſon. Annal. Cypr. an. 250. n. 3. & an. 251. n. 6. [d] Victor. de Perſecut. Vandal. Lib. 2. [e] Blondel. Apol. [f] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Fratr. Hiſpan. p. 172. Quod apud nos quoque & fere per Provincias univerſas tenetur, ut ad Ordinationes rite celebrandas, ad eam Plebem, cui Præpoſitus ordinatur, Epiſcopi ejuſdem Provinciæ proximi quique conveniant, & Epiſcopus deligatur Plebe præſente, &c. [g] Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 11. [h] Con. Chalced. Act. 16. C. T. 4. p. 817. [i] Ep. Synod. ap. Theodor. Lib. 5. c. 9. [k] Con. Nic. Can. 4. Ἐπίσκοπον προσήκει μάλιστα μὲν ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν ἐν τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ καθίστασθαι. [l] Con. Arelat. 1. c. 21. Si non potuerint ſeptem, ſine tribus Fratribus non præſumant ordinare. [m] Con. Carth. 3. Can. 39. Forma antiqua ſervabitur ut non minus quam tres ſufficiant, qui fuerint à Metropolitano directi ad ordinandum Epiſcopum. See alſo Con. Carth. 6. c. 4. [n] Con. Arelat. 2. c. 5. Nec Epiſcopus Metropolitanus ſine tribus Epiſcopis Comprovincialibus præſumat Epiſcopum ordinare. [o] Can. Apoſt. c. 1. Ἐπίσκοπος χειροτονείσθω ὑπὸ ἐπισκόπων δύο ἢ τριῶν. [p] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 27. [q] Con. Arauſic. 1. Can. 21. [r] Con. Reienſ. Can. 1. Ordinationem quam Canones irritam definiunt, nos quoque vacuandam eſſe cenſuimus: In qua prætermiſſa trium præſentia, nec expectis Comprovincialium Literis, Metropolitani quoque Voluntate neglecta, prorſus nihil quod Epiſcopum faceret oſtenſum eſt. [s] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 23. [t] Syneſ. Ep. 67.

Cor-

Cornelius, ſent for three Biſhops out of the fartheſt Corner of Italy to come and [v] ordain him, leſt it ſhould be objected againſt him, that he had not a Canonical Ordination. And upon this Account, when Pelagius the Iſt was to be ordained Biſhop of Rome, becauſe three Biſhops could not be procured, a Presbyter [u] was taken in to make up the Number. In all which the general Practice of the Church is very clearly ſeen and deſcribed.

SECT. V. Yet Ordinations by one Biſhop allowed to be Valid, though not Canonical.

YET it muſt be obſerved, that though this was the common Rule and Practice of the Church, yet it was not ſimply and abſolutely of the Eſſence of Ordination. For the Church many times admitted of the Ordinations of Biſhops that were conſecrated only by one or two Biſhops. The Council of Orange [w] which orders both the Ordaining Biſhops and the Ordained to be depoſed, in caſe Two Biſhops only ordained a Biſhop with his Conſent, decrees notwithſtanding, that if a Biſhop was ordained by any ſort of Violence againſt his Will, though only by Two Biſhops, in that caſe his Ordination ſhould ſtand good, becauſe he was Paſſive in the thing, and not conſenting to the Breach of the Canons. And without this Paſſivity, there are ſeveral Inſtances of Ordinations by Two Biſhops only, the Validity of which we do not find diſputed. Pelagius Biſhop of Rome was reckoned a true Biſhop, though as we have juſt now heard, he had but Two Biſhops and a Presbyter to ordain him. Dioſcorus of Alexandria was conſecrated likewiſe by Two Biſhops only, and thoſe under Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure; as we learn from an Epiſtle of the Biſhops of Pontus [x], at the end of the Council of Chalcedon: Yet neither that Council, nor any others ever queſtioned the Validity of his Ordination, unleſs perhaps thoſe Pontick Biſhops did, who call it Nefandam atque imaginariam Ordinationem. Siderius Biſhop of Palæbiſca was ordained by one Biſhop; yet Athanaſius not only allowed his Ordination, and confirmed it, but, finding him to be an uſeful Man, he afterwards advanced him, as Syneſius [y] ſays, to the Metropolitical See of Ptolemais. Paulinus Biſhop of Antioch ordained Evagrius his Succeſſor, without any other Biſhop to aſſiſt him: Which though it was done againſt Canon, yet Theodoret aſſures us [z], that both the Biſhops of Rome and Alexandria owned Evagrius for a true Biſhop, and never in the leaſt queſtioned the Validity of his Ordination. And though they afterwards conſented to acknowledge Flavian, at the Inſtance of Theodoſius, to put an end to the Schiſm; yet they did it upon this Condition, that the Ordinations of ſuch as had been ordained by Evagrius, ſhould be reputed Valid alſo: As we learn from the Letters of Pope [a] Innocent, who lived not long after this Matter was tranſacted.

SECT. VI. The Biſhop of Rome not privileged to ordain alone, any more than any other ſingle Biſhop.

HENCE it appears, that the Ordination of a Biſhop made by any ſingle Biſhop was Valid, if the Church thought fit to allow it. Nor had the Biſhop of Rome any peculiar Privilege in this Matter above other Men, though ſome pretend to make a Diſtinction. There is indeed an ancient Canon alledged in the Collection of Fulgentius Ferrandus, out of the Council of Zella, and the Letters of Siricius, which ſeems to make a Reſerve in behalf of the Biſhop of Rome: For it ſays, [b] One Biſhop ſhall not ordain a Biſhop, the Roman Church excepted. But Cotelerius [c] ingenuouſly owns this to be a Corruption in the Text of Ferrandus, foiſted in by the Ignorance or Fraud of ſome Modern Tranſcriber, who confounded two Decrees of Siricius into one, and changed the Words, Sedes Apoſtolica Primatis, into Sedes Apoſtolica Romana. For in the Words of Siricius [d], there is no mention made at all of the Roman Church, but it is ſaid, That no one ſhall ordain without the Conſent of the Apoſtolical See; that is, the Primate or Metropolitan of the Province; and that one Biſhop alone ſhall not ordain a Biſhop, becauſe that is arrogant and aſſuming, and looks like giving an Ordination by Stealth, and is expreſly forbidden by the Nicene Council. So that in theſe Times the Biſhops of Rome were under the Direction of the Canons, and did not preſume to think they had any Privilege of Ordaining ſingly, above what was common to the reſt of their Order.

SECT. VII. Every Biſhop to be ordained in his own Church.

THE next thing to be taken notice of in this Affair, is, That every Biſhop, by the Laws and Cuſtom of the Church, was to be ordained in his own Church, in the Preſence of his own People. Which is plainly intimated by Cyprian [e] when he ſays, That to celebrate Ordinations aright, the neighbouring Biſhops of the Province were uſed to meet at the Church where the new Biſhop was to be ordained, and there proceed to his Election and Ordination.

[v] Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. ex Epiſt. Cornel. [u] Lib. Pontifical. Vit. Pelag. Dum non eſſent Epiſcopi, qui eum ordinarent, inventi ſunt duo Epiſcopi, Joannes de Peruſio, & Bonus de Ferentino, & Andreas Presbyter de Oſtia, & ordinaverunt eum. [w] Con. Arauſic. 1. c. 21. [x] Concil. Tom. 4. p. 960. Ordinationem ſuam a damnatis Epiſcopis, & hoc duobus, accepit, cum Regulæ Patrum —— vel tres Epiſcopos corporaliter adeſſe in hujuſmodi diſpenſationibus omnino proſpiciant. [y] Syneſ. Ep. 67. [z] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 23. [a] Innoc. Ep. 14. ad Bonifac. Eccleſia Antiochena ita Pacem poſtulavit & meruit, ut & Evagrianos ſuis Ordinibus ac Locis, intemerata Ordinatione, quam acceperant a memorato, ſuſciperet. [b] Ferrand. Brev. Canon. c. 6. Ut unus Epiſcopus Epiſcopum non ordinet, excepta Eccleſia Romana. Concilio Zellenſi. Ex Epiſtola Papæ Siricii. [c] Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 3. c. 20. [d] Siric. Ep. 4. c. 1. Ut extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolicæ, hoc eſt, Primatis, nemo audeat ordinare. It. c. 2. Ne unus Epiſcopus Epiſcopum ordinare præſumat propter arrogantiam, ne furtivum præſtitum Beneficium videatur. Hoc enim & à Synoda Nicæna conſtitutum eſt atque definitum. [e] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Fratr. Hiſpan. p. 172. Ad Ordinationes rite celebrandas, ad eam Plebem, cui Præpoſitus ordinatur, Epiſcopi ejuſdem Provinciæ proximi quique, conveniant, &c.

And

And this was so generally the Practice of the whole Church, that Pope Julius [f] made it an Objection against Gregory of Alexandria, who was obtruded on the Church by the Eusebian Party in the room of Athanasius, that he was ordained at Antioch, and not in his own Church, but sent thither with a Band of Soldiers; whereas by the Ecclesiastical Canon he ought to have been ordained, ἐπ' αὐτῆς τῆ ἐκκλησίας, in the Church of Alexandria it self, and that by the Bishops of his own Province. This Rule was very nicely observed in the African Churches, where it was the constant Custom for the Primate (whose Office it was to ordain Bishops) to go to the Church where the new Bishop was to be settled, and ordain him there. Of this we have several Instances in St. Austin, who himself was ordained in his own Church at Hippo [g] by the Primate of Numidia: And having divided his Diocese, and erected a new Bishoprick at Fussala, and elected a Bishop, he sent for the Primate, though living [gg] at a great Distance, to come to the Place and ordain him there.

SECT. VIII. The ancient Form of Ordination of Bishops.

As to the Manner and Form of Ordaining a Bishop, it is thus briefly described by one of the Councils [h] of Carthage: When a Bishop is ordained, Two Bishops shall hold the Book of the Gospels over his Head, and whilst one pronounces the Blessing or Consecration Prayer, all the rest of the Bishops that are present, shall lay their Hands upon his Head. The Ceremony of laying the Gospels upon his Head seems to have been in use in all Churches. For the Author [i] of the Apostolical Constitutions (a Greek Writer who is supposed to relate the Customs of the 3d Century) makes mention of it, only with this Difference, that instead of Two Bishops, there Two Deacons are appointed to hold the Gospels open over his Head, whilst the Senior Bishop or Primate, with Two other Bishops assisting him, pronounces the Prayer of Consecration. This Ceremony of holding the Gospels over his Head, is also mentioned by St. Chrysostom [k] and the Author of the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy under the Name of Dionysius, who says it was a peculiar Ceremony used only in the Ordination of a Bishop.

SECT. IX. A Form of Prayer used at their Consecration.

THE Author of the Constitutions recites one of the ancient Forms of Prayer, the close of which is [l] in these Words: "Grant to him, O Lord Almighty, by thy "Christ the Communication of the Holy "Spirit; that he may have Power to remit "Sins according to thy Commandment, and to "confer Orders according to thy Appointment, "and to loose every Bond according to the "Power which thou gavest to the Apostles; "that he may please thee in Meekness and a "pure Heart, Constantly, Blameless, and with-"out Rebuke; and may offer unto Thee that "Pure Unbloody Sacrifice, which thou by "Christ hast appointed to be the Mystery or "Sacrament of the New Covenant, for a sweet-"smelling Savour, through Jesus Christ thy "Holy Son, our God and Saviour, by whom "be Glory, Honour and Worship to Thee, in "the Holy Spirit, now and for ever. Amen. It is not to be imagined that one and the same Form was used in all Churches: For every Bishop having Liberty to frame his own Liturgy, as there were different Liturgies in different Churches, so it is most reasonable to suppose the Primates or Metropolitans had different Forms of Consecration, though there are now no Remains of them in being, to give us any farther Information.

SECT. X. Of their Enthronement. Homiliæ Enthronisticæ, & Literæ Enthronisticæ.

THE Consecration being ended, the Bishops that were present conducted the new ordained Bishop to his Chair or Throne, and there placing him, they all saluted him with an Holy Kiss in the Lord. Then the Scriptures being read (according to Custom, as part of the daily Service) the new Bishop made a Discourse or Exposition upon them, which was usually called Sermo Enthronisticus, from the Time and Circumstances in which it was spoken. Such was that famous Homily of Meletius Bishop of Antioch, mentioned by Epiphanius [m] and Sozomen, for which he was immediately sent into Banishment by Constantius. Socrates frequently takes notice of such Homilies made by Bishops [n] at their Instalment; and Liberatus [o] speaking of Severus of Antioch, mentions his Exposition made upon that Occasion, calling it, Expositio in Inthronismo. It was usual also for Bishops immediately after their Instalment, to send Letters to foreign Bishops, to give them an Account of their Faith and Orthodoxy, that they might receive Letters of Peace and Communion again from them; which Letters were therefore called, Literæ Enthronisticæ, or συλλαβαὶ ἐνθρονιστικαὶ, as Evagrius [p] terms them, speaking of the Circular Letters which Severus Bishop of Antioch wrote to the rest of the Patriarchs upon that Occasion. These were otherwise call'd Communicatory Letters, κοινωνικὰ συγγράμματα, as the Council of Antioch, that deposed Paulus Samosatensis, terms them: For the Fathers in that Council having ordained [f] Jul. Ep. ad Oriental. ap. Athanas. Apol. 2. T. 1. p. 749. [g] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 8. [gg] Aug. Ep. 261. Propter quem ordinandum, sanctum senem, qui tunc Primatum Numidiæ gerebat, de longinquo ut veniret rogans, Literis impetravi. [h] Con. Carth. 4. c. 2. Episcopus cum ordinatur, duo Episcopi ponant & teneant Evangeliorum Codicem super Caput & verticem ejus, & uno super eum fundente Benedictionem, reliqui omnes Episcopi qui adsunt, manibus suis caput ejus tangant. [i] Constit. Apost. Lib. 8. c. 4. [k] Chrys. de Laudib. Evang. cited by Habertus, p. 79. Dionys. Eccles. Hierarch. c. 5. par. 3. Sect. 1. p. 364. [l] Constit. Lib. 8. c. 5. [m] Epiphan. Hær. 73. Sozom. Lib. 4. c. 28. [n] Socrat. Lib. 2. c. 43. Lib. 7. c. 29. [o] Liberat. Breviar. c. 19. [p] Evagr. Lib. 4. c. 4.

Domnus in the room of Paul, gave notice thereof to all Churches, telling them that they ſignified it to them for this Reaſon, that they might write to Domnus, and receive κοινωνικὰ συγγράμματα [q] Communicatory Letters from him: Which, as Valeſius [r] rightly notes, do not mean there thoſe Letters of Communion which Biſhops were uſed to grant to Perſons travelling into Foreign Countries; but ſuch Letters as they wrote to each other upon their own Ordination, to teſtify their Communion mutually with one another. Theſe Letters are alſo called Synodicæ by Liberatus [s], who ſays, this Cuſtom of every new Biſhop's giving Intimation of his own Promotion to thoſe of his own Order, was ſo neceſſary, that the Omiſſion of it was interpreted a ſort of Refuſal to hold Communion with the reſt of the World, and a virtual Charge of Hereſy upon them.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Rule which prohibits Biſhops to be Ordained in ſmall Cities.

SECT. I. The Reaſon of the Law againſt placing Biſhops in ſmall Cities.

BEFORE I end this Diſcourſe about Biſhops, I muſt give an Account of Two Rules more reſpecting their Ordination. The firſt of which was; That Biſhops ſhould not be placed in ſmall Cities or Villages: Which Law was firſt made by the Council of Sardica, with a Deſign to keep up the Honour and Dignity of the Epiſcopal Order; as the Reaſon is given in the Canon made about it; which ſays, It ſhall not be lawful to place a Biſhop in a Village, or ſmall [t] City, where a ſingle Presbyter will be ſufficient: For in ſuch Places, there is no need to ſet a Biſhop; leſt the Name and Authority of Biſhops be brought into Contempt. Some add to this the Fifty ſeventh Canon of the Council of Laodicea, which forbids the placing of Biſhops in Villages, and in the Country, [u] appointing Viſitors to be conſtituted in their Room: But this Canon ſpeaks not of Abſolute Biſhops, but of the Chorepiſcopi, who were ſubject to other Biſhops, of which I ſhall treat particularly hereafter. However, there is no Diſpute about the Sardican Canon; for the Reaſon annexed explains its Meaning, that it prohibits univerſally the Ordination of Biſhops in ſmall Cities and Country Places.

SECT. II. Some Exceptions to this Rule in Egypt, Libya, Cyprus, Arabia, Aſia minor, &c.

BUT it may be obſerved that this Rule did never generally obtain: For both before and after the Council of Sardica, there were Biſhops both in ſmall Cities and Villages. Nazianzum was but a very ſmall City; Socrates [x] calls it πόλις ἐυτελὴς, a Little one: And upon the ſame account Gregory Nazianzen [y] ſtiles his own Father, who was Biſhop of it, μικροπολίτης, a Little Biſhop, and one of the Second Order. Yet he was no Chorepiſcopus, but as Abſolute a Biſhop in his own Dioceſe, as the Biſhop of Rome or Alexandria. Geræ near Peluſium was but a ſmall City, as Sozomen [a] notes; yet it was a Biſhop's See. Theodoret obſerves the ſame of Dolicha, where Maris was Biſhop [b], that it was but a very little City, πολίχνη σμικρὰ he calls it; And he ſays the like of Cucuſus [c] in Armenia, the Place whither Chryſoſtom was baniſhed: Yet as ſmall a City as it was, Chryſoſtom [d] found a Biſhop there, who treated him very civilly and reſpectfully in his Exile. Syneſius makes mention of the Biſhop of Olbiæ in one [e] of his Epiſtles, and at the ſame time tells us the Place was but a Village; for he calls the People δῆμον κωμήτης, a Country People. So he ſays in another [f] Epiſtle, that Hydrax and Polæbiſca had for ſome time each of them their own Biſhop; though they were but Villages of Pentapolis, formerly belonging to the Dioceſe of Erythra, to which they were ſome time after annexed again. In Sozomen's Time among the Arabians and Cyprians it was an uſual thing to ordain Biſhops not only in Cities, but Villages; as alſo among the Novatians and Montaniſts in Phrygia: All which he affirms [g] upon his own Knowledge. Some think Dracontius was ſuch a Biſhop, becauſe Athanaſius [h] ſtiles his Biſhoprick χώρας ἐπισκοπὴν: But whether this means that he was an Abſolute Biſhop, or only a Chorepiſcopus, as others think, is not very eaſy to determine. As neither what kind of Biſhops thoſe were, which the Council of Antioch [i] in their Synodical Epiſtle againſt Paulus Samoſatenſis, calls Country Biſhops; for perhaps they might be only Chorepiſcopi, or Dependant Biſhops, as Valeſius conjectures. But this cannot be ſaid by thoſe mentioned by Sozomen, nor of the other Inſtances I have given out of Syneſius, and the reſt of the fore-cited Authors; from whoſe Teſti[q] Euſeb. Lib. 7. c. 30. [r] Valeſ. Not. in Loc. [s] Liberat. Breviar. c. 17. Quia Literas Synodicas non direxiſſet, &c. [t] Con Sardic. Can. 6. Μὴ ἔξεῖναι ἢ ἁπλῶς καθίσαν ἐπίσκοπον κώμη τινὶ ἢ βραχεῖ πόλει. [u] Concil. Laodic. c. 57. [x] Socrat. Lib. 4. c. 13, & 26. [y] Naz. Orat. 19. de Laud. Patr. T. 1. p. 310. [a] Sozom. Lib. 8. c. 19. πόλις μικρὰ. [b] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 4. [c] Theod. Lib. 2. c. 5. & Lib. 5. c. 34. [d] Chryſ. Ep. 125. ad Cyriacum. [e] Syneſ. Ep. 76. [f] Id. Ep. 67. Κῶμαι ἢ αὐλαὶ πενταπόλεως. [g] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 19. Ἔστιν ὅπη καὶ ἐν κώμαις ἐπίσκοποι ἱερῶνται, ὡς καὶ ἀραβίοις καὶ κυπρίοις ἔγνων, &c. [h] Athanaſ. Epiſt. ad Dracont. T. 1. p. 954. [i] Ap. Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 30. Ἐπισκόπους τῶν ὁμόρων ἀχρᾶν τε καὶ πόλεων.

monies

monies it plainly appears, that there were Biſhops in very ſmall Cities, and ſometimes in Villages, notwithſtanding the contrary Decree of the Sardican Council. It is alſo very obſervable, That in Aſia Minor, a Tract of Land not much larger than the Iſle of Great-Britain, (including but two Dioceſes of the Roman Empire) there were almoſt Four Hundred Biſhops; as appears from the ancient Notitia's of the Church. Whence it may be collected, that Cucuſus and Nazianzum were not the only ſmall Cities in thoſe Parts; but that there were many other Cities and Dioceſes, of no very great Extent in ſuch a Number.

SECT. III. Reaſons for Erecting Biſhopricks in ſmall Cities.

ONE thing that contributed much to the Multiplication of Biſhopricks, and that cauſed them to be erected ſometimes in ſmall Places, was, That in the Primitive Church every Biſhop, with the Conſent of his Metropolitan, or the Approbation of a Provincial Council, had Power to divide his own Dioceſe, and Ordain a new Biſhop in ſome convenient Part of it, for the Good of the Church, whenever he found his Dioceſe too large, or the Places to lye at too great a Diſtance, or the Multitude of Converts to increaſe, and make the Care and Incumbrance of his Dioceſe become too great a Burden for him. This was the Reaſon why St. Auſtin [k] erected a new Biſhoprick at Fuſſala a Town in his own Dioceſe, about 40 Miles from Hippo. It was a Place where great Numbers had been converted from the Schiſm of the Donatiſts, and ſome remained to be converted ſtill: But the Place lying at ſo great a Diſtance, he could not beſtow that Care and Diligence, either in Ruling the one, or Regaining the other, which he thought neceſſary: And therefore he prevailed with the Primate of Numidia, to come and Ordain one Antonius to be Biſhop there. And this was conſonant to the Rules of the African Church; which allowed new Biſhopricks to be erected [l] in any Dioceſe where there was need, if the Biſhop of the Dioceſe and the Primate gave their Conſent to it; or, as Ferrandus [m] has it in his Collection, if the Biſhop, the Primate, and a Provincial Council, by their joint Conſent and Authority gave way to it. By vertue of theſe Canons, during the time of the Schiſm of the Donatiſts, many new Biſhopricks were erected in very ſmall Towns in Africk; as appears from the Acts of the Collation of Carthage; where the Catholicks and Donatiſts mutually charge each other with this Practice: That they divided ſingle Biſhopricks ſometimes into three or four; and made Biſhops in Country-Towns and Villages, to augment the Numbers of their Parties. Thus, in one place, we find Petilian the Donatiſt [n] complaining, That the Catholicks had made four Biſhops in the Dioceſe of Januarius, a Donatiſt Biſhop, to outdo them with Numbers. And, in another place, Alypias the Catholick orders it to be entred [o] upon Record, That a great many Donatiſt Biſhops there mentioned, were not Ordained in Cities, but only in Country-Towns or Villages. To which Petilian [p] replies, That the Catholicks did the ſame; Ordaining Biſhops in Country-Towns, and ſometimes in ſuch Places where they had no People: His meaning is, that in thoſe Places all the People were turned Donatiſts; And for that very Reaſon the Catholick Biſhops thought themſelves obliged to divide their Dioceſes, and Ordain new Biſhops in ſmall Towns; that they might outdo the Donatiſts, both in Number and Zeal, and more effectually labour in reducing the ſtraying People back again to their ancient Communion with the Catholick Church. This was the Practice of Africk, and this their Reaſon for Erecting ſo many ſmall Biſhopricks in thoſe Times of Exigency: They had always an eye to the Benefit and Edification of the Church.

Gregory Nazianzen highly commends St. Baſil's Piety and Prudence for the like Practice. It happen'd in his time, that Cappadocia was divided into two Provinces, and Tyana made the Metropolis of the Second Province, in the Civil Account: This gave Occaſion to Anthimus Biſhop of Tyana, to lay claim to the Rights of a Metropolitan in the Church; which St. Baſil oppoſed, as injurious to his own Church of Cæſarea, which by ancient Cuſtom and Preſcription had been the Metropolis of the whole Province. But Anthimus proving a very contentious Adverſary, and raiſing great Diſturbance and Commotions about it, St. Baſil was willing to buy the Peace of the Church with the Loſs of his own Rights; ſo he voluntarily relinquiſhed his Juriſdiction over that Part of Cappadocia, which Anthimus laid claim to: And, to compenſate his own Loſs in ſome meaſure, he erected ſeveral New Biſhopricks in his own Province; as, at Saſima, and ſome other ſuch obſcure Places of that Region. Now, tho' this was done contrary to the Letter of a Canon, yet Nazianzen extols the Fact upon three Accounts. Firſt, Becauſe hereby a greater Care was taken [q] of Men's Souls. Secondly, By this means every [k] Auguſtin. Epiſt. 261. ad Cæleſtin. Quod ab Hippone memoratum Caſtellum millibus Quadraginta ſejungitur, cum in eis regendis, & eorum Reliquiis licet exiguis colligendis —— me viderem latius quàm oportebat extendi, nec adhibendæ ſufficerem diligentiæ, quam certiſſima ratione adhiberi debere cernebam, Epiſcopum ibi ordinandum conſtituendumque curavi. [l] Concil. Carth. 2. c. 5. Si accedente tempore, creſcente Fide, Dei populus multiplicatus deſideravit proprium habere Rectorem, ejus videlicet voluntate, in cujus poteſtate eſt Diœceſis conſtituta, habeat Epiſcopum. It. Con. Carth. 3. c. 42. [m] Ferrand. Breviar. Canon. c. 13. Ut Epiſcopus non ordinetur in Diœceſi, quæ Epiſcopum nunquam habuit, niſi cum voluntate Epiſcopi ad quem ipſa Diœceſis pertinet, ex Concilio tamen plenario & Primatis Authoritate. [n] Collat. Carth. 1. c. 117. Petilianus Epiſcopus dixit, In une Plebe Januarii Collegæ noſtri præſentis, in una Diœceſi, quatuor ſunt conſtituti contra ipſum; ut numerus ſcilicet augeretur. [o] Ibid. c. 181. Alypius dixit, Scriptum ſit iſtos omnes in Villis vel in Fundis eſſe Epiſcopos ordinatos, non in aliquibus Civitatibus. [p] Ibid. c. 182. Petilianus Epiſcopus dixit: Sic etiam tu multos habes per omnes agros diſperſos: Imo crebros ubi habes, ſane & ſine populis habes. [q] Naz. Orat. 20. de Laud. Baſil. Tom. 1. p. 356.

Cit

City had its own Revenues. And laſtly, The War between the two Metropolitans was ended. This, he ſays, was an admirable Policy, worthy the great and noble Soul of St. Baſil, who could turn a Diſpute ſo to the Benefit of the Church, and draw a conſiderable Advantage out of a Calamity, by making it an occaſion to guard and defend his Country with more Biſhops. Whence we may collect, that in Nazianzen's Opinion, it is an Advantage to the Church to be well ſtock'd with Biſhops; and that it is no Diſhonour to her to have Biſhops in ſmall Towns, when Neceſſity and Reaſon require it.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Rule which forbids Two Biſhops to be Ordained in one City.

SECT. I. The General Rule and Practice of the Church, to have but one Biſhop in a City.

ANOTHER Rule generally obſerved in the Church, was, That in one City there ſhould be but one Biſhop, tho' it was large enough to admit of many Presbyters. In the time of Cornelius, there were Forty ſix Presbyters [r] in the Church of Rome, Seven Deacons, as many Sub-Deacons, and Ninety four of the Inferior Orders of the Clergy: And the Body of the People, at a moderate Computation, are reckon'd by ſome [s] to be about Fifty thouſand; by others [t], to be a far greater Number; yet there was but one Biſhop over all theſe. So that when Novatian got himſelf Ordained Biſhop of Rome, in Oppoſition to Cornelius; he was generally condemned over all the World, as tranſgreſſing the Rule of the Catholick Church. Cyprian [u] delivers it as a Maxim upon this Occaſion; That there ought to be but one Biſhop in a Church at a time, and one Judge as the Vicegerent of Chriſt. Therefore he ſays [w] Novatian was no Biſhop, ſince there could not be a Second after the Firſt; but he was an [x] Adulterer, and a Foreigner, an ambitious Uſurper of another Man's Church, who had been regularly Ordained before him. And ſo he was told not only by [y] Cyprian, but a whole African Council at once; who, in return to Novatian's Communicatory Letter, which (according to Cuſtom) he wrote to them upon his Ordination, ſent him this plain and poſitive Anſwer: That he was an Alien; and that none of them could communicate with him, who had attempted to erect a Prophane Altar, and ſet up an Adulterous Chair, and offer Sacrilegious Sacrifice againſt Cornelius the true Biſhop; who had been Ordained by the Approbation of God, and the Suffrage of the Clergy and People. There were, indeed, ſome Confeſſors at Rome, who at firſt ſided with Novatian: but Cyprian [z] wrote a Remonſtrating Letter to them, wherein he ſoberly laid before them the Sinfulneſs of their Practice; And his Admonition wrought ſo effectually on ſome of the chief of them, that not long after they returned to Cornelius, and publickly confeſſed their Fault in theſe Words: We acknowledge our Error; We have been impoſed upon and deluded by treacherous and deceitful Words: For though we ſeemed to communicate with a Schiſmatical and Heretical Man, yet our Mind was always ſincerely in the Church. For we are not ignorant, [a] that as there is but one God, one Chriſt the Lord, and one Holy Spirit; ſo there ought to be but one Biſhop in a Catholick Church. Pamelius [b] and others, who take this for a Confeſſion of the Biſhop of Rome's Supremacy, betray either groſs Ignorance, or great Partiality for a Cauſe: For though this was ſpoken of a Biſhop of Rome, yet it was not peculiar to him, but the common caſe of Biſhops in all Churches. Ignatius and all the Writers after him, who have ſaid any thing of Biſhops, always ſpeak of a ſingle Biſhop in every Church: And tho' [c] Origen ſeems to ſay otherwiſe, that there were Two Biſhops in every Church; yet as he explains his own Notion, his Meaning is the ſame with all the reſt: For he ſays the one was Viſible, the other Inviſible; the one an Angel, the other a Man. So that his Teſtimony (tho' there be ſomething peculiar in his Notion) is a farther Confirmation of the Churches Practice.

The Writers of the following Ages do ſo frequently mention the ſame thing, that it would be as tedious, as it is needleſs to recite their [d] [r] Cornel. Ep. ad Fabium ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43.

[s] Biſhop Burnet, Letter 4. p. 207. [t] Baſnag. Exerc. ad Annal. Baron. an. 44. p. 532. [u] Cypr. Epiſt. 55. al. 59. ad Cornel. p. 129. Unus in Eccleſia ad tempus Sacerdos, & ad tempus Judex Vice Chriſti. [w] Id. Epiſt. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 104. Cum poſt primum ſecundus eſſe non poſſit, quiſquis poſt unum qui ſolus eſſe debeat, factus eſt, non jam Secundus ille, ſed nullus eſt. [x] Ibid. p. 112. Niſi ſi Epiſcopus tibi videtur, qui Epiſcopo in Eccleſia à Sedecim Co-epiſcopis facto, Adulter atque Extraneus, Epiſcopus fieri à deſertoribus per ambitum nititur.
[y] Cypr. Ep. 67. al. 68. ad Steph. p. 177. Se foris eſſe cœpiſſe, nec poſſe à quoquam noſtrum ſibi communicari; qui, Epiſcopo Cornelio in Catholica Eccleſia de Dei judicio, & Cleri ac Plebis ſuffragio ordinato, profanum Altare erigere, Adulteram Cathedram collocare, & Sacrilega contra verum Sacerdotem Sacrificia offerre tentaverit. [z] Cypr. Ep. 44. al. 46. ad Nicoſtrat. & Maxim. [a] Cornel. Ep. 46. al. 49. ad Cyprian. Nec enim ignoramus unum Deum eſſe, unum Chriſtum Dominum, quem confeſſi ſumus, unum Spiritum Sanctum, unum Epiſcopum in Catholica Eccleſia eſſe debere. [b] Pamel. Not. in Loc. [c] Orig. Hom. 13. in Luc. Per ſingulas Eccleſias bini ſunt Epiſcopi, alius Viſibilis, alius Inviſibilis — Ego puto inveniri ſimul poſſe & Angelum & Hominem bonos (leg. Binos) Eccleſiæ Epiſcopos.
[d] See Chryſoſt. Epiſt. 125. ad Cyriac. & Hom. 1. in Philip. Jerom. Epiſt. 4. ad Ruſtic. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Com. in Tit. 2. Pſeudo Hieron. Com. in 1 Tim. c. 3. 12. Hilar. Diac. Com. in Phil. 1. 1. It. in 1 Cor. 12. 28. & 1 Tim. 3. 12. Pacian. Ep. 3. ad Sempronian. Socrat. Lib. 6. c. 22. Sozom. Lib. 4. c. 14, & 15. Theod. Lib. 3. c. 4.

Teſtimonies.

Teſtimonies. Therefore I ſhall only add theſe Two Things: Firſt, That the Council of Nice repeats and confirms this Ancient Rule. For in the Eighth Canon, which ſpeaks of the Novatian Biſhops that return to the Catholick Church, it is ſaid, that any Biſhop may admit them to officiate as Presbyters in the City, or as Chorepiſcopi in the Country, but not as City Biſhops, for this Reaſon, ἵνα μὴ ἐν τῇ πόλει δύο ἐπίσκοποι ὦσιν, That there may not be two Biſhops in one City. Secondly, That in Fact the People were generally poſſeſſed with the Opinion of the Abſolute Unlawfulneſs of having two Biſhops ſit together: Inſomuch that Theodoret tells [b] us, when Conſtantius propoſed to the Roman People to have Liberius and Felix ſit as Copartners, and govern the Church in common, they unanimouſly agreed to reject the Motion, crying out, One God, One Chriſt, One Biſhop.

SECT. II. Yet two Biſhops ſometimes allowed by Compromiſe, to end a Diſpute, or cure an Inveterate Schiſm.

YET it muſt be obſerv'd, that as the great End and Deſign of this Rule was to prevent Schiſm, and preſerve the Peace and Unity of the Church: So on the other hand when it manifeſtly appeared, that the allowing of two Biſhops in one City, in ſome certain Circumſtances and critical Junctures, was the only way to put an end to ſome long and inveterate Schiſm; in that caſe there were ſome Catholick Biſhops, who were willing to take a Partner into their Throne, and ſhare the Epiſcopal Power and Dignity between them. Thus Meletius Biſhop of Antioch made the Propoſal to Paulinus his Antagoniſt, who though he was of the ſame Faith, yet kept up a Church divided in Communion from him. I ſhall relate the Propoſal in the Words [c] of Theodoret. Meletius, ſays he, the meekeſt of Men, thus friendly and mildly addreſſed himſelf to Paulinus: Foraſmuch as the Lord hath committed to me the Care of theſe Sheep, and thou haſt received the Care of others, and all the Sheep agree in one common Faith, let us join our Flocks, my Friend, and diſpute no longer about Primacy and Government: But let us feed the Sheep in common, and beſtow a common Care upon them. [d] And if it be the Throne that creates the Diſpute, I will try to take away this Cauſe alſo. We will lay the Holy Goſpel upon the Seat, and then each of us take his Place on either ſide of it. And if I die firſt, you ſhall take the Government of the Flock alone: But if it be your Fate to die before me, then I will feed them according to my Power. Thus ſpake the Divine Meletius, ſays our Author, Lovingly and Meekly; but Paulinus would not acquieſce, nor hearken to him.

We meet with another ſuch Propoſal made to the Donatiſt Biſhops, by all the Catholick Biſhops of Africk Aſſembled together, at the opening of the famous Conference of Carthage. There they offered them freely before the Conference began, That if they would return to the Unity and Communion of the Church, upon due Conviction, they ſhould retain their [e] Epiſcopal Honour and Dignity ſtill: And becauſe this could not be done, as the Circumſtances and Caſe of the Church then were, without allowing two Biſhops for ſome time to be in the ſame City, it was farther propoſed, That every Catholick Biſhop ſhould take the other to be his Copartner, and ſhare the Honour with him; allowing him to ſit with him in his own Chair, as was uſual for Biſhops to treat their Fellow Biſhops, that were Strangers; and alſo granting him a Church of his own, where he might be capable of returning the like Civility: That ſo they might pay mutual Reſpect and Honour to each other, and take their turns to ſit higheſt in the Church, till ſuch times as one of them ſhould die; and then the Right of Succeſſion ſhould be always in a ſingle Biſhop, as it was before. And this, they ſay, was no new thing in Africk: For from the Beginning of the Schiſm, they that would recant their Error, and condemn their Separation, and return to the Unity of the Church, were by the Charity of the Catholicks always treated in the ſame courteous manner. From hence it is plain, that this had been the Practice of Africk for above one whole Century; and the preſent Biſhops propoſed to follow the Example of their Predeceſſors, in making this Conceſſion to the Donatiſts, in order to cloſe up and heal the Diviſions of the Church. But they add, That foraſmuch as this Method might not be acceptable to all Chriſtian People, who would be much better pleaſed to ſee only a ſingle Biſhop in every Church, and perhaps would not endure the Partnerſhip of two, which was an unuſual thing: They therefore propoſed in this Caſe, that both the Biſhops ſhould freely reſign, and ſuffer a ſingle Biſhop to be choſen by ſuch Biſhops as were ſingly poſſeſſed of other Churches. So that at once they teſtify both what was the uſual and ordinary Rule of the Church, to have but one Biſhop in a City, and alſo how far they were willing to have receded, in order to eſtabliſh the Peace and Unity of the Church in that extraordinary Juncture. I have been the more easily tempted to recite this Passage at large, not only because it is a full Proof of all that has been asserted in this Chapter, but because it gives us such an Instance of a Noble, Self-denying Zeal, and Charity, as is scarce to be parallel'd in any History; and shews us the Admirable Spirit of those Holy Bishops, among whom St. Austin was a Leader.

[b] Theod. Lib. 2. c. 17. [c] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 3. [d] Εἰ ἐν ὁ μέσῳ θᾶκος ἡ ἔριν γεννᾷ, ἐγὼ κἀ τοῦτην ἀφελάσω παρασομαι. ἐν δὲ τούτῳ τὸ θεῖον προτεθήκως εὐαγγέλιον, ἑκατέρωθεν ἡμᾶς καθήσω παρεγύω. [e] Collat. Carth. 1. die, c. 16. Sic nobiſcum teneant Unitatem, ut non ſolum viam ſalutis inveniant, ſed nec Honorem Epiſcopatus amittant. —— Poterit quippe unuſquiſque noſtrum, Honoris ſibi ſocio copulato, viciſſim ſedere eminentius, ſicut Peregrino Epiſcopo juxta conſidente Colleg. Hoc cum alternis Baſilicis utriuſque conceditur, uterque ab alterutro Honore mutuo prævenitur: Quia ubi præceptio Charitatis dilataverit Corda, poſſeſſio Pacis non ſit auguſta, ut uno eorum defuncto, deinceps jam ſingulis ſinguli, priſtino more, ſuccedant. Nec novum aliquid fiet: Nam hoc ab ipſius Separationis Exordio, in eis qui damnato nefariæ diſceſſionis errore, unitatis dulcedinem vel ſero: ſapuerunt, Catholica Dilectio cuſtodivit. Aut ſi forte Chriſtiani Populi ſingulis delectantur Epiſcopis, & duorum Conſortium, inuſitata rerum facie, tolerare non poſſunt: Utrique de medio ſecedamus; & Eccleſiis in ſingulis, damnata ſchiſmatis cauſa in unitate pacifica conſtitutis, ab his qui ſinguli in Eccleſiis ſingulis invenientur, unitati factæ per longa neceſſaria ſinguli conſtituantur Epiſcopi.

SECT. III. The Opinions of Learned Men concerning Two Bishops in a City in the Apostolick Age, one of the Jews, and the other of the Gentiles.

SOME very Learned [a] Persons are farther of Opinion, that this Rule about one Bishop in a City, did not take place in the Apostolical Age: For they think that before the perfect Incorporation and Coalition of the Jews and Gentiles into one Body, there were Two Bishops in many Cities, one of the Jews, and another of the Gentiles. Thus they think it was at Antioch, where Euodius and Ignatius are said to be Bishops ordained by the Apostles; as also Linus and Clemens at Rome, the one ordained by St. Peter Bishop of the Jews, and the other by St. Paul Bishop of the Gentiles. Epiphanius seems to have been of this Opinion. For he says, [b] Peter and Paul were the first Bishops of Rome; and he makes it a question whether they did not ordain Two other Bishops to supply their Places in their Absence. In another place [c] he takes occasion to say, That Alexandria never had Two Bishops, as other Churches had; which Observation, Bishop Pearson thinks, ought to be extended to the Apostolical Ages; as implying, that St. Mark being the only Preacher of the Gospel at Alexandria, left but one Bishop his Successor; but in other Churches sometimes Two Apostles gathered Churches, and each of them left a Bishop in his Place. Yet this does not satisfy other Learned [d] Persons, who are of a different Judgment, and think that tho' the Apostles had occasion to Ordain two Bishops in some Cities, yet it was not upon the account of different Churches of Jews and Gentiles, but in the ordinary way of Succession: As Ignatius was Ordained at Antioch after the Death of Euodius, and Clemens at Rome after the Death of Linus. I shall not pretend to determine on which side the Right lies in so nice a Dispute, [e] but leave it to the Judicious Reader, and only say, that if the former Opinion prevails, it proves another Exception to the common Rule of having but one Bishop in a City; or rather shews what was the Practice of the Church before the Rule was made.

SECT. IV. The Case of Coadjutors.

To these we may add a third Exception in a Case that is more plain, which was that of the Coadjutors. These were such Bishops as were ordained to assist some other Bishops in case of Infirmity or Old Age, and were to be Subordinate to them as long as they lived, and succeed them when they died. Thus when Narcissus Bishop of Jerusalem was disabled by reason of his great Age, (being a hundred and twenty years old) Alexander was made his Coadjutor. Eusebius [f] and St. Jerom both say it was done by Revelation; but they do not mean, that Narcissus needed a Revelation to Authorize him to take a Coadjutor, but only to point out to him that particular Man: For Alexander was a Stranger, and a Bishop already in another Country, so that without a Revelation he could not have been judged qualified for this Office; but being once declared to be so, there was no scruple upon any other Account, but by the unanimous Consent [g] of all the Bishops in Palestine, he was chosen to take part with Narcissus in the Care and Government of the Church. Valesius [h] reckons this the first Instance of any Coadjutor to be met with in ancient History, but there are several Examples in the following Ages. Theotecnus Bishop of Cæsarea made Anatolius his Coadjutor, designing him to be his Successor; so that for some time they [i] both governed the same Church together: Maximus [k] is said by Sozomen to be Bishop of Jerusalem, together with Macarius. Orion Bishop of Palæbisca, being grown old, ordained Siderius his Coadjutor and Successor, as Synesius [l] informs us. So Theodoret [m] takes notice that John Bishop of Apamea had one Stephen for his Collegue. And St. Ambrose [n] mentions one Senecio, who was Coadjutor to Bassus. In the same manner Gregory Nazianzen was Bishop of Nazianzum, together with his aged Father. Baronius indeed [o] denies that ever he was Bishop of Nazianzum, but St. Jerom [p] and all the ancient Historians, Socrates [q], Sozomen [r], Ruffin [s], and Theodoret [t] expressly assert it; though some of them mistake in calling him his Father's Successor: For he was no otherwise Bishop of Nazianzum, but only as his Father's Coadjutor. He enter'd upon the Office with this Protestation, That he would not be obliged to continue Bishop there any longer than his Father lived, as he himself acquaints [u] us in his own Life, and other Places; so that after his Father's Death he actually Resigned, and getting Eulalius to be ordained in his room, he betook himself [w] to a private Life. All which evi-

[a] Pearson. Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 13. p. 414. Hammond. Differt. 5. adv. Blondel. c. 1. [b] Epiphan. Hær. 27. Carpocrat. n. 6. [c] Idem. Hær. 68. Meletian. n. 6. [d] Coteler. Not. in Constitut. Apost. Lib. 7. c. 46. [e] Bishop Pearson himself alter'd his Opinion. See his Differt. 2. de Successione Rom. Pontif. c. 3. [f] Euseb. Lib. 6. c. 11. [g] Hieron. de Script. Eccl. in Alexandro, Cunctis in Palæstina Episcopis in unum congregatis, adnitente quoque ipso vel maxime Narcisso, Hierosolymitanæ Ecclesiæ cum eo gubernaculum suscepit. [h] Vales. Not. in Euseb. Lib. 6. c. 11. [i] Euseb. Lib. 7. c. 32. ἅμφω τὴν αὐτῆς πρόσηκε ἐκκλησίας. [k] Sozom. Lib. 2. c. 20. [l] Synes. Ep. 67. [m] Theod. Lib. 5. c. 4. [n] Ambr. 79. ad Theophil. Fratri nostro & Coepiscopo Basso in Consortium regendæ Ecclesiæ datus est Senecio. [o] Baron. an. 371. n. 6. [p] Hieron. de Script. Eccl. Gregorius primum Sasimorum, deinde Nazianzenas Episcopus, &c. [q] Socrat. Lib. 4. c. 26. [r] Sozom. Lib. 6. c. 17. [s] Ruffin. Lib. 2. c. 9. [t] Theodor. Lib. 5. c. 8. [u] Naz. Carm. de Vita sua. It. Orat. 8. ad Patr. [w] Naz. Ep. 42. ad Greg. Nyss.

dently

dently proves that he was not his Father's Succeſſor, but only his Coadjutor. I will but add one Inſtance more of this Nature, which is the known Caſe of St. Auſtin, who was ordained Biſhop of Hippo whilſt Valerius was living, and ſat with him [x] for ſome time as his Coadjutor; which he did by the conſent of the Primate of Carthage, and the Primate of Numidia, who ordained him. Poſſidius ſays, he had ſome ſcruple upon him at firſt, becauſe he looked upon it as contrary to the Cuſtom of the Church: But being told, that it was a thing commonly practiſed both in the African and Tranſmarine Churches, he yielded with ſome Reluctancy to be ordained. Theſe Inſtances are evident Proof, that it was not thought contrary to the true ſenſe of the Canon, in caſe of Infirmity or old Age, to have Coadjutors in the Church: Though, 'tis true, St. Auſtin was of Opinion that his own Ordination was not Regular, when afterward he came to know the Nicene Canon, which he did not know before; and for this Reaſon he would not ordain [y] Eradius Biſhop whilſt he himſelf lived, though he had nominated him with the conſent of the Church to be his Succeſſor. But all Men did not underſtand the Canon in this ſtrict and rigorous Senſe that St. Auſtin did, as abſolutely forbidding two Biſhops to be in a Church at the ſame time in all Caſes whatſoever, but only when there was no juſt Reaſon, and the Neceſſities of the Church did not require it: But if there was a reaſonable Cauſe to have more Biſhops than one, as when a Biſhop was unable to execute his Office, or in any the like Caſe, the Canon did not oblige, as appears from the Inſtances that have been mentioned, and ſeveral others that might be added to them.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Chorepiſcopi, Πρεσβύτεροι, and Suffragan Biſhops: And how theſe differed from one another.

SECT. I. Of the reaſon of the Name Chorepiſcopi, and the Miſtake of ſome about it.

AS the Biſhops, when they were diſabled by old Age or Infirmity, ordained themſelves Coadjutors in the City: So when their Dioceſes were enlarged by the Converſion of Pagans in the Country and Villages at a great diſtance from the City-Church, they created themſelves another ſort of Aſſiſtants in the Country, whom they called Chorepiſcopi; who were ſo named, not becauſe they were ex Choro Sacerdotum, as a Latin Writer [z] by miſtake derives the Word, but becauſe they were τῆ χώρας ἐπίσκοποι, Country-Biſhops, as the Word properly ſignifies, and not Presbyters of the City Regions, as Salmaſius underſtands it.

SECT. II. Three different Opinions about the Nature of this Order: 1ſt. That they were mere Presbyters.

NOw though the Name does in ſome meaſure determine their Quality, yet great Diſpute has been among Learned Men concerning the Nature of this Order. Among the Schoolmen and Canoniſts 'tis a received Opinion, that they were only Presbyters; as they may be ſeen in Turrian [a], Eſtius [b], Antonius Auguſtinus [c] and Gratian [d], who are followed not only by Salmaſius [e], but by [f] Spalatenſis, [g] Dr. Field, and Dr. Forbes [h], the laſt of which brings ſeveral Arguments to prove that they were mere Presbyters, and never had any Epiſcopal Ordination.

SECT. III. A 2d Opinion, that ſome of them were Presbyters, and ſome of them Biſhops.

OTHERS think there were two ſorts of Chorepiſcopi, ſome that had Epiſcopal Ordination, and others that were ſimple Presbyters: Which is the Opinion of Cabaſſutius [i], Peter de Marca [k] and Bellarmin [l]. They all allow that in ſome Caſes it happen'd that the Chorepiſcopi were Biſhops, becauſe they were ordained Biſhops before they were made Chorepiſcopi. And thus much is certainly true: For in the Primitive Church, ſometimes Biſhops were ordained to a Place, but not received, either through the perverſeneſs of the People, or by reaſon of Perſecution, or the like Cauſe: And ſuch Biſhops (whom the ancient Writers [m] and Canons term χολῶντες and χολάζοντες ἐπίσκοποι, vacant Biſhops) not being permitted to Officiate in their own Church, were admitted to act as Chorepiſcopi under any other Biſhop that would entertain them. The Council of Nice [n] made the like Proviſion for ſuch of the Novatian Biſhops as would return to the Catholick Church; that the Biſhop of the Place ſhould admit them either to the Office of a City-Presbyter, or a Chorepiſcopus; that there might not be two Biſhops in one City. And ſo it was determined likewiſe by [x] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 8. Paulin. Ep. 46. ad Roman. Aug. Ep. 34. & 110. [y] Aug. Ep. 110. Quod reprehenſum eſt in me, nolo reprehendi in Filio meo. Erit Presbyter ut eſt, quando Deus voluerit futurus Epiſcopus. [z] Raban. Maur. de Inſtit. Sacerd. Lib. 1. c. 5. Salmaſ. de Primat. c. 1. [a] Turrian. Not. in Can. 54. Con. Nic. Arabic. [b] Eſt. in 4. Sent. Diſt. 34. §. 30. [c] Ant. Auguſt. Epit. Jur. Can. Lib. 6. Tit. 1. c. 8, 11, 13. [d] Grat. Diſt. 6. c. 4, 5. [e] Walo Meſſalin. c. 5. p. 315. [f] Spalat. de Repub. Par. 1. Lib. 2. c. 9. n. 17, 18, 19. [g] Field of the Church, Lib. 5. c. 29. [h] Forb. Iren. Lib. c. 11. Prop. 14. p. 249. [i] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 8. p. 45. [k] Pet. de Marca de Concord. Lib. 2. c. 13. [l] Bellarm. de Cleric. Lib. 1. c. 17. [m] Socrat. H. E. Lib. 4. c. 7. Conc. Antioch. Can. 16. [n] Conc. Nic. can. 8.

the

the ſame Council [o] in the Caſe of the Meletian Biſhops, that upon their return to the Unity of the Church, they ſhould be allow'd to officiate in Subordination to the Biſhops of the Catholick Church. Now it is plain that all ſuch Chorepiſcopi as theſe were properly Biſhops, becauſe they were originally ordained Biſhops before they came to act in the Quality of Country-Biſhops under others. But for all the reſt, de Marca thinks they were only Presbyters.

SECT. IV. The 3d Opinion, that they were all Biſhops, the moſt probable.

BOTH theſe Opinions (which differ little from one another) are rejected by Biſhop Barlow [p], Dr. Hammond [q], Dr. Beverege [r], Dr. Cave [s], and even by Mr. Blondel [t] himſelf, who though by ſome reckoned among thoſe of the contrary Opinion, has a long Diſſertation againſt de Marca, to prove that all the Chorepiſcopi mentioned in the ancient Councils were properly Biſhops. And there needs no fuller Proof of this than what Athanaſius ſays in his 2d Apology, where he puts a manifeſt Diſtinction betwixt Presbyters and the Chorepiſcopi. For ſpeaking of the irregular Promotion of Iſchyras, who was made Biſhop of the Region of Mareotis by the Euſebian Faction, he ſays, Mareotis was only a Region of Alexandria, and that all the Churches of that Precinct were immediately ſubject to the Biſhop of Alexandria, and never had either Biſhop or Chorepiſcopus [u] among them, but only Presbyters fixt each in their reſpective Villages or Churches. This, as Blondel [w] well obſerves, ſhews evidently that the Chorepiſcopi were not the ſame with Presbyters, however the Forger of the Decretal Epiſtles under the Name of Pope Leo and Damaſus, would have perſuaded the World to believe ſo.

SECT. V. Some Objections againſt this anſwered.

BUT why then does the Council of Neocæſarea [x] ſay that the Chorepiſcopi were only in imitation of the Seventy? I anſwer, becauſe they were ſubject to the City-Biſhops, as the 70 Elders were ſubject to Moſes, or the 70 Diſciples to the Apoſtles. For whatever the Council means by the Seventy, it cannot be proved thence that the Chorepiſcopi were mere Presbyters.

But it is ſaid, that they could not be Biſhops, becauſe the Ordination of Biſhops was to be performed by three Biſhops, with the conſent of the Metropolitan and the Provincial Biſhop; whereas the Council of Antioch [y] ſays, That a Chorepiſcopus was ordained by one Biſhop only, the Biſhop of the City to whoſe Juriſdiction he belonged. To this the Reply is eaſy, that this was one principal difference between the City-Biſhops and Country-Biſhops, who differed both in the manner of their Ordination, and in their Power: For the one was ſubordinate to the other: Therefore thoſe Canons which require three Biſhops to impoſe Hands in the Ordination of a Biſhop, ſpeak only of ſuch Biſhops as were to be Abſolute and Supreme Governors of their own Dioceſe, and not of ſuch who were ſubordinate to them, whom the City-Biſhops might ordain at their own Diſcretion, yet ſo as to ſtand accountable to a Provincial Synod.

SECT. VI. The Chorepiſcopi allowed to ordain the Inferior Clergy, but not Presbyters or Deacons, without ſpecial Licenſe from the City Biſhop.

THE Office of theſe Chorepiſcopi was to preſide over the Country-Clergy, and enquire into their Behaviour, and make report thereof to the City-Biſhop; as alſo to provide fit Perſons for the Inferior Service and Miniſtry of the Church. And to give them ſome Authority, they had certain Privileges conferred on them. As 1ſt, they might ordain Readers, Sub-Deacons, and Exorciſts for the uſe of the Country-Churches. St. Baſil [z] requires of his Chorepiſcopi that they ſhould firſt acquaint him with the Qualification of ſuch Perſons, and take his Licenſe to ordain them: But the Council of Antioch [a] gives them a General Commiſſion to ordain all under Presbyters and Deacons, without conſulting the City-Biſhop upon every ſuch Promotion: And for Presbyters and Deacons, they might ordain them too, but not μίχα τῷ ἐν τῇ πόλει ἐπισκόπῳ, without the ſpecial Leave of the City-Biſhop, under whoſe Juriſdiction both they and the Country were. And this is the meaning of the Council of Ancyra, [b] which ſays the Chorepiſcopi ſhall not have Power to ordain Presbyters or Deacons: Which we muſt interpret by the Explication given in the Council of Antioch, that they ſhould not be Authorized to do it without the particular Direction of the City-Biſhop, but by his Leave they might.

SECT. VII. They had Power to confirm.

2. THEY had Power to miniſter Confirmation to ſuch as were newly Baptized in Country-Churches. This is expreſly provided by the Council of Riez [c] in the Caſe of Armentarius, whom they reduced to the Quality of a Chorepiſcopus, but ſtill allowed him the Privilege of Confirming Neophites; which argues that Confirmation might then be adminiſtred by the Hands of the Chorepiſcopi in Country-Churches.

SECT. VIII. And Power to grant Letters Dimiſſory to the Clergy.

3. THEY had Power to grant Letters Dimiſſory, or as they were otherwiſe called, Canonical and Irenical Letters, to the Country-Clergy, who deſired to remove [o] Conc. Nic. Ep. Synod. ap. Socrat. H. E. Lib. 1. c. 9. [p] Barlow's Letter to Biſhop Uſher, in Uſh. Let. 222. p. 520. [q] Ham. Diſſert. 3. cont. Blondel. c. 8. [r] Bevereg. Pandect. T. 2. Not. in Conc. Ancyr. can. 13. [s] Cave Prim. Chriſt. Par. 1. c. 8. p. 224. [t] Blondel. Apol. p. 95, &c. [u] Athan. Apol. 2. T. 1. p. 802. [w] Blondel. Apol. p. 127. Non unum cum Presbyteris Chorepiſcopus fuiſſe, ut eandem formam geſtaſſe, prout Decretalium ſuppoſitori ſomniare viſum eſt. (x) Conc. Neocæſar. can. 14. χωρεπίσκοποι εἰσὶ μὲν εἰς τύπον τῶν ἑβδομήκοντα. [y] Concil. Antioch. can. 10. [z] Baſil. Epiſt. 181. [a] Conc. Antioch. can. 10. [b] Con. Ancyr. can. 14. [c] Conc. Reienſ. c. 3.

from

from one Dioceſe to another. Thus I underſtand that Canon of the Council of Antioch [d] which ſays, Country-Presbyters ſhall not grant Canonical Letters, κανονικὰς ἐπιστολὰς, or ſend Letters to any Neighbour Biſhop; but the Chorepiſcopi may grant εἰρηνικὰς, Letters Dimiſſory, or Letters of Peace.

SECT. IX. They had Power to officiate in the Preſence of the City-Biſhop.

4. THEY had liberty to Officiate in the City-Church, in the Preſence of the Biſhop and Presbyters of the City, which Country-Presbyters had not. For ſo the Council of Neocæſarea determined in Two Canons to this Purpoſe [e]: "The Country-"Presbyters ſhall not offer the Oblation, nor "diſtribute the Bread and Wine in time of "Prayer in the City-Church, when the Biſhop "and Presbyters are preſent: But the Country-"Biſhops, being in Imitation of the Seventy, as "Fellow-Labourers, for their Care of the Poor, "are admitted to offer.

SECT. X. And to Sit and Vote in Councils.

5. THEY had the Privilege of Sitting and Voting in Synods and Councils: Of which there are ſeveral Inſtances ſtill remaining in the Acts of the ancient Councils. In the firſt Nicene Council [f] Palladius and Selucius ſubſcribe themſelves Chorepiſcopi of the Province of Cœloſyria: Eudemon Chorepiſcopus of the Province of Cilicia: Gorgonius, Stephanus, Euphronius, Rhodon, Theophanes, Chorepiſcopi of the Province of Cappadocia: Heſychius, Theodore, Anatolius, Quintus, Aquila, Chorepiſcopi of the Province of Iſauria: Theuſtinus and Eulalius of the Province of Bithynia: So again in the Council of Neocæſarea [g] Stephanus and Rudus or Rhodon, two of the ſame that were in the Council of Nice, ſubſcribed themſelves Chorepiſcopi of the Province of Cappadocia. And in the Council of Epheſus [h], Cæſarius Chorepiſcopus of Alce.

SECT. XI. The Power of the Chorepiſcopi not the ſame in all Times and Places.

BUT here I muſt obſerve, that the Power and Privileges of the Chorepiſcopi varied much, according to the Difference of Times and Places. For when the Synod of Riez in France, Ann. 439, had depoſed Armentarius from his Biſhoprick, becauſe he was Uncanonically ordained, they allowed him the Privilege of being a Chorepiſcopus, after the Example of the Nicene Fathers, but limited him as to the Exerciſe of his Power. For though they gave him Authority to Confirm Neophytes, and Conſecrate Virgins, and Celebrate the Euchariſt in any Country-Church with Preference to any Presbyter of the Region: Yet 1ſt they denied him [i] the Privilege of Conſecrating the Euchariſt in the City-Church, which by the 13th Canon of the Council of Neocæſarea was allowed to other Chorepiſcopi. 2dly, they confined him to a ſingle Church in the Exerciſe of his Chorepiſcopal Power; whereas others had Power over a whole Region. 3dly, They forbad him to ordain any of the Inferior Clergy even in his own Church, which other Chorepiſcopi were allowed to do by the 13th Canon of the Council of Ancyra. And hence it appears, that as their Power was precarious and depending upon the Will of Councils and City-Biſhops, from whom they received it; ſo by this time their Authority began to ſink apace in the Church.

SECT. XII. Their Power firſt ſtruck at by the Council of Laodicea, which ſet up Περιοδευταὶ in their room.

THE Council of Laodicea gave them the firſt Blow, An. 360. For there it was decreed [k] that for the future no Biſhops ſhould be placed in Country Villages, but only Περιοδευταὶ, Itinerant or Viſiting Presbyters; and for ſuch Biſhops as were already Conſtituted, they ſhould do nothing without the Conſent and Direction of the City-Biſhop. In the Council of Chalcedon we meet with ſome ſuch Presbyters expreſly ſtiled Περιοδευταὶ, as Alexander [l] and Valentinus [m], each of which has the Title of Presbyter and Περιοδευτὴς. And ſo in the 5th General Council at Conſtantinople [n] one Sergius a Presbyter has the ſame Title of Περιοδευτὴς, Curator or Viſitor of the Syrian Churches: Yet ſtill the Order of the Chorepiſcopi was preſerved in many Places. For not only mention is made of them by Gregory Nazianzen [o] and St. Baſil in the 4th Century, but alſo by Theodoret [p] who ſpeaks of Hypatius and Abramius, his own Chorepiſcopi; and in the Council of Chalcedon in the 5th Century, we find the Chorepiſcopi ſitting and ſubſcribing in the Name of the Biſhops that ſent them. But this was ſome Diminution of their Power: For in former Councils they ſubſcribed in their own Names, as Learned Men [q] agree. But now their Power was ſinking, and it went on to decay and dwindle by degrees, till at laſt in the 9th Century, when the forged Decretals were ſet on foot, it was pretended that they were not true Biſhops, and ſo the Order by the Pope's Tyranny came to be laid aſide in the Weſtern Church.

SECT. XIII. Of the Attempt to reſtore the Chorepiſcopi in England, under the Name of Suffragan Biſhops.

SOME Attempt was made in England, at the beginning of the Reformation, to reſtore theſe under the Name of Suffragan Biſhops. For as our Hiſtories inform us, [r] by an Act of the 26th of Henry the VIIth, An. 1534, ſeveral Towns were appointed for Suffragan Sees, viz. Thetford, Ipſwich, Colcheſter, Dover, Guilford, Southampton, Taunton, Shaftsbury, Molton, Marlborough, Bed-

[d] Con. Antioch. can. 8. [e] Con. Neocæſ. Can. 13, & 14. [f] Con. Nic. 1. in Subſcription. [g] Con. Neocæſ. in Subſcription. [h] Con. Epheſ. Act. 1. [i] Conc. Reinſ. Can. 3. [k] Con. Laod. Can. 57. [l] Con. Chalced. Act. 4. [m] Ibid. Act. 16. [n] Con. CP. ſub Menna Act 1. p. 563. [o] Nazian. Ep. 88. Theodoro. Baſil. Ep. 181. [p] Theod. Ep. 113. ad Leon. [q] Blondel. Apol. p. 131. Bevereg. Not. in Con Ancyr. c. 13. [r] Burnet. Hiſt. of Refor. Vol. 2. p. 157.

 ford,

ford, Leiceſter, Glouceſter, Shrewsbury, Briſtol, Penreth, Bridgewater, Nottingham, Grantham, Hull, Huntington, Cambridge, Pereth, Barwick, St. Germans in Cornwall, and the Iſle of Wight. Theſe Suffragans were to be conſecrated by the Archbiſhop, and two other Biſhops, and by the Act to have the ſame Epiſcopal Power, as Suffragans formerly had within this Realm: But none of them either to have or act any thing properly Epiſcopal, without the Conſent and Permiſſion of the Biſhop of the City, in whoſe Dioceſe he was placed and conſtituted. Now any one that compares this with the Account that I have given of the ancient Chorepiſcopi, will eaſily perceive that theſe Suffragans were much of the ſame Nature with them. But then I muſt obſerve that this was a new Name for them: For anciently Suffragan Biſhops were all the City-Biſhops of any Province under a Metropolitan, who were called his Suffragans, becauſe they met at his Command to give their Suffrage, Counſel or Advice in a Provincial Synod. And in this Senſe the Word was uſed in England, at that time when Linwood wrote his Provinciale, which was not above an hundred Years before the Reformation, An. 1430. in his Comment upon one of the Conſtitutions of John Peckham, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, which begins with theſe Words, Omnibus & Singulis Coepiſcopis Suffraganeis Noſtris: To all and ſingular our Fellow-Biſhops and Suffragans: Upon this Word Suffragans he has this Note: [s] "They "were called Suffragans, becauſe they were "bound to give their Suffrage and Aſſiſtance "to the Archbiſhop, being ſummoned to take "part in his Care, though not in the Plenitude "of his Power." Whence it is plain that in his time, Suffragan Biſhops did not ſignifie Chorepiſcopi, or Rural Biſhops, but all the Biſhops of England under their Archbiſhops or Metropolitans. Thus it was alſo in other Churches: The Seventy Biſhops who were immediately ſubject to the Biſhop of Rome, as their Primate or Metropolitan, were called his Suffragans, becauſe they were frequently called to his Synods; as the reaſon of the Name is given in an ancient Vatican MS. cited by [t] Baronius.

SECT. XIV. Suffragan Biſhops different from the Chorepiſcopi in the Primitive Church.

SECT. XV. The Suffragan Biſhops of the Roman Province called by a Technical Name, Libra.

AND here it will not be amiſs to obſerve, whilſt we are ſpeaking of Suffragan Biſhops, that theſe 70 Biſhops, who were Suffragans to the Biſhop of Rome, were by a peculiar Technical Name called Libra; which Name was given them for no other Reaſon, but becauſe of their Number Seventy. For the Roman Libra, as Antiquaries [u] note, conſiſted of 70 Solidi, or ſo many Parts; and therefore the Number 70 in any other Things or Perſons, thence took the Name of Libra: As the 70 Witneſſes which are introduced depoſing againſt Marcellinus, in the Council of Sinueſſa, that they ſaw him Sacrifice, are by the Author of thoſe Acts [w] termed Libra Occidua, for no other Reaſon, as Baronius [x] conceives, but becauſe they were 70 in Number. And Grotius [y] gives the ſame Reaſon for affixing this Title on the 70 Biſhops, who were Aſſeſſors or Suffragans to the Biſhop of Rome; they were, as one might ſay, his Libra, or ordinary Provincial Council.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Interceſſores and Interventores in the African Churches.

SECT. I. Why ſome Biſhops called Interceſſors in the African Churches.

THERE is one Appellation more given to ſome Biſhops in the African Councils, which muſt here be taken Notice of, whilſt we are ſpeaking of Biſhops; which is the Name Interceſſor and Interventor; a Title given to ſome Biſhops upon the account of a Pro-tempore Office which was ſometimes committed to them. In the African Churches, and perhaps in others alſo, upon the Vacancy of a Biſhoprick, it was uſual for the Primate to appoint one of the Provincial Biſhops to be a ſort of Procurator of the Dioceſe, partly to take care of the vacant See, and partly to promote and procure the ſpeedy Election of a new Biſhop. And from this he had the Name of Interceſſor and Interventor.

SECT. II. The Office of an Interceſſor not to laſt above a Year.

THE Deſign of this Office was manifeſtly to promote the good of the Church, but it was liable to be abuſed two ways. For the Interceſſor by this means had a fair Opportunity given to ingratiate himſelf with the People, and promote his own Intereſt among them, inſtead of that of the Church; either by keeping the See void longer than was neceſſary; or if it was a Wealthier, or more Honourable Place than his own, by getting himſelf choſen into it. To obviate any ſuch Deſigns, the A- frican

[s] Linwood Provinc. Lib. 1. Tit. 2. c. 1. Suffraganeis. Sic dictis, quia Archiepiſcopo ſuffragari & aſſiſtere tenentur, &c.
[t] Baron. an. 1057. n. 23. Præter ſeptem Collaterales Epiſcopos erant alii Epiſcopi, qui dicuntur Suffraganei Romani Pontificis, nulli alii Primati vel Archiepiſcopo ſubjecti, qui frequenter ad Synodos vocarentur. [u] Brerewood de Ponder. & Pret. c. 15.
[w] Concil. Sinueſſ. ap. Crab. T. 1. p. 190. Hi omnes electi ſunt Viri, Libra Occidua, qui Teſtimonium perhibent, videntes Marcellinum thurificaſſe. [x] Baron. an. 302. n. 92. [y] Grot. in Luc. 10. 1. Romanis Epiſcopis jam olim 70 Epiſcopi Adſeſſores Libra dicti, quòd Libra Romana tot ſolidos contineret.

frican Fathers in the Fifth Council of Carthage made a Decree, That no Interceſſor ſhould continue in his Office for above a Year; but if he did not procure a new Biſhop to be choſen within that time, another Interceſſor ſhould be ſent in his Room: And the more effectually to cut off all Abuſes, and prevent Corruption, they enacted it alſo into a Law [z] that no Interceſſor ſhould be capable of ſucceeding himſelf in the vacant See, whatever Motions or Solicitations were made by the People in his behalf. So extreamly cautious were theſe Holy African Fathers to prevent Abuſes in Matters of this Nature.

SECT. III. No Interceſſor to be made Biſhop of the Place where he was conſtituted Interceſſor.

CHAP. XVI.

Of Primates or Metropolitans.

SECT. I. Some derive the Original of Metropolitans from Apoſtolical Conſtitution.

THE ſame Reaſons which firſt brought in Chorepiſcopi and Coadjutors, as ſubordinate to Biſhops in every City-Church, made the Biſhops of every Province think it neceſſary to make one of themſelves Superior to all the reſt, and inveſt him with certain Powers and Privileges for the good of the Whole: Whom they therefore named their Primate or Metropolitan, that is, the Principal Biſhop of the Province. Biſhop Uſher [a] derives the Origin of this Settlement from Apoſtolical Conſtitution. So alſo Biſhop Beverege [b], Dr. Hammond [c], Peter de Marca and ſome others. And there are ſeveral Paſſages in Euſebius and Chryſoſtom which ſeem to favour this. For Euſebius [d] ſays, Titus had the Superintendency of all the Churches in Crete: And Chryſoſtom in like manner [e], That the Apoſtle committed to him the whole Iſland, and gave him power to cenſure all the Biſhops thercin. He ſays the ſame of Timothy [f], that he was entruſted with the Government of the Church in the whole Region or Province of Aſia. And it is certain the Cyprian Biſhops in the Council of Epheſus [g], pleaded the Privileges of their Metropolitan to be as ancient as the Apoſtles.

SECT. II. Others from the Age next after the Apoſtles.

BUT it may be doubted, whether the Apoſtles made any ſuch General Settlement of Metropolitans in every Province; And the Records of the Original of moſt Churches being loſt, it cannot be certainly proved they did. De Marca [h] thinks that though the Apoſtles gave a Model or Specimen in Timothy and Titus, yet they left it to following Ages to finiſh and compleat it. Dr. Cave ſays [i], it commenced not long after the Apoſtolick Age, when Sects and Schiſms began to break in apace, and Controverſies multiplying betwee. particular Biſhops, it was found neceſſary to pitch upon one in every Province, to whom the Umpirage of Caſes might be referred, and by whom all Common and Publick Affairs might be directed. Perhaps it took its Riſe from that common Reſpect and Deference, which was uſually paid by the reſt of the Biſhops, to the Biſhop of the Civil Metropolis in every Province; which advancing into a Cuſtom, was afterward made into a Canon by the Council of Nice.

SECT. III. Confeſſed by all to have been long before the Council of Nice.

THIS is certain, that the Nicene Council ſpeaks of Metropolitans as ſettled by ancient Cuſtom long before, when it uſhers in the Canon about them with, ἀρχαῖα ἔθη κρατείτω, Let ancient Cuſtoms [k] be continued; and then goes on to ſpeak of the Cuſtom in Egypt, which was for the Biſhop of Alexandria to have Power over all the Churches of Egypt, Libya and Pentapolis: Which was Metropolitical, if not Patriarchal, Power. Epiphanius [l] mentions the ſame, ſpeaking of Alexander and Peter, Biſhops of Alexandria before the Council of Nice, he ſays, They had ἐκκλησιαστικὴν διοίκησιν, the Adminiſtration of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs throughout all Egypt, Thebais, Mareotes, Libya, Ammoniaca, Mareotis and Pentapolis. And Athanaſius [m] ſpeaking of Dionyſius, who was Biſhop of Alexandria above 60 Years before this Council, ſays, he alſo enjoyed this Power, having the Care of the Churches of Pentapolis and Libya, when Sabellius broached his Hereſie, and that he wrote Letters of Admonition to ſeveral Biſhops of thoſe Parts, who began to be infected with his Hereſie. Theſe are undeniable Evidences that the Biſhops of Alexandria were not firſt inveſted with Metropolitical Power by the Council of Nice, but only confirmed in thoſe Rights which by ancient Cuſtom and Preſcription they had long enjoyed. And this was alſo the Caſe of other Churches.

[z] Con. Carth. 5. Can. 8. Placuit, ut nulli Interceſſori licitum ſit, Cathedram cui Interceſſor datus eſt, quibuſlibet Populorum ſtudiis, vel Seditionibus retinere: Sed dare operam, ut intra annum eiſdem Epiſcopum provideat. Quod ſi neglexerit, anno expleto, Interventor alius tribuatur. [a] Uſſer. de Orig. Epiſc. & Metrop. [b] Bevereg. Cod. Can. Vind. Lib. 2. c. 5. n. 12. [c] Ham. Præf. to Titus. It. Diſſert. 4. cont. Blondel. c. 5.

[d] Euſeb. H. E. Lib. 3. c. 4. Τῶν ἐπὶ Κρήτης ἐκκλησιῶν ἐπισκοπὴν ἐλαχέναι. [e] Chryſ. Hom. 1. in Tit. νῆσον ὁλόκληρον —— ᾗ τοσούτων ἐπισκόπων κείσιν ἐπέτρεψεν.

[f] Id. Hom. 15. in 1 Tim. [g] Con. Epheſ. Act. 7. [h] Marca de Concord. Lib. 6. c. 1. n. 9. [i] Cave. Ch. Gov. p. 92. [k] Con. Nicen. can. 6. [l] Epiphan. Hær. 68. n. 1. & Hær. 69. n. 3. [m] Athan. de Sentent. Dionyſ. T. 1. p. 552.

The

The Council of Eliberis in Spain [n], ſpeaks of a Primæ Cathedræ Epiſcopus, a Primate or Biſhop of the firſt See: And thoſe called the Apoſtles Canons, (which were the Canons of the Greek Church in the 3d Century) mention a πρῶτος, or chief Biſhop in every Province, whom the reſt were to look upon as their Head [o], and do nothing without him. And it appears from ſeveral of Cyprian's Epiſtles [p], that the Biſhop of Carthage had a Preſidency over all the other African Biſhops, and Power to ſend his Mandates among them. And St. Auſtin ſpeaks of the Primate of Numidia, as well as the Primate of Carthage, before the Schiſm of the Donatiſts: and ſays, They gave that for one Reaſon of their Schiſm [q], that the Primate of Numidia was not called to elect and conſecrate the Primate of Carthage. And therefore, as both the ſame St. Auſtin [r] and Optatus [s] take notice, the Donatiſts pretending that the Ordination of Cæcilian Biſhop of Carthage was not valid, becauſe not performed by a Primate, ſent for Secundus Tigiſitanus, who was then Primate of Numidia, to ordain Majorinus in his room. Now as all this was tranſacted ſeveral Years before the Council of Nice, ſo it proves that Primates were in Africk antecedent to the Eſtabliſhment of that Council.

SECT. IV. Proofs of Metropolitans in the 2d Century.

IF we aſcend higher yet, and look into the 2d Century, there are ſome Foot-ſteps of the ſame Power, though not ſo evident as the former. Lyons in France was a Metropolis in the Civil Account, and Irenæus who was Biſhop of it, is ſaid to have the Superintendency of the Gallican Paroeciæ, or Dioceſes, as Euſebius [t] words it. Philip Biſhop of Gortyna in Crete, is ſtiled by Dionyſius [u] of Corinth, Biſhop of all the Cretian Churches. Polycrates Biſhop of Epheſus preſided [w] in Council over all the Biſhops of Aſia; Palmas Biſhop of Amaſtris over the Biſhops of Pontus, and Theophilus [x] of Cæſarea with Narciſſus of Jeruſalem, over the reſt of the Biſhops of Paleſtine.

Theſe are the common Proofs, which are ordinarily alledged in this Caſe. Yet I ſhall freely own, that the three laſt of them do not cogently prove the thing in Diſpute. For preſiding in Council does not neceſſarily infer Metropolitical Power; becauſe they might preſide as Senior Biſhops, as Euſebius ſays expreſly one of them did, viz. Palmas Biſhop of Amaſtris, ὡς ἀρχαιότατος καὶ πρωτέταχτο, He preſided as the moſt ancient Biſhop among them. Which ſeems to be noted by Euſebius not without good Reaſon; for Heraclea, and not Amaſtris, was the Civil Metropolis of Pontus. Blondel from this Paſſage concludes, That at this time the Senior Biſhops in all Places were the Metropolitans. But this does not ſufficiently appear to have been the Cuſtom any where elſe but in the African Churches, of which I ſhall preſently give an Account: For the other Inſtances that have been given, ſeem rather to make it evident, that the Biſhops of the Civil Metropoles were generally the Primates or Metropolitans in the Church alſo.

SECT. V. By what Names Metropolitans were anciently called.

'TIS true indeed, none of theſe are expreſly called Metropolitans: For that Name ſcarcely occurs in any ancient Record before the Council of Nice: But they were at firſt termed πρῶτοι, and κεφαλαί, chief Biſhops, and Heads of the Province, as the Apoſtolical Canon [y] ſtiles them. After-Ages gave them other Names, as that of Archbiſhops, at Alexandria [z] and other Places, till that Name became appropriate to the Patriarchs. The Council of Sardica [a] ſtiles them Ἔξαρχοι τ ἐπαρχίας, Exarchs of the Province. St. Auſtin ſometimes calls them Principes [b], Princes: And Pope Hilary [c] Monarchs. But theſe being Titles of Secular Grandeur, and ſavouring too much of abſolute Sovereignty and Dominion, were expreſly prohibited by the 3d Council of Carthage, which ordered, that no Superior Biſhop ſhould be called [d] High-Prieſt, or Prince of the Prieſts, but only Primæ ſedis Epiſcopus, Primate, or Senior Biſhop. Hence it was that thoſe Biſhops, who in other parts of the World were called Metropolitans, in Africk had commonly the Name of Primates; though we ſometimes meet with the Name Metropolitan [e] in the African Councils alſo.

SECT. VI. Primates in Africk called Senes, becauſe the oldeſt Biſhop was always Metropolitan.

BUT theſe Primates in Africk are frequently called Patres and Senes. As in the African Code Xantippus Primate of Numidia, is once and again [f] ſtiled Senes Xantippus. And St. Auſtin writing to him, inſcribes his Epiſtle [g] Patri & Conſacerdoti Seni Xantippo. And thus in many other Epiſtles [h] writing to the Primates, or ſpeaking of them, he gives them the Name of Senes. And there was a peculiar Reaſon for giving them this Name in Africk. For here the Primacy was not fixed, as in other Places, to the Civil Metropolis, but always went along with the oldeſt Biſhop of the Province, who ſucceeded to this Dignity by vertue of his Seniority, whatever Place he lived in. In other Parts of the World the Biſhop of the Civil Metropolis was commonly Metropolitan in the Church alſo. And ſo it was ordered to be by ſeveral Canons both by the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches. The Council of Antioch [i] bids all Biſhops obſerve, that the Biſhop of the Metropolis has the Care of the whole Province, becauſe all Men that have Buſineſs or Controverſies to be decided, reſort from all Parts to the Metropolis. And the Council of Turin [k] upon this foot determined a Diſpute about Primacy betwixt the Two Biſhops of Arles and Vienna; Decreeing that he that could prove his City to be the Metropolis, ſhould be the Primate of the whole Province. The Council of Chalcedon has Two Canons [l] appointing thoſe Cities to be Metropoles in the Church, which were ſo in the Civil Diviſion of the Empire. And the Council of Trullo [m] has one to the ſame purpoſe.

[n] Con. Eliber. an. 305. can. 58. [o] Can. Apoſt. c. 35. [p] Cypr. Ep. 42. ad Cornel. Per Provinciam noſtram hæc eadem Collegis ſingulis in notitiam perferentes, ab his quoque Fratres noſtros cum Literis dirigendos eſſe mandavimus. See alſo Ep. 40. ad Pleb. Carthag. Ep. 45. ad Cornel. [q] Aug. Brevic. Collat. tert. die, c. 16. [r] Aug. cont. Parmen. Lib. 1. c. 3. Venientes cum Primate ſuo tunc Secundo Tigiſitano, &c. [s] Optat. Lib. 1. p. 41. [t] Euſeb. H. E. Lib. 5. c. 23. Τῶν κατ' Ἰλλίαν παροικιῶν, ἃς Εἰρηναῖος ὑπεσκόπει. [u] Dionyſ. Ep. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 4. c. 3. [w] Euſeb. Lib. 5. c. 24. [x] Euſeb. Lib. 5. c. 23. [y] Canon. Apoſt. c. 35. [z] Epiphan. Hær. 68, & 69. [a] Con. Sard. can. 6. [b] Aug. Brevic. Collat. tert. die, c. 16. Non exſpectavit Cæcilianus, ut Princeps à Principe ordinaretur. [c] Hilar. Ep. ad Leont. Arelatenſ. ap. Baron. an. 462. In Provincia quæ ad Monarchiam tuam ſpectat, &c. [d] Con. Carth. 3. can. 26. Ut primæ ſedis Epiſcopus non appellatur Princeps Sacerdotum, aut ſummus Sacerdos, aut aliquid hujuſmodi, ſed tantum primæ ſedis Epiſcopus. [e] Con. Car. 3. can. 39. Carth. 4. can. 1. [f] Cod. can. Eccl. Afr. c. 91, & 101. [g] Aug. Ep. 236. [h] Aug. Ep. 149, 152, 235, 261, &c.

to

But in the African Churches it was otherwiſe: For they were governed by Rules and Canons of their own; and their Rule was, to let the Primacy remove from City to City, and ſtill go along with the Senior Biſhop, without any regard to the Civil Metropolis, except only at Carthage, where the Biſhop was a fixt and ſtanding Metropolitan for the Province of Africa properly ſo called. But in Numidia and Mauritania this Honour was moveable; as may appear from this one Inſtance. Conſtantina was the Civil Metropolis of Numidia, as we learn both from the ancient Notitia of the Empire, and one of the Canons [n] of the African Code, which expreſly ſtiles it ſo: Yet the Primacy was ſo far from being ſettled here, that we never ſo much as find that the Biſhop of Conſtantina was at any time the Primate; but in Conſtantine's time Secundus Tigiſitanus [o] was Primate of Numidia; in St. Auſtin's time Megalius Biſhop of Calama was Primate, who by vertue of his Office [p] ordained St. Auſtin Biſhop; afterwards Xantippus of Tagaſta [q] ſucceeded by vertue of his Seniority, whence he is always ſtiled in St. Auſtin [r], and the African Councils [s], Senex Xantippus. This is ſufficient to ſhew that the Primacy in Africk was not confined to the Civil Metropolis, but was always conferred upon the Senior Biſhop, whoſe Seniority was reckoned from the time of his Conſecration. Some there are who pretend to ſay, that theſe African Primates notwithſtanding this, were ſubject to the Biſhops of Civil Metropoles, who were properly the Metropolitans. But there is no ground for this Opinion, and it is juſtly exploded by de Marca [t] and others, who have occaſionally touched upon this Subject.

SECT. VII. How African Biſhops might forfeit their Title to the Primacy.

'Tis true indeed, by the African Diſcipline a Biſhop might loſe his Primogeniture, and ſo forfeit his Title to the Primacy; as is evident from a Paſſage in St. Auſtin [u], who ſpeaks of ſuch a Puniſhment inflicted upon one Priſcus a Mauritanian Biſhop, who for ſome Miſdemeanor was denied this Privilege, though he ſtill kept his Biſhoprick: But in ſuch Caſes the Primacy did not devolve to the Biſhop of the Civil Metropolis, but to the next in order, who could prove himſelf Senior by Conſecration.

SECT. VIII. A Regiſter of Ordinations to be kept in the Primates Church. And all Biſhops to take place by Seniority, &c.

AND becauſe Diſputes ſometimes aroſe about Seniority; to prevent theſe, ſeveral good Orders were made by the African Fathers relating to this Matter. As firſt, that a Matricula, or Archivus, as they called it, ſhould be kept both in the Primate's Church [w], and in the Metropolis of the Province, for Biſhops to prove the time of their Ordination by.

Then 2dly, Every Biſhop was to have his Letters of Ordination ſubſcribed by his Ordainers, and dated with the Year and Day of his Conſecration [x]. Thirdly, all Biſhops were to take place according to Seniority, and ſo ſit and vote, and have their Names ſubſcribed in Council; which was a Rule not only in Africk [y], but in all other Churches, being enacted by ſeveral [z] Councils, and inſerted into the Civil Law [a] by Juſtinian the Emperor. But they were the more nice in obſerving this in Africk, where the Primacy went by Seniority, leſt the neglect of it ſhould have bred Confuſion among them. Inſomuch that St. Auſtin [b] blames Victorinus, (who pretended to be Primate of Numidia) only becauſe in his Tractoria, or Letter of Summons to a Provincial Council, he wrote the Names of the Numidian Biſhops in a confuſed Order, and put Auſtin's Name before many of his Seniors: Which was a thing, he ſays, equally Injurious to them, and Invidious to himſelf. So cautious was he of doing any thing that might ſeem to entrench upon this Rule, for fear of breeding Confuſion in the Government of their Churches.

SECT. IX. Three ſorts of Honorary Primates, beſides the Primate in Power.

I muſt here take notice farther, that beſides the Primacy of Power, there was in moſt Provinces alſo a Primacy of Honour;

[i] Con. Antioch. can. 9. [k] Con. Taurin. can. 2. Qui ex iis comprobaverit ſuam Civitatem eſſe Metropolim, is totius Provinciæ honorem Primatus obtineat. [l] Con. Chalced. can. 12, & 16. [m] Con. Trull. can. 38. [n] Con. can. Eccl. Afr. c. 86. [o] Aug. cont. Parmen. lib. 1. c. 3. Ep. 68. ad Januar. [p] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 8. Adveniente ad Eccleſiam Hipponenſem tunc Primate Numidiæ Megalio Calamenſi Epiſcopo. [q] Con. Milev. 1. in Cod. Afr. can. 84. Xantippus Primæ Sedis Numidiæ Epiſcopos. Aug. Ep. 217. Collega noſter Xantippus, Tagaſtenſis dicit, quod eum Primatus ipſe contingat, &c. [r] Aug. Ep. 236. [s] Cod. can. Afr. c. 91, 101. [t] Marca Diſſert. de Primat. n. 3. Albaſpin. Not. in Optat. Lib. 1. p. 121. Stillingfleet Hiſt. of Separ. Par. 3. §. 9. p. 253. Fell Not. in Con. Carth. ap. Cypr. p. 230. [u] Aug. Ep. 261. [w] Con. Milev. in Cod. Can. Afr. c. 86. [x] Con. Milev. can. 14. Placuit & quicunque ab Epiſcopus ordinantur, Literas accipiant ab Ordinatoribus ſuis, manu eorum ſubſcriptas, continentes Conſulem & Diem, ut nulla altercatio de Poſterioribus vel Anterioribus oriatur. [y] Con. Milev. c. 13. Poſteriores Anterioribus deferant, &c. Vit. Fulgentii cap. 20. Inter Epiſcopos, tempore Ordinationis inferior, ultimus ſedebat. [z] Con. Bracar. 1. can. 24. Con. Tolet. 4. can. 3. Secundum Ordinationis ſuæ tempora reſideant. [a] Cod. Juſtin. Lib. 1. Tit. 4. c. 29. Epiſcopi tempore Ordinationis prælati, &c. [b] Aug. Ep. 217. ad Victorin.

whence ſome Biſhops had the Name and Title of Primates, who had not the Juriſdiction. And theſe were of three ſorts:

1. Primates Ævo.

1. The Primate Ævo, the oldeſt Biſhop in each Province next to the Metropolitan. Theſe had no Power above others, except when the Metropolitan was ſomeway diſabled, or unqualified for diſcharging his Office, by Irregularity or Suſpenſion: Then his Power of courſe devolv'd to the Senior Biſhop of the Province. And this, I conceive, was the reaſon why the Biſhop of Amaſtris [c] preſided in Council over the Biſhops of Pontus, when yet Heraclea, and not Amaſtris, was the Metropolis of the Province.

SECT. X.

2. Titular Metropolitans.

THE 2d ſort of Honorary Primates were the Titular Metropolitans, which were the Biſhops of ſuch Cities as had the Name and Title of Civil Metropoles beſtowed on them by ſome Emperor, without the Power and Privileges, which were ſtill retained to the ancient Metropolis of the Province. Thus Marcian the Emperor dignified the City Chalcedon with the Title of a Metropolis, and the Honour was confirmed to the Biſhop by the Council of Chalcedon [d] it ſelf, only with a Salvo Jure to the Rights of Nicomedia the old Metropolis: From that time therefore the Biſhop of Chalcedon ſtiled himſelf Metropolitan of Bithynia, as may be ſeen in the Acts [e] of the 6th General Council. The ſame Honour was done to the City and Biſhop of Nice, in the Council of Chalcedon [f] likewiſe. So that here were three Metropolitans in one Province, but one only had the Power; the Privileges of the other two were only Honorary, to Sit and Vote in Council next to their Metropolitan. Yet this gave ſuch Biſhops an Opportunity to exalt themſelves, and ſometimes they ſo far encroached upon the Rights of the firſt Metropolitan, as to draw off his Suffragans, and divide the Province with him. Thus it was with the Biſhop of Nice, who before the time of the 6th General Council had got a Synod of Suffragans under him. For ſo Photius ſubſcribed himſelf in that Council [g] Biſhop of Nice, and Metropolitan of Bithynia for himſelf, and the Synod that was under him.

SECT. XI.

3. The Biſhops of ſome Mother-Churches, which were honoured by Ancient Cuſtom.

BESIDES theſe there were a third ſort of Primates, who though they were neither Biſhops of Titular Metropoles, nor the oldeſt Biſhops of the Province, yet took place of all the reſt, by a general Deference that was paid to them, out of regard to the Eminency of their See, being ſome Mother-Church, or particularly honoured by ancient Preſcription. This was the Caſe of the Biſhop of Jeruſalem. That City was no Metropolis of the Empire, but ſubject to Cæſarea the Metropolis of Palæſtine: Yet in regard that it was the Mother-Church of the World, this peculiar Honour was paid to it, That the Biſhop thereof was always next in Dignity to the Metropolitan of Cæſarea, and took place of all the other Biſhops of the Province: and this Privilege was confirmed to him by the Nicene Council [h], which made a Canon to this purpoſe: That whereas by ancient Cuſtom and Tradition, the Biſhop of Ælia had a particular Honour paid him, the ſame ſhould be continued to him, ſtill reſerving to the Metropolis the Dignity and Privilege which belonged to it. Some fondly imagine [i] that this Canon gave the Biſhop of Jeruſalem Patriarchal Power; whereas it does not ſo much as make him a Metropolitan, but leaves him ſubject to the Metropolis of Palæſtine, which was Cæſarea, as St. Jerom [k] informs us, whoſe Words clear the Senſe of this Canon, and prove that the Biſhop of Jeruſalem was no Metropolitan, nor Independent of his Metropolitan, as Valeſius [l] imagines, but had only the ſecond place of Honour aſſigned him next to his Metropolitan, which was that Honorary Primacy which the Biſhops of Jeruſalem had always enjoyed, becauſe, as the Council of Conſtantinople words it [m], Jeruſalem was the Mother of all other Churches.

SECT. XII.

The Offices of Metropolitans. 1. To ordain their Suffragan Biſhops.

BUT leaving theſe Honorary Primates, who had little more than a Name, I am here to ſhew what were the Offices and Privileges of thoſe who were properly Metropolitans, and they were theſe that follow. Firſt, they were to regulate Elections of all their Provincial Biſhops, and either ordain, or authorize the Ordination of them. No Biſhop was to be elected or ordained without their Conſent and Approbation: Otherwiſe the Canons pronounce both the Election and the Ordination null. The Κῦρος, or Ratification of all that is done, ſays the Council of Nice [n], belongs to the Metropolitan in every Province. And again, if any Biſhop is made without the Conſent of the Metropolitan, this great Synod [o] pronounces ſuch an one to be no Biſhop. The ſame Rule is repeated in the Councils of Antioch [p], Laodicea [q], Arles [r], Turin [s], Sardica [t], Epheſus [u], and Chalcedon [w]. And whereas ſome pretend that the African Primates had not this Power, the contrary appears evidently from ſeveral Canons of their Councils. The ſecond Council of Carthage [x] ſays, No

[c] Euſeb. l. 5. c. 23. ſays he preſided as the Senior Biſhop, ὡς ἀρχαιότατος προκάθητο. [d] Con. Chalced. Act. 6. T. 2. p. 612. [e] Con. 6. Gen. Act. 18. [f] Con. Chalced. Act. 13. p. 716. [g] Con. 6. Gen. Act. 18. p. 1080. [h] Con. Nic. can. 7. ἐχέτω τὴν ἀκολουθίαν τῆς τιμῆς, τῇ Μητροπόλει σωζομένου τοῦ οἰκείου ἀξιώματος. [i] Sylvius Addit. ad Garanz. ſumm. Concil. [k] Jerom. Ep. 61. ad Pammach. Hoc ibi decernitur ut Palæſtinæ Metropolis Cæſarea ſit. [l] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. 5. 23. [m] Con. Conſtant. Ep. Synod. ad Damaſ. [n] Con. Nic. can. 4. [o] Ibid. can. 6. [p] Con. Antioch. can. 19. [q] Con. Laodic. can. 12. [r] Con. Arelat. 2. can. 5, & 6. [s] Con. Taurin. can. 1. [t] Con. Sardic. can. 6. [u] Con. Epheſ. Decret. de Epiſc. Cypr. [w] Con. Chalced. Act. 13. It. can. 25. [x] Con. Carth. 2. c. 12. Inconſulto Primate cujuſlibet Provinciæ nemo præſumat, licet cum multis Epiſcopis, ſine ejus Præcepto Epiſcopum ordinare.

one

one ſhall preſume to ordain a Biſhop without conſulting the Primate of the Province, and taking his Precept, though many other Biſhops ſhould join with him. The third Council of Carthage requires but three Biſhops to the Ordination of a Biſhop, but then [y] they muſt be ſuch as are expreſly Authorized by the Metropolitan. And the fourth Council [z] requires either his Preſence, or at leaſt his Authority and Commiſſion. Here a Primate and a Metropolitan are the ſame thing, viz. the Senior Biſhop of the Province, who uſually went to the Church, where the new Biſhop was to be placed, and Conſecrated him with his own Hands, as St. Auſtin and Poſſidius [a] teſtifie, who are good Witneſſes of their Practice.

SECT. XIII. This Power continued to them after the ſetting up of Patriarchs.

NOR was this Power at all infringed by ſetting up of Patriarchs above them. For though the Metropolitans were then to be ordained by the Patriarchs, and obliged to attend on them for it, who before were ordained by their own Provincial Synod; yet ſtill the Right of Ordaining their own Suffragans, was all along preſerved to them, and expreſly confirmed by the Council [b] of Chalcedon; nor do we ever find any Patriarch aſſuming this Power, except the Biſhop of Alexandria, for a particular Reaſon, of which I ſhall give an Account in the following Chapter, §. 11.

SECT. XIV. Yet this Power not Arbitrary, but determined by the Major Vote of a Provincial Synod.

BUT here I muſt obſerve, that this Power of Metropolitans was not Arbitrary: For though no Biſhop was to be elected or ordained without their Conſent, yet they had no Negative Voice in the Matter, but were to be determined and concluded by the major Part of a Provincial Synod. For ſo the Council of Arles [c] decreed, That if there aroſe any Doubt or Heſitation betwixt the Parties, the Metropolitan ſhould ſide with the greater Number. And the Council of Nice [d] to the ſame purpoſe: If two or three out of a contentious Humour ſhall oppoſe the common Election, duly and regularly made according to the Canons of the Church, in this caſe let the Majority of Voices prevail.

SECT. XV. Metropolitans to be choſen and ordained by their own Provincial Synod.

AND the ſame Rule was to be obſerved in the Ordination of Metropolitans themſelves, who were to be choſen and conſecrated by their own Provincial Biſhops; who were not obliged to ſend for a Metropolitan out of another Province to do it, but they had Power to do it in their own Provincial Synod among themſelves. This St. Auſtin ſays was the Cuſtom of the Catholick Church, both in Africk and at Rome. And therefore when the Donatiſts objected againſt Cæcilian Primate of Carthage, that his Ordination was uncanonical, becauſe he had not ſent for the Neighbouring Primate of Numidia to come and Ordain him: His Anſwer was [e] That Cæcilian had no need of this; ſince the Cuſtom of the Catholick Church was otherwiſe, which was not to have the Numidian Biſhops to ordain the Biſhop of Carthage, but the Neighbouring Biſhops of the Province of Carthage: As it was not the Cuſtom at Rome to ſend for a Metropolitan out of another Province, to ordain the Biſhop of Rome, but he was always ordained by the Biſhop of Oſtia, a Neighbouring Biſhop of the ſame Province.

'Tis true there is a Canon in the Council [f] of Sardica, which orders the Biſhops of the next Province, as ſome interpret it, to be called in to the Ordination of a Metropolitan, τὰς ἀπὸ τῆ πλησιοχώρε ἐπαρχίας ἐπισκόπες. But this perhaps may as well be render'd, The Neighbouring [g] Biſhops of the ſame Province; and ſince Cuſtom and the Practice of the Church, which is the beſt Interpreter of doubtful Canons, does manifeſtly favour this Senſe, there is ſome reaſon ſo to underſtand it. But however it be, here is no mention of one Metropolitan having a Right to ordain another. From which it appears that in theſe times no Metropolitan was obliged to go or ſend out of his own Province, much leſs to Rome, for his Ordination; but all was to be done by his Suffragans in his own Church. Nor was any Biſhop obliged to go for Ordination to his Metropolitan's Church, but ordinarily the Metropolitan and the reſt of the Biſhops met Synodically in the vacant Church, and there elected and conſecrated a new Biſhop in the preſence of the People, for whom they ordained him. This was the firſt part of the Metropolitan's Office.

SECT. XVI. The 2d Office of Metropolitans, to decide Controverſies ariſing among their Provincial Biſhops, and take Appeals from them.

THEIR next Office was to preſide over their Provincial Biſhops, and if any Controverſies aroſe among them, to interpoſe their Authority to end and decide them: As alſo to hear the Accuſations of others, who complained of Injury done them by their own Biſhops, from whom there was Liberty always to appeal to their Metropolitan. Thus in Africk it was ordained [h] by the Council of Milevis, That if Two [y] Con. Carth. 3. c. 39. Non minus quam tres ſufficiant, qui fuerint à Metropolitano directi ad ordinandum Epiſcopum.

[z] Con. Carth. 4. c. 1. Conventu totius Provinciæ Epiſcoporum, maximeque Metropolitani vel Præſentia, vel Auctoritate ordinetur Epiſcopus. [a] Aug. Ep. 261. Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 8. [b] Con. Chalced. Act. 16. in fin. [c] Con. Arelat. 1. can. 5. Si inter Partes aliqua nata fuerit dubitatio, majori numero Metropolitanus in Electione conſentiat. [d] Con. Nic. can. 6.
[e] Aug. Brevic. Collat. tert. die, c. 16. Non exſpectavit Cæcilianus ut Princeps à Principe ordinaretur; cum aliud habeat Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Conſuetudo, ut non Numidiæ, ſed propinquiores Epiſcopi Epiſcopum Eccleſiæ Carthaginis ordinent: Sicut nec Romanæ Eccleſiæ ordinat aliquis Epiſcopus Metropolitanus, ſed de proximo Oſtienſis Epiſcopus. [f] Con. Sard. can. 6. [g] Harmenopulus ſo underſtood it: For in his Epitome he thus words it; Οἱ πλησιόχωροι τ ἐπαρχίας παρέσωζ. Vid. Harmen. Epit. Canon. ap. Leunclav. Jur. Gr. Rom. T. 1. p. 2. [h] Con. Milev. Can. 21. Per Epiſcopos Judices Cauſa finiatur, ſive quos eis Primates dederint, ſive quos ipſi vicinos ex conſultu Primatis delegerint.

Biſhops

Biſhops diſputed about the Bounds of their Dioceſes, the Metropolitan ſhould appoint a Committee of Biſhops to hear and determine their Controverſy. If a Presbyter or Deacon was Excommunicated by his own Biſhop, the Council of Sardica [i] allows him liberty to Appeal to the Metropolitan of his Province; or if he were abſent, to the Metropolitan of the next Province, to deſire a new hearing of his Cauſe. In ſuch caſes as theſe the Metropolitan had three ways of proceeding: Either 1ſt he was to appoint a ſelect Number of Biſhops to be Judges; which was the Practice of Africk, where ſuch Judges were therefore called [k] Judices Electi, and their Number aſſigned to be Twelve [l], if a Biſhop's Cauſe was to be tried before them. Or 2dly, he was to refer the Matter to a Provincial Synod, which ſeems to have been the general Practice, when thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons were made: One of which orders [m], That when a Biſhop is accuſed, he ſhall be convened before a Synod of Biſhops. Another ſays [n], The Primate ſhall do nothing without the conſent of all the other Biſhops; ſo Concord will be preſerved, and God will be glorified. And another, Twice a Year let there be a Synod of Biſhops [o] to examine Doctrines of Religion, and terminate all Eccleſiaſtical Controverſies that may happen. But 3dly, by Juſtinian's Law [p] the Metropolitan has Power to hear Cauſes upon Appeal to himſelf without a Synod: Yet whether he could proceed ſo far as to depoſe a Biſhop by his ſole Authority, is queſtioned: Spalatenſis [q] gives ſome Inſtances of Biſhops that were depoſed by their Metropolitans, but for ought that appears it was done in Synod: But whether it was, or was not, matters not much; for ſtill in all Caſes, by the ſame Law of Juſtinian [r] and the Canons, there lay an Appeal from the Metropolitan to a Provincial Synod, of which he was only the Preſident, or Moderator and Director of Buſineſs in it.

SECT. XVII. Their 3d Office to call Provincial Synods, which all Suffragans were obliged to attend.

3. AND this leads us to a third Office of the Metropolitans, which was to call Provincial Synods, and preſide in them. For ſince the Canons [s] appointed two Synods to be held ordinarily every Year in each Province (beſides ſuch as might be called upon extraordinary Occaſions) it was neceſſary ſome one ſhould be appointed to give notice of the Time and Place, and have Authority both to convocate and preſide in them. All things therefore relating to this Matter, were by common Conſent put into the Primate's Power, whoſe Circular Letters (which ſometimes are called Synodicæ and Tractoriæ [t], as the Emperor's were called Sacræ) were a legal Summons, which no Biſhop of the Province might diſobey under pain of Suſpenſion, or ſome ſuch Canonical Cenſure, which is left to the Diſcretion [u] of the Metropolitan and the Council.

SECT. XVIII. 4. Metropolitans to publiſh Imperial Laws and Canons, viſit Dioceſes, and correct Abuſes.

4. IT belonged to Metropolitans to publiſh and diſperſe ſuch Imperial Laws and Canons, as were either by Councils or Emperors made for the common Good of the Church. This they are required to do by ſeveral Laws [w] both of the Church and State, the better to diffuſe the Knowledge, and enforce the Practice of them. Nor were they only to diſperſe the Canons that were made, but to ſee that they were obſerved: Which gave them Right to Viſit and Enquire into Neglects, Abuſes, and Diſorders committed by any Biſhop throughout the whole Province. The Metropolitan in this reſpect is ſaid to have the Care of the whole Province, by the Council [x] of Antioch. Not that this gave him Power to Officiate in any other Biſhop's Church, or perform ſuch Acts as the Biſhop himſelf might perform alone, ſuch as the Ordaining of Presbyters and Deacons, and the like; which are Specialities of every Biſhop, reſerved to them by the ſame Council: But in caſe of Omiſſion or ſcandalous Neglect, the Biſhop of the Metropolis was to manifeſt his Care with the Advice of the reſt of his Brethren.

SECT. XIX. 5. Biſhops not to travel without the Letters of their Metropolitan.

5. IN Africk all Biſhops paid a peculiar Deference to the Primate in taking his Licence to Travel, whenever they were called into a Foreign Country upon extraordinary Occaſions. This was expreſly provided by a Canon of the 3d Council of Carthage [y], That no Biſhop ſhould go beyond the Sea without conſulting his Primate, and taking his Formatæ, or Letters of Commendation. Nor was this ſo peculiar to Africk, but that we may meet with the ſame Rule and Practice in other Places, even as low as the time of Gregory the Great, who in one of his Epiſtles [z], gives the ſame Direction to ſome Biſhops in reference to their Metropolitan, That they ſhould not travel upon urgent Occaſion, without his Letters of Conceſſion.

SECT. XX. 6. Metropolitans to take care of vacant Sees within their Province.

6. IT belonged to Metropolitans to take care of all vacant Sees within their Province; to adminiſter the Affairs of the Church during the Vacancy, to

[i] Con. Sard. can. 14. [k] Con. Carth. 3. can. 7. [l] Con. Carth. 1. can. 11. Epiſcopus à duodecim Conſacerdotibus audiatur. [m] Can. Apoſt. c. 74. Con. Conſtant. 2. Gen. can. 6. [n] Ibid. c. 35. Con. Antioch. can. 9. [o] Ibid. c. 38. [p] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. Tit. 4. c. 29. [q] Spalat. de Repub. Eccl. par. 1. l. 3. c. 7. n. 19. [r] Cod. Juſt. ibid. [s] Con. Nic. can. 5. Antioch. c. 20. Agathen. c. 35. Arelat. 2. c. 18. Can. Apoſt. c. 38. [t] Aug. Ep. 317. ad. Victorin. Tractoria ad me quinto Idus Novembris venit, &c. [u] Con. Chalced. can. 19. Con. Carth. 4. can. 21. Theodoret. Ep. 81. [w] Juſtin. Novel. 6, & 42. [x] Con. Antioch. can. 9. Τὴν φροντίδα ἀναδήχεσθαι πάσης τῆς ἐπαρχίας. [y] Con. Carth. 3. can. 28. Ut Epiſcopi trans mare non profiſcantur, niſi conſulto Primæ Sedis Epiſcopo, &c. [z] Greg. M. Ep. 8. lib. 7.

ſecure

ſecure the Revenues of the Biſhoprick, and procure a ſpeedy Election of a new Biſhop. In Africk the Primate commonly appointed one of the Neighbouring Biſhops to be his Vicegerent in ſuch a Caſe, whom therefore the Canons (as has been obſerved before) call an Interventor [a]. The Council of Riez [b] in France in like manner puts the Adminiſtration of a vacant See into the hands of a Neighbouring Biſhop, under the Inſpection of the Metropolitan. And the Council of Valentia [c] in Spain authorizes the Metropolitan to puniſh Purloiners of the Revenues in the Vacancy, and to ſend an Adminiſtrator till a new Biſhop is choſen. By a Canon of the Council of Chalcedon [d], the Care of the Revenues of the Church is committed to the Steward of the Church, the Oeconomus; but the Care of ſupplying the vacant See with a new Biſhop within Three Months, is the Buſineſs of the Metropolitan.

SECT. XXI. 7. Metropolitans to Calculate the time of Eaſter.

7. It belonged to the Metropolitan yearly to review the Calculation of the time of Eaſter, and give notice to his Suffragans of it. The Care of Compoſing the Cycle indeed was by the Nicene Fathers particularly committed [e] to the Biſhop of Alexandria, as Pope Leo and others inform us: And he was to give notice to other Churches: But due Care was not always taken in this matter, and therefore the Metropolitan in every Province was concerned to ſettle the time, and acquaint the whole Province with it. As we find St. Ambroſe [f] did for the Province of Milan; and the Biſhop of Carthage [g] for the Province of Africk: And the Spaniſh Councils [h] order their Metropolitans firſt to concert the matter among themſelves, and then communicate it to their Comprovincials.

SECT. XXII. How the Power of Metropolitans grew in After-Ages.

Some later Canons [i] make it the Privilege of Metropolitans to Conſecrate all Churches throughout the Province. But I have ſhewed before that this was Originally the Privilege of every Biſhop in his own Dioceſe; and being a private Act, which only concerned his own Church, and not the whole Province, the Metropolitan was to have no hand in it, no more than in the Conſecration of Presbyters and Deacons, by the 9th Canon of the Council of Antioch. Other Canons [k] bind the whole Province to follow the Forms and Rites of Divine Service us'd in the Metropolitan Church: But I have obſerved before, that anciently every Biſhop had Liberty to preſcribe for his own Dioceſe, and was under no Limitation as to this Matter, unleſs it were the Order of a Provincial Council.

SECT. XXIII. The Primate of Alexandria had the greateſt Power of any other.

By this we ſee that the Power of Metropolitans in ſome Places exceeded others. And I muſt here obſerve, that the Primate of Alexandria was the greateſt Metropolitan in the World, both for the Abſoluteneſs of his Power, and the Extent of his Juriſdiction. For he was not Metropolitan of a ſingle Province, but of all the Provinces of Egypt, Libya, and Pentapolis, in which there were at leaſt Six large Provinces, out of which ſometimes above an Hundred Biſhops were called to a Provincial Council. Alexander ſummon'd near that Number to the Condemnation of Arius [l] before the Council of Nice. And Athanaſius [m] ſpeaks of the ſame Number meeting at other times: Particularly the Council of Alexandria, Ann. 339, which heard and juſtified the Cauſe of Athanaſius after his Return from his Baniſhment, had almoſt an Hundred Biſhops in it; which was above 30 more than the Biſhop of Rome's Libra, which was but Sixty nine. Nor was the Primate of Alexandria's Power leſs than the Extent of his Juriſdiction: For he not only ordained all his Suffragan Biſhops, but had Liberty to ordain Presbyters and Deacons in all Churches throughout the whole Diſtrict. Mr. Baſnage [n] and Launoy will have it that he had the ſole Power of Ordaining, and that not ſo much as a Presbyter or Deacon could be Ordained without it. Valeſius [o] thinks his Privilege was rather that he might Ordain, if he pleaſed; but not that he had the ſole Power of Ordaining Presbyters and Deacons. But either way it was a great Privilege, and peculiar to the Biſhop of Alexandria: For no other Metropolitan pretended to the like Power beſides himſelf.

SECT. XXIV. All Metropolitans called Apoſtolici, and their Sees Sedes Apoſtolicæ.

I have but one thing more to obſerve concerning Metropolitans, which is, that they were anciently all dignified with the Name Apoſtolici; which was then no peculiar Title of the Biſhop of Rome. For Pope Siricius himſelf gives all Primates [p] this Appellation: And it continued to be their Title to the Days of Alcuin, who ſpeaking of the Election of Biſhops, ſays [q], when the Clergy and People have choſen one, they draw up an Inſtrument, and go with their Elect to the Apoſtolicus: By whom he means not the Pope, but the Primate or Metropolitan of every Province who had the Right and Power of Conſecration.

[a] Con. Carth. 5. can. 8. [b] Con. Reienſ. can. 5, & 6. [c] Con. Valent. can. 2. [d] Con. Chalced. c. 25. [e] Leo. Ep. 62. al. 70. ad Marcian. Imper. [f] Ambroſ. Ep. 83. ad Epiſc. per Æmyliam. [g] Con. Carth. 3. can. 1, & 41. [h] Con. Bracar. 2. can. 9. Con. Tolet. 4. can. 4. [i] Gelaſ. Ep. 1. c. 4. Montan. Tolet. Ep. ad Palentinos ap. Blondel. Apol. p. 150. [k] Concil. Gerundenſ. can. 1. Con. Epaun. can. 27. Con. Tolet. 11. can. 3. [l] Alexand. Ep. Encycl. ap. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 6. [m] Athan. Apol. 2. p. 720. Con. Alexandr. Ep. Encycl. Con. T. 2. p. 533. [n] Baſnag. Exerc. in Baron. p. 307. & Launoy, Ibid. [o] Valeſ. obſerv. in Socrat. lib. 3. [p] Siric. Ep. 4. c. 1. Ut extra conſcientiam ſedis Apoſtolicæ, id eſt, Primatis, nemo audeat ordinare. [q] Alcuin. de Div. Offic. c. 36. Cui Epiſcopus Civitatis fuerit defunctus, eligitur alius à Clero ſeu Populo, fitque Decretum ab illis, & veniunt ad Apoſtolicum cum ſuo Electo.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Patriarchs.

SECT. I. Patriarchs anciently called Archbiſhops.

NEXT in order to the Metropolitans or Primates, were the Patriarchs; or, as they were at firſt called, Archbiſhops and Exarchs of the Dioceſe. For though now an Archbiſhop and a Metropolitan be generally taken for the ſame, to wit, the Primate of a ſingle Province; yet anciently the Name Archbiſhop was a more extenſive Title, and ſcarce given to any but thoſe whoſe Juriſdiction extended over a whole Imperial Dioceſe, as the Biſhops of Rome, Alexandria, Antioch, &c. That this was ſo, appears evidently from one of Juſtinian's Novels, where erecting the Biſhoprick of Juſtiniana Prima into a Patriarchal See, he ſays, Our Pleaſure is, that the Biſhop of Juſtiniana ſhall not only be a Metropolitan [r], but an Archbiſhop. Here the Names are clearly diſtinguiſhed, and an Archbiſhop reckoned Superior to a Metropolitan. And hence it was, that after the ſetting up of Patriarchal Power, the Name Archbiſhop was appropriated to the Patriarchs. Liberatus [s] gives all the Patriarchs this Title of Archbiſhops. So does the Council of Chalcedon frequently, ſpeaking of the Patriarchs of Rome and Conſtantinople [t], under the Name of Archbiſhops alſo.

SECT. II. And Exarchs of the Dioceſe.

THESE were otherwiſe called Ἔξαρχοι τῆς διοικήσεως, Exarchs of the Dioceſe, to diſtinguiſh them from the Ἔξαρχοι τῆς ἐπαρχίας, the Exarchs of a ſingle Province, which were only Metropolitans. Thus Domnus Biſhop of Antioch is ſtiled Exarch of the Eaſtern [u] Dioceſe, by the Councils of Antioch and Chalcedon. And in the Subſcriptions of the 6th General Council at Conſtantinople, Theodore Biſhop of Epheſus ſubſcribes himſelf both Metropolitan of Epheſus [w], and Exarch of the Aſiatick Dioceſe: As alſo Philalethes Biſhop of Cæſarea in Cappadocia ſtiles himſelf Exarch of the Pontick Dioceſe. Which ſhews, that as the Exarch of a Province is a Metropolitan, ſo the Exarch of a Dioceſe is a Patriarch, in the ancient Language of the Church. And by this we underſtand the meaning of the 9th and 17th Canons of the Council of Chalcedon, which allow of Appeals from the Metropolitan to the Exarch of the Dioceſe.

SECT. III. Salmaſius's miſtake about the firſt uſe of the Name Patriarch.

As to the Name Patriarch, there is ſome Diſpute among Learned Men, when firſt it began to be uſed as an Appropriate Title of any Chriſtian Biſhops. Salmaſius [x] and ſome others are of Opinion, that the Biſhop of Alexandria had this Title from the time of the Emperor Hadrian, which was in the beginning of the 2d Century. Their Reaſon is, becauſe that Emperor in an Epiſtle mentioned by Vopiſcus, ſpeaks of a Patriarch at Alexandria. But the Patriarch there ſpoken of was not any Chriſtian, but a Jewiſh Patriarch; as may appear from Hadrian's Words, and the Character which he gives [y] of him. For he ſays, he was one who was compelled to worſhip both Chriſt and Serapis: Which agrees very well to the Character of a Jewiſh Patriarch, who neither acknowledged the Heathen, nor the Chriſtian Religion, and therefore needed as much Compulſion to bring him to worſhip Chriſt, as Serapis; but it does not at all agree to the Character of a Chriſtian Biſhop, who, however he might need force to compel him to worſhip Serapis, yet muſt be ſuppoſed willing of his own accord to worſhip Chriſt. Beſides, the Patriarch which the Emperor ſpeaks of was one who came only Occaſionally into Egypt out of another Country; which cannot be ſaid of the Biſhop of Alexandria, who had his fixed and continual Reſidence there: But it ſuits exactly the State and Condition of the Jewiſh Patriarch, who reſided at Tiberias in Palæſtine, and came but accidentally, or at ſome certain times, into Egypt. Theſe and the like Reaſons make others conclude againſt Salmaſius, that whoever is meant, it is not any Chriſtian Patriarch that is here ſpoken of. Baronius [z] fancies it was the Heathen Pontifex, or High-Prieſt of Egypt: But the ſame Reaſons will hold againſt his Opinion as againſt the other: For the High-Prieſt of Egypt lived in Egypt, and needed no Compulſion to worſhip Serapis, as this Patriarch did. So that it muſt be the Jewiſh Patriarch, and no other, which Hadrian ſpeaks of, as Mr. Baſnage [a] and Biſhop Pearſon, with ſome others have obſerved.

SECT. IV. Of the Jewiſh Patriarchs, their firſt Riſe, Duration, and Extinction.

THESE Jewiſh Patriarchs, from whom, as is generally agreed, the Chriſtian Patriarchs borrowed their Names, were a ſort of Governors among the Jews ſet up upon the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem; one of which had his Reſidence at Tiberias, and another at Babylon, who were the Heads of the Jews diſperſed throughout the Roman and the Perſian Empire. Of theſe there is frequent mention made in the ancient Writers of the Church, [b] Origen, [c] Epiphanius, [d] Cyril of Jeruſalem, [e] Theodoret, and many others. They continued in great Power and Dignity till the latter end of the 4th Century, about which time their Order ceaſed. For Theodoret ſays expreſly, that long before his time their Government was wholly aboliſhed: And one of the Laws of the younger Theodoſius, An. 429, ſpeaks [f] of them as then extinct.

[r] Juſtin. Novel. 11. Volumus ut non ſolum Metropolitanus, ſed etiam Archiepiſcopus fiat. [s] Liberat. Breviar. c. 17. [t] Con. Chalced. Act. 16. It. Act. 4. & Can. 30. [u] Con. Antioch. in Act. 14. Con. Chalced. [w] Con. 6. Gen. Act. 18. Con. Tom. 6. p. 1077, & 1080. [x] Salmaſ. de Primat. c. 4. p. 44. It. not. in Vopiſcum. [y] Hadrian. Epiſt. ap. Vopiſcum Vit. Saturnin. Illi qui Serapin colunt, Chriſtiani ſunt. Et devoti ſunt Serapi, qui ſe Chriſti Epiſcopos dicunt. Nemo illic Archiſynagogus Judæorum, nemo Samarites, nemo Chriſtianorum Presbyter, non Mathematicus, non Aruſpex, non Aliptes. Ille ipſe Patriarcha, quum Ægyptum venerit, ab aliis Serapidem adorare, ab aliis cogitur Chriſtum. [z] Baron. Annal. Tom. 2. an. 112. [a] Baſnag. Exercit. Hiſtor. p. 284. Pearſon. Vindic. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 11. p. 328. Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. Verbo πατριάρχης. Cave, Anc. Chur. Gov. p. 153.

ther

SECT. V. Of the Patriarchs among the Montaniſts.

MUCH about the ſame time the Montaniſts, or Cataphrygian Hereticks, had an Order of Men among them, which they called Patriarchs, and another which they called Cenones, both which were Superior to their Biſhops, and as it ſhould ſeem, Diſtinct Orders from them: For St. Jerom [g] charges it on them as a Crime, that they thruſt down the Order of Biſhops, who were the Apoſtles Succeſſors, and ſet up an Order of Patriarchs, and an Order of Cenones among them. Which makes ſome Learned [h] Men think, that when St. Jerom wrote that againſt the Montaniſts, the Name Patriarch was not as yet adopted into the Church, though the Power was, under another Name.

SECT. VI. The Name Patriarch firſt uſed by Socrates and in the Council of Chalcedon.

INDEED the firſt time we meet with the Name Patriarch given to any Biſhop by any Publick Authority of the Church, is in the Council of Chalcedon, which mentions [i] the moſt Holy Patriarchs of every Dioceſe, and particularly Leo Patriarch [k] of Great Rome. Richerius, who has written accurately about the Councils, can trace the Name no higher [l]. Among Private Authors the firſt that mentions Patriarchs by Name is Socrates [m], who wrote his Hiſtory about the Year 440, Eleven Years before the Council of Chalcedon. By what he ſays, it appears that during the Interval between the General Council of Conſtantinople, Ann. 381, and that of Chalcedon, the Name Patriarch began to be an appropriate Title of ſome eminent Biſhops in the Church. For ſpeaking of the Fathers at Conſtantinople, he ſays, They conſtituted Patriarchs, dividing the Provinces among them. Valeſius [n] and Dr. Cave [o] think Socrates ſpeaks not of true and proper Patriarchs, but only of extraordinary Legates, or Pro-tempore Commiſſioners, appointed by the Council to judge who were fit to be received to Catholick Communion in the ſeveral Dioceſes that were allotted them. But all others underſtand him in the proper Senſe, becauſe by this time Patriarchal Power was ſettled in all the Dioceſes of the Roman Empire.

SECT. VII. Four different Opinions concerning the firſt Riſe of Patriarchal Power.

BUT though the Name of Patriarchs came not into the Church till about the time of Socrates, yet the Power it ſelf, as is agreed on all hands, was much earlier; though where preciſely to fix the Epocha, and date its Riſe, is not ſo eaſy to determine. Some carry it as high as the Apoſtles, and derive it, as they do the Pope's Supremacy, from St. Peter. So [p] Baronius, who is followed by the moſt eminent Writers of his own Communion, de Marca, Valeſius, Richerius, Pagius, and Schelſtrate. Others juſtly reject this, as founded upon no good Authority, nor evidenced by any Genuine Records of the ancient Church, but only the Spurious Epiſtles of the firſt Popes; and reckon the firſt riſe of Patriarchs to have been after the Apoſtolical Age, and ſome time before the Council of Nice. This is the Opinion of Spalatenſis [q], and Mr. Brerewood. The 3d Opinion is that of Balzamon [r] and other Modern Greeks, that Patriarchs were firſt inſtituted by the Council of Nice: And this ſeems to be favoured by St. Jerom: For in his Epiſtle to Pamachius, writing againſt the Errors of John of Jeruſalem, he ſays it was decreed in the Council of Nice, [s] that Cæſarea ſhould be the Metropolis of Paleſtine, and Antioch the Metropolis of the whole Eaſt. Therefore the Biſhop of Jeruſalem muſt either Appeal to the Biſhop of Cæſarea, as his Immediate Metropolitan, or to the Biſhop of Antioch, as Metropolitan of the Eaſt. But if I rightly underſtand St. Jerom, he does not mean (as ſome miſtake him) that Patriarchs were firſt ſet up by the Council of Nice: For then Metropolitans muſt be ſo too; ſince he ſays the ſame of them, which yet every one knows were in the Church long before the Council of Nice. His meaning then muſt be, that both Metropolitans of Provinces, and Metropolitans of Dioceſes were in being before the Council of Nice, and only received Confirmation, or a Canonical Eſtabliſhment from it. And indeed it is evident, [b] Orig. περὶ ἀρχῶν, l. 4. c. 1. [c] Epiphan. Hær. 30. [d] Cyr. Catech. 12. n. 7. [e] Theodor. Dial. 1. [f] Cod. Theod. lib. 16. Tit. 8. de Jud. l. 29. [g] Jerom. Ep. 54. ad Marcel. adv. Montan. T. 2. p. 128. Apud nos Apoſtolorum locum Epiſcopi tenent; apud eos Epiſcopus tertius eſt. Habent enim primos de Pepuza Phrygiæ Patriarchas: Secundos quos appellant Cenones: Atque ita in tertium, id eſt, pene ultimum locum, Epiſcopi devolvuntur. [h] Baſnag. Exercit. Hiſtor. p. 285. Hinc colligi poſſit, priſcis temporibus nondum Epiſcopis inſignioribus affixum fuiſſe Nomen Patriarchæ. [i] Con. Chalced. Act. 2. p. 338. ὁσιώτατοι πατριάρχαι διοικήσεως ἐκάστης. [k] Act. 3. p. 395. [l] Rich. Hiſt. Concil. Tom. 1. c. 2. n. 11. Nomen Patriarcharum primum quod ſciam uſurpatum in Synodo Chalcedonenſi. [m] Socrat. H. E. l. 5. c. 8. [n] Valeſ. Annot. in Socrat. [o] Anc. Ch. Gov. p. 147. [p] Baron. Annal. Tom. 1. an. 39. n. 16. Pet. de Marca de Concord. T. 1. lib. 1. c. 3. n. 5. Valeſ. Obſerv. Eccleſ. lib. 3. Richer. Hiſt. Concil. Tom. 1. c. 1. n. 14. Ant. Pag. Critic. an. 37. n. 9. [q] Spalat. de Repub. Par. 1. l. 3. c. 12. n. 21. Brerewood of Patriar. Gov. Q. 1. [r] Balzam. in Can. 6. Con. Nic. [s] Hieron. Ep. 61. Tom. 2. p. 178. Ad Alexandrinum Epiſcopum Palæſtina quid pertinet? Ni fallor, hoc ibi decernitur, ut Palæſtinæ Metropolis Cæſarea ſit totius Orientis Antiochia. Aut igitur ad Cæſarienſem Epiſcopum referre debueras; —— Aut ſi procul expetendum Judicium erat, Antiochiam potius Literæ dirigendæ.

that the Nicene Fathers made no Alteration in these Matters, but only confirmed the ancient Rights of the Bishops of Principal Cities, as they found them authorized by Custom before. For the words [t] they use are, τὰ ἀρχαῖα ἔθη κρατείτω, "Let ancient Custom still take place; "so as in Egypt, Libya and Pentapolis, the Bi- "shop of Alexandria shall have Power over all; "because such also is the Custom of the Bishop "of Rome. And accordingly in Antioch, and in "other Provinces, let the Privileges be preserved "to the Churches.

Here it is plain, that no new Power is given to any Bishops, but only what ancient Custom and Practice had assigned them. So that either Patriarchs were set up by Custom before the [u] Council of Nice, and confirmed by the Council, as St. Jerom thinks, or else not introduced till afterwards. This last Opinion (notwithstanding what St. Jerom says) is embraced by the famous Mr. Launoy [w], Mr. Basnage, [x], Dr. Beverege [y], and Dr. Cave [z], who think that Patriarchal Power was not confirmed by the Nicene Canon, nor known in the Church till about the time of the 2d General Council of Constantinople, Ann. 381.

SECT. VIII. The Opinion of Spalatensis and St. Jerom preferred.

IN a Matter so obscure, and so variously controverted among Learned Men, it is not easy to determine where the Right lies. Patriarchal Power was not set up at one and the same time in all Places. Alexandria and Antioch were as early as any, and the Bishop of Alexandria before the Council of Nice had all Egypt, Libya and Pentapolis under his Jurisdiction, as appears from the Nicene Canons. This was the Diœcesis Ægyptiaca, which consisted of six large Provinces, four in Egypt, viz. Thebais, Arcadia, Augustanica, and Ægyptus properly so called, Libya Inferior, and Libya Superior, which is Pentapolis. As all these were subject to the Præfectus Augustalus of Egypt, so they were likewise under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Alexandria. So that he was not only a Metropolitan of a single Province, but of six Provinces joined in one Diocese. But now the Question is, whether at this time he had any Metropolitans under him? For if he had, then he was properly a Patriarch at the time of the Nicene Council. As to this I can only say, that Epiphanius and Synesius do expresly mention Archbishops and Metropolitans under the Archbishop of Alexandria, in the time of Athanasius and Alexandria his Predecessor, who were both present in the Council of Nice. But whether they mean Metropolitans in the proper Sense, or only Coadjutors to the Archbishop of Alexandria, I cannot yet determine. I will recite the Passages, and leave the Curious and the Learned to make farther Enquiry. Synesius says, The Great Athanasius seeing the Church of Ptolemais had need of a Bishop that was able to cherish and augment the small Sparks of true Religion, which was then in a dwindling Condition there; and finding Siderius Bishop of Palæbisca a Man fit for great Business; he commanded him to remove [a] thence to Ptolemais, to govern the Metropolitan Church there. And Epiphanius [b] speaking of Meletius, the Author of the Meletian Schism before the Council of Nice, says expresly, "He was an "Archbishop in Egypt, under Alexander Arch- "bishop of Alexandria, to whom he gave the "first Information against Arius. This agrees with what he says of him in another place [c], "That he was Chief of the Egyptian Bishops, "and next in Order to Peter in the Archbi- "shoprick, being his Assistant, and administring "Ecclesiastical Affairs under him. For there the "Custom is, for the Archbishop of Alexandria "to have the ordering of Ecclesiastical Matters "throughout all Egypt, Thebais, Mareotes, "Libya, Ammoniaca, Mareotis, and Pentapolis. So that as the Bishop of Alexandria had six Provinces under him, he seems also to have had Subordinate Metropolitans or Archbishops under him likewise, as the Archbishop of Lycopolis in Thebais, the Metropolitan of Ptolemais in Pentapolis. And if these were properly Metropolitans, He must be a Patriarch, under the Name of Metropolitan of the whole Egyptian Diocese, as they were Metropolitans of their respective Provinces: Which is the thing that St. Jerom asserts in reference to Cæsarea and Antioch, that the one was the Metropolis of Palestine, and the other the Metropolis of the Oriental Diocese; and this from ancient Custom, ratified and confirmed by the Council of Nice.

SECT. IX. Patriarchal Power established in three General Councils successively, viz. Constantinople, Ephesus, and Chalcedon.

BUT however this be (for I determine nothing positively in this Matter) the next Age affords us very pregnant Proofs of the Establishment and Growth of Patriarchal Power. The General Council of Constantinople [d,] An. 381, has a Canon to fix the Limits of the several Dioceses: So that the Bishop of Alexandria should only administer the Affairs of the Egyptian Diocese: The Bishops of the East, the Eastern Diocese, reserving the Privileges granted by the Council of Nice to the Church of Antioch: The Bishops of the Asiatick Diocese, the Asiatick Churches only: Those of the Pontick Diocese, the Pontick Churches: And those of the Thracian Diocese, the Thracian Churches only.

[t] Con. Nic. can. 6. [u] So Du Pin Bibliothec. vol. 2. p. 252. It. de Antiq. Eccl. Disciplin. Dissert. 1. Sect. 11. p. 35.
[w] Launoy, de Rect. Interpr. Can. 6. Con. Nic.
[x] Basnag. Exercit. Histor. p. 307. [y] Bevereg. Not. in Can. 2. Con. Constant. [z] Cave Anc. Ch. Gov. c. 2, & 4.
[a] Synes. Ep. 67. ad Theoph. p. 231. Πάμμεγαν Ἀθανάσιον — ἀνδρα τοῦτον, ὡς μάζεσι πεφυγμασιν ὀπτηδόνα, ἐκεῖ διαζῆναι κελεῦσαι. τὴν Πτολεμαΐτιν ἐκκλησίαν ὑπερφλέγουσα. [b] Epiphan. Hær. 69. n. 3. Ὁ Ἀρχιεπίσκοπος Μελήτιος ὁ τὴν Αἴγυπτον, ὑπὸ ᾧ χεῖρα Ἀλεξάνδρας. [c] Hær. 68. Meletian. n. 1. Ὁ Μελήτιος τῷ τὴν Αἴγυπτον πρωήκων, καὶ δευτερεύων τῷ Πέτρῳ, τὴν Ἀρχιεπισκοπὴν, ὡς δι' ἀνθιλήψεως αὐτῷ χάειν, &c. [d] Con. C. Pol. Can. 2.

Theodoret

Theodoret [e] ſpeaking of this Council, ſays, They divided the Dioceſes, and aſſigned every Dioceſe its proper Limits and Juriſdiction. And Socrates [f] more expreſly, "That they con- "ſtituted Patriarchs, and diſtributed the Pro- "vinces, ſo that no Biſhops ſhould meddle with "the Affairs of another Dioceſe, as was uſed "to be done in times of Perſecution. Necta- "rius was allotted Conſtantinople and Thrace; "Helladius, St. Baſil's Succeſſor, the Pontick "Dioceſe, &c.

About Fifty Years after this, An. 431, the 3d General Council was held at Epheſus, where we find the Biſhop of Antioch laying claim to the Power of Ordinations in the Province of Cyprus: But this proving to be an unjuſt Claim, the Council made a Decree in favour of the Cyprian Biſhops, exempting them from the Juriſdiction of Antioch; becauſe by ancient Cuſtom they always were exempt: And it is added [g] "That "the ſame Rule ſhould be obſerved in all Dio- "ceſes and Provinces, That no Biſhop ſhould "ſeize upon any Province, which did not an- "ciently belong to his Juriſdiction. This plainly implies, that the Biſhop of Antioch had then ſeveral Provinces, or a whole Dioceſe, under his Power; which was confirmed to him by the Council, and he was only denied Juriſdiction over the Province of Cyprus, becauſe of ancient Right it did not belong to him.

About 18 Years after this, Theodoſius Junior, and Valentinian called the 2d Council of Epheſus, An. 449. And in the Letter of Summons to Dioſcorus Biſhop of Alexandria, they give him Orders to bring ten Metropolitans [h] of his Dioceſe with him. This is noted by Liberatus in his Breviary, and the Letter is ſtill extant [i] in the Council of Chalcedon; by which it appears, that at this time the Archbiſhop of Alexandria had a great number of Metropolitans, within the Egyptian Dioceſe, under his Juriſdiction. So that though there be ſome Diſpute concerning the firſt Riſe and Original of Patriarchal Power: Yet there remains no manner of Doubt, but that it was come to its full Height and Eſtabliſhment in the time of the General Councils of Epheſus and Chalcedon.

SECT. X.

The Power of Patriarchs not exactly the ſame in all Churches.

THEREFORE the next Enquiry is into the Rights and Privileges of theſe Patriarchs. And here it is to be nicely obſerved, that the Power of Patriarchs was not one and the ſame preciſely in all Churches, but differed according to the different Cuſtoms of Places and Countries, or according as it was the Pleaſure of Kings and Councils to beſtow greater Privileges on them. The Patriarch of Conſtantinople, when he was firſt advanc'd by the 2d General Council, had only the ſingle Dioceſe of Thrace aſſigned him [k] for the exerciſe of his Juriſdiction: But in the next Age he was grown to be a ſort of Patriarch over the Patriarchs of Epheſus and Cæſarea in the Aſiatick and Pontick Dioceſes, by the voluntary Conſent of thoſe two Exarchs (no doubt) at firſt paying a Deference to the Exarch of the Royal City; which advancing into a Cuſtom, was afterwards confirmed by Canon in the Council of Chalcedon. In the 16th Seſſion of that Council there is a long Debate about this Matter, the Pope's Legates warmly ſtickling againſt it: But all the Metropolitans of the two Dioceſes of Aſia and Pontus then in Council, together with Thalaſſius Biſhop of Cæſarea, and Exarch of the Pontick Dioceſe, with one Voice declaring that the Biſhop of Conſtantinople had by long Cuſtom and Preſcription enjoyed the Privilege of Ordaining Metropolitans in thoſe two Dioceſes, as well as that of Thrace; it was decreed, that this Privilege ſhould be continued to him, notwithſtanding the Biſhop of Rome's Interceſſion againſt it [l]. Alſo by two Canons of that Council he is allowed to receive Appeals [m] from the Exarchs of thoſe Dioceſes, becauſe his Throne was in the Royal City. And in ſuch parts of thoſe Dioceſes, as were chiefly in the hands of Barbarians, he is authorized by another Canon [n] to ordain all the Biſhops, which in other Parts was the ſole Privilege of the Metropolitans. Theodoret [o] obſerves even of Chryſoſtom himſelf before the Council of Chalcedon, that he exerciſed this Power over all the three Dioceſes. For he ſays, "His Care extended not only over Con- "ſtantinople and Thrace, which conſiſted of ſix "Provinces, but over Aſia and Pontus, each of "which had Eleven Civil Prætors in them. We are not therefore to take an Eſtimate of Patriarchal Power from the growing Greatneſs of Conſtantinople, but to diſtinguiſh the peculiar Privileges of ſome Patriarchs above others, which is the only way to underſtand the Power of each.

The Patriarch of Conſtantinople had ſome peculiar Privileges.

SECT. XI.

The Patriarch of Alexandria had alſo Privileges peculiar to himſelf.

FOR the Patriarch of Alexandria had alſo ſome Prerogatives, which no other Patriarch beſides himſelf enjoyed. Such was the Right of Conſecrating and Approving every ſingle Biſhop throughout all the Provinces of his Dioceſe. This Privilege was not allowed even to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople: For the Council of Chalcedon, in the very ſame place where they give him Power to conſecrate the Metropolitans of three whole Dioceſes, deny him the Privilege of Conſecrating the Suffragan Biſhops of thoſe Metropolitans; and reſerve it as an ancient Right of each Metropolitan, with a Synod of his Provincial Biſhops, to conſecrate all the Biſhops within his Province, the Archbiſhops of Conſtantinople neither being conſulted,

[e] Theod. Ep. 86. ad Flav. T. 3. p. 963. [f] Socrat. H. E. lib. 5. c. 8. πάλαι ἀρχὰς κάλλιστας, &c. [g] Con. Epheſ. 1. Act. 7. Decret. de Epiſ. Cypr. [h] Liberat. Breviar. c. 12. Imperator dirigens Sacram Dioſcoro in Alexandriam, præcepit, ut cum decem Metropolitanis Epiſcopis, quos voluiſſet, ipſe eligeret, & veniret Epheſum. [i] Con. Chalced. Act. 1. C. T. 4. p. 100. [k] Con. Conſt. 1. Can. 2. [l] Con. Chalced. Can. 28. & Act. 16. per Tot. [m] Ibid. Can. 9, & 17. [n] Con. Chal. Can. 28. [o] Theod. Hiſt. Eccl. lib. 5. c. 28.

consulted, nor having [p] any hand in those Ordinations. But it was otherwise at Alexandria. For the Bishop of Alexandria, whilst he was only a Metropolitan, had the Ordination of all the Bishops of the six Provinces of the Egyptian Diocese, being the sole and only Metropolitan in all those Provinces: And having but the same Diocese when he came to be a Patriarch, he continued his ancient Custom of Ordaining all the Bishops throughout the six Provinces, notwithstanding that new Metropolitans were set up in them. And in this the Patriarch of Alexandria differed from all others: For in all other Dioceses the Metropolitans had the Right of Ordaining their Suffragan Bishops, which here the Patriarch retained to himself, as an ancient Branch of his Metropolitical Power. I know indeed a very Learned [q] Person is of a different Opinion: He says, "The Bishop of "Alexandria was rather a loser by being made a "Patriarch: For now according to the Constitution of Church-Policy, the Ordination of "Suffragan Bishops, which before belonged entirely to him, was devolved upon the several "Metropolitans under him. But this Assertion proceeds upon a Supposition, That Patriarchal Rights were exactly the same in all Places: Which from the Instance I have given of Constantinople appears to be otherwise; for the Patriarchs of Ephesus and Cæsarea had not the Ordination of their own Metropolitans, but they were all subject to the Bishop of Constantinople. And as to the Case of Alexandria, it appears from Synesius, who was himself Metropolitan of Ptolemais, that the Ordination not only of the Metropolitans, but of all the Suffragan Bishops throughout the whole District of Egypt, Libya and Pentapolis, belonged still to the Patriarch of Alexandria. For in a Letter to Theophilus, acquainting him how He and two other Bishops had met at Olbiæ to make choice of a Bishop, and that one Antonius was unanimously chosen by the People; he adds [r], That yet there was one thing wanting, which was more necessary than all, viz. His Sacred Hand to consecrate him. Which shews, that the Bishop of Alexandria still retained his ancient Right of Consecrating all the Bishops of the Egyptian Diocese.

SECT. XII.
The 1st Privilege of Patriarchs was to Ordain all the Metropolitans of the Diocese, and receive his own Ordination from a Diocesan Synod.

IN other Dioceses the Patriarchs Power was chiefly seen in the Ordination or Confirmation of all the Metropolitans that were under him. This appears from the fore-cited Canons [s] of the Council of Chalcedon, and several of Justinian's Novels; one of which [t] takes notice of the Bishop of Constantinople's Ordaining all the Metropolitans under him; and another gives the same Power to the Patriarch of Justiniana Prima [u], then newly advanced to Patriarchal Dignity by Justinian, because it was the place of his Nativity. And that this was a peculiar Privilege of Patriarchs, appears farther from one of the Arabick Canons published by Turrian, under the Name of the Nicene Canons, which were invented after the Name of Patriarchs was known in the Church. The 36th of these Canons speaking of the Catholick of Ethiopia [w], who was no Patriarch, but subject to the Patriarch of Alexandria, says, He shall not have Power to ordain Archbishops, as Patriarchs have; because he hath not the Power or Honour of a Patriarch.

It was therefore the Prerogative of Patriarchs, (those of Ephesus and Cæsarea only excepted) to ordain the Metropolitans under them: But they themselves were to be ordained by a Diocesan Synod, as Justinian's forecited Novel [x] informs us. And this was called the Canonical Ordination of a Patriarch. For so the Council of Constantinople, in their Synodical Epistle to the Western Bishops, prove the Ordination of Flavian Bishop of Antioch (who presided over all the Eastern Diocese [y], as Theodoret says) to be Canonical, because he was ordained not only by the Bishops of the Province, but τῆς Ἀνατολικῆς διοικήσεως, the Bishops of the whole Eastern Diocese [z] Synodically met together.

SECT. XIII.
A 2d Privilege was to call Diocesan Synods, and preside in them.

2. THE next Privilege of Patriarchs was the Power of Convening their Metropolitans and all the Provincial Bishops to a Diocesan Synod; which Privilege was founded upon the same Canons that granted Metropolitans Authority to summon Provincial Synods, and preside in them. For by just Analogy the Patriarch was to have the same Power over the Metropolitans, that they had over their Provincial Bishops. And therefore Theodoret [a] speaking of his own Attendance at the Synods of his Patriarch at Antioch, says, he did it in Obedience to his Ecclesiastical Canons, which make him a Criminal that is summoned to a Synod, and refuses to pay his Attendance at it.

SECT. XIV.
A 3d Privilege to receive Appeals from Metropolitans and Provincial Synods.

3. ANOTHER Privilege of Patriarchs, was the Power of receiving Appeals from Metropolitans and Provincial Synods, and Reversing their Decrees, if they were found faulty. If any Bishop or Clergyman have a Controversy with the Metropolitan of his Province, let him have Recourse to the [p] Con. Chalced. Act. 16. in fin. Etiam nihil communicante in illorum Ordinationibus Archiepiscopo Regiæ Constantinopolis. [q] Dr. Cave Anc. Ch. Gov. c. 4. p. 159. [r] Synes. Ep. 76. ad Theoph. ἑνὸς ἔτι δεῖ, τῶν κυριωτάτων μέν τοι, τῆς ἱερᾶς σου χειρός. [s] Con Chalc. can. 28, & Act. 16. [t] Justin. Novel. 7. [u] Justin. Nov. 131. c. 3. Per tempus Beatissimum Justinianæ Primæ Patriæ nostræ Archiepiscopum habere semper sub sua Jurisdictione Episcopos Provinciarum Daciæ Mediterraneæ, & Daciæ Ripensis, & Privalis (al. Triballiæ) & Dardaniæ, & Mysiæ superioris, & Pannoniæ: Et ab eo hos ordinari, ipsum vero à proprio ordinari Concilio. [w] Con. Nicen. Arab. c. 36. Non tamen jus habeat constituendi Archiepiscopos, ut habeat Patriarcha; siquidem non habet Patriarchæ honorem & potestatem. [x] Novel. 131. Ipsum vero (Patriarcham) à proprio ordinari Concilio. [y] Theod. H. E. lib. 5. c. 23. [z] Con. Constant. Ep. ad Occident. ap. Theod. H. E. lib. 5. c. 9. [a] Theod. Ep. 81.

Exarch

Exarch of the Dioceſe, ſays the Council of Chalcedon [b], in one Canon: And in another [c], If any Man is injured by his own Biſhop, or Metropolitan, let him bring his Cauſe before the Exarch of the Dioceſe, or the Throne of Conſtantinople. Theſe Canons are adopted into the Civil Law, and confirmed by Imperial Edicts. For by one of Juſtinian's Conſtitutions [d] the Patriarch is to receive Appeals from a Provincial Synod, and give a final Determination to all Cauſes that are regularly brought before him: And the regular way of proceeding is there ſpecified, which is, That no Man ſhall bring his Cauſe firſt before the Patriarch, but firſt before his own Biſhop, then before the Metropolitan, after that before a Provincial Synod, and laſt of all before the Patriarch, from whoſe Judgment there lay no Appeal. The ſame is repeated and confirmed by other Laws [e] of that Emperor, which need not here be recited.

SECT. XV. A 4th Privilege to cenſure Metropolitans, and alſo their Suffragans, when Metropolitans were remiſs in cenſuring them.

4. As Patriarchs might receive Appeals from Metropolitans, ſo they had Power to enquire into their Adminiſtration, and correct and cenſure them, in caſe of Hereſy, or Miſdemeanour, or any Male-Adminiſtration, which made them liable by the Canons to Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure. Juſtinian made an expreſs Law to this purpoſe, [f] That if any Clergyman was accuſed in point of Faith or Morals, or Tranſgreſſion of the ſacred Canons; if he was a Biſhop, he ſhould be examined before his Metropolitan; but if he was a Metropolitan, then before the Archbiſhop, that is, the Patriarch to whom he was ſubject. By virtue of this Power Chryſoſtom depoſed Gerontius [g] Metropolitan of Nicomedia: And Atticus decided a Controverſy between Theodoſius and Agapetus [h], who contended about the Throne of Synada the Metropolis of Phrygia Pacatiana: And it were eaſy to add many other Inſtances of the like Nature out of the ancient Councils, which concurred with the Patriarchs in the exerciſe of this Power.

Nor did this Power extend only over Metropolitans, but over their Suffragan Biſhops alſo. For though every Provincial Biſhop was to be tried by his own Metropolitan and a Provincial Synod; yet in caſe they were negligent and remiſs in executing the Canons againſt Delinquents, the Patriarch had Power to take the Matter into his own Cognizance, and cenſure any Biſhop within the Limits of his Juriſdiction. Thus Sozomen [i] obſerves of Chryſoſtom, that at one Viſitation at Epheſus he depoſed thirteen Biſhops of Aſia, Lycia and Phrygia for Simony, and ſuch other corrupt Practices. This was done in a Synod of 70 Biſhops held at Epheſus, An. 401, as Valeſius [k] and Du Pin obſerve out of Palladius, who mentions the ſame thing, though he ſpeaks but of ſix Biſhops then depoſed.

SECT. XVI. A 5th Privilege. Patriarchs might make Metropolitans their Commiſſioners, &c.

5. THE Patriarch had Power to delegate, or ſend a Metropolitan into any part of his Dioceſe, as his Commiſſioner, to hear and determine Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes in his Name. At leaſt it was ſo in the Dioceſe of Egypt where Syneſius was Biſhop. For in one of his Epiſtles [l] writing to Theophilas Patriarch of Alexandria, he tells him what a difficult Task he had put upon him, when he ſent him through an Enemy's Country, to Hydrax and Palæbiſca, two Villages in the Confines of Libya, to determine a Diſpute that was riſen there about erecting of thoſe Places into Biſhops Sees: But, ſays he, there lies a Neceſſity upon me, νόμον ἡγεῖδς, to take every thing for a Law that is enjoyn'd me by the Throne of Alexandria.

SECT. XVII. A 6th Privilege. The Patriarch to be conſulted by his Metropolitans in matters of any great Moment.

6. AND as the Metropolitans did every thing that was Canonically enjoined them by the Patriarch: So they did nothing of any great Moment without him: paying the ſame Deference to him, that the Canons obliged their Suffragans to pay to them. This at leaſt was the Cuſtom of Egypt, as appears from a noted Paſſage related in the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon [m], where we find, that when Pope Leo's Epiſtle againſt Eutyches was ſubſcribed by all the Biſhops in Council, the Egyptian Biſhops then preſent refuſed to do it, becauſe they had then no Patriarch, and it was not lawful for them to do it without the conſent of a Patriarch, by the Rule of the Council of Nice, which orders all the Biſhops of the Egyptian Dioceſe to follow the Archbiſhop of Alexandria, and do nothing without him. This they pleaded in Council, and their Plea was accepted, and a Decree [n] paſſed in their favour upon it, That ſince this was the Cuſtom of the Egyptian Dioceſe to do nothing of this Nature without the Conſent and Authority of their Archbiſhop; they ſhould not be compelled to ſubſcribe, till a new Archbiſhop was choſen.

SECT. XVIII. 7. Patriarchs to communicate to the Metropolitans ſuch Imperial Laws as concerned the Church, &c.

7. IT was the Patriarch's Office to publiſh both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Laws, which concerned the Church, and to take care for the Diſperſion and Publication of them in all Churches of their Dioceſe. The Method is preſcribed by Juſtinian in the Epilogue to the [b] Con. Chalced. can. 9. [c] Ibid. can. 17. [d] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. Tit. 4. c. 29. [e] Juſt. Novel. 123. c. 22. Phot. Nomocan. Tit. 9. c. 1. [f] Novel. 137. c. 5. Quoties quidam ſacerdotum accuſabuntur vel de Fide, aut turpi Vita, aut ob aliquid aliud contra ſacros Canones admiſſum; ſi quidem Epiſcopus eſt is qui accuſatus eſt, ejus Metropolitanus examinet ea quæ dicta ſunt: Si vero Metropolitanus ſit, ejus Beatiſſimus Archiepiſcopus ſub quo degit. [g] Sozom. H. E. lib. 1. c. 6. [h] Socrat. H. E. lib. 7. c. 3. [i] Sozom. H. E. lib. 8. c. 6. [k] Valeſ. Not. in Loc. Du Pin. Biblioth. Vol. 3. Vit. Chryſoſt. [l] Syneſ. Ep. 67. p. 221. [m] Conc. Chalced. Act. 4. p. 512, 513. [n] Con. Chalc. can. 30. ex Act. 4.

6th

6th Novel: "The Patriarchs of every Dioceſe "ſhall publiſh theſe our Laws in their reſpective "Churches, and notify them to the Metropoli- "tans under them. The Metropolitans like- "wiſe ſhall publiſh them in their Metropolitical "Churches, and make them known to the Bi- "ſhops under them: That ſo they may publiſh "them in their reſpective Churches, and no one "be left ignorant in our whole Empire, of what "we have enacted for the glory of the Great "God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt." See alſo Novel 42, directed to Menas Patriarch of Conſtantinople, concluding in the ſame Tenor.

SECT. XIX. The 8th Privilege. Great Criminals reſerved to the Patriarch's Abſolution.

8. Syneſius obſerves another Privilege in the Dioceſe of Alexandria, which was, That in the Exerciſe of Diſcipline upon great Criminals and ſcandalous Offenders, a peculiar Deference was paid to the Patriarch, by reſerving their Abſolution to his Wiſdom and Diſcretion. As he gives an Inſtance in one Lamponianus a Presbyter, whom he had Excommunicated for abuſing Jaſon his Fellow-Presbyter. Though, ſays he [o], "He expreſſed "his Repentance with Tears, and the People "interceded for him; yet I refuſed to abſolve "him, but remitted him over for that to the "ſacred See: Only aſſuming this to my ſelf, that "if the Man ſhould happen to be in manifeſt "danger of Death, any Presbyter that was pre- "ſent ſhould receive him into Communion by "my Order. For no Man ſhall go Excommu- "nicate out of the World by me. But in caſe "he recovered, he ſhould ſtill be liable to the "former Penalty, and expect the Ratification "of his Pardon from your Divine and Courte- "ous Soul." But whether this Reſpect was paid by all Metropolitans to their Patriarch in every Dioceſe, I have not yet obſerved.

SECT. XX. The greater Patriarchs Abſolute and Independent of one another.

9. THE laſt Privilege of Patriarchs was, that they were originally all Co-ordinate and Independent of one another. I ſpeak now of them, as they were at their firſt Inſtitution: For after-Ages and Councils, and Emperors, made great Alteration in this Matter. At firſt Learned Men [p] reckon there were about 13 or 14 Patriarchs in the Church, that is, one in every Capital City of each Dioceſe of the Roman Empire; The Patriarch of Alexandria over the Egyptian Dioceſe, The Patriarch of Antioch over the Eaſtern Dioceſe, The Patriarch of Epheſus over the Aſiatick Dioceſe, The Patriarch of Cæſarea in Cappadocia over the Pontick Dioceſe; Theſſalonica in Macedon or Illyricum Orientale, Sirmium in Illyricum Occidentale, Rome in the Roman Præfecture, Milan in the Italick Dioceſe, Carthage in Africk, Lyons in France, Toledo in Spain, and York in the Dioceſe of Britain. The greateſt part of theſe, if not all, were real Patriarchs, and independent of one another, till Rome by Encroachment, and Conſtantinople by Law, got themſelves made Superior to ſome of their Neighbours, who became ſubordinate and ſubject unto them. The ancient Liberties of the Britannick Churches, as alſo the African and Italick Dioceſe, and their long Conteſts with Rome, before they could be brought to yield Obedience to her, are largely ſet forth by ſeveral of our Learned Writers [q] in particular Diſcourſes on this Subject. I only here note that the Eaſtern Patriarchs, Alexandria, Antioch, Epheſus, Cæſarea and Conſtantinople, were never ſubject to Rome, but maintained the ancient Liberty which the Canons gave them. For though Cæſarea and Epheſus were made ſubordinate to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and any one might appeal from them to him, yet the Appeal was to be carried no farther, [r] unleſs it were to a General Council. Which ſhews the Independency of the greater Patriarchs one of another.

SECT. XXI. The Patriarch of Conſtantinople dignified with the Title of Oecumenical, and his Church Head of all Churches.

THE Patriarch of Conſtantinople had alſo the honourable Title of Oecumenical, or Univerſal Patriarch given him; probably in regard of the great Extent of his Juriſdiction. Thus Juſtinian ſtiles Menas, Epiphanius, and Anthemius, Archbiſhops and Oecumenical Patriarchs in ſeveral of his Reſcripts [s]; and Leo gives the ſame Title to Stephen, Archbiſhop and Univerſal Patriarch, in Ten Laws [t] one after another. So that it was no ſuch new thing as Pope Gregory made it, for the Patriarch of Conſtantinople to be ſtiled Oecumenical Biſhop; for that Title was given him by Law many Years before, even from the Time of Juſtinian; and it is a Vulgar Error in Hiſtory to date the Original of that Title from the Time of Gregory I. which was in uſe at leaſt a whole Century before. But Juſtinian in another Reſcript goes a little farther, and [u] ſays expreſly, That Conſtantinople was the Head of all Churches. Which is as much as ever any Council allowed to Rome, that is, a Supremacy in its own Dioceſe, and a Precedency of Honour in regard that it was the Capital City of the Empire. Equal Privileges are granted to Conſtantinople upon the ſame ground, becauſe it was New Rome, and the Royal Seat, as the Councils of Conſtantinople [w] and Chalcedon, with ſome others, word it. So that they had Privileges of Honour, and Privileges of Power; the firſt of which were peculiar to thoſe two Sees: the other in a great meaſure common to them and all other Patriarchal Churches, except thoſe of Epheſus and Cæſarea, which, as I have often obſerved, were legally made ſubordinate to that of Conſtantinople.

[o] Syneſ. Ep. 67. p. 251. [p] Brerewood Patriarch. Gov. Q. 1. [q] Brerewood Patr. Gov. Qu. 2. & 3. Cav. Anc. Ch. Gov. c. 5. [r] See the Authorities cited before, §. 14. [s] See Juſtin. Novel. 7, 16, 42. [t] Leo Imp. Conſtit. Novel. 2, 3, &c. [u] Juſt. Cod. lib. 1. Tit. 3. c. 24. Conſtantinopolitana Eccleſia omnium aliarum eſt Caput. [w] Con. Conſt. Can. 3. Con. Chalced. Can. 28. Con. Trull. Can. 36. Juſtin. Novel. 131.

SECT. XXII. Of subordinate Patriarchs, what Figure they made in the Church, and that they were not mere Titular Patriarchs.

SOME here may be desirous to know, what Authority those Patriarchs had in the Church after their Subordination to the other. There are who tell us that they were sunk down to the Condition of Metropolitans again by the Council of Chalcedon: But that is a Mistake: For, 1st, they retained the Name of Exarchs of the Diocese still, and so subscribed themselves in all Councils. As in the 6th General Council, Theodoret subscribes himself Metropolitan of Ephesus, and Exarch of the Asiatick Diocese [x]; and Philalethes, Metropolitan of Cæsarea, and Exarch of the Pontick Diocese. 2dly, They always sat and voted in General Councils, next immediately after the five great Patriarchs, Rome, Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem, who by the Canons [y] had Precedence of all the rest. Next to these, before all the Metropolitans, the Bishops of Ephesus and Cæsarea took place, as may be seen in the Subscriptions of the 4th and 6th General [z] Councils. 3dly, They had Power to receive Appeals from Metropolitans, which is evident from the same Canons of Chalcedon, which give [a] the Patriarch of Constantinople Power to take Appeals from them. So that they were not mere Titular Patriarchs, as some in After-Ages, but had the Power as well as the Name; the Right of Ordaining Metropolitans, and receiving ultimate Appeals only excepted. But how long they or any others retained their Power, is not my Business here any farther to enquire.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the Αὐτοκέφαλοι.

SECT. I. All Metropolitans anciently stiled Αὐτοκέφαλοι.

AMONG other Titles which were anciently given to some certain Bishops, we frequently meet with the Name Αὐτοκέφαλοι, absolute and independent Bishops: which was not the Name of any one sort of Bishops, but given to several upon different Reasons. For first, before the setting up of Patriarchs, all Metropolitans were Αὐτοκέφαλοι, ordering the Affairs of their own Province with their Provincial Bishops, and being accountable to no Superior but a Synod, and that in case of Heresie, or some great Crime committed against Religion and the Rules of the Church.

SECT. II. Some Metropolitans Independent after the setting up of Patriarchal Power, as those of Cyprus, Iberia, Armenia, and the Church of Britain.

AND even after the Advancement of Patriarchs, several Metropolitans continued thus Independent; receiving their Ordination from their own Provincial Synod, and not from any Patriarch; terminating all Controversies in their own Synods, from which there was no Appeal to any Superior, except a General Council. Balsamon reckons among this sort of Αὐτοκέφαλοι, the Metropolitans of Bulgaria, [b] Cyprus and Iberia. And his Observation is certainly true of the two last, who were only Metropolitans, yet Independent of any Patriarchal or Superior Power. For though the Bishop of Antioch laid claim to the Ordination of the Cyprian Bishops in the Council of Ephesus, yet the Council upon hearing the Case, determined against him, making a Decree, [c] That whereas it never had been the Custom for the Bishop of Antioch to ordain Bishops in Cyprus, the Cyprian Bishops should retain their Rights inviolable, and according to Canon and ancient Custom ordain Bishops among themselves. And this was again repeated and confirmed by the Council of Trullo, [d] even after the Cypriots were driven into another Country by the Incursions of the Barbarians.

Others [e] observe the same Privilege in the Iberian Churches, now commonly called Georgians; that they never were subject either to the Patriarch of Constantinople, or any other; but all their Bishops, being Eighteen in Number, profess absolute Obedience to their own Metropolitan, without any other higher Dependance or Relation.

And this was the Case of the Armenian Churches in the time of Photius, as appears from an ancient Greek Notitia Episcopatum, cited by Peter de Marca, [f] which says it was an Αὐτοκέφαλος, and not subject to the Throne of Constantinople, but honoured with Independency, in respect to St. Gregory of Armenia their first Apostle.

And this was also the ancient Liberty of the Britannick Church, before the coming of Austin the Monk, when the Seven British Bishops, which were all that were then remaining, paid Obedience to the Archbishop of Caer-Leon, and acknowledged no Superior in Spirituals above him. As Dinothus the Learned Abbot of Bangor told Austin [g] in the Name of all the Britannick Churches, That they owed no other Obedience to the Pope of Rome, than they did to every Godly Christian, to love every one in his Degree in perfect Charity: Other Obedience than this, they knew none due to him whom he named Pope, &c. But they were under the Government of the Biſhop of Caer-Leon upon Uske, who was their Overſeer under God.

[x] Con. 6. Gen. Act. 18. [y] See Conc. Trull. Can. 36. & Justin. Novel. 131. c. 2. [z] Con. Chalced. Act. 1, & 3. Con. 6. Gen. Act. 18. [a] Con. Chalc. Can. 9, & 17. [b] Balsam. in Con. Constan. 1. Can. 2. [c] Con. Ephes. Act. 7. Decret. de Cypr. Epis. [d] Con. Trull. Can. 39. [e] Brerewood Enquir. c. 17. Chytræus de Statu Eccles. &c. [f] Marca de Primat. n. 27. p. 122. [g] Spelman. Con. Brit. an. 601. T. 1. p. 108.

SECT. III. A 3d ſort of 'Αυτοκέφαλοι ſuch Biſhops as were ſubject to no Metropolitan but only to the Patriarch of the Dioceſe.

BESIDES all theſe there was yet a Third ſort of 'Αυτοκέφαλοι, which were ſuch Biſhops as were ſubject to no Metropolitan, but immediately under the Patriarch of the Dioceſe, who was to them inſtead of a Metropolitan. Thus for Inſtance in the Patriarchate or large Dioceſe of Conſtantinople, the ancient Notitia, publiſhed by Leunclavius [h], reckons 39 ſuch Biſhops throughout the ſeveral Provinces: That publiſhed by Dr. Beverege [i] counts them Forty one, and the Notitia in Carolus à Sancto Paulo [k] augments the Number to Forty ſix. The Biſhop of Jeruſalem is ſaid [l] to have had Twenty five ſuch Biſhopricks in his Patriarchate, and the Biſhop of Antioch Sixteen, as Nilus Doxopatrius, a Writer of the Eleventh Century, in his Book of the Patriarchal Sees informs us. But what time this ſort of Independent Biſhopricks were firſt ſet up in the Church, is not certain. For the earlieſt Account we have of them, is in the Notitia of the Emperor Leo Sapiens, written in the 9th Century, where they are called Archbiſhopricks, as in ſome other Notitia's they are called Metropolitical Sees; though both theſe Names were but Titular, for they had no ſuffragan Biſhops under them.

SECT. IV. A Fourth ſort of 'Αυτοκέφαλοι.

Valeſius mentions another ſort of 'Αυτοκέφαλοι, which were ſuch Biſhops as were wholly Independent of all others. As they had no Suffragans under them, ſo neither did they acknowledge any Superior above them, whether Metropolitan or Patriarch, or any other whatſoever. Of this ſort he reckons the Biſhops [m] of Jeruſalem, before they were advanced to Patriarchal Dignity: But in this Inſtance he plainly miſtakes, and contradicts St. Jerom, who ſays expreſly, that the Biſhop of Jeruſalem was ſubject to the Biſhop of Cæſarea, as the Metropolitan of all Paleſtine, and to the Biſhop of Antioch as Metropolitan of the whole Eaſt, as has been noted in the laſt Chapter. If there were any ſuch Biſhops as he ſpeaks of, they muſt be ſuch as the Biſhop of Tomis in Scythia, who, as Sozomen [n] notes, was the only Biſhop of all the Cities of that Province: So that he could neither have any Suffragans under him, nor Metropolitan above him. But ſuch Inſtances are very rare, and we ſcarce meet with ſuch another Example in all the Hiſtory of the Church. I have now compleated the Account of Primitive Biſhops, and ſhewed the Diſtinctions which were among them in the external Polity of the Church: I proceed in the next place therefore to conſider the ſecond Order of the Clergy, which is that of Presbyters.

CHAP. XIX.

Of Presbyters.

SECT. I. The meaning of the Name Presbyter.

THE Name, Πρεσβύτεροι, Presbyters, or Elders, is a Word borrowed from the Greek Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, where it commonly ſignifies Rulers and Governors, being (as St. Jerom [a] notes) a Name of Office and Dignity, and not a mere Indication of Men's Age: For Elders were choſen, not by their Age, but by their Merits and Wiſdom. So that as a Senator among the Romans, and an Alderman in our own Language, ſignifies a Perſon of ſuch an Order and Station, without any regard to his Age, in like manner a Presbyter or Elder in the Chriſtian Church is one who is ordained to a certain Office, and authorized by his Quality, not by his Age, to diſcharge the ſeveral Duties of that Office and Station, wherein he is placed.

SECT. II. Apoſtles and Biſhops ſometimes called Presbyters.

AND in this large extenſive Senſe, 'tis readily granted by all, that Biſhops are ſometimes called Presbyters in the New Teſtament: For the Apoſtles themſelves do not refuſe the Title. On the other hand, 'tis the Opinion of many Learned Men, both [b] Ancient and [c] Modern, that Presbyters were ſometimes called Biſhops, whilſt the Biſhops that were properly ſuch, were diſtinguiſhed by other Titles, as that of Chief Prieſts and Apoſtles, &c. of which I have given a particular Account in one of the preceding Chapters, and there evinced that they who maintained this Identity of Names, did not thence infer an Identity of Offices, but always eſteemed Biſhops and Presbyters to be diſtinct Orders.

[h] Leunclav. Jus Gr. Rom. T. 1. Lib. 2. p. 88. [i] Bevereg. Pandect. T. 2. Not. in Can. 26. Concil. Trull. [k] Car. à S. Paulo Append. ad Geogr. Sacr. p. 19. [l] Nilus Doxopatr. ap. le Moyne Varia Sacra. T. 1. [m] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. Lib. 5. c. 23. See Chap. 17. § 7. [n] Sozom. Lib. 6. c. 21. Lib. 7. c. 19. [a] Hieron. in Eſai. 3. T. 5. p. 16. in Scripturis Sanctis Presbyteros Merito & Sapientia eligi, non ætate. [b] Chryſoſtom. Hom. 1. in Phil. 1. It. Hom. 11. in 1 Tim. 3. Theodoret. Com. in Phil. 1. 1. It. in Phil. 2. 25. & in 1 Tim. 3. 1. Ambroſiaſter in Eph. 4. 11. Hieron. Com. in Tit. 2. Ep. 83. ad Ocean. & 85. ad Evagr. [c] Uſſer. Diſſert. in Ignat. c. 18. p. 232. It. Orig. of Biſh. & Metrop. p. 55. Coteler. Not. in Ignat. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 1.

HERE

SECT. III. The Original of Presbyters properly so called.

HERE then, taking Presbyters in the ſtricteſt Senſe, for thoſe only of the ſecond Order, we muſt firſt enquire into their Original. The Learned Dr. Hammond [d] advances an Opinion about this Matter, which is ſomething ſingular. He aſſerts that in Scripture-times the Name of Presbyters belonged principally, if not alone, to Biſhops; and that there is no Evidence that any of this ſecond Order were then inſtituted, tho' ſoon after, he thinks, before the writing of Ignatius's Epiſtles, there were ſuch inſtituted in all Churches. The Authorities he builds upon are Clemens Romanus, and Epiphanius, who ſay, that in ſome Churches at firſt there were Biſhops and Deacons, without any Presbyters. But I conceive it will not hence follow, that it was ſo in all Churches: Nor does Epiphanius maintain that, but the contrary, That as in ſome Churches [e] there were only Biſhops and Deacons, ſo in others there were only Presbyters and Deacons; and that in large and populous Churches the Apoſtle ſettled both Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons; as at Epheſus, where Timothy was Biſhop, and had Presbyters ſubject to him; which Epiphanius proves from Scripture: That a Biſhop and Presbyter, ſays he, are not the ſame, the Apoſtle informs us, when writing to Timothy, who was a Biſhop, he bids him not rebuke an Elder, but intreat him as a Father. How comes the Biſhop to be concerned not to rebuke an Elder, if he had no Power over an Elder? In like manner the Apoſtle ſays, Againſt an Elder receive not an Accuſation, but before two or three Witneſſes: But he never ſaid to any Presbyter, Receive not an Accuſation againſt a Biſhop; nor did he ever write to any Presbyter, not to rebuke a Biſhop. This plainly implies, that in all ſuch large and populous Churches as that of Epheſus, according to Epiphanius, all the three Orders of Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons, were ſettled by the Apoſtles; though the ſmaller Churches were differently ſupplied at firſt, ſome only with Presbyters and Deacons, before Biſhops were conſtituted in them, and others only with Biſhops and Deacons, without any Presbyters. For all Churches had not immediately all the ſame Church-Officers upon their firſt Foundation, but Time was required to compleat their Conſtitution, as Biſhop Pearſon [f] has obſerved on this very Paſſage of Epiphanius.

SECT. IV. The Power and Privileges of Presbyters.

ADMITTING then that Presbyters, as well as Biſhops, were originally ſettled in the Church by the Apoſtles, we are next to enquire into the Power and Privileges that were proper to their Order. And here I ſhall have occaſion to ſay the leſs, having already ſhewed * what Offices they might perform by virtue of their ordinary Power, only acting in Dependance on, and Subordination to their Biſhop, as the Supreme Miniſter of the Church: They might Baptize, Preach, Conſecrate and Adminiſter the Euchariſt, &c. in the Biſhop's Abſence, or in his Preſence, if he authorized and deputed them, as has been noted before: They might alſo reconcile Penitents, and grant them Abſolution in the Biſhop's Abſence: And ſome think they had Power likewiſe to Confirm in Caſes of Neceſſiy, by ſpecial Licenſe and Delegation. But theſe two things will be conſidered and diſcuſſed more particularly hereafter, when we come to treat of Diſcipline and Confirmation. What is farther to be noted in this Place, is the Honour and Reſpect that was paid to them, acting in Conjunction with their Biſhop, who ſcarce did any thing in the Adminiſtration and Government of the Church, without the Advice, Conſent, and amicable Concurrence of his Presbyters.

SECT. V. Presbyters allowed to ſit with the Biſhop on Thrones in the Church.

HENCE it was that Presbyters were allowed to ſit together with the Biſhop in the Church (which Privilege was never allowed to Deacons): And their Seats were dignified with the Name of Thrones as the Biſhop's was, only with this difference, that his was the High Throne, and theirs the Second Thrones. In Alluſion to this, Gregory Nazianzen [g] ſpeaking of his own Ordination to the Degree of Presbyter, ſays, His Father who ordained him, brought him by Violence to the Second Thrones. And in his Viſion concerning the Church of Anaſtaſia [h], he thus repreſents the ſeveral Orders of the Church: Methought I ſaw my ſelf (the Biſhop) ſitting on the High Throne, and the Presbyters, that is, the Guides of the Chriſtian Flock, ſitting on both ſides by me on lower Thrones, and the Deacons ſtanding by them. By this we may underſtand what Conſtantine meant in his Letter [i] to Chreſtus Biſhop of Syracuſe; when giving him a Summons to the Council of Arles, he bids him alſo bring with him two of the Second Throne, that is, two Presbyters: And what Euſebius means by thoſe Words in his Panegyrick [k] upon the Temple of Paulinus, where he ſays, he Beautified and Adorned the Structure with Thrones ſet up on high, for the Honour of the Preſidents or Rulers. By which it is plain he means the Thrones of the Presbyters, as well as the Biſhop: For they were both exalted above the Seats of the Common People. Nay, both the Name and Thing was then ſo uſual, that Aerius drew it into an Argument [l], to prove the Identity and Parity of Biſhops and Presbyters: A Biſhop ſits upon a Throne, and ſo does a Presbyter likewiſe. Which though it be

[d] Ham. Annot. on Acts 11. 30. [e] Epiph. Hær. 75. Aerian. n. 5. [f] Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 13. p. 412. In aliquibus Eccleſiis ab origine fuiſſe Presbyteros, nondum conſtitutis Epiſcopis; in aliquibus Epiſcopos, nondum conſtitutis Presbyteris. * See before Chap. 3. [g] Naz. Carm. de Vita, κάμπ]ε διαλ- ως εἰς δευτέρας Θρόνους. [h] Id Somn. de Eccleſia Anaſtaſiæ. Orat. 20. de Laud. Baſil. p. 310. δευτέρα δ καθέδρας. [i] Ap. Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 5. δύο γέτινας ἀφ' ἑκ τῶ δευτέρω Θρόνω. [k] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. [l] Epiphan. Hær. 75. Aerian.

be but a very lame and fooliſh Argument to prove what he intended, yet it is a plain Intimation of what has here been noted, to have been the then known Cuſtom and Practice of the Church: And little regard is to be had to Modern Authors, who pretend to ſay, that Presbyters had not Power to ſit in the Preſence of their Biſhops; which is confuted by the Acts and Canons [m] almoſt of every Council, and the Writings of every ancient Author, in which nothing more commonly occurs than the Phraſes, Conſeſſus Presbyterorum, and ſedere in Presbyteri, importing the Cuſtom and Privilege whereof we are now ſpeaking.

SECT. VI. The form of their ſitting in a Semicircle: Whence they were called Corona Presbyterii.

THERE is one thing farther to be noted, concerning the Manner of their Sitting, which was on each hand of the Biſhop, in the form or figure of a Semicircle; which is deſcribed by the Author [n] of the Conſtitutions under the Name of Clemens Romanus, and Gregory Nazianzen, and others. Whence as the Biſhop's Throne is called the Middle Throne, or the Middle Seat by Theodoret [o] and the Conſtitutions: So for the ſame Reaſon Ignatius [p] and the Conſtitutions [q] term the Presbyters the Spiritual Crown or Circle of the Presbytery, and the Crown of the Church: Unleſs we will take this for a Metaphorical Expreſſion, to denote only that Presbyters united with their Biſhop, were the Glory of the Church.

SECT. VII. Presbyters the Eccleſiaſtical Senate, or Council of the Church, whom the Biſhops conſulted and adviſed with upon all Occaſions.

THIS Honour was done them in regard to their Authority in the Church, wherein they were conſidered as a ſort of Eccleſiaſtical Senate, or Council to the Biſhop, who ſcarce did any thing of great Weight and Moment without asking their Advice, and taking their Conſent, to give the greater Force and Authority to all publick Acts done in the Name of the Church. Upon which Account, St. Chryſoſtom [r] and Syneſius [s] ſtile them the Court or Sanhedrim of the Presbyters; and Cyprian [t] the Sacred and Venerable Bench of the Clergy; St. Jerom [u] and others [w], the Churches Senate, and the Senate of Chriſt; Origen [x] and the Author of the [y] Conſtitutions, The Biſhop's Counſellors, and the Council of the Church: Becauſe though the Biſhop was Prince and Head of this Eccleſiaſtical Senate, and nothing could regularly be done without him; yet neither did he ordinarily do any publick Act, relating to Government and Diſcipline of the Church without their Advice and Aſſiſtance.

SECT. VIII. Some Evidences out of Ignatius and Cyprian, of the Power and Prerogatives of Presbyters in Conjunction with the Biſhop.

THE firſt Ages afford the moſt pregnant Proofs of this Divine Harmony between the Biſhop and his Presbyters. For any one that ever looked into the Writings of Cyprian, muſt acknowledge, that at Rome and Carthage, the two great Churches of the Weſt, all things were thus tranſacted by joint Conſent: The Biſhop with his Clergy did communi Conſilio [z] ponderare, weigh things by common Advice and Deliberation; whether it was in the Ordinations of the Clergy; (for Cyprian would not ſo much as ordain a Subdeacon or a Reader without their Conſent;) or whether it was in the Exerciſe of Diſcipline and Reconciliation of Penitents, Cyprian declares [a] his Reſolution to do all by common Conſent. And ſo Cornelius at the ſame time acted at Rome: For when Maximus and the reſt of the Confeſſors, who had ſided with Novatian, came afterward and made Confeſſion of their Error, and deſired to be admitted again into the Communion of the Church, Cornelius would do nothing in it, till he had firſt called a Presbytery, and taken both their Advice and Conſent [b] in the Affair, that he might proceed according to their unanimous Reſolution. Cyprian in ſeveral other of his Epiſtles [c], ſpeaks of the ſame Deference paid to his Presbytery, and in one Place he more particularly tells them, that it was a Law and a Rule [d] that he had laid down to himſelf, from the firſt entrance on his Biſhoprick, that he would do nothing without their Advice, and the Conſent of the People. Epiphanius obſerves the ſame Practice at Epheſus in the Condemnation of Noetus: For firſt he ſays, he was convened before the Presbytery [e], and then again upon a Relapſe by them expelled the Church. Which at leaſt muſt mean, that the Biſhop and his Presbyters joined together in this Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure. In like man-

[m] Con. Carthag. 4. c. 35, 36. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 20. Origen. Hom. 2. in Cantic. Con. Laodic. c. 55. Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. Con. Ancyr. c. 18. [n] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. Κάθω ὁ μέσος ὁ τῦ ἐπισκόπυ θρόνος. &c. [o] Theod. Hiſt. lib. 5. c. Ὁ μέσος θῶκος. [p] Ignat. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 13. πνευματικὸν στέφανον τὸ πρεσβυτέριυ. [q] Conſtitut. lib. 2. c. 28. στεφανὸν ἐκκλησίας. [r] Chryſ. de Sacerdot. lib. 3. c. 15. τὸ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων συνέδριον. [s] Syneſ. Ep. 67. ad Theoph. [t] Cypr. Ep. 55. al. 59. ad Cornel. Cleri Sacrum venerandumque Conſeſſum. Concil. Carth. 4. c. 35. Epiſcopus in Conſeſſu Presbyterorum ſublimior ſedeat, &c.

[u] Hieron. in Eſai. 3. Tom. 5. p. 17. Et nos habemus in Eccleſia ſenatum noſtrum, Cœtum Presbyterorum. [w] Pius Ep. 2. ad. Juſt. Vien. Salutat te ſenatus pauper Chriſti apud Romam conſtitutus. [x] Orig. Com. in Mat. βελὴ ἐκκλησίας. Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. par. 1. c. 11. p. 321. Hi autem βελευταὶ Chriſtiani ſane fuerunt Presbyteri. [y] Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 28. σύμβουλοι τῦ ἐπισκόπυ. συνέδριον καὶ βελὴ τῆς ἐκκλησίας.

[z] Cypr. Ep. 33. al. 38. ad Cler. In Ordinationibus Clericis ſolemus vos ante conſulere, & mores ac merita ſingulorum communi conſilio ponderare. [a] Id. Ep. 6. al. 14. ad Cler. Ut ea quæ circa Eccleſiæ Gubernaculum utilitas communis expoſcit, tractare ſimul, & plurimorum Conſilio examinata limare poſſemus.

[b] Cornel. Ep. 46. al. 49. ad Cypr. p. 92. Omni actu ad me perlato, placuit contrahi Presbyterium —— ut firmato conſilio, quid circa Perſonam eorum obſervari deberet, Conſenſu omnium ſtatueretur. [c] Cypr. Ep. 24. al. 29. ad Cler. Ep. 32. ad Cler. [d] Cypr. Ep. 6. al. 14. Quando à Primordio Epiſcopatus mei ſtatuerim, nihil ſine Conſilio voſtro, & ſine Conſenſu Plebis, mea privata Sententia gerere; Sed cum ad vos per Dei gratiam venero —— in commune tractabimus. [e] Epiph. Hær. 57. n. 1. ἐπὶ πρεσβυτέρων ἀγόμενος. ibid. οἱ αὐτοὶ πρεσβύτεροι ἔξω αὐτὸν τῆς ἐκκλησίας.

ner,

ner, ſpeaking of the firſt Condemnation of Arius, he ſays, Alexander Biſhop of Alexandria [f] called a Presbytery againſt him, before whom, and ſome Biſhops then preſent, he examined him, and expelled him. Cotelerius in his Notes upon the Conſtitutions, has publiſhed, from an ancient Manuſcript, one of the Forms of Arius's Depoſition [g], which may give ſome Light to this Matter. For thereby it appears, that when Alexander ſent forth his Circular Letters to all other Biſhops againſt Arius, he firſt ſummoned all the Presbyters and Deacons of Alexandria, and Region of Mareotes, not only to hear what he had written, but alſo to teſtify their Conſent to it, and declare that they agreed with him in the Condemnation of Arius. From whence we learn, that though the Depoſition was properly the Biſhop's Act, yet to have it done with the greater Solemnity, the Conſent both of the Presbyters and Deacons was required to it. And thus it was alſo in the Condemnation of Origen: The Council of Alexandria, which expelled him the City, was compoſed both of Biſhops and Presbyters, who decreed that he ſhould remove from Alexandria, and neither teach nor inhabit there, as Pamphilus [h] relates in the ſecond Book of his Apology for Origen, ſome Fragments of which are preſerved in Photius. The Council of Rome, that was gathered againſt Novatian, conſiſted of ſixty Biſhops, and many more [i] Presbyters and Deacons. The firſt Council of Antioch, that was held againſt Paulus Samoſatenſis, had alſo [k] Presbyters and Deacons in it; The Name of one of them, Malchion a Presbyter of Antioch, is ſtill remaining in the Synodical Epiſtle among the Biſhops in the Inſcription.

From all which it appears, that this was an ancient Privilege of Presbyters to ſit and deliberate with Biſhops, both in their Conſiſtorial and Provincial Councils. And if we aſcend yet higher, we ſhall find Matters always thus tranſacted in the Church ab Origine; as appears from Ignatius, whoſe Writings (as a Learned Man obſerves) [l] ſpeak as much for the Honour of the Presbytery, as they do for the Superiority of Epiſcopacy: No ancient Author having given ſo many great and noble Characters of the Presbytery, as he does. For which reaſon it concerns thoſe, who are moſt zealous for the Honour and Authority of Presbyters, to look upon Ignatius as one of the beſt Aſſerters and Defenders of their Power and Reputation. For he always joins the Biſhops and Presbyters together, as preſiding over the Church, the one in the Place of God and Jeſus Chriſt, and the other as the great Council of God in the room of the Apoſtles. Thus in his Epiſtle [m] to the Epheſians, he bids them be ſubject to the Biſhop and the Presbytery: And in his Epiſtle to the Magneſians [n], he commends Sotion the Deacon, becauſe he was ſubject to the Biſhop as the Gift of God, and to the Presbytery, as the Law of Chriſt. And a little after in the ſame Epiſtle, he ſpeaks of the Biſhop as preſiding [o] in the place of God, and the Presbyters in the place of the Council of the Apoſtles. So in his Epiſtle to the Trallians [p], he bids them be ſubject to the Presbytery, as to the Apoſtles of Jeſus Chriſt. And again, Reverence the [q] Presbyters, as the Council of God, and the united Company of Apoſtles: Without which no Church is called a Church. Several other Paſſages of the ſame Importance may be ſeen in his Epiſtles to Polycarp and the Church of [r] Smyrna.

SECT. IX. The Power of Presbyters thought by ſome to be a little diminiſhed in the 4th Century.

AND indeed all his Epiſtles are ſo full of great Elogium's of the Presbytery, as acting in the Nature of an Eccleſiaſtical Senate together with the Biſhop, that our late Learned Defender of thoſe Epiſtles thence concludes, That the Power and Privileges of Presbyteries was greater in the 2d Century, when Ignatius lived, than in the 4th Age of the Church, when he thinks the Powers and Authority of Presbyteries was a little ſunk and dimiſhed over all the World, and even at Alexandria it ſelf, where it had moſt of all flouriſhed. And this he makes an Argument of the Antiquity of thoſe Epiſtles, that they were the Genuine Product of Ignatius, becauſe no one of the 4th Age would have given ſuch Encomiums of the Presbytery, or armed [s] them with ſo great Authority and Power. I ſhall not diſpute this Matter, nor enter upon any nice Compariſon of the different Powers of Presbyters in theſe two Ages, but only repreſent to the Reader what Privileges ſtill remained to them in the 4th Century.

SECT. X. Yet ſtill they were admitted to join with the Biſhops in the Impoſition of Hands in the Ordination of Presbyters.

AND here it cannot be denied, but that in this Age, in the Ordination of a Presbyter, all the Presbyters that were preſent were allowed, nay even required to join with the Biſhop in Impoſition of Hands upon the Party to [f] Epiph. Hær. 69. Arian. n. 3. συγκαλεῖ τὸ πρεσβυτέριον, καὶ ἄλλους τινὰς ἐπισκόπους παρόντας, &c. [g] Depoſitio Ari. ap. Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 28. Ἵνα καὶ τὰ νῦν γεγράμμενα γνῶτε, ἅ τε ἐν τούτοις συμφωνίαν ἑαυτῶν ἐπιδείξηδε, καὶ τῇ καθαιρέσει τῶν περὶ Ἄρειον σύμψηφοι γένησθε. [h] Pamphil. Apol. ap. Phot. Cod. 118. p. 298. Σωσθ. ἀθροίζει ἐπισκόπων καὶ τινῶν Πρεσβυτέρων καὶ Διακόνων. [i] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. [k] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 28. [l] Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 16. p. 428. Si quid ego in hac re intelligo, quicunque Presbyterali Dignitati Auctoritatique maxime ſtudent, non habent ſuæ Exiſtimationis firmius aut ſolidius Fundamentum, quàm Epiſtolas Sancti Ignatii noſtri: Neque enim in ullo vere antiquo Scriptores extra has Epiſtolas tot ac tanta Presbyteratus Præconia invenient, neque illius Ordinis honorem ſine Epiſcopatus Prærogativa ullibi conſtitutum reperient. [m] Ignat. Ep. ad Epheſ. n. 2. ὑποτασσόμενοι τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ καὶ πρεσβυτερίῳ. [n] Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 2. [o] Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 6. Προκαθημένῳ ἐπισκόπου εἰς τόπον Θεοῦ, καὶ τῶν πρεσβυτέρων εἰς τόπον συνεδρίου τῶν Ἀποστόλων. [p] Ep. ad Trall. n. 2. Ὑποτάσσεσθε τῷ πρεσβυτερίῳ ὡς τοῖς Ἀποστόλοις. [q] Ibid. n. 3. Ὡς συνέδριον Θεοῦ, καὶ ὡς συνδεσμὸν Ἀποστόλων χωρὶς τούτων ἐκκλησία οὐ καλεῖται. [r] Ep. ad Polycarp. n. 7. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 8. [s] Pearſon. Vindic. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 16. p. 428. Nemo tam ſeris Eccleſiæ temporibus —— Presbyterium tot laudibus cumulaſſet, tanta auctoritate armaſſet, cujus poteſtate a Tempeſtate, etiam Alexandriæ, ubi maxime floruerat, tantopere imminuta eſt.

be ordained. That it was ſo in the African Churches is beyond all Diſpute: For in the 4th Council of Carthage [t], there is a Canon expreſly enjoining it: When a Presbyter is ordained, while the Biſhop pronounces the Benediction, and lays his Hand upon his Head, all the Presbyters that are preſent ſhall lay their Hands by the Biſhop's Hand upon his Head alſo. And this in all likelihood was the Univerſal Practice of the Church. For in the Conſtitutions of the Church of Alexandria [u], there is a Rule to the ſame purpoſe. In the Latin Church the Decree of the Council of Carthage ſeems alſo to have prevailed, becauſe it is inſerted into their Canon Law by Gratian [w] and other Collectors, from whence it became the common Practice of our own Church, which is continued to this Day. Some ancient Canons [x] indeed ſay, That one Biſhop alone ſhall ordain a Presbyter: But that is not ſaid to exclude Presbyters from aſſiſting, but only to put a difference between the Ordination of a Biſhop and a Presbyter: For the Ordination of a Biſhop could not regularly be performed without the concurrence of three Biſhops with the Metropolitan; but a Presbyter might be ordained by a ſingle Biſhop, without any other Aſſiſtance, ſave that of his Presbytery joining with him. And this plainly appears to have been the Practice of the 4th Century.

SECT. XI. And allowed to ſit in Conſiſtory with their Biſhops.

IT is farther evident from the Records of the ſame Age, that Presbyters had ſtill the Privilege of ſitting in Conſiſtory with their Biſhops. For Pope Siricius in the latter end of this Century acted as Cornelius had done before him. When he went about to condemn the Errors of Jovinian, he firſt called [y] a Presbytery, and with their Advice cenſured his Doctrines, and then with the Conſent of the Deacons alſo, and the reſt of the Clergy, expelled him the Church. And ſo likewiſe Syneſius Biſhop of Ptolemais proceeded againſt Andronicus the Impious and Blaſpheming Prefect of Pentapolis: He firſt laid open his horrible Crimes before the Conſiſtory of his Church, and then with their Conſent pronounced the Sentence of Excommunication againſt him; which he therefore calls the Act of the Conſiſtory [z] or Sanhedrim of Ptolemais, in the Circular Letters which he wrote to give notice of his Excommunication to other Churches. Baronius indeed and the common Editors of the Councils reckon this by miſtake among the Provincial Synods: But it appears evidently from Syneſius, that it was only the private Conſiſtory of the Church of Ptolemais: For he ſays expreſly [a], the Church of Ptolemais gave notice of this Excommunication to all her Siſter-Churches throughout the World, requiring them to hold Andronicus Excommunicated, and not to deſpiſe her Act, as being only a poor Church in a ſmall City. Which agrees very well with the State of a private Conſiſtory, but is not ſpoken in the Stile of a Provincial Council.

SECT. XII. As alſo in Provincial Councils.

YET this is not ſaid with any deſign to deny that Presbyters were allowed to ſit in Provincial Synods: For there are undeniable Evidences of their enjoying this Privilege within the compaſs of the fourth Century, and After-Ages alſo. In the Council of Eliberis, which was held in the beginning of the 4th Age, there were no leſs than 36 Presbyters [b] ſitting together with the Biſhops, as is expreſly ſaid in the Acts of the Council. The firſt Council of Arles, called by Conſtantine, had alſo ſeveral Presbyters in it, the Names of many of which are loſt, as are alſo the Names of moſt of the Biſhops, who were two Hundred, yet the Names of Fifteen Presbyters [c] are ſtill remaining. And it is obſervable, that in Conſtantine's Tractoriæ, or Letters of Summons, the Presbyters as well as Biſhops were called by Imperial Edict to attend at that Council; if we may judge of all the reſt by that one Example which remains upon Record in Euſebius: For there in the Letter ſent to ſummon Chreſtus Biſhop of Syracuſe, Orders are given him [d] to bring along with him two of the ſecond Throne; which Phraſe, as has been obſerved before, denotes two Presbyters. So that from hence it is clear, that Presbyters were then privileged to ſit in Council with their Biſhops, and that by Imperial Edict. In Juſtellus's Bibliotheca Juris Canonici, there are three or four Roman Councils, where the Presbyters are particularly mentioned as Sitting, and ſometimes Voting with the Biſhops. In the Council under Hilarius, An. 491, the Presbyters of Rome all ſat [e] together with the Biſhops, and the Deacons ſtood by them. So again in the Council under Felix, An. 487, [f] the Names of Seventy ſix Presbyters are mentioned that ſat together with the Biſhops in Council, the Deacons as before ſtanding by them. And in the Council under Symmachus, An. 499, Sixty ſeven Presbyters and ſix [t] Con. Carth. 4. c. 3. Presbyter cum ordinatur, Epiſcopo eum benedicente, & manum ſuper caput ejus tenente, etiam omnes Presbyteri, qui præſentes ſunt, manus ſuas juxta manum Epiſcopi ſuper caput illius teneant. [u] Eccl. Alex. Conſtit. c. 6. ap. Bevereg. Not. in Canon. Apoſt. c. 2. Cum vult Epiſcopus ordinare Presbyterum, manum ſuam capiti ejus imponat, ſimulque omnes Presbyteri iſtud tangant. [w] Grat. Diſt. 23. c. 8. Ivo Part. 6. c. 12. [x] Can. Apoſt. c. 2. Con. Carth. 3. c. 45. [y] Siric. Ep. 2. ad Eccleſ. Mediolan. Facto Presbyterio, conſtitit Doctrinæ noſtræ, id eſt, Chriſtianæ Legi eſſe contraria —— Unde omnium noſtrorum tam Presbyterorum & Diaconorum, quam totius Cleri unam ſcito te fuiſſe ſententiam, ut Jovinianus, Auxentius, &c. perpetuum damnati, extra Eccleſiam remanerent. [z] Syneſ. Ep. 57. p. 190. Νυνὶ ᾧ οἷς τὸ σωνέδριον μετῆλθε τὴν Ἀνδρονίκε μανίαν ἀκήκοατε. [a] Id. Ep. 58. p. 199. [b] Con. Eliber. Procem. Reſidentibus etiam 36. al. 26. Presbyteris, adſtantibus Diaconibus & omni Plebe. [c] Con. Arelat. 1. in Catalogo eorum qui Concilio interfuerunt. In Edit. Crab. male vocat Secundum. [d] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 5. Συνελθέας σεαυτῷ καὶ δύο γέ τινας ἐκ τὸ δευτέρε θρόνε. [e] Con. Rom. ap. Juſtel. Tom. 1. p. 250. Reſidentibus etiam univerſis Presbyteris, adſtantibus quoque Diaconis, &c. [f] Ibid. p. 255.

Deacons

Deacons ſubſcribed in the very ſame [g] Form of Words as the Biſhops did. In another Council under the ſame Symmachus, An. 502, Thirty ſix Presbyters [h] are named, who ſat therein. And in the Council under Gregory the IId. An. 715, the Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons all ſubſcribe in the [i] ſame Form to the Decrees then publiſhed by them all together.

The like Inſtances may be ſeen in the firſt Councils [k] of Toledo, and Bracara [l], where we may alſo obſerve the difference made between Presbyters and Deacons; That the Presbyters are always repreſented as ſitting together with their Biſhops, but the Deacons only ſtanding by to attend them. All which notwithſtanding, Cellotius the Jeſuit, and ſome others of that Strain, have the Confidence to aſſert, that Presbyters were never allowed to ſit with Biſhops in their Councils. Bellarmin [m] does not go ſo far, but only denies them a Deciſive Voice there: In which Aſſertion he is oppoſed, not only by the generality of Proteſtant [n] Writers, but alſo by Habertus [o] and other Learned Defenders [p] of the Gallican Liberties in his own Communion. So that it is agreed on all hands by unprejudiced Writers, and curious Searchers of Antiquity, that Presbyters had liberty to ſit and deliberate with Biſhops in Provincial Councils.

SECT. XIII. And in General Councils likewiſe.

BUT to General or Univerſal Councils, there are ſome Proteſtant Writers, who ſeem to make it a Diſpute, whether Presbyters anciently were allowed to ſit in them. A Learned Perſon [q] of our own Church ſays, It was never before heard of, that Prieſts did ſit in Oecumenical Councils, meaning before the Council of Lateran under Calliſtus the Second, An. 1123, where 600 Abbots were preſent. But I ſee no reaſon why we may not reckon the firſt Council of Arles a General Council, if a Multitude of Biſhops from all Quarters can make it ſo: For there were 200 Biſhops preſent; and as I noted before, ſeveral Presbyters were ordered to come along with them. However the Council of Conſtantinople, An. 381, is reckoned by all a General Council (though there were but 150 Biſhops in it): And there we find three Presbyters together [r] ſubſcribing among the Biſhops alſo. The Learned Habertus [s] gives ſeveral other Inſtances out of the Council of Chalcedon, the Second Council of Nice, the Eighth Council called againſt Photius, and others. From all which, and what has here been alledged, it muſt be concluded, that Presbyters had anciently the Privilege of Sitting and Voting alſo in General Councils.

SECT. XIV. Of the Titles of Honour given to Presbyters, as well as Biſhops, and what difference there was between them as applied to both.

THESE Prerogatives of Presbyters, being thus allowed in ſo many Caſes to act in Conjunction with their Biſhops, advanced their Character and Reputation very high, and made them of great Eſteem in the Church: Inſomuch that many of the ſame Titles of Honour, which were given to Biſhops, were with a little Variation given to Presbyters alſo. Hence they are called Πρόεδροι, by Syneſius [t] and Euſebius; Πρεσβῶτες by Nazianzen [u] and Baſil; Πρεσβύ, by Chryſoſtom [w] and Nazianzen likewiſe: which Names anſwer to the Titles Præpoſiti and Antiſtites in Latin, and ſignifie Preſidents, or Rulers and Governors of the People. I know indeed ſome Learned Perſons [x] are of Opinion, that the Name Antiſtes is never given to any Presbyter by any ancient Writer. But this Aſſertion muſt be underſtood with a little Qualification: Otherwiſe it will not be exactly true: For Hilarius Sardus [y] ſpeaking of Presbyters, againſt whom a Biſhop is not to receive an Acculation, but before two or three Witneſſes, gives expreſly the Title of Antiſtites Dei. So does alſo the Author [z] of the Queſtions upon the Old and New Teſtament, under the Name of St. Auſtin. And though Præpoſiti in Cyprian's Epiſtles commonly ſignifies Biſhops, yet it does not always ſo: For the Presbyters of Rome writing [a] to the Clergy of Carthage, ſtile themſelves Præpoſiti, and Celerinus [b] in his Epiſtle to Lucian gives them the ſame Title. But Sidonius Apollinaris [c] ſets this Matter right, when he teacheth us to diſtinguiſh between an Antiſtes of the firſt Order, and an Antiſtes of the ſecond; which Diſtinction, whenever Presbyters are called Antiſtites, if it be not expreſſed, is always to be underſtood. Therefore Blondel argues very looſely, when he would infer from this Community of Names and Titles, that Biſhops and Presbyters were but one and the ſame Order. Which might as well be inferred from [g] Ibid. p. 259. Subſcripſerunt Presbyteri numero 67. Cœlius Laurentius Archipresbyter Tituli Praxedis hic ſubſcripſi & conſenſi Synodalibus Conſtitutis, atque in hac me profiteor manere Sententia, &c. [h] Ibid. p. 261. Reſidentibus etiam Presbyteris, Projectitio, Martino, &c. Adſtantibus quoque Diaconis. [i] Ibid. p. 274. Siſinnius Presbyter huic Conſtituto, à nobis promulgato, ſubſcripſi. Petrus Archidiaconus huic Conſtituto, à nobis promulgato ſubſcripſi. [k] Con. Tolet. 1. Convenientibus Epiſcopis in Eccleſia —— Conſidentibus Presbyteris, adſtantibus Diaconis, &c. [l] Con. Bracar. 1. Conſidentibus ſimul Epiſcopis, præſentibus quoque Presbyteris, adſtantibuſque Miniſtris, vel univerſo Clero. [m] Bellarm. de Concil. lib. 1. c. 15. [n] Morton. Apol. Cathol. Part. 2. lib. 4. c. 8. Whitaker de Concil. Quæſt. 3. [o] Habertus Not. in lib. Pontif. Grægor. p. 175. [p] Ranchin's Review of the Council of Trent. lib. 1. c. 8. [q] Biſhop Burnet's Vindication of the Ordination, &c. Pref. p. 32. [r] Con. Conſtantin. Tom. 2. p. 957. Tyrannus Presbyter Amorii, Auxanon Presbyter Apamea; Helladius Presbyter Commanenſis. [s] Habert. Not. in Pontif. p. 175. [t] Syneſ. Ep. 12. Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. [u] Naz. Orat. 1. Baſil. Reg. Moral. 71. [w] Chryſ. Hom. 11. in 1 Tim. 4. 1. Naz. Orat. 1. p. 37. [x] Bevereg. Not. in Conc. Ancyr. c. 13. Neque enim Presbyter unquam Antiſtes dicitur. [y] Ambroſ. al. Hilar. Com. in 1 Tim. 5. Hujus Ordinis ſublimis honor eſt; hujuſmodi enim Vicarii ſunt Chriſti: Idcirco non facile de hac Perſona Accuſatio debet admitti. Incredibile enim debet videri, iſtum qui Dei Antiſtes eſt, criminoſe verſatum. [z] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 101. Propter quod Antiſtites Dei ſunt, in Domo Dei & in honore Chriſti cum dignitate conſiſtunt. [a] Ep. 3. al. 8. ap. Cyprian. Cum incumbat nobis qui videmur Præpoſiti eſſe, & vice Paſtoris cuſtodire Gregem. [b] Celerin. Ep. 21. ap. Cypr. Præceperunt has Præpoſiti tantiſper ſic eſſe, donec Epiſcopus conſtituatur. [c] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 11. Antiſtes fuit ordine in ſecundo, Fratrem faſce levans Epiſcopali.

the

the Name Sacerdotes, Prieſts, which ſo frequently occurs in the ancient Writers; and as Cyprian obſerves, [d] denotes an Honour common both to Biſhops and Presbyters: Though when there was occaſion to ſpeak more accurately and diſtinctly of Biſhops, their Appropriate Title was that of Summi Sacerdotes, Chief Prieſts, to diſtinguiſh them from thoſe of the Inferior Order, as I have ſhewed before in ſpeaking of the Titles of Biſhops; to which I ſhall only add here the Teſtimony of Optatus, who [e] gives both Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, the Name of Prieſts, and their Office the Name of Prieſthood; but with this difference, that the Deacons were only in the third Degree of Prieſthood, and the Presbyters in the ſecond, but the Biſhops were the Heads and Chief of all. From whence it is plain, that if a bare Community of Names argued an Identity of Offices, one might as well infer, that Biſhops and Deacons, or Presbyters and Deacons were but one and the ſame Order, becauſe they ſhare in the ſame common Titles of Prieſt and Prieſthood.

SECT. XV. In what ſenſe Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons called Prieſts by Optatus.

IF here it be enquired, as it is very natural to ask the Queſtion, Why Optatus gives all the three Orders of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, the Title of Prieſthood? The Anſwer is plain and obvious: Becauſe according to him every Order had its ſhare, though in different Degrees, in the Chriſtian Prieſthood. Which is not, as ſome imagine, a Power to offer Chriſt's Body and Blood really upon the Altar as a Propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead; (which is ſuch a Notion of the Chriſtian Prieſthood, as no ancient Author or Ritual ever mentions): But it conſiſts in a Power and Authority to miniſter publickly according to God's Appointment in Holy Things, or Things pertaining to God. And there are ſeveral Parts of this Power, according to the different Participation of which, in the Opinion of Optatus, Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons had each their reſpective Share in the Prieſthood. Thus it was one Act of the Prieſt's Office to offer up the Sacrifice of the Peoples Prayers, Praiſes, and Thankſgivings to God, as their Mouth and Orator, and to make Interceſſion to God for them; another part of the Office was in God's Name to bleſs the People, particularly by admitting them to the Benefit and Privilege of Remiſſion of Sins by Spiritual Regeneration or Baptiſm. And thus far Deacons were anciently allowed to miniſter in Holy Things, as Mediators between God and the People. Upon which Account a late Learned Writer [f] joins entirely with Optatus, in declaring Deacons to be Sharers in this loweſt Degree of the Chriſtian Prieſthood. Above this was the Power of offering up to God the Peoples Sacrifices at the Altar; that is, as Mr. Mede [g] and others explain them, firſt the Euchariſtical Oblations of Bread and Wine, to agnize or acknowledge God to be the Lord of the Creatures; then the Sacrifice of Prayer and Thankſgiving in Commemoration of Chriſt's Bloody Sacrifice upon the Croſs, Myſtically repreſented in the Creatures of Bread and Wine; which whole ſacred Action was commonly called the Chriſtian's Reaſonable and Unbloody Sacrifice, or the Sacrifice of the Altar. Now the Deacons (as we ſhall ſee in the next Chapter) were never allowed to offer theſe Oblations at the Altar, but it was always a peculiar Act of the Presbyters Office, which was therefore reckoned a ſuperior Degree of the Prieſthood. Another Act of the Prieſtly Office was to interpret the Mind and Will of God to the People; as alſo to bleſs them ſolemnly in his Name, and upon Confeſſion and Repentance grant them Miniſterial Abſolution: And theſe being alſo the ordinary Offices of Presbyters, they gave them a farther Title to the Prieſthood. All theſe Offices, and ſome more, the * Biſhops could perform, ſuch as the ſolemn Conſecration or Benediction of Perſons ſet apart for the Miniſtry, &c. which together with their Spiritual Juriſdiction, or Power of Ruling and Governing the Church, as Vicars of Chriſt, gave them a Title to a yet higher Degree of the Chriſtian Prieſthood; whence as I noted before, they were called Chief Prieſts, Primi Sacerdotes, Summi Sacerdotes, Principes Sacerdotum, and Pontifices Maximi. I know indeed, Albaſpini and ſeveral others of the Roman [h] Communion make a Diſtinction between the Prelatical and Sacerdotal Office in a Biſhop, which is invented to ſerve ſome peculiar Hypotheſes of their own; as 1ſt, That a Biſhop differs nothing from a Presbyter as he is a Prieſt; 2dly, That Biſhop and Presbyter are but one Sacerdotal Order; and 3dly, That the proper Notion, and Specifick Character of the Sacerdotal Order, is a Power to offer Chriſt's Body and Blood, as a Propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead: All which are contrary to the plain Senſe of Antiquity, which knew no ſuch Specifick Character of the Sacerdotal Order, nor never dreamt of Biſhops and Presbyters being but one Order in reference to the Prieſthood; but always ſpake of them as diſtinct Orders, and placed their Diſtinction in their enjoying different Powers of the Prieſthood, making Presbyters only the ſecond Order, and ſecond Prieſthood, Secundus Ordo & Secundum Sacerdotium, and Biſhops the firſt; and aſſerting that the Juridical Acts of a Biſhop, were [d] Cypr. Ep. 58. al. 61. ad Lucium, p. 145. Presbyteri cum Epiſcopo ſacerdotali Honore conjuncti. [e] Optat. lib. 1. p. 35. Quid commemorem Diaconos in tertio? Quid Presbyteros in ſecundo Sacerdotio conſtitutos? Ipſi Apices &. Principes omnium aliqui Epiſcopi illis temporibus —— Inſtrumenta Divinæ Legis incipie tradiderunt. Confer. Hieron. Epiſt. 27. Where he calls Presbyters Secundi Ordinis Sacerdotes. [f] Dr. Hicks's Diſcourſe of the Chriſtian Prieſthood, c. 2. § 5. p. 33. [g] Mede Chriſt. Sacrif. c. 2. p. 356. Hicks ibid. 49. with many others cited by him. Ἱερεύειν τὸ εὐαγγέλιον Epiphanius calls it. Hær. 79. n. 3. * See before Chap. 2. Sect. 6. [h] Bellarm. de Cleric. lib. 1. c. 11. Caniſius Catech. de Sacram. Ord. Sect. 4.

alſo

alſo Sacerdotal, or acts of a Superior Degree of the Chriſtian Prieſtood peculiar to his Order. St. Cyprian [i] ſcruples not to call ſuch Acts, Sacerdotii Vigor, the Vigor and Power of the Epiſcopal Prieſthood, ſpeaking of the Power and Juriſdiction which he had as the Prieſt of God, to puniſh Presbyters and Deacons that were under him; which he had improperly called the Power of his Prieſthood, had his Juriſdiction and Prieſthood been two different Powers in him. This may ſerve at once to caution the Reader againſt that ſubtle Diſtinction of the Romaniſts, and give him a ſhort Account both of the Nature, and different Degrees of the Chriſtian Prieſthood.

SECT. XVI. Why Prieſts called Mediators between God and Men.

THERE is another Name frequently occurring in the Greek Writers, when they ſpeak of Chriſtian Prieſts, which will deſerve to be explained: That is the Name μεσῖ), Mediators between God and Men, a Title given them by the Author of the Conſtitutions [k], as alſo by Origen, Chryſoſtom, Baſil, Iſidore of Peluſium, and many others, whoſe Authorities are collected by [l] Cotelerius. The Latin Writers are more ſparing in the uſe of this Term: For except St. Jerom, Cotelerius could find none that uſed it. St. Auſtin is ſo far from uſing it, that he condemns it [m] as intolerable in Parmenian the Donatiſt, who had ſaid, That the Biſhop was Mediator between God and the People. And indeed there is a ſenſe in which it is intolerable to ſay, There is any other Mediator beſides one, the Man Chriſt Jeſus. But the Greek Fathers uſed the Word in a qualified Senſe, not for an Authentick Mediator, or Mediator of Redemption, who pleads his own Merits before God in the behalf of others; but only for a Mediator of Miniſterial Interceſſion, in which ſenſe ſome [n] of the Ancients think Moſes is called a Mediator by St. Paul, Gal. 3. 19. becauſe he was the Internuncius to relate the Mind of God to the People, and the Peoples Requeſts and Reſolutions to God again. And in this qualified ſenſe 'tis generally [o] owned that Chriſtian Prieſts may be called Mediators alſo, as thoſe that are appointed to convey the Peoples Devotions to God, and the Will and Bleſſing of God to the People.

SECT. XVII. The ancient Form and Manner of Ordaining Presbyters.

HAVING thus far ſpoken of the ſeveral Offices and Titles of Presbyters, it remains that I give a ſhort Account of the Form and Manner of their Ordination, by which they were inveſted with their Power, and authorized to perform the ſeveral Duties of their Function. Now as to this it is plain, the ancient Form was only Impoſition of Hands and a Conſecration-Prayer. Thus it is deſcribed in the Canon [p] of the Council of Carthage, which has been cited before, and in the Author under the Name of [q] Dionyſius, who repreſents it in this manner: He ſays, The Perſon to be ordained kneeled before the Biſhop at the Altar, and he laying his Hand upon his Head, did conſecrate him with an Holy Prayer, and then ſigned him with the Sign of the Croſs; after which the Biſhop and the reſt of the Clergy that were preſent, gave him the Kiſs of Peace. The Author of the Conſtitutions [r] ſpeaks alſo of Impoſition of Hands and Prayer, but no more. From which we may reaſonably conclude, that the Words which the Roman Church makes to be the moſt neceſſary and eſſential part of a Prieſt's Ordination, viz. Receive thou Power to offer Sacrifice to God, and to celebrate Maſs both for the Living and the Dead, were not in any of the ancient Forms of Conſecration. One of their own [ſ] Writers, Morinus after the moſt diligent ſearch he could make into theſe Matters, could find no Form for 900 years together, that made any mention of them. And for their other Ceremonies ſuperadded to the old ones, other Learned Writers of that Church do as ingenuouſly confeſs the Novelty of them. Habertus [s] proves againſt Catumſiritus that material Unction is a new thing, and not to be met with in any ancient Ordination; as neither is it in uſe in the Greek Church at this Day. So that when Gregory Nazianzen [t] and others ſpeak of an Unction, they are to be underſtood as ſpeaking Myſtically of the Spiritual Unction of the Holy Ghoſt. Cabaſſutius [u] obſerves the ſame of the Cuſtom of delivering the Sacred Veſſels into the Hands of the Perſon that was Ordained, that however ſome plead very ſtifly for its Antiquity, yet it is really but a modern Cuſtom: And he cites Morinus for the ſame Opinion. So that I need not ſtand to ſhew the Novelty of theſe things, which is ſo evidently proved, as well by the Confeſſion of theſe Learned Men, as the Silence of all ancient Rituals. But there is one thing the Reader may be deſirous to know farther, viz. what Form of Words the Conſecration Prayer was conceived in? To which I muſt anſwer, as I have done before about Biſhops, that there was no ſuch general Form then extant; but every Biſhop having Liberty to frame his own Liturgy, he uſed ſuch a Form as he thought convenient in his own Church: It being a thing indifferent, as a Learned Perſon [w] obſerves, ſo the Subſtance of the Bleſſing were preſerved. The only Form now remaining is that which is extant in the Conſtitutions, which becauſe it will ſhew the Reader what was then the Sub-ſtance of the Benediction, I will here inſert the Words of it, which are theſe: Look, O Lord, upon this thy Servant, who is choſen into the Presbytery by the Suffrage and Judgment of all the Clergy, and fill him with the Spirit of Grace and Counſel, that he may help and govern thy People with a pure Heart: In like manner as thou hadſt reſpect to thy choſen People, commanding Moſes to make choice of Elders, whom thou didſt repleniſh with thy Spirit. And now, Lord, do the ſame thing, preſerving in us the never-failing Spirit of thy Grace: That he being full of healing Powers and inſtructive Diſcourſe, may with Meekneſs teach thy People, and ſerve thee ſincerely with a pure Mind, and willing Soul, and unblameably perform the ſacred [x] Services for thy People, through Chriſt, &c. Where we may obſerve, that it was not then thought neceſſary to expreſs all or any of the Offices of a Presbyter in particular, but only in general to pray for Grace to be given to the Prieſt then ordained, whereby he might be enabled to perform them. And this with a ſolemn Impoſition of Hands was reckoned a ſufficient Form of Conſecration. Which I note for the Inſtruction of thoſe, who may be apt to think that Modern Forms of Ordination are in every Circumſtance like the Primitive ones; whereas if Morinus ſay true, the Words which are now moſt in uſe, viz. Receive the Holy Ghoſt, were not in the Roman Pontifical above 400 Years ago. Which makes good the Obſervation of a Learned [y] Perſon, That the Church Catholick did never agree on one Uniform Ritual, or Book of Ordination, but that was ſtill left to the Freedom of particular Churches; and ſo the Church of England had as much Power to make or alter Rituals, as any other had.

[i] Cypr. Ep. 15. al. 20. p. 42. ed. Ox. [k] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 25. [l] Coteler. Not. ibid. [m] Aug. contr. Parmen. lib. 2. c. 8. Si Johannes dicerit —— Mediatorem me habetis apud Patrem, & ego exoro pro peccatis veſtris (ſicut Parmenianus quodam loco poſuit Epiſcopum Mediatorem inter Populum & Deum) quis eum ferret bonorum atque fidelium Chriſtianorum? [n] Baſil. de Spir. Sanct. c. 14. Theodor. Com. in Gal. 3. 19. [o] See Dr. Potter. Ch. Gov. c. 5. p. 251. Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. lib. 2. c. 25. [p] Con. Carth. 4. c. 3. cited before §. 10. [q] Dionyſ. de Eccleſ. Hierarch. c. 5. part. 2. p. 364. [r] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 16. [ſ] See Biſhop Burnet of Ordination, p. 24. who cites Morinus. [s] Habert. Obſerv. in Pontif. Græc. p. 386. [t] Naz. Orat. 5. p. 136. [u] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 43. [w] Biſhop Burnet's Vindication of the Ordination, &c. p. 25.

SECT. XVIII. Of the Archipreſbyteri.

I ſhould here have ended this Chapter about Presbyters, but that it is neceſſary to give ſome Account of the Archipresbyteri, and Seniores Eccleſiæ, which are ſometimes mentioned in ancient Writers. The Archipresbyters are ſpoken of by St. Jerom, who ſeems [z] to ſay there was one, and but one in every Church; and perhaps he is the firſt Author that mentions them. After him Socrates [a] ſpeaks of one Peter Protopresbyter of Alexandria, whom Sozomen [b] calls Archipresbyter. And Liberatus [c] mentions one Proterius Archipresbyter in the ſame Church. From whom we alſo learn in ſome meaſure what was the Office and Quality of the Archpresbyter. He was not always the Senior Presbyter of the Church, as ſome are apt to imagine, but one choſen out of the College of Presbyters at the pleaſure of the Biſhop. For Liberatus ſays expreſly, that Dioſcorus the Biſhop made Proterius Archpresbyter of the Church: Which implies that he did not come to the Office by vertue of his Seniority, but by the Biſhop's Appointment. As to his Office, it is plain from Liberatus, that it was to preſide over the Church next under the Biſhop, as chief of the College of Presbyters, and to take care of all things relating to the Church in the Biſhop's Abſence; as Proterius is ſaid to have done, while Dioſcorus went to the Council of Chalcedon. And therefore ſome [d] not without reaſon think theſe Archipresbyteri were much of the ſame nature with our Deans in Cathedral Churches, as the College of Presbyters were the Chapter. But they wholly miſtake the Matter, who [e] confound theſe Archipresbyteri with the Cardinales Presbyteri. For that is a Name of much later Date, not to be found in any Genuine Writer till the time of Gregory the Great: For the Council of Rome, which is the only Authority that Bellarmin [f] alledges to prove it more ancient, is a mere Fiction. Beſides that the Cardinal Presbyters were many in the ſame Church or City, but the Archpresbyter was but one. So that whatever was the firſt Original of Cardinal Presbyters; (whether they were ſo called from their being fixed in ſome principal Churches, where Baptiſm might be Adminiſtred, which were therefore called Eccleſiæ vel Tituli Cardinales, as Bellarmin thinks; Or whether, as others [g] imagine, when the Number of Presbyters was grown ſo great in large and populous Cities, that they could not conveniently meet, and join with the Biſhop, for ordering the Government of the Church, there were ſome as the chief of them choſen out from the reſt, to be as the Biſhop's Council, who were therefore called Cardinales Presbyteri; a Diſpute that does not concern me any farther to enquire into or determine:) I ſay, whatever was their Riſe, or the Reaſon of their Name, it is certain they were not the ſame with the Archipresbyteri of the Primitive Church.

SECT. XIX. Of the Seniores Eccleſiaſtici. That theſe were not Lay-Elders in the Modern Acceptation.

As to the Seniores Eccleſiæ, they were a ſort of Elders, who were not of the Clergy, yet had ſome concern in the Care of the Church. The Name often occurs in Optatus and St. Auſtin, from whom we may eaſily learn the Nature of their Office. Optatus ſays [h], when Menſurius Biſhop of Carthage was forced to leave his Church in the time of the Diocletian Perſecution, he committed the Ornaments and Utenſils of the Church to ſuch of the Elders as he could truſt, Fidelibus Senioribus commendavit. Upon which Albaſpiny [i] notes, that beſides the Clergy there were then ſome Lay-Elders, who were entruſted to take care of the Goods of the Church. At the end of Optatus there is a Tract [x] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 16. τὰς ὑπὲρ τῦ λαῦ ἱερυργίας ἀμώμως ἐκτελῆ. [y] Biſhop Burnet's Vind. of the Ordin. p. 35. [z] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Singuli Eccleſiarum Epiſcopi, ſinguli Archipresbyteri, ſinguli Archidiaconi. [a] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 9. Πέτρῳ τῖς προτοπρεσβύτερῳ. [b] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 12. [c] Liberat. Breviar. c. 14. Proterio Dioſcorus commendavit Eccleſiam, qui & eum Archipresbyterum fecerat. In Edit. Crab male legitur Archiepiſcopum. [d] Stillingfl. Irenic. part. 2. c. 7. p. 358. [e] Onuphr. Interpret. Vocum Eccleſiaſt. Salmaſ. de Primat. c. 1. p. 10. [f] Bellar. de Cleric. lib. 1. c. 16. [g] Stillingfl. ibid. [h] Optat. lib. 1. p. 41. [i] Albaſpin. Not. in Optat. p. 123. Præter Eccleſiaſticos & Clericos quidam ex Plebe Seniores & probatæ vitæ res Eccleſiæ curabant.

called

called, The Purgation of Felix and Cæcilian, wherein there are ſeveral Epiſtles that make mention of the ſame Name, as that of Fortis [k] and Pupurius, and another nameleſs Author. St. Auſtin inſcribes one of his Epiſtles [l] to his own Church of Hippo in this manner, *Clero, Seniorib*us, & univerſæ Plebi, To the Clergy, the Elders, and all the People: And in ſeveral other places [m] has occaſion to mention theſe Seniores in other Churches.

From whence ſome [n] have concluded, that theſe were Ruling Lay-Elders, according to the new Model and modern Acceptation. Whereas, as the Ingenious Author [o] of the Humble Remonſtrance rightly obſerves in his Reply, thoſe Seniores of the Primitive Church were quite another thing. Some of them were the Optimates, the chief Men or Magiſtrates of the Place, ſuch as we ſtill call Aldermen, from the ancient Appellation of Seniores. Theſe are thoſe which the Cabarſieſſitan Council of Donatiſts in St. Auſtin call'd [p] Seniores Nobiliſſimi; and one of the Councils [q] of Carthage more expreſly, Magiſtratus vel Seniores locorum, The Magiſtrates or Elders of every City; whom the Biſhops were to take with them to give the Donatiſts a Meeting. In this Senſe Dr. Hammond [r] obſerves from Sir Henry Spelman, and ſome of our Saxon Writings, that anciently our Saxon Kings had the ſame Title of Elders, Aldermanni, Presbyteri, and Seniores. As in the Saxon Tranſlation of the Bible, the Word, Princes, is commonly render'd Aldermen. And of this ſort were ſome of thoſe Seniores Eccleſiæ, that have been mentioned, whoſe Advice and Aſſiſtance alſo, no doubt, the Biſhops took in many weighty Affairs of the Church. The other ſort, which were more properly called Seniores Eccleſiaſtici, were ſuch as were ſometimes truſted with the Utenſils, Treaſure, and outward Affairs of the Church; and may be compared to our Church-Wardens, Veſtry-men, Stewards, who have ſome Care of the Affairs of the Church, but are not concerned as Ruling-Elders in the Government or Diſcipline thereof. Now Lay-Elders are a Degree above the Deacons; but the Seniores Eccleſiæ were below them: Which is a farther Evidence, that they were not Lay-Elders in the Modern Acceptation. But of this enough. I now proceed to conſider the third Order of the Clergy in the Primitive Church, which is that of Deacons.

CHAP. XX.

Of Deacons.

SECT. I. Deacons always reckoned one of the three Sacred Orders of the Church.

THE Name Διάκονοι, which is the Original Word for Deacons, is ſometimes uſed in the New Teſtament for any one that Miniſters in the Service of God: In which large Senſe we ſometimes find Biſhops and Presbyters ſtiled Deacons, not only in the [a] New Teſtament, but in Eccleſiaſtical Writers [b] alſo. But here we take it in a more ſtrict Senſe for the Name of the Third Order of the Clergy of the Primitive Church. In treating of which it will be neceſſary in the firſt place to ſhew the Senſe of Antiquity concerning their Original. The Council of Trullo advances a very ſingular Notion about this Matter, aſſerting, that the ſeven Deacons ſpoken of in the Acts, are not to be underſtood of ſuch as miniſtred [c] in Divine Service or the Sacred Myſteries, but only of ſuch as ſerved Tables and attended the Poor. But the whole Current of Antiquity runs againſt this: Ignatius [d] ſtiles them expreſly Miniſters of the Myſteries of Chriſt, adding, That they are not Miniſters of Meats and Drinks, but of the Church of God. In another [e] place he ſpeaks of them as Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt, and gives them a ſort of Preſidency over the People, together with the Biſhop and Presbyters: Study to do all things, ſays he, in Divine Concord, under your Biſhop preſiding in the Place of God, and the Presbyters in the Place of the Apoſtolical Senate, and the Deacons moſt dear to me, as thoſe to whom is committed the Miniſtry of Jeſus Chriſt. And in many other [f] places he requires the People to be ſubject to them, and reverence them as Jeſus Chriſt, that is, as his Miniſters attending on his Service. Cyprian ſpeaks of them in the ſame Stile, calling them [g] Miniſters of Epiſcopacy and the Church; withal referring their Original to the place in the Acts of the Apoſtles, which [k] Geſta Purgat. Cæcil. & Fel. p. 268. ex Epiſt. Fortis: Omnes vos Epiſcopi, Presbyteri, Diacones, Seniores, Scitis, &c. Ibid. ex Epiſt. Purpurii: Adhibite Conclericos, & ſeniores Plebis, Eccleſiaſticos Viros, & inquirant diligenter, quæ ſunt iſtæ Diſſentiones. Ibid. Clericis & ſenioribus Cirthenſium in Domine æternam ſalutem. [l] Aug. Ep. 137. [m] Id. cont. Creſcon. lib. 3. c. 29. & 56. Concio 2. in Pſal. 36. p. 120. [n] Smectymn. Anſwer to the Remonſtrance, p. 74. [o] Hamon l'Eſtrange Defence of the Remonſtrance. [p] Aug. Conc. 2. in Pſal. 36. p. 120. [q] Con. Carthag. an. 403. in Con. African. c. 58. & in Cod. Can. Eccl. Afr. c. 91. Debere unumquemque noſtrum in Civitate ſua per ſe convenire Donatiſtarum Præpoſitos, aut adjungere ſibi vicinum Collegam, ut pariter eos in ſingulis quibuſque Civitatibus vel Locis, per Magiſtratus vel Seniores Locorum conveniant. [r] Ham. Diſſert. 4. cont. Blondel. c. 19. n. 1. [a] Act. 1. 25. 2 Cor. 6. 4. 2 Tim. 4. 5. 1 Cor. 3. 5. Eph. 3. 7. [b] Athan. cont. Gent. Chryſoſt. Hom. 1. in Phil. 1. 1. [c] Conc. Trull. c. 16. Ἔπρεπε Διάκονες μὴ ἐπὶ τὰς τοῖς μυστηρίοις διακονημάτων λαμβάνεσθαι. [d] Ignat. Ep. ad Trall. n. 2. [e] Epiſt. ad Magneſ. n. 6. [f] Epiſt. ad Polycarp. n. 6. Ep. ad Trall. n. 3. [g] Cypr. Ep. 65. al. 3. ad Rogatian. Diaconos poſt aſcenſum Domini in cœlos Apoſtoli ſibi conſtituerunt Epiſcopatus ſui & Eccleſiæ Miniſtros,

the

the Council of Trullo diſputes about, at the ſame time that he aſſerts [h] they were called ad Altaris Miniſterium, to the Miniſtry and Service of the Altar. Tertullian [i] was ſo far from thinking them only Miniſters of Meats and Drinks, that he joins them with Biſhops and Presbyters in the honourable Titles of Guides and Leaders to the Laity, and makes them in their Degree Paſtors and Overſeers of the Flock of Chriſt. And ſo St. Jerom, though he ſometimes in an angry Humour ſpeaks a little contemptuouſly of them, ſtiling them [k] Miniſters of Widows and Tables; yet in other places [l] he treats them with greater Reſpect, giving them the ſame honourable Title as Tertullian does, and ranking them among the Guides of the People. I ſhewed before in the laſt Chapter, that Optatus [m] had ſo great an Opinion of them, as to reckon their Office a lower Degree of the Prieſthood. And St. Auſtin ſeems to have had the ſame Sentiments: For in one of his Epiſtles [n] he gives Præſidius the Title of Conſacerdos, his Fellow-Prieſt, whom yet St. Jerom in the next Epiſtle [o] calls a Deacon.

SECT. II. Yet not generally called Prieſts, but Miniſters and Levites.

YET here that I may not ſeem to impoſe upon my Readers, I muſt obſerve that the Name of Prieſts was not generally given to the Deacons, by thoſe that eſteemed them a Sacred Order; but they are commonly diſtiguiſhed from Prieſts by the Names of Miniſters and Levites. Thus St. Jerom [p] diſtinguiſhes them from the Prieſts of the ſecond Order, that is, from the Presbyters, by the Title of Levites. The Author of the Queſtions [q] upon the Old and New Teſtament under the Name of St. Auſtin, and Hilarius Sardus [r] under the Name of St. Ambroſe, are more poſitive and expreſs in denying them the Name of Prieſts. And Salvian [s] though he acknowledges their Miniſtration and Function to be about Holy Things, yet he gives them but the ſame Title of Levites, and that in Contradiſtinction to the Prieſts. And ſo frequently in the Councils [t] the Names, Sacerdos and Levita, are uſed as the peculiar diſtinguiſhing Titles of Presbyters and Deacons. The Fourth Council of Carthage [u] ſpeaks more expreſly, That Deacons are not ordained to the Prieſthood, but only to the Miniſtring Office, or Inferior Service. And hence the Canons ſometimes give them the Name of Τπηρέτ) and Miniſtri, the Miniſters and Servants, not only of the Church, but of the Biſhops and Presbyters, as may be ſeen in the Councils [w] of Nice, and Carthage [x], and many others. Whence ſome Learned Men [y] conclude againſt Optatus and St. Auſtin, that Deacons were in no ſenſe allowed to be Prieſts; whilſt others [z] with Optatus, diſtinguiſh the ſeveral Degrees of the Prieſthood, and reckon that though Deacons were not abſolutely called Prieſts, becauſe that was the appropriate Title of Biſhops and Presbyters, whoſe Miniſters and Attendants they were; yet Deacons ſometimes performed ſuch Offices, as did entitle to a lower Degree of the Prieſthood. Having thus fairly ſtated and repreſented the Matter on both ſides, I muſt leave the Judicious Reader to determine for himſelf which Opinion has the ſtrongeſt Reaſons, whilſt I proceed to give an Account of the Ordination of Deacons, and their ſeveral Offices, and ſuch Laws and Rules as concerned their Order.

SECT. III. For this Reaſon the Biſhop was not tied to have the Aſſiſtance of any Presbyters to ordain them.

THE Ordination of a Deacon differed from that of a Presbyter, both in the Form and Manner of it, and alſo in the Gifts and Powers that were conferred thereby. For in the Ordination of a Presbyter, as has been noted before, the Presbyters who were preſent were required to join in the Impoſition of Hands with the Biſhop: But the Ordination of a Deacon might be performed by the Biſhop alone, becauſe, as the Council of Carthage [a] words it, he was ordained not to the Prieſthood, but to the Inferior Services of the Church. Theſe Services are not particularly mentioned in the Form of Ordination now remaining in the Conſtitutions; but there the Biſhop only prays in general, That God would [b] make his Face to ſhine upon that his Servant, who was then choſen to the Office of a Deacon, and fill him with his Holy Spirit and Power, as he did Stephen the Martyr; that he behaving himſelf acceptably and uniformly and unblameably in his Office, might be thought worthy of an higher Degree, &c. What therefore were the particular Offices of the Deacons, we are to learn not from the Forms of the Church, but from other Writers.

[h] Id. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Pleb. Legion. & Aſtur. p. 172. [i] Tert. de Fuga, c. 11. Quum ipſi Autores, id eſt, ipſi Diaconi, Presbyteri & Epiſcopi fugiunt, quomodo Laicus intelligere poterit, &c. Cum Duces fugiunt, quis de gregario numero ſuſtinebit? [k] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. & Com. in Ezek. c. 48. Menſarum & Viduarum Miniſtri. [l] Id. Com. in Mich. 7. Nolite credere in Ducibus, non in Epiſcopo, non in Presbytero, non in Diacono. [m] Optat. Lib. 1. [n] Aug. Ep. 16. [o] Hieron. Ep. 17. inter Epiſt. Aug. [p] Hieron. Ep. 27. Epiſcopi, & Sacerdotum inferioris gradus, ac Levitarum innumerabilis multitudo. [q] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & N. Teſt. T. 4. Q. 46. Nunquid Diaconus poteſt vicem gerere Sacerdotis —— Sacerdotis vicem agere non poteſt, qui non eſt Sacerdos. [r] Hilar. Com. in Epheſ. 4. Evangeliſtæ Diaconi ſunt, ſicut fuit Philippus, quamvis non ſint Sacerdotes. [s] Salvian. ad Eccleſ. Cathol. Lib. 2. p. 394. Levitis ac Sacerdotibus tanta divinarum rerum adminiſtratione fungentibus. [t] Con. Turon. 1. can. 2. [u] Con. Carth. 4. c. 4. Diaconus non ad Sacerdotium, ſed ad Miniſterium conſecratur. [w] Con. Nic. c. 18. Τῶ μὴ ἐπισκόπῳ ὑπηρέτ) εἶναι. [x] Con. Carth. 4. c. 37. Diaconus ita ſe Presbyteri, ut Epiſcopi, Miniſtrum eſſe cognoſcat. Vid. Con. Eliber. in Titulis can. 18. & 33. Con. Turon. 1. c. 1. [y] Bp. Fell. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 18. Habert. Not. in Pontific. p. 125. [z] Rigalt. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 13. Dr. Hicks's Diſcourſe concerning Prieſthood, p. 33. [a] Con. Carth. 4. c. 4. Diaconus quum ordinatur, ſolus Epiſcopus qui eum benedicit, manum ſuper caput illius ponat. Quia non Sacerdotium, ſed ad Miniſterium conſecratur. [b] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 18.

WHERE

SECT. IV. The Deacons Office to take care of the Utenſils of the Altar.

WHERE we find firſt, that the moſt ordinary and common Office of the Deacons was to be ſubſervient and aſſiſtant to the Biſhop and Presbyters in the Service of the Altar. It belonged to them to take care of the Holy Table, and all the Ornaments and Utenſils appertaining thereto. The Author under the Name of St. Auſtin [c] takes notice of this as the common Office of Deacons in all Churches, except in ſuch great Churches as the Church of Rome, where there being a Multitude of Inferior Clergy, this Office was devolved on ſome of them: But in other Churches it was the Deacons Office, where the Inferior Clergy, Subdeacons, &c. were prohibited by Canon to come into the Sanctuary, or touch any of the Sacred Veſſels in the time of Divine Service, as may be ſeen in ſeveral Canons [d] of the ancient Councils.

SECT. V. 2dly, To receive the Oblations of the People, and preſent them to the Prieſt, and recite the Names of thoſe that offered.

ANOTHER part of the Deacon's Office was to receive the Peoples Offerings, and preſent them to the Prieſt, who preſented them to God, at the Altar: After which the Deacon repeated the Names of thoſe that offered, publickly; And this Rehearſal was commonly called, Offerre nomina, as may be ſeen in Cyprian, who [e] ſpeaks of it as part of the Communion-Service of thoſe Times; which is alſo noted by Rigaltius [f] and others; of which Cuſtom I ſhall ſay more hereafter, when we come to treat of the ancient Service of the Church: At preſent I only obſerve, that this Recital of the Names of ſuch as made their Oblations, was part of the Deacon's Office, as is evident from St. Jerom, who tells us [g] that Extortioners and Oppreſſors made their Oblations out of their ill-gotten Goods, that they might glory in their Wickedneſs, while the Deacon in the Church publickly recites the Names of thoſe that offered: Such an one offers ſo much, ſuch an one has promiſed ſo much: And ſo they pleaſe themſelves with the Applauſe of the People, while their Conſcience ſecretly laſhes and torments them. Some indeed deny that there was any ſuch Cuſtom as this publick and particular Rehearſal of Mens Names that offered in the Church, and by conſequence that this was any part of the Deacon's Office: But I think St. Jerom's Teſtimony is undeniable Proof, and cannot otherwiſe be expounded, to make any tolerable Senſe of his Words: For which Reaſon I have made this one part of the Deacon's Office, though contrary to the Judgment of ſome Learned Men.

SECT. VI. 3dly, To read the Goſpel in ſome Churches.

3dly, IN ſome Churches, but not in all, the Deacons read the Goſpel both in the Communion-Service, and before it alſo. The Author of the Conſtitutions aſſigns all other Parts of Scripture to the Readers, but the Goſpel is to be read [h] only by a Presbyter or a Deacon. St. Jerom intimates [i] that it was part of the Deacon's Function; and ſo it is ſaid by the Council of Vaiſon, which authorizes Deacons to read the Homilies of the ancient Fathers in the abſence of a Presbyter, aſſigning this Reaſon for it: If the Deacons be worthy to read [k] the Diſcourſes of Chriſt in the Goſpel, why ſhould they not be thought worthy to read the Expoſitions of the Holy Fathers? This implies that in the Weſtern Churches it was the ordinary Office of the Deacons to read the Goſpels. But in other Churches the Cuſtom varied: For as Sozomen obſerves, it was cuſtomary at Alexandria for the Archdeacon only to read the Goſpels, in other Churches the Deacons, in others the Prieſts only, and in ſome Churches on high Feſtivals the Biſhop himſelf read, as at Conſtantinople on Eaſter-Day. In the African Churches, in the time of Cyprian, the Readers were allowed to read the Goſpels as well as other parts of Scripture, as appears from one of Cyprian's Epiſtles, where ſpeaking of Celerinus the Confeſſor, whom he had ordained a Reader, he ſays, It was fitting he ſhould be advanced to the Pulpit [l] or Tribunal of the Church (as they then called the Reading-desk) that he might thence read the Precepts and Goſpels of his Lord, which he himſelf like a courageous Confeſſor had followed and obſerved. So that we are not to look upon this to have been the Deacon's peculiar Office, but only in ſome Churches and ſome Ages.

SECT. VII. 4th'ly, To Miniſter the conſecrated Elements of Bread and Wine to the People in the Euchariſt.

BUT it was ſomething more appropriate to them to aſſiſt the Biſhop or Presbyters in the Adminiſtration of the Euchariſt: Where their Buſineſs was to diſtribute the Elements to the People that were preſent, and carry them to thoſe that were abſent alſo, as Juſtin Martyr [m] ac[c] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſtament. Tom. 4. c. 101. Ut autem non omnia miniſteria obſequiorum per ordinem agant, multitudo facit Clericorum. Nam utique & Altare portarent, & vaſa ejus, & aquam in manus funderent Sacerdoti, ſicut videmus per omnes Eccleſias. [d] Con. Agathen. c. 66. Non oportet in ſacratos Miniſtros licentiam habere, in Secretarium (quod Græci Diaconicon appellant) ingredi & contingere Vaſa Dominica. Con. Laodic. c. 21. cum Notis Balſamon. & Zonar. in loc. [e] Cypr. Ep. 10. al. 16. p. 37. Ad communicationem admittuntur, & offertur Nomen eorum, &c. [f] Rigalt. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 60. Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 2. c. 8. n. 7. [g] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. 18. p. 537. Multos conſpicimus qui opprimunt per potentiam, vel furta committunt, ut de multis parva pauperibus tribuant, & in ſuis ſceleribus gloriantur, publiceque Diaconus in Eccleſia recitet offerentium Nomina: Tantum offert ille, tantum ille pollicitus eſt, placentque ſibi ad Plauſum populi, torquente Conſcientia. [h] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 57. [i] Hieron. Ep. 57. ad Sabin. Evangelium Chriſti quaſi Diaconus lectitabas. [k] Con. Valenſ. 2. c. 2. Si digni ſunt Diaconi, quæ Chriſtus in Evangelio locutus eſt legere, quare indigni judicentur Sanctorum Patrum Expoſitionis publice recitare? [l] Cypr. Ep. 34. al. 39. Quid aliud quam ſuper Pulpitum, id eſt, ſuper Tribunal Eccleſiæ oportebat imponi, ut loci altioris celſitate ſubnixus —— legat Præcepta & Evangelia Domini, quæ fortiter ac fideliter ſequitur. [m] Juſt. M. Apol. 2. p. 97.

quaints us in his 2d Apology. The Author of the Conſtitutions [n] likewiſe deſcribing the Manner of the ancient Service, divides the whole Action between the Biſhop and the Deacon; appointing the Biſhop to deliver the Bread to every Communicant ſingly, ſaying, The Body of Chriſt: And the Deacon in like manner to deliver the Cup, ſaying, The Blood of Chriſt, the Cup of Life. This the Author under the Name of St. Auſtin [o] calls the proper Office of the Deacons Order. Yet it was not ſo proper to their Order, but that they were to depend upon the Will and Licenſe of the Biſhop and the Presbyters, if they were preſent, as is expreſly provided in ſome of the ancient [p] Councils, which forbid the Deacon to give the Euchariſt in the preſence of a Presbyter, except Neceſſity require, and he have his leave to do it. And therefore it was looked upon as a great Abſurdity for a Presbyter to ſit by and receive the Sacrament from the Hands of a Deacon, as was ſometimes practiſed, but the Council of Nice [q] made a ſevere Canon againſt it. So that what was allowed to Deacons, was not to Conſecrate the Euchariſt, but only to diſtribute it, and that not to the Biſhop or Presbyters, but only to the People. Yet this Action of theirs is ſometimes called Oblation or Offering, as in Cyprian [r], and the Council of Ancyra [s] which forbids ſome Deacons that were under Cenſure, ἄρτον ἢ ποτήριον ἀναφερείν, to offer either the Bread or Wine, as Deacons otherwiſe were allowed to do.

SECT. VIII. But not allowed to Conſecrate them at the Altar.

SOME Learned [t] Perſons, I know, put a different Senſe upon the Words of this Council: They underſtand by Offering, Conſecration, and thence conclude, That Deacons anciently were inveſted with the ordinary Power of Conſecrating the Euchariſt in the abſence of the Presbyters. But this is more than can fairly be deduced from the Words, which are capable of two more reaſonable Conſtructions: Either they may ſignifie the Deacons offering the Peoples Oblations to the Prieſt, which was a part of their Office, as I ſhewed before: And ſo Petavius [u] and Habertus underſtand them: Or elſe they may be interpreted by Cyprian's Words, who expreſſes himſelf more fully, calling it offering the Conſecrated Bread and Wine to the People; which ſeems to be the moſt natural Senſe; and is preferred to all others by ſome late Learned [w] Writers. Whatever it be, there is no reaſon to believe it means that Deacons were allowed the ordinary Power of Conſecration. For the Council of Nice, which was not long after the Council of Ancyra, ſays expreſly [x], that Deacons had not Power to offer; that is, in the Senſe in which Offering ſignifies Conſecration: For in that Senſe it was the proper Office of Presbyters. Some Deacons indeed did about this time take upon them thus to offer, but the Council of Arles, which was held in the ſame Year with that of Ancyra, reckons it a Preſumption and Tranſgreſſion of their Rule, and therefore made a new [y] Canon to reſtrain them. St. Hilary is a good Witneſs of the Practice of the Church in his own time, and he aſſures us there could be no Sacrifice, or Conſecration of the Euchariſt, without a Presbyter [z]. And St. Jerom ſays the ſame [a], That Presbyters were the only Perſons, whoſe Prayers conſecrated Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Chriſt. For which reaſon ſpeaking of one Hilary a Deacon, he ſays, he could not conſecrate the Euchariſt [b], becauſe he was only a Deacon. The Reaſon of this was, becauſe the Holy Euchariſt was look'd upon as the prime Chriſtian Sacrifice, and one of the higheſt Offices of the Chriſtian Prieſthood: And Deacons being generally reckoned no Prieſts, or but in the loweſt Degree, they were therefore forbidden to Offer or Conſecrate this Sacrifice at the Altar. This Reaſon is aſſigned by the Author [c] of the Conſtitutions, and the Author under the Name of St. Auſtin, and ſeveral others.

But there is a Paſſage in St. Ambroſe, which ſeems to intimate that in the Third Century the Deacons at Rome had Power to Conſecrate the Euchariſt: For ſpeaking of Laurentius the Deacon, he brings him in thus addreſſing himſelf to Sixtus his Biſhop, as he was going to his Martyrdom: Whither go you, Holy Prieſt, without your Deacon? You did not uſe to offer Sacrifice without your Miniſter. Why are you then now diſpleaſed with me? Why may I not be Partner with you in ſhedding my Blood, who was uſed to Conſecrate [d] the Blood of Chriſt by your Commiſſion, and be your Partner in Conſummating the Holy Myſteries? Baronius was ſo perplex'd with this Difficulty, that he reſolves it to be a Corruption of the Text, and that inſtead of Conſecrationem, it ſhould be read [e] Diſpenſationem: And ſome ſhameleſs Editors have, without any grounds, make bold to foiſt this [n] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 13. [o] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 101. Diaconi Ordo eſt accipere à Sacerdote, & ſic dare Plebi. [p] Con. Carth. 4. c. 38. Diaconus, præſente Presbytero, Euchariſtiam Corporis Chriſti populo ſi neceſſitas cogat, juſſus eroget. Vid. Con. Arelat. 2. c. 15. [q] Con. Nic. can. 18. [r] Cypr. de Lapſis, p. 132. ſolemnibus ad impletis Calicem Diaconus offerre præſentibus cœpit. [s] Conc. Ancyr. c. 2. [t] Hoſpin. Hiſt. Sacram. lib. 2. c. 1. p. 23. [u] Petav. Diatrib. de Poteſt. Conſecr. c. 3. T. 4. p. 211. Habert. in Pontifical. Par. 9. Obſerv. 2. p. 190. [w] Suicer. Theſaur. Tom. 1. p. 871. [x] Con. Nic. c. 18. τὸν Διακόνων μὴ ἐξουσίας προσφέρειν, &c. [y] Con. Arelat. 1. c. 15. De Diaconibus, quos cognovimus multis locis offerre, placuit minime fieri debere. [z] Hilar. Fragm. p. 129. Sacrificii opus ſine Presbytero eſſe non potuit. [a] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Euagr. Quid patitur Menſarum & Viduarum Miniſter, ut ſupra eos tumidus ſe efferat, ad quorum Preces Chriſti corpus & ſanguis conficitur? [b] Id. Dial. cont. Lucif. p. 145. Hilarius cum Diaconus de Eccleſia receſſerit, ſoluſque ut putat turba ſit Mundi; Neque Euchariſtiam conficere poteſt, Epiſcopos & Presbyteros non habens, &c. [c] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 28. Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. Q. 46. [d] Ambroſ. de Offic. lib. 1. c. 41. Quo Sacerdos ſancte ſine Diacono properas? Nunquam ſacrificium ſine Miniſtro offerre conſueveras. Quid in me ergo diſplicuit Cater? —— Cui commiſiſti Dominici ſanguinis Conſecrationem, cui conſummandorum Conſortium Sacramentorum, huic Conſortium tui ſanguinis negas? [e] Baron. an. 261. n. 7.

Cor-

Correction into the Text: Which Bona [f] and Habertus ingenuously condemn, as done against the Authority of all the MSS. as well as former Editions, and that without any reason for it from the Difficulty of the Expression. For the Word, Consecration, in this place does not signify the Sacramental Consecration of the Elements by Prayer at the Altar, which was performed by the Bishop himself, as appears evidently from the Context, where it is said, The Bishop was never used to offer Sacrifice without his Minister or Deacon: Therefore the Consecration which was committed to the Deacon, must be of another sort: For he could not offer or consecrate the Elements on the Altar in the Bishop's Presence, and at the same time that the Bishop himself Consecrated; but he might assist him, or bear a part with him, as it is there worded, in Consummating the Holy Mysteries; that is, in giving the Cup with the usual Form of Words to the People; which in the Language of those Times, was called a Ministerial Consecration, or Consummation of the Sacrament; forasmuch as the Receivers were hereby Consecrated with the Blood of Christ, and also consummated or made perfect Partakers of the Sacrament in both kinds, having received the Bread from the Hands of the Bishop, and the Cup from the Hands of the Deacon. This is plainly the Consecration here spoken of, which refers only to the Deacon's ministring of the Cup to the People, which was their usual Office, and so cannot be made an Argument, as Hospinian and Grotius [g] would have it, that Deacons were allowed to consecrate the Eucharist at the Altar.

SECT. IX. 5. Deacons allowed to Baptize in some Places.

BUT for the other Sacrament of Baptism, it is more evident, that they were permitted in some Cases to administer it solely. For though the Author [h] of the Constitutions says, that the Deacons did neither Baptize, nor Offer: And Epiphanius [i] affirms universally, that the Deacons were not entrusted with the sole Administration of any Sacrament: Yet it appears from other Writers, that they had this Power, at least in some places, ordinarily conferr'd upon them. Tertullian [k] invests them with the same Right as Presbyters, that is, to Baptize by the Bishop's Leave. And St. Jerom [l] entitles them to the very same Privilege. The Council of Eliberis [m] as plainly asserts this Right, when it says, If a Deacon, that takes care of a People without either Bishop or Presbyter, baptizes any, the Bishop shall consummate them by his Benediction. This plainly supposes, that Deacons had the ordinary Right of Baptizing in such Churches over which they presided. So when Cyril [n] directs his Catechumens, how they should behave themselves at the time of Baptism, when they came either before a Bishop, or Presbyter, or Deacon, in City or in Village: This may be presumed a fair Intimation, that then Deacons were ordinarily allowed to minister Baptism in Country Places. I speak only now of their ordinary Power. For as to extraordinary Cases, not only Deacons, but the Inferior Clergy, and Lay-men also were admitted to Baptize in the Primitive Church, as will be shewed in its proper place.

SECT. X. 6. Deacons to Bid Prayer in the Congregation.

ANOTHER Office of the Deacons was to be a sort of Monitors and Directors to the People in the Exercise of their Publick Devotions in the Church. To which purpose they were wont to use certain known Forms of Words, to give notice when each part of the Service began, and to excite the People to join attentively therein; also to give notice to the Catechuments, Penitents, Energumens, when to come up and make their Prayers, and when to depart; and in several Prayers they repeated the Words before them, to teach them what they were to pray for. All this was called by the general Name of κηρύτ̃ειν, among the Greeks, and Prædicare among the Latins; which does not ordinarily signifie Preaching, as some mistake it, but performing the Office of a Κήρυξ, or Præco in the Assembly: Whence Synesius [o] and some others call the Deacons ἱερογκήρυκες, The Holy Cryers of the Church, as those that gave notice to the Congregation, how all things were regularly to be performed. Thus the word Κηρύσσει frequently occurs in the ancient Rituals or Canons: As in the Apostolical Constitutions, as soon as the Bishop has ended his Sermon, the Deacon is to cry, Let the Hearers [p] and Unbelievers depart. Then he is to bid the Catechumens pray, and to call upon the Faithful also to pray for them, repeating a Form of Bidding Prayer, to instruct the People after what manner they were to pray for them. Which Form may be seen both in the Constitutions [q], and in [r] St. Chrysostom. After this the Deacon was to call in like manner upon the Energumens, the Competentes, and the Penitents in their several Orders, using the solemn Words of Exhortation both to them and the People to pray for them, ἐκτενῶς δεηθῶμεν, Let us ardently pray for them. Then again when the Deacon had dismissed all these by a solemn Cry, ἀπολύεσθε προελθέτε, or Ite, Missa est: He called upon the Faithful to pray again for themselves, and the [f] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 4. Habert. Not. in Pontifical. Græc. p. 191. [g] Vid. Grot. de Cœnæ Administratione Pastores non sunt. Cited and Confuted by Petavius. [h] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 28. [i] Epiphan. Hær. 79. Collyrid. n. 4. [k] Tertul. de Bapt. c. 17. Dandi quidem habet jus summus Sacerdos, qui est Episcopus; dehinc Presbyteri & Diaconi, non tamen sine Episcopi auctoritate, &c. [l] Hieron. Dial. cont. Lucif. c. 4. p. 139. Inde venit, ut sine jussione Episcopi neque Presbyter neque Diaconus jus habeant Baptizandi. [m] Concil. Eliber. c. 77. Si quis Diaconus, regens Plebem sine Episcopo vel Presbytero, aliquos baptizaverit, Episcopus eos per Benedictionem perficere debebit. [n] Cyril. Catech. 17. n. 17. [o] Synes. Ep. 67. p. 224. Chrysost. Hom. 17. in Heb. 9. Κήρυξ ὅταν εἴπῃ, τὰ ἅγια τοῖς ἁγίοις.. [p] Const. Apost. lib. 8. c. 5. κηρυττέτω, μή τις τῶν ἀκροωμένων μή τις τῶν ἀπίστων. [q] Ibid. c. 6. [r] Chrys. Hom. 2. in 2 Cor.

whole

whole State of Christ's Church, repeating [s] another Form of Bidding Prayer before them. And this is there called the Deacon's προσφώνησις, or Exhortation to pray, to distinguish it from the Bishop's ἐπίκλησις, which was a direct Form of Address to God, whereas the Deacon's Address was to the People: For which reason it was called προσφώνησις, and κηρύξαι, Bidding the People pray, or a Call and Exhortation to pray, with Directions what they should pray for in particular. This the Latins called both Oratio, and Prædicatio, as may be seen in one of the Councils [t] of Toledo, which explains the word Orare, by Prædicare, making them both to signifie this Office of the Deacon. And hence one of the Deacon's Ornaments (that I may note this by the way) is called by the same Council his Orarium, because he used it sometimes as a private Signal to give notice of the Prayers to his Brethren of the Clergy. By all this we may understand what Socrates means, when he says Athanasius [u] commanded his Deacon κηρύξαι εὐχήν to Bid Prayer; and how we are to interpret that controverted Canon of the Council of Ancyra, which speaking of some Deacons that had lapsed into Idolatry, and degrading them, says, They should [w] no longer κηρύσσειν: Which some interpret Preaching, but others [x] more truly understand it of this part of the Deacon's Office, which was to be the κήρυξ or Præco, the Sacred Cryer of the Congregation.

SECT. XI. 7. Deacons allowed to Preach by the Bishop's Authority.

IF it be enquired, Whether Deacons had any Power to preach publickly in the Congregation? The Answer must be the same, as in the Case of Baptism: They had Power to preach by License and Authority from the Bishop, but not without it. The Author under the Name of [y] St. Ambrose says positively, that Deacons did not preach in his time; though he thinks originally all Deacons were Evangelists, as Philip and Stephen were. I have shewed before, that Presbyters themselves in many places were not allowed to preach in the Bishop's Presence, but by his special Leave, and therefore it is much more reasonable to conclude the same of Deacons. Blondel [z] and Baronius think that St. Chrysostom preached those elegant Discourses, de Incomprehensibili Dei Natura, de Anathemate, &c. while he was but a Deacon. But others think [a] more probably, that those were not Sermons which he preach'd in the Church, but only Discourses that he composed upon other Occasions; and that his first Sermon was that which he preached when he was ordained Presbyter, now extant in his 4th Vol. p. 953. But if he ever preached while he was Deacon, there is no question to be made but that he had the Authority of his Bishop Meletius for doing it: As Philostorgius [b] says, Leontius the Arian Bishop of Antioch permitted Aetius his Deacon to preach publickly in the Church. Ephrem Syrus perhaps was another such Instance: For he was never more than a Deacon of the Church of Edessa; yet Photius [c] says he composed several Homilies or Sermons, which were so excellent in their kind, that after his Death they were translated into other Languages, and allowed to be read in many Churches immediately after the reading of the Scriptures, as St. Jerom [d] acquaints us. In some Places, as in the French Churches, Deacons were authorized by Canon to read some such Homilies in the Church instead of a Sermon, when the Presbyter happened to be sick, and could not preach, as appears from the Order made in the Council of Vaison [e] upon this Occasion. But here was Necessity, and Permission too: So that the Case of Deacons preaching in those Ages of the Church seems to have been (according to the Resolution which Vigilius [f] afterward gave of it) Allowable, if authorized by the Bishop; but a Presumption both against Custom and Canon, if done without his Permission.

SECT. XII. 8. Also to reconcile Penitents in cases of extreme Necessity.

AND thus the Case stood likewise with Deacons in reference to the Power of Reconciling Penitents, and granting them Absolution. This was ordinarily the Bishop's sole Prerogative, as the supreme Minister of the Church; and therefore rarely committed to Presbyters, but never to Deacons, except in Cases of extreme Necessity, when neither Bishop nor Presbyter were ready at hand to do it: In this case Deacons were sometimes authorized, as the Bishop's special Delegates, to give Men the solemn Imposition of Hands, which was the Sign of Reconciliation. Thus we find it in Cyprian, in the case of those Penitents, whom the Martyrs by their Letters recommended to the favour of the Church: If, says he, they [g] are seized by any dangerous Distemper, they need not expect my Return, but may have Recourse to any Presbyter that is present; or if a Presbyter cannot be found, they may make their Confession before a Deacon; that so they may receive Imposition of [s] Const. Apost. lib. 8. c. 10. [t] Con. Tolet. 4. c. 39. Unum Orarium oportet Levitam gestare in sinistro humero, propter quod orat, id est prædicat. [u] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 11. [w] Con. Ancyr. c. 2. [x] Habert. Pontifical. p. 203. Bevereg. Not. in Con. Ancyr. c. 2. Suicer. Thesaur. Eccles. T. 2. p. 99. [y] Ambros. Com. in Eph. 4. Nunc neque Diaconi in Populo prædicant, neque Clerici vel Laici baptizant. [z] Blondel. Apol. p. 57. Baron. an. 386. p. 532. [a] Cave Hist. Liter. Vol. 1. p. 253. [b] Philostorg. lib. 3. c. 17. διδάσκειν ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ ἐπιτρέπει. [c] Phot. Cod. 196. Λόγοι ἐνίοις καὶ πεπαίδευται. [d] Hieron. de Scriptor. c. 115. [e] Con. Vasens. 1. c. 2. Si Presbyter, aliqua infirmitate prohibente, per seipsum non potuerit prædicare, Sanctorum Patrum Homiliæ à Diaconibus recitentur. [f] Vigil. Ep. ad Rustic. & Sebastian. Con. Tom. 5. p. 554. Adjeciistis etiam execranda superbia, quæ nec leguntur, nec sine sui Pontificis jussione aliquando Ordinis vestri homines præsumpserunt, auctoritatem vobis Prædicationis contra omnem Consuetudinem vel Canones vindicare. [g] Cypr. Ep. 13. al. 18. ad Cler. Si incommodo aliquo & infirmitatis periculo occupati fuerint, non expectata præsentia nostra, apud Presbyterum quemcunque præsentem, vel si Presbyter repertus non fuerit, & urgere exitus cœperit, apud Diaconum quoque Exomologesin facere delicti sui possint; ut manu eis in pœnitentia imposita veniant ad Dominum cum Pace.

Hands,

Hands, and go to the Lord in Peace. Here it is obſervable, that none below a Deacon are commiſſioned to perform this Office; nor were the Deacons authorized to do it, but as the Biſhop's Delegates, and that in Caſes of extreme Neceſſity, when no Presbyter could be found to reconcile the Penitent at the Point of Death.

And to ſuſpend the Inferior Clergy in ſome extraordinary Caſes.

In the like Caſe, that is, in the Caſe of abſolute Neceſſity, it ſeems very probable, that in ſome of the Greek Churches they had Power to ſuſpend the Inferior Clergy, when need ſo required, and neither Biſhop nor Preſbyter was preſent to do it. Which may be collected from thoſe Words of the Author of the Conſtitutions [i], where he ſays, a Deacon Excommunicates a Subdeacon, a Reader, a Singer, a Deaconneſs, if there be occaſion, and the Preſbyter be not at hand to do it. But a Subdeacon ſhall have no Power to Excommunicate any, either Clergy or Laity: For Subdeacons are only Miniſters of the Deacons. This was a Power then committed to Deacons in extraordinary Caſes, and a peculiar Privilege which none of the Inferior Clergy might enjoy.

SECT. XIII.

9. Deacons to attend upon their Biſhops, and ſometimes repreſent them in General Councils.

IT may be reckoned alſo among their extraordinary Offices, that they were ſometimes deputed by their Biſhops to be their Repreſentatives and Proxies in General Councils. Their ordinary Office there was only to attend upon their Biſhops, and perform the Duties of Scribes, and Diſputants, &c. according as they were directed by them; In which Station we commonly find them employed in the ancient Councils: But then there were two Things in which they were treated as Inferior to Presbyters: 1. In that Presbyters are uſually repreſented as ſitting together with their Biſhops, while the Deacons ſtood with all the People. 2. Presbyters were ſometimes allowed to Vote, as has been ſhewed before; but there are no Inſtances that I know of, to evidence the ſame Privilege to belong to Deacons. Only when Biſhops could not attend in Perſon, they many times ſent their Deacons to repreſent them: And then they ſat and Voted, not as Deacons, but as Proxies, in the Room and Place of thoſe that ſent them. Of which there are ſo many Inſtances in the Acts of the Councils, that it is needleſs to refer the Reader to any of them. Yet they that deſire to ſee Examples, may conſult Chriſtianus Lupus in his Notes upon the 7th Canon of the Council of Trullo, where he obſerves ſome difference in the Sitting and Voting of Deacons in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Councils: In the Eaſtern Councils, if a Deacon repreſented a Metropolitan or a Patriarch, he ſat and ſubſcribed in the Place that the Metropolitan or Patriarch himſelf would have done, had he been preſent; but in the Weſtern Councils it was otherwiſe: There the Deacons Voted after all the Biſhops, and not in the Place of thoſe whoſe Proxies they were.

Thus it was in General Councils. But in Provincial and Conſiſtorial Synods the Deacons were ſometimes allowed to give their Voice, as well as the Presbyters, in their own Name. Of which the Reader may ſee ſeveral Inſtances in the Roman Councils under Symmachus and Gregory II. publiſhed by Juſtellus [k] in his Bibliotheca Juris Canonici, and in the 4th Tome of the Councils, where firſt the Biſhops, then the Presbyters, and then the Deacons, ſubſcribe every one in their own Name in particular. And thoſe that are Curious about this Matter, may furniſh themſelves with many other ſuch Examples.

SECT. XIV.

10. Deacons empowered to rebuke and correct Men that behaved themſelves irregularly in the Church.

THERE are two Things more to be obſerved concerning the Office of Deacons in Church-Aſſemblies. 1. That as they were the Regulators and Directors of Men's Behaviour in Divine Service; ſo they had Power to rebuke the Irregular, and chaſtiſe them for any indecent and unſeemly Deportment. The Conſtitutions often mention ſuch Acts as theſe belonging to the Deacon's Office. If any one be found ſitting out of his Place, let the Deacon rebuke him [l], and transfer him to his proper Station, as the Pilot or Steerſ-man of the Church. And again a little after, Let the Deacon [m] overlook and ſuperintend the People, that no one Talk, or Sleep, or Laugh, but give ear to the Word of God. This is evident alſo from St. Chryſoſtom, who ſpeaking of the irreverent Behaviour of ſome in the Church, bids their Neighbours firſt rebuke them, and if they would not bear it, to call the Deacon [*] to do his Office toward them. Agreeable to this Optatus tells us a very remarkable Story of Cæcilian Archdeacon of Carthage, that obſerving one Lucilla a rich Woman commit an indecent Act in the time of Receiving the Holy Communion; (for before ſhe received the Bread and Wine, ſhe was uſed to kiſs the Relicks of ſome pretended Martyr); He rebuked her [n] for it by vertue of his Office; Which ſhe ſo highly reſented, that afterward when he was choſen Biſhop, ſhe factiouſly withdrew her ſelf with ſome others from his Communion; and pretending his Ordination to be illegal, ſhe by her Power got Majorinus ordained againſt him: And this was one of the Principal Cauſes of the Schiſm of the Donatiſts, as Optatus there obſerves: It had its Riſe from the Implacable Malice of a Proud and Angry Woman, who could never forgive the Deacon that rebuked her in the Church.

[i] Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 28. Διάκονος ἀφορείζει ἢ ὑποδιάκονον, &c. [k] See before Chap. 19. Sect. 12. [l] Conſt. Ap. l. 2. c. 57. ἐπιπλήσσεσθω ὑπὸ τῶν διάκονων, ὡς ἀφωρέως, &c. [m] Ibid. p. 264. Ὁ διάκονος ἐπισκοπείτω τὸν λαὸν, &c. Confer. lib. 8. c. 11. [*] Chryſ. Hom. 24. in Act. [n] Optat. lib. 1. p. 40. Cum correptionem Archidiaconi Cæciliani ferre non poſſet, quæ ante ſpiritalem cibum & potum, os neſcio cujus Martyris, ſi tamen Martyris, libare dicebatur, &c.

Some may perhaps imagine, that what Cæcilian did was by vertue of a Superior Office, and that as Archdeacon he was of an higher Order, as now commonly Archdeacons are. But I ſhall ſhew in the next Chapter, that anciently Archdeacons were always of the Order of Deacons, and of no other Degree: And it appears from what has here been already diſcourſed, that this Act of Cæcilian was not from any peculiar Power that he enjoyed as Archdeacon, but from that ordinary Power to rebuke Offenders, which he had in common with all the other Deacons of the Church.

SECT. XV.
11. Deacons anciently performed the Offices of all the Inferior Orders of the Church.

THE other thing I would farther Remark concerning the Office of Deacons, is this, That before the Inſtitution of the Inferior Orders of the Church (which were not ſet up in all Churches at once, nor perhaps in any Church for the two firſt Ages, as ſhall be ſhewed hereafter) the Deacons were employed to perform all ſuch Offices, as were in after-Ages committed to thoſe Orders; ſuch as the Offices of Readers, Subdeacons, Exorciſts or Catechiſts, Door-keepers, and the like. Thus Epiphanius [o] obſerves, that originally all Offices of the Church were performed by Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons, and therefore no Church was without a Deacon. This was certainly the Practice in the time of Ignatius, who never ſpeaks of any Order below that of Deacons: But without them, he ſays, no Church was [p] called a Church. So that all the Inferior Offices muſt then be performed by Deacons. And even in after-Ages we find that ſeveral of the Inferior Offices were many times put upon the ſame Man, perhaps to avoid the Charge of maintaining an over-numerous Clergy in leſſer Churches. Thus Euſebius tells us, that Romanus the Martyr [q] was both Deacon and Exorciſt in the Church of Cæſarea. And Procopius the Martyr had three Offices in the Church of Scythopolis. He was at once Reader, Interpreter, and Exorciſt; as we learn from the Acts of his Martyrdom [r] publiſhed by Valeſius. Now both theſe were Martyred in the beginning of the 4th Century, in the time of the Diocletian Perſecution. And we find a whole Age after this, if the Author under the Name of St. Auſtin [s] may be credited, that except in ſuch great and rich Churches as the Church of Rome, where there was a numerous Clergy, all the Inferior Services were ſtill performed by the Deacons. In the Greek Church they were always the πυλωρῳ, or Door-keepers, in the time of the Oblation and Celebration of the Euchariſt, as may be ſeen in the Apoſtolical [t] Conſtitutions, where the Deacons are commanded to ſtand at the Men's Gate, and the Subdeacons at the Women's, to ſee that no one ſhould go out or go in, during the time of the Oblation. Theſe were anciently the Deacons principal Employments in the Aſſemblies of the Church.

SECT. XVI.
12. Deacons the Biſhop's Sub-Almoners.

BUT beſides theſe we are to take notice of two or three other Offices, in which they were commonly employ'd by the Biſhop out of the Church. One of theſe was to be his Sub-Almoner, to take care of the Neceſſitous, ſuch as Orphans, Widows, Virgins, Martyrs in Priſon, and all the Poor and Sick who had any Title to be maintained out of the Publick Revenues of the Church. The Deacons were particularly to enquire into the Neceſſities and Wants of all theſe, and make Relation thereof to the Biſhop, and then diſtribute to them ſuch Charities as they received from him towards their Relief and Aſſiſtance. The Archdeacon indeed was as it were the Biſhop's Treaſurer, but all the Deacons were his Diſpenſers, or Miniſters of the Church's Charity to the Indigent. Which appears from ſeveral Paſſages in [u] Cyprian, Dionyſius [w] of Alexandria, and the Author [x] of the Conſtitutions, who ſpeak indifferently of this Office, as common to all the Deacons. Particularly in the Conſtitutions the Duty of the Deacon is thus deſcribed, That he ſhould inform his Biſhop, when he knows any one to be in Diſtreſs, and then diſtribute to their Neceſſities by the Directions of the Biſhop; but to do nothing clancularly without his Conſent, leſt that might ſeem to accuſe him of neglecting the Diſtreſſed, and ſo turn to his Reproach, and raiſe a Murmuring againſt him.

SECT. XVII.
13. Deacons to inform the Biſhop of the Miſdemeanours of the People.

ANOTHER Office of the Deacons in this reſpect was to make Enquiry into the Morals and Converſation of the People; and ſuch Evils as he could not redreſs himſelf, by the ordinary Power which was entruſted in his Hands, of thoſe he was to give Information to the Biſhop, that he by his Supreme Authority might redreſs them. Let the Deacon, ſays the Book [y] of Conſtitutions, refer all things to the Biſhop, as Chriſt did to the Father: Such things as he is able, let him rectify, by the Power which he has from the Biſhop; but the weightier Cauſes let the Biſhop judge.

SECT. XVIII.
Hence Deacons commonly called the Biſhop's Eyes, his Mouth, Angels, Prophets, &c.

UPON this account the Deacons were uſually ſtiled the Biſhop's Eyes and his Ears, his Mouth, his Right-hand, and his Heart; becauſe by their Miniſtry he over-looked his Charge, and by them took cognizance of Men's Actions, as much as if he himſelf had ſeen them with his own Eyes, [o] Epiphan. Hær. 75. Aerian. [p] Ignat. Ep. ad Tral. n. 3. [q] Euſeb. de Martyr. Palæſtin. c. 2. [r] Acta Procop. ap. Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. de Martyr. Palæſt. c. 1. Ibi Eccleſiæ tria Miniſteria præbebat: Unum in Legendi Officio, alterum in Syri Interpretatione Sermonis, & tertium adverſus Dæmones manus Impoſitione conſummans. [s] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 101. cited before, § 4. [t] Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 11. [u] Cypr. Ep. 49. al. 52. ad Cornel. [w] Dionyſ. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 7. cap. 11. [x] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 31, & 32. Lib. 3. c. 19. [y] Conſt. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 44.

or

or heard them with his own Ears: By them he ſent Directions and Orders to his Flock, in which reſpect they were his Mouth and his Heart; by them he diſtributed to the Neceſſities of the Indigent, and ſo they were his Right-hand. Theſe Titles are frequently to be met with in the Conſtitutions [z] and the Author of the Epiſtle [a] to St. James. And Iſidore of Peluſium in Alluſion to them, writing to Lucius [b] an Archdeacon, he tells him in the Phraſe of the Church, that he ought to be all Eye, foraſmuch as Deacons were the Eyes of the Biſhop. The Author of the Conſtitutions [c] terms them likewiſe the Biſhop's Angels and Prophets, becauſe they were the Perſons whom he chiefly employed in Meſſages, either to his own People, or foreign Churches. For then Biſhops did nothing but by the Mouth or Hands of one of their Clergy.

SECT. XIX. Deacons to be multiplied according to the Neceſſities of the Church.

FOR this Reaſon, there being ſuch a Multitude and Variety of Buſineſs commonly attending the Deacon's Office, it was uſual to have ſeveral Deacons in the ſame Church. In ſome Churches they were very preciſe to the Number Seven, in imitation of the firſt Church of Jeruſalem. The Council of Neocæſarea [d] enacted it into a Canon, That there ought to be but Seven Deacons in any City, though it was never ſo great, becauſe this was according to the Rule ſuggeſted in the Acts of the Apoſtles. And the Church of Rome, both before and after this Council, ſeems to have looked upon that as a binding Rule alſo. For it is evident from the Epiſtles of Cornelius, [e] written in the Middle of the Third Century, that there were then but Seven Deacons in the Church of Rome, though there were Forty ſix Presbyters at the ſame time. And Prudentius intimates that it was ſo in the time of Sixtus alſo, An. 261. For ſpeaking of Laurentius the Deacon, he terms him [f] the Chief of thoſe ſeven Men, who had their Station near the Altar, meaning the Seven Deacons of the Church. Nay, in the Fourth and Fifth Centuries the Cuſtom there continued the ſame, as we learn both from Sozomen [g], and Hilarius Sardus [h] the Roman Deacon who wrote under the Name of St. Ambroſe. But Sozomen ſays, this Rule was not obſerved in other Churches, but the Number of Deacons was indifferent, as the Buſineſs of every Church required. And it is certain it was ſo at Alexandria and Conſtantinople. For though one of the Writers of the Life of St. Mark, cited [i] by Biſhop Pearſon, ſays St. Mark ordained but ſeven Deacons at Alexandria, yet in after-Ages there were more: For Alexander in one of his Circular Letters [k] names nine Deacons, whom he depoſed with Arius for their Heretical Opinions; and it is propable there were ſeveral others, who continued Orthodox: For in the Form of Arius his Condemnation, publiſhed [l] by Cotelerius, the Catholick Deacons of Alexandria and Mareotes are mentioned, as joining with their Biſhop in condemning him. And for the Church of Conſtantinople, the Number of Deacons was there ſo great, that in one of Juſtinian's Novels [m] we find them limited to an Hundred for the Service of the Great Church, and three others only. So that it is evident the Number of Deacons uſually increaſed with the Neceſſities of the Church, and the Church of Rome was ſingular in the contrary Practice.

SECT. XX. Of the Age at which Deacons might be ordained.

I ſpeak nothing here of the Qualifications required in Deacons, becauſe they were generally the ſame that were required in Biſhops and Presbyters, and will be ſpoken of hereafter: Only in their Age there was ſome Difference, which is here to be obſerved. Biſhops and Presbyters, as has been noted above, might not ordinarily be ordained before Thirty, but Deacons were allowed to be ordained at Twenty five, and not before. This is the Term fixed both by the Civil and Canon Law, as may be ſeen in Juſtinian's [n] Novels, the Councils [o] of Agde, Carthage, Trullo, and many others. And it was a Rule very nicely obſerved: For though we meet with ſome Biſhops that were ordained before this Age; yet thoſe (as I have ſhewed before) were never Deacons, but ordained immediately Biſhops from Laymen: But among thoſe that were ordained Deacons, we ſcarce meet with an Inſtance of any one that was ordained before the Age of Twenty five in all the Hiſtory of the Church.

SECT. XXI. Of the Reſpect which Deacons paid to Presbyters, and received from the Inferior Orders.

THE laſt thing which I ſhall obſerve of Deacons, is the great Deference and Reſpect they were obliged to pay to Presbyters, as well as to the Biſhop. It has been proved before, that the Presbyters had their Thrones in the Church, whereon they ſat together with their Biſhop: But the Deacons had no ſuch Privilege, but are always repreſented as ſtanding by them. So the Author [p] of the Conſtitutions, and Gregory [q] Nazianzen place them in this Order, viz. The Biſhop ſitting on the middle Throne, the Presbyters ſitting on each Hand of him, and the [z] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 44. Lib. 3. c. 19. [a] Clem. Ep. ad Jacob. c. 12. [b] Iſidor. Lib. 1. Ep. 29. [c] Conſt. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 30. [d] Conc. Neocæſar. c. 15. [e] Cornel. Ep. ad Fabi. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [f] Prudent. Hymn. de S. Laurent. Hic primus è ſeptem viris qui ſtant ad aram proximi. [g] Sozom. Lib. 7. c. 19. Διάκονοι παρὰ Ῥωμαίοις εἰσέτι νῦν ἑπτά πλείους εἰσὶν ἑπτά. [h] Ambroſ. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. p. 995. Nunc autem ſeptem Diaconos eſſe oportet, aliquantos Presbyteros, ut bini ſint per Eccleſias, & unus in Civitate Epiſcopus. [i] Vit. S. Marci ap. Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. Par. 2. c. 11. p. 329. B. Marcus Anizanum Alexandriæ ordinavit Epiſcopum, & tres Presbyteros, & ſeptem Diaconos. [k] Alex. Ep. Encycl. ap. Theodor. Lib. 1. c. 4. [l] Coteler. Not. in Conſt. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 28. [m] Juſtin. Novel. 3. c. 1. [n] Juſt. Novel. 123. c. 14. Presbyterum minorem triginta annorum fieri non permittimus. Sed neque Diaconum aut Subdiaconum viginti quinque. [o] Conc. Agathenſ. c. 16. Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 4. Conc. Trull. c. 14. Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 19. [p] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 57. [q] Greg. Naz. Somn. de Eccl. Anaſtaſ.

Dea-

Deacons ſtanding by. The Council of Nice expreſly [r] forbids Deacons to ſit among the Preſbyters in the Church. And it is evident from St. Jerom [s], and the Author under the Name of [t] St. Auſtin, that though the Roman Deacons were grown the moſt elated of any others, yet they did not preſume to ſit in the Church. Nay, ſome Canons go farther, and forbid [u] Deacons to ſit any where in the Preſence of a Presbyter, except by his Permiſſion.

The like Reſpect they were to pay to Presbyters in ſeveral other Inſtances, being obliged to miniſter to them, as well as to the Biſhop, in the Performance of all Divine Offices; none of which might be performed by a Deacon in the Preſence of a Presbyter, without ſome ſpecial Reaſon for it, as has been noted before. Nay, a Deacon was not allowed ſo much as to bleſs a common Feaſt, if a Presbyter was preſent at it: As we may ſee in St. Jerom's [x] Epiſtle to Evagrius, where he cenſures the Roman Deacons ſomewhat ſharply for preſuming to do ſo.

But then as the Canons oblig'd Deacons to pay this Reſpect to Presbyters; ſo to diſtinguiſh them from the Leſſer Clergy, all the Inferior Orders were required to pay the ſame Reſpect to them. The Council of Laodicea, in the ſame Canon that ſays, a Deacon ſhall not ſit in the Preſence of a Presbyter, without his Leave, adds immediately after, That in like manner the Deacon ſhall be honoured by the Sub-deacons, and all the other Clergy. And the Council of Agde [y] repeats the Canon in the ſame Words. I ſhall here alſo remind the Reader of what I have obſerved before, That Deacons in ſome Churches had Power to cenſure the Inferior Clergy in the abſence of the Presbyters. St. Jerom [z] ſeems alſo to ſay, that their Revenues were rather greater than thoſe of the Presbyters, which made them ſometimes troubleſome and aſſuming. Beſide all this, the Order of Deacons was of great Repute, becauſe the Archdeacon was always then one of this Order, and He was commonly a Man of great Intereſt and Authority in the Church; of whoſe Powers and Privileges, becauſe it is neceſſary to diſcourſe a little more particularly, I ſhall treat diſtinctly of them in the following Chapter.

CHAP. XXI.

Of ARCHDEACONS.

SECT. I. Archdeacons anciently of the ſame Order with Deacons.

THOUGH Archdeacons in theſe laſt Ages of the Church have uſually been of the Order of Presbyters, yet anciently they were no more than Deacons: which appears evidently from thoſe Writers, who give us the firſt Account of them. St. Jerom [a] ſays the Archdeacon was choſen out of the Deacons, and was the Princial Deacon in every Church, as the Archpresbyter was the Principal Presbyter; and that there was but one of each in every Church. Optatus calls Cæcilian [b] Archdeacon of Carthage, yet he was never more than a Deacon, till he was ordained Biſhop, as has been ſhewed before: And that made Cæcilian himſelf ſay, That if he was not rightly ordained Biſhop, as the Donatiſts pretended, he [c] was to be treated only as a Deacon. It is certain alſo St. Lawrence, Archdeacon of Rome, was no more than the Chief of the Deacons, or the Principal [d] Man of the Seven, who ſtood and waited at the Altar, as Prudentius words it. From theſe Teſtimonies it is very plain, that in thoſe Times the Archdeacon was always one of the Order of Deacons.

SECT. II. Elected by the Biſhop, and not made by Seniority.

BUT how the Archdeacon came by his Honour, and after what Manner he was inveſted with his Office, is a Matter of ſome Diſpute among Learned Men. Salmaſius [e] and ſome others are of Opinion, that originally He was no more than the Senior Deacon, though they own that in proceſs of Time the Office became Elective. Habertus [f] thinks it was always Elective, and that it was at the Biſhop's Liberty and Diſcretion to nominate which of the Deacons he thought fit to the Office. That it was ſo in the Caſe of Athanaſius, ſeems pretty evident from what Theodoret [g] ſays of him, That though he was very young, yet he was made Chief of the Order of Deacons. For [r] Con. Nic. c. 18. [s] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. In Eccleſia Romæ Presbyteri ſedent, & ſtant Diaconi. [t] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 101. Quanquam Romanæ Eccleſiæ Diaconi modice invericundiores videantur, ſedenti tamen dignitatem in eccleſia non præſumunt. [u] Concil Laodic. c. 20. Carthag. 4. c. 39. [x] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Licet increbreſcentibus vitiis, inter Presbyteros abſente Epiſcopo ſedere Diaconum viderim: Et in domeſticis Conviviis, Benedictiones Presbyteris dare, al. Benedictiones coram Presbyteris dare. [y] Conc. Agathenſ. c. 65. Non oportet Diaconum ſedere præſente Presbytero, ſed ex juſſione Presbyteri ſedeat. Similiter autem honorificetur Diaconus à Miniſtris inferioribus & omnibus Clericis.

[z] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Presbyter noverit ſe Lucris minorem, Sacerdotio eſſe majorem. Id. Com. in Ezek. c. 48. Ultra Sacerdotes, hoc eſt, Presbyteros intumeſcunt: & Dignitatem non merito ſed Divitiis æſtimant. [a] Hieron. Ep. 85. ad Evagr. Aut Diaconi eligant de ſe, quem induſtrium noverint, & Archidiaconum vocent. Id. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Singuli Eccleſiarum Epiſcopi, ſinguli Archipresbyteri, ſinguli Archidiaconi.
[b] Optat. Lib. 1. p. 40. Cum correptionem Archidiaconi Cæciliani ferre non poſſet, &c. [c] Optat. Ibid. p. 41. Iterum à Cæciliano mandatum eſt, ut ſi Felix in ſe, ſicut illi arbitrabantur, nihil contuliſſet, ipſi tanquam adhuc Diaconum ordinarent Cæcilianum. [d] Prudent. Hymn. de S. Steph. Hic Primus è ſeptem viris, qui ſtant ad aram proximi. [e] Salmaſ. de Primat. p. 8. Suicer. Theſaur. Eccl. T. 1. p. 531. [f] Habert. Pontifical. Obſ. 6. p. 206. [g] Theod. Lib. 1. c. 26. Νέῳ μὲν ὄν τὴν ἡλικίαν, τῷ χορῷ δὲ τῶν διακόνων ἡγεμόνι.

this implies, as Valeſius there obſerves, that he was choſen by the Biſhop, and preferred before his Seniors. St. Jerom in the forecited Paſſage as plainly aſſerts that the Office went not by Seniority, but Election: Only he ſeems to put the Power of Electing in the Deacons: But if they had any Hand in it, it muſt be underſtood to be under the Direction of the Biſhop, who is required by ſome Canons to chuſe his own Archdeacon, and ordinarily to give Preference to the Senior, if he was duly qualified: But if not, to make choice of any other, whom he thought moſt fit to diſcharge the Offices of the Church [b] and the Truſt that was repoſed in him.

SECT. III. Commonly Perſons of ſuch Intereſt in the Church, that they were choſen the Biſhop's Succeſſors.

THE Office of the Archdeacon was always a Place of great Honour and Reputation: For he was the Biſhop's conſtant Attendant and Aſſiſtant; and next to the Biſhop the Eyes of the whole Church were fixed upon him. By which means he commonly gained ſuch an Intereſt, as to get himſelf choſen the Biſhop's Succeſſor before the Presbyters. Of which it were eaſy to give ſeveral Inſtances, as Athanaſius, Cæcilian, and many others. And this, I preſume, was the Reaſon why St. Jerom ſays, That an Archdeacon thought himſelf [i] injured, if he was ordained a Presbyter: Probably becauſe he thereby loſt his Intereſt in the Church, and was diſappointed of his Preferment. We might certainly conclude it was thus in the Church of Rome, if what Eulogius a Greek Writer in Photius ſays, might be depended on as true: That it was a Law [k] at Rome to chuſe the Archdeacon the Biſhop's Succeſſor, and that therefore Cornelius ordained Novatian Presbyter, to deprive him of the Privilege and Hopes of ſucceeding. But I confeſs there is no ſmall Reaſon to queſtion the Truth of this Relation, both becauſe we read of no ſuch Law in any Writer of the Latin Church; and becauſe this Author palpably miſtakes, in ſaying, that Cornelius ordained Novatian Presbyter, who was Presbyter long before; and probably never was Archdeacon, nor Deacon, but ordained Presbyter immediately from a Layman, as may be collected from the Letters of Cyprian [l] and Cornelius [m] which tacitly reflect upon him for it. Yet if by Law Eulogius meant no more than a Cuſtom; perhaps it might be cuſtomary at Rome, as at ſome other Places, to make the Archdeacons the Biſhop's Succeſſors: Their Power and Privileges, as I obſerved, commonly gaining them a conſiderable Intereſt both among the Clergy and the People.

SECT. IV. The Offices of the Archdeacon. 1ſt, To attend the Biſhop at the Altar, &c.

As to the Archdeacon's Office, He was always the Biſhop's immediate Miniſter and Attendant: A latere Pontificis non receſſit, to uſe St. Jerom's Phraſe, He was always by his Side, ready to aſſiſt him. Particularly at the Altar, when the Biſhop miniſtred, he performed the uſual Offices of a Deacon, that have been mentioned in the laſt Chapter. The Author of the Conſtitutions calls him the Ὁ παρεστὼς τῷ Ἀρχιερεῖ, the Deacon that ſtood by the Biſhop, and proclaimed, when the Communion-Service began, Let no [n] one approach in Wrath againſt his Brother, Let no one come in Hypocriſy. To him it belonged to miniſter the Cup to the People, when the Biſhop celebrated the Euchariſt, and had adminiſtred the Bread before him, as we learn from the Account which St. Ambroſe [o] gives of Laurentius Archdeacon of Rome. It was his Buſineſs alſo, as the Biſhop's Subſtitute, to order all Things relating to the Inferior Clergy, and their Miniſtrations and Services in the Church: As what Deacon ſhould read the Goſpel, who ſhould bid the Prayers, which of them ſhould keep the Doors, which walk about the Church to obſerve the Behaviour of the People; which of the Readers, Acolythiſts, Subdeacons, ſhould perform their Service at ſuch a Time, or in what Poſt and Station: For theſe Things were not preciſely determined, but at the Biſhop's Liberty to ordain and appoint them; which he commonly did by his Archdeacon: Whoſe Orders and Directions therefore are ſometimes called Ordinationes, and Ordinatio [p] Eccleſiæ, in ſome of the ancient Councils. Whence I preſume came the Name, Ordinary, which is a Title given to Archdeacons in after-Ages.

SECT. V. 2. To aſſiſt him in managing the Church's Revenues.

2. HE aſſiſted the Biſhop in managing and diſpenſing the Church's Revenues, having the chief Care of the Poor, Orphans, Widows, &c. under the Biſhop, whoſe Portions were aſſigned by him, and ſent by the Hands of the other Deacons that were under him. The Fourth Council [q] of Carthage makes mention of this part of his Office, when it requires the Biſhop not to concern himſelf Perſonally in the Care and Government of the Widows, Orphans, Strangers, but to commit this to his Archpresbyter or Archdeacon. Upon this Account Prudentius deſcribing [r] the Offices of St. Laurence, whom he makes to be Archdeacon of Rome, among other Things aſſigns him the Keys of the Church's Treaſure, [b] Conc. Agathenſ. c. 23. Si Officium Archidiaconatus, propter ſimpliciorem Naturam implere aut expedire nequiverit, ille loci ſui nomen teneat, & ordinationi Eccleſiæ, quem Epiſcopus elegerit, præponatur. [i] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. c. 48. Certe qui primus fuerit Miniſtrorum, quia per ſingula concionatur in Populos, & à Pontificis Latere non recedit, injuriam putat, ſi Presbyter ordinetur. [k] Eulog. ap. Phot. Cod. 182. Τὸν ἀρχιδιάκονον ἐνενόμιζο διάδοχον τῶ ἀρχιερατεύον]ω- καθίσασ. [l] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 103. [m] Cornel. Ep. ad Fabian. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [n] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 57. [o] Ambroſ. de Offic. Lib. 1. c. 41. [p] Vid. Concil. Agathenſ. c. 23. Iſidor. Hiſpal. Ep. ad Ludifred. ap. Gratian. Diſt. 25. c. 1. [q] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 17. Ut Epiſcopus gubernationem Viduarum, Pupillorum ac Peregrinorum, non per ſeipſum, ſed per Archipresbyterum, aut per Archidiaconum agat. [r] Prudent. Hymn. de S. Laur. Levita ſublimis gradu, & cæteris præſtantior, Clauſtris ſacrorum præerat, Cœleſtis arcanum Domus fidis gubernans clavibus, votaſque diſpenſans Opes.

and the Care of dispensing the Oblations of the People. And for the same Reason both he and St. Ambrose, [s] and all other Writers of his Passion, bring in the Heathen Persecutor demanding of him those Treasures, which he had in his keeping: Which he promising to do, in a short time after brought before him the Poor, the Lame, the Blind, the Infirm, telling him, those were the Riches which he had in his Custody; for on them he had expended the Church's Treasure. St. Austin says this was his Office, as he was Archdeacon of the Church. Paulinus [t] therefore calls the Archdeacon, Arcæ Custodem, the Keeper of the Chest: Because though the other Deacons were the Dispensers and Conveyers, yet he was the chief Manager and Director of them, and from him they took their Orders, as from the Guardian of the Church's Treasure. It was upon this Account that the Donatists charged Cæcilian among other things, that he had prohibited the Deacons from carrying any Provision [u] to the Martyrs in Prison. Which Objection must be grounded upon this, that he was obliged by his Office, as he was Archdeacon, to see that the Martyrs were provided of Sustenance; which they pretended he had not only neglected, but abused his Authority, in forbidding those that were under his Command, to minister unto them.

SECT. VI. 3. In Preaching.

3. ANOTHER part of his Office was to assist the Bishop in Preaching. For as any Deacon was authorized to preach by the Bishop's Leave, so the Archdeacon being the most eminent of the Deacons, was more frequently pitched upon to discharge this Office, if we may so understand those words of St. Jerom, which have been cited before in the 3d Section, Primus Ministrorum per singula concionatur in populos. The chief Minister or Archdeacon, is many Times, and in many Places employed in Preaching to the People. For the word, Singula, may relate both to Times and Places. But if any one thinks, that Concionari here signifies no more than Prædicare, and κηρύσσειν, doing the Office of an Holy Cryer in the Assembly, I shall not contend about it; but only say, that St. Jerom speaking of something that then made the Archdeacons popular, seems rather to mean the Office of Preaching, than any other.

SECT. VII. 4. In ordaining the Inferior Clergy.

4. THE Archdeacon usually bore a Part with the Bishop in the Ordinations of the Inferior Clergy, Subdeacons, Acolythists, &c. His Office in this matter is particularly described in several Canons [w] of the 4th Council of Carthage, which relate the manner how the Inferior Clergy were to be ordained; viz. not by Imposition of Hands, which belonged only to the Superior Orders, but by receiving some Vessels or Utensils of the Church partly from the Hands of the Bishop, and partly from the Hands of the Archdeacon. As to give only one Instance in the Ordination of an Acolythist, the Canon says, The Bishop was to inform him what his Duty was, and then the Archdeacon was to give him a Taper into his Hand, that he might know that he was appointed to light the Candles of the Church.

SECT. VIII. 5. The Archdeacon had Power to censure Deacons and the inferior Clergy, but not Presbyters.

5. THE Archdeacon was invested also with a Power of Censuring the other Deacons, and all the Inferior Clergy of the Church. That it was so, at least in some Churches, is very evident from a Passage in the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon, where Ibas Bishop of Edessa speaking of Maras one of the Deacons of his Church, says, he was not Excommunicated by himself, but by his Archdeacon, who [x] for a Crime committed against a Presbyter, suspended him from the Communion.

But whether the Archdeacon had any Power over Presbyters, is a matter of dispute among Learned Men. Salmasius [y], and the Learned Suicerus [z] after him, scruple not to assert, that even the Archpresbyter himself in the Roman Church was subject to him. Cujacius and some others, who are cited by [a] Baluzius, go one step farther, and say it was so in all Churches. Yet there is not the least Footstep of any such Power to be met with in any ancient Writer or Council: But the Original of all the Mistake is owing to a Corruption in Gratian's Decree, and Gregory the Ninth's Decretals, who cite the Words alledged [b] in the Margin, the one as from Isidore of Sevil, and the other from the Council of Toledo, pretending that the Archpresbyter is to be subject to the Archdeacon: When yet, as both Baluzius and the Roman Correctors confess, there are no such Words to be found in Isidore's Epistle; nor will Garsias Loaisa own them to be the Genuine Decree of any Council of Toledo. So that the whole credit of this Matter rests upon Gratian and the Compilers of the Decretals, whose Authority is of little Esteem in things relating to Antiquity, when there is no better Proof than their bare Assertion. Yet I shall not deny, but that in Gratian's Time it might be as he represents it: For probably by this time the Archdeacons were chosen out of the Order of Presbyters: Though when

[s] Ambros. de Offic. L. 2. c. 28. Aug. Serm. 111. de Diversis. Sanctus Laurentius Archidiaconus fuit: Opes Ecclesiæ ab illo Persecutore quærebantur. Id. de Diverf. Serm. 123. [t] Paulin. de Mirac. S. Martin. Lib. 4. Bibl. Patr. T. 8. p. 865.

Protinus adstanti Diacono, quem more priorum Antistes Sanctæ Custodem legerat Arcæ, Imperat, &c.

[u] Aug. Brevic. Collat. 3. c. 14. [w] Concil. Carth. 4. c. 5, 6, 9. [x] Con. Chalced. Act. 10. p. 653. Ἀκουσάντων δὲ τῶν ἰδίων Ἀρχιδιακόνων. &c. [y] Salmas. de Primat. c. 1. p. 9. [z] Suicer. Thesaur. T. 1. p. 533. [a] Baluz. Not. ad Gratian. Dist. 25. c. 1. p. 455. [b] Grat. Dist. 25. c. 1. ex Epist. Isidor. Hispal. ad Ludifred. Archipresbyter vero se esse sub Archidiacono, ejusque præceptis sicut Episcopi sui, Sciat obedire. In Gregory's Decretal, Lib. 1. Tit. 24. de Officio Archipresb. c. 1. the same Words are cited ex Concilio Toletano.

first

first they began to be so, is not very easy to determine. Only we are certain that some Centuries before the time of Gratian the Custom was altered. For Archdeacons in the 9th Century, were some of them at least of the Order of Presbyters; as appears from Hincmar's Capitula [c] directed to Guntharius and Odelhardus, two of his Archdeacons, whom he stiles, Presbyter-Archdeacons. And there is reason enough to think it was so in the time of Gratian; The Archdeacons were then generally of the Order of Presbyters, as they have been ever since: Which makes it no wonder that in Gratian's time they should have Power over the Archipresbyteri, which in the Language of that Age often signifies no more than Rural Deans, over which the Archdeacons have usually Power at this Day. But by this the Reader may judge how little such Writers are to be depended on, who take their Estimate of former Ages from the Practice of their own, and reckon every thing ancient, that is agreeable to the Rules and Customs of the Times they live in.

SECT. IX.
Of the Name ἀπαντίτης, Circumlustrator; and whether Archdeacons had any Power over the whole Diocese.

BUT to return to the Archdeacons of the Primitive Church: There is one thing more may admit of some Dispute, Whether the Archdeacon's Power anciently extended over the whole Diocese, or was confined to the City or Mother-Church. In the middle Ages of the Church, there is no question but they had Power over the whole Diocese. For Isidorus Hispalensis, who lived in the beginning of the 7th Century, in the Account which he gives of the Archdeacon's Office, says, The Parochial Clergy were under his Care, that is, the Deacons and Inferior Clergy; and that it belonged to him [d] to order Matters, and end Controversies among them; to give the Bishop an Account what Churches stood in need of Repairing; to make enquiry by the Bishop's Order into the State of every Parish, and to see what Condition the Ornaments and Goods of the Church were in, and whether the Ecclesiastical Liberties were maintained. Habertus thinks [e], the Archdeacons were invested with the same Power some Ages before; and for Proof cites a Passage out of the Council of Chalcedon, where in an Instrument [f] presented by the Presbyters of Edessa against Ibas their Bishop, one Abramius a Deacon of that Church, in all the Latin Translations is called Diaconus Apantita, which Habertus takes to be a general Inspector of the Church. But there are two evident Reasons against this, which it is a wonder so observing a Person as Habertus should not see: 1. That Abramius was not an Archdeacon, but only a private Deacon of the Church: For in the same place there is mention made of another Archdeacon, who when Ibas was about to have had Abramius ordained Bishop of Batena, interposed and hindered him from doing it, because he had been censured for the Practice of Magick, and never given any Satisfaction to the Church. And though it is said, that Ibas took occasion to remove that Archdeacon from his Office, yet it is not once intimated that he put Abramius in his room; which if he had done, it would doubtless have been made another Article of Accusation against him before the Council. 2. The Original Greek in Labbe's Edition is not διάκονον ἀπαντιτὴν, as Habertus reads it, but only διάκονον ἀπ αὐτῆς τ ἡμετέρης ἐκκλησίας, a Deacon of that our Church of Edessa: And though ἀπαντιτὴν be put into the Margin, yet it is not owned to be any various Reading, but only the Editor's Conjecture, which I think is not sufficient to build such an Assertion upon, when no other Proof or Authority is pretended. Therefore I determine nothing concerning this Power of the Archdeacons in ancient Times, but leave it to farther Enquiry, and the Determination of every Judicious Reader.

SECT. X.
Of the Name Cor-Episcopi, why given to Archdeacons,

Valesius takes notice of another Name, which he thinks was sometimes given to the Archdeacons, that is, the Name Cor-Episcopi; for which he cites the Words of one Joannes Abbas [g], in a Book written about the Translation of the Relicks of St. Goldesindis. This at first may look like a Corruption only of the Name Chorepiscopus, because in latter Ages the Power of the ancient Chorepiscopi dwindled into that of the Archdeacons: But when it is considered, that all the Deacons anciently were called the Bishops Eyes, and his Ears, his Mouth, and his Heart, as has been noted in the last Chapter, § 18, it will appear very probable that the Archdeacon should be peculiarly dignified with those Titles; and therefore be called Cor-Episcopi, the Bishop's Heart, because he was used to signify his Mind and Will to the People: As he is called Oculus Episcopi, not only in ancient Authors [h], but in the Decretals [i], and the Council of Trent [k], because he was the Bishop's Eye to inspect the Diocese under him.

SECT. XI.
The Opinions of Learned Men concerning the first Original of the Name and Office of Archdeacon.

SOME may perhaps be desirous to know farther the first Rise and Original of the Name and Office of Archdeacons in the Church: But this is a Matter involved in so great Obscurity, that it cannot easily be determined. Haber-

[c] Hincmar. Capitula Archidiaconibus Presbyteris data. Concil. Tom. 8. p. 591. [d] Isidor. Ep. ad Ludifred. & ap. Gratian. Dist. 25. c. 1. Sollicitudo quoque Parochitanorum (al. Parochiarum) & ordinatio, & jurgia ad ejus pertinent curam: Pro reparandis Diœcesanis Basilicis ipse suggerit Sacerdoti: Ipse inquirit Parochias cum jussione Episcopi, & Ornamenta, vel res Basilicarum Parochitanorum (al. Parochiarum) & Libertatum Ecclesiasticarum Episcopo idem refert. [e] Habert. in Pontifical. Par. 9. Obser. 6. [f] Concil. Chalced. Act. 10. p. 650. [g] Joh. Abbas ap. Vales. Not. in Theodorit. lib. 1. c. 26. Ad hoc inspiciendum sacrorum Ministros cum Archidiacono majore, quem Cor-Episcopi dicunt, Pontifex direxit. [h] Isidor. Pelus. lib. 1. Ep. 29. [i] Decretal. lib. 1. Tit. 23. c. 7. [k] Con. Trid. Sess. 24. Cap. 12. de Reform.

tus

tus and ſome others [l] of the Roman Communion reckon this Office as ancient as that of Deacons themſelves, deriving both from Apoſtolical Conſtitution, and making Stephen the firſt Archdeacon of the Church But others with greater Reaſon [m], deduce it only from the 3d Century, and leave it as a Matter under Debate and Enquiry, whether there were any ſuch thing as the Archdeacon's Office in the time of Cornelius Biſhop of Rome, which was in the middle of the 3d Century. This is certain, that Cornelius in his Epiſtle to Fabius, where he gives a Catalogue [n] of the Roman Clergy, though he ſpeaks of Deacons and Subdeacons, Acolythiſts, Exorciſts, Readers, and Door-keepers, makes no particular mention of the Archdeacon; Nor does Cyprian ever ſo much as once uſe the Name: Yet before the end of this Century Cæcilian is ſuppoſed to have had the Title, as well as the Office of Archdeacon of Carthage, becauſe Optatus calls him ſo, and the Name often occurs in St. Jerom and other Writers of the 4th Age, in which St. Jerom lived: Baronius indeed urges St. Auſtin's Authority, to prove that Stephen was properly an Archdeacon: For he ſays St. Auſtin calls him Primicerius Diaconorum; but he that will look into St. Auſtin, will quickly find his Miſtake: For his Words are not Primicerius Diaconorum, but Primicerius [o] Martyrum, the Protomartyr, as we commonly call him, becauſe he was the firſt that ſuffered for the Name of Chriſt. And hence the Reader may obſerve by the way, that the Words Primicerius and Primus do not always denote Principality, or Priority of Power and Juriſdiction, but only Priority of Time, or Precedency of Honour and Dignity, in reſpect of Place or outward Order. In which Senſe the ſame St. Auſtin [p] ſays in another place, that Stephen is named firſt among the Deacons, as Peter was among the Apoſtles. Which is a Primacy that may be allowed to them both, without any Pretence of Juriſdiction. Habertus urges farther the Authority of the Greek Menologion, which gives Stephen the Title of Archdeacon: But ſuch Books are not ſufficient Evidence, being they are of a modern Date, and ſpeak of ancient Things in the Language and Phraſe of their own Times; for which Reaſon they are not much to be depended on, except when they are backed with the concurrent Teſtimony of ſome ancient Authors, of which there are none in this Caſe to yield any Collateral Evidence to this Aſſertion. Yet on the other hand the Opinion of Salmaſius is equally to be diſcarded, who [q] aſſerts that the Office of Archdeacon was not in the Church in the time of St. Jerom, though St. Jerom [r] himſelf ſays in moſt expreſs Words, that the Cuſtom then was to have one Biſhop, one Archpresbyter, one Archdeacon in every Church. But this is the uſual way of that Author in his Book de Primatu, to advance Paradoxes of his own Fancy for ancient Hiſtory, and lay down poſitive Aſſertions upon the moſt ſlender Conjectures, yea, many times againſt the plaineſt Evidence of Primitive Records, as in the Caſe before us, and many others which I have had occaſion to take notice of in this Diſcourſe. It were to be wiſhed, that that Author, who wrote upon an uſeful Deſign, had been a little more accurate in his Accounts of the State of the Clergy of the Primitive Church; and whilſt he was demoliſhing the Pope's Supremacy, had not confuſedly treated of ſome other Orders and Offices, which were of greater Antiquity in the Church.

CHAP. XXII.

Of DEACONESSES.

SECT. I.
The ancient Name of Deaconeſſes Διάκονοι, Πρεσβυτίδες, Viduæ, Miniſtræ.

HAVING ſpoken of Deacons and Archdeacons, it remains that I ſay ſomething in this Place of Deaconeſſes, becauſe their Office and Service was of great uſe in the Primitive Church. There is ſome mention made of them in Scripture, by which it appears that their Office was as ancient as the Apoſtolical Age. St. Paul calls Phœbe a Servant of the Church of Cenchrea, Rom. 16. 1. The Original Word is Διάκονον, a Deaconeſs, anſwerable to the Latin word Miniſtra, which is the Name that is given them in Pliny's Epiſtle [s] which ſpeaks about the Chriſtians. Tertullian [t] and ſome others call them Viduæ, Widows, and their Office Viduatus, becauſe they were commonly choſen out of the Widows of the Church. For the ſame reaſon Epiphanius [u] and the Council of Laodicea [w] call them Πρεσβυτιδας, elderly Widows, becauſe none but ſuch were ordinarily taken into this Office.

[l] Habert. Not. in Pontifical. p. 207. Baron. an. 34. n. 285. [m] Bp. Fell Not. in Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 49. ad Cornel. [n] Cornel. Ep. ad Fab. ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. [o] Aug. Ser. 1. de Sanctis. Tom. 10. Hodie celebramus Natalem, quod Primicerius Martyrum migravit ex mundo. [p] Aug. Ser. 94. de Diverſis. Inter Diaconos illos nominatus Primus, ſicut inter Apoſtolos Petrus. [q] Salmaſ. de Primat. c. 1. p. 8. [r] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. cited before, § 1. [s] Plin. lib. 10. Ep. 97. Quò magis neceſſarium credidi, ex duabus Ancillis, quæ Miniſtræ dicebantur, quid eſſet veri & per tormenta quærere. [t] Tertul. lib. 1. ad Uxor. c. 7. Id. de Veland. Virg. c. 9. Epiph. Hær. 79. n. 4. Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 13. [u] Epiphan. Hær. 79. Collyrid. n. 4. [w] Con. Laodic. c. 11.

FOR

SECT. II. Deaconeſſes to be Widows by ſome Laws.

FOR indeed by ſome ancient Laws theſe four Qualifications were required in every one, that was to be taken into this Order. 1ſt, That ſhe ſhould be a Widow. 2. That ſhe ſhould be a Widow that had born Children. 3. A Widow that was but once Married. 4. One of a conſiderable Age, Forty, Fifty, or Sixty Years Old. Though all theſe Rules admitted of Exceptions. In Tertullian's time the Deaconeſſes were ſo commonly choſen out of the Widows, that when a certain young Virgin was made a Deaconeſs, he ſpeaks of it [x] as a Miracle or Monſtrous thing in the Church. Yet ſome Learned Men are of Opinion, that Virgins were ſometimes made Deaconeſſes even in the time of Ignatius: Becauſe Ignatius in his Epſtile to the Church of Smyrna [y], ſalutes the Virgins that were called Widows, that is, Deaconeſſes, as Cotelerius and Voſſius truly expound it. For Virgins could not be called Widows congruouſly in any other Senſe. Some ſuſpect that the Word Virgins is a Corruption crept into the Text: But there is no reaſon for this Conjecture, for Ignatius is not the only Author that ſpeaks of Virgin-Deaconeſſes. Epiphanius [z] ſays, in his time they were ſome Virgins, and ſome Widows that had been once Married. The Author of the Conſtitutions [a] ſays the ſame, that the Deaconeſs was either to be a chaſt Virgin, or a Widow that had been the Wife of one Man. And one of Juſtinian's Novels [b] enacted it into a Law, that the Deaconeſſes ſhould be choſen out of one of theſe Orders. Accordingly we find in the Practice of the Church, Virgins as well as Widows admitted to this Office. Gregory Nyſſen [c] ſays his own Siſter Macrina, who was a Virgin, was a Deaconeſs, and ſo was Lampadia another Virgin. And Sozomen [d] relates, how that Chryſoſtom would have ordained Nicarete a famous Virgin to this Office, but ſhe refuſed it for the love ſhe had to a Private and Philoſophick Life.

SECT. III. And ſuch Widows as had Children.

YET by ſome Laws they were required not only to be Widows, but ſuch Widows as had Children alſo. Tertullian [e] ſeems to intimate that this was the Cuſtom of the Age he lived in, to put none into this Office but ſuch as were Mothers, and had had the Education of Children, in the Training up of whom they had learnt to be Tender and Compaſſionate in their Affections, and ſo were qualified to aſſiſt others both by their Counſel and Comfort. Sozomen alſo mentions a Law [f] made by Theodoſius to this purpoſe, That no Women ſhould be admitted to the Office, except they had Children, and were above Sixty Years old, according to the expreſs Rule of St. Paul. The Law is ſtill extant in the Theodoſian Code [g], in the ſame Words as Sozomen cites it: But he ſpeaks of it as a new Law that was then made upon a particular Occaſion, by reaſon of ſome Scandal that had happened in the Church: Which is a plain Intimation that from the time of Tertullian, to the making of this Law, the Church had varied in her Practice.

SECT. IV. Not to be ordained under Sixty Years of Age, by the moſt ancient Canons.

AND ſo ſhe had likewiſe with reſpect to the Age of Deaconeſſes. For though the foremention'd Law of Theodoſius require them to be Sixty Years of Age Compleat; and Tertullian [h] and St. Baſil [i] ſpeak of the ſame Age; yet Juſtinian in one of his Novels [k] requires but Fifty, and in another [l] but Forty, which is all that was inſiſted on before by the great [m] Council of Chalcedon, whoſe Words are, No Woman ſhall be ordained a Deaconeſs before ſhe is Forty Years old. And it is probable in ſome Caſes that Term was not ſtrictly required: For Sozomen [n] ſays, Nectarius Biſhop of Conſtantinople ordained Olympias a Deaconeſs, though ſhe was but a young Widow, becauſe ſhe was a Perſon of extraordinary Virtue. By which we may judge, that as the Church varied in her Rule about this Matter, ſo Biſhops took a Liberty to ordain Deaconeſſes at what Age they thought fit, provided they could be aſſured of their Probity and Virtue.

SECT. V. To be ſuch as had been only the Wives of one Man.

BUT there was another Qualification, which they were more ſtrict in exacting, which was that the Deaconeſſes ſhould be ſuch Widows as had been only the Wives of one Man, according to the Apoſtle's Preſcription, 1 Tim. 5. 9. Which Rule they generally under-[x] Tertul. de Veland. Virgin. c. 9. Scio alicubi Virginem in Viduatu ab annis nondum viginti collocatam. Cui ſi quid refrigerii debuerat Epiſcopus, aliter utique ſalvo reſpectu Diſciplinæ, præſtare potuiſſet, ne tale nunc Miraculum, ne dixerim monſtrum, in Eccleſia denotaretur. [y] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 13. Ἀσπάζομαι τὰς παρθένας τὰς λεγομένας χήρας. Coteler. in Loc. Viduæ vocabantur, quia in Gradu Viduali ſeu Diaconico erant conſtitutæ. [z] Epiph. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. ἢ χηρεύσασαι κατὰ μονογαμίαν, ἢ ἀπαρθένοι ἔσαι. [a] Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 6 c. 17. [b] Juſt. Novel. 6. c. 6. Aut Virgines conſtitutas, aut unius viri quæ fuerant Uxores. [c] Nyſſen. Vit. Macrin. Tom. 2. p. 181, & 197. [d] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 23. [e] Tertul. de Vel. Virg. c. 9. Ad quam Sedem præter annos Sexaginta non tantum Univiræ, id eſt nuptæ, aliquando eliguntur, ſed & Matres & quidem Educatrices filiorum: Scilicet ut experimentis omnium affectuum ſtructæ, facile norint cæteras & conſilio & ſolatio juvare. [f] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 16. Εἰ μὴ παῖδας ἔχοιεν, &c. [g] Cod. Theod. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſ. & Cler. Leg. 27. Nulla niſi emenſis Sexaginta annis, cui votiva domi Proles ſit, ſecundum præceptum Apoſtoli ad Diaconiſſarum conſortium transferatur. [h] Tertul. ibid. [i] Baſil. Ep. Canonic. c. 24. [k] Juſt. Novel. 6. c. 6. Super mediam conſtitutas ætatem, & circa Quinquaginta annos. [l] Novel. 123. c. 13. Diaconiſſa in ſancta Eccleſia non ordinatur, quæ minor Quadraginta annis ſit. [m] Con. Chalced. c. 14. al. 15. Διάκονον μὴ χειροτονεῖσθαι γυναῖκα πρὸ ἐτῶν τεσσαράκοντα. Vid. Concil. Trullan. c. 14. & 40. [n] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 9. Καὶ περ νέαν χήραν γενομένην—διάκονον ἐχειροτόνησε.

ſtood as a Prohibition of electing any to be Deaconeſſes, who had been twice Married, though lawfully and ſucceſſively to two Husbands, one after another. In this Senſe Tertullian [o] ſays the Apoſtle requires them to be Univiræ, the Wives of one Man; which Epiphanius [p] calls χηρεύσασαι ἀπὸ μονογαμίας, Widows that have been once Married. So the Author of the Conſtitutions, and Juſtinian's Novels [q], which have been cited before.

But Theodoret gives a different Senſe of the Apoſtle's Words: For he ſuppoſes the Apoſtle not to forbid the chuſing of Widows that had been twice Married, but only ſuch [r] as had Married again after they had divorced themſelves from a former Husband; which was ſuch a ſcandalous Act, as juſtly excluded them from the Church's Service. And this Senſe is embraced as the moſt probable and rational, by the Learned Juſtellus [s], Dr. Hammond [t], Suicerus [u], and ſeveral others, of which I ſhall have occaſion to give a farther Account, when I come to ſpeak of that Apoſtolical Rule as it concerned all the Clergy. Thus much will ſuffice to be ſpoken at preſent concerning the Qualifications of Deaconeſſes before they were ordained.

SECT. VI. Whether Deaconeſſes were anciently ordained by Impoſition of Hands.

THE next Enquiry is concerning their Ordination itſelf, Whether it was always performed by Impoſition of Hands? And here Learned Men are very much divided in their Sentiments. Baronius [w] thinks they had no Impoſition of Hands at the time of the Council of Nice, and he grounds his Aſſertion upon one of the Canons of that Council, which, as he expounds it, denies that Deaconeſſes were ordained by Impoſition of Hands, and therefore makes no other account of them than as mere Lay-Perſons. Valeſius [x] gives the ſame Expoſition of the Canon; though he owns that Balſamon and Zonaras, the ancient Expoſitors, were of a contrary Judgment, viz. That the Canon ſpeaks not of the Deaconeſſes of the Church, but of ſuch as returned to the Catholick Church from the Paulianiſts or Samoſatenian Hereticks, among whom they had received no Impoſition of Hands, and therefore were to be treated as mere Laicks. And in this Senſe Suicerus [y], and Albaſpiny [z], Chriſtianus Lupus, Fabrotus, and other modern Criticks and Expoſitors of the Canon explain it alſo. To make the Reader himſelf judge in the Matter, I muſt here recite the Words of the Canon, which are theſe: Concerning the Paulianiſts which return to the Catholick Church, it is decreed, that they ſhall be by all means Re-baptized. And if any of them were heretofore reckoned among the Clergy, if they appear to be blameleſs, and without Rebuke, let them be firſt Baptized, and then ordained by the Biſhop of the Catholick Church: But if upon Examination they be found unfit, let them be depoſed. The ſame Rule ſhall be obſerved concerning Deaconeſſes, and all others who are reckoned among their Clergy. And we particularly take notice [a] of Deaconeſſes, which appear in that Habit or Dignity, that having never had any Impoſition of Hands, they are to reckoned only among the Laity. Theſe laſt Words about Deaconeſſes ſeem to refer to what goes before; and then they muſt be interpreted of Deaconeſſes among the Paulianiſts, who took upon them the Habit of Deaconeſſes without any Conſecration. Or if we underſtand them as ſpoken of Deaconeſſes already in the Church, they may mean that there were ſome Deaconeſſes which had crept into the Office without Impoſition of Hands; and ſuch the Council accounts no more than Lay Perſons. That which will incline a Man to interpret this Canon to ſome ſuch Senſe as this, is, That all other Councils and Writers ſpeak of ordaining Deaconeſſes by Impoſition of Hands. Valeſius himſelf owns that it was ſo in the time of the Council of Chalcedon; for in one of the Canons of that Council [b] their Ordination is expreſly called both χειροτονία and χειροθεσία, Ordination by Impoſition of Hands. And the Author of the Conſtitutions [c] ſpeaking of their Ordination, requires the Biſhop to uſe Impoſition of Hands, with a Form of Prayer, which is there recited. And thus it was both in the Greek and Latin Church, ſo long as the Order it ſelf continued to be in uſe. The Council of Trullo, An. 692, ſpeaks of their Ordination in two Canons [d] under the Name of χειροτονία. And Sozomen [e] uſes the ſame Word in ſpeaking of the Ordination of Olympias. And though there be not ſo many Examples of this Practice to be met with in the Latin Church, becauſe the Order was there much ſooner laid aſide: Yet Cotelerius [f] has furniſhed us with ſome out of Fortunatus and the Council of Worms, both which expreſly ſay, the Ordination of Deaconeſſes was performed by Impoſition of Hands. In the Council of Worms the 15th Canon of the Council of Chalcedon is repeated. And Fortunatus his words are, Manu ſuperpoſita [g] conſecravit Dia-

[o] Tertul. ad Uxor. lib. 4. c. 7. Viduam allegi in Ordinationem niſi Univiram non concedit. It. de Virg. veland. c. 9.
[p] Epiph. Exp. Fid. n. 21. [q] Juſtin. Novel. 6. c. 6. Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 6. c. 17. [r] Theod. Com. in 1 Tim. 5. 9.
[s] Juſtel. Not. ad Can. 1. Concil. Laodic. [t] Ham. Annot. on 1 Tim. 3. 2. [u] Suicer. Theſaur. Tom. 1. p. 899.
[w] Baron. an. 34. n. 23. It. Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 56. p. 342.
[x] Valeſ. Not. in Sozomen. lib. 8. c. 9. [y] Suicer. Theſaur. Tom. 1. p. 867. [z] Albaſp. Not. in Can. 19. Concil. Nicen. Lupus Tom. 1. Schol. in eund. Can. Fabrot. Not. ad Balſamon. Collect. Conſtitut. p. 1417. [a] Con. Nic. c. 10. Ἐμνήσθημεν ὧν τὸ διακονιῶν τὸ ἐν τῷ σχήματι ἱσταμένων, ἐπεὶ μηδὲ χειροθεσίαν τινὰ ἔσχηκεν, ὥστε καὶ ἐν τοῖς λαικοῖς αὐτὰς ἱστάζεσθαι. [b] Con. Chalced. c. 15.
[c] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 19. ὦ ἐπίσκοπε, ἐπιθήσεις αὐτῇ τὰς χεῖρας, &c. [d] Con. Trull. c. 14. & 40. [e] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 9. [f] Coteler. Not. in Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 19. Con. Wormatienſ. c. 73. ex Concil. Chalced. c. 15. [g] Fortun. Vit. Radegundis ap. Surium. Aug.

conam,

conam, ſpeaking of one of whom Medardus the Biſhop conſecrated a Deaconeſs, by laying his Hands upon her. All which ſhews, that it was the conſtant Practice of the Church to ordain Deaconeſſes by Impoſition of Hands: And that makes it very probable, that the Nicene Canon is to be underſtood in that Senſe, which is moſt agreeable to the Church's Practice.

But the Learned Juſtellus [b] ſtill raiſes another Scruple about their Ordination: He thinks this Impoſition of Hands was not properly an Ordination, but only a Benediction: For he diſtinguiſhes betwixt thoſe two things, and ſays, every ſolemn Impoſition of Hands is not an Ordination; which is very true; for then the Impoſition of Hands upon the Catechumens, or upon the Baptized in Confirmation, or upon the Penitents in order to reconcile them, or upon the Sick in order to their Cure, or upon any Perſons whatſoever to give them a common Benediction, would be an Ordination: But then that Learned Perſon ſeems not to have conſidered, that the Impoſition of Hands upon the Deaconeſſes was ſomething more than all theſe: For it was a Conſecration of them to a certain Office in the Church, which ſort of Impoſition of Hands joined with a Prayer of Benediction for Grace to diſcharge that Office aright, is what the Church has always meant and called particularly by the Name of Ordination.

SECT. VII. Not conſecrated to any Office of the Prieſthood.

YET we are not to imagine, that this Conſecration gave them any Power to execute any part of the Sacerdotal Office, or do the Duties of the ſacred Function. Women were always forbidden to perform any ſuch Offices as thoſe. Therefore the Author of the Conſtitutions calls it a Heatheniſh Practice to ordain Women-Prieſts, ἱερείας χειροτονεῖν: For the Chriſtian [i] Law allowed no ſuch Cuſtom. Some Hereticks indeed, as [k] Tertullian obſerves, allowed Women to Teach, and Exorciſe, and adminiſter Baptiſm; but all this, he ſays, was againſt the Rule [l] of the Apoſtle. Epiphanius brings the Charge particularly againſt the Pepuzians, which were a Branch of the Montaniſts, that they [m] made Women-Biſhops and Women-Presbyters, abuſing that Paſſage of the Apoſtle, In Chriſt Jeſus there is neither Male nor Female, to put ſome Colour upon their Practice. He charges it alſo upon the Collyridians [n], that they did ἱερουργεῖν διὰ γυναικῶν, uſe Women to Sacrifice to the Virgin Mary. Where it is obſerved that the Charge is double, 1. That they gave Divine Worſhip to the Holy Virgin, and 2. That they uſed Women-Prieſts in their Service. Againſt theſe he has a particular Diſſertation, wherein he ſhews at large that no Woman from the Foundation of the World was ever ordained to offer Sacrifice, or perform any ſolemn Service [o] of the Church: Which if it had been allowed to any, would certainly have been granted to the Virgin Mary herſelf, who was ſo highly favoured of God. But neither ſhe nor any other Woman had ever the Prieſt's Office committed to them. There is indeed, ſays he, an Order of Deaconeſſes in the Church, but their buſineſs [p] is not to Sacrifice, or perform any part of the Sacerdotal Office, or any of the ſacred Myſteries, but to be a decent Help to the Female Sex in the time of their Baptiſm, Sickneſs, Affliction, or the like: And therefore he denies, that the Church made them either Presbytereſſes or Prieſteſſes, ἢ πρεσβυτερίδας, ἢ ἱερίσσας. Where the Reader is to obſerve, that Epiphanius put a Diſtinction betwixt the Names πρεσβύτιδας and πρεσβυτερίδας, becauſe the former only denotes Elderly Women, ſuch as the Deaconeſſes commonly were; but the latter he uſes to ſignify Perſons ordained to the Office of Presbyters or Prieſts, which he abſolutely denies any Women in the Chriſtian Church to be.

SECT. VIII. Their Offices. 1. To aſſiſt at the Baptiſm of Women.

AND from hence it is plain the Offices of the Deaconeſſes were only to perform ſome Inferior Services of the Church, and thoſe chiefly relating to the Women, for whoſe ſake they were ordained. One part of their Office was to aſſiſt the Miniſter at the Baptizing of Women, where for Decency's ſake they were employed to diveſt them (the Cuſtom then being to baptize all Adult Perſons by Immerſion) and ſo to order the Matter, that the whole Ceremony might be performed with all the Decency becoming ſo ſacred an Action. This is evident from Epiphanius both in the forecited Paſſage, and other [a] Places. And it is taken notice of alſo by Juſtinian [b] and the Author [c] of the Conſtitutions, who adds, that the Deaconeſſes were uſed to anoint the Women in Baptiſm with the Holy Oil, as the Cuſtom of the Greek Church then was, not only for the Biſhops, Presbyters and Deacons, but alſo for the Deaconeſſes to uſe this Ceremony of Unction before Baptiſm; of which Cotelerius in his Notes [d] gives ſeveral Inſtances out of the ancient Writers, but theſe belong to another place.

SECT. IX. 2. To be a ſort of Private Catechiſts to the Women-Catechumens.

2. ANOTHER Part of their Office was to be a ſort of Private Catechiſts to the Women-Catechumens, who were preparing for Baptiſm. For though they

[b] Juſtel. Bibl. Jur. Canon. T. 1. p. 75. Not. in Con. Nic. c. 19.
[i] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 3. c. 9. [k] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 41. Ipſæ mulieres hæreticæ quam procaces, quæ audeant docere, contendere, Exorciſmos agere, curationes repromittere, forſitan & tingere. [l] Id. c. 17. de Baptiſmo. [m] Epiph. Hær. 49. Pepuzian. n. 2. ἐπίσκοποι παρ' αὐτοῖς γυναῖκες. καὶ πρεσβύτεραι γυναῖκες. [n] Id. Hær. 78. Antidicomarianit. n. 23.
[o] Id. Hær. 79. Collyrid. n. 3. Εἰ ἱερατεύειν γυναῖκες Θεῷ προσετάσσοντο, ἢ κανονικόν τι ἐργάζεσθαι ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἔδει μᾶλλον αὐτὴν τὴν Μαρίαν ἱερατείαν ἐπιτελέσαι, &c.
[p] Ibid. Διακονισσῶν τάγμα ἔστιν εἰς τὴν ἐκκλησίαν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ εἰς τὸ ἱερατεύειν, οὐδὲ τί ἐπιχειρεῖν ἐπιτρέπειν.
[a] Epiph. Expoſ. Fid. 21. [b] Juſtin. Novel. 6. c. 6.
[c] Hieron. Apoſt. Lib. 3. c. 15. [d] Coteler. in Loc.

were

were not allowed to teach Publickly in the Church, yet they might privately inſtruct and teach thoſe, how to make the proper Anſwers that were required of all Perſons at their Baptiſm. The Author of the ſhort Notes on the Epiſtles [e] under the Name of St. Jerom, calls this, Private Miniſtery of the Word, which the Deaconeſſes performed in the Eaſtern Churches in his Time. And it was ſo uſual and ordinary a Part of their Office in the African Churches, that the Fathers of the Fourth Council of Carthage [f] require it as a neceſſary Qualification in Deaconeſſes when they are ordained, that they ſhall be Perſons of ſuch good Underſtanding, as to be able to inſtruct the Ignorant and Ruſtick Women, how to make Reſponſes to the Interrogatories, which the Miniſter puts to them in Baptiſm, and how they were to order their Converſation afterward.

SECT. X. 3. To viſit and attend Women that were ſick and in diſtreſs.

3. ANOTHER Part of their Employment was to viſit and attend Women that were ſick, which is noted by Epiphanius [g] and the Author of the Conſtitutions, who [h] ſays they were employed likewiſe in delivering the Biſhop's Meſſages and Directions to Women that were in Health, whom the Deacons could not viſit becauſe of Unbelievers: That is, becauſe of the Scandal and Reproach which the Heathens were ready to caſt upon them.

SECT. XI. 4. To miniſter to the Martyrs and Confeſſors in Priſon.

4. IN Times of Danger and Perſecution they were employed in Miniſtring to the Martyrs in Priſon, becauſe they could more eaſily gain Acceſs to them, and go with leſs Suſpicion, and leſs Danger and Hazard of their Lives from the Heathen, than the Deacons or any other Miniſters of the Church could do. Cotelerius [i] and Gothofred collect this from ſome Paſſages in Lucian and Libanus, which ſeem plainly to refer to this Part of the Deaconeſſes Miniſtry. For Lucian in one of his Dialogues ſpeaking of Peregrine the Philoſopher, how he was careſſed by the Chriſtians, whilſt he was in Priſon for the Profeſſion of their Religion, ſays, In the Morning one might obſerve the old Women the Widows waiting at the Priſon Gate [k] with ſome of the Orphans Children; Where by the Widows he doubtleſs means the Deaconeſſes of the Chriſtians. And there is little Queſtion but Libanius [l] means the ſame, when he ſays, that the Mother or Miſtreſs of the old Women, when ſhe finds any one bound in Priſon, runs about, and begs and makes a Collection for him. This plainly refers to the great Charity and Liberality of the Chriſtians toward their Martyrs, which was collected and ſent to them by the Hand of theſe Deaconeſſes.

SECT. XII. 5. To attend the Womens-Gate in the Church.

5. IN the Greek Churches the Deaconeſſes had alſo the Charge of the Doors of the Church, which Part of their Office is mentioned by the Author [m] of the Conſtitutions, and the Author under the Name of Ignatius, who [n] ſtiles them Φρουρὸς τῆς ἁγίων πυλώνων, the Keepers of the Holy Gates. But probably, this was only in ſuch Churches as made a Diſtinction betwixt the Mens Gate and the Womens Gate: For Bp. Uſher obſerves, [o] that no ancient Writer beſides theſe two make any mention of this, as part of the Office of Deaconeſſes: And in another place of the Conſtitutions [p] this Diſtinction is plainly expreſſed: Let the Door-keepers ſtand at the Gate of the Men, and the Deaconeſſes at the Gate of the Women.

SECT. XIII. 6. To preſide over the Widows, &c.

LASTLY, they were to aſſign all Women their Places, and regulate their [q] Behaviour in the Church; to preſide over the reſt of the Widows; [r] whence in ſome Canons they are ſtiled Προεστήμυιαι, Governeſſes; as Balſamon and Zonaras note upon the Council [s] of Laodicea: and if any Woman had any Suit to prefer to a Deacon or a Biſhop, a Deaconeſs [t] was to introduce her. Theſe were the Offices of the Deaconeſſes in the Primitive Church, which I have been a little more particular in deſcribing, becauſe they are not now ſo commonly known; the Order it ſelf having been for ſome Ages wholly laid aſide.

SECT. XIV. How long this Order continued in the Church.

IF it be enquired, How long this Order continued in the Church, and what time it was totally aboliſhed? I anſwer, It was not laid aſide every where at once, but continued in the Greek Church longer than in the Latin, and in ſome of the Latin Churches longer than in others. In the Greek Church they continued to the Time of Balſamon, that is, to the latter end of the Twelfth Century; for he ſpeaks of them [u] as then Miniſtring in the Church of Conſtantinople: Though it appears from ſome other Paſſages of the ſame Author that in other [e] Hieron. Com. in Rom. 16. 1. Sicut etiam nunc in Orientalibus Diaconiſſæ mulieres, in ſuo Sexu miniſtrate videntur in Baptiſmo, ſive in Miniſterio Verbi, quia privatim docuiſſe Fœminas invenimus, &c. [f] Con. Carthag. 4. c. 12. Viduæ vel Sanctimoniales, quæ ad miniſtarium baptizandarum mulierum eliguntur, tam inſtructæ ſint ad Officium, ut poſſint apto & ſano Sermone docere imperitas & ruſticas mulieres, tempore quo baptizandæ ſunt, qualiter Baptizatori interrogatæ reſpondeant, & qualiter accepto baptiſmate, vivant. [g] Epiph. Hær. 79. n. 3. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [h] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 3. c. 15. & 19. Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. Multas Anus alit Eccleſia quæ Officium ægrotanti præſtant, &c. [i] Coteler. Not. in Conſt. Lib. 3. c. 15. Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Theodoſ. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. Leg. 27.

[k] Lucian. Peregrin. Παρὰ τὸν δεσμωτηρίον περιμένοντα γεραίδια, γύναια τινὰς. &c. [l] Liban. Orat. 16. in Teſtamen. It. Orat. de Vinctis, cited by Gothofred. [m] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 28. [n] Pſeudo-Ignat. Ep. ad Antioch. n. 12.
[o] Uſſer. Differt. 17. in Ignat. p. 224. [p] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 57. [q] Conſtit. Lib. 2. c. 58. [r] Ibid. Lib. 3. c. 7. [s] Con. Laodic. c. 11. [t] Conſtit. Lib. 2. c. 26. [u] Balſam. Reſp. ad Interrog. Marci. c. 35. ap. Leunclav. Jus Gr. Rom. T. 1. p. 381.

Churches

Churches [x] they were generally laid aſide. In the Latin Church there were ſome Decrees made againſt their Ordination long before. For the Firſt Council of Orange, An. 441, forbids [y] any more Deaconeſſes to be ordained. And the Council of Epone [z] An. 517, has a Canon to the ſame purpoſe, wholly abrogating their Conſecration. Not long after which the Second Council of Orleans, An. 533, renewed the Decree [a] againſt them. And before any of theſe, the Council of Laodicea in the Eaſtern Church had forbidden them under the Name of ancient Widows or Governeſſes, decreeing [b] that no ſuch for the future ſhould be conſtituted in the Church. But theſe Decrees had no Effect at all in the Eaſt, nor did they univerſally take Effect in the Weſt till many Ages after. The Author indeed under the Name of St. Ambroſe, would lead an unwary Reader into a great Miſtake: for he makes as if the Order of Deaconeſſes was no where uſed [c] but among the Montaniſts; ignorantly confounding the Presbytereſſes of the Montaniſts with the Deaconeſſes of the Church. And the Author under the Name of St. Jerom is not much more to be regarded, when he ſeems to intimate that in his Time the Order of Deaconeſſes was wholly laid aſide in the Weſt, and only retained [d] in the Oriental Churches. For I have already ſhewed (§. 6.) from Venantius Fortunatus, who lived An. 560, and the Council of Worms, which was held in the 9th Century, that Deaconeſſes were ſtill retained in ſome parts of the Weſtern Church; which may be evinced alſo from the Ordo Romanus [e], and other Rituals in uſe about that time, where among other Forms we meet with an Ordo ad Diaconam faciendam, An Order or Form to conſecrate a Deaconeſs. But in an Age or two after, that is, in the Tenth or Eleventh Century, Bona [f] thinks the whole Order was quite extinct.

SECT. XV. Another Notion of the Name Diaconiſſa, as it ſignifies a Deacon's Wife.

BEFORE I make an end of this Subject, I cannot but acquaint the Reader, that there is another Notion of the Name Diaconiſſa, ſometimes to be met with in the Writers of the middle Ages of the Church, who uſe it to ſignify not a Deaconeſs, but a Deacon's Wife, in the ſame Senſe as Preſbytera ſignifies the Wife of a Presbyter, and Epiſcopa the Wife of a Biſhop. The Word Epiſcopa is thus uſed in the 2d Council of Tours, where it is ſaid, That if a Biſhop have not a Wife [g], there ſhall no train of Women follow him. So alſo the Words Presbytera, Diaconiſſa, and Subdiaconiſſa [h], for the Wives of a Presbyter, a Deacon, and a Subdeacon, occur a little after in the ſame Council. And ſo in the Council of Auxerre [i] and ſome other Places. From which a Learned and Ingenious Examiner [k] of the Council of Trent concludes, that Biſhops in thoſe times were not as yet obliged by the Law of Cœlibacy, not to cohabit with their Wives, in the Gallican Church. But I ſhall freely own, I take this to be a Miſtake; For from the Time of Pope Siricius the Cœlibacy of the Clergy began to be preſſed in the Weſtern Church, and theſe very Canons do enforce it: Therefore I lay no greater Streſs upon them than they will bear: For as for the Cauſe of the Married Clergy, it needs not be defended by ſuch Arguments, having the Rule and Practice of the Whole Catholick Church, for ſome of the pureſt Ages, to abet and ſupport it; of which I ſhall give a juſt account hereafter, when I come to conſider the general Qualifications that were neceſſarily required of the Clergy of the Primitive Church, among which the Vow of Cœlibacy will be found to have no Place. What therefore theſe Canons mean by Epiſcopa and Presbytera, is no more than the Wife of a Biſhop or Presbyter, which they had before they were ordained, but in thoſe declining Ages of the Church were not allowed to cohabit with them after Ordination. This Explication agrees both with the Scope of thoſe Canons, and the Practice of the Times they were made in; and we have no Diſpute with Antonius Auguſtinus [l], or any candid Writer of the Romiſh Communion, who carry this Notion no higher than the Ages in which it was broached: But when Baronius [m] and others transfer it to the Primitive Ages, and make the Practice of the Weſtern Church in the ſixth Age to be the Practice of the Univerſal Church in all Ages, they manifeſtly Prevaricate, and put a Fallacy upon their Readers, which it may be ſufficient to have hinted here, and ſhall be more fully made out in its proper Place.

[x] Id. Com. in Concil. Chalced. c. 15. [y] Conc. Araufic. 1. c. 26. Diaconiſſæ omnimodæ non ordinandæ, &c. [z] Conc. Epauneſ. c. 21. Viduarum conſecrationem, quas Diaconiſſas vocant, ab omni religione noſtra penitus abrogamus. [a] Conc. Aurel. 2. c. 17. Placuit ut nulli poſtmodum Fœminæ Diaconalis Benedictio pro conditionis hujus fragilitate credatur. [b] Conc. Laodic. c. 11. Περὶ τῶ μὴ δεῖν πρεσβύτιδας ἤτοι γερουσιάδας ἐν ἐκκλησία καθίζειν. [c] Ambroſ. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. 11. [d] Hieron. Com. in Rom. 16. 1. and in 1 Tim. 3. 11. [e] Ordo Roman. p. 161. in Bibl. Patr. Tom. 9. Par. 1624. [f] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 15. [g] Con. Turon. 2. c. 14. Epiſcopum Epiſcopam non habentem, nulla ſequatur turba Mulierum. [h] Ibid. c. 20. Si inventus fuerit Presbyter cum ſua Presbytera, aut Diaconus cum ſua Diaconiſſa, aut Subdiaconus cum ſua Subdiaconiſſa, annum integrum excommunicatus habeatur. [i] Con. Antiſſidor. c. 21. [k] Gentillet. Exam. Concil. Trid. lib. 4. p. 259. [l] Anton. Aug. de Emendat. Gratiani lib. 1. Dial. 20. p. 226. [m] Baron. an. 58. n. 18.

ORIGINES ECCLESIASTICÆ:

OR, THE

ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

To the Right Honourable

And Right Reverend Father in God,

JONATHAN,

Lord Biſhop of WINCHESTER,

And PRELATE of the Moſt Noble Order of the GARTER.

MY LORD,

AS the kind Entertainment, which Your LORDSHIP and the World have been pleaſed to give the Firſt Part of this Work, has encouraged me to go on, in hopes of doing Publick Service to the CHURCH: So the Nature of the Subject contained in this Second Volume, being but a Continuation of the former Account of the Primitive Clergy, obliges me again with all Submiſſion to Preſent this Second Part to Your LORDSHIP, in hopes of no leſs kind Acceptance and Approbation. The Matters here treated of are, many of them things of the greateſt Importance, which when plainly ſet in Order and preſented to Publick View, may perhaps excite the Zeal of many in the Preſent Age, to Copy out thoſe Neceſſary Duties, by the Practice of which the Primitive Church attained to great Perfection and Glory; and as I may ſay, ſtill Provokes and Calls us to the ſame Attainments by ſo many Excellent Rules and Noble Examples. In the Fourth and Sixth of theſe Books I have endeavoured to draw up ſomething of the General Character of the Primitive Clergy, by ſhewing what Qualifications were required in them before their Ordination, and what Sort of Laws they were to be governed by afterwards, reſpecting both their Lives and Labours, in the continual Exerciſe of the Duties of their Function. Many of them, I muſt own, have been very Affecting to myſelf in the Conſideration of them: And I was willing to hope they might prove ſo to ſuch others as would be at the Pains to read them. For here are both Directions and Provocations of the beſt Sort, to excite our Induſtry, and inflame our Zeal, and to make us eager and reſtleſs in Copying out the Pattern ſet before us. If any ſhall think I have collected theſe things together to reflect upon any Perſons in the Preſent Age: I ſhall only ſay with one of the Ancients [] in a like Caſe, They miſtake my Deſign; which was not to Reproach any Man's Perſon, who bears [] Hieron. Ep. 83. ad Ocean. Tom. 2. p. 323. Ne quis me in Sugillationem iſtius temporis Sacerdotum ſcripſiſſe, quæ ſcripſi, exiſtimet, ſed in Eccleſiæ Utilitatem. Ut enim Oratores & Philoſophi, deſcribentes qualem velint eſſe perfectum Oratorem & Philoſophum, non faciunt injuriam Demoſtheni & Platoni, ſed res ipſas abſque Perſonis deſiniunt: Sic in deſcriptione Epiſcopi, & in eorum Expoſitione quæ ſcripta ſunt, quaſi ſpeculum Sacerdotii proponitur. Jam in Poteſtate & Conſcientia ſingulorum eſt, quales ſe ibi aſpiciant. Ut vel dolere ad Deformitatem, vel gaudere ad Pulchritudinem poſſint.

the Sacred Character of a Prieſt, but to write what might be for the Publick Benefit of the CHURCH: For as when Orators and Philoſophers deſcribe the Qualities, which are required to make a compleat Orator or Philoſopher, they do no Injury to Demoſthenes or Plato, but only deſcribe things nakedly in themſelves, without any Perſonal Applications: ſo in the Deſcription of a Biſhop or Prieſt, and Explication of ancient Rules, nothing more is intended but to propoſe a Mirror of the Prieſthood; in which it will be in every Man's Power and Conſcience to take a View of himſelf, ſo as either to grieve at the ſight of his own Deformity, or rejoice when he beholds his own Beauty in the Glaſs.

NOTHING is here propoſed but Rules and Examples of the nobleſt Virtues; Probity and Integrity of Life; Studies and Labours becoming the Clerical Function; Piety and Devotion in our conſtant Addreſſes to GOD; Fidelity, Diligence and Prudence in preaching his Word to Men; Carefulneſs and Exactneſs, joined with Diſcretion and Charity, in the Adminiſtration of Publick and Private Diſcipline; Candor and Ingenuity in compoſing needleſs Diſputes among Good Men; and Zeal in oppoſing and confronting the Powerful and Wily Deſigns of Hereticks and Wicked Men; together with Reſolution and Patience in Suffering Perſecutions, Calumnies, and Reproaches both from profeſſed Enemies, and pretended Friends; with many other Inſtances of the like commendable Virtues, which ſhined in the Lives, and adorned the Profeſſion of the Primitive Clergy: Whoſe Rules and Actions, I almoſt promiſe my ſelf, Your LORDSHIP and all good Men will read with Pleaſure, becauſe they will but ſee their own Beauty repreſented in the Glaſs; and they that fall ſhort of the Character here given, will find it a gentle Admonition and Spur to ſet in Order the Things that are wanting in their Conduct, and to Labour with more Zeal to bring themſelves a little nearer to the Primitive Standard.

YOUR LORDSHIP is enabled by your High Station and Calling to revive the Exerciſe of Ancient Diſcipline among Your Clergy in a more Powerful Way: And You have given us already ſome Convincing Proofs, that it is Your ſettled Reſolution and Intention ſo to do: As the Thoughts of This is a real Pleaſure to the Diligent and Virtuous, ſo it is to be hoped it will prove a juſt Terror to thoſe of the contrary Character; and by introducing a ſtrict Diſcipline among the Clergy, make way for the eaſier Introduction of it among the Laity alſo; the Revival of which has long been deſired, though but ſlow Steps are made toward the Reſtauration of it. In the mean time it becomes every Man according to his Ability, though in a lower Station, to contribute his Endeavours toward the promoting theſe good Ends: To which Purpoſe I have collected and digeſted theſe Obſervations upon the Laws and Diſcipline of the Ancient Clergy, that ſuch as are willing to be influenced by their Practice, may have Great and Good Examples ſet before them; whilſt they, whom Examples cannot move, may be influenced another way, by the Authority which Your LORDSHIP and Others in the ſame Station are inveſted with, for the Benefit and Edification of the CHURCH: The Promoting of which is, and ever will be, the hearty Endeavour of him who is,

My LORD,

Your Lordſhip's moſt Dutiful and Obedient Servant,

JOSEPH BINGHAM.

BOOK III.

Of the INFERIOR ORDERS of the CLERGY in the PRIMITIVE CHURCH.

CHAP. I.

Of the first Original of the Inferior Orders, and the Number and Use of them: and how they differed from the Superior Orders of Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons.

SECT. I. The Inferior Orders not of Apostolical, but only Ecclesiastical Institution, proved against Baronius, and the Council of Trent.

HAVING in the last Book discourſed of the Superior Orders of the Clergy in the Primitive Church, I come now to treat of thoſe which are commonly call'd the Inferior Orders. And here our firſt Enquiry muſt be concerning the Original and Number of them. The two great Oracles of the Romiſh Church, Baronius [a] and the Council [b] of Trent, are very Dogmatical and Poſitive in their Aſſertions both about their Riſe and Number; that they are preciſely five, viz. Subdeacons, Acolythiſts, Exorciſts, Readers, and Doorkeepers; and that they are all of Apoſtolical Inſtitution: And herein they are follow'd not only by Bellarmine [c], and the common Writers of that Side, but alſo by Schelſtrate [d], a Perſon who lived in greater Light, and might have ſeen through the Miſts that were caſt before the Eyes of others. Cardinal Bona [e] diſtinguiſhes between Subdeacons and the reſt. He fairly owns, that Acolythiſts, Exorciſts, Readers and Doorkeepers are not of Apoſtolical Inſtitution, as the modern School-men pretend: But as to Subdeacons, he joins with them entirely, and ſays [f], that though the Scripture makes no expreſs Mention of them, yet their Inſtitution muſt be referr'd either to Chriſt, or at leaſt to his Apoſtles. The French Writers are not generally ſo tenacious of this Opinion, as having never ſworn to receive the Decrees of the Tridentine Fathers with an Implicite Faith; but many of them ingenuouſly confeſs the Riſe of the Inferior Orders to be owing only to Eccleſiaſtical Inſtitution. Morinus [g] undertakes to prove that there was no ſuch Order as that of Acolythiſts, or Exorciſts, or Door-keepers among the Greeks in the Age next to the Apoſtles; nor does Schelſtrate diſprove his Arguments, though he makes a Shew of refuting him. Duarenus [h] ſays there were no ſuch Orders originally in the firſt and Primitive Church. Cotelerius [i] confeſſes their Original is involved wholly in Obſcurity; that there is no mention made of any of them in Ignatius, or any other ancient Writer before Cyprian and Tertullian. And therefore Habertus [k] is clearly of Opinion, that it would be more adviſeable for their Church to expunge all the Inferior Orders out of the Number and Catalogue of Sacraments, and refer them only to Eccleſiaſtical Inſtitution, as the ancient Divines were uſed to do. By the ancient Divines he means the School-men, who were generally of this Opinion heretofore. But Peter Lombard, who is ſet at the Head of them, declares [l] that the Primitive Church had no Orders below thoſe of Presbyters and Deacons; nor did the Apoſtle give Command about any other, but the Church in ſucceeding Ages inſtituted Subdeacons and Acolythiſts herſelf. And this is the Opinion of Aquinas [m], and Amalarius Fortunatus [n] and many others. Schelſtrate himſelf [o] owns, that it was the Opinion of two Popes, Urban the Second, and Innocent the Third, that the Order of Subdeacons was not reckoned among the ſacred Orders of the Primi-

[a] Baron. an. 44. 78. [b] Conc. Trid. Seſſ. 23. c. 2. It. Catechiſm. ad Parochos tit. de ſacramento Ordinis p. 222.
[c] Bellarm. de Clericis Lib. 1. c. 11. [d] Schelſtrat. Concil. Antiochen. Reſtitut. Diſſert. 4. c. 17. art. 2. p. 520. [e] Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. c. 25. n. 17. Acolythos, Exorciſtas, Lectores, & Oſtiarios, ab Apoſtolis, vel ab immediatis eorum ſucceſſoribus inſtitutos, Doctores Scholaſtici aſſerunt, ſed non probant.
[f] Bona ibid. n. 16. Subdiaconorum licet expreſſa mentio in ſacris Literis non reperiatur, eorum tamen inſtitutio vel ad Chriſtum, ut recentiores Scholaſtici exiſtimant, vel ad Apoſtolos referenda eſt.
[g] Morin. de ordinat. exercit. 14. cap. 1. [h] Duaren. de Miniſter. & Beneficiis Eccl. Lib. 1. c. 14. [i] Coteler. not. in Conſtitut. Apoſt. Lib. 2. c. 25. [k] Habert. Archieratic. Par. 5. Obſerv. 1. p. 48. Conſultius meo quidem judicio, Ordines Hierachicis inferiores, ipſumque adeo Hypodiaconi, & à Sacramentorum Cenſu expungere, & ad Inſtitutionem duntaxat Eccleſiaſticam cum antiquis Theologis referre. [l] Lombard. Sent. Lib. 4. Diſt. 24. p. 328. Hos ſolos Primitiva Eccleſia legitur habuiſſe, & de his ſolis Præceptum Apoſtoli habemus. Subdiaconos vero & Acolythos procedente tempore Eccleſia ſibi conſtituit. [m] Aquin. ſupplement. Par. 3. Q. 37. Art. 2. Reſp. ad ſecundum. [n] Amalar. de Offic. Eccl. Lib. 2. c. 6. [o] Schelſtrat. de Concil. Antioch. p. 515.

tive

tive Church: It was indeed an Inferior Order in the 3d Century, but not dignified with the Title of a Sacred or Superior Order till the Twelfth Age of the Church; when, as Menardus informs us out of a MS. Book of Petrus Cantor [p] a Writer of that Age, it was then but juſt newly dignified with that Character: That is, in an Age when Biſhops and Presbyters began to be reckoned but one Order, in Compliance with an Hypotheſis peculiar to the Romiſh Church, then the Order of Subdeacons ſtept up to be a ſuperior Order; and whereas the Primitive Church was uſed to reckon the three ſuperior Orders to be thoſe of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, the Romiſh Church now began to ſpeak in a different Stile, and count the three ſuperior Orders, thoſe of Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons: So that this laſt became a Superior Order; which for ſome Ages before had been only an Inferior Order, and at firſt was no Order at all. For the Teſtimonies alledged by Schelſtrate after Bellarmine and Baronius, to prove the Inferior Orders of Apoſtolical Inſtitution, are of no Authority or Weight in this Caſe. The Epiſtle under the Name of Ignatius ad Antiochenos, and the Conſtitutions under the Name of Clemens Romanus, which are the only Authorities pretended in this Matter, are now vulgarly known to be none of their Genuine Writings, but the Works of ſome Authors of much later Date. So that till ſome better Proofs be given, there will be reaſon to conclude, that theſe Inferior Orders were not of Apoſtolical, but only of Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution.

SECT. II. No certain number of them in the Primitive Church.

AND this may be argued farther, not only from the Silence of the moſt ancient Writers, but alſo from the Accounts of thoſe who ſpeak of them preſently after their Inſtitution. For tho' the Romiſh Church determines them to be preciſely Five in Number, yet in the ancient Church there was no ſuch Rule; but ſome Accounts ſpeak of more than Five, and others not of ſo many; which argues that they were not of Apoſtolical Inſtitution. The Author under the Name of [q] Ignatius reckons Six without Acolythiſts, viz. Subdeacons, Readers, Singers, Door-keepers, Copiatæ, and Exorciſts. The Author of the Conſtitutions under the Name of Clemens Romanus [r] counts but Four of theſe Orders, viz. Subdeacons, Readers, Singers, and Doorkeepers. For he makes no mention of the Copiatæ, or of Acolythiſts: And though he ſpeaks of Exorciſts, yet he ſays [s] expreſly it was no Church-Order. The Apoſtolical Canons [t], as they are commonly called, Name only Three, Subdeacons, Readers, and Singers. And though the Author under the Name of St. Jerom [u] mentions Four, yet he brings the Copiatæ or Foſſarii into the Account, and makes them the firſt Order of the Clergy, leaving out Acolythiſts and Exorciſts. Epiphanius [x] makes no mention of Acolythiſts, but inſtead of them puts in the Copiatæ, and Interpreters. Others add the Parabolani alſo; and except Cornelius [y] there is ſcarce any other ancient Writer, who is ſo preciſe to the Number of Five Inferior Orders, as now computed in the Church of Rome.

SECT. III. Not inſtituted in all Churches at the ſame Time.

THE Reaſon of which Difference muſt needs be this, That there was no certain Rule left Originally about any ſuch Orders; but every Church inſtituted them for herſelf, at ſuch Times and in ſuch Numbers as her own Neceſſities ſeemed to require. For at firſt moſt of the Offices of theſe Inferior Orders were performed by the Deacons, as I have had occaſion to ſhew in another [z] Place: But as the Number of Converts increaſed in large Churches, ſuch as that of Rome, which confined her ſelf to the number of Seven Deacons, the Duties of the Deacons Office quickly became too great and heavy for them: Whereupon a ſort of Aſſiſtants to them were appointed, firſt in thoſe great Churches, under the Names of theſe Inferior Orders, to take off from the Deacons ſome of the heavy Burden that lay upon them. And that is the Reaſon why we meet with the Inferior Orders in ſuch great and populous Churches as Rome and Carthage in the beginning of the 3d Century; whereas in many of the leſſer Churches all the Offices were ſtill performed by Deacons, even in the 4th and 5th Centuries: Which may be concluded from the words of the Author under the Name [a] of St. Auſtin, where ſpeaking of the Deacons of Rome, he ſays, the Reaſon why they did not perform all the Inferior Services of the Church, was, that there was a Multitude of the leſſer Clergy under them; whereas otherwiſe they muſt have taken care of the Altar and its Utenſils, &c. as it was in other Churches at that Time. Which ſeems evidently to imply, that theſe Inferior Orders were not taken into all Churches when that Author made this Obſervation.

SECT. IV. The Principal uſe of them in the Primitive Church, to be a ſort of Nurſery for the Hierarchy.

BUT ſuch Churches as admitted them, made them ſubſervient to divers good Ends and Purpoſes. For beſides that of Relieving the Deacons in ſome part of their Office, they were alſo a ſort of Nurſery for the Sacred Hierarchy, or Superior Orders of the Church. For in thoſe days ſuch Churches as had theſe Orders settled in them, commonly chose their Superior Ministers, Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons, out of them; and the Clergy of these lesser Orders were a sort of Candidates under Tryal and Probation for the greater. For the Church not having the advantage of Christian Academies at that Time, took this Method to train up fit Persons for the Ministry, first exercising them in some of the lower Offices, that they might be the better disciplin'd and qualified for the Duties of the Superior Functions. And by this means every Bishop knew perfectly both the Abilities and Morals of all the Clergy of his Diocese; for they were bred up under his Eye, and governed by his Care and Inspection. In some places they lived all in one House, and eat all at one Table: As Possidius [b] particularly notes of St. Austin's Church at Hippo, and Sozomen [c] of the Church of Rinocurura in the Confines of Palestine and Egypt, that they had House and Table and every thing in Common. Hence it became a Custom in Spain, in the Time of the Gothick Kings, about the End of the 5th Century, for Parents to dedicate their Children very young to the Service of the Church: In which case they were taken into the Bishop's Family, and educated under him by some discreet and grave Presbyter, whom the Bishop deputed for that purpose, and set over them by the Name of Præpositus, & Magister Disciplinæ, The Superintendent, or Master of Discipline, because his chief Business was to inspect their Behaviour, and instruct them in the Rules and Discipline of the Church. As we may see in the 2d and 4th Councils [d] of Toledo, which give Directions about this Affair.

[p] Pet. Cantor de Verbo Mirifico, ap. Menard. Not. in Sacramental Gregor. p. 280. De Novo inſtitutum eſt, Subdiaconatum eſſe ſacrum ordinem. [q] Ep. ad Antioch. n. 12. [r] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 3. c. 11. [s] Ibid. Lib. 8. c. 26. [t] Can. Apoſt. c. 69. [u] Jerom. de 7. Ordin. Eccl. T. 4. p. 8. [x] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [y] Cornel. Ep. ad Fab. ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [z] Book 2. Chap. 20. Sect. 15. [a] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. T. 4. c 101. Ut autem non omnia miniſteria obſequiorum per ordinem agant, multitudo facit Clericorum. Nam utique & Altare portarent, & vaſa ejus, & aquam in manus funderent Sacerdoti, ſicut videmus per omnes Eccleſias.

ders

SECT. V. Not allowed to forsake their Service, and return to a mere secular Life again.

AND upon this Account these Inferior Clergy were tied as well as others to the perpetual Service of the Church, when once they had devoted and dedicated themselves to it: They might not then forsake their Station, and return to a mere Secular Life again at their own Pleasure. The Council of Chalcedon [e] has a peremptory Canon to this purpose: That if any Person ordained among the Clergy betake himself to any Military or Civil Employment, and does not repent and return to the Office he had first chosen for God's Sake, he should be anathematized. Which is repeated in the Council of Tours [f], and Tribur [g], and some others, where 'tis interpreted so, as to include the Inferior Orders as well as the Superior.

SECT. VI. How they differed from the Superior Orders, in Name, in Office, and Manner of Ordination.

BUT though they agreed in this, yet in other Respects they differed very much from one another. As 1st in Name: The Clergy of the Superior Orders are commonly called the ἱερώμενοι, Holy [h] and Sacred, as in Socrates and others: Whence the Name, Hierarchy, is used by the Author under the Name of Dionysius [i] the Areopagite, to signify peculiarly the Orders of Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons; As Hallier a famous Sorbonne Doctor has abundantly proved against Cellotius the Jesuit in his Learned and Elaborate Defence [k] of the Hierarchy of the Church. But on the other hand the Inferior Orders in the ancient Canons have only the Name of Insacrati, Unconsecrated; as in the Council [l] of Agde, where the Insacrati Ministri are forbidden to touch the sacred Vessels, or to enter into the Diaconicon or Sanctuary, it is plain there must be meant the Inferior Orders. 2. Another Difference, which gave Rise to the former Distinction, was the different Ceremonies observed in the Manner of their Ordination. The one were always ordained at the Altar: The others not so: The one with the solemn Rite of Imposition of Hands; the other commonly without it. Whence St. Basil [m] calls the one Βαθμὸς, a Degree; but the other ἀχαριστόνητῳ ὑπηρεσία, an Inferior Ministry, which had no Imposition of Hands. 3. The main Difference was in the Exercise of their Office and Function. The one were ordained to minister before God as Priests, to celebrate his Sacraments, expound his Word publickly in the Church, &c. In which respects the three superior Orders of Bishops, Presbyters, and Deacons are said by Optatus, and others, to have each their Share and Degree in the Christian Priesthood, as has been noted [n] in the former Book: But the Inferior Orders were not appointed to any such Ministry, but only to attend the Ministers in Divine Service, and perform some lower and ordinary Offices, which any Christian by the Bishop's Appointment was qualified to perform. What these Offices were shall be shewed by a particular Account of them in the following Chapters.

[b] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 25. Cum ipso semper Clerici, una etiam Domo ac Mensa, Sumptibusque communibus alebantur & vestiebantur. [c] Sozom. Lib. 6. c. 31. Κοινὴ δέ ἐστι τοῖς αὐτόθι κληρικοῖς οἴκησις καὶ τράπεζα καὶ τἆλλα πάντα. [d] Conc. Tolet. 2. c. 1. De his quos voluntas Parentum à primis Infantiæ annis in Clericatûs Officio vel Monachali posuit, Statuimus —— ut in Domo Ecclesiæ sub Episcopali præsentia à Præposito sibi debeant erudiri. It. Tolet. 4. c. 23. Si qui in Clero Puberes aut Adolescentes existunt, omnes in uno Conclavi Atrii commorentur, ut in Disciplinis Ecclesiasticis agant, deputato probatissimo seniore, quem & Magistrum Disciplinæ & testem vitæ habeant. [e] Conc. Chalced. c. 5. τοὺς ἅπαξ ἐν κλήρῳ τεταγμένους, εἰσαμὲν, μήτε ἐπὶ στρατείαν, μήτε ἐπὶ ἀξίαν κοσμικὴν ἔρχεσθαι, &c. [f] Si quis Clericus relicto Officii sui Ordine, Laicam voluerit agere vitam, vel se militiæ tradiderit, excommunicationis pœna feriatur. [g] Conc. Triburiens. c. 27. [h] Socrat. Lib. 1. c. 10. & 15. [i] Dionys. de Hierar. Eccles. c. 5. n. 2. [k] Hallier Defensio Hierarch. Eccles. Lib. 1. c. 3. Lib. 3. Sect. 2. c. 1. & 2. [l] Conc. Agathen. c. 66. Non licet Insacratos Ministros licentiam habere, in Secretarium, quod Græci Diaconicon appellant, ingredi, & contingere vasa Dominica. [m] Basil. Ep. Canon. c. 51 [n] See Book 2. Chap. 19. Sect. 15.

CHAP. II.

Of SUBDEACONS.

SECT. I. No Mention of Subdeacons, till the 3d Century.

THE first Notice we have of this Order in any ancient Writers is in the middle of the 3d Century, when Cyprian and Cornelius lived, who both speak of Subdeacons as settled in the Church in their Time. Cyprian [a] mentions them at least ten times in his Epistles; and Cornelius in his famous Epistle [b] to Fabius Bishop of Antioch, where he gives a Catalogue of the Clergy then belonging to the Church of Rome, reckons seven Subdeacons among them. But some think they were not quite so early in the Greek Church: For Habertus [c] says, no Greek Writer speaks of them before Athanasius [d], who lived in the 4th Century.

SECT. II. Their Ordination perform'd without Imposition of hands in the Latin Church.

THE Author of the Constitutions indeed refers them to an Apostolical Original, and in Compliance with that Hypothesis brings in Thomas the Apostle giving Direction to Bishops to ordain them with Imposition [e] of Hands and Prayer, as he does for all the rest of the Inferior Orders. But that Author is Singular in this: For it does not appear to have been the Practice of the Greek Church, whose Customs he chiefly represents: St. Basil, a more Credible Witness, says of this and all the other Inferior Orders that they [f] were ἀχειροτόνηται, ordained without Imposition of Hands. And for the Latin Church it is evident from a Canon of the 4th Council of Carthage, where we have the Form and Manner of their Ordination thus expresst: When [g] a Subdeacon is ordained, seeing he has no Imposition of Hands, let him receive an empty Patin and an empty Cup from the hands of the Bishop, and an Ewer and Towel from the Archdeacon. Which Form wholly excluding Imposition of Hands, is a good Collateral Evidence (as Habertus [h] confesses ingenuously) to prove that this Order was not instituted by the Apostles: For they did not use to omit this Ceremony in any of their Ordinations.

SECT. III. A brief Account of their Offices.

AS to the Office of Subdeacons, we may in some measure learn what it was from the forementioned Canon, viz. That it was to fit and prepare the Sacred Vessels and Utensils of the Altar, and deliver them to the Deacons in time of Divine Service. But they were not allowed to Minister as Deacons at the Altar; No not so much as to come within the Rails of it, to set a Patin or Cup or the Oblations of the People thereon: As appears from a Canon [i] of the Council of Laodicea, which forbids the ὑπηρέτ, by which is meant Subdeacons, to have any place within the Diaconicon, or Sanctuary, nor to touch the Holy Vessels, meaning at the Communion-Table. Though this is now their Office in the Church of Rome; and in that, Bona [k] owns they differ from those of the ancient Church. Another of their Offices was to attend the Doors of the Church during the Communion-Service. This is mentioned by the Council of Laodicea, in a Canon [l] which fixes them to that Station. And Valesius thinks Eusebius meant them, when describing the Temple of Paulinus, he speaks [m] of some, whose Office it was θυρωλεῖν καὶ ποδηγεῖν τὰς εἰσιούσας, to attend the Doors, and conduct those that came in, to their proper Places. The Author of the Constitutions [n] divides this Office between the Deacons and Subdeacons, ordering the Deacons to stand at the Mens Gate, and the Subdeacons at the Womens; that no one might go forth, nor the Doors be opened in the Time of the Oblation. Besides these Offices in the Church, they had another Office out of the Church, which was to go on the Bishop's Embassies, with his Letters or Messages to Foreign Churches. For in those days, by reason of the Persecutions, a Bishop did not so much as send a Letter to a Foreign Church, but by the hands of one of his Clergy: Whence Cyprian [o] gives such Letters the Name of Literæ Clericæ: And the Subdeacons were the Men that were commonly employed in this Office; As appears from every one of those Epistles in Cyprian, which speak of Subdeacons. Particularly in that which he wrote to the Clergy of Carthage in his Retirement, where he [p] tells them, that having occasion to write to the Church of Rome, and needing some of the Clergy to convey his Letter by, he was obliged to ordain a new Subdeacon for this purpose, because the Church could not spare him one at [a] Cypr. Ep. 8. 20. 29. 34. 35. 45. 78. 79. ed. Oxon. [b] ap. Euseb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [c] Haberr. Archieratic. p. 49. [d] Athan. Ep. ad Solitar. Vit. agent. [e] Constit. Apost. Lib. 8. c. 21. [f] Basil. Ep. Canon. c. 51. [g] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 5. Subdiaconus quum ordinatur, quia manûs Impositionem non accipit, Patinam de Episcopi manu accipiat vacuam, & Calicem vacuum. De manu vero Archidiaconi, urceolum cum aqua, & mantile, & manutergium. [h] Habert. Archieratic. p. 48. [i] Conc. Laodic. c. 21. [k] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 16. Olim nec Calicem nec Patinam nec Oblationes in altari ponebant. [l] Conc. Laodic. c. 22. καὶ δεῖ ὑποέτην τὰς θύρας ἐγκαταλιμπάνειν. [m] Euseb. Hist. lib. 10. c. 4. [n] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 11. [o] Cypr. Ep. 4. al. 9. Grave est si Epistolæ Clericæ veritas mendacio aliquo & fraude corrupta est. [p] Cypr. Ep. 24. al. 29. Quoniam oportuit me per Clericos scribere; Scio autem nostros plurimos absentes esse, paucos vero, qui illic sunt, vix ad ministerium quotidiani operis sufficere: necesse fuit novos aliquos constituere, qui mitterentur: Feciſſe me autem sciatis Lectorem Saturum, & Hypodiaconum Optatum Confessorem.

that

that time, having ſcarce enough left to perform her own daily Services. Theſe were anciently the chief of the Subdeacons Office, at their firſt Inſtitution.

SECT. IV. What Offices they might not perform.

AND great care was taken that they ſhould not exceed their Bounds, or encroach too much upon the Deacon's Office. They might not take upon them to Miniſter the Bread [q] or the Cup to the People at the Lord's Table; They might not bid the Prayers, or do any part of that Service which the Deacons did, as they were the κήρυκες or Holy Cryers of the Church. This is the meaning of the Canon [r] of the Council of Laodicea, which prohibits the Subdeacons from wearing an Horarium in time of Divine Service: Which was an Habit of Deacons, that they made uſe of as a ſignal to give notice of the Prayers, and other Services of the Church, to the Catechumens, Penitents, &c. who were to obſerve their Directions: This Habit therefore the Subdeacons might not wear, becauſe it was a Diſtinguiſhing Habit of a Superior Order. And farther, to ſhew the ſame Subjection and Deference to Deacons, as Deacons did to Preſbyters, they are forbidden by another Canon [s] of that Council to ſit in the Preſence of a Deacon without his Leave.

SECT. V. The Singularity of the Church of Rome in keeping to the preciſe Number of ſeven Subdeacons.

THERE is but one thing more I ſhall note concerning this Order, which is the Singularity of the Church of Rome in keeping to the Number of ſeven Subdeacons. For in the Epiſtle of Cornelius [t], which gives us the Catalogue of the Romiſh Clergy, we find but ſeven Deacons, and ſeven Subdeacons, though there were forty four Presbyters, and forty two Acolythiſts, and of Exorciſts, Readers, and Door-keepers no leſs than fifty two. But other Churches did not tie themſelves to follow this Example. For in the great Church of Conſtantinople, and three leſſer that belonged to it, there were ninety Subdeacons, as may be ſeen in one of Juſtinian's Novels [u], where he gives a Catalogue of the Clergy, and fixes the Number of every Order, amounting to above five hundred in the whole.

CHAP. III.

Of ACOLYTHISTS.

SECT. I. Acolythiſts an Order peculiar to the Latin Church, and never mentioned by any Greek Writer, for four Centuries.

NEXT to the Subdeacons the Latin Writers commonly put Acolythiſts, which was an Order peculiar to the Latin Church: For there was no ſuch Order in the Greek Church for above four hundred Years; nor is it ever ſo much as mentioned among the Orders of the Church by any Greek Writer all that time, as Cabaſſutius [a], and Schelſtrate [b] confeſs. And though it occurs ſometimes in the later Greek Rituals, yet Schelſtrate ſays, it is there only another Name for the Order of Subdeacons. But in the Latin Church theſe two were diſtinguiſhed: For Cornelius in his Catalogue makes a plain Difference between them, in ſaying there were forty two Acolythiſts, and but ſeven Subdeacons in the Church of Rome. Cyprian alſo ſpeaks of them [c] frequently in his Epiſtles, as diſtinct from the Order of Subdeacons; though wherein their Offices differed, is not very eaſy to determine from either of thoſe Authors.

SECT. II. Their Ordination and Office.

BUT in the 4th Council of Carthage there is a Canon which gives a little Light in the Matter. For there we have the Form of their Ordination, and ſome Intimation of their Office alſo. The Canon [d] is to this Effect: When any Acolythiſt is ordained, the Biſhop ſhall inform him how he is to behave himſelf in his Office: And he ſhall receive a Candleſtick with a Taper in it, from the Archdeacon, that he may underſtand that he is appointed to light the Candles of the Church. He ſhall alſo receive an empty Pitcher to furniſh Wine for the Euchariſt of the Blood of Chriſt. So that the Acolythiſts Office ſeems at that Time to have conſiſted chiefly in theſe two things, Lighting the Candles of the Church, and Attending the Miniſters with Wine for the Euchariſt: The Deſignation to which Office needed no Impoſition of Hands, but only the Biſhop's Appointment, as is plain from the Words of the Canon now cited.

SECT. III. The Origination of the Name.

SOME think [e] they had another Office, which was to accompany and attend the Biſhop whitherſoever he went; and that they were called Acolythiſts upon this account: Or perhaps becauſe they were obliged to attend at Funerals in the Company of the Canonicæ & Aſcetriæ, [q] Conc. Laodic. c. 25. ὃ δεῖ ὑπηρέτας ἄρτον διδόναι, ἢ δὲ ποτήριον εὐλογεῖν. [r] Ibid. c. 22. ὃ δεῖ ὑπηρέτην ὠράριον φορεῖν, &c. [s] Conc. Laodic. c. 20. [t] Ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [u] Juſtin. Novel. 3. [a] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 42. p. 249. [b] Schelſtrat. de Concil. Antiocheno Diſſert. 4. c. 17. p. 526. [c] Cypr. Ep. 7. 34. 59. 77. 78. 79. ed. Oxon. [d] Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 6. Acolythus quum ordinatur, ab Epiſcopo quidem doceatur qualiter in Officio ſuo agere debeat: Sed ab Archidiacono accipiat Ceroferarium cum Cereo, ut ſciat ſe ad accendenda Eccleſiæ luminaria mancipari. Accipiat & Urceolum vacuum ad ſuggerendum vinum in Euchariſtiam ſanguini Chriſti. [e] Duaren. de Miniſter. & Benefic. Lib. 1. c. 14.

with

with whom they are joined in one of Justinian's [f] Novels. The Original Word, Ἀκόλυθος, as Hesychius [g] explains it, signifies a young Servant, or an Attendant who waits continually upon another. And the Name seems to be given them from this. But the Inference which a Learned Person [h] makes from hence, that the Order of Acolythists was first in the Greek Church, because the Name is of Greek Original, seems not to be so certain: Because it can hardly be imagined, that it should be an Order of the Greek Church, and yet no Greek Writer before Justinian's time make any Mention of it.

SECT. IV. Whether Acolythists be the same with the Deputati & Ceroferarii of later Ages.

I know indeed St. Jerom [i] says, it was a Custom in the Oriental Churches to set up lighted Tapers when the Gospel was read, as a Token and Demonstration of their Joy: But he does not so much as once intimate, that they had a peculiar Order of Acolythists for this purpose: Nor does it appear that this was any part of their Office in the Latin Church: For that which the Council of Carthage speaks of, is probably no more than Lighting the Candles at Night, when the Church was to meet for their Lucernalis Oratio, or Evening Prayer. This Office of Acolythists, as much as the Romanists contend for the Apostolical Institution of it, is now no longer in being in the Church of Rome, but changed into that of the Ceroferarii, or Taper-bearers, whose Office is only to walk before the Deacons, &c. with a lighted Taper in their Hands. Which is so different from the Office of the ancient Acolythists, that Duarenus [k] cannot but express his Wonder, how the one came to be changed into the other, and why their Doctors should call him an Acolythist of the ancient Church, who is no more than a Taper-bearer of the present. Cardinal Bona [l] carries the Reflexion a little farther, and with some Resentment complains, that the Inferior Orders of the Romish Church bear no Resemblance to those of the Primitive Church, and that for five hundred Years the ancient Discipline has been lost.

CHAP. IV.

Of EXORCISTS.

SECT. I. Exorcists at first no peculiar Order of the Clergy.

THERE is nothing more certain than that in the Apostolical Age, and the next following, the Power of Exorcizing, or casting out Devils, was a miraculous Gift of the Holy Ghost, not confined to the Clergy, much less to any single Order among them, but given to other Christians also, as many other extraordinary Spiritual Gifts then were. Origen [a] says Private Christians, that is Laymen, did by their Prayers and Adjurations dispossess Devils. And Socrates [b] observes particularly of Gregory Thaumaturgus, that whilst he was a Layman, he wrought many Miracles, healing the Sick, and casting out Devils by sending Letters to the possessed Party only. And that this Power was common to all Orders of Christians, appears farther from the Challenges of the ancient Apologists, Tertullian [c], and others, to the Heathens, wherein they undertake, that if they would bring any Person possessed with a Devil into open Court before the Magistrate, any Ordinary Christian should make him confess that he was a Devil, and not a God. Minucius [d] speaks of this Power among Christians, but he does not ascribe it to any particular Order of Men: As neither does Justin [e] Martyr, nor Irenæus [f], nor Cyprian [g], nor Arnobius [h], though they frequently speak of such Power in the Church.

SECT. II. Bishops and Presbyters for the three first Centuries the usual Exorcists of the Church.

BUT as this Gift was common to all orders of Men, so it is reasonable to believe, that it was in a more especial manner conferred upon the Bishops and Presbyters of the Church, who, when there was any occasion to use any Exorcism in the Church, were the Ordinary Ministers of it. Thus Cardinal Bona [i] understands that famous Passage of Tertullian, where speaking [k] of a Christian Woman, who went to the Theatre, and returned possessed with a Devil, he says, the unclean Spirit was rebuked in [f] Justin. Novel. 59. [g] Hesych. Ἀκόλυθος, ὁ νεώτερος ταῖς ὑπηρεσίαις, ὁ περὶ τὸ σῶμα. [h] Bp. Fell. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 7. [i] Hieron. cont. Vigilant. T. 2. p. 123. Per totas Orientis Ecclesias, quando legendum est Evangelium, accenduntur Lumina, &c. [k] Duaren. de Minister. & Benefic. Lib. 1. c. 14. p. 74. Nescio quomodo tandem factum est, ut hoc munus in luminariorum curam postea conversum sit, & Doctores nostri passim Acolythos Ceroferarios interpretentur. [l] Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. c. 25. n. 18. Desierunt quoque minorum Ordinum Officia, quæ plerumque à pueris, & hominibus mercede conductis, nullisque ordinibus initiatis exercentur, &c.

[a] Orig. cont. Cels. Lib. 7. p. 334. ἐυχῇ καὶ ὁρκώσεσιν ἰδιώτου τὸ τοιοῦτον πράσσοντος, &c. [b] Socrat. Lib. 4. c. 27. λαικὸς ὢν πολλὰ σημεῖα ἐποίησε νοσούντας θεραπεύων, καὶ δαίμονας δι' ἐπιστολῶν φυγαδεύων. [c] Tertul. Apol. c. 23. Edatur hic aliquis sub Tribunalibus vestris, quem Dæmone agi constet. Jussus à quolibet Christiano loqui Spiritus ille, tam se Dæmonem confitebitur de vero, quam alibi Deum de falso. [d] Minuc. Octav. p. 83. Ipsos Dæmonas de semetipsis confiteri, quoties à nobis Tormentis verborum & Orationis incendiis de corporibus exiguntur. [e] Justin. Apol. 1. p. 45. [f] Iren. Lib. 2. c. 56. & 57. [g] Cypr. ad Donat. p. 4. [h] Arnob. cont. Gent. Lib. 1. [i] Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. c. 25. n. 17. [k] Tertul. de Spectac. c. 26. Theatrum adiit, & inde cum Dæmonio rediit. Itaque in Exorcismo cum oneraretur immundus Spiritus, quod ausus esset fidelem aggredi: Constanter & Justissime quidem (inquit) feci, in meo enim inveni.

Exor-

Exorciſm for preſuming to make ſuch an Attempt upon a Believer: To which the Spirit replied, that he had a Right to her, becauſe he found her upon his own Ground. This Exorciſm, I ſay, Bona ſuppoſes to be performed by ſome Presbyter of the Church endowed with that Miraculous Gift. And the like may be ſaid of thoſe Exorciſts in Cyprian [l], who caſt out Devils by a Divine Power: And of thoſe alſo who are mentioned by Firmilian [m], as Perſons inſpired by Divine Grace to diſcern evil Spirits and detect them: As one of them did a Woman of Cappadocia, who pretended to be inſpired, and to work Miracles, and to Baptize, and Conſecrate the Euchariſt by Divine Direction. Theſe Exorciſms were plainly Miraculous, and prove nothing more than that ſome Perſons had ſuch a Gift, who probably were ſome eminent Presbyters of the Church: At leaſt they do not prove that Exorciſts were as yet become any diſtinct Order among the Clergy in the Church.

SECT. III.
In what ſenſe every Man his own Exorciſt.

SOME think the Order was as old as Tertullian, becauſe Ulpian, the great Lawyer, who lived in Tertullian's Time, in one of his Books [n] ſpeaks of Exorcizing, as a thing uſed by Impoſtors, by whom probably he means the Chriſtians. Gothofred thinks he means the Jewiſh Exorciſts, who were commonly Impoſtors indeed: But admitting that he means Chriſtians; (which is more probable, conſidering what Lactantius [o] ſays of him, That he publiſhed a Collection of the Penal Laws that had been made againſt them) yet it proves no more than what every one owns, That Exorciſing was a thing then commonly known and practiſed among the Chriſtians. Others urge the Authority of Tertullian himſelf in his Book de Corona Militis, where yet he is ſo far from owning any particular Order of Exorciſts, that he rather ſeems to make every Man his own Exorciſt. For there among other Arguments, which he urges to diſſuade Chriſtians from the Military Life under Heathen Emperors, he makes uſe of this [p], That they would be put to guard the Idol-Temples, and then they muſt defend thoſe Devils by Night, whom they had put to flight by Day by their Exorciſms; by which he means their Prayers, as Junius rightly underſtands him. And ſo in another place diſſuading Chriſtians from ſelling ſuch things as would contribute toward upholding of Idolatry, or the Worſhip of Devils, he argues thus, That otherwiſe the Devils would be their Alumni; that is, might be ſaid to be foſtered and maintained by them, ſo long as they furniſhed out Materials to carry on their Service: And with what Confidence, ſays he [q], can any Man Exorciſe his own Alumni, thoſe Devils, whoſe Service he makes his own Houſe an Armoury to maintain? Vicecomes [r] and Bona [s] by miſtake underſtood this as ſpoken of Exorciſm before Baptiſm, taking the word Alumni to ſignify the Catechumens of the Church: Whereas indeed it ſignifies Devils in this place, who are ſo called by Tertullian in reſpect of thoſe who contribute to uphold their Worſhip: For ſuch Men are a ſort of Foſter-Fathers to them. So that this Paſſage, when rightly underſtood, makes nothing for the Antiquity of Exorciſts, as a peculiar Order of the Clergy, but only ſhews in what Senſe every Chriſtian is to be his own Exorciſt, viz. By his Prayers, reſiſting the Devil, that he may fly from him.

SECT. IV.
Exorciſts conſtituted into an Order in the latter end of the third Century.

SETTING aſide then both that Extraordinary Power of Exorciſing, which was Miraculous, and this Ordinary way alſo, in which every Man was his own Exorciſt: It remains to be enquired, when the Order of the Exorciſts was firſt ſettled in the Church. And here I take Bona's Opinion to be the trueſt, That it came in upon the withdrawing [t] of that Extraordinary and Miraculous Power; which probably was by Degrees, and not at the ſame time in all Places. Cornelius [u] who lived in the third Century, reckons Exorciſts among the Inferior Orders of the Church of Rome: Yet the Author of the Conſtitutions, who lived after him, ſays [x] it was no certain Order, but God beſtowed the Gift of Exorcizing as a free Grace upon whom he pleaſed: And therefore conſonant to that Hypotheſis, there is no Rule among thoſe Conſtitutions for giving any Ordination to Exorciſts, as being appointed by God only, and not by the Church. But the Credit of the Conſtitutions is not to be relied upon in this Matter: For it is certain by this time Exorciſts were ſettled as an Order in moſt parts of the Greek Church as well as the Latin: Which is evident from the Council of Antioch, an. 341, in one of whoſe Canons [y] leave is given to the Chorepiſcopi to promote Subdeacons, Readers, and Exorciſts; which argues, that thoſe were then all ſtanding Orders of the Church. After this Exorciſts are frequently mentioned among the Inferior Orders by the Writers of the fourth Century, as in the Council [z] of Laodicea, Epiphanius [a], Paulinus [b], Sulpicius Severus [c], and the Reſcripts of Theodosius [d], and Gratian [e] in the Theodosian Code, where those Emperors grant them the same Immunity from Civil Offices, as they do to the other Orders of the Clergy.

[l] Cypr. Ep. 76. al. 69. ad Magnum, p. 187. Quod hodie etiam geritur, ut per Exorciſtas, voce humana & poteſtate divina, flagelletur, & uratur, & torqueatur Diabolus. [m] Firmil. Ep. 75. ap. Cypr. p. 223. Unus de Exorciſtis — inſpiratus Dei gratia fortiter reſtitit, & eſſe illum nequiſſimum Spiritum, qui prius Sanctus putabatur, oſtendit. [n] Ulpian. Lib. 8. de Tribunal. in Digeſt. Lib. 50. Tit. 13. Leg. 1. Si incantavit, ſi imprecatus eſt, ſi (ut vulgari verbo Impoſtorum utar) exorciſavit. [o] Lact. Inſtit. Lib. 5. c. 11. [p] Tertul. de Coron. Milit. c. 11. Quos interdiu Exorciſmis fugavit, noctibus defenſabit.

[q] Tertul. de Idol. c. 11. Qua conſtantia exorcizabit Alumnos ſuos, quibus domum ſuam Cellariam præſtat? [r] Vicecom. de Ritib. Bapt. Lib. 2. c. 29. p. 362. [s] Bona Rer. Liturg. Lib. 1. c. 25. n. 17. [t] Bona ibid. Poſtea ſubtracta hac Poteſtate, conſtituit Eccleſia Ordinem, qui Dæmonia expelleret. [u] ap. Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [x] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 26. [y] Conc. Antioch. c. 10. [z] Conc. Laodic. c. 24. & 26. [a] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [b] Paulin. Natal. 4. S. Felicis. [c] Sulpic. Vit. S. Martin. c. 4.

SECT. V. Their Ordination and Office.

THEIR Ordination and Office is thus described by the 4th Council of Carthage [f]: When an Exorcist is ordained, he shall receive at the hands of the Bishop a Book, wherein the Forms of Exorcizing are written, the Bishop saying: Receive thou these and commit them to Memory, and have thou Power to lay hands upon the Energumens, whether they be Baptized or only Catechumens. These Forms were certain Prayers, together with Adjurations in the Name of Christ, commanding the unclean Spirit to depart out of the possessed Person: Which may be collected from the Words of Paulinus concerning the Promotion of St. Felix to this Office, where he says [g], from a Reader he arose to that Degree, whose Office was to Adjure evil Spirits, and to drive them out by certain Holy Words. It does not appear that they were ordained to this Office by any Imposition of hands either in the Greek or Latin Church: But yet no one might pretend to exercise it either Publickly or Privately, in the Church or in any House, without the Appointment of the Bishop, as the Council of Laodicea [h] directs; or at least the License of a Chorepiscopus, who in that Case was authorized [i] by the Bishop's Deputation.

SECT. VI. A short Account of the Energumens, their Names, and Station in the Church.

AS to the Energumens, for whose sake this Office was appointed, they were so called from the Greek word ἐνεργέμβροι, which in its largest Signification denotes Persons who are under the Motion and Operation of any Spirit, whether Good or Bad; but in a more restrained Sense it is used by Ecclesiastical Writers for Persons whose Bodies are seized or possessed with an Evil Spirit. Upon which Account they are otherwise called δαιμονιζόμβροι, Dæmoniacks, and κατεχόμενοι, Possessed. And because this was frequently attended with great Commotions and Vexations and Disturbances of the Body, occasioning sometimes Phrenzy and Madness, sometimes Epileptick Fits, and other violent Tossings and Contorsions; such Persons are often upon that account stiled χειμαζόμενοι, by the Greek, and Hyemantes by the Latin Writers, that is, Tossed as in a Winter-Storm or Tempest. Thus the Author of the Constitutions in some places [k] stiles them simply χειμαζόμενοι, by which that he means the Energumens is evident, because in another place [l] he stiles them χειμαζόμενοι ὑπὸ τῆ ἀλλοτρίᾳ, such as were under the Commotions and Vexations of Satan; and tells us that Prayer was made for them under that Character, in the Oblation at the Altar for all States and Conditions of Men, that God would deliver them from that violent Energy or Agitation of the Wicked one. And thus most Learned Men, except Albaspinæus, understand that Phrase in the Canon of the Council of Ancyra [m], which orders some certain Notorious Sinners, εἰς τὸν χειμαζομένων εὔχεσθαι, to Pray in Loco Hyemantium, in that part of the Church where the Dæmoniacks stood, which was a Place separate from all the rest. And some also think [n] the Name, κλυδωνιζόμενοι, was given to the Energumens upon the same Account, because it signifies Persons agitated by a Spirit, as a Wave in a Tempest.

SECT. VII. The Exorcists chiefly concern'd in the Care of them.

NOW these Energumens, or Dæmoniacks, or whatever other Name they were called by, were the Persons about whom the Exorcists were chiefly concerned. For besides the Prayers which were offered for them in all Publick Assemblies, by the Deacons and Bishops, and the whole Congregation (some Forms of which Prayers may be seen in the Author [o] of the Constitutions) the Exorcists were obliged to Pray over them at other Times [p] when there was no Assembly in the Church; And to keep them employed in some innocent Business, as in sweeping [q] the Church and the like, to prevent more violent Agitations of Satan, lest Idleness should tempt the Tempter; And to see them provided of daily [r] Food and Sustenance, while they abode in the Church, which it seems was the chief place of their Residence and Habitation.

SECT. VIII. The Duty of Exorcists in reference to the Catechumens.

THIS was the Exorcist's Office in reference to the Energumens; to which Valesius [s] and Gothofred [t] add another Office, viz. That of Exorcizing the Catechumens before Baptism. Which is a matter that will admit of some Dispute. For it does not appear always to have been the Exorcist's Office, save only in one of these two Cases: Either first when a Catechumen was also an Energumen, which was a Case that very often happened:

[d] Cod. Theod. Lib. 12. Tit. 1. de Decurion. Leg. 121. [e] Ibid. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. Leg. 24. [f] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 7. Exorcista quum ordinatur, accipiat de manu Episcopi Libellum, in quo scripti sunt Exorcismi, dicente sibi Episcopo: Accipe & commenda memoriæ, & habeto potestatem imponendi manus super Energumenum, sive Baptizatum, sive Catechumenum. [g] Paulin. Natal. 4. Felic. Primis lector servivit in annis, Inde gradum cepit, cui munus voce fideli Adjurare malos, & sacris pellere verbis. [h] Conc. Laod. c. 26. [i] Concil. Antioch. c. 10. [k] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 35. & 37. [l] Constit. lib. 8. c. 12. παρακαλῶμέν σε ὑπὲρ τῶν χειμαζομένων ὑπὸ τῆ ἀλλοτρίᾳ —— ὅπως καθαρίσῃς ἐκ τῆ ἐνεργείας τῆ πονηρῆ. [m] Conc. Ancyr. c. 17. [n] Vid. Dodwel. Dissert. 1. in Cypr. n. 17. [o] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 6. & 7. [p] Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 90. Omni die Exorcistæ Energumenis manus imponant. [q] Ibid. c. 91. Pavimenta Domorum Dei Energumeni verrant. [r] Ibid. c. 92. Energumenis in Domo Dei assidentibus victus quotidianus per Exorcistas opportuno tempore ministretur. [s] Vales. Not. in Eusеb. de Martyr. Palæstin. c. 2. [t] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 24.

And

And then he was to be committed to the Care of the Exorciſts, whoſe Office was to Exorciſe all Energumens, whether they were Baptized, or only Catechumens, as is evident from the Canon already alledged Sect. 5. out of the Council of Carthage. Or ſecondly it might happen that the Exorciſt was only made the Catechiſt, and in that caſe there can be no Queſtion but that his Office was as well to Exorcize, as to inſtruct the Catechumens. But then the Catechiſt's Office was many times ſeparate from that of the Exorciſt's: (though ſome Modern Writers confound them together:) ſometimes a Presbyter, or a Deacon, or a Reader was the Catechiſt: And in that caſe it ſeems more probable that the Exorciſm of the Catechumens was performed by the Catechiſt, than by the Exorciſt; And for that reaſon I ſhall treat of the Office of Catechiſt diſtinctly in its proper Place.

CHAP. V.

Of Lectors or Readers.

SECT. I. The Order of Readers not inſtituted till the 3d Century.

IT is the Opinion now of moſt Learned Men, even in the Romiſh Church, that there was no ſuch Order as that of Readers diſtinct from others for at leaſt two Ages in the Primitive Church. Bona owns [a] it to be one of the four Orders, which he thinks only of Eccleſiaſtical Inſtitution. And Cotelerius [b] ſays there is no mention made of it before the time of Tertullian, who is the firſt Author that ſpeaks of it as a ſtanding Order in the Church. For writing againſt the Hereticks [c], he objects to them, that their Orders were Deſultory and Inconſtant: A Man was a Deacon among them one day, and a Reader the next. Which implies, that it was otherwiſe in the Church, and that Readers then were as much a ſettled Order as Deacons, or any other. Cyprian, who lived not long after Tertullian, frequently ſpeaks of them as an Order of the Clergy. In one [d] place he ſays he had made one Saturus a Reader; and in another place he mentions one Aurelius, a Confeſſor, whom he had ordained a Reader for his ſingular Merits, and Conſtancy in time of Perſecution [e]: And for the ſame Reaſon he made Celerinus, another Confeſſor, one of the ſame Order [f] among the Clergy. So that it was then reckoned not only a Clerical Office, but an honourable Office, to be a Reader in the Church, and ſuch a one as a Confeſſor needed not to be aſhamed of. Sometimes Perſons of the greateſt Dignity were ordained to this Office, as Julian is ſaid to have been in the Church of Nicomedia [g] while he profeſſed himſelf a Chriſtian. Sozomen [h] ſays expreſly, that both he and his Brother Gallus were reckoned among the Clergy, and read the Scriptures publickly to the People. And there is no Writer of that Age, but always ſpeaks of Readers as a diſtinct Order of the Clergy in the Church.

SECT. II. By whom the Scriptures were read in the Church before the Inſtitution of that Order.

BUT ſince the Order of Readers, though frequently ſpoken of in the 3d and 4th Ages, are never once mentioned in the two Firſt, it will be proper to enquire, By whom the Scriptures were Read in the Church for thoſe two Centuries? Mr. Baſnage [i] is of Opinion, that the Chriſtian Church at firſt followed the Example of the Jewiſh Church, and in this matter took her Model from the Synagogue; where, as he obſerves out of Dr. Lightfoot [k], the Cuſtom was on every Sabbath-day to have Seven Readers, firſt a Prieſt, then a Levite, and after them Five Iſraelites, ſuch as the Miniſter of the Congregation, (whom they called the Biſhop or Inſpector and Angel of the Church) thought fit to call forth and nominate for that purpoſe: He thinks it was much after the ſame manner in the Chriſtian Church; The Office was not perpetually aſſigned to any particular Man, but chiefly performed by Presbyters and Deacons, yet ſo as that any other might do it by the Biſhop's Appointment. But indeed the matter is involved in ſo great Obſcurity, that no certain Conjecture can be made from the Writings of the two firſt Ages; but all that we can argue is from the ſeeming Remains of the ancient Cuſtoms in the following Ages. For ſince we find that Deacons in many Churches continued to read the Goſpel, even after the Order of Readers was ſet up; as I have had occaſion to ſhew [kk] in another place from the Author [l] of the Conſtitutions, and St. Jerom [m], and the Council [n] of Vaiſon; We may thence reaſonably conclude, that this was part of their Office before: And ſince Presbyters and Biſhops in other Churches did the ſame, as Sozomen [o] informs us; it may as rationally be inferr'd, that this was their Cuſtom in former Ages. But whether Laymen performed this Office at any time by the Biſhop's particular Direction, as the Iſraelites did in the Jewiſh Church, cannot be ſo certainly determined; Only we find that in after-Ages in the moſt celebrated Church of Alexandria, even the Catechumens as well as Believers [p] were admitted to do the Office of Readers: And that may incline a Man to think that this Office was not wholly confined to the Clergy in the two firſt Ages. But this being peculiar to the Church of Alexandria, nothing can be argued from it concerning the Practice of the Univerſal Church: and therefore till ſome better Light is afforded, I leave this matter undetermined.

[a] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 17. [b] Coteler. Not. in Conſtitut. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 25. [c] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 41. Hodie Diaconus, qui cras Lector. [d] Cypr. Ep. 24. al. 29. Feciſſe me ſciatis Lectorem Saturum. [e] Id. Ep. 33. al. 38. Merebatur Aurelius Clericæ Ordinationis ulteriores gradus —— Sed interim placuit ut ab Officio Lectionis incipiat, &c. [f] Id. Ep. 34. al. 39. Referimus ad vos, Celerinum —— Clero noſtro non humana ſuffragatione, ſed Divina Dignatione conjunctum, &c. [g] Socrat. lib. 3. c. 1. Nazian. Invectiv. 1. T. 1. p. 58. [h] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 2. ὡς καὶ κλήρῳ ἐγκαταλεγῆναι, καὶ ὑπαναγινώσκειν τῷ λαῷ τὰς ἐκκλησιαστικὰς βίβλους. [i] Baſnag. Exercit. in Baron. p. 623. [k] Lightfoot Harm. p. 479. [kk] Book 2. Chap. 20. Sect. 6. [l] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. [m] Hieron. Ep. 57. ad Sabin. [n] Conc. Vaſenſ. 2. c. 2.

fice

SECT. III. The Manner of Ordaining Readers.

IT is more certain that after the Order of Readers was ſet up, it was generally computed among the Orders of the Clergy; except perhaps at Alexandria, where that ſingular Cuſtom prevailed of putting Catechumens into the Office: For it can hardly be ſuppoſed, that they reckoned Perſons that were Unbaptized, and not yet allowed to partake of the Holy Myſteries, into the Number of their Clergy. But in all other Places it was reputed a Clerical Order, and Perſons deputed to the Office were ordained to it with the uſual Solemnities and Ceremonies of the other Inferior Orders. In the Greek Church Habertus [q] thinks they were ordained with Impoſition of Hands, but among the Latins without it. The Author of the Conſtitutions preſcribes a Form of Prayer to be uſed with Impoſition of Hands; but whether that was the Practice of all the Greek Church, is very much queſtioned. In the Latin Church it was certainly otherwiſe. The Council of Carthage [r] ſpeaks of no other Ceremony, but the Biſhop's putting the Bible into his Hands in the Preſence of the People, with theſe Words: Take this Book, and be thou a Reader of the Word of God, which Office if thou fulfil Faithfully and Profitably, thou ſhalt have Part with thoſe that Miniſter in the Word of God. And in Cyprian's time they ſeem not to have had ſo much as this Ceremony of delivering the Bible to them, but they were made Readers by the Biſhop's Commiſſion and Deputation only to ſuch a Station in the Church.

SECT. IV. Their Station and Office in the Church.

THIS was the Pulpitum, or Tribunal Eccleſiæ, as it is commonly called in Cyprian, The Reading-Desk in the Body of the Church, which was diſtinguiſhed from the Bema or Tribunal of the Sanctuary. For the Reader's Office was not to Read the Scriptures at the Altar, but in the Reading-Desk only. Whence, ſuper Pulpitum imponi, & ad Pulpitum venire, are Phraſes in Cyprian [s] to denote the Ordination of a Reader. In this Place, in Cyprian's time, they read the Goſpels, as well as other parts of Scripture; Which is clear from one of Cyprian's [t] Epiſtles, where ſpeaking of Celerinus the Confeſſor, whom he had ordained a Reader, he ſays, It was fitting he ſhould be advanced to the Pulpit or Tribunal of the Church, that having the advantage of an higher Station, he might thence read the Precepts and Goſpels of his Lord, which he himſelf as a couragious Confeſſor had followed and obſerved. Albaſpinæus [u] ſays, they alſo read the Epiſtles and Goſpels in the Communion-Service: But he ſhould firſt have proved, that thoſe were anciently any part of the Communion-Service: For they do not appear to have been ſo from the moſt ancient Liturgies, but were only Read in the Miſſa-Catechumenorum, or as we now call it, The firſt Service, at which the Catechumens were preſent. And whereſoever they were taken into the Communion-Service, it was the Office of Deacons, and not the Readers, to rehearſe them. But of this more when we come to the Liturgy and Service of the ancient Church.

SECT. V. The Age at which they might be Ordained.

THERE is but one thing more to be noted concerning this Order, which is the Age at which Readers might be Ordained. That is fixt by one of Juſtinian's Novels [x], preciſely forbidding any one to be ordained Reader before he was compleatly Eighteen years Old. But before this Law was made it was cuſtomary to ordain them much younger: For Ennodius Biſhop of Ticinum ſays of Epiphanius his Predeceſſor [y] that he was ordained Reader at Eight years Old: As Cæſarius Arelatenſis [z] is ſaid to have been at Seven. And this leads us to underſtand what Sidonius Apollinaris means, when ſpeaking of John Biſhop of Chalons, he ſays, he was a Reader [a] from his Infancy. Which is alſo ſaid of St. Felix by [b] Paulinus, that he ſerved in the Office of a Reader from his tender Years. So Victor Uticenſis deſcribing the Barba-[o] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 19. [p] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 22. ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ ἀναγνῶσαι καὶ ὑποδολεῖς διδάσκουσι, εἴτε κατηχούμενοι εἰσὶν, εἴτε πιστοί. [q] Habert. Archieratic. Par. 4. Obſ. 1. p. 41. [r] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 8. Lector cum ordinatur, faciat de illo verbum Epiſcopus ad Plebem, indicans ejus Fidem, Vitam, & Ingenium. Poſt hæc ſpectante Plebe tradat ei Codicem, de quo lecturus eſt, dicens, Accipe & eſto Lector Verbi Dei, habiturus, ſi fideliter & utiliter impleveris Officium, partem cum eis qui Verbum Dei miniſtraverunt. [s] Cypr. Ep. 38. & 39. ed. Oxon. [t] Cypr. Ep. 35. al. 39. Quid aliud quam ſuper Pulpitum, id eſt, ſuper Tribunal Eccleſiæ oportebat imponi, ut loci altioris celſitate ſubnixus —— legat Præcepta & Evangelia Domini, quæ fortiter ac fideliter ſequitur? [u] Albaſpin. Not. in Concil. Carthag. 3. can. 4. [x] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 54. [y] Ennod. Vit. Epiphan. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 15. p. 295. Annorum ferme octo Lectoris Eccleſiaſtici ſuſcipit officium. [z] Vit. Cæſar. ap. Sur. 27. Aug. Clero adſcriptum inter ipſa Infantiæ rudimenta, poſt exactum ætatis ſeptennium. [a] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 25. Lector hic primum, ſic Miniſter Altaris, idque ab Infantia. [b] Paulin. Natal. 4. Felic. Primis Lector ſervivit in annis.

rity

rity of the Vandalick Perſecution in Africk, he aggravates their Cruelty with this Circumſtance, that they had Murdered or Famiſhed all the Clergy of Carthage, Five Hundred or more, among whom [c] there were many Infant-Readers. Now the Reaſon why Perſons were Ordained ſo young to this Office, was what I have intimated before, That Parents ſometimes Dedicated their Children to the Service of God from their Infancy, and then they were trained up and diſciplined in ſome Inferior Offices, that they might be qualified and rendered more Expert for the greater Service of the Church.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Oſtiarii or Door-keepers.

SECT. I. No mention of this Order till the 3d or 4th Century.

THIS is the laſt of thoſe Five Orders, which are pretended by the Preſent Church of Rome to be of Apoſtolical Inſtitution: But for three whole Centuries, we never ſo much as meet with the Name of it in any ancient Writer, except in the Epiſtle of Cornelius [a] Biſhop of Rome, where the πυλωροὶ or Door-keepers are mention'd with the reſt. In Cyprian and Tertullian there is no mention of them: The firſt and loweſt Order with them is that of Readers, as it is now in the Greek Church, among whom the Order of Door-keepers has been laid aſide from the time of the Council of Trullo, an. 692, as Schelſtrate [b] ſcruples not to confeſs; though he blames Morinus for being a little too Frank and Liberal in extending this Conceſſion to the Apoſtolical Ages; and in order to confute him alledges the Authority of Ignatius and Clemens Romanus [c] for the Antiquity of this Order. But he refers us only to ſpurious Treatiſes under their Names, not known till the 4th Century, about which Time 'tis owned this Order began to be ſpoken of by ſome few Greek Writers. For Epiphanius [d] and the Council of Laodicea [e] put the Θυρωροὶ, that is, Door-keepers, among the other Orders of the Clergy. And Juſtinian alſo in one of his Novels [f] ſpeaks of them as ſettled in the great Church of Conſtantinople, where he limits their Number to One Hundred, for the uſe of that and three other Churches. This proves that they were ſettled in ſome parts of the Greek Church, though as Habertus [g] obſerves, they continued not many Ages, nor ever univerſally obtained an Eſtabliſhment in all Churches.

SECT. II. The manner of their Ordination in the Latin Church.

WHAT ſort of Ordination they had in the Greek Church we do not find: For there is no Author that ſpeaks of it. In the Latin Church it was no more but the Biſhop's Commiſſion, with the Ceremony of Delivering the Keys of the Church into their Hands, and ſaying, Behave thy ſelf as one that muſt give an Account to God of the things that are kept locked under theſe Keys; as the Form is [h] in the 4th Council of Carthage, and the Ordo Romanus [i], and Gratian [k] who have it from that Council.

SECT. III. Their Office and Function.

THEIR Office is commonly ſaid to conſiſt in taking care of the Doors of the Church in Time of Divine Service, and in making a Diſtinction betwixt the Faithful and the Catechumens, and Excommunicated Perſons, and ſuch others as were to be excluded from the Church. But I confeſs this is more than can be made out from ancient Hiſtory, or leaſt in reference to the State and Diſcipline of many Churches. For in the African Church particularly, as I ſhall have occaſion to ſhew in another Place, a Liberty was given not only to Catechumens and Penitents, but alſo to Hereticks, Jews, and Heathens, to come to the firſt Part of the Church's Service, call'd the Miſſa Catechumenorum, that is, to hear the Scripture Read, and the Homily or Sermon that was made upon it: becauſe theſe were inſtructive, and might be Means of their Converſion, ſo that there was no need of making any Diſtinction here. Then as to the other part of the Service, called Miſſa Fidelium, or the Communion-Service, the Diſtinction that was made in that, was done by the Deacons or Subdeacons, and Deaconeſſes, as I have ſhewed before in ſpeaking of thoſe Orders. So that all that the Door-keepers could have to do in this matter was only to open and ſhut the Doors as Officers and Servants under the other, and to be governed wholly by their Direction. It belonged to them likewiſe to give Notice of the Times of Prayer and Church-Aſſemblies; which in time of Perſecution required a Private Signal for fear of Diſcovery: And that perhaps was the firſt Reaſon of inſtituting this Order in the Church of Rome, whoſe Example by Degrees was followed by other Churches. However it be, their Office and Station ſeems to have been little more than that of Clerks and Sextons in our Modern Churches.

[c] Victor. de Perſec. Vandal. lib. 3. Bibl. Patr. T. 7. p. 613. Fere quingenti vel amplius, inter quos quamplurimi erant Lectores Infantuli, &c. [a] Ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. [b] Schelſtrat. Conc. Antioch. Diſſert. 4. c. 17. p. 520. [c] Ignat. Ep. ad Antioch. & Clement. Conſtit. lib. 3. c. 11. [d] Epiph. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [e] Conc. Laodic. c. 24. [f] Juſt. Novel. 3. c. 1. Inſuper centum exiſtentibus iis, qui vocantur Oſtiarii. [g] Habert. Archieratic. Par. 5. Obſ. 1. p. 47. [h] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 9. Oſtiarius cum ordinatur —— ad ſuggeſtionem Archidiaconi tradat ei Epiſcopus claves Eccleſiæ, dicens, Sic age quaſi redditurus Deo rationem de his rebus quæ his clavibus recluduntur. [i] Ordo Roman. Part. 2. p. 98. [k] Grat. Diſt. 23. c. 19.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Pſalmiſtæ or Singers.

SECT. I. The Singers a Diſtinct Order from Readers in the ancient Church.

I Have hitherto given an Account of thoſe Five Inferior Orders, which the Church of Rome has ſingled out from the reſt, and without any Reaſon ſtampt them with the Authority and Character of Apoſtolical Inſtitution; whilſt yet ſhe takes no Notice of ſome others, which have as good Pretence to Antiquity, and to be ſtiled diſtinct Clerical Orders, as moſt of the former. Among theſe I reckon the Pſalmiſtæ, the Copiatæ, and the Parabolani of the Primitive Church. Habertus [a] and Bellarmin [b] and others, who are concerned to maintain the Credit of the Romiſh Church in making but Five Inferior Orders, pretend that Singers and Readers are only one and the ſame Order. But as the Canoniſts of their own Church generally reckon them Two, ſo nothing can be more evident than that they were always accounted ſo in the Primitive Church from their firſt Inſtitution. For they are diſtinguiſhed as much as any other Orders, by all the Writers that mention them, as the Reader that is curious in this Matter, may ſaitsfy himſelf by conſulting the Places of Ephrem Syrus [c], the Council of [d] Laodicea, and thoſe call'd the Apoſtolical Canons [e], and Conſtitutions [f], the Author [g] of St. Mark's Liturgy, the Epiſtle under the Name [h] of Ignatius, Juſtinian [i], and the Council of Trullo [k], referred to in the Margin. Particularly Juſtinian's Novel does ſo diſtinguiſh them, as to inform us that there were Twenty Five Singers, and One Hundred and Ten Readers in the Greek Church of Conſtantinople. Which is a convincing Evidence that they were of different Orders.

SECT. II. Their Inſtitution and Office.

THE firſt Riſe and Inſtitution of theſe Singers, as an Order of the Clergy, ſeems to have been about the beginning of the 4th Century. For the Council of Laodicea is the firſt that mentions them, unleſs any one thinks perhaps the Apoſtolical Canons to be a little more ancient. The Reaſon of Inſtituting them ſeems to have been to Regulate and Encourage the ancient Pſalmody of the Church. For from the firſt and Apoſtolical Age Singing was always a Part of Divine Service, in which the whole Body of the Church joined together: Which is a thing ſo evident, that though Cabaſſutius [l] denies it, and in his ſpite to the Reformed Churches, where it is generally practiſed, calls it only a Proteſtant-Whim; yet Cardinal Bona has more than once [m] not only confeſſed, but ſolidly proved it to have been the Primitive Practice. Of which therefore I ſhall ſay no more at preſent, but only obſerve, that it was the Decay of this that firſt brought the Order of Singers into the Church. For when it was found by Experience, that the Negligence and Unskilfulneſs of the People rendered them unfit to perform this Service without ſome more Curious and Skilful to guide and aſſiſt them; then a peculiar Order of Men were appointed, and ſet over this Buſineſs, with a Deſign to retrieve and improve the ancient Pſalmody, and not to aboliſh or deſtroy it. And from this Time theſe were called κανονικοὶ ψαλταὶ, The Canonical Singers, that is, ſuch as were entered into the Canon or Catalogue of the Clergy, which diſtinguiſhed them from the Body of the Church. In ſome Places it was thought fit for ſome time to prohibit all others from Singing but only theſe; with deſign, no doubt, to reſtore the Conſent of the ancient Eccleſiaſtical Harmony, which otherwiſe could not well have been done, but by obliging the reſt for ſome time to be Silent, and learn of thoſe who were more Skilful in the Art of Muſick. Thus I underſtand that Canon of the Council [n] of Laodicea, which forbids all others to Sing in the Church, except only the Canonical Singers, who went up into the Ambo or Singing-Desk, and Sung out of a Book. This was a Temporary Proviſion, deſigned only to reſtore and revive the ancient Pſalmody, by reducing it to its Primitive Harmony and Perfection. That which the rather inclines me to put this Senſe upon the Canon, and look upon it only as a Prohibition for a time, is, that in after-Ages we find the People enjoyed their ancient Privilege of Singing all together; which is frequently mentioned by St. Auſtin, Ambroſe, Chryſoſtom, Baſil, and many others, who give an Account of the Pſalmody and Service of the Church in their own Ages, of which I ſhall ſpeak more hereafter in its proper Place.

[a] Habert. Archierat. Par. 4. Obſ. 4. p. 44. [b] Bellarm. de Clericis lib. 1. c. 11. [c] Ephrem. 93 Serm. de ſecundo Dom. Advent. [d] Conc. Laodic. can. 24. [e] Can. Apoſt. c. 69. & 43. [f] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 3. c. 11. [g] Liturg. Marci. Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. T. 2. p. 35. [h] Epiſt. ad Antiochen. [i] Juſtin. Novel. 3. c. 1. [k] Concil. Trull. c. 4. [l] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 38. p. 201. [m] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. cap. 25. n. 19. It. de Divin. Pſalmod. c. 17. [n] Conc. Laodic. c. 15. μὴ δεῖν πλέον τοὺς κανονικοὺς ψαλτῶν τοὺς ἐπὶ τὸ Ἄμβωνα ἀναβαινόντας καὶ ἐκ διφθέρας ψαλλόντας, ἑτέρους τινὰς ψάλλειν ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ.

of

SECT. III. Why called ὑποδιακόνοι.

HERE I muſt Note that theſe Canonical Singers were alſo called ὑποδιάκονοι, Monitors, or Suggeſtors, from their Office, which was to be a ſort of Præcentors to the People: For the Cuſtom in ſome Places was for the Singers or Pſalmiſt to begin a Pſalm or Hymn, and ſing half a Verſe by himſelf, and then the People anſwered in the latter Clauſe; And from this they were ſaid ὑπηχεῖν, or Succinere, to ſing after him, by way of Antiphona or Reſponſal. In this Senſe Epiphanius Scholaſticus underſtands the Name ὑποδιάκονοι in Socrates [o], for he Tranſlates it, Pſalmi Pronunciatores: And ſo both Valeſius [p], and Cotelerius [q], explain it. But Habertus is of the contrary mind: He thinks [r] the Name, ὑποδιάκονοι, denotes not Singers but Readers; And that they were ſo called, becauſe they ſuggeſted to the Preachers a Portion of Scripture to diſcourſe upon: For then their Homilies were frequently upon ſuch Parts of Scripture, as the Reader had juſt before repeated. The Controverſy is nice betwixt theſe Learned Men, and I ſhall no farther enquire into the Merits of it, but leave it to every Judicious Reader to determine.

SECT. IV. What ſort of Ordination they had.

THERE is but one thing more that needs be Noted, concerning this Order, which is the Manner of their Deſignation to this Office: Which in this agreed with all the other Inferior Orders, that it required no Impoſition of Hands, or Solemn Conſecration: But in one thing it differed from them; That whereas the reſt were uſually conferred by the Biſhop or a Chorepiſcopus, this might be conferred by a Presbyter, uſing this Form of Words, as it is in the Canon of the 4th Council [s] of Carthage: See that thou believe in thy Heart what thou Singeſt with thy Mouth, and approve in thy Works what thou believeſt in thy Heart. And this is all the Ceremony we find any where uſed about their Deſignation.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Copiatæ or Foſſarii.

SECT. I. The Copiatæ or Foſſarii reckoned among the Clerici of the Primitive Church.

ANOTHER Order of the Inferior Clergy in the Primitive Church were thoſe, whoſe Buſineſs was to take care of Funerals, and provide for the decent Interment of the Dead. Theſe in ancient Writers are commonly termed Copiatæ, which is the Name that Conſtantine gives them in two Reſcripts [a] in the Theodoſian Code. Epiphanius ſpeaks of them [b] under the ſame Name, ſtiling them Κοπιάτ), and the Author [c] under the Name of Ignatius, Κοπιῶντες. Gothofred [d] deduces it from the Greek word κοπάζειν, which ſignifies Reſting; Others from κοπετὸς, Mourning; but generally the Name is thought to be given them from κόπος and κοπιᾶσθαι, which ſignifies Labouring; whence they are by ſome called Laborantes. The Author under the Name of St. Jerom [e] ſtiles them Foſſarii, from Digging of Graves: And in Juſtinian's Novels [f] they are called Lecticarii, from carrying the Corps or Bier at Funerals. Gothofred thinks it improper to reckon theſe among the Clerici [g] of the ancient Church: But when we are ſpeaking of Things and Cuſtoms of the ancient Church, I know not how we ſhall ſpeak more properly than in the Language of the Ancients, who themſelves call them ſo. For not only the Author [h] under the Name of St. Jerom, calls them the Firſt Order of the Clerici, as they are in his Account: but St. Jerom himſelf alſo gives them the ſame Title, ſpeaking of one that was to be interred: The Clerici, ſays he, whoſe Office [i] it was, wound up the Body, digged the Earth, builded a Vault, and ſo according to Cuſtom made ready the Grave. This is the Reaſon why Epiphanius [k] and the Counterfeit Ignatius reckon them among the Inferior Orders. And Gothofred had no need to make Emendations upon thoſe Imperial [l] Laws in the Theodoſian Code, which give the Copiatæ the Name of Clerici, and entitle them to ſome Immunities and Privileges upon that Account: For this, as appears, was only to ſpeak in the [o] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 22. [p] Valeſ. in Socrat. ibid. [q] Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 3. c. 57. [r] Habert. Archierat. par. 4. obſ. 1. p. 39. [s] Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 10. Pſalmiſta, id eſt, Cantor poteſt abſque Scientia Epiſcopi, ſola juſſione Presbyteri, Officium ſuſcipere cantandi, dicente ſibi Presbytero: Vide ut quod ore cantas, corde credas: & quod corde credis, operibus comprobes. [a] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 1. de Luſtrali Collat. leg. 1. It. lib. 16. t. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 15. [b] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [c] Epiſt. ad Antioch. n. 12. [d] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 1. leg. 1. [e] Hieron. de 7 Ordin. Eccleſ. t. 4. p. 81. [f] Juſtin. Novel. 43. & 59. [g] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 15. [h] De 7 Ordin. Eccleſ. Primus in Clericis Foſſariorum Ordo eſt, &c. [i] Hieron. Ep. ad Innocent. de Muliere ſepties icta. T. 1. p. 235. Clerici, quibus id Officii erat, cruentum linteo Cadaver abvolvunt, & foſſam humum lapidibus conſtruentes, ex more tumulum parant. [k] Epiphan. & Ignat. ubi ſupra. [l] Cod. Th. lib. 7. tit. 20. de Veteranis leg. 12. Dum ſe quidam Vocabulo Clericorum, & infauſtis defunctorum obſequiis occupatos — defendunt, &c. Ibid. lib. 13. tit. 1. de Luſtrali Collat. leg. 1. Clericos excipi tantum, qui Copiatæ appellantur, &c. Ibid. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 15. Clerici vero, vel hi quos Copiatas recens uſus inſtituit nuncupari, &c.

Language

Language and Stile of other Eccleſiaſtical Writers.

SECT. II. Firſt inſtituted in the Time of Conſtantine.

THIS Order ſeems to have been firſt Inſtituted in the Time of Conſtantine: For Conſtantius his Son, in one of thoſe Laws juſt now referr'd to, ſpeaks of it as a late Inſtitution; and there is no Writer of the three firſt Ages that ever mentions it, but all that time the Care of Interring the Dead was only a Charitable Office, which every Chriſtian thought himſelf obliged to perform as occaſion required. And that is the Reaſon why we meet with ſo many noble Encomiums of this ſort of Charity in the Writers of thoſe Ages, but never once mention of any Order Inſtituted for that Purpoſe. But when Conſtantine came to the Throne, and was quietly ſettled in his new Seat at Conſtantinople, he incorporated a Body of Men to the Number of Eleven Hundred in that City, under the Name of Copiatæ, for that particular Service: And ſo they continued to the time of Honorius and Theodoſius Junior, who reduced them [m] to Nine Hundred and Fifty: But Anaſtatius augmented them again to the firſt number, which Juſtinian confirmed by two Novels [n] publiſhed for that purpoſe. And I ſuppoſe from this Example of the Conſtantinopolitan Church they took their Riſe in other Populous Churches.

SECT. III. Why called Decani and Collegiati.

BUT probably there might be ſome little difference between thoſe in the Church of Conſtantinople, and others in the leſſer Churches. For at Conſtantinople they were Incorporated into a ſort of Civil Society, in the Roman Language called, Collegium, a College, whence the Law ſometimes called them Collegiati, and Decani, Collegiates, and Deans. As in the forementioned Laws of Honorius and Theodoſius Junior, and Juſtinian, and another of Theodoſius the Great [o] in the Juſtinian Code, where he grants them an Exemption from ſome other Civil Offices, provided they did not act upon a feigned and pretended Title, but were really Employed in the Service of the Church. But why they were called Decani, is not very eaſy to conjecture. Probably it might be, becauſe they reſembled the Palatine Deans, who were a ſort of Military Officers belonging to the Emperor's Palace, and are ſtiled alſo Corpus Decanorum in both the Codes [p] mentioned by St. Chryſoſtom [q] and other Greek Writers under the Name of δεκανοὶ ἐν τοῖς βασιλείοις, Deans of the Palace, to diſtinguiſh them from thoſe other Deans of the Church, which ſome unwarily confounded together. But I am not very confident that this was the Reaſon of the Name, and therefore I only propoſe it as a Conjecture, till ſome one aſſigns a better Reaſon for it.

SECT. IV. Their Office and Privileges.

THEIR Office was to take the whole Care of Funerals upon themſelves, and to ſee that all Perſons had a Decent and Honourable Interment. Eſpecially they were obliged to perform this laſt Office to the Poorer ſort, without Exacting any thing of their Relations upon that Account. That it was ſo at Conſtantinople, appears from one of Juſtinian's [r] Novels, which acquaints us how Anaſtaſius the Emperor ſettled certain Revenues of Land upon this Society, and ordered a certain Number of Shops or Work-houſes in the City to be freed from all manner of Tribute, and to be Appropriated to this Uſe; out of whoſe Income and Annual Rents of the Lands, the Defenſors and Stewards of the Church, who had the chief Care and Overſight of the matter, were to pay theſe Deans, and ſee the Expences of ſuch Funerals defrayed. Juſtinian not only confirmed that Settlement; but a Complaint being made of an Abuſe, that notwithſtanding the Laws of Anaſtaſius, Pay was Exacted for Funerals, he publiſhed that his Novel on purpoſe to correct it. But we do not find that ſuch Settlements were made in all other Churches, but it is more probable that the Copiatæ were maintained partly out of the common Stock of the Church, and partly out of their own Labour and Traffick, which for their Encouragement was generally exempted from paying Cuſtom or Tribute, as we ſhall ſee hereafter.

[m] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. tit. 2. de SS. Eccleſ. leg. 4. Non plures quam Nongenti Quinquaginta Decani depurentur Eccleſiæ, &c. [n] Juſtin. Novel. 43, & 59. [o] Cod. Juſt. 11. tit. 17. de Collegiatis leg. unica. Qui ſub prætextu Decanorum ſeu Collegiatorum, cum id munus non impleant, aliis ſe muneribus connatur ſubtrahere, eorum fraudibus credimus eſſe obviandum. [p] Vid. Cod. Theod. lib. 6. tit. 33. de Decanis. leg. 1. It. Cod. Juſt. lib. 12. tit. 27. leg. 1. & 2. [q] Chryſ. Hom. 13. in Hebr. p. 1849. [r] Juſtin. Novel. 59.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

Of the PARABOLANI.

SECT. I. The Parabolani reckoned by ſome among the Clerici.

ANOTHER Order of Men, which by ſome are reckoned among the Clerici of the ancient Church, were thoſe whom they called Parabolani. Theodoſius Junior, in one of his Laws relating to them in the Theodoſian Code [a] puts them among the Clerici, and evidently includes them under that common Title, as Gothofred rightly obſerves in his Expoſition of the Place. Baronius himſelf does not deny that they were of the Clergy, but he would perſuade his Reader that they were not a Diſtinct Order, but choſen out of the Inferior Orders of the Clergy [b], of which there is nothing ſaid in that Law, but rather the contrary, that they were to be choſen out of the Poor of Alexandria.

SECT. II. Their Inſtitution and Office.

THEIR Office is deſcribed in the next Law, where they are ſaid to be deputed to attend upon the Sick, and to take care of their Bodies in time of their Weakneſs. [c] At Alexandria they were Incorporated into a Society to the number of Five or Six Hundred, to be choſen at the Diſcretion of the Biſhop of the Place, out of any ſort of Men except the Honorati and Curiales, who were tied to ſerve in the Civil Offices of their Country, and therefore were not allowed to enter themſelves into any Eccleſiaſtical Service. They were to be under the Government and Direction of the Biſhop, as appears from the ſame Law, which is a Correction of the former Law; for by it they were put under the Government of the Præfectus Auguſtalis, (as the chief Civil Magiſtrate was called at Alexandria); but by this Law Theodoſius revoked his former Decree, and ſubjected them entirely to the Care and Diſpoſition of the Biſhop; or, as the Greek Collector of the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions out of the Civil Law [d] ſtiles him, The Pope; meaning, not the Pope of Rome, as ſome ignorantly miſtake, but the Pope or Biſhop of Alexandria. For then it was Cuſtomary to give every Biſhop the Name of Papa, as has been ſhewed in another Place [dd]. What time this Order began, we cannot certainly determine: The firſt notice we have of it is in theſe Laws of Theodoſius Junior, An. 415. Yet it is not there ſpoken of as newly Inſtituted, but as ſettled in the Church before. And probably it might be inſtituted about the ſame Time as the Copiatæ were under Conſtantine, when ſome charitable Offices, which were only Voluntarily practiſed by Chriſtians before, as every ones Piety inclined him, were now turned into ſtanding Offices, and ſettled upon a certain Order of Men particularly devoted to ſuch Services. That it was not any Order peculiar to the Church of Alexandria, is evident, becauſe there is mention made of the Parabalani being at Epheſus in the Time of the 2d Council that was held there, An. 449. For Baſilius Seleucienſis, who ſubſcribed there to the Condemnation of Flavian, and the Abſolution of Eutyches the Heretick, being brought to a Recantation in the Council of Chalcedon, makes this Apology for himſelf, that he was terrified into that Subſcription, by the Soldiers that came armed into the Church, together with Barſumas and his Monks, and the [e] Parabalani, and a great Multitude of others. The Original Word is παραβαλανεῖς, which the old Tranſlater rightly renders Parabalani, which is the ſame with Parabolani, for it is written both ways in ancient Authors: But Binius in his Greek Edition of the Councils, not underſtanding the Word, explains it, ii qui circa Balnea verſantur, as if the Parabalani had been Perſons attending at the Publick Baths; whereas now all Men know their Office was of a different Nature, and their Names given them for a Reaſon very different from that of giving Attendance at the Baths.

SECT. III. The Reaſon of the Name Parabolani.

AS to the Reaſon of their Name, to omit the fanciful Interpretations of Alciat and Accurſius, which are ſufficiently expoſed by Gothofred, the Opinion of Duarenus [f] and Gothofred ſeems to be the trueſt, that they were called Parabolani from their undertaking παράβολον ἔργον, a moſt dangerous and hazardous Office, in attending the Sick, eſpecially in Infectious and Peſtilential Diſeaſes. The Greeks were uſed to call thoſe παράβολοι who hired themſelves out to fight with wild Beaſts in the Ampitheatre. And ſo Socrates the Hiſtorian [g] uſes the Word, ſpeaking of Theodoſius his exhibiting one of the Publick Games to the People at Conſtantinople, he ſays, The People cried out to him that he ſhould ſuffer one of the bold παράβολοι to fight with the wild Beaſts. Theſe were thoſe whom the Romans called Beſtiarii, and ſometimes Para-

[a] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 42. Placet noſtræ Clementiæ, ut nihil commune Clerici cum Publicis Actibus vel ad Curiam pertinentibus habeant. Gothofr. Not. in Loc. Sane Clericorum eos numero fuiſſe, tum hujus Legis initium, tum utraque hæc Lex & ſequens oſtendunt. [b] Baron. an. 416. Tom. 4. p. 400. Fuiſſe hos minoris Ordinis Clericos allectos, exordium dati hoc anno Reſcripti inſinuare videtur. [c] Cod. Th. Ibid. Leg. 43. Parabalani qui ad curanda debilium ægra corpora deputantur, quingentos eſſe ante præcepimus: ſed quia hos minus ſufficere in præſenti cognovimus, pro quingentis Sexcentos conſtitui præcipimus, &c. [d] Collect. Conſtit. Eccleſ. lib. 1. tit. 3. c. 18. [dd] Book 2. Chap. 2. Sect. 7. [e] Concil. Chalced. Act. 1. Tom. 4. p. 252. [f] Duaren. de Miniſt. & Benefic. lib. 1. c. 19. [g] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 22. ὁ δῆμος κατεβόα, δεινῷ θηρίῳ ἕνα τῶν ἐνόχων παραβόλων μάχεσθαι.

boli and Parabolarii, from the Greek Word παραβάλλεσθαι, which ſignifies expoſing a Man's Life to Danger, as they that fought with wild Beaſts did. In this Senſe I have had occaſion to ſhew [gg] before, the Chriſtians were generally called Parabolarii by the Heathens, becauſe they were ſo ready to expoſe their Lives to Martyrdom. And it is the Opinion of Gothofred [b] and ſome other [i] Learned Criticks, that the ancient Reading of the Greek Copies of St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Philippians, Chap. 2. ver. 30, was παραβολευσάμενος τῇ ψυχῇ, expoſing his Life to Danger, as an old Latin Interpreter of Puteanus's renders it, Parabolatus de anima ſua. In the ſame Senſe theſe Parabolani of the Primitive Church we are now ſpeaking of, had their Name from their bold expoſing of their Lives to danger in Attendance upon the Sick in all Infectious and Peſtilential Diſtempers.

SECT. IV. Some Laws and Rules concerning their Behaviour.

I ſhall only obſerve farther of them, that being commonly, according to their Name, Men of a bold and daring Spirit, they were ready upon all Occaſions to ingage in any Quarrel that ſhould happen in Church or State: As they ſeem to have done in the Diſpute between Cyril the Biſhop, and Oreſtes the Governour of Alexandria: Which was the Reaſon why Theodoſius by his firſt Law ſunk their Number to five hundred, and put them under the Inſpection of the Præfectus Auguſtalis, and ſtrictly prohibited them from appearing at any Publick Shews, or in the Common Council of the City, or in the Judges Court, unleſs any of them had a Cauſe of his own, or of the whole Body, as their Syndick, to proſecute there; and then he muſt appear ſingly without any of his Order or Aſſociates to abett him. And though he not long after revoked this Law as to the former Part, allowing them to be ſix hundred, and the Biſhop to have the Choice and Cognizance of them; yet in all other Reſpects he ordered it to ſtand in its full Force, ſtill prohibiting them to appear in a Body upon any of the foreſaid [k] Occaſions: And Juſtinian made this Law perpetual by inſerting it into his own Code. Which ſhews that the Civil Government always looked upon theſe Parabolani as a formidable Body of Men, and accordingly kept a watchful Eye and ſtrict Hand over them: That whilſt they were ſerving the Church, they might not do any Diſſervice to the State, but keep within the Bounds of that Office whereto they were appointed.

CHAP. X.

Of the CATECHISTS.

SECT. I. Catechiſts no Diſtinct Order of the Clergy, but choſen out of any other Order.

I Have hitherto diſcourſed of ſuch particular Orders of the Eccleſiaſticks in the Primitive Church, as were deſtinated preciſely to ſome particular Office and Function: But there were ſome Offices which did not require a Man to be of any diſtinct Order, but might be performed by Perſons of any Order; and it will be neceſſary I ſhould give ſome Account of theſe alſo, whilſt I am treating of the Clergy of the Church. The firſt of theſe I ſhall ſpeak of is the Catechiſt, whoſe Office it was to inſtruct the Catechumens in the firſt Principles of Religion, and thereby prepare them for the Reception of Baptiſm. This Office was ſometimes done by the Biſhop himſelf, as is evident from that Paſſage in St. Ambroſe, where he ſays [a] upon a certain Lord's Day after the reading the Scriptures and the Sermon, when the Catechumens were diſmiſſed, he took the Competentes, or Candidates for Baptiſm, into the Baptiſtery of the Church, and there rehearſed the Creed to them. This was on Palm-Sunday, when it was cuſtomary for the Biſhop himſelf to Catechize ſuch of the Catechumens, as were to be Baptized on Eaſter-Eve. Theodorus Lector [b] takes notice of the ſame Cuſtom in the Eaſtern Churches, when he tells us, that before the Time of Timothy Biſhop of Conſtantinople the Nicene Creed was never uſed to be repeated Publickly in that Church, except only once a Year, on the great Day of Preparation, the Day of our Lord's Paſſion, when the Biſhop was wont to Catechize. At other times Preſbyters and Deacons were the Catechiſts. St. Chryſoſtom perform'd this Office when he was Presbyter of Antioch, as appears from one of his Homilies [c], which is inſcribed, Κατήχησις πρὸς τοὺς μέλλοντας φωτίζεσθαι, A Catechiſm or Inſtruction for the Candidates of Baptiſm. Deogratias was Catechiſt when he was Deacon of Carthage, as we learn from St. Auſtin's Book [d] de [gg] Book 1. Chap. 2. Sect. 9. [b] Gothofr. Not. in Cod. Th. 16. 2. 42. [i] Vid. Grot. Hammond. Capel. in Philip. 2. 30. [k] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 18. Hi ſexcenti Viri reverendiſſimi Sacerdotis Præceptis ac Diſpoſitionibus obſecundent: Reliquis, quæ dudum latæ Legis forma complectitur ſuper his Parabolanis, vel de Spectaculis, vel de Judiciis, cæteriſque (ſicut jam ſtatutum eſt) cuſtodiendis. [a] Ambroſ. Ep. 33. Poſt Lectiones atque Tractatum, dimiſſis Catechumenis, ſymbolum aliquibus Competentibus in Baptiſteriis tradebam Baſilicæ. [b] Theodor. Lector. Collectan. lib. 2. p. 563. τὸ σύμβολον ἄχρι τῆς ἕτους λεγόμενον πέμπτειν ἐν τῇ ἁγίᾳ παρασκευῇ τῶν θείων παθῶν, τῷ καιρῷ τῶν γινομένων ὑπὸ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου κατηχήσεων. [c] Chryſ. Hom. 21. ad Popul. Antiochen. [d] Aug. de Catechizand. Rudibus. c. 1. t. 4. p. 295. Dixiſti quod ſæpe apud Carthaginem, ubi Diaconus es, ad te adducantur, qui fidæ Chriſtiana imbuendi ſunt, &c.

Catechi-

Catechizandis Rudibus, which he wrote at his Requeſt, to give him ſome Aſſiſtance in performing his Duty.

SECT. II. Readers ſometimes made Catechiſts.

NOR was it only the Superior Orders that performed this Office, but ſometimes Perſons were choſen out of the Inferior Orders to do it. Optatus was but a Reader in the Church of Carthage, and yet Cyprian made him Catechiſt, or as it is in his Phraſe [e], The Doctor Audientium, The Maſter of the Hearers, or loweſt Rank of Catechumens. Origen ſeems to have had no higher Degree in the Church when he was firſt made Catechiſt at Alexandria. For both Euſebius [f] and St. Jerom [g] ſay, He was but Eighteen years Old when he was deputed to that Office; which was at leaſt ſeven Years before he could be Ordained Deacon by the Canons of the Church.

SECT. III. Why called ναυτολόγοι by ſome Greek Writers.

THE Author under the Name of Clemens Romanus ſeems to have had regard to this, when comparing the Church to a Ship, and the Clergy to the Officers in it, he plainly diſtinguiſhes the Catechiſts from the Biſhop, Preſbyters and Deacons, ſaying, The Biſhop [h] is to reſemble the κυβερνήτης or Pilot; The Presbyters the ναῦται, or Mariners; The Deacons the τοίχαρχοι, or Chief Rowers; The Catechiſts, the ναυτολόγοι, or thoſe whoſe Office it was to admit Paſſengers into the Ship, and contract with them for the Fare of their Paſſage. This was properly the Catechiſt's Duty, to ſhew the Catechumens the Contract they were to make, and the Conditions they were to perform, viz. Repentance, Faith, and New Obedience, in order to their Admittance into the Chriſtian Ship, the Church, in which they were to paſs through this World to the Kingdom of Heaven. Upon this account the Catechiſts were termed ναυτολόγοι, and as ſuch diſtinguiſhed from Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons. Cotelerius [i] ſays he found a Greek Manuſcript in one of the French King's Libraries, where the ſame Compariſon is made, and cited out of the Conſtitutions, in theſe Words: The Church is like a Ship; Chriſt is the Governour; The Biſhop, the Pilot; The Presbyters, the Mariners; The Deacons, the Chief Rowers; The Catechiſts, or Nautologi, the Orders of Subdeacons and Readers. So that it is evident the Catechiſts were ſometimes choſen out of the Inferior Orders, when any of them were found duly qualified to diſcharge the Duties of that Function. And this will be the leſs wondered at by any one that conſiders, that the Deaconneſſes, whilſt their Order was in being, were required to be a ſort of Private Catechiſts to the more Ignorant and Ruſtick Women-Catechumen: Which I need not ſtand to evidence here, becauſe I have done it heretofore in ſpeaking of the Offices which belonged to that Order. See Book 2. Chap. 22. Sect. 9.

SECT. IV. Whether all Catechiſts taught publickly in the Church.

BUT in all theſe Caſes there is one thing to be diligently Noted, That this ſort of Catechiſts were not allowed to inſtruct their Catechumens publickly in the Church, but only in Private Auditories appointed particularly for that Purpoſe. Valeſius [k] obſerves this in the Caſe of Origen, and rightly concludes it from the Invective of Demetrius Biſhop of Alexandria againſt Alexander Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and Theoctiſtus Biſhop of Cæſarea, who had authorized Origen to preach publickly in the Church, when as yet he was no Presbyter. This Accuſation had been ridiculous, had he himſelf given Origen the ſame Power before, when he was Catechiſt at eighteen Years of Age at Alexandria. Ruffin indeed in his Tranſlation of Euſebius ſays poſitively that Demetrius gave him Authority to Catechize and Teach publickly in the Church [l]. But that is an Interpolation and falſe Paraphraſe of Euſebius his Words, who ſays no ſuch thing, but only [m] that Demetrius Biſhop of the Church had committed to his Care the Office of Catechizing, or as we may render it, the Catechetick School, where probably for ſome time he alſo taught Grammar and other human Learning. That there were ſuch ſort of Catechetick Schools adjoyning to the Church in many Places, is evident from a Novel [n] of the Emperor Leo, who calls them κατηχούμενα, and ſays they were a ſort of Buildings belonging to the Church. It might be the Baptiſtery, as St. Ambroſe calls it, or any other Places ſet apart for that Purpoſe.

SECT. V. Of the Succeſſion in the Catechetick School at Alexandria.

SUCH a School as this we may ſuppoſe that to have been, wherein Origen and ſo many other famous Men read Catechetick Lectures at Alexandria. Euſebius ſays Pantænus taught [o] in this School An. 181, and that it was a School of ſacred Learning from ancient Cuſtom long before, and that it continued ſo to be to his own Time. St. Jerom deduces its Original from St. Mark the firſt Founder of the Church of Alexandria, telling us, [e] Cypr. Ep. 24. al. 29. Optatum inter Lectores Doctorem Audientium conſtituimus. [f] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 3. [g] Hieron. de Scriptor. in Origine. Decimo octavo ætatis ſuæ anno κατηχήσεων opus aggreſſus, &c. [h] Clem. Ep. ad Jacob. n. 14. [i] Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. p. 263. ἔοικεν ἡ ἐκκλησία νηὶ ὁ μὲν γυβερνήτης ἐστὶν ὁ χειστὸς. ὁ δὲ πρωρεὺς, ὁ ἐπίσκοπος· οἱ ναῦται, οἱ πρεσβύτεροι, οἱ τοιχάρχοι, οἱ διάκονοι, οἱ ναυτολόγοι, τὸ τῶν ἀναγνωστῶν καὶ ὑπηρετῶν τάγμα. [k] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 19. It. Hallier. de Hierarch. Eccleſ. lib. 1. c. 7. p. 66. [l] Ruffin. lib. 6. c. 3. Demetrius —— Catechizandi ei, id eſt, docendi Magiſterium in Eccleſia tribuit. [m] Euſeb. Lib. 6. c. 3. αὐτῷ μονῷ τὸ τῶν κατηχεῖν διατετεῦχθαι ὑπὸ Δημητρίου τοῦ τῆς ἐκκλησίας προεστῶτος ἐπιτετραμμένης. [n] Leo Novel. 73. In Eccleſiarum Cœnaculis, quæ promiſcuum vulgus κατηχούμενα vocare ſolet. Vid. Concil. Trull. c. 97. & Balſamon & Zonar. in Loc. [o] Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 10. ἡγεῖτο τηνικαῦτα τῶν θείων αὐτοδιδακτείας Πάνταινος· ἀρχαίαν ἔθος διδασκαλεῖα τῶν ἱερῶν λόγων παρ' αὐτοῖς σωζόμενον· ὃ καὶ εἰς ἡμᾶς παρατείνει, that Pantænus [p] taught Christian Philosophy at Alexandria, where it had been the Custom of old always to have Ecclesiastical Doctors from the Time of St. Mark. Where by Ecclesiastical Doctors he does not mean the Bishop and Presbyters of the Church (which were originally in all Churches as well as Alexandria) but the Doctors of Christian Philosophy in the Catechetick School, whereof there had been a Succession from the first Foundation of the Church. And the Succession was continued for some Ages after: For Clemens [q] Alexandrinus succeeded Pantænus; and Origen [r], Clemens; Heraclas [s], Origen; and Dionysius [t], Heraclas. After whom some [u] add Athenodorus, Malchion, Athanasius and Didymus. And the Author of the Greek Synodicon published by Pappus, says [w] Arius taught in the same School before he broached his Heresy. It were easy to recount many other such Schools at Rome, Cæsarea, Antioch, &c. but I shall have another Occasion to speak of these, when I come to consider the Encouragement that Christian Emperors gave to Schools of Learning and the Professors of Liberal Arts and Sciences: What has here been suggested upon this Head, may suffice at present to shew what was the Office of the Catechist, and what the Use of Catechetical Schools in the Church.

that

CHAP. XI.

Of the Ecclesiecdici and Defensores, or Syndicks of the Church.

SECT. I. Five sorts of Defensores noted, two whereof only belonged to the Church.

ANOTHER Office which will deserve to be spoken of in this Place, because it was sometimes, though not always, managed by the Hands of the Clergy, is that of the Defensores. For the understanding of which it will be necessary in the first Place to distinguish between the Civil and Ecclesiastical Defensors. For Gothofred thinks there were in all, four sorts of them, viz. The Defensores Senatus, Defensores Urbium, Defensores Ecclesiarum, and Defensores Pauperum. But he might have added one more which Ulpian [a] calls Defensores Rerum publicarum, whose Office was to be a sort of Proctors or Syndicks in managing of the publick Causes of that Corporation or Company of Tradesmen to which they belonged: Which sort of Defensors were first instituted by Alexander Severus, as Lampridius [b] tells us in his Life. The Defensores Civitatum, or as they are otherwise called, Defensores Plebis, were a sort of Tribunes of the People, one of their chief Offices being to defend the poor Plebeians against the Insults and Oppressions of the great and wealthy Citizens. Now in Imitation of these, I presume, the Ecclesiastical Defensors were instituted, as both their Name and Office seems plainly to imply.

SECT. II. Of the Defensores Pauperum.

THE Defensors of the Poor had much the same Employment in the Church, as the Defensores Plebis had in the State: For if any of the Poor, or Virgins, or Widows belonging to the Church, were injured or oppressed by the Rich, it was the Business of these Defensors, as their Proctors or Advocates, to see them righted, and to sollicit the Magistrate that they might have Justice done them. This is evident from the Decree made in the 5th Council of Carthage, An. 401, which is also inserted into the African Code, and is to this purpose: That [c] forasmuch as the Church was incessantly wearied with the Complaints and Afflictions of the Poor, it was unanimously agreed upon by them in Council, that the Emperors should be petitioned to allow Defensors to be chosen for them by the Procurement and Approbation of the Bishops, that they might defend them from the Power and Tyranny of the Rich.

SECT. III. Of the Defensores Ecclesiæ, their Office and Function.

As to the other sort of Defensors, called Defensores Ecclesiæ, (whom I speak of separately, because Gothofred makes a Distinction between them, though others take them to be the same) their Office did as plainly resemble that of the other sort of Civil Defensors, called Defensores Rerum publicarum. For as those were the Proctors and Syndicks of their respective Companies, to manage the publick Concerns of their Societies at Law upon all emergent Occasions: So these did the same for the Church, whose Syndicks they were, being employed to sollicit the Cause of the Church, or any single Ecclesiastick, when they were injured or oppressed, and had Occasion for Redress in a Civil Court; or if they were not remedied there, they were to address the Emperors themselves in the Name of the Church, to procure a particular Precept in her Favour. Thus Possi-

[p] Hieron. de Scriptor. c. 36. Pantænus Stoicæ sectæ Philosophus, juxta quandam Veterum in Alexandria consuetudinem, ubi à Marco Evangelista semper Ecclesiastici fuere Doctores—— Docuit sub Severo Principe, &c. [q] Euseb. lib. 6. c. 6. [r] Id. lib. 6. c. 19. [s] Hieron. de Scriptor. in Origine. Euseb. lib. 6. c. 26. [t] Euseb. lib. 6. c. 29. [u] Hospin. de Templis, lib. 3. c. 5. [w] Synodicon Concil. Tom. 2. p. 1494. [a] Digest. lib. 49. tit. 4. leg. 1. [b] Lamprid. vit. Alexand. Corpora omnium constituit, Vinariorum, Lupinariorum, Caligariorum, & omnino omnium artium: hisque ex sese Defensores dedit. [c] Conc. Carth. 5. c. 9. Ab Imperatoribus universis visum est postulandum, propter afflictionem pauperum, quorum molestiis sine intermissione fatigatur Ecclesia, ut Defensores eis, adversus potentias divitum, cum Episcoporum provisione delegentur. Vid. Cod. Eccles. Afr. Can. 75.

dius

dius [d] tells us in the Life of St. Auſtin, That when the Circumcellions in their mad Zeal had plundered and ſlain ſome of the Catholick Clergy, the Defenſor of the Church proſecuted them at Law for the Fact, that the Peace of the Church might no more be diſturbed or impeded. In like manner we read in the 1ſt Council [e] of Carthage, that it being a thing againſt the Imperial Laws for any Layman to impoſe a ſecular Office upon a Clergyman; if any ſuch Injury was offered to the Church, 'tis ſaid, the Affront might be redreſſed, if the Defenſors of the Church did not fail in their Duty. Which plainly implies, that it was the Buſineſs of the Defenſors to ſee the Rights of the Church that were ſettled upon her by Law, truly maintained; and if any Encroachments were made upon them, they were to proſecute the Aggreſſors and Invaders before the Magiſtrates, and execute the Sentence which they gave in Favour of the Church. It is farther obſervable from a Law of Arcadius and Honorius, recited in the next Paragraph, that in caſe of Neceſſity they were likewiſe to make Application to the Emperors, and bring their Mandate to the Inferior Judges, when they could not otherwiſe have Juſtice done them. By a Canon of the Council of Chalcedon Defenſors are alſo empowered to admoniſh ſuch Monks and Clerks as reſorted to the Royal City Conſtantinople, without any Licenſe or Commiſſion from their Biſhop; and if after Admonition they continued ſtill to loiter there, the ſame Defenſors were to expel them [f] thence by Force, and cauſe them to return to their own Habitation. It appears alſo from Juſtinian's Laws [g], that the Defenſors together with the Oeconomi were made a ſort of Superintendents over the Copiatæ, or great Body of Deans, whoſe Buſineſs was to attend at Funerals, as has been ſhewed before: The Defenſors were charged with the Care of theſe, both in reference to their Revenues and Perſons. They were likewiſe to make Enquiry, whether every Clerk belonging to the Church, carefully attended the Celebration of Morning and Evening Service in the Church, and to inform the Biſhop of ſuch as neglected, that they might be proceeded againſt [h] with Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures. Theſe were the chief, if not the only Offices of the Defenſors in the Primitive Church: For as to any Spiritual Power or Juriſdiction over the Clergy, they had none: Nor were they as yet admitted to hear Criminal Cauſes, great or little, in the Biſhop's Name; but theſe things were devolv'd upon them in latter Ages, as Morinus [i] ſhews at large in a long Diſſertation upon this Subject, to which I refer the Inquiſitive Reader, concerning my ſelf to give ſuch an Account of the Defenſor's Office and Power, as I find it to have been in the Ages next after their Inſtitution.

SECT. IV. Of their Quality. Whether they were Clergy Men or Lay-Men?

THE next Enquiry muſt be into their Quality: Whether they were of the Clergy or Laity? For Learned Men are not agreed about this. Petavius [k] ſays they were always Lay-Men, but Morinus [l] and Gothofred [m] with much better Reaſon aſſert the contrary, that at firſt they were generally choſen out of the Clergy, till for ſome particular Reaſons it was thought moſt proper to have Advocates at Law to diſcharge this Office in the African Churches. This Change was made about the Year 407, when the African Fathers in the Council of Carthage [n] petitioned the Emperor Honorius, that he would give them leave to chuſe their Defenſors out of the Scholaſtici, or Advocates at Law, who were actually concerned in Pleading of Cauſes; that ſo they who took upon them the Defence of the Churches, might have the ſame Liberty as the Provincial Prieſts were uſed to have, to go upon neceſſary occaſion into the Judges Conſiſtory, or Council-Chamber behind the Veil, and there Suggeſt what they thought neceſſary to promote their own Cauſe, or obviate the Plots of their Adverſaries. In anſwer to this Petition Honorius ſhortly after publiſhed a Law, wherein he granted them Liberty to make uſe of ſuch Advocates for their Defenſors as they deſired: For he decreed [o], That whatever Privileges were ſpecially obtained of the Emperor, relating to the Church, ſhould be intimated to the Judges, and executed, non per Coronatos, not by Clergy-Men, as Gothofred rightly explains it, but by Advocates at Law. So that now it was no longer neceſſary that the Defenſors ſhould be of the Clergy, but the Office was frequently intruſted in the hands of Lay-Men. Which is farther evident from an Epiſtle of Pope Zoſimus, who lived about the ſame Time: For he ſays [p], The Defenſors of the Church were choſen out of the Laity, and might afterward, if they were deſerving, be ordained among the Clergy. Yet [d] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 12. De qua re, ne pacis Eccleſiæ amplius impediretur profectus, Defenſor Eccleſiæ inter Leges non ſiluit, &c. [e] Conc. Carthag. 1. c. 9. Ipſis non liceat Clericos noſtros eligere Apothecarios vel Ratiocinatores —— Quod ſi injuria Conſtitutionis Imperatoriæ Clericos inquitandos putaverint, ſi Defenſio Eccleſiaſtica nos non deridet, pudor publicus vindicabitur. [f] Conc. Chalced. c. 23. ἀκοινώνητος αὐτὸν διὰ τὸ αὐτὸν ἐκδίκως ἀκβάλλειν, καὶ τὸν ἴδιον καταλαμβάνειν τόπον. [g] Juſtin. Novel. 59. [h] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 42. n. 10. [i] Morin. de Ordinat. Eccleſ. Par. 3. Exercit. 16. c. 7. [k] Petav. Not. in Epiphan. Hær. 72. n. 10. [l] Morin. ibid. Exerc. 16. c. 6. n. 16. [m] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Theod. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 38. [n] Concil. African. vulgo dictum Can. 64. Placuit ut petant Legate à Glorioſiſſimis Imperatoribus, ut dent facultatem Defenſores conſtituendi Scholaſticos, qui in actu ſunt, vel in munere Defenſionis Cauſarum, ut more ſacerdotum Provinciæ, iidem ipſi qui Defenſionem Eccleſiarum ſuſceperint, habeant facultatem pro negotiis Eccleſiarum, quoties neceſſitas flagitaverit, vel ad obſiſtendum obrepentibus, vel ad neceſſaria ſuggerenda, ingredi Judicum Secretaria. Vid. Cod. Can. Afr. Gr. Lat. c. 97. & Concil. Milevitan. c. 16. to the ſame purpoſe. [o] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 38. Ut quæcunque de nobis ad Eccleſiam tantum pertinentia, ſpecialiter fuerint impetrata, non per Coronatos, ſed ab Advocatis, eorum arbitratu, & Judicibus innoteſcant, & ſortiantur Effectum, &c. [p] Zoſim. Ep. 1. c. 3. Defenſores Eccleſiæ, qui ex Laicis fiunt ſupradicta obſervatione teneantur, ſi meruerint eſſe in Ordine Clericatûs.

after this we find the Defensors in some places continued still to be of the Clergy. For Morinus shews, that in the first Session of the Council of Chalcedon there is frequent mention made of one John a Presbyter and [q] Defensor; As also in many Epistles of Gregory the Great the Defensors of the Roman Church are said to be of the Clergy: To which I shall add a Fragment of Theodorus Lector taken out of Damascen [r], which speaks of one John as both Deacon and Defensor of the Church of St. Stephen at Constantinople in the Time of Anastasius the Emperor, which was in the beginning of the 6th Century. From all which it is very evident against Petavius, that the Defensors were sometimes chosen out of the Clergy, and not always made of Advocates or Lay-Men.

SECT. V. The Ἔκδικοι and Ἐκκλησιέκδικοι among the Greeks the same with the Defensors of the Latin Church.

I must not omit to acquaint the Reader, that what the Latins call Defensores, the Greek Church commonly calls Ἔκδικοι and Ἐκκλησιέκδικοι, which signifie the same as Defensors; though Gothofred [s] without any just Reason makes a Difference between them: For not only their Offices and Powers are described to be the same, but also whenever the Greeks have any Occasion to speak of the Latin Defensors, they give them the Name of Ἔκδικοι, as may be seen either in the Code of the African [t] Church published by Justellus, or that which the Greeks commonly call the Council of Carthage, published by Ehinger [u], and Dr. Beverege [x] in the Pandects. But whether Πρῳσάτης be another Greek Name for a Defensor, is not so certain. The Word is only found once used by Epiphanius [y], who speaking of one Cyriacus, stiles him Κυριακὸς πρῳσάτης, which Petavius renders, Cyriacus Defensor. He seems indeed to have had some Office in the Church, because he is joined in the Subscription of a Letter with the Clergy, Presbyters, Deacons, Subdeacons, and Readers: but whether that be a sufficient Reason to make him a Defensor, I must leave the Judicious Reader to determine.

SECT. VI. Chancellors and Defensors not the same in the Primitive Church.

THERE is one thing more must be resolved before I dismiss this Subject; that is, whether Chancellors and Defensors were the same in the Primitive Church? In answer to which I say, it is very plain they were not: because the first Time we find any mention of the Office of Chancellors in the Church, they are expresly distinguished from the Ἔκδικοι or Defensors; And that is in the Novel of Heraclius made in the beginning of the 7th Century, where determining the Number of Ecclesiastical Officers that were to be allowed in the great Church of Constantinople, he says, there should be Two Syncelli, Twelve Chancellors [z], Ten Defensors, Twelve Referendaries, Forty Notaries, and Twelve Sceuophylaces, whereof Four to be Presbyters, Six Deacons, and Two Readers. It is not very easy to determine what the Office of these Chancellors was at that time; but it is very evident however from this that they were not the same with the Defensors. They who are acquainted with the Civil Law, know that the Cancellarii in the Civil Courts were not Judges, but Officers attending the Judge in an Inferior Station: Which appears evidently from a Title in both the Theodosian and Justinian [a] Code, De Adsessoribus & Domesticis & Cancellariis Judicum. Hottoman and Accursius take them for Actuaries or Notaries; but Gothofred in his Learned Notes [b] upon the Theodosian Code, proves at large out of Cassiodore and Agathias, that they were the Custodes Secretarii, the Guards of the Judge's Consistory, and called Cancellarii because they stood ad Cancellos, at the Rails or Barriers which separated the Secretum from the rest of the Court. So that their Office then was not to sit as Judges or Assessors, but only to attend the Judge, and keep Peace and good Order under him. And if this was the Condition of the Cancellarii in the State, it is probable they had some such Office in the Church in the Time of Heraclius, who first mentions them; but what that Office was I am not able to determine any farther, save only that it was not the same with that of the Defensors of the Church.

SECT. VII. Whether the Defensor's Office was the same with that of our Modern Chancellors?

IT may be asked then, Whether the Office of our Modern Chancellors has any Relation or Resemblance to that of Defensors in the ancient Church? There are some Learned Men, who make them altogether the same. Bishop Beverege derives the Authority of them both from the same Fountain. For he says [c] the Defensors heard and determined Causes in the Bishop's Name; and those not only that related to the Poor, who sought the Patronage of the Church; but also when Presbyters and Deacons had any Controversy with any other, whether of the Clergy or Laity, they might bring their Action before the πρωτέκδικος or Defensor. Whence he concludes, that Chancellors of later Ages are the very same Ecclesiastical Officials, as the Defensors of the Primitive Church. It were to be wished that that Learned Person had given us Ancient Records for that Power which he ascribes to the old Defensors: For then they would have looked more like Chancellors under [q] Concil. Chalced. Act. 1. [r] Vid. Damascen. Orat. 3. de Imagin. p. 799. & Fragment. Theodor. Lector. edit. à Vales. p. 583. Ἰωάννης διάκονος καὶ ἔκδικος τῆς ἁγίας οἴκου Στεφάνου &c. [s] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 38. [t] Cod. Can. Eccles. Afr. c. 75. & 97. [u] Concil. Carthag. Gr. ap. Ehinger. c. 76. & 99. [x] Conc. Carth. ap. Bevereg. c. 78. & 100. [y] Epiph. Hær. 72. Marcel. n. 10. [z] Heracl. Novel. 2. ap. Leunclav. Jus. Gr. Rom. Tom 1. p. 79. Καθιελαείας ἢ εἰς τὸ ἐκδίκους εἰς ι. [a] Cod. Th. lib. 1. tit. 12. Cod. Justin. lib. 1. tit. 51. [b] Gothofred Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 1. tit. 12. de Adsessorib. leg. 3. [c] Bevereg. Not. in Can. 23. Concil. Chalced.

another

another Name: But indeed the Authorities he alledges, are all Modern, ſuch as Papias's Gloſſary, and Balſamon's Meditata, and the Catalogues of Officials in the Church of Conſtantinople, which were written ſeveral Ages after the firſt Inſtitution of Defenſors, and in times when the Protecdicus among the Greeks was become an Officer of great Authority and Power. So that tho' the Power of Chancellors might be much the ſame as that of the ἔκδικοι among the Modern Greeks; yet that it was altogether the ſame with the ancient Defenſors, ſeems not hitherto to be ſolidly proved: Since the Buſineſs of the ancient Defenſors was not to do the Office of Judges, but of Advocates at Law, to defend the Rights of the Poor, and the Liberties of the Church, againſt all Aggreſſors and Invaders. But if any can ſhew from ancient Records, that the Defenſors had a larger Power, he will very much oblige the World with ſuch a Diſcovery: In the mean time the Reader will pardon me for not aſcribing to them greater Powers than I had Authority to do. The Matter is curious, and may exerciſe the Pens of Learned Men, and be the Subject of farther Diſquiſition and Enquiry.

CHAP. XII.

Of the OECONOMI.

SECT. I. The Oeconomi inſtituted in the 4th Century. The Reaſons of their Inſtitution.

IN the Writings of the 4th and 5th Centuries we frequently meet with an Officer in the Church, ſtiled by the Greeks [a] οἰκονόμος, and by the Latins [b] Oeconomus, or Præpoſitus Domus as it is in St. Auſtin [c]. His Office was to manage the Revenues of the whole Dioceſe under the Inſpection of the Biſhop. For anciently, as I have ſhewed elſewhere [cc], the whole Revenue of the Church was entruſted in the Hands of the Biſhop to be divided among the Clergy and Poor of the Church by his Direction and Appointment: And in managing this Affair he commonly made Uſe of his Arch-deacon, as a proper Aſſiſtant to eaſe himſelf of the great Burthen and Incumbrance of it. But upon the general Converſion of Heathens, and the conſequent Augmentation of every Dioceſe, and Church-Revenues, both the Biſhop and his Arch-deacon had Buſineſs enough of another Nature to take up the greateſt Part of their Time: And then it was found neceſſary to inſtitute Officers on purpoſe, and ſet them over this Affair, under the Name of Oeconomi, or Stewards of the Church. Morinus [d] thinks they were inſtituted to avoid Suſpicion; and in ſome Churches there is no queſtion but it was ſo: For in the remaining Fragments of the Council of Tyre, An. 448, which are inſerted into the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon [e], we find that Ibas Biſhop of Edeſſa being accuſed by ſome of his Clergy for Embezelling the Revenues of the Church, is obliged to promiſe, that for the future the Revenues ſhould be managed by Oeconomi, or Stewards, choſen out of the Clergy, after the Manner of the great Church of Antioch. And it is not improbable, but the like Accuſation being brought againſt Dioſcorus Biſhop of Alexandria in the Council of Chalcedon, was the Reaſon that moved that Council to make a general Decree in this Matter, That foraſmuch as they were informed, that in ſome Churches the Biſhops alone adminiſtred the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues without any Stewards, they now ordained, that every Church having a Biſhop, ſhould alſo have [f] a Steward of her own Clergy, to manage the Revenues of the Church by the Direction of the Biſhop: That ſo there might be Witneſſes of the right Adminiſtration of them; and by that means neither the Church's Goods be embezelled, nor any Scandal or Reproach brought upon the Prieſthood. But then I cannot think this was the Caſe of all Churches. For theſe Canons were made plainly againſt ſuch Biſhops as managed the Revenues of the Church, ἀμάρτυρον, as the Canon words it, without either Arch-deacon or Oeconomus to atteſt the Fidelity of their Management: But in ſuch Churches where Biſhops took the Aſſiſtance of their Arch-deacon, this could not be the Reaſon for ſetting up the Office of the Oeconomus, becauſe Suſpicion of Miſmanagement was provided againſt as well by the Teſtimony of an Arch-deacon, as any other Officer that could be appointed. And therefore I have aſſigned a more general, and as I take it, a truer Reaſon for the Inſtitution of this Office in the Church.

SECT. II. Always to be choſen out of the Clergy.

AND that which farther confirms my Opinion, is, That the Oeconomi, as well as the Arch-deacons, were always to be choſen out of the Clergy. For ſo thoſe Canons of the Councils of Tyre and Chalcedon already cited, plainly direct. And for any thing that appears to the contrary, this was the conſtant Practice of the [a] Vid. Conc. Chalced. c. 2. 25. 26. [b] Liberat. Breviar. c. 16. [c] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 24. [cc] Book 2. Chap. 4. Sect. 6. [d] Morin. de Ordinat. Eccl. Par. 3. Exerc. 16. c. 5. n. 3. [e] Concil. Chalced. Act. 9. [f] Conc. Chalced. c. 26. ἔδοξεν πᾶσαν ἐκκλησίαν ὁπόσκοπον ἔχουσαν, καὶ οἰκονόμον ἔχειν ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ κλήρῳ. —— ὥστε μὴ ἀμάρτυρον εἶναι τὴν οἰκονομίαν τῆς ἐκκλησίας, &c.

Church. We find in the Acts of the Council of Ephesus [g], which are inserted also into the Council of Chalcedon, one Charisius stiled both Presbyter and Oeconomus of the Church of Philadelphia. And Liberatus [h] speaks of one John, who was Oeconomus of Alexandria, and Presbyter of Tabennesus, a Region belonging to Alexandria. Possidius tells us in the Life of St. Austin [i], that he always made one of his Clergy the Præpositus Domus, as he calls him, whose Office was to take Care of the Church-Revenues, and give an Account of what he received and expended, when it was demanded of him. And to the same purpose Socrates [k] says of Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria, that having advanced two Monks to the Honour of the Clergy, he made them the Oeconomi of the Church. So that it was both the Rule and Practice of the Church to take the Oeconomi out of some of the Clergy, and we never meet with any Instance or Order to the contrary. Which argues plainly, that the true Reason for devolving this Office upon them, which formerly belonged to the Arch-deacons, was no other than that because of a Multiplicity of Business the Arch-deacons now could not so well attend it.

SECT. III. Their Office to take care of the Revenues of the Church, especially in the Vacancy of the Bishoprick.

WHAT the Office it self was, appears from what has already been said: To which I shall only add one thing: That by the Authority of the Council of Chalcedon [l] the Oeconomus was to continue in his Office during the Vacancy of the Bishoprick, and to look after the Income of the Church, that it might be preserved safe for the succeeding Bishop. Which Canon some not improbably think was designed to prevent Delays in filling of vacant Sees; that no Metropolitan, or Interventor, under whose care the vacant Church was, might lie under any Temptation to defer the Election of a new Bishop, in hopes of enriching himself from the Revenues of the Church; but whether this was the Reason or not, it certainly argues that these Men were generally Persons of extraordinary Credit and Worth, since the Church could securely repose so great a Confidence in them.

SECT. IV. The Consent of the Clergy required in the Choice of them.

AND indeed all imaginable care was taken in their Election, that they should be Persons of such a Character. To which purpose some Canons required, that they should be chosen by all the Clergy; as particularly Theophilus Bishop of Alexandria [m] in his Canonical Epistle gives a Direction in that case. Which Provision was but reasonable: For since all the Clergy had a common Concern in the Revenues of the Church, which were their Livelihood and Subsistance, it was fit the Oeconomus, to whose care the Revenues were committed, should be chosen by common Consent, that he might be a Person without Exception, and no one have Reason to complain, that he was injured or defrauded of his Dividend or Portion.

CHAP. XIII.

A brief Account of some other Inferior Officers in the Church.

SECT. I. Of the Παραμονάριοι, or Mansionarii.

BESIDE the Officers already mentioned, there were in the 4th and 5th Century some few others, whose Names are not commonly met with, and therefore I shall but just hint the Signification of them, and not spend time in any curious Enquiries about their Offices and Employments. The same Canon [a] of the Council of Chalcedon, which speaks of the Oeconomus and Defensor, mentions also another Officer belonging to the Church, who is stiled Παραμονάριος in the Language of the Council. But the Translators and Criticks are not agreed upon the meaning of the Word. The ancient Translation of Dionysius Exiguus renders it Mansionarius, and explains that in a Marginal Reading by Ostiarius, or Door-keeper of the Church. And indeed this was the Office of the Mansionarius of the Roman Church about the time when Dionysius Exiguus lived: For Gregory the Great not long after, in one of his Dialogues [b] speaking of Abundius Mansionarius, gives him also the Title of Custos Ecclesiæ; and in another Dialogue he makes it the Office of the Mansionarius [c] to light the Lamps or Candles of the Church. Yet notwithstanding this, the best Learned of the Modern Criticks give another Sense of the Greek Name Παραμονάριος. Justellus [d] explains it by Villicus, a Bailiff, or Steward of the Lands. Bishop Beverege [e] stiles him Rerum Ecclesiasticarum Administrator, which is the same. And their Opinion is confirmed by [g] Conc. Ephes. in Act. 1. Conc. Chalced. t. 4. p. 292. Charisius Presbyter & Oeconomus Philadelphiæ. [h] Liberat. Breviar. c. 16. Johannes ex Oeconomo factus Presbyter Tabennesiotes. —— Factusque est iterum Oeconomus, habens Causas omnium Ecclesiarum. [i] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 24. Domus Ecclesiæ curam, omnemque substantiam ad vices valentioribus Clericis delegabat & credebat: Nunquam clavem, nunquam annulum in manu habens, sed ab eisdem Domus Præpositis cuncta & accepta & erogata notabantur. [k] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 7. τὴν οἰκονομίαν ἐκκλησίας αὐτοῖς ἐνεχείρισεν. [l] Concil. Chalced. c. 25. [m] Theophil. Can. 9. ap. Bevereg. Pandect. t. 2. p. 173. γνώμη παντὸς ἱερατείου οἰκονόμου καταστῆναι, &c. [a] Concil. Chalced. c. 2. [b] Greg. M. Dial. lib. 3. c. 25. [c] Ib. Dial. lib. 1. c. 5. Constantius Mansionarius omnes Lampades Ecclesiæ implevit aqua, &c. [d] Justel. Bibliothec. Jur. Canon. t. 1. p. 91. [e] Bevereg. Not. in Conc. Chalced. c. 2.

Gotho-

Gothofred, Cujacius, Suicerus, Voſſius, and many others, whoſe Judgment in the caſe may be ſufficient to decide the Controverſy, till the Reader ſees better Reaſon otherwiſe to determine him.

SECT. II. Of the Cuſtodes Eccleſiarum, and Cuſtodes Locorum ſanctorum: And how theſe differed from each other.

THE Civil Law takes Notice of another ſort of Officers, who are called Cuſtodes Eccleſiarum, and Cuſtodes Locorum ſanctorum: Which though ſome Writers confound together, yet Gothofred makes a Diſtinction between them. The Cuſtodes Eccleſiarum were either the ſame with the Oſtiarii, or Order of Door-keepers; or elſe with thoſe called Seniores Eccleſiæ, which, as I have ſhewed [ee] in another Place, were much of the ſame Nature with our Church-Wardens and Veſtry-men. But the Cuſtodes Locorum ſanctorum were the Keepers of thoſe particular Places in Paleſtine, which, if Gothofred judge right, had more peculiarly the Title of Loca ſancta, Holy Places, becauſe they were a ſort of Memorials of our Saviour; ſuch as Bethlehem, the Place of his Nativity; and Mount Golgotha, the Place of his Crucifixion; and his Grave or Monument, which was the Place of his Reſurrection; and Mount Olivet, the Place of his Aſcenſion. Theſe Places were frequently viſited by Chriſtians in thoſe Ages, as appears from Euſebius, Gregory Nyſſen, St. Jerom and ſeveral others, whom the Reader, that is curious in this Matter, may find quoted by Gothofred [f], who maintains, that upon that very Account thoſe Places had a ſort of Guardians or Keepers aſſign'd them, under the Title of Cuſtodes Locorum Sanctorum. But however this matter be, it is certain they had ſuch an Employment in the Church, as in the Eye of the Law was reputed a Religious Service; and accordingly they were entitled to the ſame Privilege [g] as the Eccleſiaſticks had, to be exempt from Perſonal Tribute, in regard to this their Employment: As appears from a Law of Theodoſius the Great, by whom this Immunity was granted them.

SECT. III. Of the Sceuophylaces, or Ceimeliarchæ.

NEXT to theſe, for the Similitude of the Name and Office I mention the Sceuophylaces, or, as they were otherwiſe called, Κειμηλίων φύλακες, Keepers of the Κειμηλία, that is, the Sacred Veſſels, Utenſils, and ſuch precious Things as were laid up in the Sacred Repoſitory of the Church. This was commonly ſome Presbyter: For Theodorus Lector [h] ſays Macedonius was both Presbyter and Sceuophylax of the Church of Conſtantinople; and Sozomen [i] before him ſpeaking of the famous Theodore Presbyter of Antioch, who ſuffered Martyrdom in the Days of Julian, ſtiles him φύλακα τῆς κειμηλίων, Keeper of the ſacred Utenſils; and ſays, he was put to Death becauſe he would not deliver up what he had under his Cuſtody, to the Perſecutors. It will not be improper to give this Officer alſo the Name of Chartophylax & Cuſtos Archivorum, becauſe the Rolls and Archives are reckoned part of the ſacred Repoſitory of the Church. Whence Suicerus [k] obſerves, that in Photius the Names Sceuophylax and Chartophylax are given to the ſame Perſon. But I muſt Note, that the Modern Greeks have a little changed this Office, and added a Power to it, which did not belong to it in the Primitive Church. For now, as Balſamon [l] informs us, the Chartophylax acts as the Patriarch's Subſtitute, Excommunicating, Cenſuring, and Licenſing the Ordinations of Presbyters and Deacons, and ſits as ſupreme Eccleſiaſtical Judge under the Patriarch in many other Caſes relating to the Church; which are things we do not find belonging to the Office of a Sceuophylax in the Primitive Ages.

SECT. IV. Of the Hermeneutæ, or Interpreters.

Epiphanius takes Notice of another ſort of Officers in the Church, to whom he gives the Name [m] of Ἑρμηνευταὶ, Interpreters, and ſays their Office was to render one Language into another, as there was occaſion, both in Reading the Scriptures, and in the Homilies that were made to the People. That there was ſuch an Office in the Church appears farther from the Paſſion of Procopius the Martyr, publiſhed by Valeſius [n], where 'tis ſaid, that Procopius had three Offices in the Church of Scythopolis; he was Reader, Exorciſt, and Interpreter of the Syriack Tongue. I conceive the Office was chiefly in ſuch Churches where the People ſpake different Languages; as in the Churches of Paleſtine, where probably ſome ſpake Syriack, and others Greek; and in the Churches of Africk, where ſome ſpake Latin, and others Punick. In ſuch Churches there was Occaſion for an Interpreter, that thoſe who underſtood not the Language in which the Scriptures were read, or the Homilies preached, might receive Edification by having them immediately rendered into a Tongue which they did underſtand. So far was the Primitive Church from encouraging Ignorance, by locking up the Scriptures in an unknown Tongue, that ſhe not only Tranſlated them into all Languages, but alſo appointed a ſtanding Office of Interpreters, who were viva [ee] Book 2. Chap. 19. Sect. 19. [f] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 26. [g] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſ. leg. 26. Univerſos quos conſtiterit Cuſtodes Eccleſiarum eſſe, vel Sanctorum Locorum, ac Religioſis Obſequiis deſervire, nullius adtentationis moleſtiam ſuſtinere decernimus. Quis enim eos Capite cenſos patiatur eſſe devinctos, quos neceſſario intelligit ſupra memorato obſequio mancipatos? [h] Theodor. Lector. lib. 2. [i] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 8. [k] Suicer. Theſaur. Tom. 2. p. 971. [l] Balſam. Not. ad Can. 9. Concil. Nic. 2. [m] Epiph. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. ἑρμηνευταὶ γλώσσης εἰς γλῶσσαν, ἢ ἐν ταῖς ἀναγνώσεσιν, ἢ ἐν ταῖς προσομιλίαις. [n] Acta Procop. ap. Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. de Martyr. Paleſtin. c. 1. Ibi Eccleſiæ tria Miniſteria præbebat: Unum in Legendi Officio, alterum in Syri Interpretatione ſermonis, & tertium adverſus Dæmones manus Impoſitione conſummans.

voce to make Men understand what was read, and not suffer them to be Barbarians in the Service of God; which is a Tyranny that was unknown to former Ages!

SECT. V. Of the Notarii.

ANOTHER Office, that must not wholly be past over whilst we are upon this Head, is that of the Notarii, or Exceptores, as the Latins called them; who are the same that the Greeks call ὀξυγράφοι, and ταχυγράφοι, from their writing Short-hand by Characters, which was necessary in the Service they were chiefly imployed in. For the First Use of them was to take in Writing the whole Process of the Heathen Judges against the Christian Martyrs, and minutely to describe the several Circumstances of their Examination and Passion; what Questions were put to them; what Answers they made; and whatever passed during the time of their Tryal and Suffering. Whence such Descriptions were called Gesta Martyrum, the Acts and Monuments of the Martyrs; which were the Original Accounts which every Church preserved of her own Martyrs. The first Institution of these Notarii into a standing Office at Rome, Bishop Pearson [o] and some other Learned Persons think, was under Fabian in the time of the Decian Persecution. For in one of the most ancient Catalogues [p] of the Bishops of Rome, Fabian is said to have appointed seven Sub-deacons to inspect the seven Notaries, and see that they faithfully collected the Acts of the Martyrs. But though it was no standing Office before, yet the thing it self was always done by some Persons fitly qualified for the Work; as appears from the ancient Acts of Ignatius and Polycarp, and several others, which were written before Fabian is said to have instituted Publick and standing Notaries at Rome. In after-Ages these Notaries were also employed in writing the Acts of the Councils, and taking Speeches and Disputations and whatever else passed in Synod. Thus Eusebius [q] notes that Malchion's Dispute with Paulus Samosatensis in the Council of Antioch was recorded as it was spoken, by the Notaries who took it from their Mouths: And Socrates says the same [r] of the Disputation between Basilius Ancyranus and Photinus in the Council of Sirmium. We read also of a sort of Notaries in Councils, whose Office was to recite all Instruments, Allegations, Petitions, or whatever else of the like Nature was to be offered or read in Council. And these were commonly Deacons, and sometimes a Presbyter was the chief of them, and thereupon stiled Primicerius Notariorum; as in the Acts of the general Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon [s] there is frequent mention of Aetius Deacon and Notary, and Peter Presbyter of Alexandria and chief of the Notaries, Primicerius Notariorum. There were also Notaries that were employed to take the Discourses of famous and eloquent Preachers from their Mouths: By which means, Socrates [t] observes, many of St. Chrysostom's Sermons were preserved, and some of Atticus his Successor. Bishops also had their private ὑπογραφεῖς, which some call Notaries: But Valesius [u] reckons them in the Quality of Readers. Whatsoever they were, Athanasius served in this Office, as ὑπογραφεύς, under Alexander, and Proclus under Atticus, as Socrates [w] informs us.

SECT. VI. Of the Apocrisarii, or Responsales.

THE curious Reader perhaps will find several other of these lesser Officers, which he will think might come into this Catalogue: But that I may not seem too minute in small Matters, I will only add one Office more, which is that of the Apocrisarii or Responsales. These were a sort of Residents in the Imperial City in the Name of Foreign Churches and Bishops, whose Office was to negotiate as Proctors at the Emperor's Court, in all Ecclesiastical Causes wherein their Principals might be concerned. The Institution of the Office seems to have been in the Time of Constantine, or not long after, when the Emperors being become Christians, Foreign Churches had more occasion to promote their Suits at the Imperial Court than formerly: However we find it established by Law in the Time of Justinian: For in one of his Novels [x] it is ordered, that forasmuch as no Bishop was to be long absent from his Church without special Command from the Emperor; if therefore any one had occasion to Negotiate any Ecclesiastical Cause at Court, he should prefer his Petition either by the Apocrisarius of his Church, whose Business was to act in behalf of the Church, and prosecute her Affairs; or else by the Oeconomus, or some other of his Clergy sent on purpose to signifie his Request. It does not indeed appear from that Law, that these Apocrisarii were of the Clergy, but from other Writers we may easily collect it. For Liberatus [y] says, Anatolius a Deacon of Alexandria was Apocrisarius or Resident for Dioscorus his Bishop at Constantinople, by which means he gained a favourable Opportunity of being chosen Bishop of Constantinople upon the Death of Flavian. And Evagrius [z] observes the same of [o] Pearson de Succession. Episc. Rom. Dissert. 1. c. 4. n. 3. Fell. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 12. [p] Catalog. Rom. Pontif. in Fabian. Hic fecit sex vel septem Subdiaconos, qui septem Notariis imminerent, ut Gesta Martyrum fideliter colligerent. [q] Euseb. lib. 7. c. 29. ὑπομνηματίων ταχυγράφων. [r] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 30. ὀξυγράφων τὰς φωνὰς ἀνὴρ γενομένων. [s] Concil. Ephes. Act. 1. in Actione 1. Concil. Chalced. Tom. 4. p. 292. [t] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 4. It. lib. 7. c. 2. [u] Vales. Not. in Socr. lib. 5. c. 22. [w] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 17. & 41. [x] Justin. Novel. 6. c. 2. Sancimus, si quando propter Ecclesiasticam occasionem inciderit necessitas, hanc aut per eos qui res agunt sanctarum Ecclesiarum (quos Apocrisarios vocant) aut per aliquos Clericos huc destinatos, aut Oeconomos suos notam Imperio facere, &c. [y] Liberat. Breviar. c. 12. Ordinatus est pro eo (Flaviano) Anatolius Diaconus, qui fuit Constantinopoli Apocrisarius Dioscori. [z] Evagr. lib. 4. c. 38. ταῖς ἐπικείσεσιν Ἀμασείας ἐπισκόπῳ διηκονεῖτο, &c.

Eutychius, that from being Apocriſarius to the Biſhop of Amaſia he was immediately advanced to be Biſhop of the Royal City after Mennas. Which ſeems plainly to imply, that he was one of the Clergy before, ſince it does not appear that he was promoted per ſaltum. I muſt farther obſerve, that in imitation of theſe Apocriſarii in the Church, almoſt every Monaſtery had their Apocriſarii likewiſe, whoſe buſineſs was not to Reſide in the Royal City, as the former did, but to Act as Proctors for their Monaſtery or any Member of it, when they had occaſion to give any appearance at Law before the Biſhop under whoſe Juriſdiction they were. This is clear from another of Juſtinian's Novels, which [a] requires the Aſceticks in ſuch Caſes to anſwer by their Apocriſarii or Reſponſales. And theſe were ſometimes alſo of the Clergy, as appears from the Acts of the 5th General Council, where one Theonas [b] ſtiles himſelf Preſbyter and Apocriſarius of the Monaſtery of Mount Sinai. The Latin Tranſlator calls him Ambaſiator, which is not ſo very proper, yet in ſome meaſure expreſſes the thing: For as Suicerus [c] obſerves, in Proceſs of Time the Emperors alſo gave the Name of Apocriſarii to their own Ambaſſadors, and it became the common Title of every Legate whatſoever. Which I the rather Note, that the Reader may diſtinguiſh theſe things, and not confound the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Senſe of the Name Apocriſarius together. And thus much of the Inferior Orders and Offices of the Clergy in the Primitive Church.

[a] Juſtin. Novel. 79. c. 1. [b] Concil. 5. General. Act. 1. in Libello Monechor. Syriæ Secundæ. Tom. 5. p. 116. Θεωνᾶς πρεσβύτερος, καὶ ἀποκρισιάριος τῶ ἁγίου ὄρους Σινᾶ. [c] Suicer. Theſaur. Tom. 1. p. 456.

BOOK

BOOK IV.

Of the ELECTIONS and ORDINATIONS of the CLERGY, and the particular QUALIFICATIONS of such as were to be Ordained.

CHAP. I.

Of the several ways of Designing Persons to the Ministry, in the Apostolical and Primitive Ages of the Church.

SECT. I. Four several ways of Designing Persons for the Ministry. Of the first way by casting Lots.

HAVING thus far given an Account of all the Orders of the Clergy in the Primitive Church, both Superior and Inferior, together with the several Offices and Functions that were annexed to them, I now proceed to consider the Rules and Methods that were observed in setting apart Fit Persons for the Ministry, especially for the Three Superior Orders, which were always of Principal Concern. And here in the first Place it will be proper to observe, that in the Apostolical and following Ages there were Four several ways of Designing Persons for the Ministry, or Discovering who were most Fit to be Ordained: The first of which was by casting Lots; The second by making Choice of the First-Fruits of the Gentile Converts; The third by particular Direction and Inspiration of the Holy Ghost; And the last in the Common and Ordinary way of Examination and Election. The first Method was observed in the Designation of Matthias to be an Apostle, as we read Acts 1. 23, 26. where 'tis said, that the Disciples themselves first appointed Two, Joseph called Barsabas, and Matthias; and then praying to God, that he would shew whether of those Two he had chosen, they gave forth their Lots, and the Lot fell upon Matthias. St. Chrysostom [a] says, they used this Method because as yet the Holy Ghost was not Descended on them, and they had not at this Time the Power of Chusing by Inspiration; and therefore they committed the Business to Prayer, and left the Determination to God. The Author of the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy under the Name of Dionysius [b] fancies, that God answered their Prayer by some Visible Token: But if so, this had not been Chusing by Lot, as the Scripture says it was, but a quite different Method of Election. However, Interpreters generally agree, that there was something Extraordinary in it: Dr. Lightfoot [c] thinks Matthias had no other Ordination to his Apostleship; for the Apostles did not give him any Ordination by Imposition of Hands after this, as they did to Presbyters afterwards; And that, if true, was Extraordinary indeed. Others reckon the Extraordinariness of it to consist in the singular way of Electing and Designing him to that Office by Lot: For they say, [d] all Ecclesiastical History scarce affords such another Instance: And I confess there are not very many, but some few there are, which shew that that Method of Electing was not altogether so singular as is commonly imagined. For in Spain it was once the common Practice, as may be concluded from a Canon [e] of the Council of Barcelona An. 599, which orders, that when a vacant Bishoprick is to be filled, two or three shall be elected by the Consent of the Clergy and People, who shall present them to the Metropolitan and his Fellow-Bishops, and they having first fasted, shall cast Lots, leaving the Determination to Christ the Lord: Then he on whom the Lot shall fall, shall be consummated by the Blessing of Consecration. There is nothing different in this from the first Example, save only that in this there is express mention of a Consecration afterward, which is not in the History of Matthias: And yet perhaps there might be a Consecration in his Case too, though not expressly mentioned: But I leave this to farther Enquiry.

SECT. II. The second way by making Choice of the First-fruits of the Gentile Converts.

THE second way of Designation was by making Choice of the First-fruits of the Gentile Converts to be ordained to the Ministry. For these expressing a greater

[a] Chrys. Hom. 5. in 1 Tim. [b] Dionys. Eccl. Hier. c. 5. p. 367. [c] Lightfoot in Act. 1. 26. [d] Dodwel. Dissert. 1. in Cypr. n. 17. [e] Concil. Barcinon. c. 3. Tom. 5. p. 1606. Duobus aut tribus, quos ante Consensus Cleri & Plebis elegerit, Metropolitani judicio ejusque Coepiscopis præsentatis, quem sors, præeunte jejunio, Christo Domino terminante, monstraverit, Benedictio Consecrationis accumulet.

greater Zeal than others, by their Readineſs and Forwardneſs to embrace the Goſpel, were generally pitched upon by the Apoſtles, as beſt qualified for propagating the Chriſtian Religion in the World. Clemens Romanus in his Epiſtle [f] to the Corinthians ſays, the Apoſtles in all Countries and Cities where they preached, ordained their Firſt Converts Biſhops and Deacons, for the Converſion of others; and that they had the Direction of the Spirit for doing this. And hence the Author that perſonates the ſame Clemens, in his pretended Epiſtle to James Biſhop of Jeruſalem, giving him an Account of the Reaſons that moved St. Peter to ordain him, ſays [g] it was becauſe he was Chief of the Firſt-fruits of his Converts among the Gentiles. Some compare this to the Right of Primogeniture among the ancient Patriarchs, which entitled the Firſt-born to the Prieſthood: And I will not deny but there might be ſomething of Alluſion in it: But then the Parallel will not hold throughout; for in the latter Caſe it was not any natural Right, but Perſonal Merit attending their Primogeniture, that entitled the firſt Converts to the Chriſtian Prieſthood.

SECT. III. The third way by particular Direction of the Holy Ghoſt.

WHICH will appear farther by conſidering, that many of them were ordained by the particular Direction of the Holy Ghoſt. For ſo the words, δοκιμάζοντες τῷ πνεύματι, in Clemens Romanus, may be underſtood, to ſignifie the Spirit's Pointing out the particular Perſons, whom he would have to be ordained; which I obſerved to be the third way of Deſignation of Perſons to the Miniſtry, very uſual in thoſe Primitive Times of the Church. Thus Timothy was choſen and ordained, according to the Prophecies that went before of him, 1 Tim. 1. 18. Whence his Ordination is alſo called the Gift that was given him by Prophecy, 1 Tim. 4. 14. In regard to which the ancient Interpreters, Chryſoſtom [h] and Theodoret ſay, he had not any human Vocation, but was choſen by Divine Revelation, and ordained by the Direction of the Spirit. Clemens Alexandrinus in his famous Homily, entitled, Quis Dives ſalvetur, obſerves the ſame of the Clergy of the Aſiatick Churches, whom St. John ordained after his Return from the Iſle of Paimos: He ſays, they were ſuch as were ſignified or pointed out [i] to him by the Spirit. I know indeed Combefis [k] puts a different Senſe upon theſe Words, and ſays, the Deſignation here ſpoken of, means not any new or diſtinct Revelation, but I know not what Divine Predeſtination of the Perſons; or elſe their Ordination it ſelf, which was the Seal or Conſignation of the Spirit; and that there is no Authority for the common Senſe which Interpreters put upon this Paſſage. But as he owns his Notion to be ſingular, and contrary to the Senſe of all other Learned Men; ſo it is evidently againſt Matter of Fact and ancient Hiſtory, which affords ſeveral other Inſtances of the like Deſignations in the following Ages. I will give an Inſtance or two out of many. Euſebius [l] ſays, Alexander Biſhop of Jeruſalem was choſen κατ' ἐπικάλυψιν, by Revelation, and an Oracular Voice, which ſignified to ſome Aſiaticks of the Church, that they ſhould go forth out of the Gates of the City, and there meet him whom God had appointed to be their Biſhop; which was this Alexander, a Stranger from Cappadocia, coming upon other Buſineſs to Jeruſalem. He was indeed Biſhop of another Place before, but his Tranſlation to the See of Jeruſalem was wholly by Divine Direction, which is the thing I alledge it for. We have another ſuch Inſtance in the Election of Alexander, Sirnamed Carbonarius, Biſhop of Comana, mentioned by Gregory Nyſſen in the Life of Gregory Thaumaturgus. This Alexander was a Gentile Philoſopher, and a very learned Man, who upon his Converſion to Chriſtianity, that he might avoid obſervation, and follow his Philoſophical Studies with the greater Privacy, in his great Humility betook himſelf to the Trade of a Collier, whence he had the Name of Carbonarius: Now it happened upon the Vacancy of the Biſhoprick of Comana, that the Citizens ſent to Gregory Thaumaturgus to deſire him to come and ordain them a Biſhop; but they not agreeing in their Choice, one by way of Jeſt and Ridicule propoſed Alexander the Collier; who being diſcovered [m] by ſpecial Revelation to Gregory Thaumaturgus to be a Man of extraordinary Virtues and Worth, who had ſubmitted to that contemptible Calling only to avoid being taken notice of; and being found upon a due Enquiry to be the Man he was repreſented to be, he was thereupon unanimouſly choſen by all the Church to be their Biſhop, and immediately ordained by St. Gregory. Cyprian often ſpeaks of this Divine Deſignation in the Caſe of Celerinus [n], and Aurelius [o], when they were but to be ordained Readers: And he ſays alſo, he had a Divine Direction [p] to tranſlate Numidicus from another Church to the Church of Carthage. And Sozomen [q] tells [f] Clem. Rom. Ep. 1. n. 42. κατὰ χώρας δὴ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες, καθίσανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάζοντες τῷ πνεύματι εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν. [g] Pſeudo-Clem. Ep. ad Jacob. ap. Coteler. t. 1. p. 606. σὺ γὰρ δι' ἐμὲ σωζομένων ἐθνῶν εἶ κριτῶν ἀπαρχή. [h] Chryſ. & Theod. in 1 Tim. 1. 18. [i] Clem. Alex. ap. Euſeb. lib. 3. c. 23. & ap. Combefiſ. Auctar. Noviſſ. p. 185. κλήρῳ ἕναϛε τινα κληρώσων τῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ πνεύματος σημαινομένων. [k] Combefiſ. Not. in Loc. p. 192. Quos ſpiritus deſignaſſet Divina potius Prædeſtinatione, quàm nova aliqua & diſtincta Revelatione, quàm nec Clemens ſignificavit, nec ulla probat auctoritas, &c. [l] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 11. [m] Nyſſen. Tom. 3. p. 562. [n] Cypr. Ep. 34. al. 39. ad Cler. Carthag. Referimus ad vos Celerinum Fratrem noſtrum —— Clero noſtro non humana Suffragatione, ſed Divina Dignatione conjunctum. Qui cum conſentire dubitaret, Eccleſiæ ipſius admonita & hortatu in Viſione per noctem compulſus eſt, ne negaret nobis ſuadentibus, &c. [o] Id. Ep. 33. al. 38. Exſpectanda non ſunt Teſtimonia Humana, cum præcedunt Divina Suffragia. [p] Id. Ep. 35. al. 40. Admonitos nos & inſtructos ſciatis Dignatione Divina, ut Numidicus Presbyter adſcribatur Presbyterorum Carthaginienſium numero. [q] Sozom. lib. 2. c. 17. Ἀλέξανδρον διάδοχον αὐτῷ κατέλιπεν Ἀθανάσιον. Θείας προσάξεσιν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἀγαγὼν τὸ ψῆφον, &c.

us from Apollinarius, that Alexander Biſhop of Alexandria appointed Athanaſius his Succeſſor by Divine Command. For ſome time before his Death it was ſignified to him by Divine Revelation, that no one ſhould ſucceed him but Athanaſius: And therefore when he lay upon his Death-bed, he called Athanaſius by Name, who was then abſent and fled for fear of being made Biſhop; and another of the ſame Name, who was preſent, anſwering to the Call, he ſaid nothing to him, but called Athanaſius again: Which he did ſeveral Times, whereby it was at laſt underſtood, that he meant the Athanaſius that was fled; to whom, though abſent, he then prophetically ſaid, Thinkeſt thou that thou art eſcaped, Athanaſius? No: Thou art not eſcaped. It were eaſy to add many other Inſtances of the like Nature, but theſe are ſufficient to ſhew againſt Combefis, that in thoſe early Ages Men were ſometimes deſigned to the Miniſtry by particular Divine Revelation and Prophecy, or elſe the Ancients themſelves were wonderfully deceiv'd. Whilſt I am upon this Head I muſt ſuggeſt two things farther, Firſt, that a Dove's Lighting upon the Head of any Man at an Election was uſually taken for a Divine Omen; and commonly the Perſon who had that Sign, was looked upon as pointed out by the Spirit, and accordingly choſen before all others, as having a ſort of Emblem of the Holy Ghoſt. Euſebius obſerves [r] it was this that turned the Election upon Fabian Biſhop of Rome, and gave him the Preferenee before all others, though he was a Stranger. No one at firſt thought of chuſing him: But a Dove being obſerved by the People to ſettle upon his Head, they took it for an Emblem of the Holy Ghoſt, which heretofore deſcended upon our Saviour in the Form of a Dove; and thereupon with one Conſent, as if they had been moved themſelves by the Holy Ghoſt, they cried out Ἄξιον, he was worthy; which was the Word then uſed to ſignify their Conſent; and ſo without more ado they took him and ſet him upon the Biſhop's Throne. The Election of Severus Biſhop of Ravenna, and that of Evortius Biſhop of Orleans was determined the ſame Way, as Blondel [s] has obſerved out of their Lives in Surius; and the Inquiſitive Reader may furniſh himſelf with other Inſtances from his own Obſervation. The other thing I would ſuggeſt, is, That ſometimes an accidental Circumſtance was ſo providentially diſpoſed, as to be taken for an Indication of the Divine Will, and Approbation of an Election. Sulpicius Severus makes this Obſervation particularly upon a Circumſtance that happened in the Election of St. Martin Biſhop of Tours. Some of the provincial Biſhops, who were met at the Place, for very unjuſt Reaſons oppoſed his Election; and more eſpecially one, whoſe Name was Defenſor, was a violent Stickler againſt him. Now it happened, that the Reader who was to have read that Day, not being able to get in due Time to his Place, by reaſon of the preſs and crowding of the People; and the reſt being in a little Confuſion upon that Account; one of thoſe that ſtood by, taking up a Book, read the firſt Verſe that he lighted upon, which happened to be thoſe words of the 8th Pſalm, Out of the Mouth of Babes and Sucklings thou haſt perfected Praiſe, becauſe of thine Enemies, that thou mighteſt deſtroy the Enemy and the Defenſor. For ſo it ſeems the Vulgar Gallican Tranſlation then read it, Ut deſtruas inimicum & Defenſorem. Theſe words were no ſooner read, but the People gave a Shout, and the adverſe Party were confounded. And ſo, ſays our Author [t], it was generally believed that this Pſalm was read by Divine Appointment, that Defenſor the Biſhop might hear his own work Condemned, whilſt the Praiſes of God were perfected in St. Martin out of the Mouth of Babes and Sucklings, and the Enemy were at once both diſcovered and deſtroyed. By what has been ſaid the Reader now will be able to judge of the meaning of the Ancients, when they ſpeak of Particular Divine Deſignations of Perſons to the Miniſtry of the Church.

SECT. IV. The fourth way by Common Suffrage and Election.

THE fourth and laſt way of Deſignation was by the Ordinary Courſe of Suffrage and Election of the Church: The Method of which in general was ſo accurate and highly approved, that one of the Roman Emperors, though an Heathen, thought fit to give a great Character and Encomium of it, and propoſe it to himſelf as an Example proper to be imitated in the Deſignation and Choice of Civil Officers for the Service of the Empire. For ſo Lampridius [u] repreſents the Practice of Alexander Severus: Whenever he was about to conſtitute any Governours of Provinces, or Receivers of the Publick Revenues, he firſt propoſed their Names, deſiring the People to make Evidence againſt them, if any one could prove them Guilty of any Crime: but if they accuſed them falſly, it ſhould be at the Peril of their own Lives: ſaying, it was unreaſonable, that when the Chriſtians and Jews did this in Propounding thoſe whom they ordained their Prieſts and Miniſters, the ſame ſhould not be done in the Appointment of Governors of Provinces, in whoſe Hands the Lives and Fortunes of Men were entruſted. This argues, that all imaginable Care was taken in the Election of Chriſtian Miniſters, ſince their Practice in this reſpect has ſuch ample Teſtimony from the Heathens. And indeed all Modern Writers agree upon the Matter in general, that anciently Elections were made with a great

[r] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 29. [s] Blondel. Apol. p. 426. Surius Vit. Sanctor. Feb. 1. & Sep. 7. [t] Sever. Vit. S. Martin. c. 7. p. 225. Ita habitum eſt, Divino nutu Pſalmum hunc lectum fuiſſe, ut teſtimonium operis ſui Defenſor audiret, quia ex ore Infantium atque lactentium in Martino Domini laude perfecta, & oſtenſus pariter & deſtructus eſt inimicus. [u] Lamprid. Vit. Alex. Sever. c. 45.

a great deal of Caution and Exactneſs: But as to the particular Methods that were uſed, Men are ſtrangely divided in their Accounts of them; by which means there is no one Subject has been rendered more Intricate and Perplext than this of Elections, which has even frighted ſome from attempting to give an Account of it: But I muſt not wholly diſappoint my Readers through ſuch Fears, and therefore I ſhall briefly acquaint them with the different Sentiments of Modern Authors, who have handled this Subject, and then clear what I take to be the true State of the Caſe, from evident Proofs of ancient Hiſtory, which ſhall be the Buſineſs of the next Chapter.

CHAP. II.

A more particular Account of the ancient Method and Manner of Elections of the Clergy.

SECT. I. The different Opinions of Learned Men concerning the Peoples Power anciently in Elections.

THE grand Queſtion in this Affair, upon which Learned Men are ſo much divided, is concerning the Perſons who had a Right to Vote in the Elections of the Clergy. Some think the People were never allowed any other Power, ſave only to give their Teſtimonials to the Party Elected, or to make Objections, if they had any juſt and reaſonable Exceptions, againſt him. So Habertus [a], and Sixtus [b] Senenſis, and Bellarmin [c]. Others ſay the People were Abſolute and Proper Electors, and that from Apoſtolical Right, which they always enjoyed for a Succeſſion of many Ages. This Opinion is advanced, and with great ſhew of Learning aſſerted by Blondel [d] againſt Sancta Clara and the reſt of the other Opinion. De Marca [e] takes a middle way between thoſe two Extremes. He ſays the People had as much Power anciently as any of the Clergy below Biſhops; that is, their Conſent was required in the Promotion of a Biſhop, as well as their Teſtimony; yet he will not allow this to be called Electing: For the Deſignation, Election, or Judgment, he ſays, ſtill belonged only to the Metropolitan together with the Synod of Provincial Biſhops. And though we read ſometimes of their giving their Vote or Suffrage, yet That, he ſays, is only to be underſtood of Suffrage of Conſent, not the Suffrage of Election. But Mr. Maſon, in anſwer to Pamelius, who had advanced ſomething of this Notion before de Marca, rejects this as a Deluding Diſtinction, and aſſerts, that the People had properly a Voice or Suffrage of Election, and he quotes [f] Biſhop Andrews [g] for the ſame Opinion. Yet he does not carry the Point ſo high, as to maintain with Blondel, that it was of unalterable Right, but left by God as a thing indifferent, to be ordered by the Diſcretion of the Church, ſo all things be done honeſtly and in order. And this ſeems to have been the Opinion of Spalatenſis [h], Richerius [i], Juſtellus [k], Suicerus, and ſome other Learned Men of both Churches. Others there are who diſtinguiſh between the Times preceding the Council of Nice, and thoſe that followed after: for they think, whatever Power was allowed the People in the three firſt Ages, was taken away by that Council, and the Councils of Antioch and Laodicea, that followed not long after. So Schelſtrate [l] in his Diſſertations upon the Council of Antioch, where he quotes Chriſtianus Lupus and Sirmond for the ſame Opinion. But this is exploded as a groundleſs Fiction, not only by Spalatenſis [m] and Biſhop Pearſon [n], but alſo by Richerius [o], Cabaſſutius [p], Valeſius [q], Petavius [r], de Marca [s], and other Learned Perſons of the Roman Communion, who think the Fathers of the Nicene Council made no Alteration in this Matter, but left all things as they found them. Some again diſtinguiſh between the Election of Biſhops and the other Clergy, and ſay, The Peoples Conſent was only required in the Election of Biſhops, but not in the Promotion of the Inferior Clergy. So Cabaſſutius [t] and Biſhop Beverege [u], who reckons this ſo clear a Point, that there is no Diſpute to be made of it. Yet Valeſius diſputes it, and aſſerts the contrary [w], that anciently Presbyters were not to be ordained by the Biſhop without the Conſent of the Clergy and People. Biſhop Stillingfleet, who is one of the laſt that has conſidered this matter, gives us his Senſe in theſe following Obſervations, Firſt, That the main Ground of the Peoples Intereſt [x]

[a] Habert. Archieratic. p. 436. [b] Sixt. Biblioth. lib. 5. Annot. 118. [c] Bellarm. de Clericis lib. 1. c. 7. [d] Blondel. Apol. p. 379, &c. [e] Marca de Concord. lib. 8. cap. 2. n. 2. [f] Maſon Conſecrat. of Biſhops. lib. 4. c. 4. p. 159, 160. [g] Andrews Reſp. ad Apol. Bell. c. 13. p. 313. Præſentia Plebis apud Cyprianum includit teſtimonium de Vita, nec excludit ſuffragium de Perſona. [h] Spalat. de Repub. lib. 3. c. 3. n. 42. [i] Richer. Hiſt. Concil. lib. 1. c. 12. n. 18. p. 389. [k] Juſtel. Not. in Can. 6. Conc. Chalced. [l] Schelſtr. Not. in Can. 19. Conc. Antioch. [m] Spalat. de Repub. lib. 3. c. 3. n. 12. [n] Pearſon. Vind. Ignat. Par. 1. c. 11. p. 324. [o] Richer. Hiſt. Concil. Tom. 1. c. 2. n. 7. [p] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 17. p. 83. [q] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. [r] Petav. Not. in Syneſ. p. 56. [s] Marca de Concord. lib. 8. c. 3. n. 4. [t] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 36. p. 196. [u] Bevereg. Not. in Can. 6. Conc. Chalced. [w] Valeſ. in Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. Presbyteri olim ab Epiſcopo ordinari non poterant ſine Conſenſu Cleri & Populi. [x] Stillingfleet. Unreaſon. of Separat. Par. 3. n. 25. p. 312.

was

was founded upon the Apoſtles Canon, That a Biſhop muſt be blameleſs and of good report. And therefore he ſays [y], the Peoples Share and Concern in Elections even in Cyprian's Time was not to give their Votes, but only their Teſtimony concerning the good or ill Behaviour of the Perſon. Secondly, That yet upon this the People aſſumed the Power of Elections, and thereby cauſed great Diſturbances and Diſorders in the Church. Thirdly, That to prevent theſe, many Biſhops were appointed without their Choice, and Canons made for the better Regulating of them. Fourthly, That when there were Chriſtian Magiſtrates, they did interpoſe as they thought fit, notwithſtanding the Popular Claim, in a Matter of ſo great Conſequence to the Peace of Church and State. Fifthly, That upon the alteration of the Government of Chriſtendom the Intereſt of the People was ſecured by their Conſent in Parliaments, and that by ſuch Conſent the Nomination of Biſhops was reſerved to Princes, and the Patronage of Livings to particular Perſons. In this great variety of Judgments and Opinions of Learned Men, it will be no Crime to diſſent from any of them, and therefore I ſhall take the Liberty to review their Opinions, and expreſs impartially what I take to be agreeable or diſagreeable in any of them to ancient Hiſtory, and the Rules and Practice of the Church.

SECT. II.
The Power of the People equal to that of the Inferior Clergy in the Election of a Biſhop.

AND here firſt of all it will be proper to obſerve, that there was no one Univerſal Unalterable Rule obſerved in all Times and Places about this matter, but the Practice varied according to the different Exigencies and Circumſtances of the Church; As will evidently appear in the Sequel of this Hiſtory. In the mean time I conceive the Obſervation made by de Marca, thus far to be very true, That whatever Power the Inferior Clergy enjoyed in the Election of their Biſhop, the ſame was generally allowed to the People, or wholly Body of the Church, under the Regulation and Conduct of the Metropolitan and Synod of Provincial Biſhops. For their Power, whatever it was, is ſpoken of in the very ſame Terms, and expreſt in the ſame Words. Some call it Conſent, others Suffrage or Vote, others Election or Choice; but all agree in this, that it was equally the Conſent, Suffrage, Vote, Election, and Choice both of Clergy and People. Thus Cyprian obſerves [z] of Cornelius, that he was made Biſhop by the Teſtimony of the Clergy and Suffrage of the People. Where it is evident the Words, Teſtimony and Suffrage, are equally aſcribed both to Clergy and People. Socrates [a] ſpeaking of the Election of Chryſoſtom, ſays he was choſen by the common Vote of all, both Clergy and People. And Theodoret deſcribes the Election of Euſtathius Biſhop of Antioch after the ſame manner, when he tells us [b] he was compelled to take the Biſhoprick by the common Vote of the Biſhops and Clergy and all the People. Siricius [c] ſtiles this the Election of the Clergy and People; and Celeſtin [d] the Conſent and Deſire of the Clergy and People; and Leo [e] both the Conſent, and Election, and Suffrage or Votes of the People; who adds alſo, that in caſe the Parties were divided in their Votes, then the Deciſion ſhould be referred to the Judgment of the Metropolitan, who ſhould chuſe him who had moſt Votes and greateſt Merit to recommend him. From all which, and many other Paſſages that might be alledged to the ſame purpoſe, it is very evident, that the Power of the Clergy and People was equal in this Matter, and that nothing was challenged by the one, that was not allowed to the other alſo.

SECT. III.
This Power not barely Teſtimonial, but Judicial and Elective.

AND hence it appears farther, that this conjunctive Power of Clergy and People was not barely Teſtimonial, but, as Biſhop Andrews and Mr. Maſon aſſert, a Judicial and Effective Power, by way of proper Suffrage and Election; and that as well in the time of Cyprian, as afterwards: For Cyprian ſpeaks both of Teſtimony and Suffrage belonging to both Clergy and People: And ſays farther [f] that this is a Juſt and Legitimate Ordination, which is examined by the Judgment and Suffrage of all, both Clergy and People. So that they were then preſent at the Choice of their Biſhop not merely to give Teſtimony concerning his Life, but as Biſhop Andrews words it, to give their Vote and Suffrage in reference to his Perſon. Which Obſervation will be farther evidenced and confirmed, by proceeding with the Account of ſeveral Rules and Cuſtoms generally obſerved in theſe Elections.

SECT. IV.
Evidences of this Power from ſome ancient Rules and Cuſtoms of the Church. As firſt, that no Biſhop was to be obtruded on an Orthodox People without their Conſent.

ONE of theſe was, That no Biſhop was to be obtruded on any Orthodox People againſt their Conſent. I ſay, an Orthodox People, for in caſe the Majority of them were Hereticks or Schiſmaticks, the Practice was different, as will be ſhewed hereafter: But where they were all Catholicks, and could agree upon a Catholick and Deſerving after:

[y] Ibid. p. 316, 317. [z] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 104. Factus eſt Cornelius Epiſcopus — De Clericorum pene omnium Teſtimonio, de Plebis quæ tum adfuit Suffragio. [a] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 2. ψηφίσματι κοινῷ ὁμοῦ πάντων, κλήρου τε καὶ λαοῦ. [b] Theod. lib. 1. c. 7. ψήφῳ κοινῇ κατανεύσασαν ἀρχιερέως τε καὶ ἱερέως καὶ ὅσας ὁ λεώς.
[c] Siric. Ep. 1. ad Himerium Tarracon. c. 10. Presbyterio vel Epiſcopatui, ſi eum Cleri ac Plebis evocaverit Electio, non immerito ſocietur. [d] Celeſtin. Ep. 2. c. 5. Nullus invitis detur Epiſcopus. Cleri, Plebis, & Ordinis Conſenſus & Deſiderium requiratur. [e] Leo M. Ep. 84. ad Anaſtaſ. c. 5. Cum de ſummi Sacerdotis Electione tractabitur, ille omnibus præponatur, quem Cleri Plebiſque Conſenſus concorditer poſtularit; ita ut ſi in aliam forte Perſonam Partium ſe Vota diviſerint, Metropolitani Judicio is alteri præferatur, qui majoribus & ſtudiis juvatur & meritis, &c. [f] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Fratr. Hiſpan. p. 172. Ordinatio juſta & legitima, quæ omnium Suffragio & Judicio fuerit examinata.

Bishop, they were usually gratified in their Choice, and no Person was to be put upon them against their Inclination. Sometimes the Bishops in Synod proposed a Person, and the People accepted him: Sometimes again the People proposed, and the Bishops consented; and where they were unanimous in a worthy Choice, we scarce ever find they were rejected. If they were divided, it was the Metropolitan's Care to unite and fix them in their Choice, but not to obtrude upon them an unchosen Person. This we learn from one of Leo's Epistles [g], where he gives us at once both the Church's Rule, and Practice, and the Reasons of it. In the Choice of a Bishop, says he, Let him be preferred, whom the Clergy and People do unanimously agree upon and require: If they be divided in their Choice, then let the Metropolitan give Preference to him who has most Votes and most Merits: Always provided, that no one be ordained against the Will and Desire of the People, lest they contemn or hate their Bishop, and become irreligious or disrespectful, when they cannot have him whom they desir'd. The Transgression of this Rule was objected as a great Crime to Hilarius Arelatensis by the Emperor Valentinian the 3d, that [h] he ordained Bishops in several Places against the Will and Consent of the People, whom when they would not admit of, because they had not chosen them, he used armed Force to settle them in their Sees, introducing the Preachers of Peace by the Violence of War. Leo objects [i] the same thing to him, saying, That he ought to have proceeded by another Rule, and first to have required the Votes of the Citizens, the Testimonies of the People, the Will of the Gentry, and the Election of the Clergy: For he that was to preside over all, was to be chosen by all. This evidently shews, that the Suffrage of the People was then something more than barely Testimonial.

SECT. V.
2dly, This farther confirmed from Examples of the Bishops Complying with the Voice of the People against their own Inclination.

2*dly*, ANOTHER Argument is, that in many Cases the Voices of the People prevailed against the Bishops themselves, when they happened to be divided in their first Proposals. Thus it happened in the famous Election of St. Martin Bishop of Tours, which has been mentioned in the last Chapter, Sect. 3. The People were unanimously for him; Defensor with a great Party of Bishops at first were against him: But the Voice of the People prevailed, and the Bishops complied and ordained him. Philostorgius gives us such another Instance. Demophilus Bishop of Constantinople, with some other Bishops suspected of Arianism, meeting at Cyzicum to ordain a Bishop there, the People first made a Protestation against them, that unless they would Anathematize publickly Aetius and Eunomius both in Word and Writing, they should ordain no Bishop there: And when they had complied to this, they still insisted on their Privilege, That no one should be ordained but one [k] of their own Chusing. Which was one, who as soon as he was ordained, Preached the Catholick Doctrine of the ὁμοούσιον, that the Son was of the same Substance with the Father. Ancient History will furnish the Reader with many other Instances of the like nature.

SECT. VI.
3dly, From the manner of the Peoples Voting at Elections.

3*dly*, ANOTHER Evidence of the Peoples Power in Elections is the Manner of their Voting, or the way of giving their Assent or Dissent to the Ordination of any Person: Which was threefold: For either First they were Unanimous in their Vote for or against a Man, and then their way was to express their Mind by a general Acclamation, crying out with one Voice, Ἄξιος, or Ἀνάξιος, Dignus or Indignus, as the Word then was, he is Worthy, or Unworthy. Instances of which Form the Reader may find in St. Ambrose [l], St. Austin [m], Eusebius [n], Philostorgius [o], Photius [p], the Author [q] of the Constitutions, and several others. Or else Secondly they were divided in their Choice, and then they expressed their Dissent in particular Accusations of the Parties proposed, and Sidings, and sometimes outragious Tumults. St. Chrysostom [r] reflects upon this way in his Books of the Priesthood, when he tells us, that in those Popular Solemnities, which were then customarily held for the Choice of Ecclesiastical Rulers, one might see a Bishop exposed to as many Accusations, as there were Heads among the People. And the Account that is given not only by Ammianus Marcellinus [s], but by Socrates [t] and the other Historians, of the Tumult raised at Rome in the Election of Damasus, shews that the People were indulged in something more than barely giving Testimony, else they had hardly run into so great a Heat and ungovernable Tumult. There was also a third way of Expressing their Consent, which was by Subscribing the Decree of Election for greater Security, that no Party might pretend [g] Leo Ep. 84. c. 5. Si in aliam forte Personam partium se Vota diviserint, Metropolitani Judicio is alteri præferatur, qui majoribus & Studiis juvatur & Meritis: Tantum ut nullus invitis & non petentibus ordinetur, ne Plebs invita Episcopum non optatum aut contemnat aut oderit, & fiat minus religiosa quam convenit, cui non licuerit habere quem voluit. [h] Novel. 24. ad Calcem Cod. Theod. Indecenter alios invitis & repugnantibus Civibus ordinavit. Qui quidem, quoniam non facile ab his qui non elegerant, recipiebantur, manum sibi contrahebat armatam —— Et ad sedem quietis Pacem prædicaturos per Bella ducebat. [i] Leo Ep. 89. ad Epis. Vien. Expectarentur certe Vota Civium, Testimonia Populorum, quæreretur Honoratorum Arbitrium, Electio Clericorum. —— Qui præfuturus est omnibus, ab omnibus eligatur. [k] Philostorg. lib. 9. c. 13. ὃν αὐτῶν αἱ ψῆφοι προσέταξον. [l] Ambr. de Dignit. Sacerd. c. 5. In Ordinationibus eorum clamant & dicunt, Dignus es, & Justus es. [m] Aug. Ep. 110. Dignus & Justus est, dictum est vicies. [n] Euseb. lib. 6. c. 29. πάντα λαὸν Ἄξιον ἐπιβοῆσαι. [o] Philostorg. lib. 9. c. 10. [p] Phot. Cod. 256. p. 1414. [q] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 4. [r] Chrys. de Sacerdot. lib. 3. c. 15. [s] Ammian. lib. 27. c. 2. [t] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 29.

afterward that they had not given assent to it. Thus it was in the Election of Meletius Bishop of Antioch, who was chosen by common Consent both of Catholicks and Arians, each Party presuming him to be of their own Opinion. The Election-Paper was Subscribed by all, Theodoret [u] says, and put into the hands of Eusebius Samosatensis, which Constantius, when Meletius proved a Catholick, demanded to have had it destroyed, but with all his Menaces he could not extort it from him. St. Austin gives the like Account [w] of the Election of Eradius his Successor at Hippo, which for some Reasons he got done in his own Life-time. He first ordered the Notaries of the Church to take the Acclamations of the People in Writing, and then required all that could Write, to Subscribe the Instrument themselves. And this was the common way whenever the Metropolitan could not be present at the Election; then the Decree of the whole Church was drawn up in Writing, and carried to him for his Consent and Approbation. The Remains of which Custom may still be seen in the ancient Ordo Romanus [x], where there is a Form of a Decree, which the Clergy and People were to Sign upon their Choice of a Bishop, and present it to the Metropolitan and the Synod, in order to his Consecration. In which Case, if the Metropolitan found him upon Examination to be a Person every way qualified, as they represented him, he then confirmed and ratified their Choice, and so proceeded immediately to his Ordination. All which argues that the People had something of a Decisive Power in Elections, and that their Suffrage was not merely Testimonial.

SECT. VII. 4thly, From the Use and Office of Interventors.

4thly, THIS is farther evident from the Use and Office of Interventors in the Latin Church, whose Business was to promote and procure a speedy Election of a new Bishop in any vacant See, as I have had occasion to shew [xx] in another Place. For in the Roman and African Churches, upon the Vacancy of a Bishoprick, it was usual for the Metropolitan to grant a Commission to some of his Provincial Bishops to go to the Vacant Church, and dispose the Clergy and People to be Unanimous in the Choice of a new Bishop; and when they were agreed, they petitioned the Metropolitan by the Interventor to confirm their Choice, and with a Synod of Provincial Bishops to come and ordain him whom they had Elected. Or else they drew up an Instrument in Writing, subscribed both by the Interventor and themselves, and presented the new Elect Bishop to the Metropolitan, who ordained him in his own Church. This was the Practice of the Roman Province in the Time of Symmachus and Gregory the Great, as appears from their Epistles, which give Directions to the Interventors, or Visitors, as they call them, concerning their Behaviour in the present Case. Let no one, says Symmachus [y], draw up an Instrument of Election without the Presence of the Visitor, by whose Testimony the Agreement of the Clergy and People may be declared. And Gregory writing to Barbarus Bishop of Beneventum, and Visitor of the Church of Palermo, bids him endeavour to make the Clergy and People Unanimous in their Presentation of a worthy Person to be their Bishop, who could not [z] be rejected by the Canons; and then drawing up their Petition in Form of a Decree, Signed with all their Hands, and the Letters Testimonial of the Visitor, they should send him to Rome for Consecration. Nothing can be plainer, than that here the Clergy and People made the Choice of their Bishop with the Assistance of a Visitor or Interventor, and they presented him to the Metropolitan, who, if he had no Canonical Exception against him, confirmed their Choice, and proceeded to his Ordination.

SECT. VIII. 5thly, From the Custom of the Peoples taking Persons and having them ordained by Force.

5thly, AS a farther Evidence of this Power and Privilege indulged to the People, it may be observed likewise, that it was Customary in those Days for the People in many Places to lay violent Hands upon Persons, and bring them by Force to the Bishop to be ordained. Thus Possidius [a] tells us it was in the Ordination of St. Austin, the People seized him and brought him to the Bishop, requiring with one Voice that he would ordain him Presbyter, whilst he in the mean time wept abundantly for the Force that was put upon him. Paulinus [b] says the same of himself, that he was ordained Presbyter by Force and the irresistable Violence of an inflam'd and zealous People. And there are many other Instances of the like Nature.

[u] Theod. lib. 2. c. 31. [w] Aug. Ep. 110. A Notariis Ecclesiæ, sicut cernitis, excipiuntur quæ dicimus, excipiuntur quæ dicitis, & meus sermo, & vestræ Acclamationes in terram non cadunt. ----- Hoc ad ultimum rogo, ut Gestis istis dignemini subscribere qui potestis. [x] Ordo Rom. Biblioth. Patr. Tom. 10. p. 104. Decretum quod Clerus & Populus firmare (al. formare) debet de electo Episcopo. ----- Ut omnium nostrum Vota in hanc Electionem convenire noscatis, huic Decreto Canonico promptissima voluntate singuli manibus propriis roborantes subscripsimus. [xx] Book 2. Chap. 15. [y] Symmach. Ep. 5. c. 9. Decretum sine Visitatoris præsentia nemo conficiat, cujus testimonio Clericorum, ac Civium possit Unanimitas declarari. [z] Greg. lib. 11. ep. 16. Dilectio tua Clerum Plebemque ejusdem Ecclesiæ admonere festinet ut remoto studio, uno eodemque Consensu talem sibi præficiendum expetant sacerdotem, qui & tanto Ministerio dignus valeat reperiri, & venerandis Canonibus nullatenus respuatur. Qui dum fuerit postulatus cum Solemnitate Decreti omnium Subscriptionibus roborati, & Dilectionis tuæ Testimonio Literarum, ad nos Sacrandus occurrat. [a] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 4. Eum tenuerunt &, ut in talibus consuetum est, Episcopo ordinandum intulerunt, omnibus id uno Consensu & Desiderio fieri perficique petentibus, magnoque studio & clamore flagitantibus, ubertim eo flente. [b] Paulin. Ep. 35. inter Epist. August. A Lampio apud Barcilonam in Hispania, per vim inflammatæ subito Plebis sacratus sum. Vid. Paulin. ep. 6. ad Severum. p. 191.

6thly,

SECT. IX. 6thly, from the Title of Fathers, which some Bishops upon this Account by way of Compliment gave to their People.

6*thly*, I observe but one thing more relating to this Matter, which was the Compliment that some Bishops passed upon their People upon this Account, styling them Fathers, in regard to the Share and Influence they had in their Designation and Election. St. Ambrose himself speaking to his People, addresses himself to them in this Style: Ye are [c] my Fathers, who chose me to be Bishop: Ye I say, are both my Children and Fathers; Children in particular, Fathers all together. In which Words he plainly refers to that providential Consent of the People of Milan, who when they were divided before into several Factions, as soon as Ambrose was named, all unanimously conspired together in his Election. These are some of those Collateral Evidences, that may be brought to prove that anciently the Clergy and People joined in a common Vote in the Election of their Bishop, and that their Suffrage was something more than Testimonial, especially in the Fourth and Fifth Ages, in the Latin Church, where, as De Marca owns, the Peoples Request was chiefly considered.

SECT. X. What Power the People had in the Designation of Presbyters.

NOR was this Privilege only indulged them in the Election of their Bishop, but sometimes in the Designation of Presbyters also. For St. Austin and Paulinus were but to be ordained Presbyters, when that forcible Constraint, just now spoken of, was laid upon them by the People. Besides St. Jerom [d] says expressly, that Presbyters and the other Clergy were as much chosen by the People, as the Bishops were. And Possidius [e] notes this to have been both the Custom of the Church and St. Austin's Practice, in the Ordinations of Priests and Clerks to have regard to the Majority or general Consent of Christian People. And Siricius, who speaks the Sense and Practice of the Roman Church, says [f], that when a Deacon was to be ordained either Presbyter or Bishop, he was first to be chosen both by the Clergy and People. And therefore I cannot so readily subscribe to the Assertion of those Learned Men, who say that Bishops before their Ordination were propounded to the People, but not Presbyters or any other of the Inferior Clergy.

SECT. XI. Whether the Council of Nice made any Alteration in these Matters.

AS to those who assert, that the People were anciently indulged in these Matters before the Council of Nice, but that their Power was abridged by a new Decree of that Council; They are evidently under a Mistake: For it is certain the Nicene Fathers made no Alteration in this Affair, but left the whole Matter as they found it. For though in one of their Canons [g] it is said, that the Presence, or at least the Consent of all the Provincial Bishops, and the Confirmation or Ratification of the Metropolitan shall be necessary to the Election and Ordination of a Bishop; yet that is not said to exclude any ancient Privilege that the People enjoyed, but only to establish the Rights of Metropolitans and Provincial Bishops, which Meletius the Schismatical Ægyptian Bishop had particularly invaded, by presuming to ordain Bishops without the Authority of his Metropolitan, or Consent of his Fellow-Bishops in the Provinces of Ægypt. That nothing else was designed by that Canon is evident from this, That the same Council in the Synodical Epistle written to the Church of Alexandria expressly mentions the Choice of the People, and requires it as a Condition of a Canonical Election. For speaking of such Meletian Bishops as would return to the Unity of the Catholick Church, it says, That when any Catholick Bishop died, Meletian Bishops might succeed in their Room, provided they were worthy, and that the People [h] chose them, and the Bishop of Alexandria ratified and confirmed their Choice. Our learned Bishop Pearson has rightly observed, that Athanasius [i] himself was thus chosen after the Nicene Council was ended; which is a certain Argument that the Peoples Right was not abrogated in that Council. The Eusebian Party made it an Objection against him, that he had not the Choice of the People: But the Bishops of Ægypt assembled in Synod, in their Snodical Epistle do with great Earnestness maintain the contrary, asserting, That the whole Multitude of the People of the Catholick Church [k], as if they had been all united in one Soul and Body, cried out, requiring Athanasius to be ordained Bishop. When Gregory Nazianzen [l] also says of him, that he was brought to the Throne of St. Mark, ψήφῳ τῷ λαῷ πανλὸς, by the Suffrage of all the People. It were easy to add many other Instances and Proofs of the like [c] Ambr. Com. in Luc. lib. 8. c. 17. Vos enim mihi estis Parentes, qui Sacerdotium detulistis: Vos, inquam, Filii vel Parentes, Filii singuli, universi Parentes. [d] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Rustic. Cum te vel Populus vel Pontifex Civitatis in Clerum elegerit, agito quæ Clerici sunt. Id. in Ezek. lib. 10. c. 33. p. 609. Speculator Ecclesiæ, vel Episcopus vel Presbyter, qui à Populo electus est. [e] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 21. In ordinandis Sacerdotibus & Clericis consensum majorum Christianorum & Consuetudinem Ecclesiæ sequendam esse arbitrabatur. [f] Siric. Ep. 1. ad Himer. Tarracon. c. 10. Exinde jam accessu temporum, Presbyterium vel Episcoparum, si eum Cleri ac Plebis evocaverit Electio, non immerito sortietur.

[g] Conc. Nic. can. 4. [h] Conc. Nic. Ep. Synod. ap. Theod. lib. 1. c. 9. & Socrat. lib. 1. c. 9. εἰ ἄξιοι φαίνοιντο, καὶ ὁ λαὸς αἱρεῖτο, σωεπιψηφίσοιτο· ἀυτῷ καὶ ἐπιφερεγγίζοντο τὸ τῆ τ' Ἀλεξανδρέας ἐπισκόπε. [i] Pearson. Vind. Ignat. Par. 1. c. 11. p. 324. ed. Antwerp. Eusebiani, qui Creationem Athanasii abrogare voluerunt, defectum Popularis Electionis objiciebant, & Episcopi Ægypti, in Synodo congregati, Epistola ad omnes Ecclesiæ Catholicæ Episcopos scripta, contrarium magna animi contentione asseruerunt.——Quod neque hi neque illi fecissent, si Populi Suffragia in eligendo Episcopo locum nullum habuissent. [k] Ep. Synod. Concil. Alex. ap. Athen. Apol. 2. t. 2. p. 726. πᾶς ὁ λαὸς — ἀνεβόων, ἐκραζον, αἰτῦντες Ἀθανάσιον ἐπίσκοπον. [l] Naz. Orat. 21. Tom. 1. p. 377.

Nature

Nature to the time of the Council of Chalcedon, when the People of Alexandria ſtill enjoyed their ancient Privilege, as appears from ſeveral Paſſages in Liberatus, who ſays of Proterius and ſome other of their Biſhops, that they were choſen by the Nobles, and the Decree [m] and Voice of all the People: But I ſhall ſay no more upon this Head, but only alledge two Canons of the 4th Council of Carthage, which comprize the whole Practice of the Church in relation to this matter: The one decreeing [n], that the Ordination of a Biſhop ſhould always be by the Conſent of Four Parties, the Clergy, the Laity, the Provincial Biſhops, and the Metropolitan, whoſe Preſence or Authority was principally neceſſary in all ſuch Caſes. The other Canon [o] orders, that no Biſhop ſhall ordain any Clergy-Men without Conſulting with his Clergy, and asking the Conſent, Approbation and Teſtimony of his People. This ſeems to have been the moſt Common and Ordinary Practice of the Church.

SECT. XII. Some Exceptions to the General Rule. Firſt, In Caſe the greateſt Part of the Church were Hereticks or Schiſmaticks.

BUT then as all General Rules have their Exceptions, ſo it cannot be denied but that this Rule varied ſometimes, or at leaſt had its Limitations and Reſtrictions: And I ſhall not do Juſtice to the Reader, nor the Subject neither, unleſs I mention thoſe alſo. Here therefore we are to obſerve in the firſt Place, that this Rule did not hold when the greateſt Part of any Church were turned Hereticks or Schiſmaticks. For in that Caſe, had Elections been made by the general Suffrage of the People, none but Heretical or Schiſmatical Biſhops muſt have been ordained. And therefore in the Time of the great Prevalency of Arianiſm, and the long Schiſm of the Donatiſts, the Church did not tie her ſelf always to Act preciſely by this Rule. We find it objected by the Donatiſts in the Collation of Carthage [p], that the Catholicks made Biſhops in many Places where they had no People; that is, no Catholick People, for they were all Donatiſts; conſequently thoſe Biſhops were ordained not only without, but againſt the Conſent of the People. And this I take to be the Caſe of thoſe Biſhops mentioned in the 17th and 18th Canons in the Council of Antioch; one of which ſays, That if any Biſhop is ordained to preſide over a People, and does not take upon him his Office, and go to the Church to which he is ordained, he ſhall be Excommunicated, till he complies, or a Provincial Synod determines otherwiſe about him: And the other ſays, if ſuch a Biſhop abſents from his Dioceſe, not by his own Default, but διὰ τὸν τῶ λαῶ παραίτησιν, becauſe the People refuſe to receive him, in that Caſe he ſhall be honoured as a Biſhop, though not admitted to his own Church. Theſe Canons were made at a time when the Arian Faction had raiſed great Commotions in the Church, which probably made ſome Biſhops unwilling to go to their Churches, and others could not be admitted, becauſe the Faction ſtrongly prevailed againſt them: And in both of them it is ſuppoſed the Ordinations were made without asking the Peoples Conſent; of which Practice we have frequent Inſtances in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory in Caſes of the ſame nature.

SECT. XIII. 2dly, In Caſe of Ordaining Biſhops to far diſtant Places, or Barbarous Nations.

2*dly*, ANOTHER Exception to the Rule was, when Biſhops were to be ordained for very diſtant Countries or Barbarous Nations. When Athanaſius ordained Frumentius Biſhop of the Indies at Alexandria, as the Hiſtorians [q] report, no one can imagine that he had the Formal Conſent, though he might have the Preſumptive Approbation, of all his People. As neither can we ſuppoſe the Biſhop of Tomi in Scythia to be choſen by his People, when he was the only Biſhop [r] in all that Region, and commonly ordained at Conſtantinople, as by the 28th Canon of the Council of Chalcedon the Biſhops of Barbarous Nations were appointed to be.

SECT. XIV. 3dly, In Caſe an Interventor or any other Biſhop intruded himſelf into any See without the Conſent of a Provincial Synod.

3*dly*, IN Caſe an Interventor, or Viſitor, who was ſent to procure a ſpeedy Election in any Vacant See, got himſelf ſettled in the See, by the Intereſt which he had gained in the People during his Adminiſtration; yet he was not allowed to continue in the Poſſeſſion of that See, though he had made never ſo ſtrong a Party among the People, or had the Conſent of them all. As appears from a Canon of the Fifth Council of Carthage [s], which is alſo inſerted in the Code of the African Church. The Caſe was the ſame with any Vacant Biſhops, ἐπίσκοποι ἀχολάζοντες, as the Canons call them, who were ordained to ſuch Places as would not receive them: If any of them intruded themſelves into any Vacant Church without the Conſent of the Metropolitan and a Provincial Synod, they were to be rejected, though all the People were unanimous in chuſing

[m] Liberat. Breviar. c. 14. Collecti ſunt Nobiles Civitatis, ut eum qui eſſet vita & ſermone Pontificatu dignus, eligerent —— Noviſſime in Proterium omnium ſententia declinavit. Id. c. 15. Scripſit Imperator Leo Duci Alexandriæ Stilæ, ut pelleret quidem ab Epiſcopatu modis omnibus Timotheum, inthronizaret autem alium Decreto Populi, qui Synodum vindicaret.

[n] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 1. Cum Conſenſu Clericorum & Laicorum, & conventu totius Provinciæ Epiſcoporum, maximeque Metropolitani vel auctoritate vel præſentia ordinetur Epiſcopus. [o] Ibid. Can. 22. Ut Epiſcopus ſine Conſilio Clericorum ſuorum Clericos non ordinet; ita ut Civium Aſſenſum, & Conniventiam, & Teſtimonium quærat.

[p] Collat. Carth. 1. c. 182. Petilianus Epiſcopus dixit: Imo crebros ubi habes Epiſcopos, ſane & ſine Populis habes.

[q] Ruffin. lib. 1. c. 9. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 19. Theodoret. lib. 1. c. 23. [r] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 19. [s] Conc. Carth. 5. c. 8. Placuit, ut nulli Interceſſori licitum ſit, Cathedram cui Interceſſor datus eſt, quibuſlibet Populorum ſtudiis, vel ſeditionibus retinere. Vid. Cod. Can. Eccl. Afr. c. 75.

them, as the Council of Antioch decreed in expreſs terms [t] againſt ſuch Invaders: If, ſay they, a Vacant Biſhop transfers himſelf into a Vacant Church, and ſeizes the Throne by ſtealth, without the Authority of a full Synod of the Province, he ſhall be diſcarded, though all the People upon whom he thruſt himſelf ſhould agree in the Choice of him. The ſame Council has another Canon [u] which prohibits any Biſhop to remove from one Dioceſe to another, either of his own Accord, or by the Compulſion of the People. Which plainly implies, that in all ſuch Caſes no Regard was had to the Choice of the People, when they pretended to Act without the Concurrence of a Provincial Synod.

SECT. XV. 4thly, In Caſe of Factions and Diviſions among the People.

4*thly*, When the People were divided in their Choice, and could not unanimouſly agree upon any one; then to prevent farther Diſputes, and the Miſchievous Conſequences of Faction and Diviſion, it was uſual for the Metropolitan and the Synod to chuſe an indifferent Perſon, whom no Party had named, and prefer him before all the Competitors of the People. And this was uſually done with good Succeſs: For the People commonly were aſhamed of their own Choice, and univerſally acquieſced in this. Sidonius Apollinarius gives us a famous Inſtance in the Ordination of John Biſhop of Chalons: a Triumvirate of Competitors, whoſe Characters were not extraordinary, had by different Intereſts drawn the People into three very great Factions; to remedy which, the Metropolitan privately conſulting with his Fellow Biſhops, but taking none of the People into Council, ordained this John to the ſurprize of them all: But as our Author [w] obſerves, it was managed with that Prudence, that though the Advice of the People was not taken, yet the Holy Man was ordained, to the Aſtoniſhment of the Factious, and Confuſion of the Wicked, with the general Acclamations of the Good, and the Contradictions and Oppoſitions of none. And this was a common Method in caſe of Incurable Diviſions among the People.

SECT. XVI. 5thly, The Emperors ſometimes interpoſed their Authority to prevent Tumults in the like Caſes.

5*thly*, SOMETIMES the Emperors interpoſed their Authority, and themſelves nominated the Perſon whom they would have to be ordained Biſhop, when they found by Experience what dangerous Tumults theſe Popular Elections raiſed among the People. Thus it was in the Caſe of Nectarius Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who was nominated by Theodoſius only. For the People were not ſo much as conſulted in the matter, but the Emperor ordered the Biſhops to give him in a Catalogue of fit Perſons, reſerving the Power of Election entirely to himſelf. Nay, when ſome of the Biſhops objected againſt Nectarius, that he was but a Catechumen and Unbaptized, the Emperor notwithſtanding perſiſted in his Choice, and the Biſhops complied, and immediately Baptized and Ordained him, as Sozomen [x] informs us. Socrates takes notices of the ſame Prerogative made uſe of by Theodoſius Junior upon the like occaſion, who nominated Neſtorius to the See of Conſtantinople, διὰ τὰς κενοσωσίας by reaſon of Factions and Vain-glorious Perſons [y] in the Church. And for the like reaſon, the ſame Author [z] tells us, upon another Vacancy to prevent Tumults in the Election, he gave his Mandate to the Biſhops to inthrone Proclus in the Church. De Marca [a] will furniſh the Reader with other Inſtances, and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory with more to the ſame Purpoſe.

SECT. XVII. 6thly, The People ſometimes reſtrained to the Choice of one out of Three, which were nominated by the Biſhops.

SOMETIMES again we find the People and Clergy were confined in their Choice, to take one out of Three, that were firſt nominated by the Biſhops in Council. Thus it was in France in the Time of the 2d Council of Arles, An. 452, when that Council made an Order about Elections to this purpoſe: That in the Ordination of a Biſhop [b] this Rule ſhould be obſerved, the Biſhops ſhall nominate Three, out of which the Clergy and People ſhall have Power to chuſe one. Other Laws [c] appointed the Clergy and People to nominate Three, and the Metropolitan and Provincial Biſhops to caſt Lots which of the Three ſhould be ordained; which was the Rule of the Spaniſh Church in the Time of the Council of Barcelona, An. 599.

SECT. XVIII. Laſtly, by Juſtinian's Laws the Elections were confined to the Optimates, and the Inferior People wholly excluded.

Laſtly, WE find alſo in Juſtinian's Laws, that a conſiderable Alteration was made in this Affair, where-ever thoſe Laws took Place. For thereby the Inferior ſort of the Common People were wholly cut off from having any Concern in theſe Elections, which were now confined to the Clergy, and the Optimates, or Perſons of better Rank and Quality in every [t] Conc. Antioch. c. 16. Εἴ τις ἐπίσκοπος χολάζων ἐπὶ χολάζουσαν ἐκκλησίαν ἑαυτὸν ἐπῤῥίψας, ὑφαρπάζει τὸν θρόνον δίχα συνόδου τελείας; τοῦτον ἀπόβλητον εἶναι, κἂν εἰ τῆς ὅλης, ὃν ὑφάρπαξεν, ἕλοιτο αὐτόν. [u] Ibid. Can. 21. Ἐπίσκοπον ἀπὸ παροικίας ἑτέρας εἰς ἑτέραν μὴ μεθίσασθαι, μήτε αὐθαιρέτως ἐπῤῥίπτουσα ἑαυτὸν, μήτε ὑπὸ λαῶν ἐκβιαζόμενον. [w] Sidon. lib. 4. ep. 25. Strepitu furentis turbæ deſpecto, ſanctum Johannem, Stupentibus Factioſis, erubeſcentibus Malis, acclamantibus Bonis, reclamantibus nullis, Collegam ſibi conſecravere. [x] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 8. [y] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 29. [z] Idem lib. 7. c. 40. [a] Marca de Concord. lib. 8. c. 9. n. 8. [b] Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 54. Placuit in Ordinatione Epiſcopi hunc ordinem cuſtodiri, ut Tres ab Epiſcopis nominentur, de quibus Clerici vel Cives erga unum habeant eligendi poteſtatem. [c] Conc. Barcinon. Can. 3.

Church. For ſo by two of his Novels [d] it is expreſly provided, that when a Biſhop is to be ordained for any City, the Clergy and Chief Men of the City ſhall meet, and nominate three Perſons, drawing up an Inſtrument, and inſerting therein upon their Oath that they chuſe them neither for any Gift, nor Promiſe, nor Friendſhip, nor any other Cauſe, but becauſe they know them to be of the true Catholick Faith, and of Honeſt Life, and Good Learning, &c. That out of theſe Three, one that is beſt qualified may be choſen by the Diſcretion and Judgment of the Ordainer. De Marca thinks the Council of Laodicea long before made a Canon to the ſame purpoſe, forbidding the Elections of the Clergy to be committed τοῖς ὄχλοις, Vili Plebeculæ, as de Marca renders it [e], that is, to the Common and Inferior ſort of People. But it is not certain the Canon intended the Prohibition in that Senſe; Or if it did, it was of no Force, for the People continued their ancient Practice for ſome Ages after that Council. However upon the whole matter it appears, that this Power of the People did never ſo univerſally obtain, but that it was limited in ſeveral Caſes by certain Reſtrictions, and varied according to the different State of Times, and Nations.

SECT. XIX.

How and When Princes and Patrons came to have the chief Power of Elections.

AT laſt upon the breaking of the Roman Empire, the Gothick Kings in France and Spain were generally complimented with a ſhare in theſe Elections, and their Conſent was as neceſſary as any other to the Ordination of Biſhops within their Dominions. By which means their Power quickly increaſed into a Prerogative of Nominating ſolely, and all others had little elſe to do but to accept their Nominations. Which the Reader that is Curious in this Matter may find diſcourſed at large by de Marca [f] in his Account of the Change that was made in the French and Spaniſh Churches in After-ages, which is none of my Buſineſs here farther to purſue. As to the Power of Nomination in inferior Patrons, it is generally agreed by Learned Men [g], that it came in upon the Diviſion of Dioceſes into diſtinct Pariſhes, and the Founding of Churches in Country Places. For to give greater Encouragement to ſuch Pious and Uſeful Works, the Founder of any Church, who ſettled an Endowment upon it, was allowed to retain the Right of Preſentation to himſelf, to Nominate a fit Clerk to the Biſhop for his Approbation. That which led the way to this Practice, was a Decree of the firſt Council of Orange, An. 441, wherein this Power and Privilege was firſt granted to Biſhops, that if any Biſhop was diſpoſed to found a Church in the Territory of another Biſhop, the Biſhop of the Dioceſe where the Church was built ſhould conſecrate it; Reſerving to the Founder [h] the Right of Nominating ſuch Clerks as he ſhould deſire to have in his own Church, whom the Biſhop of the Dioceſe ſhould ordain at his Requeſt; or if they were already ordained, he ſhould allow them to continue without any Moleſtation. And this Canon is repeated in the 2d Council of Arles [i], in the Editions of Sirmond and Labbe, though it be wanting in ſome others. After this by the Laws of Juſtinian, all Founders of Churches and their Heirs are allowed to Nominate their own Clerks, upon the Right of Patronage, to thoſe Churches. If any Man builds an Oratory, ſays one [k] of his Novels, and either he or his Heirs are minded to have Clerks ordained thereto; if they allow Maintenance to them, and they be Worthy Perſons, ſuch as they Nominate ſhall be Ordained. And the Biſhop has no Power to ordain any other, unleſs the Perſon ſo Nominated be unqualified by the Canons. Another Novel [l] allows the Biſhop Liberty to examine them, and judge of their Qualifications; but if he finds them Worthy, he is obliged to ordain them, having in that Caſe no Power to refuſe them. They who would ſee more of this Matter may conſult our Learned Biſhop Stillingfleet, who gives an Account [m] of the Progreſs of it in future Ages; which being foreign to my Subject, I return to the Buſineſs of Elections in the ancient Church, and proceed to give an Account of the ſeveral Qualifications, that were neceſſarily required in Perſons to be Elected and Ordained to any Office or Dignity in the Church.

[d] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 1. Sancimus, quoties opus fuerit Epiſcopum ordinari, Clericos & Primates Civitatis, cui Epiſcopus ordinandus eſt, mox in tribus Perſonis Decreta facere, propoſitis Sacroſanctis Evangeliis, periculo ſuarum animarum dicentes in ipſis Decretis, quia neque propter aliquam Donationem, neque propter in aliquam Promiſſionem, aut Amicitiam, aut aliam quamlibet cauſam; ſed Scientes eos rectæ & Catholicæ Fidei, & honeſtæ eſſe Vitæ, & Literas noſſe, hos elegerunt: —— Ut ex tribus illis Perſonis melior ordinetur, Electione & Judicio Ordinantis. See alſo Novel. 137. c. 2. & Cod. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 42.

[e] Concil. Laodic. c. 13. Marca de Concord. lib. 8. c. 6. n. 8.

[f] Marca de Concord. lib. 8. c. 9. & 10. [g] See Stillingfleet Unreaſ. of Separ. p. 326. [h] Conc. Araſican. 1. c. 9. Reſervata Ædificatori Epiſcopo hac gratia, ut quos deſiderat Clericos in re ſua videre, ipſos ordinet is in cujus Civitatis Territorio eſt; vel ſi jam ordinati ſunt, ipſos habere acquieſcat. [i] Conc. Arelat. 2. an. 452. can. 36. [k] Novel. 123. c. 18. Si quis Oratorii Domum ædificaverit, & voluerit in ea Clericos ordinare aut ipſe, aut ejus Hæredes: Si expenſas ipſis Clericis miniſtrant, & dignos denominant, denominatos ordinari. Si vero qui ab eis eliguntur, tanquam indignos prohibent ſacræ Regulæ ordinari, tunc Epiſcopus quoſcunque putaverit meliores, ordinari procuret. [l] Novel 57. c. 2. [m] Stillingfl. Unreaſ. of Separ. Par. 3. p. 327.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

Of the Examination and Qualifications of Perſons to be Ordained to any Office of the Clergy in the Primitive Church. And firſt of their Faith and Morals.

SECT. I. Three Enquiries made about Perſons to be ordained, reſpecting, 1ſt, Their Faith. 2dly, Their Morals. 3dly, Their outward Quality and Condition.

BEFORE any Perſon could Regularly be Elected or Ordained to any Clerical Office in the Church, the Electors and Ordainers were obliged to make ſeveral Enquiries concerning him, which I think may be reduced to theſe Three Heads: The Examination of his Faith, his Morals, and his Outward State and Condition in the World. The two firſt of theſe they were moſt ſtrict in Canvaſſing and Examining, becauſe they were more Eſſential and Neceſſary to the Miniſtry: but the Third they did not omit, becauſe the peculiar State of thoſe Times did more eſpecially require it. For then Men were tied by the Laws of the Empire to bear the Offices of the State, according to their Quality and Subſtance, and thoſe Offices were commonly inconſiſtent with the Offices of the Church: Which made it neceſſary to enquire, before Men were ordained, Whether they were under any Obligation to the State, or obnoxious to any diſtinct Power, for fear the Church ſhould ſeem to encroach upon other Men's Rights, or bring Trouble upon herſelf, by having her Clergy recalled to a ſecular Life again.

SECT. II. The Rule and Method of examining their Faith and Learning.

THE Tryal of their Faith and Orthodoxy, under which I alſo comprehend their Learning, was made three Ways: Partly by obliging the Electors to give in their publick Teſtimony of them; partly by obliging the Perſons elected to anſwer to certain Interrogatories or Queſtions of Doctrine that were put to them; and partly by making them ſubſcribe a Body of Articles, or Confeſſion of Faith at the time of their Ordination. By a Law of Juſtinian's [a] the Electors themſelves were to declare upon Oath in the Inſtrument or Decree of Elections, if it were a Biſhop that was choſen, that they knew him to be a Man of the true Catholick Faith, and of a good Life and Converſation, &c. And by the ſame Law the Biſhop to be ordained was required to give in a Libel, or Form of Confeſſion of his Faith, ſubſcribed with his own Hand; and to repeat the Form of Prayer uſed at the Oblation of the Holy Euchariſt, and at Baptiſm, with the other Prayers of the Church. Which was an Intimation that he allowed and approved the Liturgy or Publick Service of the Church. The 4th Council of Carthage preſcribes a particular Form of Examination by way of Interrogatories to the Biſhop who was to be ordained, which is too long to be here inſerted; but it conſiſts chiefly of ſuch Queſtions as relate to the Articles of the Creed, and Doctrines levelled againſt the moſt noted Hereſies [b], that either then were, or lately had been predominant in the Church. Orders alſo are there given to examine, whether the Candidate be well inſtructed in the Law of God, and able to expound the Senſe of Scripture, and be throughly exerciſed in the Doctrines of the Church. By which we may judge what due Precaution was then taken, to admit none but Perſons rightly qualified, as to their Faith, to the chief Adminiſtrations of the Church.

SECT. III. The irregular Ordination of Syneſius conſidered.

UPON which Conſideration it has ſeemed very difficult to ſome Learned Men, to account for the Practice and Conduct of Theophilus of Alexandria, in ordaining Syneſius, at the ſame time that he profeſſed he could not yet believe the Doctrine of the Reſurrection, and ſome other Articles of the Chriſtian Faith. Baronius [c] and Habertus [d], and our Learned Biſhop Taylor [e], reckon he only diſſembled, and uſed this Stratagem to avoid being ordained. But had this been the Caſe, it had ſtill been a juſt Canonical Exception againſt him: For the Canons [f] forbid the Ordination of any one, who accuſes himſelf as guilty of any henious Crime, whether his Accuſation be true or falſe: For he proves himſelf guilty either by confeſſing a Truth, or at leaſt by telling a Lye about it. But indeed the Caſe of Syneſius was no feigned Caſe, for he ſpake the real Senſe of his Soul; as appears not only from what the Hiſtorian [g] ſays of it, but from the Account which he himſelf gives in one of his Epiſtles [h] to his Brother Euoptius: You know, ſays he, that Philoſophy teaches

[a] Juſtin. Novel. 137. n. 2. Quemque ipſorum jurare ſecundum divina Eloquia, & ipſis Pſephiſmatibus inſcribi —— Quod ſcientes ipſos rectæ & Catholicæ Fidei, honeſtæ vitæ, ipſos elegerint. Ibid. Exigi etiam ante omnia ab eo qui ordinandus eſt, Libellum ejus propria ſubſcriptione complectentem quæ ad rectam ejus Fidem pertinent. Enunciari etiam ab ipſo & ſanctam Oblationis Formulam, quæ in ſancta Communione fit, & eam quæ fit in Baptiſmate Precationem, & reliquas Deprecationes.

[b] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 1. [c] Baron. an. 410. Tom. 5. p. 315. [d] Habert. Archieratic. p. 500. [e] Taylor Duct. Dubit. Book 3. c. 2. p. 495. [f] Conc. Valentin. c. 4. Quicunque ſub ordinatione vel Diaconatus, vel Presbyterii, vel Epiſcopatus, mortali crimine ſe dixerint eſſe pollutos, à ſupradictis ordinationibus eſſe ſubmovendos, reos ſcilicet vel veri Confeſſione, vel Mendacio falſitatis. [g] Evagr. lib. 1. c. 15. ἕπω τὸν λόγον τῆ ἀναστάσεως παραδεχόμενον, &c. [h] Syneſ. Ep. 105. p. 397.

teaches the contrary to many of those generally received Doctrines. Therefore I cannot perswade my self, that the Soul is Postnate to the Body; I cannot say that the World and all its Parts shall be dissolved; I look upon the Resurrection to be ἱερόν τι καὶ ἀπόῤῥητον, a sort of mystical and ineffable thing, and am far from assenting to the vulgar Opinions about it.—And now being called to the Priesthood, I would not dissemble these things, but testify them both before God and Man. This Asseveration seems too solemn and serious, to be the Speech of one who was only acting a Part, and dissembling his Opinion; and therefore it is more probable that he was in earnest, as Lucas Holstenius [i] more fully shews in a peculiar Dissertation upon this Subject against Baronius. Valesius, to vindicate Theophilus, says [k] Synesius altered his Opinions before he was ordained: But that is more than can be proved. The best Account of the thing is that which is given by Holstenius, that it was the Man's admirable Virtues, and excellent Qualifications in other respects, and a great Want of fit Men to those difficult Times, that encouraged Theophilus to ordain him, in hopes that God would enlighten his Mind, and not suffer so excellent a Person long to labour under such Errors in Religion. But the fairest Colours that can be put upon it, will hardly justifie a Fact so contrary to the Rules of the Church. The Instance was singular, and never made a Precedent, or drawn into Imitation; the general Practice of the Church being, as has been shewed, to examine Mens Orthodoxy, and require their Assent and Subscriptions to the Rule of Faith before their Ordination.

SECT. IV. A strict Enquiry made into the Morals of such as were to be ordained.

THEIR next Enquiry was into the Morals of the Person to be ordained. And here the Examination was very strict and accurate. For then the Custom was generally to ordain such only as were known to all the People, and of whose Life and Character they were satisfied, and could bear Testimony to them. The Bishops and Presbyters who preside over us, says [l] Tertullian, are advanced to that Honour only by publick Testimony. The Law is, says [m] Cyprian, to chuse Bishops in the Presence of the People, who have perfect Knowledge of every Man's Life, and are acquainted with the Tenour of their Actions by their Conversation.

UPON which Account the Laws forbad the Ordination of Strangers in any Church to which they did not belong. Optatus makes it an Objection against the Donatists, that in the Roman See they never had a Bishop, who was a Citizen of Rome, but still their Succession in that City [n] was supplied by Africans and Strangers. Whereas on the contrary he challenges [o] them to shew, whenever the Church at any time brought a French Man or a Spaniard into Africk; or ordained a Stranger to a People that knew nothing of him. In the Civil Law we have a Constitution of Honorius the Emperor [p] to this Purpose, That no Clerks should be ordained out of any other Possession or Village, but only that where their Church was. Or if any thinks that Decree was made rather for Reasons of State, he may read the same in the Canons of the Church: As in the Council of Eliberis, which [q] decrees, that no Stranger baptized in a foreign Country, should be ordained out of the Province where he was baptized, because his Life and Conversation could not be known. And this Rule was generally observed, except in some extraordinary Cases, when either Publick Fame had made a Man eminent and noted over all the World; or there were some particular Reasons for going against the Rule, of which I have given an Account in another Place. See Book 2. C. 10. Sect 3.

SECT. V. For which Reason no Stranger to be ordained in a foreign Church.

THE Strictness of this Examination, as to Men's Morals, will appear farther from this, that the Commission of any scandalous Crime, for which a Man was obliged to do Penance in the Church, did for ever after, according to the Rules and Discipline of those Times, render that Person irregular and uncapable of Holy Orders. For though they granted Pardon and Absolution and Lay-Communion to all Offenders that submitted to the Discipline of publick Penance; yet they thought it not proper to admit such to Clerical Dignities, but excluded them from the Orders and Promotions of the Church. At least it was thus in most of the Western Churches in the 4th and 5th Centuries, as appears from the Latin Writers of those Ages. The Epistles of Siricius and Innocent shew it to have been the Practice of the Roman Church in their Time. For Siricius [r] says, SECT. VI. Nor any one who had done publick Penance in the Church.

[i] Holsten. Dissert. 3. de Synesio, ap. Vales. Not. in Theodor. p. 203. [k] Vales. Not. in Evagr. lib. 1. c. 15. It. Petav. Vit. Synes. p. 4. [l] Tertul. Apol. c. 39. Præsident apud nos probati quique Seniores, Honorem istum non Pretio, sed Testimonio adepti. [m] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. p. 172. Episcopus deligatur Plebe præsente. quæ singulorum vitam plenissime novit, & uniuscujusque actum de ejus conversatione perspexit.

[n] Optat. lib. 2. p. 48. Quid est hoc, quod Pars vestra in Urbe Roma Episcopum Civem habere non potuit? Quid est quod toti Afri & Peregrini in illa Civitate sibi successisse noscuntur. [o] Ibid. p. 51. Nunquid nos adduximus Hispanum aut Gallum? Aut nos ordinavimus ignorantibus Peregrinum? [p] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. leg. 33. Clerici non ex alia Possessione vel Vico, sed ex eo ubi Ecclesiam esse constiterit, ordinentur.

[q] Conc. Eliber. c. 24. Omnes qui peregre fuerint baptizati, eo quod eorum minime sit cognita vita, placuit, ad Clerum non esse promovendos in alienis Provinciis. [r] Siric. Ep. 1. ad Himer. Tarracon. c. 14. Post Pœnitudinem & Reconciliationem nulli unquam Laico liceat honorem Clericatus adipisci: Quia quamvis sint omnium peccatorum contagione mundati, nulla tamen debent gerendorum Sacramentorum Instrumenta suscipere, qui dudum fuerint Vasa vitiorum.

no Layman after publick Penance and Reconciliation was to be admitted to the Honour of the Clergy: Becauſe though they were cleanſed from the Contagion of all their Sins, yet they ought not to touch the Inſtruments of the Sanctuary, who themſelves before had been the Inſtruments and Veſſels of Sin. The Letters of Innocent [s] are to the ſame purpoſe. And ſo for the French Churches we have the Teſtimony of Gennadus [t] and the 2d Council [u] of Arles, and Agde [w]. And for the Spaniſh Churches a Canon of the 1ſt Council [x] of Toledo, which allows not Penitents to be ordained, except in Caſe of Neceſſity, and then only to the Offices of the Inferior Orders, Door-keepers and Readers. The Practice of the African Churches is evident from the 4th Council of Carthage, which decrees [y] that no Penitent ſhould be ordained, though he was a good Man at the preſent. And if any ſuch was ordained by the Biſhop's Ignorance, not knowing his Character, he ſhould be depoſed, becauſe he did not declare that he had been a Penitent, at the Time of his Ordination. By this we may underſtand what Optatus means, when ſpeaking of the Donatiſts, who made ſome of the Catholick Children do publick Penance in the Church, he ſays they thereby gave them a Wound, which was intended [z] to cut them off from the Benefit of Ordination; plainly referring to this Rule in the Church, that he who had done publick Penance, was thereby made uncapable of Ordination. Which ſeems alſo to be St. Auſtin's Meaning, when ſpeaking of a Chriſtian Aſtrologer, who had done Penance for his Fault, he ſays, his Converſion perhaps [a] might make ſome think he intended to get an Office among the Clergy of the Church: But no, ſays he, he is a Penitent; he ſeeks nothing more but only a Pardon and Abſolution: Meaning that a Perſon in his Circumſtances could not pretend to ſue for Orders by the Rules and Canons of the Church. But we are to note, that this is always to be underſtood of publick Penance, not of private: For the Council of Girone or Gerunda in Catalonia expreſly makes this Diſtinction [b] between publick Penance in the Church, and private Penance in time of Sickneſs; making the one to incapacitate Men from taking Orders, but not the other. And in all other Canons, where this Diſtinction is not expreſſed, it is always to be underſtood. For it was only that Penance which left ſome publick Mark of Diſgrace upon Men, which unqualified them for the Orders of the Church. But this Rule might be diſpenſed with in extraordinary Caſes, and there are ſome Learned Men who think, it was not ſo generally inſiſted on in the three firſt Ages of the Church.

SECT. VII. No Murderer to be ordained, nor Adulterer, nor one that had lapſed in Time of Perſecution.

As to particular Crimes, there were a great many that unqualified Men, whether they had done publick Penance for them or not. Such as the three great Crimes of Murder, Adultery, and Lapſing in Time of Perſecution. The Council of Toledo [c] ſets Murder in the Front of thoſe Sins which exclude Men from Holy Orders. The Crime of Fornication and Adultery is noted upon the ſame Account by thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [d], the Council of Neo-Cæſarea [e], the Council of Nice [f], Eliberis [g], and ſeveral others. Nay the Council of Neo-Cæſarea goes a little farther, and decrees [h] that if any Man's Wife commit Adultery whilſt he was a Layman, he ſhould not be admitted to any Eccleſiaſtical Function. Or if ſhe committed Adultery when he was in Office, he muſt give her a Bill of Divorce and put her away; otherwiſe be degraded from his Office. As to the Crime of Lapſing and Sacrificing in time of Perſecution, Origen [i] aſſures us it was the Cuſtom of the Church in his Time to exclude ſuch as were guilty of it, from all Eccleſiaſtical Power and Government. And Athanaſius [k] ſays the ſame, that they were allowed the Privilege of Repentance, but not to have any Place among the Clergy. Or if any were ignorantly ordained, they were to be depoſed as ſoon as they were diſcovered, by a Rule [l] of the great Council of Nice. Which was no new Rule, but the ancient Rule of the whole Catholick Church: For Cyprian [m] ſays it was agreed upon at Rome, and in Africk, and by the Biſhops of the whole World, that ſuch Men might be admitted to Repentance; but ſhould be kept back from the Ordinations of the Clergy, and the Honour of the Prieſthood. Upon this account the Arians themſelves, though they were not much given to act by Rules, ſometimes thought fit to deny Men Ordination; As Athanaſius [n] and Socrates [o] ſay they did by Auſte-

[s] Innoc. Ep. 22. c. 3. Ubi Pœnitentiæ remedium neceſſarium eſt: illic Ordinationis honorem locum habere non poſſe.
[t] Gennad. de Eccl. Dogm. c. 73. [u] Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 25.
[w] Conc. Agath. c. 43. De Pœnitentibus nullus Clericus ordinetur. [x] Conc. Tolet. 1. c. 2. Pœnitentes non admittantur ad Clerum, niſi tantum neceſſitas aut uſus exegerit, & tunc inter Oſtiarios deputentur, vel inter Lectores. [y] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 68. Ex Pœnitentibus (quamvis ſit bonus) Clericus non ordinetur. Si per ignorantiam Epiſcopi factum fuerit, deponatur à Clero, quia ſe Ordinationis tempore non prodidit fuiſſe Pœnitentem. [z] Optat. lib. 2. p. 59. Inveniſtis pueros, de Pœnitentia ſauciaſtis, ne aliqui ordinari potuiſſent. [a] Aug. Append. Enarrat. Pſal. 61. Poſſet videri, quia ſic converſus eſt, Clericatum quærere in Eccleſia. Pœnitens eſt: Non quærit niſi ſolam Miſericordiam. Vid. Aug. Ep. 50. ad Bonifac. p. 87.
[b] Conc. Gerundenſ. an. 517. c. 9. Qui ægritudinis languore depreſſus, Pœnitentiæ Benedictionem, quam Viaticum deputamus, per Communionem acceperit; & poſtmodum reconvaleſcens caput Pœnitentiæ in Eccleſia publicè non ſubdiderit; ſit prohibitis vitiis non detinetur obnoxius, admittatur ad Clerum.
[c] Conc. Tolet. 1. can. 2. [d] Canon. Apoſt. c. 61.
[e] Conc. Neo-cæſ. c. 9. & 10. [f] Conc. Nic. c. 2.
[g] Conc. Eliber. c. 30. [h] Conc. Neo-Cæſ. c. 8. [i] Origen. cont. Celſ. lib. 3. p. 143. [k] Athan. Ep. ad Ruffin. Tom. 2. p. 41. [l] Conc. Nic. c. 10. [m] Cypr. Ep. 68. al. 67. p. 174. Cum jampridem nobiſcum, & cum omnibus omnino Epiſcopis in toto mundo conſtitutis, etiam Cornelius Collega noſter —— decreverit, ejuſmodi homines ad pœnitentiam quidem agendam poſſe admitti; ab ordinatione autem Cleri, atque Sacerdotali honore prohiberi. [n] Athan. de Synod. Arim. & Seleuc. Tom. 1. p. 887. [o] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 36.

rius the Sophiſt, whom they would not Ordain, becauſe he had Sacrificed in time of Perſecution. But they were far from being conſtant to this Rule; for if Philoſtorgius [p] ſays true, the Leading Biſhops of the Arian Party, Euſebius of Nicomedia, Maris of Chalcedon, Theognis of Nice, Leontius of Antioch, Antonius of Tarſus, Manophantus of Epheſus, Numenius, Eudoxius, Alexander and Aſterius of Cappadocia, all Sacrificed in the Diocletian Perſecution. But then it muſt be owned, that ſome of theſe were ordained Biſhops in the Church, before the Arian Hereſy began to appear: Whence we muſt conclude, that either the Biſhops who ordained them, knew nothing of their Lapſing; or elſe that the Church her ſelf ſometimes granted Diſpenſations in this Caſe alſo. Baronius [q] and ſome others, lay it to the charge of Euſebius the Hiſtorian, that he Sacrificed in Time of Perſecution: Petavius [r], and Huetius [s], and Mr. Pagi [t] bring the ſame Charge againſt Origen out of Epiphanius, the firſt Reporter of the Story: Whilſt Valeſius [u] and du Pin [w] undertake to vindicate the Reputation of Origen from ſo foul an Aſperſion; And Hanckius [x] and Dr. Cave [y] do the ſame for Euſebius. I will not interpoſe in theſe Controverſies, but only obſerve, that if the Accuſations brought againſt thoſe two Perſons were true, the Conſequence muſt be, either that Perſons who had lapſed might be ordained, or at leaſt continue in their Orders undepoſed, when the Church ſaw fit to diſpenſe with her Ordinary Rule; which probably was not ſo ſtrict, but that it might admit of ſome Relaxation, when proper Occaſions and Caſes Extraordinary ſeemed to require it.

SECT. VIII. No Uſurer, or Seditious Perſon.

ANOTHER Crime which unqualified Men for Orders in thoſe Times, was Sedition or Rebellion: For he that ſtood convicted of Treaſonable Practices was never to be Ordained. This appears from the fourth Council [z] of Carthage, which joyns the Seditious and Uſurers together, and excludes them both from Ordination. As to the Crime of Uſury, I ſhall not here ſtand to explain the Nature of it, which will be done in a more convenient Place [zz], but only obſerve, that this Crime in the Senſe in which the Ancients condemned it, was of ſuch an odious and ſcandalous Nature, as to debar Men that had been guilty of it, from the Honour and Privilege of Ordination. Whence Gennadius ſpeaking of the Practice of the Latin Church, and the Qualifications required in Perſons to be ordained, ſays, they muſt not be Men convicted of taking Uſury [a]. In the Greek Church, at leaſt in the Province of Cappadocia, the Rule ſeems not to have been altogether ſo ſtrict: For St. Baſil's Canons [b] do not abſolutely exclude ſuch from the Miniſtry, but allow them to be Ordained, provided they firſt gave away to the Poor what they had gained by Uſury, and promiſed not to exerciſe it for the future.

SECT. IX. Nor one who had voluntarily Diſmembred his own Body.

ANOTHER Crime which made a Man Irregular, and debarred him from the Privilege of Ordination, was the Disfiguring or Diſmembring of his own Body. If any Man indeed happened to be Born an Eunuch, there was no Law againſt his Ordination: For Euſebius [c] ſays, Dorotheus Presbyter of Antioch was an Eunuch from his Mother's Womb; And Socrates [d] and Sozomen ſay of Tigris Presbyter of Conſtantinople, that he was made an Eunuch by a Barbarian Maſter. Or if a Man had ſuffered the loſs of any Member by the Cruelty of the Perſecutors, as many Confeſſors in the Dioclefian Perſecution had their right Eyes bored out, and their left Legs infeebled; in that Caſe there was no Prohibition of their Ordination, except they were utterly incapacitated from doing the Office of Miniſters, by being made Blind, or Deaf, or Dumb; for ſo thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [e] determined: A Man that had loſt an Eye, or is maimed in his Leg, may be ordained Biſhop, if he be otherwiſe Worthy. For it is not any Imperfection of Body that defiles a Man, but the Pollution of his Soul. Yet if a Man is Deaf or Blind, he ſhall not be made Biſhop; not becauſe he is polluted, but becauſe he will not be able to perform the Duties of his Function. The Council of Nice adds a 3d Caſe, in which it was not lawful to ordain diſmembred Perſons, which was when in Caſe of a mortal Diſtemper the Phyſicians thought it neceſſary to cut off one Limb of the Body to ſave the whole. All theſe were excepted Caſes, and the Prohibition of the Canon did not extend to them: But the Crime was when any one diſmembred himſelf in Health, as the Nicene Canon [f] words it; ſuch an one was not to be ordained, or if he was ordained when he committed the Fact, he was to be depoſed. The Apoſtolical Canons [g] give this Reaſon for it, becauſe ſuch an one is in effect a Self-Murderer, and an Enemy of the Workmanſhip of God. Nor was it any Excuſe in this Caſe, that a Man made himſelf an Eunuch out of pretended Piety, or to avoid Fornication. For ſuch were liable to the Penalty of the Canon, as well as any others; which is noted by Gennadius [h] and the Council [i] of Arles. And indeed the firſt Rea[p] Philoſtorg. lib. 2. c. 14. [q] Baron. ad an. 335. n. 8. [r] Petav. Animadverſ. in Epiphan. Hær. 64. n. 2. [s] Huet. Origenian. lib. 1. c. 4. [t] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 251. n. 6. [u] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 39. [w] Du Pin Bibliotheque Tom 1. p. 444. [x] Hanckius de Scriptor. Byzantin. Par. 1. c. 1. n. 158. [y] Cave Hiſt. Liter. Vol. 1. p. 128. [z] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 67. Seditionarios nunquam ordinandos Clericos, ſicut nec Uſuarios. [zz] Book 6. [a] Gennad. de Eccleſ. Dogm. c. 73. Neque illum qui Uſuras accepiſſe convincitur. [b] Baſil. Can. 14. ap. Bevereg. Pandect. Tom. 2. [c] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 32. [d] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 15. Sozom. lib. 8. c. 24. [e] Canon. Apoſt. c. 76. & 77. [f] Conc. Nic. c. 1. [g] Canon. Apoſt. c. 21. [h] Gennad. de Eccleſ. Dogm. c. 73. [i] Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 7. Si qui ſe, carnali vitio repugnare neſcientes, abſcindunt, ad Clerum pervenire non poſſunt.

ſon

ſon of making the Canon was to prevent the miſtaken Notion of Piety, which had once poſſeſſed Origen [k], who taking thoſe Words of our Saviour, There are ſome that make themſelves Eunuchs for the Kingdom of Heaven's Sake, in a wrong Senſe, fulfilled them Literally upon himſelf. And the Valeſian Hereticks carried the Matter a little farther, aſſerting, that Men ought to ſerve God after that Manner; and therefore they both made themſelves Eunuchs, and all that came over to them, as St. Auſtin [l] informs us. It was to correct and diſcountenance theſe enormous Opinions and Practices, that the Church at firſt made this Rule; which was ſo nicely obſerved, that we ſcarce meet with two Inſtances to the contrary in After-ages. Leontius made himſelf an Eunuch, to avoid Suſpicion in his Converſe with the Virgin Euſtolium; but he was depoſed from the Office of Presbyter for the Fact, and it gave occaſion to the Council of Nice to renew the ancient Canon againſt ſuch Practices; ſo that when the Arians afterward ordained him Biſhop of Antioch, the Hiſtorians [m] tell us, the Catholicks generally declaimed againſt his Ordination as Uncanonical. The only Inſtance that looks like a Diſpenſation with this Rule, is what we have in Baronius concerning Timotheus Biſhop of Alexandria his Ordaining Ammon the Egyptian Monk, who to avoid being Ordained had cut off his own right Ear, to make himſelf Irregular; notwithſtanding which, Baronius [n] ſays, Timotheus ordained him, and juſtified what he did with this Expreſſion: That this Law indeed was obſerved by the Jews; but for his own part, if they brought to him a Man without a Noſe, that was but of good Morals, he would ordain him Biſhop. But there is ſome reaſon to queſtion the Truth of this Narration; for not only Palladius, whom Baronius cites, but Socrates and [o] Sozomen in telling the Story, ſeem rather to intimate that he was not Ordained. However ſuppoſing it to be true, it is a ſingular Inſtance, and we ſhall hardly find ſuch another in all the Hiſtory of the Church. Which ſhews how cautious the Ancients were in obſerving this Rule, that they might not bring any Diſrepute or Scandal upon the Church.

SECT. X.

Men only accountable for Crimes committed after Baptiſm, as to what concerned Ordination.

BUT in all theſe and the like Caſes there is one thing particularly to be obſerved, that the Crimes which made Men irregular, were generally underſtood to be ſuch only as were committed after Baptiſm. For all Crimes committed before Baptiſm were ſuppoſed to be ſo purged away in the Waters of Baptiſm, as that a perfect Amneſty paſſed upon them, and Men notwithſtanding them were capable of Ordination. So that not only the Crimes which Men committed whilſt they were Heathens, but ſuch as they fell into when they were Catechumens, were overlooked in this Enquiry, when their Morals came to be examined for Ordination. This is evident not only from the known Caſe of St. Auſtin, whoſe Faults were never objected to him at his Ordination, becauſe they were only ſuch as preceded his Baptiſm; but alſo from the Rule made in the Council of Ancyra, in the Caſe of ſuch as lapſed into Idolatry whilſt they were only Catechumens. For the Canon [p] ſays, That ſuch as Sacrificed before Baptiſm, and were afterward Baptized, might be promoted to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, as Perſons that were cleanſed from all Crimes by the Sanctification of Baptiſm. 'Tis true, only that one Crime of Sacrificing is here ſpecified; but by Parity of Reaſon the Rule muſt be underſtood to extend to all other Caſes of the like Nature: And ſo the Practice of the Church has commonly determined it.

SECT. XI.

Except any great Irregularity happened in their Baptiſm it ſelf. As in the Caſe of Clinick Baptiſm.

YET here again we muſt obſerve, that if any great Irregularity happened in Men's Baptiſm it ſelf, ſuch Crimes were always objected againſt them, to debar them from Ordination. Thus it was frequently with thoſe who were Baptized only with Clinick Baptiſm, in Time of Sickneſs or urgent Neceſſity, when they had careleſly deferred their Baptiſm to ſuch a Critical Moment, and might have had it ſooner, had it not been their own Default. This Delaying of Baptiſm was always eſteemed a very great Crime, and worthy of ſome Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure: And therefore the Church, among other Methods which ſhe took to diſcountenance the Practice of it, thought fit to puniſh Perſons who had been Guilty of it, and had put themſelves upon the Fatal Neceſſity of a Clinick Baptiſm, by denying them Ordination. We have a Canon in the Council of Neo-Cæſarea [q], to this purpoſe: If any Man is Baptized only in Time of Sickneſs, he ſhall not be Ordained a Presbyter; becauſe his Faith was not Voluntary, but as it were of Conſtraint; except his ſubſequent Faith and Diligence recommend him, or elſe the ſcarcity of Men make it neceſſary to ordain him. And that this was an old Rule of the Church, appears from the Account which Cornelius [r] gives of the Ordination of Novatian to be Preſbyter. He ſays, the Clergy and many of the People objected againſt it, alledging, that it was not Lawful to Ordain one who had been Baptized upon his Bed in Time of Sickneſs; and that the Biſhop was forced to intercede with them, to give way to his Ordination, as a Matter of Grace and Favour. Which ſhews, that the Ordination of ſuch was contrary to the common Rule and Practice of the Church.

[k] Vid. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 8. Epiphan. Hær. 64. n. 3. [l] Aug. de Hæreſ. c. 37. Valeſii & ſeipſos caſtrant, & hoſpites ſuos, hoc modo exiſtimantes Deo ſe debere ſervire. [m] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 26. Theodor. lib. 2. c. 24. [n] Baron. an. 385. p. 613. [o] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. Sozom. lib. 7. c. 30. Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 12. [p] Conc. Ancyr. c. 12. [q] Conc. Neo-Cæſ. c. 12. [r] Ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43.

SECT. XII. And Heretical Baptiſm.

IN like manner they who were Baptized by Hereticks, were not ordinarily allowed Clerical Promotion, when they returned to the Boſom of the Catholick Church. The Council of Eliberis is very peremptory [s] in its Decree, That whatever Hereſy they came from, they ſhould not be Ordained: Or if any ſuch were already Ordained, they ſhould be undoubtedly degraded. Pope Innocent [t] teſtifies for the ſame Practice in the Roman Church, ſaying, It is the Cuſtom of our Church, to grant only Lay-Communion to thoſe that return from Hereticks, by whom they were Baptized, and not to admit any of them to the very loweſt Order of the Clergy. But it muſt be confeſt, that the Council of Nice diſpenſed with the Novatians [u] in this reſpect, allowing their Clergy, though both Baptized and Ordained among them, to be received with Impoſition of Hands, and retain their Orders in the Church. And the African Fathers granted the ſame Indulgence to the Donatiſts, to encourage them to return to the Unity of the Catholick Church. For in the Council of Carthage, An. 397, which is inſerted into the African [w] Code, a Propoſal was made, that ſuch as had been Baptized among the Donatiſts in their Infancy, by their Parents Fault, without their own Knowledge and Conſent, ſhould upon their Return to the Church, be allowed the Privilege of Ordination: And in the next Council [x] the Propoſal was accepted, and a Decree paſt accordingly in favour of them. By which we may underſtand, that this was a Piece of Diſcipline, that might be inſiſted on or waved, according as Church-Governors in Prudence thought moſt for the Benefit and Advantage of the Church. But in caſe the Perſons ſo returning had been baptized by ſuch Hereticks, whoſe Baptiſm was null, and to be reiterated in the Church; as the Baptiſm of the Paulianiſts, or Samoſatenian Hereticks was; in that Caſe it was determined by the great Council of Nice, that ſuch Perſons when they were rebaptized, might be [y] ordained. For Baptiſm, as has been noted before, ſet Men clear of all Crimes: And their former Baptiſm being null, that was reckoned their only Baptiſm, which they received at their Return to the Catholick Church; and no Crimes committed before that were then to prejudice their Ordination in the Church.

SECT. XIII. No Man to be ordained, who had not made all his Family Catholick Chriſtians.

I cannot here omit to mention another Qualification required of Perſons to be ordained, becauſe it was of great Uſe and Service in the Church; which was, That none ſhould be admitted at leaſt to the Superior Degrees of Biſhops, Presbyters, or Deacons, before they had made all the Members of their Family Catholick Chriſtians. This is a Rule we find in the 3d Council of Carthage [z], which was equally deſigned to promote the Converſion of Pagans, Jews, Hereticks, and Schiſmaticks, who are all oppoſed to Catholick Chriſtians: And it was a very proper Rule in that Caſe; ſince nothing could be more diſadvantageous or diſhonourable to Religion, than to have any Countenance or ſecret Encouragement given to its Oppoſers, by thoſe who were deſigned to ſerve at the Altar. Beſides that this was but a proper Way of making Repriſals upon the Heathen Religion. For Julian had made a like Decree for his Pagan Prieſts, in Oppoſition to the Chriſtians; charging Arſacius, High-Prieſt of Galatia, that he ſhould admit none [a] to the Prieſt's Office, who tolerated either Servants or Children, or Wives that were Galilæans; and did not come with their whole Family and Retinue to the Worſhip of the Gods in the Idol-Temples. It had been a great Omiſſion and Overſight in the Governors of the Chriſtian Church, had they not been as careful to ſecure the Intereſt of the true Religion in the Families of their Miniſters, as that Pagan Prince was to ſecure a falſe Religion among his Idol-Prieſts: And therefore had there been nothing more than Emulation in the Caſe, yet that had been a ſufficient Reaſon to have laid this Injunction upon all the Candidates of the Chriſtian Prieſthood.

SECT. XIV. What Methods were anciently taken to prevent Simoniacal Promotions.

THERE is but one Qualification more I ſhall mention under this Head, which was, That Men ſhould come honeſtly and legally to their Preferment, and uſe no indirect or ſiniſter Arts to procure themſelves an Ordination. Merit, and not Bribery, was to be their Advocate, and the only thing to be conſidered in all Elections. In the three firſt Ages, whilſt the Preferments were ſmall, and the Perſecutions great, there was no great Danger of ambitious Spirits, nor any great Occaſion to make Laws againſt Simoniacal Promotions. For then Martyrdom was as it were a Thing annexed to a Biſhoprick; and the firſt Perſons that were commonly aimed and ſtruck at, were the Rulers and Governors of the Church. But in After-ages, Ambition and Bribery crept in among other Vices, and then ſevere Laws were made both in Church and State to check and prevent them. Sulpitius Severus takes notice of this Difference betwixt the Ages of Perſecution, and thoſe that follow'd, when he

[s] Conc. Eliber. c. 51. Ex omni Hæreſi qui ad nos Fidelis venerit, minime eſt ad Clerum promovendus. Vel ſi qui ſunt in præteritum ordinati, ſine dubio deponentur. [t] Innoc. Ep. 22. Noſtræ Lex Eccleſiæ eſt, venientibus ab Hæreticis, qui tamen illic baptizati ſunt, per manus Impoſitionem Laicam tantum tribuere Communionem, nec ex his aliquem in Clericatûs honorem vel exiguum ſubrogare. [u] Conc. Nic. c. 8. χειροθετηθέντες οὕτως μένειν ἔτως ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ. [w] Cod. Can. Afric. c. 48. al. 47. [x] Ibid. c. 58. al. 57. [y] Conc. Nic. c. 19. ἀναβαπτιζομένους ὅμως τοὺς ἱερωσαν. [z] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 18. Ut Epiſcopi, Presbyteri, & Diaconi non ordinentur, priuſquam omnes qui ſunt in domo eorum Chriſtianos Catholicos fecerint. [a] Julian. Ep. ad Arſac. ap. Sozomen. lib. 5. c. 16.

ſays

ſays [b], that in the former, Men ſtrove who ſhould run faſteſt to thoſe glorious Combats, and more greedily ſought for Martyrdom by honourable Deaths, than in After-times by wicked Ambitions they ſought for the Biſhopricks of the Church. This implies, that in the Age when Sulpitius lived, in the 5th Century, ſome irregular Arts were uſed by particular Men to advance themſelves to the Preferments of the Church. To correct whoſe Ambition and ill Deſigns, the Church inflicted very ſevere Cenſures upon all ſuch as were found guilty of Simony, or as ſome then [c] called it, χρεμπορίαν, the ſelling of Chriſt. The Council of Chalcedon decreed [d], That if any Biſhop gave Ordination, or an Eccleſiaſtical Office or Preferment of any kind for Money, he himſelf ſhould loſe his Office, and the Party ſo preferred be depoſed. And the Reader may find ſeveral other Conſtitutions of the ſame Import in thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [e], the Council of Conſtantinople [f] under Gennadius, Ann. 459, the 2d Council of Orleans [g], Bracara [h] and many others. The Imperial Laws alſo were very properly contriv'd to prevent this Abuſe. For by one of Juſtinian's Laws [i] it was enacted, That whenever a Biſhop was to be choſen, the Electors themſelves ſhould take an Oath, and inſert it into the Election-Paper, that they did not chuſe him for any Gift, or Promiſe, or Friendſhip, or any other Cauſe, but only becauſe they knew him to be a Man of the true Catholick Faith, and an unblameable Life, and good Learning. And in another of his Laws, where the ſame Injunction is repeated, 'tis farther provided, That the Party elected ſhall alſo at the time of his Ordination take an Oath, upon the Holy Goſpels, that he neither gave [k] nor promiſed, by himſelf or others, nor hereafter will give to his Ordainer, or to his Electors, or any other Perſon, any thing to procure him an Ordination. And for any Biſhop to ordain another without obſerving the Rule preſcribed, is Depoſition by the ſame Law, both for himſelf and the other whom he ordained. Theſe were ſome of thoſe ancient Rules to be obſerved in the Examination of Men's Lives and Morals, before they were conſecrated to the ſacred Function, or admitted to ſerve in any of the chief Offices of the Church.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Qualifications of Perſons to be ordained, reſpecting their outward State and Condition in the World.

SECT. I. No Soldier to be ordained.

A Third Enquiry was made into Men's outward State and Condition in the World. For there were ſome Callings and States of Life, which debarred Men from the Privilege of Ordination, not becauſe they were eſteemed abſolutely ſinful Vocations, but becauſe the Duties attending them were commonly incompatible and inconſiſtent with the Offices of the Clergy. Of this Nature were all thoſe Callings, which come under the general Name of Militia Romana, which we cannot ſo properly engliſh, the Military Life, as, the Service of the Empire. For it includes ſeveral Offices, as well Civil, as Military: The Romans, as Gothofred and other Learned [a] Perſons have obſerved, calling all Inferior Offices by the Name of Militia: So there were three ſorts of it, Militia Palatina, Militia Caſtrenſis or Armata, and Militia Præſidialis or Cohortalis: The firſt including the Officers of the Emperor's Palace; the ſecond, the armed Soldiery of the Camp; and the third, the Apparitors and Officials of Judges and Governors of Provinces; all which were ſo tied to their Service, that they could not forſake their Station: And for that Reaſon the Laws of the State forbad any of them to be entertained as Eccleſiaſticks, or ordained among the Clergy. Honorius [b] the Emperor particularly made a Law to this purpoſe, That no one who was originally tied to the Military Life, as ſome were even by Birth, ſhould either before or after they were entred upon that Life, take upon them any Clerical Office, or think to excuſe themſelves from their Service under the Notion of becoming Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. The Canons of the Church ſeem to have carried the Matter a little farther: For they forbad the Ordination of [b] Sever. Hiſt. lib. 2. p. 99. Certatim in glorioſa certamina ruebatur, multoque avidius tum Martyria glorioſis mortibus quærebantur, quam nunc Epiſcopatus pravis ambitionibus appetuntur. [c] Vid. Epiſt. Alexandri Alexandrini ap. Theodor. lib. 1. c. 4. [d] Conc. Chalced. c. 2. [e] Canon. Apoſt. c. 29. [f] Conc. CP. Epiſt. Synod. Con. Tom. 4. p. 1025. [g] Conc. Aurel. 2. c. 3. & 4. [h] Bracar. 2. c. 3. [i] Juſtin Novel. 123. c. 1. Propoſitis eis ſacroſanctis Evangeliis, periculo ſuarum animarum dicentes in ipſis Decretis, quia neque propter aliquam Donationem, nec Promiſſionem, aut Amicitiam, aut aliam quamlibet cauſam, ſed ſcientes eos rectæ & Catholicæ Fidei, & honeſtæ eſſe Vitæ, & literas noſſe, hos elegerunt. [k] Novel. 137. c. 2. Jusjurandum autem ſuſcipere eum qui ordinatur, per Divinas Scripturas, quod neque per ſe ipſum neque per aliam Perſonam dedit quid, aut promiſit, neque poſthac dabit, vel Ordinanti ipſum, vel his qui ſacra pro eo Suffragia fecerunt, vel alii cuiquam Ordinationis de ipſo faciendæ nomine, &c. [a] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 63. Valeſ. Not. in Sozomen. lib. 5. c. 4. Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 375. n. 11. [b] Cod. Th. lib. 7. tit. 20. de Veteranis leg. 12. Quoniam plurimos vel ante militiam, vel poſt inchoatam, nec peractam, latere objectu piæ Religionis agnovimus, dum ſe quidam vocabulo Clericorum —— defendunt, nulli omnino tali excuſari objectione permittimus, &c.

any who had been Soldiers after Baptiſm, becauſe they might perhaps have embrued their Hands in Blood. This appears from the Letters of Innocent I. who blames the Spaniſh Churches [c] for admitting ſuch Perſons into Orders, alledging the Canons of the Church againſt it. The firſt Council of Toledo forbids any ſuch to be ordained Deacons, though they had never been concerned in ſhedding of Blood; becauſe [d] though they had not actually ſhed Blood, yet by entering upon the Military Life they had obliged themſelves, if Occaſion had ſo required, to have done it. Which ſeems to import, that Soldiers might be allowed in the Inferior Services, but were not to be admitted to the Sacred and Superior Orders of the Church.

SECT. II.

Nor any Slave or Freedman without the Conſent of his Patron.

ANOTHER State of Life, which debarred Men from the Privilege of Ordination, was that of Slaves or Vaſſals in the Roman Empire; who being originally tied by Birth or Purchaſe to their Patron's or Maſter's Service, could not legally be ordained, becauſe the Service of the Church was incompatible with their other Duties; and no Man was to be defrauded of his Right under Pretence of an Ordination. In this Caſe therefore the Patron was always to be conſulted, before the Servant was ordained. Thus in one of thoſe called the Apoſtolical [e] Canons we find a Decree, that no Servants ſhould be admitted among the Clergy without the Conſent of their Maſters, to the Grievance of the Owners, and Subverſion of their Families. But if a Servant be found worthy of an Eccleſiaſtical Promotion, as Oneſimus was, and his Maſter give his Conſent, and grant him his Freedom, and let him go forth from his Houſe, he may be ordained. The Council of Toledo [f] has a Canon to the ſame Purpoſe. And the Council of Eliberis [g] goes a little farther, and ſays, Though a ſecular Maſter, that is, an Heathen, as Albaſpinæus interprets it, had made his Servant a Freeman, he ſhould not be Ordained. The Reaſon of which is conceived to be, that ſuch Maſters gave them only a Conditional Freedom, and ſtill retained a Right to exact certain Services and Manual Labours of them, which would not conſiſt with the Service of the Church. The Imperial Laws alſo [h] made Proviſion in this Caſe, that no Perſons under ſuch Obligations ſhould be admitted to any Office of the Clergy; Or if they were admitted, merely to evade their Obligations, their Maſters ſhould have Power to recall them to their Service, unleſs they were Biſhops or Presbyters, or had continued thirty Years in ſome other Office of the Church. By which it appears, that the Ordination of ſuch Perſons was prohibited only upon a Civil Account; not becauſe that State of Life was Sinful, or that it was any Undervaluing or Diſgrace to the Function to have ſuch Perſons Ordained, but becauſe the Duties of the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical State would not well conſiſt together.

SECT. III.

Nor any Member of a Civil Company or Society of Tradeſmen, who were tied to the Service of the Common-wealth.

FOR the ſame Reaſon the Laws forbad the Ordination of any Perſons, who were incorporated into any Society for the Service of the Common-wealth, unleſs they had firſt obtained the leave of the Society, and Prince, under whom they ſerved. This is the meaning of that Law [i] of Juſtinian, which forbids any of thoſe called ϖαξεῶται, or Cohortales, that is, the Officers or Apparitors of Judges, to be Ordained, unleſs they had firſt ſpent Fifteen Years in a Monaſtick Life. And the firſt Council of Orleans [k] requires expreſly either the Command of the Prince, or the Conſent of the Judge, before any ſuch ſecular Officer be Ordained. By the Laws of Theodoſius Junior [l] and Valentinian 3d [m], all Corporation-Men are forbidden to be Ordained; and if any ſuch were Ordained among the inferior Clergy, they were to be reconciled by their Reſpective Companies; If among the Superior, Biſhops, Presbyters, or Deacons, they muſt provide a proper Subſtitute, qualified with their Eſtate to ſerve in the Company from whence they were taken. The Reader that is curious in this matter, may find ſeveral other Laws in the Theodoſian Code [n] made by the elder Valentinian and Theodoſius the Great, with reſpect to particular Civil Societies ſo incorporated for the Uſe of the Publick; no Member of which might be Ordained, but either they muſt quit their Eſtates, or be liable to be recalled to the Service which they had unwarrantably forſaken.

---

[c] Innoc. Ep. 24. c. 2. Quantos ex Militia, qui cum Poteſtatibus obedierunt, ſevera neceſſario præcepta ſunt executi. Ibid. c. 4. Ne quiſpiam qui poſt Baptiſmum militaverit, ad ordinem debeat Clericatûs admitti. Vid. Ep. 2. ad Victricium Rothomagenſ. c. 2. [d] Conc. Tolet. 1. c. 8. Si quis poſt Baptiſmum militaverit, & Chlamydem ſumpſerit, aut Cingulum ad necandos Fideles, etiamſi gravia non admiſerit, ſi ad Clerum admiſſus fuerit, Diaconii non accipiat dignitatem. [e] Canon. Apoſt. c. 12. [f] Conc. Tolet. 1. c. 10. Clericos, ſi quidem obligati ſint vel pro Æquatione, vel de genere alicujus domûs non ordinandos, niſi probatæ vitæ fuerint, & Patroni conſenſus acceſſerit. [g] Conc. Eliber. c. 80. Prohibendum eſt, ut Liberti, quorum Patroni in ſæculo fuerint, ad Clerum provehantur. [h] Valent. 3. Novel. 12. ad Calcem Cod. Th. Nullus Originarius, Inquilinus, Servus, vel Colonus ad Clericale munus accedat —— ut vinculum debitæ conditionis evadat. —— Originarii ſane vel Servi, qui jugum Natalium declinantes, ad Eccleſiaſticum ſe Ordinem tranſtulerunt, exceptis Epiſcopis & Presbyteris, ad Dominorum jura recedant, ſi non in eodem Officio annum Triceſimum complerunt. [i] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 15. Sed neque Cohortales, neque Decuriones Clerici fiunto. —— Dempto ſi Monachicam aliquis ex ipſis vitam non minus quindecim annis tranſegerit. [k] Conc. Aurel. 1. c. 4. Nullus Sæcularium ad Clericatûs Officium præſumatur, niſi aut cum Regis juſſione, aut cum judicis voluntate. [l] Theodoſ. Novel. 26. de Corporatis Urbis Romæ, ad Calcem Cod. Th. [m] Valentin. Novel. 12. ibid. [n] Cod. Th. lib. 14. tit. 4. de Suariis. Leg. 8. Eos qui ad Clericatûs ſe Privilegia contulerunt, aut agnoſcere oportet propriam Functionem, aut ei Corpori, quod declinant, proprii Patrimonii facere ceſſionem. Vid. Ibid. l. 14. tit. 3. de Piſtoribus leg. 11. It. lib. 8. tit. 5. de Curſu Publico. Leg. 46.

FOR

SECT. IV. Nor any of the Curiales, or Decuriones of the Roman Government.

FOR Reasons of the same Nature, the Canons were precise in forbidding the Ordination of any of those, who are commonly known by the Name of Curiales, or Decuriones, in the Roman Government; that is, such as were Members of the Curia, the Court, or Common-Council of every City. These were Men, who by vertue of their Estates were tied to bear the Office of their Country; so that out of their Body were chosen all Civil Officers, the Magistrates of every City, the Collectors of the Publick Revenue, the Overseers of all Publick Works, the Pontifices or Flamens, who exhibited the Publick Games and Shews to the People, with abundance of others, whose Offices are specified by Gothofred [o] to the number of Twenty Two, which I need not here recite. These were always Men of Estates, whose substance amounted to the Value of Three Hundred Solids; which is the Sum that is specified by Theodosius Junior [p], as qualifying a Man to be a Member of the Curia; And both they and their Estates were so tied to Civil Offices, that no Member of that Body was to be admitted into any Ecclesiastical Office, till he had first discharged all the Offices of his Country, or else provided a proper Substitute, one of his Relations qualified with his Estate to bear Offices in his Room: Otherwise the Person so Ordained was liable by the Laws of the Empire (of which I give a more particular Account hereafter [pp] in the next Book) to be called back by the Curia from an Ecclesiastical to a secular Life again. Which was such an Inconvenience to the Church, that she her self made Laws to prohibit the Ordination of any of these Curiales, to avoid the Trouble and Molestation, which was commonly the Consequent of their Ordination. St. Ambrose [q] assures us, that sometimes Presbyters and Deacons, who were thus Ordained out of the Curiales, were fetch'd back to serve in Curial Offices, after they had been Thirty Years and more in the Service of the Church. And therefore to prevent this Calamity, the Council of Illyricum, mentioned by Theodoret [r], made a Decree, that Presbyters and Deacons should always be chosen out of the Inferior Clergy, and not out of these Curiales, or any other Officers of the Civil Government. Innocent Bishop of Rome frequently refers to this Rule of the Church [s] in his Epistles, where he gives two Reasons against their Ordination: First, That they were often recalled by the Curia to serve in Civil Offices, which brought some Tribulation upon the Church. Secondly, Because many of them had served in the Office of Flamens [t] after Baptism, and were crowned as the Heathen High-Priests were used to be, while they Exhibited the Publick Games and Shews to the People. Which though it was indulged by the Civil Law in Christian Magistrates, yet the Church reckoned it a Crime, for which Men were sometimes obliged to do Publick Penance, as appears from the Canons [u] of the Council of Eliberis; and consequently such a Crime, as made Men irregular and uncapable of Ordination. So that upon both Accounts these Curiales were to be excluded from the Orders of the Church. And though this Rule by the Importunity of Men was sometimes Transgressed, yet the Laws both of Church and State always stood in force against such Ordinations; and sometimes the Ordainers themselves were Punished with Ecclesiastical Censures. Of which there is a famous Instance related by Sozomen [w], who says the Council of Constantinople, Ann. 360, deposed Neonas from his Bishoprick for ordaining some of these Curiales Bishops. Sozomen indeed calls them Πολιτεύμενοι: but that is but another Name for Curiales, whom the Greeks otherwise term βουλευταὶ, Counsellors; and the Latins, Municipes, Burghers or Corporation-Men; and Minor Senatus [x], The little Senate of every City, in opposition to the Great Senate of Constantinople and Rome. These Persons, whatever Denomination they went by, were so intirely devoted to the Service of the Common-wealth, that till they had some way or other discharged that Duty, they might not (as appears) be admitted to serve in any Office of the Church.

SECT. V. Nor any Proctor or Guardian, till his Office expired.

INDEED it was a General Rule in this matter, as we learn from one of the Councils [y] of Carthage, That no one was to be Ordained, who was bound to any secular Service. And for that Reason it was decreed by the same Council, at least for the Churches of Africk, that no Agent or Factor in other Men's Business, nor any Guardian of Orphans should be Ordained, till his Office and Administration was perfectly expired; because the Ordination of such [z] would otherwise turn to the Reproach and Defamation of the Church. But if I mistake not, this Prohibition did not extend to the Inferior Orders, but only to those whose Office was to serve at the Altar.

[o] Gothofred. Paratitl. Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurionibus t. 4. p. 339. [p] Theodos. Novel. 38. ad Calcem Cod. Th. [pp] See Book 5. Chap. 3. Sect 15. [q] Ambr. Ep. 29. Per triginta & innumeros annos Presbyteri quidam gradu functi, vel Ministri Ecclesiæ retrahuntur à munere sacro, & Curiæ deputantur. [r] Ap. Theodor. lib. 4. c. 9. ἐκ τῶ ἱερατικῶ τάγματος, καὶ μὴ ἀπὸ τῆς βουλευτικῆς καὶ στρατιωτικῆς ἀρχῆς. [s] Innoc. Ep. 4. c. 3. De Curialibus manifesta ratio est, quoniam etsi inveniantur hujusmodi viri qui debeant Clerici fieri, tamen quoniam sæpius ad Curiam repetuntur, cavendum ab his est propter tribulationem, quæ sæpe de his Ecclesiæ provenit.
[t] Innoc. Ep. 24. c. 4. Neque de Curialibus aliquem ad ecclesiasticum Ordinem venire posse, qui post Baptismum vel coronati fuerint, vel Sacerdotium, quod dicitur, sustinuerint, & Editiones publicas celebraverint, &c. [u] Conc. Eliber. c. 3. [w] Sozom. lib. 4. c. 24. [x] Majorian. Novel. 1. ad Calcem. Cod. Theod. Curiales servos esse Reipublicæ ac vicera Civitatum nullus ignorat, quorum cœtum recte appellavit antiquitas Minorem Senatum. [y] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 9. Obnoxii alienis negotiis non ordinentur. [z] Ibid. c. 8. Procuratores & Actores, etiam Tutores Pupillorum —— si ante libertatem Negotiorum vel Officiorum, ab aliquo sine consideratione fuerint ordinati, Ecclesia infamatur.

SECT. VI. Pleaders at Law denied Ordination in the Roman Church.

IN ſome Churches there ſeems alſo to have been an Abſolute Prohibition and Rule againſt Ordaining Advocates or Pleaders at Law, not only whilſt they continued in their Profeſſion, but for ever after. This ſeems to have been the Cuſtom of the Roman and Spaniſh Churches. For Innocent Biſhop of Rome in a Letter [a] to the Council of Toledo complains of an Abuſe then crept into the Spaniſh Church, which was, That many who were exerciſed in Pleading at the Bar, were called to the Prieſthood. To correct which Abuſe, as he deemed it, he propoſed this Rule to them to be obſerved, That no one who had pleaded Cauſes after Baptiſm [b], ſhould be admitted to any Order of the Clergy. What particular Reaſons the Church of Rome might then have for this Prohibition, I cannot ſay; but it does not appear, that this was the General Rule of the whole Catholick Church. For the Council of Sardica [c] allows a Lawyer even to be Ordained Biſhop, if he firſt went regularly through the Offices of Reader, Deacon, and Presbyter. Which ſhews, that the Cuſtom, as to this particular, was not one and the ſame in all Churches.

SECT. VII. Alſo Energumens, Actors, Stage-players, &c. in all Churches.

THE Reader may find ſeveral other Cautions given by Gennadius [d] againſt Ordaining any who had been Actors or Stage-players; or Energumens, during the Time of their being poſſeſt; or ſuch as had Married Concubines, that is, Wives without Formality of Law, or that had Married Harlots; or Wives Divorced from a former Husband. But I need not inſiſt upon theſe, ſince the very naming them ſhews all ſuch Perſons to have been in ſuch a State of Life, as might reaſonably be accounted a juſt Impediment of Ordination. It will be more Material to enquire, What the Ancients meant by Digamy, which after the Apoſtle they always reckoned an Objection againſt a Man's Ordination? And whether any Vow of Perpetual Celibacy was exacted of the ancient Clergy, when they were admitted to the Orders of the Church? Which becauſe they are Queſtions that come properly under this Head, it will not be amiſs to reſolve them Diſtinctly, but briefly, in the following Chapter.

CHAP. V.

Of the State of Digamy and Celibacy in particular: And of the Laws of the Church about theſe, in reference to the ancient Clergy.

SECT. I. No Digamiſt to be Ordained by the Rule of the Apoſtle.

AS to what concerns Digamy, it was a Primitive Apoſtolical Rule, That a Biſhop or a Deacon ſhould be one who was the Husband of one Wife only: On which Rule all the Laws againſt Digamy in the Primitive Church were founded. But then we are to obſerve, That the Ancients were not exactly agreed about the Senſe of that Apoſtolical Rule; and That occaſioned different Notions and different Practices among them in reference to the Ordination of Digamiſts.

SECT. II. Three different Opinions among the Ancients about Digamy. Firſt, That all Perſons were to be refuſed Orders as Digamiſts, who were twice married after Baptiſm.

ONE very Common and Prevailing Notion was, That all Perſons were to be refuſed Orders, as Digamiſts, who were twice married after Baptiſm, though Legally and Succeſſively to two Wives one after another. For though they did not condemn ſecond Marriages as Sinful and Unlawful, with the Novatians and Montaniſts: Yet upon Preſumption that the Apoſtle had forbidden Perſons twice married to be Ordained Biſhops, they repell'd ſuch from the Superior Orders of the Church. That this was the Practice of ſome Churches in the Time of Origen, may appear from what he ſays in his Comments upon St. Luke, That not only [a] Fornication, but Marriages excluded Men from the Dignities of the Church: For no Digamiſt could be either Biſhop, or Presbyter, or Deacon, or Deaconneſs in the Church. Tertullian, when he became a Montaniſt, laid hold of this Argument, and urged it to decry ſecond Marriages in all Perſons; pleading [b], that a Layman could not in Decency deſire a Licence of the Eccleſiaſticks to be married a ſecond Time, ſeeing the Eccleſiaſticks themſelves, Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, were but once Married. Which he repeats frequently [c] in ſeveral Parts of his Writings. And it cannot be denied, but that many other ancient Writers, St. Ambroſe [d], St. Je- rom [e], Gennadius [f], Epiphanius [g], and the Councils of Agde [h] and Carthage [i], put the ſame Senſe upon the Words of the Apoſtle. Only Epiphanius puts a Diſtinction between the Superior and Inferior Orders, making the Rule in this Senſe Obligatory to the former, but not to the latter.

[a] Innoc. Ep. 24. ad Concil. Tolet. c. 2. Quantos ex eis, qui poſt acceptam Baptiſmi Gratiam, in Forenſi Exercitatione verſati ſunt, & obtinendi pertinaciam ſuſceperunt, accitos ad Sacerdotium eſſe comperimus? [b] Ibid. c. 4. Ne quiſpiam ad Ordinem debeat Clericatûs admitti, qui Cauſas poſt acceptu Baptiſmum egerint. [c] Conc. Sardic. c. 10. ἐὰν τις σχολαστικὸς ἀπὸ τῆς ἀγορᾶς ἀξιοῖτο ἐπίσκοπος γίνεσθαι, μὴ πρότερον καθίσταται, ἐὰν μὴ ἀναγνώστης καὶ διάκονος καὶ πρεσβύτερος ὑπηρεσίαν ἐκτελέσῃ. [d] Gennad. de Eccleſ. Dogm. c. 73.

[a] Orig. Hom. 17. in Luc. p. 228. Ab Eccleſiaſticis Dignitatibus non ſolum Fornicatio, ſed & nuptiæ repellunt: Neque enim Epiſcopus, nec Presbyter, nec Diaconus, nec Vidua, poſſunt eſſe Digami. [b] Tertul. de Monogam. c. 11. Qualis es id matrimonium poſtulans, quod eis, à quibus poſtulas, non licet habere? ab Epiſcopo Monogamo, à Presbyteris & Diaconis ejuſdem Sacramenti, &c. [c] Vid. Tertul. de Pœnitent. c. 9. De Exhort. Caſtitat. c. 7. Ad Uxor. Lib. 1. c. 7. [d] Ambroſ. de Offic. Lib. 1. c. 50.

SECT. III.
2. Others extended the Rule to all Perſons twice married, whether before or after Baptiſm.

SOME there are again, who gave the Rule a ſtricter Expoſition, making it a Prohibition not only of ordaining Perſons twice married after Baptiſm, but alſo ſuch as were twice married before it, or once before and once after; as many Gentiles and Catechumens happened to be in thoſe Times, when Baptiſm was adminiſtred to Adult Perſons. St. Ambroſe [k] was of Opinion, that even theſe were to be excluded from Ordination: And ſo it was decreed by Innocent Biſhop of Rome [l], and the Council of Valentia [m] in France. But this Opinion was generally rejected by others, as fartheſt from the Senſe of the Apoſtle.

SECT. IV.
3. The moſt probable Opinion of thoſe, who thought the Apoſtle by Digamiſts meant Polygamiſts, and ſuch as married after Divorce.

THE moſt probable Opinion is that of thoſe ancient Writers, who interpret the Apoſtle's Rule as a Prohibition of ordaining Polygamiſts, or ſuch as had married many Wives at the ſame time; and ſuch as had cauſeleſly put away their Wives, and married others after Divorcing of the former; which were then very common Practices both among Jews and Gentiles, but ſcandalous in themſelves, and ſuch as the Apoſtles would have to be accounted juſt Impediments of Ordination. This is the Senſe which Chryſoſtom [n] and Theodoret [o] propoſe and defend, as moſt agreeable to the Mind of the Apoſtle. And it is certain, that ſecond Marriages in any other Senſe were not always an inſuperable Objection againſt Mens Ordination in the Chriſtian Church. For Tertullian owns [p] that there were Biſhops among the Catholicks who had been twice married; though in his Stile, that was an Affront to the Apoſtle. And it appears from the Letters of Siricius [q] and Innocent [r], that the Biſhops of Spain and Greece made no Scruple to ordain ſuch generally among the Clergy, for they take upon them to reprove them for it. Theodoret, agreeably to his own Notion, ordained one Irenæus Biſhop, who was twice married: And when ſome objected againſt the Legality of the Ordination upon that Account, he defended it by the common Practice of other Churches: Herein, ſays he, [s], I followed the Example of my Predeceſſors. Alexander Biſhop of the Apoſtolical See of Antioch, with Acacius of Beræa ordained Diogenes a Digamiſt; and Praylius ordained Domninus of Cæſarea a Digamiſt likewiſe. Proclus Biſhop of Conſtantinople received and approved the Ordination of many ſuch; and ſo do the Biſhops of Pontus and Paleſtine, among whom no Controverſy is made about it. From hence it appears, that the Practice of the Church varied in this Matter; and that therefore Bellarmin and other Romaniſts very much abuſe their Readers, when they pretend that the Ordination of Digamiſts, meaning Perſons twice lawfully married, is both againſt the Rule of the Apoſtle, and the univerſal Conſent and Practice of the Church.

SECT. V.
No Vow of Celibacy required of the Clergy as a Condition of their Ordination for the 3 firſt Ages.

THEY ſtill more abuſe their Readers, in pretending that a Vow of perpetual Celibacy, or Abſtinence from Conjugal Society, was required of the Clergy, as a Condition of their Ordination, even from the Apoſtolical Ages. For the contrary is very evident from innumerable Examples of Biſhops and Presbyters, who lived in a State of Matrimony without any Prejudice to their Ordination or Function. 'Tis generally agreed by ancient Writers, that moſt of the Apoſtles were married. Some ſay, all of them except [t] St. Paul and St. John: Others ſay, St. Paul was married alſo, becauſe he writes to his Yoke-Fellow, whom they interpret his Wife, Phil. 4. 3. This was the Opinion of Clemens [u] Alexandrinus, wherein he ſeems to be followed by Euſebius [w], and Origen [x], and the Author of the Interpolated Epiſtle [y] to the Church of Philadelphia under the Name of Ignatius; whom ſome Modern Romaniſts, miſtaking him for the true Ignatius, have moſt diſingenuouſly mangled, by Eraſing the Name of Paul out of the Text; which foul Dealing Biſhop Uſher [z] has expoſed, and Cotelerius [a] does in Effect confeſs it, when he owns that the Author himſelf wrote it, and that he therein followed the Authority of Clemens, Origen, and Euſebius. But paſſing by this about St. Paul, (which is a Matter of Diſpute among Learned Men, the major Part inclining to think that he always lived a ſingle Life) it cannot be denied that others of the Apoſtles were married: And in the next Ages after them we have Accounts of married Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons, without any [e] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Ep. 11. ad Geront. Ep. 83. ad Ocean. [f] Gennad. de Eccleſ. Dogm. c. 73. [g] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 21. [h] Conc. Agathen. c. 1. [i] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 69. [k] Ambroſ. Ep. 82. ad Vercellenſes. [l] Innoc. Ep. 2. c. 6. Ep. 22. c. 2. Ep. 24. c. 6. [m] Conc. Valentin. c. 1. [n] Chryſoſt. Hom. 10. in 1 Tim. 3. 2. Hom. 2. in Tit. 1 6. [o] Theod. Com. in 1 Tim. 3. 2. [p] Tertul. de Monogam. c. 12. Quot enim & Digami præſident apud vos, inſultantes utique Apoſtolo? [q] Siric. Ep. 1. ad Himer. Tarracon. c. 8. [r] Innoc. Ep. 22. ad Epiſc. Maced. c. 1. [s] Theod. Ep. 110. ad Domnum. [t] Ambroſ. ad Hilar. in 2 Cor. 11. Omnes Apoſtoli, exceptis Johanne & Paulo, uxores habuerunt. Vid. Epiphan. Hær. 78. Antidicomarianit. n. 10. Cotelerius cites Euſebius, Baſil and ſome others for the ſame Opinion. Not. in Ignat. Ep. ad Philadelph. Interpolat. n. 4. [u] Clem. Alex. Strom. 3. p. 448. [w] Euſeb. lib. 3. c. 30. [x] Orig. Com. in Rom. 1. p. 459 Paulus ergo (ſicut quidam tradunt) cum Uxore vocatus eſt: de qua dicit, ad Philippenſes ſcribens: Rogo te etiam germana compar, &c. [y] Pſeudo-Ignat. Ep. ad Philadelph. n. 4. [z] Uſſer. Diſſert. in Ignat. c. 17. [a] Cotelcr. Not. in Loc.

Reproof or Mark of Diſhonour ſet upon them. As to Inſtance in a few, Valens, Presbyter of Philippi, mentioned by Polycarp [b]; Chæremon Biſhop of Nilus, an exceeding old Man, who fled with his Wife to Mount Arabion in time of Perſecution, where they both periſhed together, as Euſebius informs us [c]. Novatus was a married Presbyter of Carthage, as we learn from Cyprian's [d] Epiſtles. Cyprian himſelf was alſo a married Man, as Mr. Pagi [e] confeſſes. And ſo was Cæcilius [f] the Presbyter that converted him. As alſo Numidicus another Presbyter of Carthage, of whom Cyprian [g] tells us this remarkable Story, That in the Decian Perſecution he ſaw his own Wife with many other Martyrs burnt by his Side; whilſt he himſelf lying half burnt, and covered with Stones, and left for dead, was found expiring by his own Daughter, who drew him out of the Rubbiſh, and brought him to life again. Euſebius aſſures us, that Phileas [h] Biſhop of Thmuis, and Philoromus had both Wife and Children: For they were urged with that Argument by the Heathen Magiſtrate to deny their Religion in the Diocletian Perſecution; but they generouſly contemned his Argument, and gave Preference to the Laws of Chriſt. Epiphanius [i] ſays, Marcion the Heretick was the Son of a Biſhop, and that he was excommunicated by his own Father for his Lewdneſs. Domnus alſo Biſhop of Antioch [k] is ſaid to be Son to Demetrian, who was Biſhop of the ſame Place before him. It were eaſy to add abundance more ſuch Inſtances; but theſe are ſufficient to ſhew, that Men of all States were admitted to be Biſhops and Presbyters in the Primitive Ages of the Church.

SECT. VI. The Vanity of the contrary Pretences.

THE moſt Learned Advocates of the Roman Communion have never found any other Reply to all this, ſave only a groundleſs Pretence of their own Imagination, that all married Perſons when they came to be ordained, promiſed to live ſeparate from their Wives by Conſent, which anſwered the Vow of Celibacy in other Perſons. This is all that Pagi [l] or Schelſtrate [m] have to ſay in the Caſe, after all the Writers that have gone before them: Which is ſaid not only without Proof, but againſt the cleareſt Evidences of ancient Hiſtory, which manifeſtly prove the contrary. For Novatus Presbyter of Carthage, whoſe Caſe Pagi had under Conſideration, was certainly allowed to cohabit with his Wife after Ordination: As appears from the Charge that Cyprian brings againſt him, That he had ſtruck and abuſed his Wife [n], and thereby cauſed her to miſcarry; for which Crime he had certainly been thruſt out not only from the Preſbytery, but the Church alſo, had not the Perſecution coming on ſo ſuddenly prevented his Tryal and Condemnation. Cyprian does not accuſe him for cohabiting with his Wife, or begetting Children after Ordination; but for murdering his Children which he had begotten; which was indeed a Crime that made him liable both to Depoſition and Excommunication: But the other was no Crime at all by any Law then in force in the African, or in the univerſal Church. There ſeems indeed in ſome Places to have been a little Tendency toward introducing ſuch a Law by one or two zealous Spirits; but the Motion was no ſooner made, but it was quaſhed immediately by the Prudence and Authority of wiſer Men. Thus Euſebius obſerves, That Pinytus Biſhop of Gnoſſus in Crete was for laying the Law of Celibacy upon his Brethren: But Dionyſius Biſhop of Corinth wrote to him, that he ſhould conſider the Weakneſs of Men, and not impoſe [o] that heavy Burthen upon them. And thus Matters continued for three Centuries, without any Law that we read of, requiring Celibacy of the Clergy at the Time of their Ordination.

SECT. VII. The Clergy left to their Liberty by the Nicene Council.

IN the Council of Nice, An. 325, the Motion was again renewed, That a Law might paſs to oblige the Clergy to abſtain from all Conjugal Society with their Wives, which they had married before their Ordination. But the Propoſal was no ſooner made, but Paphnutius a famous Ægyptian Biſhop, and one himſelf never married, vigorouſly declaimed againſt it; ſaying, So heavy a Burthen was not to be laid upon the Clergy; that the Marriage-Bed was honourable, and that they ſhould not by too great Severity bring Detriment on the Church: For all Men could not bear ſo ſevere an Exerciſe, and the Chaſtity of the Wives ſo ſeparated would be endangered alſo. Conjugal Society, he ſaid, was Chaſtity; and it was enough, that ſuch of the Clergy as were not married before their Ordination, ſhould continue unmarried, according to the ancient Tradition of the Church; but it was not proper to ſeparate any one from his Wife, which he had married whilſt he was a Layman. This ſaid, the whole Council agreed to ſtifle the Motion that had been made, and left every Man to his Liberty as before. So Socrates [p] and Sozomen tell the Story. To which all that Valeſius [q] after Bellarmin has to ſay, is, That he ſuſpects the Truth of the thing, and deſires leave to diſſent from his Hiſtorians. Which is [b] Polycarp. Ep. ad Philip. n. 11. [c] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 42. [d] Cypr. Ep. 49. al. 52. ad Cornel. [e] Pagi Crit. in Baron. ad an. 248. n. 4. [f] Pontius Vit. Cyprian. [g] Cypr. Ep. 35. al. 40. Numidicus Presbyter Uxorem adhærentem lateri ſuo, concrematam ſimul cum cæteris, vel conſervatam magis dixerim, lætus aſpexit, &c. [h] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 9. [i] Epiphan. Hær. 42. [k] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 30. [l] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 248. n. 4. [m] Schelſtrat. Eccleſ. Afric. Diſſert. 3. c. 4. ap. Pagi ibid. [n] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 49. p. 97. Uterus Uxoris calce percuſſus, & abortione properante in parricidium partus expreſſus, &c. [o] Dionyſ. Ep. ad Pinytum ap. Euſeb. lib. 4. c. 23. μὴ βαρὺ φορτίον τὸ ἐκ ἀγνείας ἐπαναγκὲς τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς ἐπιτιθέναι. [p] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 11. Sozom. lib. 1. c. 23. [q] Valeſ. Not. in Socrat. lib. 1. c. 11.

but

but a poor Evaſion in the Judgment of Du Pin himſelf, who thus [r] reflects upon them for it: Some queſtion the Truth of this Story, ſays he; but I believe they do it for fear the Story might prejudice the preſent Diſcipline, rather than from any ſolid Proof they have for it. But they ſhould conſider, that this Canon is purely a Matter of Diſcipline, and that the Diſcipline of the Church may change according to the Times, and that 'tis not neceſſary for the Defence of it, to prove that it was always uniform in all Places. So that in the Judgment of that learned Romaniſt there is no Queſtion to be made, but that the Council of Nice decreed in Favour of the married Clergy, as the Hiſtorians relate it did; and that then the Practice was different from that of the preſent Church of Rome, which others are ſo unwilling to have the World believe.

SECT. VIII. And other Councils of that Age.

It is as evident from other Councils of the ſame Age, that the married Clergy were allowed to continue in the Service of the Church, and no Vow of Abſtinence required of them at their Ordination. Socrates obſerves that the Council of Gangra anathematized Euſtathius the Heretick, becauſe he taught Men to ſeparate [s] from ſuch Presbyters as retained their Wives, which they married while they were Laymen, ſaying, their Communion and Oblations were abominable. The Decree is ſtill extant among the Canons of that Council [t], and runs in theſe Words: If any one ſeparate from a married Presbyter, as if it were unlawful to participate of the Euchariſt, when ſuch an one miniſters, let him be Anathema. The Council of Ancyra gives Leave to Deacons to marry after Ordination; if they proteſted [u] at their Ordination that they could not continue in an unmarried State, they might marry, and yet continue in their Office, having in that Caſe the Biſhop's Licenſe and Permiſſion to do it. And though the Council of Neo-Cæſarea in one Canon forbids [w] unmarried Presbyters to marry after Ordination; yet ſuch as were married before Ordination, are allowed by another Canon to continue [x] without any Cenſure, being only oblig'd to ſeparate from their Wives in caſe of Fornication. The Council of Eliberis [y] indeed, and ſome others in this Age, began to be a little more rigorous toward the married Clergy: But it does not appear, that their Laws were of any great Force. For Socrates [z] ſays, even in his Time in the Eaſtern Churches many eminent Biſhops begat Children of their Lawful Wives; and ſuch as abſtained, did it not by Obligation of any Law, but their own voluntary Choice. Only in Theſſaly, Macedonia, and Hellas, the Clergy were obliged to abſtain under Pain of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure. Which, he ſays, was occaſioned by Biſhop Heliodore's writing his Book called, His Ethiopicks. So that as yet there was no univerſal Decree againſt married Biſhops in the Greek Church, much leſs againſt Presbyters and Deacons. But the Council of Trullo, Ann. 692, made a Difference between Biſhops and Presbyters; allowing Presbyters, Deacons and all the Inferior Orders to cohabit [a] with their Wives after Ordination; and giving the Roman Church a ſmart Rebuke for the contrary Prohibition: But yet laying an Injunction upon Biſhops [b] to live ſeparate from their Wives, and appointing the Wives [c] to betake themſelves to a Monaſtick Life, or become Deaconneſſes in the Church. And ſo the matter was altered in the Greek Church, as to Biſhops, but not any others. In the Latin Church alſo the Alteration was made but by ſlow Steps in many Places. For in Africk even Biſhops themſelves cohabited with their Wives at the Time of the Council of Trullo, as appears from one of the fore-mentioned [d] Canons of that Council. But it is beyond my Deſign to carry this Enquiry any farther; what has been already ſaid, being ſufficient to ſhew, that the Married Clergy were allowed to Officiate in the firſt and Primitive Ages; and that Celibacy in thoſe Times was no neceſſary Condition of their Ordination, as is falſly pretended by the Polemical Writers of the preſent Church of Rome. I have now gone through the ſeveral Qualifications of the ancient Clergy, concerning which Enquiry was made before their Ordination. I come now in the next place to conſider the Solemnity of the thing it ſelf, together with the Laws and Cuſtoms which were generally obſerved at the Time of Ordination.

[r] Du Pin Bibliotheque Vol. 2. p. 253. Edit. Anglic.

[s] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 43. πρεσβυτέρᾳ γυναῖκα ἔχοντ⊖, ἣν νόμῳ λαικὸς ὢν ἠγάζετο τῷ εὐλογίαν καὶ τῷ κοινωνίαν ὡς μῦσ⊖ ἐκκλίνειν ἐκέλδε. [t] Conc. Gangr. c. 4. εἴ τις διακείνοιτο παρὰ πρεσβυτέρᾳ γεγαμηκότ⊖, ὡς μὴ χρῆναι λειτουργήσαντ⊖ αὐτῇ προσφορᾶς μεταλαμβάνειν, ἀνάθεμα ἔσω.

[u] Conc. Ancyr. c. 10. εἰ ἐμβριθέντο καὶ ἔφασαν χρῆναι γαμῆσαι, μὴ δυνάμενοι ἕτως μένειν· ἔτοι κ᾽ ταῦτα γαμήσαντες ἔσωσαν ἐν τῇ ὑπηρεσία. &c. [w] Conc. Neo-Cæſ. c. 1. [x] Ibid. c. 8. [y] Conc. Elib. c. 33. Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 2. [z] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 22. [a] Conc. Trull. c. 13. [b] Ibid. c. 12. [c] Ibid. c. 48. [d] Conc. Trull. c. 12.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Ordinations of the Primitive Clergy, and the Laws and Customs generally observed therein.

SECT. I. The Canons of the Church to be read to the Clerk, before the Bishop ordained him.

WHEN the Election of a Person duly qualified according to the forementioned Rules was made, then it was the Bishop's Office, or the Metropolitan's, if the Party Elect was himself a Bishop, to ordain him. But before they proceeded to Ordination, there were some other Laws and Rules to be observed. For not to mention here again the Oath against Simony, and the Subscriptions, which I have shewed before [†], were anciently required of Persons to be Ordained: I must not forget to Note, that in the African Church a Rule was made in the 3d Council of [a] Carthage, and thence transferred into the African [b] Code, That before any Bishop, or other Clergy-Man was Ordained, the Ordainers should cause the Canons of the Church to be Read in his Hearing; that they might not have cause to Repent afterward, that they had Transgressed any of them. This Rule was made at the Instance and Request of St. Austin, as Possidius [c] Notes in his Life, who says, that because he was Ordained Bishop of Hippo while Valerius was alive; which was contrary to the Rule of the Council of Nice, which he was Ignorant of at the Time of his Ordination; he therefore prevailed with the African Fathers to make a Decree, that the Canons of the Church should be Read at every Man's Ordination. This Rule implied a Tacit Promise, that the Party Ordained would observe the Canons that were Read to him: But for greater Security it was afterward improved into an Explicit Promise by a Law of Justinian [d], which requires every Clerk after the Reading of the Canons to profess, that as far as it was possible for Man to do, he would fulfil what was contained in them. Whence, no doubt, came those later Forms of Professing Obedience to the Canons of the seven General Councils, in the Greek Church; and the Oath to St. Peter taken by the Bishops of Rome in the Latin Church, that they would observe the Decrees of the Eight General Councils. The first of which Forms may be seen at length in Habertus [e], and the other in Baronius [f], and the Book called, Liber Diurnus, by the Reader, that is Curious to consult them.

SECT. II. No Clerk to be Ordained ἀπολελυμένως.

2*dly*, ANOTHER Rule to be observed in this Case was, That every Man should be fixed to some Church at his Ordination, and not be left at Liberty to Minister wherever he would, because of several Inconveniences that attended that Practice. This Rule concerned Bishops, as well as the Inferior Clergy: For the Nullatenenses of later Ages, as Panormitan calls Titular and Utopian Bishops, were rarely known in the Primitive Church. For though every Bishop was in some Sense ordained Bishop of the Catholick Church, as I have shewed before; yet for Order's sake he was always confined to a certain District in the Ordinary Exercise of his Power. And so Presbyters and all other Inferior Clergy were confined to the Diocese of their own Bishop, and might not be Ordained, unless they had some Place wherein to exercise their Function. This was the ancient Custom of the Church, which the Council of Chalcedon confirmed by a Canon, That no Presbyter, or Deacon, or any other Ecclesiastick should be Ordained [g] at large; but be assigned either to the City-Church, or some Church or Oratory in the Country, or a Monastery: Otherwise his Ordination to be Null and Void. This the Latins called, Ordinatio Localis, and the Persons so Ordained, Locales, from their being fixed to a certain Place. As in the Council of Valentia [h] in Spain we find a Canon, that obliges every Priest before his Ordination to give a Promise, that he will be Localis; to the intent that no one should be permitted to transgress the Rules and Discipline of the Church with Impunity; which they might easily do, if they were allowed to rove about from one place to another. This in the Stile of Leo Bishop of Rome is, Ordination [i] founded upon a Place, or as we would say now, a Title; without which, he says, the Ordination was not to be looked upon as Authentick. But it must be observed, that a Title then did not always signifie a Parochial Church, or distinct Cure: For this was a Rule before Dioceses were divided in Parishes: But the Confinement laid upon Men at their Ordination was, that they should be fixed to their own Bishop's Diocese, and Officiate in the Place where he appointed them.

[†] See Chap. 3. Sect. 2. and 14. [a] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 3. Placuit, ut ordinandis Episcopis vel Clericis prius ab Ordinatoribus suis Decreta Conciliorum auribus eorum inculcentur; ne se aliquid contra statuta Concilii feciſse pœniteat. [b] Cod. Eccles. Afr. c. 19. [c] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 8. Quod in seipso fieri non debuisse, ut vivo suo Episcopo ordinaretur, postea & dixit & scripsit, propter Concilii Universalis vetitum, quod jam ordinatus didicit: nec quod sibi factum esse doluit, aliis fieri voluit. Unde etiam fategit, ut Conciliis constitueretur Episcoporum, ab Ordinatoribus deberi Ordinandis, vel Ordinatis, omnium statuta sacerdotum in notitiam esse deferenda. [d] Justin. Novel. 6. c. 1. n. 8. [e] Habert. Archieratic. p. 496. [f] Baron. an. 869. Tom. 10. p. 433. [g] Conc. Chalced. c. 6. μηδένα ἀπολελυμένως χειροτονεῖσθαι —— εἰ μὴ ἰδικῶς ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ πόλεως, ἢ κώμης, ἢ μαρτυρίῳ ἢ μοναστηρίῳ ἐπικηρύττοιτο. [h] Conc. Valentin. c. 6. Nec ullum Sacerdotem quispiam ordinet, qui Localem se futurum primitus non spoponderit: Ut per hoc nullus a Regula vel Disciplina Ecclesiæ deviare permittatur impune. [i] Leo Ep. 92. ad Rustic. c. 1. Vana est habenda Ordinatio, quæ nec Loco fundata est, nec Auctoritate munita.

SECT. III. Exceptions to this Rule very rare.

THERE were indeed ſome few Exceptions to this Rule, but very Rare, and upon Extraordinary Occaſions. Paulinus and St. Jerom ſeem to have had the Privilege granted them, of being Ordained without Affixing to any Church. Paulinus ſays [k] expreſly of himſelf, that he was Ordained Presbyter at Barcelona with this Condition, that he ſhould not be confined to that Church, but remain a Prieſt at large. And St. Jerom gives the ſame Account [kk] of his own Ordination at Antioch; that he was conſecrated Presbyter with Licenſe to continue a Monk, and return to his Monaſtery again. Sozomen [l] relates the like of Barſes and Eulogius, two Monks of Edeſſa, that they were both ordained Biſhops, not of any City, but only Honorary Biſhops within their own Monaſteries, out of Reſpect to their eminent Virtues. And it was ſuch a ſort of Ordination that, Theodoret [m] ſays, Flavian Biſhop of Antioch gave to Macedonius the famous Syrian Anchoret, whom he drew from his Cell in the Deſart, only to Ordain him Presbyter, and ſo let him return to the Deſart again. Theſe are all the Inſtances of this kind, which I remember in ancient Hiſtory. It was not as yet the Cuſtom to ordain Biſhops Partibus Infidelium, that never meant to ſee their Biſhopricks. Though After-ages deſpiſed this Rule, as Zonaras [n] complains of the Greek Church, and Habertus [o] cannot but lament it in the Latin; yet the ancient Church was more punctual in obſerving the Laws, ſcarce ever Ordaining either Biſhop or Inferior Clerk without fixing them to a certain Dioceſe, from which without the Conſent of their Superiors they were not to remove to any other.

SECT. IV. No Biſhop to ordain another Man's Clerk without his Conſent.

3dly, AND from hence aroſe a Third Rule about Ordinations, That no Biſhop ſhould Ordain, or admit into his Church any Clerk belonging to another Church, without the Conſent of the Biſhop to whom he formerly belonged. The Councils [p] are very peremptory in this Decree; particularly the great Council of Nice [q], and That of Sardica [r], and the ſecond of Arles [s] declare all ſuch Ordinations null and void. The firſt Council of Carthage [t] extends the Prohibition even to Laymen belonging to another Dioceſe: For it decrees, that as no Clerk ſhall be received by another Biſhop without the Letters Dimiſſory of his own Biſhop; ſo neither ſhall any Biſhop take a Layman out of another People, and ordain him, without the Conſent of that Biſhop, out of whoſe People he is taken. The Reaſon of which Laws was, that every Biſhop was ſuppoſed to have a peculiar Right in all the Clergy and People of his own Dioceſe; and it was very Conducive to the Peace and good Order of the Church to have ſuch Rules maintained and obſerved. Only in the African Church the Biſhop of Carthage was allowed a Privilege in this Caſe, as he was Exarch or Primate of all the African Provinces. For by ancient Cuſtom, confirmed by a Canon in the 3d Council of Carthage [u], which is alſo inſerted into the African Code [w], the Biſhop of Carthage is allowed to take a Clerk out of another Church, and ordain him for the Service of any Church under his Juriſdiction. But an Exception in his particular Caſe confirms the Rule in all the reſt.

SECT. V. No Biſhop to ordain in another Man's Dioceſe.

4thly, ANOTHER Rule for the Preſervation of Order in this Affair was, that every Biſhop ſhould confine himſelf to his own Church, and not aſſume to himſelf the Power of Ordaining in the Dioceſe of another Man. So the Council of Antioch [x], and thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [y] determined, that a Biſhop ſhould not preſume to ordain out of his own Bounds, in Cities or Countries not Subject to him. St. Auſtin had occaſion to inſiſt upon this Rule in the Caſe of Pinianus, when the People of Hippo required him to ordain him Presbyter againſt his Will, and threatned that if he would not, they would have another Biſhop to ordain him: St. Auſtin told [z] them, that no Biſhop could ordain him in his Church without firſt asking his Leave and Permiſſion; and that having given him a Promiſe, that he would not ordain him againſt his Will, he could not in Honour conſent that any other Biſhop ſhould come and ordain him. Socrates [a] ſays, Epiphanius took upon him to ordain a Deacon in the Dioceſe of Chryſoſtom at Conſtantinople: But Chryſoſtom told him, that he acted contrary to Canon, in ordaining in Churches that were not under his Juriſdiction. Which ſhews, that this was an univerſal Law, prevailing both in the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches. And by the ſame Rule all Metropolitans with their Provincial Biſhops were confined to their own Province, and might not ordain any Biſhop in another Province, except they were invited by the Biſhops of that Province to come and give them their Aſſiſtance. Which Rule was made in the general Council [b] of Conſtantinople, and confirmed in the Council of Epheſus [c], upon the Controverſy that aroſe between the Churches of Cyprus and the Patriarch of Antioch, who laid Claim to the Power of Ordinations in thoſe Churches, but was rejected in his Claim, becauſe they were out of his Diſtrict, and under another Juriſdiction. But it is to be obſerved, that theſe Rules were only made for Ordinary Caſes, to preſerve Peace and a good Underſtanding among the Biſhops of the Church, whilſt every one acted in his proper Sphere, and kept to thoſe Bounds and Limits which the Laws appointed. For otherwiſe, as I have ſhewed heretofore [cc], every Biſhop was a Biſhop of the whole Catholick Church, and in that Capacity authorized to ordain, or perform any other Acts of the Epiſcopal Office in any part of the World upon urgent Neceſſity and Extraordinary Occaſions. As Athanaſius and Euſebius Samoſatenſis did in the Times of the great Prevalency of the Arian Hereſy, ordaining Biſhops and Presbyters in any Province or Dioceſe (though contrary to the Letter of this Law) in order to preſerve the Catholick Faith, and a Succeſſion of Orthodox Men in the Service of the Church. So that this was only a Rule for Common and Ordinary Caſes. And in Cyprus, Epiphanius [d] ſays, they did not inſiſt upon the Rule at all one among another, but any Biſhop ordained in any other Man's Dioceſe, as Occaſion required, without Breach of Charity; for they gave a ſort of general Leave to one another, as finding it moſt expedient for the Church in that Province to uſe ſuch a Liberty among themſelves; though they ſtifly maintained their Privilege againſt the Encroachments of all foreign Sees, and more eſpecially that of Antioch.

[k] Paulin. Ep. 6. ad Sever. p. 101. Ea conditione in Barcinonenſi Eccleſia conſecrari adductus ſum, ut ipſi Eccleſiæ non alligater; in ſacerdotium tantum Domini, non in Locum Eccleſiæ dedicatus. [kk] Hieron. Ep. 62. ad Pammach. Tom. 2. p. 181. [l] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 34. [m] Theod. Hiſtor. Relig. c. 13. Tom. 3. [n] Zonar. Not. in Conc. Chalced. c. 6. [o] Habert. Archieratic. p. 351. [p] Vid. Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 21. Conc. Chalced. c. 20. Arauſican. 1. c. 8, 9. [q] Conc. Nic. c. 16. ἄκυρος ἔσω ἡ χειροτονία. [r] Conc. Sardic. c. 15. [s] Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 13. Si aliquis, invito Epiſcopo ſuo, in aliena Eccleſia habitans, ab Epiſcopo loci Clericus fuerit ordinatus, hujuſmodi Ordinatio irrita habeatur. [t] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 5. Non licere Clericum alienum ab aliquo ſuſcipi ſine Literis Epiſcopi ſui, neque apud ſe retinere, nec Laicum uſurpare ſibi de Plebe aliena, ut eum ordinet ſine Conſcientia ejus Epiſcopi, de cujus Plebe eſt. [u] Concil. Carth. 3. c. 45. [w] Cod. Can. Afric. c. 55. περὶ τῶ ἀξιῶσαι τὸν ἐπισκόπον Καρχηδόνος. ὅθεν, καλὸν εἶναι χειροτονεῖν. [x] Conc. Antioch. c. 22. [y] Canon. Apoſt. c. 35. ἐπίσκοπον μὴ τολμᾶν ἔξω τῶν ἑαυτῦ ὅρων χειροτονίας ποιεῖσθαι εἰς τὰς μὴ ὑποκειμένας αὐτῷ πόλεις καὶ χώρας. [z] Aug. Ep. 225. ad Albinam. Dicebam ego quibus poteram, qui ad nos in Abſidem Honoratiores & graviores aſcenderant, nec à promiſſi fide me poſſe dimoveri, nec ab alio Epiſcopo in Eccleſia mihi tradita, niſi me interrogato ac permittente, poſſe ordinari. [a] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 22. & 14.

SECT. VI. The Original of the Four ſolemn Times of Ordination.

THE next things to be noted in this Affair, are ſuch as concern the Time and Place of Ordination. Concerning the Time there may ſeveral Enquiries be made. 1. Whether they had originally any ſet and conſtant Times of Ordination, as the Church now has Four times a Year? 2. Whether Sunday was always the Day of Ordination? 3. Whether Ordinations were always confined to Morning-Service? As to the firſt Enquiry, it does not certainly appear, that the Church had any conſtant annual Times of Ordination before the 4th Century. For Habertus truly obſerves [e], that then it was more uſual to ordain Men ſingly, as the preſent Occaſions of every Church required. Pope Leo indeed [f] derives the Jejunia quatuor temporum, the Faſts of the Four Seaſons of the Year, which are now commonly called Ember-Weeks, from Apoſtolical Tradition. But as Mr. Pagi [g] and Queſnel [h] in their Cenſures of that Author obſerve, there is nothing more uſual with him, than to call every thing an Apoſtolical Law, which he found either in the Practice of his own Church, or decreed in the Archives of his Predeceſſors Damaſus and Siricius. So that all other Authors before Leo being ſilent upon this Matter, we can lay no great Streſs upon his Authority for it. Beſide, he does not ſo much as once intimate, that theſe Faſts were appointed upon the Account of any ſet and ſolemn Times of Ordinations, but upon other more general Reaſons. So that it is not certain, that the Church had any fixt Times of Ordination when Leo wrote, Ann. 450. And in the Ages before it is more evident ſhe had not. For as to Biſhops, it is certain the Church never confined herſelf to any ſet Times for the Ordination of them; but as ſoon as any Biſhop was dead, another was choſen and ordained in his Room with all convenient Speed; and in ſome Places this was done within a Day or two after his Deceaſe, as has been ſhewed in a former [†] Book. As to Presbyters and Deacons, and others below them, it is evident alſo, that for the three firſt Ages they were ordained at all Times, as the Occaſions of the Church required. Cyprian ordained Aurelius a Reader upon the 1ſt of December, as Biſhop Pearſon [i] computes by the Critical Rules of Calculation; and he ordained Saturus a Reader, and Optatus a Subdeacon in the Month of Auguſt [k]; neither of which were ſolemn Times of Ordination. Paulinus, who lived in the 4th Century, was ordained on Chriſtmas-Day, as he himſelf [l] informs us: Yet neither was that one of the four Days, which afterwards became the ſtated Times of Ordination. The Roman Pontifical under the Name of Damaſus, in the Life of almoſt every Biſhop, takes Notice of the Ordinations which they made, in the Roman Province, of Biſhops, Preſbyters, and Deacons, during their whole Life; and always the Ordinations are ſaid to be made in the Month of December. Which, if that Book were of any great Authority, would prove, that there was one fixt Time of Ordination at Rome; but not four. But I confeſs, the Credit of that Book cannot much be depended upon for the Hiſtory of the Primitive Ages one way or other; it being of much later Date than the Title pretends; and perhaps the Author only ſpake of ancient things according to the Cuſtom of his own Times, when one

[b] Conc. Conſtant. c. 2. [c] Conc. Epheſ. Act. 7. Decret. de Epiſ. Cypr. [cc] Book 2. Chap. 5. [d] Epiphan. Ep. ad Johan. Hieroſolym. t. 2. p. 313. Multi Epiſcopi communionis noſtræ Presbyteros in noſtra ordinaverunt Provincia, &c.

[e] Habert. Archieratic. Par. 8. Obſerv. 4. p. 130. Tunc ſinguli, & quidem rari, non vero tam multi ac hodie ordinabantur.

[f] Leo Serm. 2. de Jejun. Pentecoſt. p. 77. It. Serm. 9. de Jejun. 7. Menſis, ſive de Jejunio quatuor Temporum. p. 88. It. Serm. 7.

[g] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 67. n. 15. [h] Queſnel ap. Pagi. ibid. [†] Book 2. Chap. 11. Sect. 2. [i] Pearſon. Annal. Cypr. an. 250. n. 20. p. 25. [k] Pearſon. ibid. n. 15.

[l] Paulin. Ep. 6. ad Sever. p. 101. Die Domini, quo naſci carne dignatus eſt, repentina vi multitudinis —— Presbyteratu initiatus ſum.

of these four Times might be brought into Use: Which seems to have been before the Time of Simplicius, an. 467. For the Pontifical in his Life [m] adds February to December; as it does also in the Life of Gelasius. And in one of the Decrees of Gelasius [n] there are no less than five stated Times of Ordination appointed, viz. June, September, December, the beginning of Lent, and the Middle of Lent, and Saturday in the Evening in all these Times to be the precise Time of Ordination. Amalarius Fortunatus [o] takes notice of the Change that was made in the Time of Simplicius; telling us, that all the Bishops of Rome before Simplicius made their Ordinations always in the Month of December, and that he was the first that ordained in February. Which no doubt he had from the forementioned Passages of the Pontifical, which in some Places speaks of one, and in others of two solemn Times of Ordination, but never of four: Which argues, that these four were not as yet determined, when that Book was written, which with the Interpolations that it has now was not till after the Time of Justinian, as learned Men generally agree. So that I leave it to farther Enquiry, whether there were any such fixed Times of Ordination in the Church of Rome, as these Authors mention, for four or five of the first Centuries. In other Churches we read of none, but the Instances that have been produced rather prove the contrary. The Inquisitive Reader will be able to furnish himself with many other such Instances, from which it may be concluded, that the Times of Ordination were not fixt for four of the first Centuries, since no ancient Writer within that Space makes any mention of them. And therefore there is no Necessity, with Baronius [p] and Bellarmine [q], to make the Jejunia quatuor temporum an Apostolical Tradition, but it is sufficient to speak of them as an useful Order of the Church, founded upon Ecclesiastical Institution, some Ages after.

SECT. VII. Ordinations indifferently given on any Day of the Week for three Centuries.

THE same must be said in answer to the 2d Question, Whether Sunday was always the Day of Ordination? It is evident, that for the three first Centuries it was not. For Mr. Pagi has unanswerably proved [r] against Papebrochius, from the most certain Rules of Chronology, that before the Time of Constantine the Ordinations of the Bishops of Rome themselves were performed indifferently upon any Day of the Week, and that the affixing them to the Lord's Day and other solemn Festivals was the Business of the 4th Century. So that when Pope Leo [s] says, that such Ordinations as were made upon other Days than Sundays, were against the Canons and the Tradition of the Fathers, he is to be understood as before, to mean only the Custom of his own Times; if yet it were the Custom when Leo lived: For there is some reason to doubt of the Authority either of Leo's Epistle, or that of Gelasius, who lived not long after. For Gelasius says [t] the Ordinations of Presbyters and Deacons were to be made on Saturday in the Evening. So that either one of these Epistles is spurious, or else the Custom varied in the same Century in the Church of Rome.

SECT. VIII. The Ceremony usually perform'd in the Time of the Oblation at Morning-Service.

I confess Gelasius is singular in that Part of his Decree, which fixes Ordinations to Evening-Service. For though the Ancients were not always precise to a certain Day of the Year, or a certain Day of the Week; yet they more punctually observed the Time of the Day, to give Ordinations at Morning-Service. This was a very ancient Rule of the Church, as we may learn from the Objection that was made against Novatian, that among his other Irregularites he was ordained at an uncanonical Hour, ὥρᾳ δεκάτῃ, at ten a Clock, or four in the Afternoon, as Cornelius [u] in his Epistle to Fabian lays the Charge against him. The Council of Laodicea is still more punctual to the Time, that Ordinations should not be given while the Hearers or Catechumens [w] were present, but at the Time of the Oblation. The reason of which was, that the Person ordained might either consecrate, or at least participate of the Eucharist at the Time of his Ordination. Whence Theodoret speaking of the Ordination of Macedonius the Anchoret, says it was done [x], τῆ μυστικῆς ἱερουργίας προκειμένης, in the Time of the Mystical, that is the Communion-Service. And so Epiphanius [y] represents the Ordination of Paulinianus, St. Jerom's Brother, whom he ordained Presbyter, whilst he ministred in the Holy Sacrifice of the Altar. But this is to be understood chiefly, if not only, of the three Superior Orders of Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons: For as to the rest, it was indifferent what Time they were ordained, so long as it was in the Church in any Part of Divine Service.

SECT. IX. The Church the only Regular Place of Ordination.

BUT out of the Church no Ordination could be regularly performed. Though there was this Difference between the Su[m] Pontifical. Vit. Gelas. Hic. fecit Ordinationes in Urbe Roma tres, per Mensem Decembrem & Februarium. [n] Gelas. Ep. 9. ad Episc. Lucaniæ. c. 11. al. 13. Ordinationes etiam Presbyterorum & Diaconorum nisi certis temporibus & diebus exerceri non debent, id est, Quarti Mensis Jejunio, Septimi, & Decimi, sed & etiam Quadragesimalis initii, ac Mediana Quadragesimæ die, Sabbati Jejunio circa Vesperam noverint celebrandas. [o] Amalar. de Offic. Eccl. Lib. 2. c. 1. Primi Apostolici semper in Decembrio Mense Consecrationes ministrabant usque ad Simplicium, qui fuit à B. Petro Quadragesimus monus. Ipse primus sacravit in Februario. [p] Baron. an. 57. n. 209. [q] Bellarm. de Verbi Dei non scripto. Lib. 4. c. 3. p. 206. [r] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 67. n. 14. & 16. [s] Leo Ep. 91. ad Dioscorum c. 1. [t] Gelas. Ep. 9. ad Episc. Lucan. c. 11. Ordinationis Sabbati Jejunio circa Vesperiam noverint celebrandas. [u] Ap. Euseb. Lib. 6. c. 43. [w] Conc. Laodic. c. 4. περὶ τοῦ μὴ δεῖν τὰς χειροτονίας ἐπὶ παρουσίᾳ ἀκροαμένων γίνεσθαι. [x] Theod. Hist. Relig. c. 13. [y] Epiphan. Ep. ad Johan. Hierosol. Cum ministraret in sanctis sacrificiis, ordinavimus Presbyterum.

perior

perior and Inferior Orders, that the one were conferred within the Sanctuary, or Altar-Part, and the other without; yet they both agreed in this, that the Church was ſtill the proper Place to give Birth to all ſuch Orders, as were to be employed in any Eccleſiaſtical Service. And therefore Gregory Nazianzen [z] juſtly upbraids Maximus the Cynick, who intruded himſelf into his See of Conſtantinople, that being excluded from the Church, he was ordained in the Houſe of a Minſtrel. Which was alſo objected to Urſinus, who was Competitor with Damaſus for the See of Rome, that he was not ordained [a] in a Church, but in an obſcure Corner of the Hall called Sicona.

SECT. X. Ordination received kneeling at the Altar.

As to the Ceremonies uſed in the Act of Ordination it ſelf, beſide what has been noted before in ſpeaking of each particular Order, it will be proper to obſerve ſome things of them in general. As Firſt, That the Ordinations of Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons were always received Kneeling before the Altar. So the Author under the Name of Dionyſius [b] repreſents the Matter in his Rationale upon the Church's Service. And Theodoret mentions it [c] as the Cuſtomary Rite, when ſpeaking of the Ordination of a Biſhop, he ſays, they brought him to the Holy Table, and made him kneel on his Knees by Force.

SECT. XI. Given by Impoſition of Hands and Prayer.

Secondly, The Solemnity itſelf in giving the Superior Orders was always performed by Impoſition of Hands and Prayer. Which is evident from St. Jerom, who ſays, that Impoſition of Hands was therefore added to compleat the Ordinations [d] of the Clergy, leſt any one by a ſilent and ſolitary Prayer ſhould be ordained without his Knowledge. Gregory Nyſſen [e] indeed tells us a very ſtrange Story of the Ordination of Gregory Thaumaturgus, how Phædimus Biſhop of Amaſea ordained him only by Prayer without Impoſition of Hands: For he was abſent, being fled to the Wilderneſs, to avoid Ordination: Notwithſtanding which Phædimus conſecrated him to the Biſhoprick of Neo-Cæſarea, which he afterwards accepted. But as a learned Man [f] Conjectures, it is moſt likely that he had another Ordination; or if not, this Act muſt paſs for a ſingular Inſtance, contrary to the common Rule and eſtabliſhed Order of the Church. The Greeks call this Impoſition of Hands both χειροτονία, and χειροθεσία, as may be ſeen in the Canons of the Council of Nice [g] and Chalcedon. Yet ſometimes thoſe Words are diſtinguiſhed, as in the Author of the Conſtitutions, where [h] he ſays, πρεσβύτερος χειροθετεῖ, ὁ χειροτονεῖ, a Presbyter gives Impoſition of Hands, but does not ordain. Where it is plain, that Impoſition of Hands means not Ordination, but ſome other Benediction of the Church, wherein Impoſition of Hands was uſed, as well as in Ordination. Neither does χειροτονία always ſignify Ordination in ancient Writers; though it does moſt commonly ſo, as Fronto Ducæus [i] and other learned Perſons have ſhewed: But ſometimes it denotes no more than Deſignation or Election; as when Ignatius uſes the Phraſe, χειροτονῆσαι Θεοπρεσβύτην [k], only to ſignify the Election or Appointment of a Meſſenger to go upon an Errand of the Church. Which I note, to caution the Reader againſt Miſtakes committed by ſome Authors, who confound Ordinations with Elections, for want of diſtinguiſhing the critical Senſes of Words, as the Subject Matter requires.

SECT. XII. The Sign of the Croſs uſed in Ordination.

I muſt farther obſerve, that as the Sign of the Croſs was uſed upon many Occaſions by the Primitive Chriſtians, ſo particularly in their Ordinations. Which we learn from Chryſoſtom, who more than once mentions it upon this occaſion. If, ſays he, we are to be regenerated, the Croſs is uſed, viz. in Baptiſm; or if we [l] are to eat the Myſtical Food, the Euchariſt; or to receive an Ordination, we are ſigned with the Sign of the Croſs. Upon this Account, Suicerus [m] notes out of the Author under the Name of Dionyſius, that the Impoſition of Hands in Ordination was called σφραγὶς, Conſignation, and σταυροειδὴς σφραγὶς, Conſignation in Form of a Croſs [n], becauſe the Sign of the Croſs was made on the Head of him that was ordained.

SECT. XIII. But no Unction, or the Ceremony of delivering Veſſels into the Hands of Preſbyters and Deacons.

As to the Ceremony of Unction I have already had occaſion to ſhew its Novelty [*] in another Place; together with the Cuſtom of delivering ſome of the Holy Veſſels into the Hands of the Perſon ordained. Which Habertus ſays was never uſed in giving any of the Superior Orders, but only the Inferior, by the Rule of the 4th Council of Carthage, which makes that the chief Part of their Ordination. Though Habertus [o] and ſome others queſtion the Authority of that very Council, and reckon all its Canons ſpurious. But that only by the way.

[z] Naz. Carm. de Vita p. 15. εἰς γὰρ χορεμίλης λυπρὸν οἰκητήριον, κυνῶν τυπῆσι ἢ κάκιστον ποιμένα. [a] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 29. [b] Dionyſ. de Hierarch. Eccl. c. 5. Contempl. 3. n. 7. & 8. [c] Theod. lib. 4. c. 15. [d] Hieron. lib. 16. in Iſai. c. 58. p. 265. χειροτονία, id eſt, Ordinatio Clericorum non ſolum ad imprecationem vocis, ſed ad Impoſitionem impletur manus: Ne ſcilicet vocis imprecatio clandeſtina Clericos ordinet neſcientes. [e] Nyſſen. Vit. Greg. Thaum. Tom. 3. p. 544. [f] Cave Hiſt. Literar. Vol. 1. p. 94. [g] Conc. Nic. c. 19. Chalced. c. 15. [h] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. 8. c. 11. [i] Fronto Ducæ. Not. in Chryſoſt. Hom. 1. ad Pop. Antioch. p. 1. [k] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 11. It. Ep. ad Philadelph. n. 10. Ep. ad Polycarp. n. 7. [l] Chryſ. Hom. 55. in Matth. κἂν ἀναγεννηθῆναι δέῃ, σταυρὸς παραγίνεται· κἂν τραφῆναι ἢ μυστικὴν ἐκείνην τροφὴν· κἂν χειροτονηθῆναι, &c. [m] Suicer. Theſaur. Voce σφραγὶς, Tom. 2. p. 1199. [n] Dionyſ. de Hierarch. Eccl. c. 5. p. 312. & 314. [*] Book 2, Chap. 19. Sect. 17. [o] Habert. Archieratic. p. 323.

WHEN

SECT. XIV. Ordinations concluded with the Kiſs of Peace.

WHEN the Ceremony of Conſecration was ended, it was uſual for the Clergy then preſent to ſalute the Perſon newly ordained, with the Kiſs of Peace [p]. And ſo being conducted to his proper Station belonging to his Office, if he was a Biſhop or a Presbyter, he made his firſt Sermon to the People. But of this, as it relates to Biſhops, I have given an Account before; as it relates to Preſbyters in the Greek Church, where it was more uſual for Presbyters to preach, the Reader may find Examples of ſuch Sermons among thoſe of Chryſoſtom [q], and Gregory Nyſſen [r], which they preached upon the Day of their Ordination.

SECT. XV. The Anniverſary Day of a Biſhop's Ordination kept a Feſtival.

I cannot omit to mention one thing more, which ſhould have been mentioned in another Place, becauſe it was an Honour peculiarly paid to the Order of Biſhops; which was, That in many Places the Day of their Ordination was Solemnly kept among the Anniverſary Feſtivals of the Church. On theſe Days they had Church-Aſſemblies, and Sermons, and all the other Solemnities of a Feſtival. Which appears from St. Auſtin's Sermons, two of which [s] were Preached upon the Anniverſary of his own Ordination. And in another [t] Publiſhed by Sirmondus, he alſo mentions the Day under the ſame Title of his own Anniverſary. In a fourth he ſpeaks alſo of the Anniverſary of Aurelius [u] Biſhop of Carthage, inviting the People to come and keep the Feſtival in Baſilica Fauſti, which was a noted Church in Carthage. Among the Homilies alſo of Leo Biſhop of Rome the three firſt are upon the Anniverſary Day of his Aſſumption to the Pontificate. And a late Learned Critick [w] has obſerved, that in St. Jerom's, and ſome other ancient Martyrologies, there ſometimes occur ſuch Feſtivals under the Titles of Ordinatio Epiſcopi, & Natale Epiſcopatus N. that is, the Ordination or Birth-Day of ſuch or ſuch a Biſhop. Which doubtleſs at firſt were the Anniverſaries of their Ordination, which they themſelves kept in their Life-time; and which were continued in Memory of them after Death: By which means they came to be inſerted into the Martyrologies as Standing Feſtivals, denoting there neither the Day of their Natural Birth, nor their Death (as ſome miſtake) but the Day of their Ordination, or Advancement to the Epiſcopal Throne. But of this more when we come to ſpeak of the Feſtivals of the Church.

CHAP. VII.

The Caſe of forced Ordinations and Re-ordinations conſidered.

SECT. I. Forced Ordinations very frequent in the Primitive Church.

FOR the Cloſe of this Book I ſhall add ſomething concerning forced Ordinations, and Re-ordinations, which were things that very often happened in the Primitive Church. For anciently, while Popular Elections were indulged, there was nothing more common than for the People to take Men by Force, and have them ordained even againſt their Wills. For though, as Sulpicius Severus complains, many Men were too Ambitious in Courting the Preferments of the Church; yet there were ſome, who ran as eagerly from them as others ran to them; and nothing but Force could bring ſuch Men to ſubmit to an Ordination. We have ſeen an Inſtance or two of this already in the Caſes of St. Auſtin [†] and Paulinus: And Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory affords us many others. For not to mention ſuch as only fled or abſconded to avoid Ordination; ſuch as Cyprian [a], and Gregory Thaumaturgus [b], and Athanaſius [c], and Evagrius [d], and St. Ambroſe [e]: There were ſome who were plainly ordained againſt their Wills: As Nepotian, of whom St. Jerom ſays, that when his Uncle Heliodore ordained him Presbyter, he wept [f] and lamented his Condition, and could not forbear expreſſing his Anger againſt his Ordainer, though that was the only Time he ever had occaſion to do it. St. Martin Biſhop of Tours was ſo averſe from taking the Biſhoprick that he was forc'd to be drawn out of his Cell by Craft, and carried under a Guard to his Ordination, as the Sacred [g] Hiſtorian informs us. And the Ordination of Macedonius the Anchoret by Flavian Biſhop of Antioch was ſo much againſt his Will, that they durſt not let him know what they were about, till the Ceremony was over; and when he came to underſtand that he was ordained Presbyter, he broke forth into a Rage againſt Flavian, and all that were concerned in the Action, as thinking that his Ordination would have obliged him to another ſort of Life, and deprived him of his Retirement and Return to the Mountains. So Theodoret in his Lives of the Eaſtern Anchorets [h] relates the Story. And that this was a very common Practice in thoſe Times, appears from what Epiphanius [i] ſays of the Cuſtom in Cyprus, That it was uſual in that Province, for Perſons that fled to avoid Ordination by their own Biſhop, to be ſeized by any other Biſhop, and to be ordained by them, and then be returned to the Biſhop from whom they were fled. Which argues, that forced Ordinations in thoſe Times were both practiſed and allowed.

[p] Dionyſ. Hierarch. Eccl. c. 5. p. 367. Conſtitut. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 5. [q] Chryſ. Homil. cum Presbyter eſſet deſignatus. Tom. 4. p. 933. [r] Nyſſen. Hom. in ſuam Ordinat. Tom. 2. [s] Aug. Homil. 24, & 25. ex Quinquaginta. [t] Hom. 39. edit. à Sirmond. Tom. 10. p. 841. [u] Hom. 32. de Verb. Dni. Dies Anniverſarius Ordinationis Domini Senis Aurelii craſtinus illuceſcit, Rogat & admonet per humilitatem meam Charitatem veſtram, ut ad Baſilicam Fauſti devotiſſime venire dignemini. [w] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 67. n. 14.

[†] See before Chap. 2. Sect. 8. [a] Pontius Vit. Cypr. [b] Greg. Nyſſen. Vita Greg. Thaumaturg. [c] Sozomen, lib. 2. c. 17. [d] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. [e] Paulin. Vit. Ambroſ. [f] Hieron. Ep. 3. Epitaph. Nepotian. Presbyter ordinatur. Jeſu bone, qui gemitus, qui ejulatus, quæ cibi interdictio, quæ fuga oculorum omnium? Tunc primum & ſolum Avunculo iratus eſt. [g] Sulp. Sever. Vit. St. Martin. lib. 1. p. 224. Diſpoſitis in itinere Civium turbis, ſub quadam Cuſtodia ad Civitatem uſque deducitur, &c.

SECT. II.
No Excuſe admitted in that Caſe, except a Man proteſted upon Oath that he would not be ordained.

NOR was it any kind of Remonſtrance or Sollicitation whatſoever, which the Party could make, that would prevent his Ordination in ſuch Caſes, except he chanced to proteſt Solemnly upon Oath againſt Ordination. For in that Caſe he was to be ſet at Liberty, and not to be ordained againſt ſo Solemn a Proteſtation. This is evident from one of the Canons of St. Baſil, which ſays, That they who Swear they will not [k] be ordained, are not to be compelled to forſwear themſelves by being ordained. And this, I think, alſo may be collected from the Account which Epiphanius gives of his own Tranſaction with Paulinianus, St. Jerom's Brother, upon ſuch an Occaſion. Paulinianus, he ſays, was one of thoſe who fled from the Biſhop for fear of Ordination; but Providentially coming [l] where Epiphanius was, he cauſed him to be ſeized by his Deacons, not dreaming or ſuſpecting any thing of Ordination; and when he came to it, he cauſed them to hold his Mouth, for fear he ſhould have adjured him by the Name of Chriſt to ſet him free. Thus he ordained him Deacon firſt, and Presbyter ſome time after in the very ſame manner. Which ſeems to imply, that if he had ſuffered him to have made his Proteſtation in the Name of Chriſt, he could not have proceeded to his Ordination. But it ſeems nothing elſe but ſuch an Adjuration was available to ſet him free: And that is a farther Argument, that in thoſe Times Men might be Ordained againſt their Wills, and yet their Ordination ſtand good, and be accounted as Valid as any others.

SECT. III.
This Practice afterward prohibited by the Imperial Laws, and Canons of the Church.

BUT in the next Age this Practice was prohibited, becauſe of ſeveral Inconveniences that were found to attend it. The Emperors Leo and Majorian made a Law with Sanctions and Penalties to prevent it. For they decreed, that no one ſhould be ordained [m] againſt his Will. And whereas ſome Biſhops did impoſe the Burden of Orders upon Men againſt their Conſent, they granted Liberty in that Caſe, either to the Party himſelf, or any other Accuſer to bring an Action at Law againſt the Archdeacon, who was liable to be fined Ten Pounds of Gold, to be paid to the injured Party, or to the Informers, or to the States of the City: The Biſhop alſo was to be cenſured by his Superiors, and the Party ordained to be ſet at Liberty, as if he had never been ordained. Purſuant to this Law, John Biſhop of Ravenna for a Tranſgreſſion of this kind was threatned to be deprived of the Power of Ordination by Simplicius [n] Biſhop of Rome, Ann. 482. And the 3d Council of Orleans [o] Ann. 538, made a Decree for the French Churches, That if any Biſhop ordained a Clerk againſt his Will, he ſhould do Penance for the Fact a whole Year, and remain ſuſpended from his Office till that Term was expired. So great an Alteration was there made in one Age in the Rules and Practice of the Church, from what they had been in the former.

SECT. IV.
Yet a Biſhop ordained againſt his Will, had not the Privilege to Relinquiſh.

BUT I muſt Note, that after this Correction was made, there was ſtill ſome Difference to be obſerv'd between the forced Ordination of a Biſhop, and that of an Inferior Clerk, Presbyter, Deacon, or any other. For though the forementioned Imperial Law gave Liberty to all Inferiors ſo Ordained, to relinquiſh their Office that was forced upon them, if they pleaſed, and betake themſelves to a ſecular Life again; yet it peremptorily denied [p] this Privilege to Biſhops, decreeing that their Ordination ſhould ſtand good; and that no Action brought againſt their Ordainers ſhould be of force to evacuate or diſanul their Conſecration. Which ſeems to be grounded upon that ancient Rule of the Church, mentioned in the Council of Antioch [q], and confirmed in the Council of Chalcedon [r], That if any Biſhop was ordained to a Church, to which he [h] Theod. Hiſt. Relig. c. 13. [i] Epiph. Ep. ad Johan. Hieroſol. Multi Epiſcoporum Communionis noſtræ & Presbyteros in noſtra ordinaverunt Provincia, quos nos comprehendere non poteramus, & miſerunt ad nos Diaconos & Hypodiaconos, quos ſuſcepimus cum Gratia. [k] Baſil. Ep. Canon. ad Amphiloch. c. 10. οἱ ὀμνύοντες μὴ καταδέχεσθαι τὴν χειροτονίαν, ἠναγκάζωσαν ὁμόσαι. [l] Epiphan. Ibid. Ignorantem eum, & nullam penitus habentem Suſpicionem, per multos Diaconos apprehendi juſſimus, & teneri os ejus, ne forte liberari ſe cupiens, adjuraret nos per nomen Chriſti, &c.

[m] Leo. Novel. 2. in Append. Cod. Theod. Nonnullorum perſuaſio ſacerdotum reluctantibus onus iſtud imponit, &c. Eo ergo licentiam hujus Præſumptionis excludimus, ut ſi quiſpiam probatus fuerit vi coactus ſub contumelia publica Clericatus Officiis ſucceſſiſſe, ſpontaneis accuſatoribus, vel ſi ipſe voluerit allegare perpeſſam licentiam, commodemus apud Judices Competentes hujuſmodi admiſſa damnare, ut ſi inter Leges objecta conſtiterint, decem Libras auri Archidiaconus cogatur inferre ei qui pertulerit exſolvendas: dehinc ſi ille deſiſtit, accuſatoris cenſibus & Civitatis Ordini profuturas: Illo ſuæ reddito voluntari, qui coactus non potuit conſecrari, &c. [n] Simplic. Ep. 2. ad Johan. Ravennatenſ. [o] Con. Aurelian. 3. c. 7. Epiſcopus qui invitum vel reclamantem præſumpſerit ordinare, annuali Pœnitentiæ ſubditus Miſſas facere non præſumat. [p] Leo. Novel. 2. Ibid. Si qui ſane Epiſcopus invitus fuerit ordinatus, hanc Conſecrationem nulla violari accuſatione permittimus. [q] Conc. Antioch. c. 17.

[r] Conc. Chalced. Act. 11.

refuſed

refuſcd to go, he ſhould be Excommunicated till he complied, or ſomething were determined in his Caſe by a Provincial Synod. Which ſeems to authorize the Uſing a ſort of Violence in compelling Men to undergo the Burden of the Epiſcopal Function; agreeable to that other Law of Leo and Anthemius in the Juſtinian Code [s], which puts this among other Qualifications of a Biſhop, that he ſhall be ſo far from Ambition, as to be one rather that muſt be ſought for and compelled to take a Biſhoprick. Such were anciently the Laws of Church and State relating to forced Ordinations.

SECT. V. Re-ordinations generally condemned.

As to Re-ordinations, before we can anſwer to the Queſtion about them, we muſt diſtinguiſh between the Orders that were given Regularly and Canonically by Perſons rightly qualified in the Church, and ſuch as were given irregularly by Perſons unqualified, or by Hereticks and Schiſmaticks out of the Church. As to ſuch Orders as were given Regularly in the Church, they were ſuppoſed, like Baptiſm, to impreſs a ſort of Indelible Character, ſo as that there was no Neceſſity upon any Occaſion to repeat them; but on the contrary it was deemed a Criminal Act ſo to do. The 3d Council of Carthage, following the Steps of the Plenary Council of Capua, or Capſa, decreed, That it was equally unlawful [t] to Re-baptize and Re-ordain. And thoſe called the Apoſtolical [u] Canons made it Depoſition both for the Ordainer and Ordained to give or receive a ſecond Ordination. St. Auſtin [w] ſays, it was not the Cuſtom of the Catholick Church to repeat either Orders or Baptiſm. For Men did not loſe their Orders [x], as to the Internal Character and Virtue, though they were ſuſpended from the Execution of their Office for ſome Miſdemeanour. Optatus [y] teſtifies the ſame, telling us, that Donatus was condemned in the Council of Rome under Melchiades, for Re-ordaining ſuch Biſhops as had lapſed in Time of Perſecution; which was contrary to the Cuſtom of the Catholick Church. And others [z] accuſe the Arians upon the ſame account, for Re-ordaining ſuch of the Catholick Clergy as went over to their Party.

SECT. VI. The Propoſal made by Cæcilian to the Donatiſts, examined.

THERE is indeed a Paſſage in Optatus concerning Cæcilian Biſhop of Carthage, which at firſt View ſeems to import as if Cæcilian had been willing to have ſubmitted to a Re-ordination. For Optatus [a] ſays, Cæcilian ſent this Meſſage to the Donatiſt Biſhops, That if Felix had given him no true Ordination, as they pretended, they ſhould ordain him again, as if he were ſtill only a Deacon. But St. Auſtin, who perhaps beſt underſtood Cæcilian's meaning, ſays [b] he only ſpoke this Ironically to deride them, not that he intended to ſubmit to a ſecond Ordination, but becauſe he was certain that Felix and the reſt of his Ordainers were no Traditors, as they accuſed them. So that we have no Inſtances of Re-ordaining ſuch, as were regularly ordained, in the Catholick Church: It being eſteemed unlawful, as Theodoret [c] words it, to give any Man the ſame Ordination twice. Whence neither in the Tranſlation of Biſhops from one Church to another do we ever Read of a new Ordination, but only of an Inthronization or Inſtalment; as of a new Matriculation of Presbyters and Deacons, when they were taken out of one Church to be ſettled in another. Cyprian ſpeaking of his Admiſſion of Numidicus into his own Church from another, where he was Preſbyter before, does not ſay, he gave him a new Ordination, but only [d] a Name and a Seat among the Presbyters of Carthage. And this was the conſtant Practice of the Church in all ſuch Caſes, for any thing that appears to the contrary.

SECT. VII. Schiſmaticks ſometimes re-ordained.

As to ſuch as were ordained out of the Church by Schiſmatical or Heretical Biſhops, the Caſe was a little different. For the Church did not always allow of their Ordinations, but ſometimes for Diſcipline's ſake, and to put a Mark of Infamy upon their Errors, made them take a new Ordination. This was decreed by the great Council of Nice in the Caſe of thoſe Biſhops and Presbyters, whom Meletius the Schiſmatick ordained in Egypt, after he had been depoſed by his Metropolitan of Alexandria. They were not to be admitted to ſerve in the Catholick Church, till they were firſt Authorized by a more ſacred [e] Ordination, as that Council words it in her Synodical Epiſtle or Directions to the Church of Alexandria. In purſuance of this Decree, Theodore Biſhop of Oxyrinchus Re-ordained the Meletian Presbyters

[s] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 31. Tantum ab ambitu debet eſſe ſepoſitus, ut quæratur cogendus, &c.

[t] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 38. In Capſenſi Plenaria Synodo ſtatutum, quod non liceat fieri Rebaptizationes, & Reordinationes, vel Tranſlationes Epiſcoporum. [u] Canon. Apoſt. c. 67.

[w] Aug. cont. Parmen. lib. 2. c. 13. In Catholica utrumque non licet iterari. [x] Id. de Bona Conjugal. c. 24. Tom. 6. Manet in illis ordinatis Sacramentum Ordinationis; & ſi aliqua culpa quiſquam ab Officio removeatur, Sacramento Domini ſemel impoſitio non carebit, &c. [y] Optat. lib. 1. p. 44. In Donatum ſunt hæ ſententiæ latæ: Quod confeſſus ſit ſe rebaptizaſſe, & Epiſcopis lapſis manum impoſuiſſe: quod ab Eccleſia alienum eſt. [z] Vid. Valeſ. Not. in Sozom. lib. 6. c. 26. ex Marcellin. Libel. Precum. [a] Optat. Lib. 1. p. 41. A Cæciliano mandatum eſt, ut ſi Felix in ſe, ſicut illi arbitrabantur, nihil contuliſſet, ipſi tanquam adhuc Diaconum ordinarent Cæcilianum.

[b] Aug. Brevic. Collat. Die 3. c. 16. Quod quidem ſi dictum eſt, ideo dici potuit ad illos deridendos, quibus hoc mandaſſe perhibetur, quoniam certus erat Ordinatores ſuos non eſſe Traditores.

[c] Theod. Hiſtor. Relig. c. 13. ὃ δυνατὸν δὶς τὴν αὐτὴν ὑποτεθεῖται χειροτονίαν. [d] Cypr. Ep. 35. al. 40. Admonitos nos & inſtructos ſciatis Dignatione Divina, ut Numidicus Preſbyter adſcribatur Presbyterorum Carthaginienſium numero & nobiſcum ſedeat in Clero. [e] Ep. Synod. ap. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 9. & Theodor. lib. 1. c. 9. μυσιωτέρᾳ χειροτονίᾳ βεβαιωθέντας, &c.

upon

upon their return to the Church; as Valeſius [f] ſhews out of Marcellinus and Fauſtinus's Petition to the Emperor Theodoſius: And other Learned Men [g] are of the ſame Opinion. Yet in ſome Caſes the Church conſented to receive Schiſmatical Biſhops and Presbyters without obliging them to take a new Ordination. As in Africk, St. Auſtin [h] aſſures us, it was the Cuſtom to allow of the Ordinations of the Donatiſts, and to admit them to Officiate in whatever Station they ſerved before their Return to the Unity of the Church, without Repeating their Ordination any more than their Baptiſm. He repeats this in ſeveral Places of his Writings. And that it was ſo, appears both from the Canons of the African [i] Councils, and the Conceſſions made [k] in the Collation of Carthage, where the Propoſal was, that the Donatiſt Biſhops ſhould enjoy their Honours and Dignities, if they would return to the Unity of the Catholick Church. This had before been determined in the Roman Council under Malchiades, where the Donatiſts had their firſt Hearing. For there, as St. Auſtin informs us [l], it was alſo decreed, that only Donatus the Author of the Schiſm ſhould be caſhiered; but for all the reſt, though they were ordained out of the Church, they ſhould be received upon their Repentance, in the very ſame Offices and Quality, which they enjoyed before. So that the Rigour of Church-Diſcipline was quickened or abated in this Reſpect, according as the Benefit or Neceſſities of the Church ſeemed to require.

SECT. VIII. And Hereticks alſo upon their Return to the Church, in ſome Places.

AND the Treatment of Perſons ordained by Hereticks was much of the ſame nature. Some Canons require all ſuch without Exception to be re-ordained. It was ſo in the Greek Church, at the Time when thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons were made. For the ſame Canon [m] that condemns Re-ordinations in the Church, makes an Exception in the Caſe of ſuch as were ordained by Hereticks; pronouncing their Ordination void, and requiring them to be ordained again. And this was generally the Practice of all thoſe Churches in the 3d Century, which denied the Validity of Heretical Baptiſm: For by much ſtronger Reaſon they denied their Ordinations. Therefore Fermilian, who was of this Opinion, tells us alſo, that the Council [n] of Iconium Ann. 256, decreed, that Hereticks had no Power to Miniſter either Baptiſm, or Confimation, or Ordination. Nay, ſome of thoſe who allowed the Baptiſm of Hereticks, yet ſtill continued to condemn their Ordinations. As Innocent Biſhop of Rome, who determines againſt ſuch as [o] were ordained by the Arians and ſuch other Hereticks, that they were not to be admitted with their Honours in the Catholick Church; though their Baptiſm might ſtand good being adminiſtred in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt. In another Place [p] he ſays, it was the ancient Rule of the Church of Rome to cancel and diſanul all ſuch Ordinations; though in ſome Places, he owns, they were allowed: For Aniſius Biſhop of Theſſalonica with a Council of his Provincial Biſhops, agreed to receive thoſe whom Bonoſus, an Heretical Biſhop of Macedonia, had ordained; that they might not continue to ſtrengthen his Party, and thereby bring no ſmall Damage upon the Church. Liberius not only admitted the Macedonian Biſhops to Communion, but alſo allowed them to continue in their Office, upon their Subſcription to the Nicene Creed, and Abjuration of their former Hereſy; as Socrates [q], and Sozomen [r], and St. Baſil [s], and others teſtify. In France the Cuſtom was in the Time of Clodoveus to give a new Impoſition of Hands to the Arian Clergy, that returned to the Catholick Faith; as appears from the firſt Council of Orleans, which made a Decree [t] about it: But that perhaps does not mean a new Ordination, but only ſuch a Reconciliatory Impoſition of Hands, as was uſed to be given to Penitents in Abſolution. But if otherwiſe, it proves that the Church had different Methods of Proceeding in this Caſe, as ſhe judged it moſt Expedient and Beneficial for her Service; ſometimes reverſing and diſannulling the Ordinations of Hereticks for Diſcipline's ſake, and to ſhew her Reſentments of their Errors; and ſometimes allowing them to ſtand good for her own ſake, to prevent greater Scandals, and to encourage the Unity of the Catholick Faith. Upon which account the General Council of Epheſus [u] made an Order concerning the Maſſalian Hereticks, otherwiſe called Euchites and Enthuaſts, that if any of their Clergy would return to the [f] Valeſ. Not. in Socrat. lib. 1. c. 9. [g] Du Pin Biblioth. Cent. 4. p. 251. [h] Aug. cont. Parmen. lib. 2. c. 13. Si viſum eſt opus eſſe, ut eadem Officia gererent quæ gerebant, non ſunt rurſus ordinati, ſed ſicut Baptiſmus in eis, ita Ordinatio manſit integra, &c. Vid. cont. Creſcon. lib. 2. c. 11. It. Ep. 50. p. 87. Ep. 162. p. 279. [i] Cod. Can. Afric. c. 69. & 70. [k] Collat. Carth. Die 1. c. 16. [l] Aug. Ep. 50. ad Bonifac. p. 87. Damnato uno quodam Donato, qui Author Schiſmatis fuiſſe manifeſtatus eſt, cæteros correctos, etiamſi extra Eccleſiam ordinati eſſent, in ſuis honoribus recipiendos eſſe cenſuerunt. [m] Canon. Apoſt. c. 67. [n] Firmil. Ep. 75. ap. Cyprian p. 221. Hæretico ſicut Ordinare non licet, nec manum imponere, ita nec Baptizare. [o] Innoc. Ep. 18. ad Alexand. c. 3. Non videtur Clericos eorum cum Sacerdotii aut Miniſterii cujuſpiam ſuſcipi debere Dignitate; quoniam iis ſolum Baptiſma ratum eſſe permittimus, &c. [p] Id. Ep. 22. ad Epiſc. Macedon. c. 5. Aniſii quondam fratris noſtri, aliorumque Conſacerdotum ſumma deliberatio hæc fuit, ut quos Bonoſus ordinaverat, ne cum eodem remanarent ac ne fieret mediocre Scandalum, ordinati reciperentur.—— Jam ergo quod pro Remedio ac neceſſitate temporis ſtatutum eſt, conſtat primitus non fuiſſe. [q] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 12. [r] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 10. [s] Baſil. Ep. 74. ad Epiſcopos Occident. [t] Conc. Aurel. 1. c. 12. De Hæreticis Clericis, qui ad Fidem Catholicam plena fide & voluntate venerint, id cenſuimus obſervari —— ut Officium, quo eos Epiſcopus dignos eſſe cenſuerit, cum impoſitæ manus Benedictione ſuſcipiant. [u] Conc. Epheſ. Act. 7. Decret. cont. Meſſalian. Tom. 3. p. 809. Si Clerici fuerint, maneant Clerici.—— Quod ſi renuerint anathematizare, ſi Presbyteri vel Diaconi fuerint, vel in alio quopiam Gradu Eccleſiæ, excidant & à Clero & à Gradu & à Communione.

Church,

Church, and in Writing Anathematize their former Errors, they ſhould continue in the ſame Station they were in before; otherwiſe they ſhould be degraded, and enjoy neither Clerical Promotion nor Communion in the Church. The Council of Nice is thought to have made the like Decree [w] in favour of the Novatian Clergy, only giving them a Reconciliatory Impoſition of Hands by way of Abſolution, not Re-ordination. And there is nothing more certain than that the African Fathers ſo treated the Donatiſts; particularly St. Auſtin in all his Writings pleads as much for the Validity of Heretical Ordinations, as Heretical Baptiſm; and ſays farther, that when the Church [x] judged it expedient not to ſuffer the Donatiſt Biſhops to Officiate upon their Return to the Church, ſhe did not thereby intend to deny the Reality or Validity of their Ordination, but ſuppoſed that to remain ſtill perfect and entire in them. And this is what St. Auſtin meant by the Sacrament of Ordination, as he words it, or the Indelible Character which was thereby imprinted; that though a Man turned Apoſtate, or was ſuſpended or deprived for any Crime, yet if upon his Repentance and Satisfaction the Church thought fit to admit him to Officiate again, there was no neceſſity of giving him a new Ordination, no more than a new Baptiſm; for the Character of both remained entire. This was the Doctrine and Practice of the African Church, and moſt others, in the Time of St. Auſtin.

[w] Conc. Nic. c. 8. [x] Aug. cont. Parmen. lib. 2. c. 13. Cum expedire hoc judicatur Eccleſiæ, ut Præpoſiti eorum venientes ad Catholicam Societatem, Honores ſuos ibi non adminiſtrent; non eis tamen ipſa Ordinationis Sacramenta detrahuntur ſed manent ſuper eos.

BOOK V.

Of the PRIVILEGES, IMMUNITIES, and REVENUES of the CLERGY, in the Primitive Church.

CHAP. I.

Some Inſtances of Reſpect which the Clergy paid mutually to one another.

SECT. I. The Clergy obliged to give Entertainment to their Brethren, travelling upon neceſſary Occaſions.

HAVING thus far diſcourſed of the neceſſary Qualifications of the Clergy, and the ſeveral Cuſtoms obſerved in the Deſignation of them to the Miniſterial Office: It will be proper in the next Place to ſpeak of the Reſpect and Honour, that was generally paid them upon the Account of their Office. Under which Head I ſhall comprize whatever relates to the Privileges, Exemptions, Immunities, and Revenues of the ancient Clergy. Some particular Marks of Honour, as they were peculiar to this or that Order, have already been mentioned in ſpeaking of thoſe Orders: But now I ſhall treat of thoſe which were more Univerſal, and common to all Orders. And here it will not be amiſs in the firſt Place to ſay ſomething of that courteous Treatment and Friendſhip, wherewith the Clergy of the ancient Church were obliged to receive and embrace one another. Two or three Inſtances of which it will be ſufficient to obſerve at preſent. 1*ſt*, That where-ever they travelled upon neceſſary Occaſions, they were to be entertained by their Brethren of the Clergy in all Places out of the Publick Revenues of the Church: And it was a ſort of Crime for a Biſhop or other Clerk, to refuſe the Hoſpitality of the Church, and take it from any other. The Hiſtorians Socrates and Sozomen [a] tacitly reflect upon Epiphanius for an Action of this Nature, That when he came to Conſtantinople, where Chryſoſtom ſhewed him all imaginable Reſpect and Honour, ſending his Clergy out to meet him, and inviting him to an Apartment according to Cuſtom in his Houſe, he refuſed the Civility, and took up his Habitation in a ſeparate Manſion. This was interpreted the ſame thing as breaking Catholick Communion with him, as it proved in Effect; for he came on purpoſe, by the Inſtigation of Theophilus Biſhop of Alexandria, to form an Accuſation againſt him. On the other Hand, to deny any of the Clergy the Hoſpitality of the Church upon ſuch Occaſions was a more unpardonable Crime, and looked upon as the rudeſt Way of denying Communion. Therefore Firmilian [b] ſmartly reproves the Behaviour of Pope Stephen, both as Inſolent and Unchriſtian, towards the African Biſhops, who were ſent as Legates from their Churches to him, That he neither admitted them to Audience himſelf, nor ſuffered any of the Brethren to receive them to his Houſe; ſo not only denying them the Peace and Communion of the Church, but the Civility of Chriſtian Entertainment alſo. Which was ſo much the greater Deſpite and Affront to them, becauſe every private Chriſtian travelling with Letters of Credence from his own Church, might have challenged that Privilege upon the Conteſſeration of Hoſpitality, as Tertullian [c] words it; and much more the Biſhops and Clergy from one another. By the Laws of the African Church, every Biſhop that went as a Legate of a Provincial Synod to that which they called a General and Plenary Synod, was to be provided of all things neceſſary in his Travels from this Liberality of the Church: As appears from a Canon in the 3d Council of Carthage, which orders [d], that no Province ſhould ſend above two or three Legates; that ſo they might appear with leſs Pomp and Envy, and be leſs Charge to their Entertainers. This implies that every Church was obliged, by Cuſtom at leaſt, to give them Entertainment in their Paſſage.

SECT. II. And to give them the Honorary Privilege of Conſecrating the Euchariſt in the Church.

ANOTHER Inſtance of cuſtomary Reſpect, which the Clergy were obliged to ſhew to one another, was, that when any Biſhop or Presbyter came to a foreign Church, they were to be complimented with the Honorary Privilege of performing Divine Offices, and conſecrating the Euchariſt in the Church. This was a very ancient Cuſtom, as appears from what Irenæus ſays of Anicetus Biſhop of Rome, that when Po- lycarp came to ſettle the Paſchal Controverſy with him, παρεχώρησεν τὴν εὐχαριστίαν τῷ Πολυκάρπῳ [e], which does not barely ſignify, he gave him the Euchariſt, as the firſt Tranſlators of Euſebius render it; but, he gave Place to him, or Liberty to conſecrate the Euchariſt in his Church. The Council of Arles, which turned this Cuſtom into a Law, uſes the very ſame Expreſſion about it, That in every Church they ſhould give Place [f] to the Biſhop that was a Stranger to offer the Oblation or Sacrifice. And the 4th Council of Carthage more plainly, That a Biſhop or Presbyter [g] viſiting another Church, ſhall be received each in their own Degree, and be invited to Preach, and Conſecrate the Oblation. So they were to be admitted to all the Honours which the Church could ſhew them; the Biſhop was to ſeat his Fellow-Biſhop in the ſame Throne with himſelf, and the Presbyters to do the ſame by their Fellow-Presbyter. For that the Canon means by receiving them in their own Degree. Which Cuſtom is referr'd to by the Catholick Biſhops in the Collation [h] of Carthage, where they promiſe the Donatiſt Biſhops, that if they would return to the Church, they ſhould be treated by them as Fellow-Biſhops, and ſit upon the ſame Thrones with them, as Strangers were uſed to do. The Author of the Conſtitutions joyns all theſe things together, ſaying, Let the Biſhop that is a Stranger ſit with the Biſhop, and be invited to preach; Let him alſo be permitted to offer the Euchariſt; or if in Modeſty he refuſes it, let him at leaſt be conſtrained to give the Bleſſing to the People.

[a] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 12. Sozom. lib. 8. c. 14. [b] Firmil. Ep. 75. ap. Cypr. p. 228. Ut venientibus non ſolum Pax & Communio, ſed & Tectum & Hoſpitium negaretur. [c] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 20. [d] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 2. Ut & minus invidioſi, minuſque Hoſpitibus ſumptuoſi exiſtant.

SECT. III. The Uſe of the Literæ Formatæ, or Commendatory Letters, in this Reſpect.

BUT then it is to be obſerved, that theſe Honours were not to be ſhewed to Strangers, as mere Strangers, but as they could ſomeways give Proof of their Orthodoxy and Catholiciſm to the Church to which they came. And in this Reſpect the Literæ Syſtaticæ, or Commendatory Letters, as they called them, were of great Uſe and Service in the Church. For no ſtrange Clergy-man was to be admitted ſo much as to communicate, much leſs to officiate, without theſe Letters of his Biſhop, in any Church where he was a perfect Stranger, for fear of ſurreptitious, or paſſive Communion, as the Canons [i] call it. And Biſhops were under the ſame Obligations to take the Letters of their Metropolitan, if they had occaſion to travel into a foreign Country, where they could not otherwiſe be known. The 3d Council of Carthage has a Canon [k] to this purpoſe, That no Biſhop ſhould go beyond Sea without conſulting the Primate of his Province, that he might have his Formatæ, or Letters of Commendation. And that the ſame Diſcipline was obſerved in all Churches, ſeems clear from one of thoſe Canons of the Greek Church, among thoſe which go by the Name of Apoſtolical, which ſays, no ſtrange Biſhops, [l] Presbyters, or Deacons ſhall be received ἄνευ συστατικῶν, unleſs they bring Commendatory Letters with them: But without them they ſhall only be provided of Neceſſaries, and not be admitted to communicate, becauſe many things are ſurreptitiouſly obtained. The Tranſlation of Dionyſius Exiguus indeed denies them Neceſſaries alſo: But that is a manifeſt Corruption of the Greek Text, which allows them to communicate in outward good things, but not in the Communion of the Church. And this is what ſome think the Ancients meant by Communio Peregrina, the Communion of Strangers, when ſuch as travelled without Letters of Credence, were hoſpitably entertained, and provided of Suſtenance, but not admitted to participate of the Euchariſt, becauſe they had no Teſtimonials of their Life and Converſation. But others give a different Account of this, which I ſhall more nicely examine, when I come to ſpeak of the Diſcipline of the Church, under which Head the Communio Peregrina will come to be conſidered, as a Species of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure.

SECT. IV. The Clergy obliged to end all their own Controverſies among themſelves.

A Third Inſtance of Reſpect which the Clergy ſhewed to one another, was, That if any Controverſies happened among themſelves, they freely conſented to have them determined by their Biſhops and Councils, without having Recourſe to the Secular Magiſtrate for Juſtice. Biſhops, as I have had occaſion to ſhew [*] before, were anciently authorized by the Imperial Laws to hear and determine Secular Pecuniary Cauſes even among Lay-men, when both the Litigants would agree upon Compromiſe to take them for Arbitrators: But among the Clergy there needed no ſuch particular Compromiſe, but by the Rules and Canons of the Church they were brought under a general Obligation not to moleſt one another before a Secular Magiſtrate, but to end all their Controverſies under the Cognizance of an Eccleſiaſtical Tribunal. The Caſe was ſomewhat different when a Layman and a Clergyman had occaſion to go to Law together: For then the Layman was at Liberty to chuſe his Court, and was not obliged to refer his Cauſe to any Eccleſiaſtical Judge, unleſs by Compromiſe he brought himſelf under ſuch an Obligation. For ſo the Imperial Laws

[e] Iren. Ep. ad Victor. ap. Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 24. [f] Conc. Arelat. 1. c. 20. Ut Peregrino Epiſcopo Locus ſacrificandi detur. [g] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 33. Ut Epiſcopi vel Presbyteri, ſi cauſa viſendæ Eccleſiæ alterius Epiſcopi, ad Eccleſiam venerint, & in Gradu ſuo ſuſcipiantur, & tam ad Verbum faciendum, quam ad Oblationem conſecrandam invitentur. [h] Collat. Carthag. Die 1. c. 16. Sicut Peregrino Epiſcopo juxta conſidente Collega.
[i] Conc. Carthag. 1. c. 7. Clericus vel Laicus non communicet in aliena Plebe ſine Literis Epiſcopi ſui. Niſi hoc obſervatum fuerit, Communio fiet Paſſiva. Vid. Conc. Laodicen. c. 41. Conc. Antioch. c. 7. Agathenſ. c. 38. Chalcedon. c. 11. [k] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 28. Ut Epiſcopi trans mare non proficiſcantur, niſi conſulto Primæ Sedis Epiſcopo, ut ab Epiſcopo præcipuè (leg. præcipuo) poſſint ſumere Formatam vel Commendationem.
[l] Canon. Apoſt. c. 11. [*] Book 2. Chap. 7.

[m] in this Caſe had provided. Though in France in the Time of the Gothick Kings it was otherwiſe: For Laymen there were not to ſue a Clerk in a Secular Court without the Biſhop's Permiſſion; as appears from a Canon of the Council [n] of Agde, made under Alarick Ann. 506, which equally forbids a Clergyman to ſue a Layman in a Secular Court, or to anſwer to any Action brought againſt him there, without the Biſhop's Permiſſion. But whatever Difference there was betwixt the Roman and Gothick Laws in this particular, it is evident, that as to any Controverſies ariſing among the Clergy themſelves, they were to be determined before Eccleſiaſtical Judges; as appears from a Canon of the Council of Chalcedon, which is in theſe Words, If any Clergyman hath a Controverſy with another, he ſhall not leave his own Biſhop, and betake himſelf [o] to any Secular Court, but firſt have a Hearing before his own Biſhop, or ſuch Arbitrators as both Parties ſhould chuſe with the Biſhop's Approbation. Otherwiſe he ſhould be liable to Canonical Cenſure. Which Cenſure in the African Church was the Loſs of his Place, whether he were Biſhop, Presbyter, or Deacon, or any other Inferior Clerk, that declined the Sentence of an Eccleſiaſtical Court, either in a civil or criminal Cauſe, and betook himſelf to a Secular Court for Juſtice: Though he carried his Cauſe, and Sentence was given on his ſide, in a criminal Action, yet he was to be depoſed; or if it was a civil Cauſe, he muſt loſe whatever Advantage he gained by the Action, as the 3d Council of Carthage [p] in this caſe determined, becauſe he deſpiſed the whole Church, in that he could not confide in any Eccleſiaſtical Perſons to be his Judges. Many other Councils determined the ſame thing, as that of Vannes [q], Chalons [r], and Maſcon [s]. And the Council of Milevis [t] decreed, That no one ſhould petition the Emperor to aſſign him Secular Judges, but only Eccleſiaſtical [u], under Pain of Deprivation. So great Confidence did the Clergy generally place in one another, and pay ſuch a Deference to the Wiſdom, Integrity, and Judgment of their Brethren, that it was then thought they had no need to have Recourſe to Secular Courts for Juſtice, but they were willing to determine all Controverſies of their own among themſelves: And as the Imperial Laws did not hinder this, but encourage it; ſo we ſeldom find any Eccleſiaſticks inclined to oppoſe it, but either ſome Factious and Turbulent Men, or ſuch whoſe Crimes had made them ſo obnoxious, that they had Reaſon to dread an Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure.

SECT. V. What Care was taken in receiving Accuſations againſt the Biſhops and Clergy of the Church.

I ſhall but obſerve one thing more upon this Head, which is, the great Care the Clergy had of the Reputation and Character of one another; which being a ſacred and neceſſary thing in Perſons of their Function, they did not think fit to let it be expoſed to the malicious Calumnies and Slanders of every baſe and falſe Accuſer. But firſt in all Accuſations, eſpecially againſt Biſhops, the Teſtimony of two or three Witneſſes was required, according to the Rule of the Apoſtle. Therefore when the Synod of Antioch proceeded to condemn Euſtathius Biſhop of Antioch upon a ſingle Teſtimony, the Hiſtorian cenſures it [w] as an arbitrary Proceeding in them againſt that Apoſtolical Canon, Receive not an Accuſation againſt an Elder, but before two or three Witneſſes. 2dly, The Character of the Witneſſes was to be examined, before their Teſtimony was to be allowed of. An Heretick was not to give Evidence againſt a Biſhop, as may be collected from thoſe Canons which bear the Name of the Apoſtles, one of which joins theſe two things together: Receive [x] not an Heretick to teſtify againſt a Biſhop; Nor a ſingle Witneſs, though he be one of the Faithful: For the Law ſaith, In the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes ſhall every Word be eſtabliſhed. Athanaſius pleaded the Privilege of this Law, when he was accuſed for ſuffering Macarius his Presbyter to break the Communion-Cup; he urged [y], that his Accuſers were Meletians, who ought not to be credited, being Schiſmaticks, and Enemies of the Church. By the 2d Council of Carthage not only Hereticks, but any others that were known to be guilty [z] of ſcandalous Crimes, were to be rejected from giving Teſtimony againſt any Elder of the Church. The 1ſt general Council of Conſtantinople diſtinguiſhes the Cauſes, upon which an Accuſation might be brought againſt a Biſhop: For a Man might have a private Cauſe of Complaint againſt him, as that he was defrauded in his Property, or in any the like Caſe injured by him: In which Caſe his Accuſation was to be heard, without conſidering at all the Quality of the Perſon or his Religion. For a Biſhop was to keep a good Conſcience, and any Man that complained of being injured by him, was to [m] Valentin. Novel. 12. ad Calcem Cod. Th. In Clerico Petitore conſequens erit, ut ſecundum lege Pulſati Forum ſequatur, ſi adverſarius ſuus ad Epiſcopi vel Presbyteri Audientiam non præſtat adſenſum. [n] Conc. Agathenſ. c. 32. Clericus nec quenquam præſumat apud ſæcularem Judicem, Epiſcopo non permittente, pulſare. Sed ſi pulſatus fuerit, non reſpondeat, nec proponat, nec audeat criminale negotium in Judicio ſeculari proponere. [o] Conc. Chalced. c. 9. εἴ τις κληρικὸς πρὸς κληρικὸν πρᾶγμα ἔχει, μὴ ἐγκαταλιμπανέτω τὸν οἰκεῖον ἐπίσκοπον, καὶ ἐπὶ κοσμικὰ δικαστήρια κατατρεχέτω, &c. [p] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 9. Quiſquis Epiſcoporum, Presbyterorum, & Diaconorum ſeu Clericorum, cum in Eccleſia ei crimen fuerit intentatum, vel Civilis Cauſa fuerit commota, ſi derelicto Eccleſiaſtico Judicio Publicis Judiciis purgari voluerit, etiamſi pro ipſo prolata fuerit ſententia, Locum ſuum amittat, & hoc in Criminali Actione. In Civili vero perdat quod evicerit, ſi Locum ſuum obtinere maluerit, &c. [q] Conc. Venetic. c. 9. [r] Conc. Cabillon. c. 11. [s] Conc. Matiſcon. c. 5. [t] Conc. Milev. c. 19. [u] Conc. Milev. c. 19. Quicunque ab Imperatore Cognitionem Judiciorum Publicorum petierit, Honore proprio privetur: Si autem Epiſcopale Judicium ab Imperatore poſtulaverit, nihil ei obſit. [w] Theod. Hiſt. lib. 1. c. 20. [x] Canon. Apoſt. c. 75. [y] Athan. Apol. ad Conſtant. T. 1. p. 731. [z] Conc. Carth. 2. c. 6. Qui aliquibus ſceleribus irretitus eſt, vocem adverſus Majores Natu non habeat accuſandi. Vid. Cod. Can. Afric. c. 1.

have

have Juſtice done him, whatever Religion he was of. But if the Crime was purely Eccleſiaſtical, that was alledged againſt him; then the Perſonal Qualities of the Accuſers were to be examined; ſo that no Hereticks ſhould be allowed to accuſe [r] Orthodox Biſhops in Cauſes Eccleſiaſtical; nor any Excommunicate Perſons, before they had firſt made Satisfaction for their own Crimes; nor any who were impeached of Crimes, of which they had not proved themſelves Innocent. The Council of Chalcedon [s] adds, that no Clergyman or Layman ſhould be admitted to impeach a Biſhop or a Clerk, till his own Reputation and Character were firſt enquired into and fully examined. So careful were they in this Matter not to expoſe the Credit of the Clergy to the malicious Deſigns or wicked Conſpiracies of any profligate Wretches, whom Malice and Bribery might induce to accuſe them. 3*dly*, In caſe of falſe Accuſation, whether publick or private, the Penalty againſt the Offender was very ſevere. If any Clergyman, ſays one [t] of the Apoſtolical Canons, unjuſtly reproach a Biſhop, he ſhall be depoſed: For it is written, Thou ſhalt not ſpeak Evil of the Ruler of thy People. And by a Canon [u] of the Council of Eliberis, for any Man to charge a Biſhop, Presbyter, or Deacon with a falſe Crime, which he could not make good againſt them, was Excommunication without Hopes of Reconciliation at the Hour of Death. Which was the uſual Penalty that was inflicted by that Council upon very great and notorious Offenders; for which ſome have cenſured the Spaniſh Church as guilty of Novatianiſm, but without Reaſon, as I ſhall ſhew when I come to diſcourſe of the Diſcipline of the Church. Here it may be ſufficient to obſerve, that they thought this Crime one of the firſt Magnitude, ſince they refuſed to give the external Peace of the Church to ſuch Offenders, even at their laſt Hour. Many other Inſtances of the like Reſpect might here be added, but by theſe few the Reader will be able to judge, with what Candor and Civility the Clergy of the Primitive Church were obliged to receive and treat one another. And it would have been happy for all Ages, had they walked in the ſame Steps, and copied after ſo good an Example.

CHAP. II.

Inſtances of Reſpect ſhewed to the Clergy by the Civil Government. Where particularly of their Exemption from the Cognizance of the Secular Courts in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes.

SECT. I. Biſhops not to be called into any ſecular Court to give their Teſtimony.

NEXT to the Reſpect which the Clergy ſhewed to one another, it will be proper to ſpeak of the Honours which were done them by the Civil Magiſtrates, which were more or leſs, according as either the Inclination and Piety of the Emperors led them, or as the State of the Times required. Theſe Honours chiefly conſiſted in Exempting them from ſome ſort of Obligations to which others were liable, and in granting them certain Privileges and Immunities which others did not enjoy. Of this kind was that Inſtance of Reſpect, which by the Laws of Juſtinian was granted to all Biſhops, that no ſecular Judge ſhould compel [a] them to appear in a Publick Court to give their Teſtimony before him, but he ſhould ſend one of his Officers to take it from their Mouth in Private. This Law is alſo repeated in the Juſtinian [b] Code, and there ſaid to be enacted firſt by Theodoſius the Great, a Law of whoſe is ſtill extant in the ſame Words in the Theodoſian Code [c]. But Gothofred will have it, that this Law as firſt enacted by Theodoſius, meant no more than to exempt the Clergy from being bound to give an Account to the Civil Magiſtrates, of what Judgments or Sentences they paſſed upon any ſecular Cauſes, that were referred to their Arbitration. And indeed it is evident, that the Law-Terms, ad Teſtimonium devocari, and εἰς μαρτυρίαν ἐπικαλεῖσθαι, are taken in this Senſe by the African Fathers in the fifth Council of Carthage, where it was agreed [d] to Petition the Emperors, to make a Decree, that if any Perſons referred a Civil Cauſe to the Arbitration of the Church, and one of the Parties chanced to be diſpleaſed with the Deciſion or Sentence that was given againſt him; it ſhould [r] Conc. Conſtant. Gen. 1. c. 6. [s] Conc. Chalced. c. 21. [t] Canon. Apoſt. c. 47. [u] Conc. Eliber. c. 75. Si quis Epiſcopum, Presbyterum, vel Diaconum falſis Criminibus appetierit, & probare non potuerit, nec in fine dandam ei Communionem. [a] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 7. Nulli Judicum licebit Deo amabiles Epiſcopos cogere ad Judicium venire pro exhibendo Teſtimonio; ſed Judex mittat ad eos quoſdam ex Perſonis Miniſtrantium ſibi, &c. [b] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. Tit. 3. de Epiſc. Leg. 7. Imperator Theodoſius dixit, Nec Honore nec Legibus Epiſcopus ad Teſtimonium decendum flagitetur. [c] Cod. Th. lib. 11. Tit. 39. de Fide Teſtium Leg. 8. [d] Conc. Carth. 5. c. 1. It. Cod. Can. Afr. c. 59. Et Conc. vulgo dict. Africanum. c. 26. Petendum ut ſtatuere dignentur, ut ſi qui forte in Eccleſia quamlibet Cauſam, jure Apoſtolico Eccleſiis impoſito, agere voluerint, & fortaſſe Deciſio Clericorum uni parti diſplicuerit; non liceat Clericum in judicium ad Teſtimonium devocari eum, qui cognitor vel præſens (forſan Præſes) fuerit. Et nulla ad Teſtimonium dicendum Eccleſiaſtici cujuſlibet Perſona pulſetur.

not be lawful to draw the Clergyman, who was Judge in the Cauſe, into any ſecular Court, to make him give any Teſtimony or Account of his Determination. This was not intended to exempt Clergymen in general from being called to be Witneſſes in a ſecular Court, but only to free them from the Proſecutions of Vexatious and Troubleſome Men, who when they had choſen them for their Arbitrators, would not ſtand to their Arbitration, but Proſecuted them in the Civil Courts, as if they had given a Partial Sentence againſt them: And though it was contrary to the Law to give them any ſuch Trouble; becauſe, as I have ſhewed [*] in another Place, all ſuch Determinations were to be abſolutely Deciſive and Final without Appeal; yet 'tis probable ſome ſecular Judges in Africk might give Encouragement to ſuch Proſecutions: Which made the African Fathers complain of the Grievance, but deſire to have it redreſs'd, in the forementioned Canon, to which Gothofred thinks the Law of Theodoſius refers. But whether the Law of Theodoſius be thus to be limited, is a matter that may admit of farther Enquiry. Gothofred himſelf confeſſes that Juſtinian took it in a larger Senſe; and that is enough for me to found this Privilege of Biſhops upon, that they were not to be called into a ſecular Court, to give their Teſtimony there in any Caſe whatſoever.

SECT. II. Nor obliged to give their Teſtimony upon Oath, by the Laws of Juſtinian.

ANOTHER Privilege of this kind, which alſo argued great Reſpect paid to Biſhops, was, That when their Teſtimony was taken in private, they were not obliged to give it upon Oath, as other Witneſſes were, but only upon their Word, as became the Prieſts of God, laying the Holy Goſpels before them. For the ſame Law of Juſtinian [e] which grants them the former Privilege, enacted this in their Favour and Behalf alſo. And in purſuance of that Law probably the Council of Tribur ſome Ages after [f] decreed, that no Presbyter ſhould be queſtioned upon Oath, but inſtead of that only be Interrogated upon his Conſecration; becauſe it did not become a Prieſt to Swear upon a light Cauſe. But it does not appear, that this Indulgence was granted to Biſhops before the Time of Juſtinian. For the Council of Chalcedon [g] exacted an Oath in a certain Caſe of the Egyptian Biſhops; and the Council of Tyre [h] required the ſame of Ibas Biſhop of Edeſſa. And there are many other Inſtances of the like Nature.

SECT. III. Whether the ſingle Evidence of one Biſhop was good in Law againſt the Teſtimony of many others.

Conſtantine the Great granted many Privileges to the Clergy; but there are ſome that go under his Name, which were certainly never granted by him: As his famed Donation to the Biſhops of Rome, which Baronius [i] himſelf gives up for a Forgery, and De Marca [k] and Pagi [l] prove it to be a ſpurious Fiction of the 9th Century, invented moſt probably by the ſame Iſidore Mercator, who forged the Decretal Epiſtles of the ancient Biſhops of Rome. There are other Privileges fathered upon Conſtantine, which though not ſuch manifeſt Forgeries as the former, are yet by Learned Men reputed of a doubtful Nature; ſuch as that which is comprized in a Law under the Name of Conſtantine [m], at the end of the Theodoſian Code, where all Judges are commanded to take the ſingle Evidence of one Biſhop as good in Law, againſt all others whatſoever. Gothofred is of Opinion, that this whole Title in the Theodoſian Code is ſpurious; and for this Law in Particular, there are two Arguments that ſeem to prove it not Genuine. Firſt, Becauſe Conſtantine himſelf in another Law [n] ſays, The Teſtimony of a ſingle Witneſs ſhall not be heard in any Caſe, no not though the Witneſs be a Senator. Secondly, Becauſe the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, as well as the Civil, require two Witneſſes, as has been Noted in the laſt Chapter. Which, I think, are ſufficient Arguments to prove, that no ſuch Extravagant Privilege could be granted to Biſhops by Conſtantine: But I leave the Reader to Judge for himſelf, if he can find better Arguments to the contrary.

SECT. IV. Presbyters privileged againſt being Queſtioned by Torture, as other Witneſſes were.

WE have better Proof for another Privilege that we find granted to Presbyters, which was, That if any of them were called to give Teſtimony in a publick Court, they ſhould not be examined by Scourging or Torture, as the Law directed in other Caſes. For by the Roman Laws Witneſſes might be examined upon the Rack in ſome Caſes, to make them declare the whole Truth: As we learn not only from the Laws [o] themſelves, but from St. Auſtin [p], and Syneſius [q], who mentions ſeveral new ſorts of Torture, which Andronicus the Tyrannical Prefect of Ptolemais invented beyond what the Law directed. But now nothing of this kind could be impoſed upon any Presbyter of the Church: For they were exempted from it by a Law of Theodoſius the Great, which is ſtill [*] Book 2. Chap. 7. Sect. 3. & 4. [e] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 7. Propoſitis SS. Evangeliis, ſecundum quod decet Sacerdotes, dicant quod noverint, non tamen jurent. [f] Conc. Tribur. c. 21. Presbyter vice Juramenti per ſanctam Conſecrationem interrogetur; quia ſacerdotes ex levi cauſa jurare non debent, &c. [g] Conc. Chalced. Act. 4. Tom. 4. p. 518. [h] Conc. Tyr. in Act. 9. Concil. Chalced. p. 629. [i] Baron. an. 324. n. 118. [k] Marca de Concord. lib. 6. c. 6. n. 6. [l] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 324. n. 13. [m] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 12. de Epiſc. Audient. Leg. 1. Teſtimonium etiam ab uno licet Epiſcopo perhibitum, omnes Judices indubitanter accipiant, nec alius audiatur, cum Teſtimonium Epiſcopi à qualibet parte fuerit repromiſſum. [n] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 32. de Fide Teſtium. Leg. 3. Sancimus, ut unius omnino Teſtis Reſponſio non audiatur, etiamſi præclare Curiæ honore præfulgeat. [o] Vid. Cod. Juſtin. lib. 9. tit. 41. de Quæſtionibus. It. Cod. Theodoſian. lib. 13. tit. 9. de Naufragiis Leg. 2. [p] Aug. Serm. 49. de Diverſ. Tom. 10. p. 520. [q] Syneſ. Ep. 58.

extant

extant in both the Codes [r], by which it alſo appears that it was a peculiar Privilege granted to Biſhops and Presbyters, but to none below them: For the reſt of the Clergy are excepted, and left to the common way of Examination, which in other Caſes the Law directed to be uſed.

SECT. V. The Clergy exempt from the Ordinary Cognizance of the ſecular Courts in all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes.

BUT the next Privilege I am to mention, was a more Univerſal one, that extended to all the Clergy; which was their Exemption from the Ordinary Cognizance of the ſecular Courts in ſeveral ſorts of Cauſes. To underſtand this Matter aright, we muſt carefully diſtinguiſh two things. Firſt, The different Kinds of Cauſes in which the Clergy might be concerned; and Secondly, the different Powers of the Inferior Courts from that of the ſupreme Magiſtrate, who was inveſted with a peculiar Prerogative-Power above them. The want of attending to which Diſtinctions is the thing that has bred ſo much Confuſion in Modern Authors upon this Subject, and eſpecially in the Romiſh Writers, many of which are intolerably Partial in their Accounts; and highly injurious to the Civil Magiſtrates, under Pretence of aſſerting and maintaining the Rights and Liberties of the Church. In the firſt Place therefore, to have a right Underſtanding in this Matter, we muſt diſtinguiſh the ſeveral ſorts of Cauſes in which Eccleſiaſtical Perſons might be concerned. Now theſe were of four kinds. Firſt, Such as related to Matters purely Eccleſiaſtical, as Crimes committed againſt the Faith, or Canons and Diſcipline and good Order of the Church, which were to be Puniſhed with Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures. Secondly, Such as related to mere Civil and Pecuniary Matters between a Clergyman and a Layman. Thirdly, Such as related to Political Matters, as Groſs and Scandalous Crimes committed againſt the Laws, and to the Detriment of the Common-Wealth, as Treaſon, Rebellion, Robbery, Murder, and the like, which in the Laws are called, Atrocia Delicta. Fourthly, Such as related to leſſer Crimes of the ſame Nature, which the Law calls Levia Delicta, ſmall or petty Offences. Now according to this Diſtinction of Cauſes the Clergy were, or were not, Exempt from the Cognizance of the Civil Courts, by the Laws of the Roman Empire. In all Matters, that were purely Eccleſiaſtical they were abſolutely Exempt, as Gothofred [s] the great Civilian ſcruples not to own. For all Cauſes of that Nature were reſerved to the Hearing of Biſhops and their Councils, not only by the Canons of the Church, but the Laws of the State alſo.

SECT. VI. This Evidenced from the Laws of Conſtantius:

THIS may be Evidenced from the Reſcripts of ſeveral Emperors ſucceſſively one after another, moſt of which are extant in both the Codes. Conſtantius, Ann. 355, Publiſhed a Law [t], wherein he prohibited any Accuſation to be brought againſt a Biſhop before a ſecular Magiſtrate; but if any one had any Complaint againſt him, his Cauſe ſhould be heard and tryed by a Synod of Biſhops. This at leaſt muſt ſignify in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes; though Gothofred and ſome others ſay, it extended alſo to Civil and Criminal Cauſes; and that though it looked like a Privilege, yet it was intended as a Snare to the Catholick Biſhops, to oppreſs them by his Arian Synods in thoſe Times, when the Majority of Biſhops in any Synod were commonly ſuch as favoured the Arian Party; and a Catholick Biſhop might expect more Favour and Juſtice from a ſecular Court, than from them. But whether this Law extended to all Civil and Criminal Cauſes, is not very eaſy to determine: Thus much is certain, that if it did, it was not long after in that Part revoked, whilſt in the other Part it ſtood good, and was confirmed by the Laws of the ſucceeding Emperors.

SECT. VII. And thoſe of Valentinian and Gratian:

FOR Valentinian granted the Clergy the ſame Immunity in all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes. As appears from what St. Ambroſe writes to the younger Valentinian concerning his Father, ſaying, Your Father of Auguſt Memory [u] did not only ſay it in Words, but enacted it into a Law, that in Maters of Faith and Eccleſiaſtical Order, they ought to judge, who were qualified by their Office, and of the ſame Order. For thoſe are the Words of his Reſcript. That is, he would have Prieſts to judge of Prieſts. This Law is not now extant in the Code, but there is another of Valentinian and Gratian to the ſame Purpoſe; wherein it is decreed [w], that the ſame Cuſtom ſhould be obſerved in Eccleſiaſtical Buſineſs, as was in Civil Cauſes: That if there aroſe any Controverſies about Matters of Religion, either from the Diſſentions of Men, or other ſmall Offences, they ſhould be heard and determined in the Places where they [r] Cod. Th. lib. 11. Tit. 39. de Fide Teſtium. Leg. 10. Preſbyteri citra injuriam Quæſtionis Teſtimonium dicant; ita tamen ut falſa non ſimulent. Cæteri vero Clerici, qui eorum Gradum vel Ordinem ſubſequuntur, ſi ad Teſtimonium dicendum petiti fuerint, prout Leges præcipiunt, audiantur. Vid. Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. Tit. 3. Leg. 8. [s] Gothofr. Comment. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. Leg. 23. [t] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 12. Manſuetudinis noſtræ Lege prohibemus in Judiciis Epiſcopos accuſari.——Si quid eſt igitur quærelarum, quod quiſpiam defert, apud alios potiſſimum Epiſcopos convenit explorari, &c.

[u] Ambroſ. Ep. 32. Auguſtæ Memoriæ Pater tuus non ſolum ſermone reſpondit, ſed etiam Legibus ſuis ſanxit, in Cauſa Fidei, vel Eccleſiaſtici alicujus Ordinis eum judicare debere, qui nec Munere impar, nec jure diſſimilis. Hæc enim verba Reſcripti ſunt. Hoc eſt, Sacerdotes de Sacerdotibus voluit judicare. [w] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 23. Qui mos eſt Cauſarum Civilium, iidem in Negotiis Eccleſiaſticis obtinendi ſunt: Ut ſiqua ſunt ex quibuſdam Diſſenſionibus, levibuſque Delictis, ad Religionis obſervantiam pertinentia, locis ſuis, & à ſuæ Diœceſeos Synodis audiantur: Exceptis quæ Actio Criminalis ab Ordinariis Extraordinariiſque Judicibus, aut inluſtribus Poteſtatibus audientia (leg. audienda) conſtituit.

aroſe,

aroſe, or in the Synod of the whole Dioceſe: Except only ſuch Criminal Actions, as were reſerved to the Hearing of the Ordinary Judges, the Proconſuls and Prefects of every Province, or the Extraordinary Judges of the Emperor's own appointing, or the Illuſtrious Powers, viz. the Præfectus-Prætorio of the Dioceſe. Here it is plain, that though Criminal Actions againſt the State-Laws are excepted, yet all Matters Eccleſiaſtical were to be heard by Eccleſiaſtical Judges, and no other.

SECT. VIII. And Theodoſius the Great:

IN the laſt Title of the Theodoſian Code there is a Law under the Name of Theodoſius the Great to the ſame Purpoſe, wherein it is decreed, That no Biſhop [x] or any other Miniſter of the Church ſhall be drawn into the Civil Courts of any Ordinary or Extraordinary Judges, about Matters or Cauſes of an Eccleſiaſtical Nature; becauſe they have Judges of their own, and Laws diſtinct from thoſe of the State. This Law is cited in Gratian's Decree, but the Words, Quantum ad Cauſas Eccleſiaſticas tamen pertinet, are there [y] fraudulently left out, to ſerve the Current Doctrine and Hypotheſis of his own Times, and make the Reader believe, that the Clergy anciently enjoyed an Exemption not only in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, but all others. I the rather mention this Corruption, becauſe none of the Correctors of Gratian have taken any Notice of it. The Roman Cenſors ſilently paſs it over, and it has eſcaped the Diligence of Antonius Auguſtinus and Baluzius alſo. Gothofred indeed queſtions the Authority of the Law itſelf; but I ſhall not ſtand to diſpute that, ſince there is nothing in it contrary to the preceding Laws, or thoſe that followed after.

SECT. IX. And Arcadius and Honorius:

FOR Arcadius and Honorius continued the ſame Privilege to the Clergy, confirming the ancient Laws, that whenever any Cauſe relating to Religion was debated, the Biſhops [z] were to be Judges; but other Cauſes belonging to the Cognizance of the Ordinary Judges, and the Uſe of the Common Laws, were to be heard by them only.

SECT. X. And Valentinian 3*d, and* Juſtinian.

Theodoſius Junior and Valentinian 3d refer to this Law of Honorius, as the ſtanding Law then in force concerning the Immunities and Liberties of the Clergy, ſaying in one of their Decrees, That [a] Biſhops and Presbyters had no Court of Secular Laws, nor any Power to judge of other Cauſes except ſuch as related to Religion, according to the Conſtitutions of Arcadius and Honorius inſerted in the Theodoſian Code. So that all the ſame Laws that denied them Power in Secular Cauſes, allowed them the Privilege of judging in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes; and the very excepting of other Cauſes is a manifeſt Proof, that there was no Conteſt made about theſe to the Time of Juſtinian, who confirmed the Privilege which ſo many of his Predeceſſors had granted before him. For in one of his Novels [b] we find it enacted, That all Eccleſiaſtical Crimes, which were to be puniſhed with Eccleſiaſtical Penalties and Cenſures, ſhould be judged by the Biſhop; the Provincial Judges not intermeddling with them. For, ſaith he, it is our Pleaſure that ſuch Matters ſhall not be heard by the Civil Judges.

SECT. XI. The Clergy alſo exempt in leſſer Criminal Cauſes.

Gothofred is alſo of Opinion [c], that ſome of the leſſer Criminal Cauſes of Eccleſiaſticks were to be determined by the Biſhops and their Synods likewiſe. For in the forementioned Law of Gratian (See before Sect. 7.) the Levia Delicta, or leſſer Crimes, are reſerved to the Hearing of Biſhops. And St. Ambroſe having ſpoken of the Decree of Valentinian, that orders all Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes to be judged by Biſhops only, adds alſo, That if in other Reſpects a Biſhop was to be cenſured, and his Morals [d] came under Examination, ſuch Cauſes as thoſe likewiſe ſhould appertain to the Epiſcopal Judgment. Which ſeems to put ſome Diſtinction between Eccleſiaſtical and Civil criminal Cauſes, and reſerve both to the Hearing of Biſhops and their Synods. But then, as Gothofred rightly obſerves, this muſt only be underſtood of leſſer criminal Cauſes: For in greater criminal Actions the Clergy were liable to the Cognizance of the Secular Judges, as well as all others. Which is freely owned by de Marca, and ſome other ingenuous Writers of the Romiſh Church. For de Marca [e] quits the Poſitions of Baronius and the Canoniſts, and confeſſes, that as it appears from the Theodoſian Code, that the Eccleſiaſtical Crimes, and leſſer Civil Crimes of the Clergy were left to the Hearing of Biſhops, and the [x] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 12. de Epiſ. Judicio. Leg. 3. Continua Lege ſancimus, ut nullus Epiſcoporum, vel eorum qui Eccleſiæ neceſſitatibus ſerviunt, ad Judicia ſive Ordinariorum ſive Extraordinariorum Judicum (quantum tamen ad Cauſas Eccleſiaſticas pertinet) pertrahatur, &c. [y] Gratian. Cauſ. 11. Quæſt. 1. c. 5. [z] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 11. de Religione Leg. 1. Quotiens de Religione agitur, Epiſcopos convenit judicare: Cæteras vero Cauſas, quæ ad Ordinarios Cognitores, vel ad uſum Publici juris pertinent, Legibus oportet audiri. [a] Valentin. Novel. 12. ad Calcem. Cod. Theod. Conſtat Epiſcopos & Presbyteros Forum Legibus non habere: Nec de aliis Cauſis, ſecundum Arcadii & Honorii Divalia Conſtituta, quæ Theodoſianum Corpus oſtendit, præter Religionem poſſe cognoſcere. [b] Juſtin. Novel. 83. Si vero Eccleſiaſticum ſit delictum, egens Caſtigatione Eccleſiaſtica & multa, Deo amabilis Epiſcopus hoc diſcernat, nihil communicantibus clariſſimis Provinciæ Judicibus. Neque enim volumus talia negotia omnino ſcire Civiles Judices. [c] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. Leg. 23. [d] Ambr. Ep. 33. Quinetiam ſi alias quoque arguretur Epiſcopus, ad Morum eſſet examinanda Cauſa, etiam hanc voluit ad Epiſcopale Judicium pertinere. [e] Marca Diſſert. in Cap. Clericus ad Calcem Antonii Auguſtini de Emendar. Gratiani p. 577. In Codice Theodoſiano Controverſiæ quæ ad Religionem pertinent, in quibus ſunt Crimina Eccleſiaſtica, & Minora Delicta è Civilium numero, Epiſcopis & cujuſque Diœceſeos ſive Provinciæ Synodis relinquuntur. Servatâ Judiciis Publicis Atrocium Criminum, quo numero quinque, adverſus Clericos Cognitione: ut docent Leges aliquot editæ cum Sirmondi in Appendice Codicis Theodoſiani.

Synods

Synods of every Dioceſe or Province: So the greater Civil Crimes of the Clergy, which he reckons five in Number, were reſerved to the Hearing of the Publick Courts and Civil Judges; which, he ſays, appears from the Laws publiſhed by Sirmondus in his Appendix to the Theodoſian Code.

SECT. XII. But not in greater criminal Cauſes.

SOME reckon thoſe Laws to be of no very great Authority, and therefore I ſhall rather chuſe to confirm this Poſition from the undoubted Laws which occur in the Body of the Theodoſian Code. Such as that of Theodoſius and Gratian, which particularly excepts theſe greater [f] criminal Actions, and reſerves them to the Hearing of the ordinary or extraordinary Judges, or the Præfectus-Prætorio of the Dioceſe. And thoſe other Laws of Theodoſius, and Arcadius, and Honorius, and Valentinian 3d, which have been cited in the foregoing Sections [*], and need not here be repeated. To which we may add that Law of the Elder Valentinian, which orders [g] all ſuch Eccleſiaſticks to be proſecuted in the Civil Courts, that were found guilty of creeping into the Houſes of Widows and Orphans, and ſo inſinuating into their Affections, as to prevail upon them to diſinherit their Relations, and make them their Heirs. And that other Law of the Emperor Marcian, which in criminal Cauſes exempts the Clergy of Conſtantinople [h] from the Cognizance of all Inferior Courts, but not from the High Court of the Præfectus-Pretorio of the Royal City. Which appears alſo to have been the Practice at Rome. For Socrates [i] obſerves, that when in the Conflict which happened at the Election of Pope Damaſus, ſome Perſons were ſlain, many both of the Laity and Clergy upon that Account were puniſhed by Maximinus, who was then Præfectus-Prætorio at Rome. It appears farther from the Novels [k] of Valentinian 3d, that in ſuch criminal Actions as thoſe of Murder, Robbing of Graves, or the like, Biſhops as well as any other Clerks, were bound to anſwer before the Civil Magiſtrate by their Proctors. But Juſtinian a little inlarged the Privilege with reſpect to Biſhops, making [l] a Decree, That no one ſhould draw a Biſhop in any Pecuniary or Criminal Cauſe before a Secular Magiſtrate againſt his Will, unleſs the Emperor gave particular Order to do it. This was the plain State of the Matter, as to what concerned the Exemption of the Clegy in this ſort of criminal Cauſes, notwithſtanding what Baronius or any others of that Strain have ſaid to the contrary. Nay, ſome Ages after, ſuch Crimes as Murder, Theft and Witchcraft were brought before the Secular Judges in France, as appears from the Council of [m] Maſcon, Ann. 581.

SECT. XIII. Nor in Pecuniary Cauſes with Laymen.

THE Caſe was much the ſame in all Civil Pecuniary Controverſies which the Clergy had with Laymen. For though they might end all ſuch Cauſes which they had one with another, in their own Courts, or before a Synod of Biſhops; and the Canons obliged them ſo to do, as has been noted in the laſt [*] Chapter; yet if their Controverſy happened to be with a Layman, the Layman was not bound to refer the Hearing of his Cauſe to an Eccleſiaſtical Court, unleſs he voluntarily conſented by way of Compromiſe to take ſome Eccleſiaſtical Perſons for his Arbitrators. This is evident from one of the Conſtitutions of Valentinian 3d, which ſays, That if the Plaintiff was a Layman, he might compel any Clergyman, with whom he had a Civil Conteſt, to anſwer in a Civil Court, if he [n] rather choſe it. And the Council of Epone [o], according to the Reading of Sirmond's Edition, ſays the ſame, that the Clergy, if they were ſued in a Secular Court, ſhould make no Scruple to follow the Plaintiff thither. But Juſtinian at the Inſtance of Mennas Patriarch of Conſtantinople granted the Clergy of the Royal City a peculiar Privilege, that in all Pecuniary Matters [p] their Cauſe ſhould firſt be brought before the Biſhop; and if the Nature of the Cauſe happened to be ſuch that he could not determine it, then Recourſe might be had to the Civil Judges, but not otherwiſe. From all which it appears, that anciently Exemptions of this Nature were not challenged as Matters of Divine Right, but depended wholly upon the Will and Pleaſure of Chriſtian Princes, however After-ages came to put another kind of Gloſs upon them.

SECT. XIV. Of the neceſſary Diſtinction between the Supreme and Subordinate Magiſtrates in this Buſineſs of Exemptions.

NAY, it muſt be obſerved, that even in Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, a great Difference was always obſerved between the Power of the Prince or Supreme Magiſtrate, and that of the Subordinate and Inferior Judges. For though the Ordinary Judges were bound by the Laws not [f] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 23. Exceptis quæ Actio Criminalius ab Ordinariis Extraordinariiſque Judicibus aut Inluſtribus Poteſtatibus audienda conſtituit. [*] See Sect. 8, 9, 10. [g] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 20. Eccleſiaſtici —— Viduarum ac Pupillarum domos non adeant: Sed publicis exterminentur Judiciis, ſi poſthac eos affines earum vel propinqui putaverint deferendos. [h] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſ. leg. 25. Actor. in nullo alio Foro, vel apud quenquam alterum Judicem eoſdem Clericos Litibus irretire, & Civilibus vel Criminalibus Negotiis tentent innectere. [i] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 29. διὰ τοῦτο πολλοὶ λαικοὶ τε καὶ κληρικοὶ ὑπὸ τῆς τότε ἐπάρχου Μαξιμίνου τιμωρηθῆναι. [k] Valent. Novel. 5. de ſepulcr. violat. ad Calcem Cod. Theod. It. Novel. 12. Quam formam etiam circa Epiſcoporum Perſonam obſervari oportere cenſemus. Ut ſi in hujuſmodi ordinis hominis Actionem Pervaſionis & Atrocium Injuriarum dirigi neceſſe fuerit, per Procuratorem ſolemnitur ordinatum, apud Judicem Publicum inter Leges & Jura confligant. [l] Juſtin. Novel. 123. n. 8. Sed neque ut Epiſcopus pro Pecuniaria aliqua aut Criminali Cauſa ad Civilem Militaremve Magiſtratum invitus perducatur, ſiſtaturve ſine Imperiali Juſſione concedimus. [m] Conc. Matiſcon. 1. Can. 7. [*] Chap. 1. Sect. 4. [n] Valent. Novel. 12. Petitor Laicus, ſeu in Civili ſeu in Criminali Cauſa, cujuſlibet loci Clericum adverſarium ſuum, ſi id magis eligat, per auctoritatem legitimam in publico Judicio reſpondere compellat. [o] Conc. Epaunenſ. c. 11. Si pulſati fuerint, ſequi ad ſeculare Judicium non morentur. Yet Note that other Editions, as that of Crab and Binius, read it to a contrary Senſe, Sequi ad ſeculare Judicium non præſumant. [p] Juſtin. Novel. 83.

to intermeddle with Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes; yet in ſome Caſes the Prince himſelf interpoſed and appointed Extraordinary Judges, and ſometimes heard and decided the Cauſes himſelf, or reverſed the Deciſions of Eccleſiaſticks by his Sovereign Power, which no Ordinary Judges were qualified to do. But this belongs to another Subject, that will have a more proper Place in this Work, when we come to ſpeak of the Power of Chriſtian Princes.

CHAP. III.

Of the Immunities of the Clergy in reference to Taxes and Civil Offices and other burdenſome Employments in the Roman Empire.

SECT. I. No Divine Right pleaded by the ancient Clergy to exempt themſelves from Taxes.

ANOTHER Privilege which the Clergy enjoyed by the Favour of Chriſtian Princes, was, That in ſome certain Caſes, according to the Exigency of Times and Places, they were exempt from ſome of the Taxes that were laid upon the reſt of the Roman Empire. But whatever they enjoyed of this kind, they did not pretend to as matter of Divine Right, but freely acknowledged it to be owing to the Pious Munificence and Favour of Chriſtian Emperors. Therefore [a] Baronius does them great Injuſtice, and is Guilty of very great Prevarication, in pretending that they claimed a Freedom from Tribute by the Law of Chriſt; and that no Emperor ever impoſed any Tax upon them, except only Julian the Apoſtate, and Valens the Arian, and the younger Valentinian, who was wholly governed by his Mother Juſtina an Arian Empreſs; that when St. Ambroſe paid Tribute under this Valentinian, he did it only out of his Chriſtian Meekneſs, not that he was otherwiſe under any Obligation to have done it. How true this Repreſentation is, the Reader may judge in part from the Words of St. Ambroſe, which are theſe [b], If the Emperor demands Tribute of us, we do not deny it: The Lands of the Church pay Tribute. We pay to Cæſar the things that are Cæſar's, and to GOD the things that are GOD's. Tribute is Cæſar's, and therefore we do not refuſe to pay it. This is ſo far from challenging any Exemption by Divine Right, that it plainly aſſerts the contrary. As in another Place he argues, that all Men are under an Obligation to pay Tribute, becauſe [c] the Son of GOD himſelf paid it, Mat. 17. 23. And yet Baronius cites [d] that very Paſſage of the Evangeliſt to prove that the Clergy are Jure Divino exempt, becauſe our Saviour ſays, Then are the Children free. For if, ſays he, the Children be free; much more ſo are the Fathers, that is, the Paſtors, under whoſe Care Princes are. Bellarmin is much more ingenuous in handling this Queſtion; for he aſſerts [e] againſt the Canoniſts (whoſe Opinion Baronius labours to maintain) that the Exemption of the Clergy in Political Matters, whether relating to their Perſons, or their Goods, was introduced by Human Right only, and not Divine: And that in Fact they were never Exempted from any other but Perſonal Tribute till the Time of Juſtinian, when they were freed from Taxes upon their Eſtates and Poſſeſſions alſo. So little Agreement is there betwixt theſe two great Cardinals of the Romiſh Church in their Accounts of this Matter, either as to Fact or Right, that in every thing their Aſſertions are point blank contrary to one another.

SECT. II. Yet generally excuſed from Perſonal Taxes, or Head-money.

To ſet the Matter in a clear Light, it will be neceſſary for me to give the Reader a diſtinct Account of the ſeveral ſorts of Tribute that were impoſed upon Subjects in the Roman Empire, and to ſhew how far the Clergy were concerned in each of them; which will be beſt done by having Recourſe to the Theodoſian Code, where moſt of the Laws relating to this Affair are ſtill extant. And this I ſhall the rather do, becauſe Baronius makes uſe of the ſame Authority, but with great Partiality, diſſembling every Thing that would not ſerve the Hypotheſis he had undertaken to maintain.

Now the firſt ſort of Tribute I ſhall take notice of, is that which is commonly called Cenſus Capitum, or Perſonal Tribute, to diſtinguiſh it from the Cenſus Agrorum, or Tribute ariſing from Men's Eſtates and Poſſeſſions. That the Clergy were generally freed from this ſort of Tribute is agreed on all Hands, only Gothofred has a very ſingular Notion about it. For he aſſerts [f] that under the Chriſtian Emperors there was no ſuch Tribute as this paid by any Men; ſo that the Exemption of the Clergy in this Case was no peculiar Privilege belonging to them, but only what they enjoyed in common with all other Subjects of the Roman Empire. But in this that Learned Man seems evidently to be mistaken. For first, he owns there was such a Tribute under the Heathen Emperors, from which, as Ulpian [g] relates, none were excused save only Minors under Fourteen, and Persons Superannuated, that is, above Sixty-five: Nor does he produce any Law to shew when or by whom that Tribute was ordered to be laid aside. Secondly, Theodosius Junior, the Author of the Theodosian Code, makes express mention of it, when in one of his Novels [h] he distinguishes betwixt the Census Capitum, and Census Agrorum. Thirdly, there are several Laws in the Theodosian Code, exempting the Clergy from Tribute, which cannot be fairly understood of any other Tribute but this sort of Capitation. As when Constantius grants the Clergy the same Immunity from Tribute as Minors had, he plainly refers to the old Law about Minors mentioned by Ulpian, and puts the Clergy upon the same Foot with them, granting them this Privilege, That not only they themselves, but [i] their Wives and Children, their Men-Servants and their Maid-Servants should all be free from Tribute; meaning Personal Tribute, or that sort of Capitation called Capitis Census. After the same manner we are to understand those two Laws of Valentinian [k], where he grants to Devoted Virgins, and Widows, and Orphans under twenty Years of Age, the same Immunity from Tribute, or as it is there called, The Capitation of the Vulgar. As also that other Law [l] of his, where he grants the like Privilege to Painters, together with their Wives and Children. From all which we may very reasonably conclude, that this Exemption from Personal Taxes was not a thing then common to all, but a peculiar Privilege of some certain Arts and Professions, among which the most Honourable was that of the Clergy.

[a] Baron. an. 387. Tom. 4. p. 538. [b] Ambr. Orat. cont. Auxent. de iradent. Baſilicis poſt. Ep. 32. Si tributum petit Imperator, non negamus; Agri Eccleſiæ ſolvunt tributum. —— Solvimus quæ ſunt Cæſaris Cæſari, & quæ ſunt Dei Deo. Tributum Cæſaris eſt, non negatur. [c] Ambr. lib. 4. in Luc. 5. & ap. Gratian. Cauſ. 11. Q. 1. c. 21. Si cenſum Filius Dei ſolvit, quis tu tantus es, qui non putes eſſe ſolvendum? [d] Baron. an. 387. p. 538. [e] Bellarm. de Clericis lib. 1. c. 28. Exceptio Clericorum in rebus Politicis, tam quoad Perſonas, quam quoad Bona, jure Humano introducta eſt, non Divino. Hæc Propoſitio eſt contra Canoniſtas. [f] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 1. de Annon. & Tribut. leg. 15. It. Com. in lib. 13. tit. 10. de Cenſu. leg. 4.

this

This may be farther confirmed from an Observation or two out of Gregory Nazianzen and Basil. Nazianzen in one of his Epistles [m] to Amphilochius complains, that the Officers of the Government had made an illegal Attempt upon one Euthalius a Deacon, to oblige him to pay Taxes: Therefore he desires Amphilochius not to permit this Injury to be done him; since otherwise [n] he would Suffer an Hardship above other Men, not being allowed to enjoy the Favour of the Times, and the Honour which the Emperors had granted to the Clergy. Here he plainly refers to some Immunity from Tribute, which the Imperial Laws granted particularly to the Clergy; which could not be any Exemption of their Estates from Tribute, for there was no such Law then in Force to be appealed to: It must therefore mean their Exemption from Personal Taxes, from which they were freed by the Laws of Valentinian and Constantius already mentioned. This will still receive greater Light and Confirmation from the Testimony of St. Basil, who had occasion to make a like Complaint to Modestus (who was Præfectus-Prætorio Orientis under Valens) of some who had infringed the Privilege of the Clergy in exacting Tribute of them against the Laws. The ancient way of Taxing, says he, excused such as were consecrated to GOD [o], Presbyters and Deacons, from paying Tribute: But now they who are set over this Affair, pretending to have no Warrant from your Eminency to excuse them, have taxed them all, except such as could claim a Privilege from their Age. Therefore his Request to him was, συγχωρηθῆναι κατὰ τὸν παλαιὸν νόμον τὴν συντέλειαν τοῖς ἱερατεύουσιν, That the Clergy might be exempt from Tribute according to the ancient Laws. St. Basil in this Passage refers to two sorts of Laws exempting Persons from Tribute; The one, those ancient Laws of the Heathen Emperors, which only excused Minors and Superannuates from Personal Tribute; The other, those Laws of Constantius and Valentinian, which exempted the Clergy also, granting them that Immunity which only Minors enjoyed before. And this is the thing he complains of, that the Clergy were not allowed the Benefit of the Christian Laws, but only those Laws of the Heathen Emperors, whereby if they chanced to be Minors or Superannuated, that is, under Twenty or above Sixty-five, they were excused, but not otherwise. From all which it evidently appears, that the Clergy might claim a peculiar Privilege by the Laws to be exempted from Personal Tribute, and that this was not common to all the Subjects of the Empire, whatever Gothofred and Pagi [p] from him have Suggested to the contrary.

[g] Digest. lib. 50. tit. 15. de Censibus leg. 3. Quibusdam ætas tribuit, ne Tributo onerentur. Veluti in Syriis à Quatuordecim annis Masculi, à Duodecim Fœminæ usque ad Sexagesimum Quintum annum Tributo Capitis onerentur.

[h] Theodos. Novel. 21. [i] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. & Cler. leg. 10. & 14. Clericis ac Juvenibus præbeatur Immunitas. —— Quod & Conjugibus & Liberis eorum & Ministeriis majoribus pariter ac Fœminis indulgemus; quos à censibus etiam jubemus perseverare immunes.

[k] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 10. de Censu leg. 4. In virginitate perpetua viventes, & eam Viduam de qua ipsa maturitas pollicetur ætatis nulli jam eam esse nupturam, à Plebeiæ Capitationis injuria vindicandas esse decernimus: Item Pupillos in virili sexu usque ad viginti annos ab istiusmodi functione immunes esse debere, mulieres autem donec virum unaquæque fortitur. Ibid. leg. 6. Nulla Vidua, nemo Pupillus exactionem Plebis agnoscat, &c. [l] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 4. de Excusat. Artific. leg. 4. Picturæ Professores, si modo ingenui sunt, placuit, neque sui Capitis Censione, neque Uxorum, aut etiam Liberorum nomine, Tributis esse munificos. [m] Naz. Ep. 159. διαγέφυρεν ὑπερχεῖσι χρυσὸν οἱ τῆς ἡγεμονικῆς τάξεως. [n] Ibid. δεινότατα ἂν πάθοι μόνος ἀνθρώπων μὴ τυγχάνων τῆς παρὰ καιρῶν φιλανθρωπίας, καὶ τῆς διδομένης τοῖς ἱερατικοῖς παρὰ τῶν βασιλέων τιμῆς.

[o] Basil. Ep. 279. ad Modest. τῷ τῷ Θεῷ ἱερωμένους, πρεσβυτέρους καὶ διακόνους ὁ παλαιὸς κῆνσος ἀτελεῖς ἀφῆκεν. οἱ δὲ νῦν ὑπογεγραμμένοι, ὡς ὁ λαβόντες παρὰ τῆς ὑπερτάτης σε ἐξουσίας πρόσταγμα, ἀπεγράψαντο, πλὴν εἰ μή τινες ἄλλως ἔχουσι ὑπὸ τῆς ἡλικίας τὴν ἄρσιν. [p] Pagi Crit. in Baron. an. 353. n. 10.

SECT. III. But not excuſed for their Lands and Poſſeſſions.

THE next ſort of Tribute was that which was exacted of Men for their Lands and Poſſeſſions, which goes by ſeveral Names in the Civil Law and ancient Writers. Sometimes it is called Κανών, as by Athanaſius [q] where he complains how he was unjuſtly accuſed of impoſing a Tax upon Egypt for the Uſe of the Church of Alexandria. So in the Theodoſian Code [r] there is a whole Title, De Canone Frumentario Urbis Romæ, which ſignifies the Tribute of Corn that was exacted of the African Provinces for the Uſe of the City of Rome. It is otherwiſe called Jugatio from Juga, which as Gothofred notes [s] ſignifies as much Land as a Yoke of Oxen could Plough in a Year: And becauſe the Taxation was made according to that Rate, it had therefore the Name of Jugatio and Juga. It has alſo frequently the Name of Capitatio and Capita: And becauſe Men's Servants and Cattle were reckoned into their Taxable Poſſeſſions as well as their Lands, therefore in ſome Laws [t] the one is called Capitatio terrena, and the other Capitatio Humana & Animalium, or Animarum Deſcriptio. Theſe Taxes were uſually paid three times a Year, once every four Months; whence Sidonius Apollinaris [u] ſtiles them Tria Capita, or the Monſter with three Heads, which he deſired the Emperor Majorianus to free him from, that he might live and ſubſiſt the better: For thus he addreſſes himſelf to him in his Poetical Way:

Geryones nos eſſe puta, Monſtrumque Tributum:
Hic Capita, ut vivam, Tu mihi tolle Tria.

In which Words, which none of the Commentators rightly underſtood, he refers to a Law [w] of Valentinian's, and ſeveral others in the Theodoſian Code, where this ſort of Tribute is required to be paid by three certain Portions in a Year, or once in four Months, which in his Phraſe is the Tria Capita, or Monſter with three Heads. The Collectors of this Tax were alſo hence called Cephaleotæ, Collectors of the Capitation [x] in ſome Laws of the Theodoſian Code. And becauſe this Tribute was commonly paid in Specie, as in Corn, Wine, Oyl, Iron, Braſs, &c. for the Emperor's Service, therefore it is often called Specierum Collatio. And being the ordinary ſtanding Tax of the Empire, it is no leſs frequently [y] ſtiled Indictio Canonica, in Oppoſition to the Superindicta & Extraordinaria, that is, ſuch Taxes as were levied upon extraordinary Occaſions. I have noted theſe Things here all together, that I may not be put to explain the Terms at every turn hereafter, as I have occaſion to make uſe of them, which are indeed a little uncommon, and not eaſily underſtood, but by ſuch as are converſant in the Civil Law.

Now to the Queſtion in hand, Whether the Clergy in general were exempt from this ordinary Canonical Tribute laid upon Men's Goods and Poſſeſſions? I anſwer in the Negative againſt Baronius, who aſſerts the contrary. Some particular Churches indeed had ſpecial Favours granted them by indulgent Princes, to exempt them from all Tribute of this kind: But thoſe very Exceptions prove, that what was Matter of Grace to ſome particular Churches, could not be the common Privilege of all Churches. Theodoſius Junior granted a ſpecial Exemption to the Church of Theſſalonica, that ſhe ſhould pay no Capitation [z] for her own Eſtate, provided ſhe did not take other Lands into her Protection, to the Detriment of the Commonwealth under the Pretence of an Eccleſiaſtical Title. He alſo allowed the Churches of Conſtantinople and Alexandria the ſame Privilege [a] upon the like Condition, That they ſhould not take any Villages, great or ſmall, into their Patronage, to excuſe them from paying their ancient Capitation. Gothofred is alſo of Opinion, That in the beginning of Conſtantine's Reign, while the Church was poor, and her ſtanding Revenues but ſmall, her Eſtates and Poſſeſſions were univerſally excuſed from Tribute: For there is a Law in the Theodoſian Code which may be interpreted to this purpoſe: Though the Words are ſo obſcure [b], that without the help of ſo wiſe an Interpreter one would hardly find out the Senſe of them. However admitting them to ſignify ſuch a Privilege, it is certain it laſted not many Years: For in the next Reign under Conſtantius, when the Church was grown pretty Wealthy, all the Clergy that were poſſeſſed of Lands, were obliged to pay Tribute, in the ſame manner as all others did: As appears from a Law of Conſtantius directed to Taurus Præ-

[q] Athan. Apol. 2. p. 778. ὡς ἐμοῦ κανόνα τοῖς Αἰγυπτίοις ἐπιβάλλοντος, &c. [r] Cod. Th. lib. 14. Tit. 15.
[s] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Theod. lib. 13. tit. 10. de Cenſu leg. 2. p. 118. Ego juga putem dicta Terræ modum, cui colendo per annum Jugo bonum opus eſt. [t] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 20. de Conlat. Donat. leg. 6. [u] Sidon. Carm. 13. ad Majorian.
[w] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 1. de Annona & Tribut. leg. 15. Unuſquiſque annonarias Species, pro modo Capitationis & ſortium, præbiturus, per Quaternus Menſes anni curriculo diſtributo, Tribus vicibus ſummam conlationis implebit.
[x] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 24. de Patrocin. Vicor. leg. 5.
[y] Cod. Th. lib. 6. tit. 26. de Proximis Comitib. &c. leg. 14.
[z] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 1. de Annona & Tribut. leg. 33. Sacroſancta Theſſalonicenſis Eccleſia Civitatis excepta: Ita tamen ut aperte ſciat, propriæ tantummodo Capitationis modum beneficio mei Numinis ſublevandum: Nec externorum gravamine Tributorum Rempublicam Eccleſiaſtici nominis abuſione lædendam. [a] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 24. de Patrocin. Vicorum. leg. 5. Quicquid Eccleſiæ venerabiles, (id eſt, Conſtantinopolitana & Alexandrina) poſſediſſe dereguntur, id pro intuitu Religionis ab his præcipimus firmiter retineri: Sub ea videlicet ſorte, ut in futurum functiones omnes quæ Metrocomiæ debent, & publici vici pro antiquæ Capitationis profeſſione debent, ſciant ſubeundas.
[b] Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 1. de Annon. & Tribut. leg. 1. Præter privatas Res noſtras, & Eccleſias Catholicas, & domum clariſſimæ memoriæ Euſebii Ex-conſule, & Arſacis Regis Armenium, nemo ex noſtra juſſione præcipuis emolumentis Familiaris juvetur ſubſtantiæ.

fectus-fœtus-Prætorio, which is ſtill extant [c] in both the Codes. This is farther evident from the Teſtimony of Valentinian, who in an Epiſtle to the Biſhops of Aſia, recorded by Theodoret [d], ſays, all good Biſhops thought themſelves obliged to pay Tribute, and did not reſiſt the Imperial Power. And thus matters continued to the Time of Honorius and Theodoſius Junior, in one of whoſe Laws [e] the Church Lands are ſtill made liable to this Ordinary or Canonical Tribute, as it is there worded, though excuſed from all other. So little reaſon had Baronius to aſſert with that Confidence, That no Prince except Julian the Apoſtate, and Valens the Arian, and the younger Valentinian, who was under the Conduct of an Arian Woman, ever exacted any Tribute of the Clergy: When as it appears that every Emperor after Conſtantine did exact it, and Baronius could not be ignorant of this, having viewed and peruſed the Theodoſian Code, where theſe things are recorded.

SECT. IV. Of the Tribute called, Aurum Tironicum, Equi Canonici, &c.

IF in any thing of this Tribute they were exempt, it muſt be from the Obligation ſome Provinces lay under to furniſh the Emperors with new Soldiers, called Tirones, and freſh Horſes for the Wars; which becauſe they were exhibited by way of Tribute, they are called in the Law Equi Canonici, from the Civil-Law Term Canon, and Canonica, which, as I obſerved before, ſignifies the Tribute that was laid upon Men's Lands and Poſſeſſions. Sometimes this Tribute was exacted in Money inſtead of Horſes, and then it was called [f] Equorum Canonicorum Adæratio, Horſe-money: In like manner as the Sum that was paid inſtead of the Tirones, was called Aurum Tironicum, & Stratioticum, Soldiers-money, which we find mentioned in Syneſius, where ſpeaking [g] of Andronicus Governor of Ptolemais, he ſays, He ſet one Thoas to collect this Aurum Tironicum; which the Editor by Miſtake ſays was ſo called, quia ſolvebatur Tironibus, becauſe it was paid to the Tirones; whereas indeed it was the Money that was paid inſtead of the Tirones by way of Tribute into the Treaſury of the Empire. Now that ſome Biſhops, at leaſt in Africk, were excuſed from this Tribute, is concluded by ſome learned Men from a Law [h] of Theodoſius Junior, which excuſes certain Perſons from it under the Title of Sacerdotales in the Proconſular Africk, and that becauſe they were otherwiſe oblig'd to be at great Expences in that Province. But now the Queſtion is, who are meant by the Name, Sacerdotales. The learned Petit [i] ſays it denotes Chriſtian Biſhops: And if ſo, the Caſe would be clear as to their Exemption: But Gothofred rather inclines [k] to think it means the High Prieſts among the Heathens, who were ſtill in being, and obliged by their Office to be at great Expences in exhibiting the Ludi Sacerdotales to the People. I will not venture to decide ſo nice a Diſpute betwixt two ſuch learned Men, but think however I may ſafely infer even from Gothofred's Notion, That if the Chriſtian Emperors were ſo liberal to the Heathen High Prieſts, they would at leaſt be as liberal to their own Biſhops, and grant them the ſame Immunity. But I leave this Matter to farther Enquiry.

SECT. V. The Church obliged to ſuch Burthens as Lands were tied to before their Donation.

ONE thing is more certain, That whatever Burthens any Lands were originally encumbered with, they were liable to the ſame even after their Donation to the Church, unleſs diſcharged of them by ſome particular Grant and Favour of the Emperors. This we learn from a memorable Inſtance in a particular Caſe wherein St. Auſtin was concerned, the Account of which we have from his own Relation For the right underſtanding of which I muſt firſt acquaint the Reader, that by the Laws of the Roman Polity many times a Company of Tradeſmen were ſo incorporated into a Society for the Service of the Empire, that their Eſtates were tied to that Office and Duty, ſo that whoever had the Propriety of them, he was bound to the Duty annexed to them. Thus it was particularly with the Incorporated Company of the Navicularii of Africk and Egypt, who were concerned in tranſporting the yearly Tribute of Corn from thoſe Provinces to Rome and Conſtantinople. Their Eſtates were tied to the Performance of this Service, as appears from a Title in the Theodoſian Code [l], which is de Prædiis Naviculariorum: And they were ſo tied, that if any Ship chanced to be loſt in the Paſſage, the whole Body was obliged to make good the Effects to the Empeperor's Coffers; and the Maſter of the Ship was obliged [m] to give up his Men that eſcaped the Shipwreck, to be examined by Torture afterwards; otherwiſe he muſt have born the whole Burthen himſelf alone, on Preſumption

[c] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. leg. 15. De his ſane Clericis qui Prædia poſſident, ſublimis auctoritas tua non ſolum eos aliena juga nequaquam ſtatuet excuſare, ſed etiam his quæ ipſi poſſident eoſdem ad penſitanda Fiſcalia perurgeri: Univerſos namque Clericos Poſſeſſores duntaxat Provinciales Penſitationes recognoſcere jubemus. Vid. Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3.

[d] Theod. lib. 4. c. 8. τὰ δημόσια χρήματα νόμως ἁπαιτίζειν ἅπασι. καὶ οὐκ ἀνθιλέγουσι τῇ τῶν κρατούντων ἐξουσίᾳ. [e] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. leg. 40. Nihil præter Canonicam Inlationem —— ejus Functionibus adſcribatur.

[f] Cod. Th. lib. 11. t. 17. de Equor. Conlat. leg. 3. Equos Canonicos militari Diœceſeos Africanæ —— juſſimus adærari, &c. [g] Syneſ. Ep. 79. ad Anaſtaſ. p. 293. ταῖς ἀπαιτήσεσιν ἔταξε τὸ στρατιωτικὸν χρυσίον τὸ καλούμενον τιρωνικόν.

[h] Cod. Th. lib. 7. tit. 13. de Tironibus leg. 22. Præcipimus Proconſularis Provinciæ non eandem Sacerdotalium, quæ eſt de cæteris, in præbendis Tironibus habendum eſſe rationem: Non inique ſiquidem ea potiſſimum ab hoc officio Provincia videtur excepta, quæ omnium intra Africam Provinciarum obtinet Principatum, cujuſque majoribus fatigantur expenſis. [i] Petit. Variar. Lection. lib. 3. c. 1. p. 28. [k] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. 7. 13. 22. [l] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 6. [m] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 9. de Naufragiis leg. 2. Si quando Cauſatio eſt de impetu procellarum, medium ex eis nautis numerum Navicularius exhibeat Quæſtioni —— Quo eorum tormentis plenior veritas poſſit inquiri.

that he was guilty of ſome Fraud in the Matter againſt the reſt of his Society. Now it happened while St. Auſtin was Biſhop of Hippo, that one of theſe Navicularii, Boniface a Maſter of a Ship, left his whole Eſtate to the Church; which yet St. Auſtin refuſed to receive, becauſe of theſe Burthens that lay upon it. For, ſays he [n], I was not willing to have the Church of Chriſt concerned in the Buſineſs of Tranſportation. 'Tis true indeed there are many who get Eſtates by Shipping: Yet there is one Temptation in it, if a Ship ſhould chance to go and be loſt, then we ſhould be required to give up our Men to the Rack, to be examined by Torture according to Law about the drowning of the Ship; and the poor Wretches that had eſcaped the Waves muſt undergo a new Severity from the Hands of the Judge: But we could not thus deliver them up; for it would not become the Church ſo to do. Therefore ſhe muſt anſwer the whole Debt to the Exchequer. But whence ſhould ſhe do this? For our Circumſtances do not allow us to keep a Treaſury. A Biſhop ought not to lay up Gold in Bank, and mean while refuſe to relieve the Poor. Theſe Words of St. Auſtin do plainly evince what has been obſerved, that the Donation of an Eſtate to the Church did not ordinarily free it from the Tribute or Duty, that the Publick otherwiſe demanded of it; but if the Church would receive it, ſhe muſt take it with the uſual Burthens that lay upon it. I confeſs indeed the Senſe of the Paſſage, as it lies in St. Auſtin without a Comment, is not very eaſy to be underſtood; nor have any of his Editors, no not the laſt Benedictins, thought fit to expound it; but for that Reaſon, as well as to make good my own Obſervation, I have recited it in this Place, and explained it from thoſe Laws and Cuſtoms of the Empire, to which it manifeſtly refers. And ſuch a Digreſſion, if it were a Digreſſion, I preſume would not be unacceptable to the Curious Reader.

SECT. VI. Of the Chryſargyrum, or Luſtral Tax, and the Exemption of the Clergy from it.

BUT now to proceed. Another ſort of Tribute, in which the Clergy had ſome Concern, was the Tax upon Trade and Commerce. This in ancient Writers [o] is known by the Name of χρυσάργυρον, Chryſargyrum, The Silver and Gold Tax, becauſe it was paid in thoſe Coins. Zoſimus [p] indeed makes the Chryſargyrum another thing, viz. A Scandalous Tax exacted of lewd Men and Women; and in his ſpite to Chriſtianity he repreſents Conſtantine as the Author of it; in which his groundleſs Calumny he is abundantly refuted by Baronius [q], and more eſpecially by the Learned [r] Gothofred, and Pagi, whom the curious Reader may conſult. Here I take the Chryſargyrum in the common notion only for the Tax upon Lawful Trade and Commerce, which St. Baſil calls [s] πραγματευτικὸν χρυσίον, Commerce-Money. In the Civil Law it is known by the Name of Luſtralis Collatio, The Luſtral Tax, becauſe it was exacted at the return of every Luſtrum, or four Years end. It was indeed a very grievous Tax, eſpecially upon the Poor; for not the meaneſt Tradeſman was exempted from it. Evagrius [t] ſays it was exacted even of thoſe who made Begging their Trade, ἀξ ἐράνε τὴν τροφὴν περίζεσι. Whence Libanius [u] calls it the Intolerable Tax of Silver and Gold, that made Men dread the terrible Pentaeteris, or Return of every Fifth Year. And for the ſame Reaſon, as the Author under the Name of St. Auſtin [w] takes Notice, it was commonly called, Aurum Pannoſum, The Poorman's Tax, or as ſome Editions read it, Aurum Pœneſum, The Cruel Tax, becauſe it was exacted of the Poor. But now a particular Reſpect was paid to the Church in this Matter; for when her Revenues were ſcanty, and not ſufficient to give all the Clergy a Decent Maintenance, the Inferior Orders, the Clerici, were allowed to Traffick to ſupport themſelves, without paying any Tribute of this Nature. This Indulgence was firſt granted by Conſtantius without any Reſtriction, That if any of them [x] was minded to follow a Calling to maintain themſelves, they ſhould be freed from Cuſtom. But that none of them might abuſe this Privilege to Covetouſneſs, they were confined afterwards by ſeveral Laws to Trade within a certain Sum, which if they exceeded, they were to pay Cuſtom for it. This appears from a ſecond Law of the ſame [y] Conſtantius, and another of Gratian's [z], where the Italian and Illyrican Clerici are confined to the Sum of Ten Solids, and the Gallican to Fifteen. Yet if any would Trade farther, only with a Charitable Deſign, to raiſe Funds [n] Aug. Serm. 49. de Diverſis. Tom. 10. p. 520. Bonifacii hæreditatem ſuſcipere nolui; non miſericordia, ſed timore. Navicularium nolui eſſe Eccleſiam Chriſti. Multi ſunt quidem qui etiam de navibus acquirunt: Tamen una tentatio eſt, ſi iret navis & naufragaret, homines ad Tormenta daturi eramus, & de ſubmerſione navis ſecundum conſuetudinem quæreretur: & torquerentur à Judice qui eſſent à fluctibus liberati: Sed non eos daremus: Nullo enim pacto hoc facere deceret Eccleſiam Onus ergo Fiſcale perſolveret. Sed unde perſolveret? En thecam nobis habere non licet, &c. [o] Evagr. Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 3. c. 39. [p] Zoſim. lib. 2. [q] Baron. an. 330. n. 36. [r] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 1. de Luſtrali Collatione leg. 1. Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 330. n. 6. [s] Baſil. Ep. 243. [t] Evagr. lib. 3. c. 39. [u] Liban. Orat. 14. cont. Florent. T. 2. p. 427. φόρῳ ἀφόρητῳ, ἀργυρῳ καὶ χρυσὸς, φείσασθαι παρασκάσας ποιῶν τὰς δεινὰς πενταετείδας. [w] Aug. Quæſt. Vet. & Nov. Teſt. c. 75. Didrachma Capitum vel Tributi exactio intelligitur; quod nunc Pannoſum Aurum appellatur, quia & pauperes exiguntur. [x] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. leg. 8. Si qui de vobis Alimoniæ cauſa negotiationem exercere volunt, Immunitate potientur. It. Cod. lib. 13. tit. 1. de Luſtrali Collatione leg. 1. Negotiatores omnes protinus convenit aurum argentumque præbere: Clericos excipi tantum, (&) qui Copiatæ appellantur, nec alium quenquam eſſe immunem.

[y] Ibid. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 15. Clerici vero, vel hi quos Copiatas recens uſus inſtituit nuncupari, ira à Sordidis Muneribus debent immunes atque à Conlatione præſtari, Si exiguis admodum mercimoniis tenuem ſibi victum veſtitumque conquirent. [z] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 1. de Luſtrali Collat. leg. 11. Etſi omnes Mercatores ſpectat Luſtralis auri depenſio, Clerici tamen intra Illyricum & Italiam in denis Solidis; intra Galliam in Quinis denis Solidis immunem uſum Converſationis exerceant. Quicquid autem ſupra hunc modum negotiationis verſabitur, id oportet ad Functionem Aurariam devocari.

and

and Monte-Pio's for the Uſe of the Poor, they were allowed by two [a] other Laws of Conſtantius to employ what Sums they pleaſed, and pay none of this Tribute for them. It is to be noted farther, that this Immunity was granted by Honorius to the Catholick [b] Clergy only, and to no others. And the Privilege was eſteemed ſo great, that ſome Covetous Tradeſmen would uſe Means to get themſelves admitted to a Titular Office among the Inferior Clergy of the Church, with no other Deſign but to enjoy this Immunity, and to follow their Trade without paying the Luſtral Duty. Againſt whoſe Fraudulency and Corruptions the Emperor Arcadius made a ſevere [c] Law, commanding all ſuch, if they followed their Merchandize, to be deprived of this Immunity of the Clergy; or if they would devote themſelves to the ſacred Service, then they ſhould abſtain from all ſuch fraudulent and crafty ways of Gain: For, ſaith he, the Wages of Religion and Craft are very different from one another. And for this Reaſon probably when the Revenues of the Church were become Sufficient to maintain all the Clergy, Valentinian the third [d] enacted a Law, that none of the Clergy ſhould Negotiate as formerly; otherwiſe they ſhould come under the Cognizance of the ſecular Judges, and not enjoy the Privilege of the Clergy. Evagrius [e] adds, that the Emperor Anaſtatius quite aboliſhed the Chryſargyrum or Luſtral Tax itſelf; and that is the Reaſon why there is no mention at all made of it afterward in the Juſtinian Code.

SECT. VII. Of the Metatum. What meant thereby, and the Exemption of the Clergy from it.

ANOTHER ſort of Duty incumbent on the Subjects of the Empire, was the Burden and Charge of giving Entertainment to the Emperor's Court and Retinue, when they had occaſion to Travel; or to the Judges, or Soldiers as they paſſed from one Place to another. This the Civil Law [f] calls Metatum, and the Greeks Μιτάτον, from the word Metatores, which ſignifies the Emperor's Harbingers or Fore-runners, which were ſent before to provide Lodging and Entertainment for them. In alluſion to which, Cyprian [g] ſpeaking of Rogatian an eminent Preſbyter of Carthage, who was the firſt Martyr that was ſent to Priſon in the Decian Perſecution, ſays, he was Metator to the reſt, their Harbinger, that went before them to prepare a Place in Priſon for them. And in the ſame Senſe Lucian the Martyr in Cyprian, elegantly ſtiles Decius himſelf [h] Metatorem Antichriſti, the Harbinger of Antichriſt, who by that terrible Perſecution made Preparation for his Coming into the World. From this Notion of the Word Metator, that Duty of yielding Entertainment to the Emperour's Retinue, &c. has the Name of Metatum in the two Codes of the Civil Law. But the Clergy were excuſed from this by a Law [i] of Conſtantius, where he ſays they ſhould not be obliged to entertain Strangers; by which he cannot be ſuppoſed to excuſe them from the Chriſtian Duty of Hoſpitality to the Indigent, but from this Civil Duty of the Roman State, to which other Subjects were obliged. Whence Gothofred [k] very truly obſerves, that the Clergy in this reſpect hath equal Privileges with Senators Houſes, and Jewiſh Synagogues, and Chriſtian Churches; all which were exempt from this Duty of Entertaining. And if the Greek Collector of the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions out of the Code, publiſhed by Fabrottus, miſtake not, this Immunity extended to their Servants alſo. For he ſays [l], neither the Clergy nor their Servants were ſubject to any new Impoſitions or to this Burden called the Metatum.

SECT. VIII. Of the Superindicta and Extraordinaria. The Clergy exempt from them.

AND hence it appears farther, that they were freed from all Exactions that went by the Name of Superindicta, and Extraordinaria, that is, ſuch Impoſitions as the Emperors thought neceſſary to lay upon the Empire, or any part of it, beyond the Ordinary Canonical Taxes, upon great Exigencies and Extraordinary Occaſions. For as the Ordinary Taxes were called Indictions, ſo theſe Extraordinary were called [m] Superindictions. From theſe the Clergy were univerſally exempted by ſeveral Laws of Chriſtian Emperors. As by that of Conſtantius [n] in the Theodoſian Code, where he refers to a Preceding Law to the ſame purpoſe. According to the Decree, ſays he, which you are ſaid to have obtained heretofore, no one ſhall impoſe any New Taxes upon you or your Servants, but you ſhall enjoy a perfect Immunity in that reſpect. Gothofred upon the Place ſays,

[a] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. Leg. 10. Negotiatorum diſpendiis minime obligentur (Clerici), cum certum ſit, quæſtus quos ex Tabernaculis (leg. Tabernis) atque Ergaſteriis colligunt, Pauperibus profuturos. Ibid. Leg. 14. Si quid Mercatura congeſſerint, in uſum Pauperum atque egentium miniſtrari oportet, &c. [b] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. Leg. 36. Catholicæ Religionis Clerici - - - - ab Auraria Penſione habeantur immunes. [c] Ibid. Lib. 13. Tit. 1. de Luſtralis Collat. Leg. 16. Omnes Corporatos - - - præcipimus conveniri, ut aut commoda negotiatorum ſequentes, à Clericorum excuſatione diſcedant: aut Sacratiſſimo Numini Servientes, verſutis quæſtibus abſtineant; diſtincta enim Stipendia ſunt Religionis & Calliditatis. [d] Valentin. Novel. 12. ad Calcem Cod. Theod. Jubemus ut Clerici nihil prorſus negotiationis exerceant. Si velint negotiari, Sciant ſe Judicibus ſubitos, Clericorum Privilegio non muniti. [e] Evagr. Lib. 3. 39. [f] Cod. Th. Lib. 7. Tit. 8. de Onere Metati. Cod. Juſtin. Lib. 12. Tit. 41. de Metatis. [g] Cypr. Ep. 81. al. 6. Edit. Oxon. Primum Hoſpitium vobis in carcere præparavit, & Metator quodammodo veſter nunc quoque vos antecedit. [h] Lucian ap. Cypr. Ep. 20. al. 22. [i] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 8. Præterea neque hoſpites ſuſcipietis. [k] Gothofred. Paratitlon ad Cod. Th. Lib. 7. Tit. 8. de Onere Metati. Tom. 2. p. 264. Immunes erant à Metato Clerici, Senatorum Domus, Synagoguæ Judæorum, & Religionum Loca. [l] Collect. Conſtit. Eccleſ. ex Cod. Lib. 1. Tit. 3. Sect. 1. οἱ κληρικοὶ ἢ τὰ ἀνδράποδα αὐτῶν ἐν ὑποκειται καιναῖς ἐπιτραῖς ἢ μιτάτοις. [m] Vid. Cod. Theod. Lib. 11. Tit. 6. de Superindicto, & Cod. Juſtin. Lib. 10. Tit. 18. de eodem. [n] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. Leg. 8. Juxta Sanctionem quam dudum meruiſſe perhibemini, & vos & mancipia veſtra nullus. Novis Collationibus obligavit (id eſt, obligabit), ſed vacatione gaudebitis. Gothofred. in Loc. Ab extraordinariis Collationibus immunes facti fuerunt, at nondum ab Ordinariis, & Canonicis.

by this Law they were freed from all extraordinary Tribute, and only bound to the Ordinary and Canonical Taxes. And so it was in the Time of Honorius and Theodosius Junior, an. 412, when by a Law granting many other Privileges to the Church relating to her Possessions, they insert this among the rest, that no Extraordinary Tribute or Superindiction, but only the common [o] Canonical Tax should be required of her. Which was finally Confirmed by Justinian [p], and made the standing Law of the Roman Empire.

SECT. IX. The Clergy sometimes exempt from Contributing to the Reparation of Highways and Bridges.

As to some other Duties and Burdens, the Laws a little varied: For sometimes the Clergy were exempted, and sometimes not; as particularly in the Case of contributing to the Maintenance and Reparation of Publick Ways and Bridges. By the forementioned Law of Honorius, an. 412, all Church-Lands are excused [q] from those Duties, and it is called an Injury to bind them to any Contribution toward them. Yet not long after, an. 423, Theodosius Junior made a Law for the Eastern Empire, which excepts no Order of Men from bearing a share in this matter, but obliges as well his own Possessions, (called Domus Divinæ in the Stile and Language of those Times) as Churches [r] to take their Proportion in it. And about the same time Valentinian the third made a Law [s] to the same Effect in the West. Justinian confirmed the Law of Theodosius by inserting it [t] into his Code, and added another Law of his own among his Novels, where [u] though he grants the Clergy an Immunity from extraordinary Taxes, yet he adds, That if there was Occasion to make a Way, or build or repair a Bridge, then Churches as well as other Possessors should contribute to those Works, if they had Possessions in any City where such Works were to be done.

SECT. X. As also from the Duty call'd Angariæ, and Parangariæ, &c.

THE Laws varied likewise in another Instance of Duty required of the Subjects, which was to furnish out Horses and Carriages for Conveying of Corn for the Soldiers, and such other Things as belonged to the Emperor's Exchequer. This Duty in the Civil Law [w] goes by the Name of Cursus Publicus, and Angariæ, and Parangariæ, and Translatio, and Evectio, and the Horses used in this Service are particularly called Paraveredi, and Equi Cursuales. Now the Clergy at first were exempt from this Service by two Laws of Constantius [x] made in the former Part of his Reign, which expresly excuse both their Persons and their Estates from the Duty of the Parangariæ. But by another Law made in the last Year of his Reign, An. 360, he revoked this Privilege, obliging the Clergy to the Duty of Translation, as it is there worded [y], by which he means the Duty of furnishing Horses and Carriages for the Emperor's Service. And this he did, notwithstanding that the Council of Ariminum had Petitioned for an Immunity, being at a Time when Constantius was displeased with them. However this Law continued in force, not only under Julian, but under Valentinian and Theodosius, till by a contrary [z] Law about twenty Years after, An. 382, they restored the Clergy to their ancient Privilege. Which was farther confirmed to them by Honorius, An. 412, whose Law is still extant [a] in both the Codes. Yet Theodosius Junior and Valentinian the third, an. 440, took away their Privilege again, and by two Laws [b] made Church-Lands liable to these Burdens of the Angariæ, Parangariæ, &c. (whenever the Emperor should be upon any March or Expedition) as well as all others. From all which it appears, that there was no certain Rule observed in this Matter, but the Clergy had, or had not this Privilege, according as the State of Affairs would bear, or the Emperors were inclined to grant it.

SECT. XI. Of the Tribute called, Denarismus, Unciæ, and Descriptio Lucrativorum, And the Church's Exemption from it.

BESIDES these publick Taxes and Duties, there was also one private Tax, from which all Lands given to the Church, or to any Charitable Use, were exempt by the Laws of the Empire. This in the Civil Law is called Denarismus, or Unciæ, and Descriptio Lucrativorum.

[o] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. & Cler. Leg. 40. Nihil Extraordinarium ab hac Superindictiumve flagitetur. - - - Nihil præter Canonicam Inlationem ejus functionibus ascribatur.
[p] Justin. Novel. 131. c. 5. Sancimus omnium Sanctarum Ecclesiarum Possessiones, neque sordidas Functiones, neque extraordinarias Descriptiones sustinere. [q] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. & Cler. Leg. 40. Nullam Jugationem, quæ talium Privilegiorum sorte gratulatur, muniendi itineris constringat injuria. - - - Nulla Pontium instauratio: Nulla Translationum sollicitudo gignatur. [r] Cod. Th. Lib. 15. Tit. 3. De Itin. muniendo. Leg. 6. Ad Instructiones Reparationesque Itinerum Pontiumque nullum genus hominum - - - - cessare oportet. Domos etiam Divinas, ac venerandas Ecclesias tam laudabili Titulo libenter adscribimus.
[s] Valentin. Novel. 21. ad Calcem Cod. Th. [t] Cod. Just. Lib. 1. Tit. 2. Leg. 7. [u] Just. Novel. 131. c. 5. Si tamen Itineris sternendi aut Pontium ædificii vel reparationis opus fuerit, ad instar aliorum Possessorum, hujusmodi opus & Sanctas Ecclesias & venerabiles domos complere, dum sub illa possident Civitate, sub qua tale sit opus. [w] Cod. Th. Lib. 8. Tit. 5. de Cursu Publico, Angariis, & Parangariis. Cod. Justin. Lib. 12. Tit. 51. [x] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. & Cler. Leg. 10. Parangariarum quoque parili modo (à Clericis) cesset Exactio. Ibid. Leg. 14. Ad Parangariarum quoque Præstationem non vocentur, nec eorundem Facultates atque Substantiæ. [y] Cod. Th. Ibid. Leg. 15. Ut præterea ad universa munia sustinenda, Translationesque faciendas, omnes Clerici debeant adtineri. [z] Cod. Theod. Lib. 11. Tit. 16. de Extraord. & Sordidis Muner. Leg. 15. Circa Ecclesias, Rhetores, atque Grammaticos eruditionis utriusque, vetusto more durante. - - - Ne Paraveredorum hujusmodi viris aut Parangariarum præbitio mandetur, &c. [a] Cod. Th. Lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. & Cler. Leg. 40. Nulla Translationum Sollicitudo gignatur, &c. al. Signatur, as it is in the Justin. Code. Lib. 1. Tit. 2. de Sacrosanct. Eccl. Leg. 5. [b] Cod. Justin. Lib. 1. Tit. 2. Leg. 11. Neminem ab Angariis, vel Parangariis, vel Plaustris, vel quolibet munere excusari præcipimus, cum ad felicissimam Expeditionem nostri Numinis, omnium Provincialium per loca, quà iter arripimus, debeant solita nobis ministeria exhiberi; licet ad Sacrosanctas Ecclesias Possessiones pertineant. It. Lib. 12. Tit. 51. de Cursu Publico. Leg. 21. Nullus penitus cujuslibet Ordinis seu Dignitatis, vel Sacrosancta Ecclesia, vel domus Regia tempore Expeditionis excusationem Angariarum seu Parangariarum habeat.

The

The Reaſon of which Names will be underſtood by explaining the Nature of the Tribute. It was a ſort of Tax paid, not to the Emperors, but to the Curia or Curiales of every City, that is, to that Body of Men who were obliged by vertue of their Eſtates to be Members of the Court or Common-Council, and bear the Offices of their Country. Now it ſometimes happened, that one of theſe Curiales left his Eſtate to another that was not of the Curia; and an Eſtate ſo deſcending was ſaid to come to him ex Cauſa Lucrativa, which being oppoſed to Cauſa Oneroſa, is when a Man enjoys an Eſtate by Gift or Legacy, and not by Purchaſe. But now leſt in this caſe the Giving away an Eſtate from the Curia might have brought a greater Burden upon the remaining Part of the Curiales, the Perſon ſo enjoying it was obliged to pay an Annual Tribute to the Curia of the City, which from the nature of his Tenure was called Deſcriptio Lucrativorum, the Lucrative Tax. And becauſe every Head of Land, every Jugum or Caput, as the Law terms it, was obliged to pay annually a Denarius, or Ounce of Silver, therefore the Tax it ſelf was called Unciæ, and Denariſmus: As in the Laws [c] of Theodoſius M. cited in the Margin. Theodoſius Junior and Valentinian the third made this Tax double, laying [d] Four Siliquæ, which is Two Ounces of Silver, upon every Head of Land. According to which Rate, every Poſſeſſor who held any Eſtate by the aforeſaid Tenure, was obliged to pay Tribute out of it to the Curia of the City, to which it belonged. But if any ſuch Eſtate was given to the Church, it was exempt from this Tribute, if not before, yet at leaſt in the Time of Juſtinian. For there are two Laws of his to this purpoſe, [e] the one in his Code, the other in his Novels, in both which ſuch Lands as any of the Curiales gave to a Church, or a Monaſtery, or Hoſpital of any kind, are particularly excepted from this Lucrative Tax; and that, Pietatis intuitu, as it is there worded, in Regard to Religion, and becauſe it was fit to put ſome difference between Things Humane and Divine. But whether the Church enjoyed this Immunity under any other Prince before Juſtinian, is what I leave the Curious to make the Subject of a farther Enquiry; whilſt I proceed to conſider another ſort of Immunity of the Clergy, which was their Exemption from Civil Offices in the Roman Empire.

SECT. XII. The Clergy exempt from all Civil Perſonal Offices.

OF theſe Offices ſome were Perſonal, and other Predial, that is, ſuch as were tied to Mens Eſtates and Poſſeſſions: Some again were called Honores, Honourable Offices; and others, Munera ſordida, Mean and Sordid Offices. Now from all theſe, as well Patrimonial as Perſonal, Honourable as well as Sordid, by the firſt Laws of Conſtantine the Clergy were univerſally and entirely exempt. But After-ages made a little Diſtinction as to ſuch of the Clergy, who enjoyed Patrimonial Secular Eſtates of their own, diſtinct from thoſe of the Church: For ſuch of the Clergy were ſometimes forced to leave their Eccleſiaſtical Employment, and bear the Civil Offices of the Empire; of which more by and by. But as to Offices which were purely Perſonal, the Clergy were entirely exempt from them; as appears from a Law of Valentinian and Gratian [f] ſtill extant in both the Codes, where every Order of the Clergy, not only Presbyters and Deacons, but Subdeacons, Exorciſts, Readers, Door-keepers and Acolythiſts, are ſpecified as exempt from Perſonal Offices. And that is the meaning of that Law of Conſtantius, mentioned both by Athanaſius [g], and Socrates [h], and Sozomen [i], where they ſay, he granted the Clergy of Ægypt ἀλειτουργησίαν, and ἀτέλειαν λειτουργημάτων, Exemption from ſuch Offices, as had been forced upon them in the Arian Perſecution.

SECT. XIII. And from Sordid Offices both Predial and Perſonal.

AGAIN, for thoſe called Sordid Offices, not only the Perſons of the Clergy, but the Eſtates of the Church were diſcharged of all Burthens of that nature. Conſtantius made two Laws [k] to this purpoſe, which Valentinian and Theodoſius confirmed, granting the Clergy, and ſome other Orders of Men, the ſame Immunity in this reſpect, as they did to the chief Officers and Dignitaries of the Empire: And they intimate [l] alſo, that this was no new Privilege, but what by ancient Cuſtom they had always enjoyed. The ſame is ſaid by Honorius, that this was an ancient Privilege of the Church, conferred upon her by his Royal [c] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurionibus, leg. 107. Quincunque Hæres Curiali——vel ſi quem liberalitas locupletaverit forte viventis, quos à Curiæ nexu conditio ſolet dirimere, Sciant, Pecuniariis Deſcriptionibus —— ad Denariſmum ſive Uncias, ſeſe Auctoris ſui nomini retinendum. It. leg. 123. Ibid.

[d] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 4. de Imponenda Lucrativis Deſcriptione Leg. unic. Hi qui ex Lucrativa Cauſa Poſſeſſiones detinent, quæ aliquando Curialium fuerint, pro ſingulis earum Jugis & Capitibus Quaternas Siliquas annuæ (leg. annuas) Ordinibus nomine Deſcriptionis exſolvant. [e] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 2. de ſacroſanct. Eccleſ. leg. 22. Sancimus res ad venerabilis Eccleſias, vel Xenones, vel Monaſteria, vel Orphanotrophia, vel Gerontocomia, vel Ptochotrophia, &c. deſcendentes ex qualicunque Curiali Liberalitate —— à Lucrativorum Inſcriptionibus liberas immuneſque eſſe. —— Cur enim non faciamus diſcrimen inter res Divinas & Humanas? Id. Novel. 131. c. 5. Si quæ vero res ex Curialium ſubſtantiis ad quamlibet Sacroſanctam Eccleſiam, aut aliam venerabilem domum ſecundum Leges venerunt, aut poſtea venerint, liberas eas eſſe ſancimes Deſcriptione Lucrativorum.

[f] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. & Cler. leg. 24. Preſbyteros, Diaconos, Subdiaconos, Exorciſtas, Lectores, Oſtiarios etiam, & omnes perinde qui primi ſunt, Perſonalium Munerum expertes eſſe præcipimus. The Juſtinian Code. lib. 1. tit. 3. leg. 6. has the ſame, only inſtead of the Words, Omnes qui Primi ſunt, it reads Acolythos. [g] Athan. Apol. 2. t. 1. p. 772.

[h] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 23. [i] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 21.

[k] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 10, & 14. Repellatur ab his exactio munerum Sordidorum. [l] Ibid. lib. 11. tit. 16. de Extraord. & Sordid. Muner. leg. 15. Maximarum Culmina Dignitatum——ab omnibus ſordidis muneribus vindicentur —— Circa Eccleſias, Rhetores, atque Grammaticos eruditionis utriuſque vetuſto more durante, &c.

Anceſtors, and that it ought not to be diminiſhed: Therefore he made two Laws particularly in Behalf [m] of the Biſhop of Rome, That no Extraordinary Office or Sordid Function ſhould be impoſed upon him. Nor do we ever find the Clergy called to bear any ſuch Office in the Empire. For though Gothofred in his Notes upon the forementioned Law [n] of Theodoſius, where ſeveral of theſe Offices are ſpecified, reckons the Angariæ, and Building and Repairing of Ways and Bridges, among Sordid Offices; yet I have ſhewed before, that what was exacted of the Clergy in reference to thoſe two Things, was under the Notion of a Tribute, and not an Office: And the Laws which require the Clergy to contribute toward them ſay expreſly [o] that they are not to be looked upon as Sordid Offices, nor any Duty to be exacted under that Notion.

SECT. XIV. Alſo from Curial or Municipal Offices. As to the other ſort of Offices, called Honores, Honourable or Municipal Offices, which are otherwiſe termed Curial Offices, becauſe they who bare them were called Curiales & Decuriones, Men of the Court or Curia of every City: All the Clergy who had no Lands of their own, but lived upon the Revenues and Poſſeſſions of the Church, were entirely exempt from them; becauſe the Duties of the Church and State were not thought well conſiſtent in one and the ſame Perſon; and it was deemed unreaſonable to burden the Lands of the Chnrch with the Civil Duties of the Empire. When Conſtantine was firſt quietly ſettled in his Government, immediately after the great Decennial, commonly called the Diocletian Perſecution, he ſeems to have granted a full and unlimited Immunity in this reſpect to all the Clergy, as well thoſe who had Lands or Patrimony of their own, as thoſe who lived wholly upon the Revenues of the Church. For thus he expreſſes himſelf in a Law directed to Anulinus Proconſul of Aſrick, recorded by Euſebius, which bears Date An. 312, or 313. Our Pleaſure is, That all thoſe in your Province, who miniſter in the Catholick Church, over which Cæcilian preſides, who are commonly called the Clergy, be exempted [p] from all Publick Offices whatſoever, that they may not be let or hindered in the Performance of Divine Service by any Sacrilegious Diſtraction. Anulinus has alſo an Epiſtle ſtill extant in St. Auſtin [q] written to Conſtantine not long after, wherein he mentions this Grant as ſent to him, to be intimated to Cæcilian and the Catholick Clergy, viz. That by the kind Indulgence of his Majeſty that were exempt from all manner of Offices, that they might with due Reverence attend Divine Service. And this Epiſtle of Anulinus is alſo related, but not ſo correctly, in the Collation [r] of Carthage. In this Grant it is very obſervable, that this Privilege was only allowed to the Catholick Clergy: Which made the Donatiſts very uneaſy, becauſe they could not enjoy the ſame Favour: And upon this they became tumultuous and troubleſome to the Catholicks, procuring the Clergy in ſome Places to be nominated to publick Offices, and to be made Receivers of the publick Revenues, &c. But Complaint hereof being made to Conſtantine, it occaſioned the Publiſhing of a new Order in Africk, purſuant to the former, That whereas he was given to underſtand, that the Clergy of the Catholick Church [s] were moleſted by the Heretical Faction, and by their Procurement nominated to publick Offices, and made Suſceptors or Receivers of Tribute in Derogation of the Privileges which he had formerly granted them: He now ſignified his Pleaſure again, That if the Magiſtrates found any Perſons ſo aggrieved, they ſhould ſubſtitute another in his room, and take care for the future that no ſuch Injuries ſhould be offered to the Men of that Profeſſion. This Law was publiſhed An. 313, and it is the firſt of this kind that is extant in the Theodoſian Code. About ſix Years after, An. 319. he put forth another, upon a like Complaint made in Italy, that the Clergy were called away from their proper Function to ſerve in publick Offices: And in this he grants them the ſame [t] general Immunity as before. So again An. 330, a Complaint being made againſt the Donatiſts in Numidia, that when they could not have their Will upon the Superior Clergy by reaſon of the former Immunity that was granted them, they notwithſtanding forced the Inferior Clergy to bear Offices in Curia, upon Pretence that the Exemption did not extend to them; Conſtantine, to cut off all Diſpute, publiſhed another Law, wherein [u] he particularly exempts the Inferior Clergy, Readers, Subdeacons, and [m] Ibid. Leg. 21, & 22. Privilegia venerabilis Eccleſiæ, quæ Divi Principes contulerunt, imminui non oportet: Proinde etiam quæ circa Urbis Romæ Epiſcopum, obſervatio intemerata cuſtodiet: Ita ut nihil Extraordinarii muneris vel Sordidæ Functionis agnoſcat. [n] Gothofred. in Cod. Th. lib. 11. tit. 16. leg. 15. [o] Cod. Th. lib. 15. tit. 3. de Itin. muniendo. leg. 6. Honor. & Theodoſ. Jun. Abſit ut nos inſtructionem viæ publicæ, & Pontium, ſtratarumque operam. ——— inter ſordida munera numeremus, &c. Vid. Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 2. de SS. Eccleſ. leg. 7. Ejuſdem Honorii & Theodoſ. [p] Conſt. Ep. ad Anulin. ap. Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 7. ὥσπερ κληρικὰς ἐπονομάζειν εἰώθασιν, ὑπὸ πάντων ἁπαξαπλῶς τῶ λειτουργῶν βέλομαι ἀλεθρεγήτας διαφυλαχθῆναι. &c. [q] Anulin. Ep. ad Conſtant. ap. Aug. Ep. 68. Scripta cœleſtia Majeſtatis veſtræ accepta atque adorata, Cæciliano & his qui ſub eodem agunt, quique Clerici appellantur, devotio Parvitatis meæ inſinuare curavit, eoſdemque hortata eſt, ut Unitate conſenſu omnium facta, cum omni omnino Munere indulgentia Majeſtatis veſtræ liberati eſſe videantur Catholici, cuſtodita ſanctitate Legis, debita reverentia Divinis rebus inſerviant. [r] Collat. Carth. Die. 3. c. 216, & 220. [s] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 1. Hæreticorum Factione comperimus Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Clericos ita vexari, ut nominationibus ſeu ſuſceptionibus aliquibus, quas publicus mos expoſcit, contra indulta ſibi Privilegia, prægraventur. Ideoque placet, ſi quem tua Gravitas invenerit ita vexatum, eidem alium ſubrogari, & deinceps à ſupradictæ Religionis hominibus hujuſmodi injurias prohiberi. [t] Cod. Th. ibid. leg. 2. Qui divino cultui miniſteria Religionis impendunt, id eſt, hi qui Clerici appellantur, ab omnibus omnino Muneribus excuſentur: Ne ſacrilego livore quorundam a divinis obſequiis avocentur. [u] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 7. Lectores Divinorum Apicum, & Hypodiaconi, cæterique Clerici, qui per injuriam Hæreticorum ad Curiam devocati ſunt, abſolvantur: & de cætero ad ſimilitudinem Orientis minime ad Curias devocentur, ſed immunitate pleniſſima potiantur.

the

the reſt from bearing Offices in Curia; and orders, that they ſhould enjoy in Africk the ſame perfect Immunity as they did in the Oriental Churches.

SECT. XV. But this laſt Privilege confined to ſuch of the Clergy, as had no Eſtates but what belong'd to the Church, by the Laws of Conſtantine.

Now this Immunity was ſo great a Privilege, that it not only became the Envy of Hereticks, but alſo provoked ſome Catholick Laymen, (who were poſſeſs'd of Eſtates qualifying them to bear the Offices of their Country) to get a ſort of Titular Ordination to ſome of the Inferior Offices of the Church, on Purpoſe to enjoy this Immunity; when yet they neither deſigned to do the Duty of that Office, nor to ariſe to any higher Order in the Church. Which being interpreted a mere fraudulent Colluſion to deprive the State of fit Men to ſerve the Commonwealth, and no ways benefit the Church, it was preſently reſented by Conſtantine as an Abuſe; and various Laws were made both by him and his Succeſſors, as Occaſion required, to reſtrain and correct it. Conſtantine at firſt, as I obſerved before, granted this Immunity indifferently to all the Clergy, as well Poſſeſſors, as not Poſſeſſors of private Eſtates, whom he found actually engaged in the Service of the Church, when he came to the quiet Poſſeſſion of the Empire: Nor did he for ſome Years after perhaps reſtrain any ſorts of Men from taking Orders in the Church: But when he found this Indulgence to the Church, by the Artifice of cunning Men, only turned to the Detriment of the State; and that rich Men ſheltered themſelves under an Eccleſiaſtical Title only to avoid the Offices of their Country; he then made a Law, that no rich Plebeian, who was qualified by his Eſtate to ſerve in Curia, and bear Civil Offices in any City, ſhould become an Eccleſiaſtic; or if he did, he ſhould be liable from the Time that Law was made, to be fetch'd back and returned in Curiam, to bear the Offices of his Country as a Layman. What Year that Law was made, is not very certain, ſave only that it was before An. 320, when a ſecond Law was made upon the ſame Subject, referring to the firſt. And from this we learn what was the Import of both; That it was Conſtantine's Deſign to put a Diſtinction betwixt ſuch of the Clergy as were ordained before that firſt Law, and ſuch as were ordained afterward; the former he exempted from Civil Offices, though they were poſſeſſed of Eſtates, but not the latter: Which plainly appears from the Words of the ſecond Law, which are theſe [w]: Whereas by a former Law we ordained, that from thenceforward no Counſellour or Counſellour's Son, or any one who by his Eſtate was ſufficiently qualified to bear publick Offices, ſhould take upon him the Name or Function of the Clergy; but only ſuch whoſe Fortune is ſmall, and they not tied to any Civil Offices: We are now given to underſtand, that ſuch of the Clergy who were ordained before the Promulgation of that Law, are moleſted upon that Account: Wherefore our Command is, That thoſe be diſcharged of all further Trouble; and that ſuch only as entered themſelves among the Clergy ſince the Law was made, with Intention to decline Publick Offices, ſhall be returned to the Curia and States of their City, to ſerve in the Civil Offices of their Country. There is another Law of Conſtantine's publiſhed after this [x] An. 326, a Year after the Council of Nice, which ſpeaks to the ſame Effect, and ſhews that this was the ſtanding Rule of the latter Part of Conſtantine's Reign, to exempt none among the Clergy, who were qualified by Eſtates of their own, from bearing perſonally the publick Offices of the Empire.

SECT. XVI. Conſtantine's Laws a little altered by the ſucceeding Emperours in Favour of the Church.

But however this might be well deſigned at firſt by him to prevent ſome Abuſes, yet in proceſs of Time it became very prejudicial to the Church. For by this means ſometimes Presbyters and Deacons, after they had been Twenty or Thirty Years in the Church's Service, were called upon by Litigious Men to bear Civil Offices inconſiſtent with the Spiritual, and thereupon they were forced to forſake their Eccleſiaſtical Function. This was ſo great an Inconvenience, that it well became the Wiſdom of the following Emperours to find out ſome ſuitable Remedy for it: Which they did by new modifying Conſtantine's Law, and abating ſomething of the Rigour of it. For they did not lay the Burden of Civil Offices upon the Perſons of the Clergy, but only upon their Patrimonial Eſtates, not belonging to the Church, and in ſome Caſes they excuſed thoſe alſo. Conſtantius acquitted all Biſhops of this Burden both as to their Eſtates and Perſons; for by his [y] Laws they might keep their Eſtates to themſelves, and neither be obliged to bear Civil Offices in Perſon, nor ſubſtitute any other in their Room. And he allowed the ſame Privilege to Presbyters and Deacons and all others, provided they were ordained by the Conſent of the Civil Court or Curia, and the general Requeſt of the People.

[w] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 3. Cum conſtitutio emiſſa præcipiat, nullum deinceps Decurionem, vel ex Decurione progenitum, vel etiam inſtructum idoneis facultatibus, atque obeundis publicis Muneribus opportunum, ad clericorum nomen obſequiumque confugere; ſed eos—— qui fortuna tenues, neque Muneribus Civilibus teneantur obſtricti: Cognovimus illos etiam inquietari, qui ante Legis promulgationem Clericorum ſe conſortio ſociaverint: Ideoque præcipimus, his ab omni moleſtia liberatis, illos qui poſt legem latam obſequia publica declinantes, ad Clericorum numerum confugerunt, Curiæ Ordinbuſque reſtitui, & Civilibus obſequiis inſervire. [x] Ibid. leg. 6. Si inter Civitatem & Clericos ſuper alicujus nomine dubitetur, ſi eum æquitas ad publica trahat Munera, & progenie Municeps, vel Patrimonio idoneus dignoſcetur exemptus Clericis Civitati tradatur: Opulentos enim Sæculi ſubire neceſſitas oportet, Pauperes Eccleſiarum divitiis ſuſtentari. [y] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 49. Epiſcopum facultates ſuas Curiæ, ſicut ante fuerat conſtitutum, nullus adigat mancipare, ſed Antiſtes maneat, nec faciat Subſtantiæ ceſſionem, &c.

But if they were not ſo ordained, all that they were obliged to do was only to part with two Thirds of their Eſtate to their Children or next Relations, and ſubſtitute them in their room: Or in Defect of ſuch Relations, to give up two Parts of their Eſtate to the Curia, and retain the third to themſelves. Valentinian in the firſt Year of his Reign, An. 364, made the Law a little ſtricter, That ſuch Perſons [z] when they were ordained, ſhould give all their Eſtate to one of their Relations, and ſubſtitute him as a Curialis in their room, or elſe give it up to the Curia itſelf: Otherwiſe they ſhould be liable to be called back to ſerve in Civil Offices as Lay-men. But he extended this Obligation no farther than to the Beginning of his own Reign; for by another Law made ſeven Years after, An. 371, he exempted all ſuch as were in the Service of the Church [a] when he came to the Crown, though they had Eſtates of their own qualifying them to bear Civil Offices. Valens exempted all ſuch as had been ten Years [b] in the Church's Service; ſo that if they were not called upon by the Civil Courts within that Term, they were for ever after to be excuſed. Valentinian the ſecond exempted them [c], provided they put a Subſtitute in their Room. Theodoſius exempted all that were ordained [d] before the Year 388, which was the tenth Year of his Reign: And of thoſe that were ordained afterward he only required [e] the aforeſaid Conditions, that they ſhould either provide a proper Subſtitute, or give up their Eſtates to the Court at their Ordination. Which is alſo taken Notice of by St. Ambroſe in his Anſwer to Symmachus, where he ſhews [f] how unreaſonable it was for him to plead for the Exemption of the Heathen Prieſts in this reſpect, when the Laws did not grant it to the Chriſtian Clergy but upon ſuch Conditions. Arcadius indeed by the Inſtigation of Eutropius, An. 398, cancelled all theſe favourable Laws, and brought the Clergy again to the hard Rule of Conſtantine, That if any [g] of the Curiales were ordained in the Church, they ſhould by Force be returned to the Civil Courts again in Perſon, and not enjoy the Benefit of thoſe Laws, which allowed them to take Orders, provided they diſpoſed of their Eſtates to proper Subſtitutes, who might bear Offices in their Stead. But this Law was but very ſhort-lived; for Chryſoſtom and ſome others very juſtly declaiming againſt it, Arcadius diſannulled it the Year following by a new Law, wherein [h] he granted ſuch of the Clergy as were taken and ordained out of the Body of the Curiales, the ſame Privilege that they had under his Father Theodoſius, which was, That all that were ordained before the ſecond Conſulſhip of Theodoſius, An. 388, ſhould enjoy a perfect Immunity without any Moleſtation: And ſuch as were ordained after that Term, if they were of the Superior Clergy, Biſhops, Presbyters or Deacons, they might continue in the Church's Service, either providing a Subſtitute to bear the Offices of the Curia for them, or giving up their Eſtates to the Curia, as former Laws in that caſe had directed. Only it was required that the Inferior Clergy, Readers, Subdeacons, &c. ſhould be returned to the Curia again, and obliged to bear Offices in Perſon. And the ſame was determined by Theodoſius [i] Junior, and Valentinian the third [k], and Majorian [l] whoſe Laws are extant at the end of the Theodoſian Code. Juſtinian alſo has a Novel to the ſame purpoſe, wherein [m] he orders ſuch of the Inferior Clergy, as were taken out of any Curia, to be returned thither again, unleſs they had lived fifteen Years a Monaſtick Life; and then they were to give three parts of their Patrimony to the Curia, and retain one to themſelves: But he allowed Biſhops to put in a Subſtitute, and be free from bearing Civil Offices in Perſon, as Julianus Anteceſſor [n] in his Epitome of the Authenticks underſtands him: Though I confeſs there is ſomething to incline a Man to think Juſtinian at firſt was a little more ſevere to ſuch Biſhops, becauſe he revived that Antiquated Law of Arcadius [o] in his Code. But however this be, upon the whole matter it appears, that the Chriſtian Princes from firſt to laſt always made a wide difference between the Publick Patrimony of the Church, which was properly Eccleſiaſtical, and the Private Eſtates of ſuch of the Clergy as had Lands of a Civil or ſecular Tenure: For the one the Clergy were obliged to no Duty or Burden of civil Offices, but for the other they were, and could not be excuſed from them, but either by parting with ſome portion of their Eſtates, or providing proper Subſtitutes to Officiate for them. The Reaſon of which was, that ſuch of the Clergy were looked upon as irregularly promoted: It being as much againſt the Rules of the Church, as the Laws of the State, to admit any of the Curiales to an Eccleſiaſtical Function, without firſt giving Satisfaction to the Curia whence they were taken, as has been ſhewed in another place. I have been the more curious in ſearching to the bottom this Buſineſs about Tribute and Civil Offices, and given a particular and diſtinct Account of them from the grounds of the Civil Law, becauſe but few Men have recourſe to thoſe Fountains, whence this matter is to be cleared; and the Reader will ſcarce find this Subject handled, but either very Imperfectly, or with ſome Partiality, or ſome Confuſion, in Modern Authors.

[z] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 59. Qui partes eligit Eccleſiæ, aut in Propinquum bona propria conferendo eum pro ſe faciet Curialem, aut facultatibus Curiæ cedat, quam reliquit; ex neceſſitate revocando eo qui neutrum fecit, cum Clericus eſſe cœpiſſet, &c. [a] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 21. Qui Eccleſiæ juge obſequium deputarunt, Curiis habeantur immunes, ſi tamen ante otrum Imperii noſtri ad cultum ſe Legis noſtræ contuliſſe conſtiterit. [b] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. leg. 19. Si in conſortio Clericatus Decennium quietis impleverit, cum Patrimonio ſuo habeatur immunis: Si vero intra finitos annos fuerit à Curia revocatus, cum Subſtantia ſua Functionibus ſubjaceat Civitatis. [c] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 99. [d] Ibid. leg. 121, & 123. [e] Ibid. lib. 104, & 115. [f] Ambroſ. cont. Symmach. [g] Cod. Th. lib. 9. tit. 45. de his qui ad Eccleſ. confug. leg. 3. Decuriones manu mox injecta revocentur: Quibus ulterius Legem prodeſſe non patimur, quæ ceſſione Patrimonii ſubſecuta, Decuriones eſſe Clericos non vetabat. [h] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 163. Si qui ex ſecundo Divi Patris noſtri Conſulatu Curiam reliquentes, Clericorum ſe conſortio manciparunt, ſi jam Epiſcopi, vel Presbyteri, vel Diaconi eſſe meruerunt, in Sacris quidem & Secretoribus Dei Myſteriis perſeverent, ſed aut Subſtitutum pro ſe Curiæ offerre cogantur, aut juxta Legem dudum latum tradant Curiæ facultates. Reſidui omnes, Lectores, Subdiaconi vel hi Clerici quibus Clericorum Privilegia non debentur, debitis mox Patriæ Muneribus præſententur. [i] Theod. Novel. 26, & 38. [k] Valentin. Novel. 12. [l] Majorian. Novel. 1. [m] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 15. Ex. Epitom. Julian. Anteceſs. [n] Vid. Julian. Epit. Novel. 123. c. 4. poſt leg. 38. Cod. de Epiſc. Epiſcopalis Ordo liberat à fortuna ſervili, ſed non à Curiali ſive Officiali; nam & poſt ordinationem durat; ita ut per ſubjectam vel interpoſitam Perſonam Officium ad impleatur, &c. [o] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 12.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Revenues of the ancient Clergy.

SECT. I. Several ways of providing a Fund for the Maintenance of the Clergy. 1ſt, by Oblations. Some of which were Weekly.

THE next thing that comes in order to be conſidered is the Maintenance of the ancient Clergy. Where it will be proper firſt to enquire into the Ways and Methods that were taken for raiſing of Funds for their Subſiſtence. And here to ſet aſide a little the Conſideration of Tithes, which will be ſpoken of in the next Chapter, we find other ways, by which in ancient Times a decent Proviſion was made for them. As 1ſt, by the voluntary Oblations of the People, of which ſome Learned Perſons think there were two Sorts; 1ſt, The Weekly or Daily Oblations that were made at the Altar: 2dly, The Monthly Oblations that were caſt into the Treaſury of the Church. The firſt ſort of Oblations were ſuch as every rich and able Communicant made at his coming to partake of the Euchariſt; where they offered not only Bread and Wine, out of which the Euchariſt was taken, but alſo other Neceſſaries, and ſometimes Sums of Money for the Maintenance of the Church and Relief of the Poor. As is evident from thoſe words of St. Jerom in his Comments upon Ezekiel [a], where he tells us, that Thieves and Oppreſſors made their Oblations among others, out of their ill-gotten Goods, that they might glory in their Wickedneſs, while the Deacon in the Church publickly recited the Names of thoſe that offered: Such an one offers ſo much, ſuch an one hath promiſed ſo much: And ſo they pleaſe themſelves with the Applauſe of the People, while their own Conſcience laſhes and torments them. Thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [b] ſpeak alſo of the Oblation of Fruits and Fowls and Beaſts, but order ſuch to be ſent home to the Biſhop and Presbyters, who were to divide them with the Deacons and the reſt of the Clergy.

SECT. II. And others Monthly.

ANOTHER ſort of Oblations were made Monthly, when it was uſual for Perſons that were able and willing, to give as they thought fit ſomething to the Ark or Treaſury of the Church. Which ſort of Collation is particularly taken notice of by Tertullian [c] who ſays, it was made Menſtrua die, once a Month, or when every one pleaſed, and as they pleaſed; for no Man was compelled to it: It was not any ſtated Sum, but a voluntary Oblation. Baronius [d] thinks this Ark or Treaſury was called the Corban of the Church, becauſe Cyprian [e] uſes that word when he ſpeaks of the Offerings of the People; rebuking a rich and wealthy Matron for coming to celebrate the Euchariſt without any Regard to the Corban, and partaking of the Lord's-Supper without any Sacrifice of her own. Others [f] conceive, that Corban is not a Name for the Treaſury, but ſignifies the Gift or Oblation it ſelf; and that Cyprian ſo uſes it, making it the ſame with the Sacrifices or Offerings of the People. But the Evangeliſt, Mat. 27. 6. ſeems rather to favour the Opinion of Baronius: For when he ſays, the Chief Prieſts did not think it lawful to put Judas's Money εἰς τὸν κορβανᾶν, it is evident, he there by Corban, means the Treaſury, as moſt Tranſlators render it.

SECT. III. Whence came the Cuſtom of a Monthly Diviſion among the Clergy.

BUT however this be, it is very probable, that hence came the Cuſtom of Dividing theſe Oblations once a Month among the Clergy. For as Tertullian ſpeaks of a Monthly Collation, ſo Cyprian frequently mentions [g] a Monthly Diviſion, in which the Presbyters had their Shares by equal Portions, and other Orders after the ſame manner. Whence the Clergy are alſo ſtiled in his Language [h] Sportulantes Fratres, Partakers of [a] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. 18. p. 537. Multos conſpicimus, qui opprimunt per Potentiam, vel furta committunt, ut de multis parva pauperibus tribuant, & in ſuis ſceleribus glorientur, publiceque Diaconus in Eccleſia recitet Offerentium Nomina: Tantum offert ille, tantum ille pollicitus eſt: placentque ſibi ad Plauſum populi, torquente Conſcientia. [b] Canon. Apoſt. c. 3, 4, 5.

[c] Tertul. Apol. c. 39. Si quod Arcæ genus eſt, non de Ordinaria Summa, quaſi redemptæ Religionis congregatur: Modicam unuſquiſque ſtipem Menſtrua die, vel quum velit, & ſi modo velit, & ſi modo poſſit, apponit: Nam nemo compellitur, ſed ſponte confert. [d] Baron. an. 44. n. 69. [e] Cypr. de Oper. & Eleemoſ. p. 203. Locuples & Dives es, & Dominicum celebrare te credis, quæ Corbonam omnino non reſpicis; quæ in Dominicum ſine ſacrificio venis; quæ partem de ſacrificio, quod pauper obtulit, ſumis? [f] Baſnag. Exercit. in Baron. p. 597.

[g] Cypr. Ep. 34. al. 39. Ut & ſportulis iiſdem cum Presbyteris honoreatur, & Diviſiones Menſurnas æquatis quantitatibus partiantur. [h] Id. Ep. 66. al. 1. Sportulantes Fratres, tanquam Decimas ex fructibus accipientes.

the

the Distribution; and what we now call, Suspensio a Beneficio, is in his Stile [i] Suspensio a Divisione Mensurna, Suspension from the Monthly Division. Which plainly implies, that this sort of Church-Revenues was usually divided once a Month among the Clergy. And perhaps in Conformity to this Custom it was, that the Theodotian Hereticks having perswaded one Natalius a Confessor to be ordained a Bishop among them, promised him a Monthly Salary of one hundred and fifty Denarii, μηνιαῖα δηνάρια ἑκατὸν πεντήκοντα, as Eusebius [k] words it, referring to the usual way of Distribution once a Month among the Clergy.

SECT. IV. 2dly, Other Revenues arising from the Lands and Possessions of the Church.

ANOTHER sort of Revenues which the Clergy enjoyed, were such as arose annually from the Lands and Possessions which were given to the Church. These indeed at first were but small, by reason of the continual Vexations and Persecutions which the Church underwent for the three first Ages, when immoveable Goods were always most exposed to Danger. It was the Custom of the Church of Rome therefore never to keep any Immoveable Possessions, no not for many Ages, if we may credit [l] Theodorus Lector, who speaks of it as Customary in his own Time, An. 520. But if any such were given to the Church, they immediately sold them, and divided the Price into three Parts, giving one to the Church, another to the Bishop, and the third to the rest of the Clergy. And Valesius finds no Exception to this till near the Time of Gregory the Great. But if this was the Custom of the Church of Rome, it was a very singular one. For other Churches had their Immoveables, both Houses and Lands, even in the times of Persecution: As appears from the Edicts of Maximinus, wherein he revoked his former Decrees that had raised the Persecution, and in these latter Edicts granted the Christians Liberty not only to rebuild their Churches, but also ordered, that if any Houses or Lands belonging to them had been confiscated, or sold, or given away [m], they should be restored to them again. That this was meant of Houses and Lands belonging to the Church, as well as private Christians, is evident from the Decree of Constantine and Licinius publish'd the same Year, An. 313, wherein they give Orders, that whereas the Christians were known to have not only Places of Assembly, but also other Places belonging not to any private Man, but to the whole Body, all such Places [n] should be restored to the Body and to every particular Assembly among them. Which is repeated again in Constantine's Letter to Anulinus [o], and other publick Acts of his recorded by Eusebius [p] in his Life, where he makes mention of Houses, Gardens, Lands, and other Possessions belonging to the Church, of which she had been plundered and despoiled in the late Persecutions. These are undeniable Evidences, that some Part of the Ecclesiastical Revenues were anciently raised from Houses and Lands settled upon the Church, even before any Christian Emperors could give Encouragement to them.

SECT. V. These very much augmented by the Laws of Constantine.

BUT when Constantine was quietly settled upon the Throne, the Church-Revenues received great Augmentations in this kind. For he enacted a Law at Rome, which is still extant in both the Codes [q], That any one whatsoever should have Liberty at his Death to bequeath by Will what Part of his Goods he pleased to the Holy Catholick Church. By which means the Liberality of pious Persons was very much encouraged, and great Additions were made to the standing Revenues of the Church. Therefore Baronius is very injurious [r] to the Memory of Constantine, and justly corrected by Gothofred [s] and Mr. Pagi [t] for it, in that he insinuates as if Constantine had relapsed toward Heathenism at this very time, An. 321, when he published this Law so much in favour of the Church.

SECT. VI. Whose Lands were confirmed, and not revoked by the succeeding Emperors, as some mistake.

OTHERS are no less injurious to some of his Successors, when they represent them as injurious to the Church, in forbidding Widows and Orphans to leave any Legacies to the Church. Baronius cannot help complaining also upon this Point, though he contradicts himself about it. For in one Place [u] he says, the foresaid Law of Constantine did so augment the Church's Wealth, that the following Emperors began to dread the Consequences of it, that it would turn to the Detriment and Poverty of the Commonwealth, and therefore they made Laws to restrain the Faithful from being so profuse in their Donations to the Church. Yet when he comes to speak particularly of those Laws, he owns, they were not designed [w] against the Church, but only to correct the scandalous Practices of some sordid Monks and Ecclesiasticks, who being of an Avaricious and Parasitical Temper, made a Gain of Godliness, and under Pretence of Religion so screwed themselves into the Favour and [i] Id. Ep. 28. al. 34. Interim se à Divisione Mensurna tantum contineant, &c. [k] Euseb. lib. 5. c. 28. [l] Theodor. Lect. Collectan. lib. 2. p. 567. ἔθος τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῆς Ῥώμης ἀκίνητα μὴ κρατεῖν δίκαια, &c. [m] Euseb. lib. 9. c. 10. [n] Ap. Euseb. lib. 10. c. 5. [o] Constant. Ep. ad Anulin. ap. Euseb. ibid. [p] Euseb. Vit. Const. lib. 2. c. 37, & 39. [q] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. leg. 4. It. Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 2. de sacrosanct. Eccles. leg. 1. Habeat unusquisque Licentiam sanctissimo Catholico venerabilique Concilio, decedens Bonorum quod optaverit relinquere. [r] Baron. an. 321. n. 18. [s] Gothofred Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 26. tit. 10. de Paganis leg. 1. [t] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 321. n. 4, & 5. [u] Baron. an. 321. n. 17. [w] Baron. an. 370. Tom. 4. p. 270. Qua quidem sanctione nequaquam prohibentur Ecclesiæ hæreditates accipere vel Legata, sed Ecclesiasticæ Personæ sive Clerici, sive Monachi——Ut plane intelligas hosce Nebulones, tanquam Harpyias quasdam inhiantes Matronarum divitiis, &c.

Affections

Affections of ſome rich Widows and Orphans, that they prevailed upon them to leave them great Legacies, and ſometimes their whole Eſtates, to the Prejudice of the right Heirs and next Relations. Which was ſo diſhoneſt and unbecoming a Practice in ſuch Perſons, that Valentinian made a Law to prevent it; decreeing, that [x] no Eccleſiaſticks, or any that profeſſed the Monaſtick Life ſhould frequent the Houſes of Widows or Orphans; nor be qualified to receive any Gift or Legacy from the Donation or laſt Will of any ſuch Perſons. Which Law, as Gothofred [y] rightly obſerves, did not prohibit them from leaving any thing to the Church; though ſome Learned Men ſo miſunderſtand it; but only tended to correct this unworthy Practice of ſome particular Perſons, which is equally complained of by the ancient Writers of the Church. St. Ambroſe and St. Jerom, and others mention this Law, but they do not at all inveigh againſt it, but againſt thoſe Vices that occaſioned it. I do not complain of the Law, ſays St. Jerom [z], but am grieved that we ſhould deſerve ſuch a Law; that when Idol-Prieſts, and Stage-Players, and Carters, and Harlots may inherit, only Clerks and Monks are prohibited; and that not by perſecuting Emperors, but Chriſtian Princes. He adds, That it was a very prudent Caution in the Law, but yet it did not reſtrain the Avarice of ſuch Perſons, who found out an Artifice to elude the Law, per Fidei-commiſſa, by getting others to receive in Truſt for them. Which ſhews us the Senſe St. Jerom had of this Matter, that he did not think the Emperors were injurious to the Church in making ſuch a Law, but thoſe Perſons were only to be blamed, whoſe Avarice and Sordid Flatteries compelled them to make it. And any one that will conſult St. Ambroſe [a], or the Author under his Name [b], will find that they give the ſame Account of it. Theodoſius indeed ſome Years after made a Law, relating particularly to ſuch Deconneſſes of the Church as were of Noble Families, That they ſhould not [c] diſpoſe of their Jewels, or Plate, or Furniture, or any other ſuch Things as were the ancient Marks of Honour in their Families, under Pretence of Religion, while they lived; nor make any Church, or Clerk, or Poor their Heirs when they died. But as this Law was made upon ſome particular Reaſons of State; ſo it did no Harm to the Church: For within two Months the ſame Emperor recalled [d] it by a contrary Law, which granted Liberty to ſuch Deaconneſſes to diſpoſe of their Goods in their Lifetime to any Church or Clerk whatſoever. And Marcian made the Law a little more extenſive, allowing [e] Deaconneſſes and all other Religious Women, to diſpoſe of any Part of their Eſtate, by Will, or Codicill, to any Church or Oratory, or Clerk, or Monk, or Poor whatſoever. Which Law Juſtinian alſo confirmed, and inſerted it [f] into his Code. So that Conſtantine's Law continued always in its full Force, and the ſucceeding Princes did not derogate from the Privilege which he had granted the Church in this reſpect, for Fear (as Baronius pretends) leſt the Liberality of the Subjects to the Church ſhould impoveriſh the Commonwealth. Men were very Liberal indeed in their Gifts and Donations to the Church in this Age, but yet not ſo profuſe as to need Statutes of Mortmain to reſtrain them.

SECT. VII. 3dly. Another Part of Church-Revenues raiſed by Allowances out of the Emperor's Exchequer.

FOR beſides the Liberality of the Subjects, the Emperors in thoſe Ages found it neceſſary to make the Clergy an Allowance out of the Publick Revenues of the Empire; which was another way of providing a Maintenance for them. Conſtantine both gave the Clergy particular Largeſſes, as their Occaſions required, and alſo ſettled upon them a ſtanding Allowance out of the Exchequer. In one of his Epiſtles to Cæcilian Biſhop of Carthage, recorded by Euſebius [g], he acquaints Cæcilian with his Orders which he had given to Urſus, his General Receiver in Africk, to pay him Three Thouſand Polles, τρισχιλίας φόλλεις, to be divided at his Diſcretion among the Clergy of the Provinces of Africa, Numidia, and the two Mauritania's. And if this Sum would not anſwer all their preſent Neceſſities, he gave him farther Orders to demand of his Procurator Heraclides, whatever he deſired more. I need not ſtand here to enquire critically what this Sum of Three Thouſand Polles was (though it may be computed above Twenty Thouſand Pounds) ſince Conſtantine gave the Biſhop unlimited Orders, to demand as much as the Needs of the Clergy ſhould require. But he not only ſupplied their preſent Neceſſities, but alſo gave Orders for a ſtanding Allowance to be made them out of the Publick Treaſury. For Theodoret [h], and [x] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 20. Eccleſiaſtici, vel qui Continentium ſe volunt nomine nuncupari, Viduarum aut Pupillarum domos non adeant—— Cenſemus etiam, ut memorati nihil de ejus mulieris Liberalitate quacunque vel extremo Judicio poſſint adipiſci. [y] Gothofred in Loc. [z] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Sacerdotes, dicere pudet, Idolorum, Mimi, & Aurigæ, & Scorta hæreditates capiunt; ſolis Clericis & Monachis prohibetur: Et prohibetur non à Perſecutoribus, ſed à Principibus Chriſtianis. Nec de Lege conqueror, ſed doleo cur meruimus hanc Legem, &c. [a] Ambroſ. Ep. 31. ad Valentin. p. 145. [b] Idem. Homil. 7. [c] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 27. Nihil de Monilibus & ſupellectili, nihil de Auro, Argento, cæteriſque Claræ Domus Inſignibus, ſub Religionis defenſione conſumat.——Ac ſi quando diem obierit, nullam Eccleſiam, nullum Clericum, nullum Pauperem ſcribat hæredes, &c. [d] Ibid. leg. 28. Legem, quæ Diaconiſſis vel Viduis nuper eſt promulgata, ne quis videlicet Clericus, neve ſub Eccleſiæ nomine, Mancipia, prædam, velut infirmi ſexus deſpoliator, & remotis Adfinibus & Propinquis, ipſe ſub prætextu Catholicæ Diſciplinæ ſe ageret viventis hæredem, ęatenus animadvertat eſſe revocatam. [e] Marcian. Novel. 5. ad calcem Cod. Th. Generali Lege ſancimus, ſive Vidua, ſive Diaconiſſa, ſive Virgo Deo dicata, vel Sanctimonialis mulier, ſive quocunque alio nomine religioſi honoris vel dignitatis fœmina nuncupetur, Teſtamento vel Codicillo ſuo——Eccleſiæ, vel Martyrio, vel Clerico, vel Monacho, vel Pauperibus aliquid vel ex integro vel ex parte, in quacunque Re vel Specie credidit relinquendum, id modis omnibus ratum firmumque conſtet. [f] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 2. de ſacroſanct. Eccl. leg. 13. [g] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 6. [h] Theod. lib. 1. c. 11.

Sozomen

Sozomen [i] ſay, he made a Law, requiring the Chief Magiſtrates in every Province to give the Clergy, and Virgins, and Widows of the Church, an Annual Allowance of Corn, ἐτήσια σιτηρέσια, out of the yearly Tribute of every City. And thus it continued to the Time of Julian, who withdrew the whole Allowance. But Jovian reſtored it again in ſome meaſure, granting them a Third Part of the former Allowance only, becauſe at that Time the Pubick Income was very low, by reaſon of a ſevere Famine; but he promiſed them the whole, ſo ſoon as the Famine was ended, and the Publick Store-houſes were better repleniſhed. But either Jovian's Death prevented his Deſign, or the Neceſſities of the Clergy did not afterward require it. For tho' Sozomen ſeems to ſay, the whole was reſtored; yet Theodoret, who is more Accurate, affirms, that it was only, τριτήμοριον, a Third Part, and that ſo it continued to his own Times. In this Senſe therefore we are to underſtand that Law of the Emperor Marcian, which Juſtinian [k] has inſerted into his Code, decreeing, that the Salaries which had been always given to the Churches in diverſe Sorts of Grain out of the Publick Treaſures, ſhould be allowed them, without any Diminution. This did not entitle them to the whole Allowance firſt made them by Conſtantine (as ſome may be apt to imagine from the general Words of the Law) but only to the Third Part, which had been the Cuſtomary Allowance from the Time of Jovian.

SECT. VIII. 4thly, The Eſtates of Martyrs and Confeſſors dying without Heirs ſettled upon the Church by Conſtantine.

ANOTHER Way by which ſome ſmall Addition was made to the Revenues of the Church, was from a Law of Conſtantine mentioned by Euſebius [l] in his Life, where he tells us, That as he ordered all the Eſtates of Martyrs and Confeſſors, and whoever had ſuffered in Time of Perſecution, to be reſtored to their next Relations; ſo if any of them died without Relations, the Church ſhould become their Heir, and in every Place where they lived, ſucceeded to their Inheritance.

SECT. IX. 5thly, The Eſtates of Clergy-Men dying without Heirs and Will, ſettled in like manner.

Theodoſius Junior and Valentinian the 3d made ſuch another Law in reference to the Temporal Poſſeſſions of the Clergy: That if any Presbyter [m], or Deacon, or Deaconneſs, or Subdeacon, or other Clerk, or any Man or Woman profeſſing a Monaſtick Life, died without Will and without Heirs, the Eſtates and Goods they were poſſeſs'd of ſhould fall to the Church or Monaſtery to which they belonged, unleſs they were antecedently tied to ſome Civil Service. This implies that the Clergy were at Liberty to diſpoſe of their own Temporal Eſtates as they pleaſed; and they fell to the Church only in caſe they died Inteſtate. But the Council of Agde in France under Alarick the Goth, An. 506, went a little farther, and decreed, That [n] every Biſhop, who had no Children or Nephews, ſhould make the Church his Heir, and no other: As Caranza's Edition and Gratian and ſome others read it. And the Council of Sevil [o] made a like Decree for the Spaniſh Churches; upon which Caranza [p] makes this Remark, That the Canon was fit to be renewed in Council, that the Church ſhould be the Biſhop's Heir, and not the Pope. And that it was againſt the Mind of thoſe Fathers, that Biſhops ſhould ſet up Primogenitures, or enrich their Kindred out of the Revenues of the Church. Which Reflection among other things might perhaps contribute toward his being brought into the Spaniſh Inquiſition, though he was Archbiſhop of Toledo; after which he underwent a Ten Years Impriſonment at Rome, and had ſome of his Books prohibited in the Roman Index, of which Spondanus [q] in his Annals will give the Reader a farther Account. But I return to the Primitive Church, SECT. X. 6thly, Heathen Temples and their Revenues ſometimes given to the Church.

WHERE we may obſerve another Addition made to the Revenues of the Clergy, by the Donation of Heathen Temples and ſometimes the Revenues that were ſettled upon them. For though the greateſt Part of theſe went commonly to the Emperor's Coffers, or to Favourites that begged them, upon the Demoliſhing of the Temples; as appears from the Laws of Honorius [r] and Gratian, and ſeveral others in the Theodoſian Code; yet ſome of them were given to the Church: For Honorius [s] takes notice of ſeveral Orders and Decrees of his own, whereby ſuch Settlements had been made upon the Church, which were to continue the Church's Property and Patrimony for ever. And 'tis probable ſome other Emperors might convert the Revenues of the Temples to the ſame Uſe. At leaſt the Fabricks themſelves, and the Silver and Golden Statues that were in them, were ſometimes ſo diſpoſed of. For Sozomen [t] ſays, the Μιθρεον, or Temple of the Sun at Alexandria, was given to the Church by Conſtantius. And we learn from Socrates [u], that in the Time of Theodoſius the Statues of Serapis, and many other Idols at Alexandria were melted down for the Uſe of the [i] Sozomen. lib. 5. c. 5. [k] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 2. de SS. Eccleſ. leg. 12. Salaria quæ Sacroſanctis Eccleſiis in diverſis ſpeciebus de Publico hactenus miniſtrata ſunt, jubemus nunc quoque inconcuſſa, & à nullo prorſus imminuta præſtari. [l] Euſeb. Vit. Conſt. lib. 2. c. 36. [m] Cod. Th. lib. 5. tit. 3. de Bonis Clericor. leg. 1. Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 20. [n] Conc. Agathen. c. 24. al. 33. ap. Gratian. Cauſ. 12. Q. 2. c. 34. Epiſcopus qui Filios aut Nepotes non habuerit, alium quam Eccleſiam non relinquat Hæredem. [o] Conc. Hiſpalenſ. 1. c. 6 [p] Caranz. in Loc. Hic Canon erat renovandus in Concilio, ut hæres defuncti Epiſcopi eſſet Eccleſia, non tamen Papa. Secundo alienum eſt à Sententia horum Patrum licere Epiſcopo inſtituere Primogenituras, vel locupletare Conſanguineos. [q] Spondan. Annal. Eccl. an. 1559. n. 29. [r] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 10. de Paganis, leg. 19, & 20. [s] Ibid. leg. 20. Ea autem quæ multiplicibus Conſtitutis ad venerabilem Eccleſiam voluimus pertinere, Chriſtiana ſibi merito Religio vindicavit, id eſt, vindicabit. [t] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 7. [u] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 16.

Church;

Church; the Emperor giving Orders that the Gods ſhould help to maintain the Poor.

SECT. XI. 7thly, As alſo Heretical Conventicles and their Revenues.

Honorius made a like Decree, An. 412, in reference to all the Revenues belonging to Heretical Conventicles, that both the Churches or Conventicles themſelves, and all the Lands [w] that were ſettled upon them ſhould be forfeited, and become the Poſſeſſion and Property of the Catholick Church, as by former Decrees he had appointed. And I ſuppoſe, it was by vertue of theſe Laws, that Cyril Biſhop of Alexandria ſhut up all the Novatian Churches, and ſeiſed upon all their Revenues, and deprived Theonas their Biſhop of his Subſtance; though Socrates [x] in telling the Story repreſents the matter a little more invidiouſly, as if Cyril had done all this by his own Private Uſurped Authority and Arbitrary Power: Which will hardly gain Credit with any one that conſiders, that thoſe Laws of Honorius were Publiſhed before Cyril came to the Epiſcopal Throne, which was not till the Year 412, when thoſe Laws were reinforced by the Imperial Power.

SECT. XII. 8thly, The Eſtates of Clerks deſerting the Church, to be forfeited to the Church.

WHILE I am upon this Head, it will not be improper to obſerve farther, that by Juſtinian's Laws [y] if any Clergymen or Monks, who were poſſeſt of Temporal Eſtates, forſook their Church or Monaſtery, and turned Seculars again, all their Subſtance was forfeited to the Church or Monaſtery to which they belonged. Theſe were the ſeveral Methods that were anciently taken for Augmenting and Improving the Revenues of the Church, beſides thoſe of Firſt-fruits and Tithes, of which more hereafter.

SECT. XIII. No diſreputable ways of Augmenting Church-Revenues encouraged. Fathers not to diſinherit their Children to make the Church their Heirs.

BUT I muſt obſerve, that as theſe Methods were generally reputed Legal and Allowable, ſo there were ſome other as generally diſallowed and condemned. Particularly we find in St. Auſtin's time, that it was become a Rule in the African Church, to receive no Eſtates that were given to the Church to the great Detriment and Prejudice of the common Rights of any others. As if a Father diſinherited his Children to make the Church his Heir, in that caſe no Biſhop would receive his Donation. Poſſidius tells [z] us St. Auſtin refuſed ſome Eſtates ſo given, becauſe he thought it more juſt and equal, that they ſhould be poſſeſſed by the Children, or Parents, or next Kindred of the Deceaſed Perſons. And that he did ſo, is evident from his own Words in his Diſcourſe de Vita Clericorum [a], where he ſays, he had returned an Eſtate to a Son, which an angry Father at his Death had taken from him: And he thought he did well in it; profeſſing for his own Part, that if any diſinherited his Son, to make the Church his Heir, he ſhould ſeek ſome one elſe to receive his Donation, and not Auſtin; and he hoped by the Grace of God there would be none that would receive it. He adds in the ſame Place a very remarkable and laudable Inſtance of great Generoſity and Equity in Aurelius Biſhop of Carthage, in a caſe of the like nature. A certain Man [b] having no Children, nor Hopes of any, gave away his whole Eſtate to the Church, only reſerving to himſelf the Uſe of it for Life. Now it happened afterwards, that he had Children born to him; upon which the Biſhop generouſly returned him his Eſtate, when he did not at all expect it. The Biſhop indeed, ſays St. Auſtin, had it in his Power to have kept it, ſed jure Fori, non jure Poli, only by the Laws of Man, but not by the Laws of Heaven. And therefore he thought himſelf obliged in Conſcience to return it. This ſhews how tender they were of augmenting the Revenues of the Church by any Methods, that might be thought Unequitable, or ſuch as were not Reputable, Honeſt, or of good Report; herein obſerving the Apoſtle's Rule, to let their Moderation, τὸ ἐπιεικὲς, their Equity, be known to all Men; not doing any Hard Thing for Lucre's Sake, nor taking Advantages by Rigour of Law, when Conſcience and Charity were againſt them.

SECT. XIV. Nothing to be demanded for adminiſtring the Sacraments of the Church, nor for Conſecrating Churches, nor Interment of the Dead.

TO avoid Scandal alſo, and to provide Things honeſt in the ſight of all Men, they forbad any Thing to be demanded for adminiſtring the Sacraments of the Church. The Council of Eliberis ſeems to intimate, that it was cuſtomary with ſome Perſons at their Baptiſm to caſt Money into a Baſon by way of Gratuity to the Miniſter; but even this is there forbidden by a Canon, leſt the Prieſt [c] ſhould ſeem to ſell what he freely receiv'd. Whence we may conclude, that if the People might not offer, the Prieſt might much leſs exact or demand any thing for adminiſtring the Sacrament of Baptiſm. In other Churches a Voluntary Oblation was allowed of, from Perſons that were able and willing to make it; but all [w] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 5. de Hæret. leg. 52. Eccleſiis eorum vel Conventiculis, Prædiiſque, ſiqua in eorum Eccleſias Hæreticorum largitas prava contulit, Proprietati Poteſtatique Catholicæ, ſicut jamdudum Statuimus, vindicatis. [x] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 7. [y] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 55. Si illi Monaſteria aut Eccleſias relinquant, atque mundani fiant; omne ipſorum Jus ad Monaſterium aut Eccleſiam pertinet. Vid. Novel. 5. c. 4. & 6. It. Novel. 123. c. 42. [z] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 24. [a] Aug. Serm. 42. de Diverſis. Tom. 10. p. 520. Quando donavi filio, Quod iratus Pater moriens abſtulit, bene feci.— Quid plura, Fratres mei? Quicunque vult exhæredato filio hæredem facere Eccleſiam, quærat alterum qui ſuſcipiat, non Auguſtinum; imo Deo propitio neminem inveniat. [b] Id. ibid. Quidam cum filios non haberet, neque ſperaret, res ſuas omnes, retento ſibi Uſu fructu, donavit Eccleſiæ. Nati ſunt illi filii, & reddidit Epiſcopus nec opinanti quæ ille donaverat. In poteſtate habebat Epiſcopus non reddere, ſed jure Fori, non jure Poli. [c] Conc. Eliber. c. 48. Emendari placuit, ut hi qui baptizantur (ut fieri ſolebat) Nummos in Concham non mittant; ne ſacerdos, quod gratis accepit, pretio diſtrahere videatur.

Exactions of that nature from the Poor were ſtill prohibited, for fear of diſcouraging them from offering themſelves or their Children to Baptiſm. Thus it was in the Roman Church in the time of Gelaſius, as we learn from [d] his Epiſtles; and in the Greek Church in the time of Gregory Nazianzen, who takes occaſion to anſwer this Objection [e] which Poor Men made againſt coming immediately to Baptiſm, becauſe they had not wherewith to make the uſual Preſent that was then to be offered, or to purchaſe the ſplendid Robe that was then to be worn, or to provide a Treat for the Miniſter that baptized them. He tells them, no ſuch things would be expected or exacted of them: They need only make a Preſent of themſelves to Chriſt, and entertain their Miniſter with their own Good Life and Converſation, which would be more Acceptable to him than any other Offerings. This implies, a Voluntary Caution at their Baptiſm; but not the Cuſtom for Miniſters to demand it, as a matter of Right, for fear of giving Scandal. Some Editions of Gratian [f], and Vicecomes [g] alledge a Canon of the 3d or 4th Council of Carthage to the ſame purpoſe; which if the Allegation were true, would prove that the ſame Cuſtom obtained in the African Church. But, as Antonius [h] Auguſtinus, and the Roman [i] Correctors of Gratian have obſerved, there is no ſuch Canon to be found in any African Council; but it is a Canon of the 2d Council of Bracara in Spain, which finding a corrupt Practice crept in among the Clergy (notwithſtanding the former Prohibition of the Eliberitan Council) that Miniſters did exact Pledges of the Poor, who had not Ability to make any Offering; endeavoured to redreſs this Corruption, by paſſing a New Order, That though [k] Voluntary Oblations might be received; yet no Pledge ſhould be extorted from the Poor, who were not able to offer; becauſe many of the Poor for fear of this kept back their Children from Baptiſm. The ſame Council of Bracara made a Decree, That no Biſhop ſhould exact [l] any thing as a Due of any Founders of Churches for their Conſecration; but if any thing was voluntarily offered, he might receive it. And ſo in like manner for Confirmation [m], and adminiſtring the Euchariſt [n], all Biſhops and Presbyters are ſtrictly injoyned not to exact any thing of the Receivers, becauſe the Grace of GOD was not to be ſet to Sale, nor the Sanctification of the Spirit to be imparted for Money. St. Jerom aſſures us farther, that it was not very honourable in his time to exact any thing for the Burying-places of the Dead: For he cenſures thoſe that practiſed it, as falling ſhort [o] of the Merit of Ephron the Hittite, whom Abraham forced to receive Money for the Burying-place which he bought of him: But now, ſays he, there are ſome who ſell Burying-places, and take Money for them, not by Compulſion, as Ephron did, but by Extortion rather from thoſe that were unwilling to pay. By which we may underſtand, that in his time it was hardly allowable to demand any thing for the Uſe of a publick or private Cemetery: Nor was this any part of the Church-Revenues in thoſe Days, when as yet the Cuſtom of Burying in Churches was not generally brought in, but was the Practice of later Ages; of which more when we come to ſpeak of the Funeral Rites of the Church.

SECT. XV.

The Oblations of the People anciently one of the moſt valuable Parts of Church-Revenues.

IF any one is deſirous to know, what Part of the Church-Revenues was anciently moſt ſerviceable and beneficial to the Church, he may be informed from St. Chryſoſtom and St. Auſtin, who give the greateſt Commendations to the Offerings and Oblations of the People, and ſeem to ſay, that the Church was never better provided, than when her Maintenance was raiſed chiefly from them. For then Mens Zeal prompted them to be very Liberal in their daily Offerings: But as Lands and Poſſeſſions were ſettled upon the Church, this Zeal ſenſibly abated; and ſo the Church came to be worſe provided for, under the Notion of growing Richer. Which is the thing that St. Chryſoſtom complains of in his own Times, when the ancient Revenue ariſing from Oblations was in a great meaſure ſunk, and the Church with all her Lands left in a worſe Condition than ſhe was before. For now her Miniſters were forced to ſubmit to Secular Cares, to the Management of Lands, and Houſes, and the Buſineſs of Buying and Selling, for fear the Orphans, and Virgins, and Widows of the Church ſhould ſtarve. He exhorts the People therefore to return to their ancient Liberality of Oblations; which would at once eaſe the Miniſtry of all ſuch Cares, and make a good Proviſion for the Poor, and take off all the little Scoffs and Objections that ſome were ſo ready to make and caſt upon the Clergy, that they were too much given to Secular Cares and Employments; when indeed it was not Choice, but Neceſſity that forced them to it. There are, ſays he, in [d] Gelaſ. Ep. 1. al. 9. ad Epiſc. Lucaniæ. c. 7. Baptizandis conſignandiſque Fidelibus pretia nulla Presbyteri præfigant, nec Illationibus quibuſdam impoſitis exagitare cupiant renaſcentes; quoniam quod gratis accipimus, gratis dare mandamur. Et ideo nihil à prædictis exigere moliantur, quo vel paupertate cogente deterriti, vel Indignatione revocati, Redemptionis ſuæ cauſas adire deſpiciant.

[e] Naz. Orat. 40. de Bapt. t. 1. p. 655. [f] Gratian. Cauſ. 1. Q. 1. c. 103. [g] Vicecom. de Ritib. Bapt. lib. 4. c. 2.
[h] Anton. Aug. de Emend. Gratiani lib. 1. Dial. 14. [i] Gratian. Ibid. Edit. Rom. an. 1582. [k] Conc. Bracar. 2. c. 7. edit. Crab. al. 3. Bracar. Ed. Labbe. Qui infantes ſuos ad Baptiſmum offerunt, ſi quid voluntarie pro ſuo offerunt voto, ſuſcipiatur ab eis; ſi vero per neceſſitatem Paupertatis aliquid non habent quod offerant, nullum illis pignus violenter tollatur à Clericis. Nam multi Pauperes hoc timentes, filios ſuos à Baptiſmo retrahunt.
[l] Ibid. can. 5. [m] Gelaſ. Ep. 1. al. 9. ad Epiſc. Lucan. c. 7. [n] Conc. Trul. c. 23. [o] Hieron. Quæſt. Hebraic. in Gen. 23. Tom. 3. p. 214. Poſtquam pretio victus eſt, ut ſepulcrum venderet, &c. appellatus eſt Ephran: Significante ſcriptura, non eum fuiſſe conſummatæ perfectæque virtutis, qui potuerit Memorias vendere mortuorum. Sciant igitur qui ſepulcra venditant, & non coguntur ut accipiant pretium, ſed à nolentibus etiam extorquent, immutari nomen ſuum, & perire quid de merito eorum, &c.

this place (at Antioch he means) by the Grace of God an hundred thousand Persons that come to Church. Now if every one [p] of these would but give one Loaf of Bread daily to the Poor, the Poor would live in plenty. If every one would contribute but one Half-penny, no Man would want; neither should we undergo so many Reproaches and Derisions, as if we were too intent upon our Possessions. By this Discourse of Chrysostom's it plainly appears, that he thought the Oblations of the People in Populous Cities, when Men were acted with their Primitive Zeal, was a better Provision for the Clergy, than even the Lands and Possessions of the Church. And St. Austin seems to have had the same Sense of this Matter. For Possidius (q) tells us in his Life, that when he found the Possessions of the Church were become a little invidious, he was used to tell the Laity, that he had rather live upon the Oblations of the People of GOD, than undergo the care and trouble of those Possessions; and that he was ready to part with them, provided all the Servants and Ministers of GOD might live as they did under the Old Testament, when, as we read, they that served at the Altar, were made Partakers of the Altar. But though he made this Proposal to the People, they would never accept of it. Which is an Argument, that the People also thought, that the reducing the Clergy's Maintenance to the precise Model of the Old Testament, would have been a more chargeable way to them than the other: since the Oblations of the Old Testament included Tithes and First-fruits; concerning the State and Original of which, as to what concerns the Christian Church, I come now to make a more particular Enquiry.

CHAP. V.

Of Tithes and First-fruits in particular.

SECT. I. Tithes anciently reckoned to be due by Divine Right.

CONCERNING Tithes, so far as relates to the Ancient Church, it will be proper to make three Enquiries. 1*st*, Whether the Primitive Fathers esteemed them to be due by Divine Right? 2*dly*, If they did, why they were not always strictly demanded? 3*dly*, In what Age they were first generally settled upon the Church? As to the first Enquiry, it is generally agreed by Learned Men, That the Ancients accounted Tithes to be due by Divine Right. Bellarmin indeed [a], and Rivet [b], and Mr. Selden [c] place them upon another Foot: But our Learned Bishop Andrews [d] and Bishop Carleton [e] who wrote before Mr. Selden, and Bishop Mountague [f] and Tillesly [g], who wrote in Answer to him (not to mention many others who have written since) have clearly proved, that the Ancients believed the Law about Tithes not to be merely a Ceremonial or Political Command, but of Moral and Perpetual Obligation. It will be sufficient for me in this Place to present the Reader with two or three of their Allegations. Origen in one of his Homilies [h] on Numbers, thus delivers his Opinion about it: How does our Righteousness exceed the Righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, if they dare not taste of the Fruits of the Earth, before they offer the First-fruits to the Priests, and separate the Tithes for the Levites? Whilst I do nothing of this, but only so abuse the Fruits of the Earth, that neither the Priest, nor the Levite, nor the Altar of GOD shall see any of them? St. Jerom [i] says expressly, that the Law about Tithes and First-fruits was to be understood to continue in its full force in the Christian Church, where Men were commanded not only to give Tithes, but to sell all that they had, and give to the Poor. But, says he, if we will not proceed so far, let us at least imitate the Jewish Practice, and give Part of the Whole to the Poor, and the Honour that is due to the Priests and Levites. Which he that does not, defrauds GOD, and makes himself liable to a Curse. St. Austin as plainly favours the same Opinion, telling Men [k], that they ought to separate ſomething out of their yearly Fruits, or daily Income; and that a Tenth to a Chriſtian was but a ſmall Proportion. Becauſe it is ſaid, the Phariſees gave Tithes: I faſt twice in the Week, I give Tithes of all that I poſſeſs. And our Lord ſaith, Except your Righteouſneſs exceed the Righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, ye ſhall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. But if he, whoſe Righteouſneſs ye are to exceed, give Tithes; and you give not a thouſandth part; how can you be ſaid to exceed him, whom you do not ſo much as equal? By theſe few Allegations the Reader may be able to judge, what Notion the Ancients had of Tithes, as due by Divine Right under the Goſpel, as well as under the Law; and that the Precept concerning them was not a meer Ceremonial or Political Command given to the Jews only.

[p] Chrys. Hom. 86. in Matth. [q] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 23. Dum forte (ut adsolet) de Possessionibus ipsis invidia Clericis fieret, alloquebatur Plebem Dei, malle se ex Collationibus Plebis Dei vivere, quam illarum Possessionum curam vel gubernationem pati; & paratum se illis cedere, ut eo modo omnes Dei servi & Ministri viverent, quo in Veteri Testamento leguntur Altari de servientes de eodem comparticipari. Sed nunquam id Laici suscipere voluerunt.

[a] Bellarmin. de Clericis. lib. 1. c. 25. [b] Rivet. Exerc. 80. in Gen. 14. p. 386. [c] Selden. Hist. of Tithes. c. 4. [d] Andrew de Decimis, inter Opuscula. [e] Carleton Divine Right of Tithes, c. 4. [f] Montague Diatribæ, &c. [g] Tillesly Answer to Selden. [h] Orig. Hom. 11. in Num. 18. tom. 1. p. 210. Quomodo ergo abundat Justitia nostra plusquam Scribarum & Pharisæorum, si illi de fructibus terræ suæ gustare non audent, priusquam Primitias suas sacerdotibus offerant, & Levitis Decimæ separentur? Et ego nihil horum faciens, fructibus terræ ita abutar, ut Sacerdos nesciat, Levites ignoret, Divinum Altare non sentiat? [i] Hieron. Com. in Mal. 3. Quod de Decimis Primiciisque diximus, quæ olim dabantur à Populo sacerdotibus ac Levitis, in Ecclesiæ quoque Populis intelligite: Quibus præceptum est, non solum Decimas dare & Primitias, sed & vendere omniaque habent & dare pauperibus, & sequi Dominum salvatorem. Quod si facere nolumus saltem Judæorum imitemur exordia, ut pauperibus partem demus ex toto, & sacerdotibus & Levitis honorem debitum deferamus. Quod qui non fecerit, Deum fraudare & supplantare convincitur, &c. [k] Aug. Com. in Psal. 146. tom. 8. p. 698. Præcidite ergo aliquid, & deputate aliquid fixum vel ex annuis fructibus, vel ex quotidianis Quæstibus vestris — Decimas vis? Decimas exime, quanquam parum sit. Dictum est enim, quia Pharisæi Decimas dabant, &c. Et quid ait Dominus? Nisi abundaverit Justitia vestra plusquam Scribarum & Pharisæorum, non intrabitis in regnum cœlorum. Et ille, super quem debet abundare Justitia tua, Decimas dat: Tu autem nec Millesimam das. Quomodo superabis eum, cui non æquaris?

SECT. II.
Why not exacted in the Apoſtolical Age and thoſe that immediately followed.

BUT why then, it may be ſaid, were not Tithes exacted by the Apoſtles at firſt, or by the Fathers in the Ages immediately following? For it is generally believ'd, that Tithes were not the Original Maintenance of Miniſters under the Goſpel. To this Biſhop Carleton [l] has returned ſeveral very ſatisfactory Anſwers, which the Reader may take in his own Words. 1*ſt*, That Tithes were paid to the Prieſts and Levites in the time of Chriſt and his Apoſtles: Now the Synagogue muſt firſt be buried, before theſe Things could be orderly brought into uſe in the Church. 2*dly*, In the Times of the New Teſtament, and ſomewhat after, there was an extraordinary Maintenance by a Community of all Things, which ſupplied the want of Tithes: But this Community was extraordinary, and not to laſt always. 3*dly*, The uſe of paying Tithes, as the Church then ſtood, was ſo incommodious and cumberſome, that it could not well be practiſed. And therefore as Circumciſion was laid aſide for a Time, whilſt Iſrael travelled through the Wilderneſs, not becauſe the People of right ought not then alſo to have uſed it, but becauſe it was ſo incommodious for that Eſtate and Time of the Church, that it could not without great trouble be practiſed: Even ſo the uſe of Tithes in the time of Chriſt and his Apoſtles was laid aſide, not becauſe it ought not, but becauſe it could not without great incumbrance be done. And as Circumciſion was reſumed, as ſoon as the Eſtate of the Church could bear it: So Tithes were re-eſtabliſhed, as ſoon as the Condition of the Church could ſuffer it. For Tithes cannot well be paid, but where ſome whole State or Kingdom receiveth Chriſtianity, and where the Magiſtrate doth favour the Church, which was not in the time of the Apoſtles. To theſe Reaſons ſome other learned Perſons [m] have added a fourth, which is alſo worth noting, That the Tithes of Fruits were not ſo early paid to Chriſtian Prieſts, becauſe the Inhabitants of the Country were the lateſt Converts; whence alſo the Name Pagans ſtuck by the Heathens, becauſe the greateſt Relicks of them were in Country Villages.

SECT. III.
In what Age they were firſt generally ſettled upon the Church.

AS to the laſt Enquiry, When Tithes began firſt to be generally ſettled upon the Church? The common Opinion is, That it was in the 4th Century, when Magiſtrates began to favour the Church, and the World was generally converted from Heatheniſm. Some think [n] Conſtantine ſettled them by Law upon the Church: So Alſted, who cites Hermannus Gigas for the ſame Opinion. But there is no Law of Conſtantine's now extant that makes expreſs mention of any ſuch thing. That which comes the neareſt to it, ſeems to be the Law about an annual Allowance of Corn to the Clergy in all Cities out of the Publick Treaſuries, which has been ſpoken of in the laſt Chapter: But this was not ſo much as a Tenth of the yearly Product; for the whole Tribute it ſelf ſeems to have been no more: For in ſome Laws of the Theodoſian Code [o] the Emperor's Tribute is called Decimæ, Tithes; and the Publicans, who collected it, are upon that Account by Tully [p] called Decumani; and in Heſychius the Word δεκατεύειν, to Tithe, is explained by τελωνεῖν & δεκάτην εἰσπράττεσθαι, to pay Tribute or pay their Tithes to the Collectors of the Tribute. Unleſs therefore we can ſuppoſe, that Conſtantine ſettled the whole Tribute of the Empire upon the Church (which it is evident he did not) we cannot take that Law for a Settlement of Tithes upon the Clergy. Yet it might be a Step towards it: For before the end of the 4th Century, as Mr. Selden [q] himſelf not only confeſſes, but proves out of Caſſian, Eugippius, and others, Tithes were paid to the Church. St. Auſtin lived in this Age, and he ſays, Tithes were paid before his time, and much better than they were in his own time, for he makes a great Complaint of the Non-payment of them. Our Forefathers, ſays he [r], abounded in all things, becauſe they gave Tithes to GOD, and Tribute to Cæſar. But now becauſe our Devotion to GOD is ſunk, the Taxes of the State are raiſed upon us. We would not give GOD his Part in the Tithes, and therefore the whole is taken away from us. The Exchequer devours what we would not give to Chriſt. St. Chryſoſtom [s] and the Author of the Opus Im-

[l] Carleton Div. Right of Tithes. cap. 4. p. 21.
[m] Biſhop Fell Not. in Cypr. Ep. 66. al. 1. [n] Alſted. Supplement. Chamier de Membris Eccleſ. c. 10.
[o] Cod. Th. lib. 10. tit. 19. de Metallis. leg. 10, & 11.
[p] Vid. Cicer. Orat. 3. in Ver. n. 21, & 22. [q] Selden Hiſt. of Tith. c. 5. p. 47, &c. [r] Aug. Hom. 48. ex 50. tom. 10. p. 201. Majores noſtri ideo copiis omnibus abundabant, quia Deo Decimas dabant, & Cæſari cenſum reddebant. Modo autem quia deceſſit Devotio Dei, acceſſit Indictio Fiſci. Nolumus partiri cum Deo Decimas, modo totum tollitur. Hoc tollit Fiſcus, quod non accipit Chriſtus. [s] Chryſ. Hom. 4. in Epheſ. p. 1058.

perfectum

perfectum [t] on St. Matthew, that goes under his Name, teſtify for the practice of other Churches about the ſame time. And it were eaſy to add a Liſt of many other Fathers and Councils of the next Age, which ſpeak of Tithes [u] as then actually ſettled upon the Church: But ſince they who diſpute moſt againſt the Divine Right of them, do not deny this as to Fact, it is needleſs to proſecute this matter any farther; which they that pleaſe may ſee Hiſtorically deduced through many Centuries by Mr. Selden [w].

SECT. IV. The Original of Firſt-fruits, and the manner of Offering them.

THERE is one Part more of Church-Revenues, whoſe Original remains to be enquired into, and that is Firſt-fruits, which are frequently mentioned in the primitive Writers. For not only thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [x] and Conſtitutions [y] ſpeak of them, as Part of the Maintenance of the Clergy; but Writers more ancient and more authentick, as Origen and Irenæus, mention them alſo as Oblations made to GOD. Celſus, ſays Origen [z], would have us dedicate Firſt-fruits to Dæmons; but we dedicate them to him, who ſaid, Let the Earth bring forth Graſs, the Herb yielding Seed and the Fruit-tree yielding Fruit after his Kind. To whom we give our Firſt-fruits, to him alſo we ſend up our Prayers, having a great High-Prieſt that is entered into Heaven, &c. In like manner Irenæus [a] ſays, Chriſt taught his Diſciples to offer the Firſt-fruits of the Creatures to GOD, and that this was the Church's continual Oblation with Thankſgiving for the Enjoyment of all the reſt. Which implies, either that they had a particular Form of Thankſgiving, as there is in both the Greek and Latin Rituals; or elſe that theſe Firſt-fruits were offered with other Oblations at the time of the Euchariſt. However this be, it is evident, that as they were principally deſigned for agnizing the Creator, ſo they were ſecondarily intended for the Uſe of his Servants. And therefore we find the Euſtathian Hereticks cenſured by the Synod of Gangra, An. 324, for that they took the Firſt-fruits, which were anciently given to the Church, and divided them among the Saints of their own Party [b]; in oppoſition to which Practice there are two Canons [c] made by that Council, forbidding any one to receive or diſtribute ſuch Oblations out of the Church, otherwiſe than by the Directions of the Biſhop, under pain of Excommunication. Some other Rules are alſo given by one of the Councils [d] of Carthage, inſerted into the African Code, concerning theſe Firſt-fruits, that they ſhould be only of Grapes and Corn; which ſhews that it was alſo the Practice of the African Church. Nazianzen likewiſe mentions the Firſt-fruits of the Wine-preſs and the Floor, which were to be dedicated [e] to GOD. And the Author of the Conſtitutions has a Form of Prayer [f], ἐπίκλησις ἐπὶ ἀπαρχῶν, an Invocation upon the Firſt-fruits, to be uſed at their Dedication. So that it ſeems very clear, that the Offering of Firſt-fruits was a very ancient and general Cuſtom in the Chriſtian Church, and that this alſo contributed ſomething toward the Maintenance of the Clergy; whoſe Revenues I have now conſidered ſo far as concerns the ſeveral Kinds and firſt Original of them.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Management and the Diſtribution of the Revenues of the Ancient Clergy.

SECT. I. The Revenues of the whole Dioceſe anciently in the hands of the Biſhop.

THE next thing to be conſidered is the ancient way of Managing and Diſtributing theſe Revenues among the Clergy, and ſuch others as were Dependants upon the Church. Which being a little different from the Ways of later Ages, ſince Settlements were made upon Parochial Churches; for the right underſtanding of it we are in the firſt place to obſerve, that anciently the Revenues of the whole Dioceſe were all in the hands of the Biſhop; who with the Advice and Conſent of his Senate of Presbyters diſtributed them as the Occaſions of the Church required. This will appear evident to any one that will conſider theſe two things (which will hereafter be proved, when we come to ſpeak of Parochial Churches and their Original) firſt, that there were anciently no Presbyters or other Clergy fixt upon particular Churches or Congregations in the ſame City or Dioceſe; but they were ſerved indifferently by any Presbyter from the Eccleſia Matrix, the Mother or Cathedral Church, to which all the Clergy of the City or Dioceſe belonged, and not to any particular Congregation. 2dly, That when Presbyters were fixt to particular Churches or Aſſemblies in ſome Cities, yet ſtill thoſe Churches had no ſeparate Revenues; but the Maintenance of the Clergy officiating in them was from the common Stock of the Mother-Church, [t] Opus Imperf. in Mat. Hom. 44. Si Populus Decimas non obtulerit, murmurant omnes: At ſi peccantem Populum viderint, nemo murmurat contra eum. [u] Con. Aurelian. 1. an. 511. can. 17. Conc. Matiſcon. 2. an. 588. c. 5. [w] Selden Hiſt. of Tithes, c. 5. &c. [x] Canon. Apoſt. c. 4. [y] Conſtit. lib. 2. c. 25. lib. 8. c. 30. [z] Orig. cont. Celſ. lib. 8. p. 400. [a] Iren. lib. 4. c. 32. Sed & ſuis Diſcipulis dans conſilium Primitias Deo offerre ex ſuis Creaturis, &c. Ibid. c. 34. Offerre igitur oportet Deo Primitias ejus creaturæ, &c. [b] Conc. Gagr. in Præfat. καρποφορίας τε τὰς ἐκκλησιαστικὰς τὰς ἀνέκαθεν διδομένας τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ ἑαυτοῖς ἢ τοῖς σὺν αὐτοῖς ὡς ἁγίοις, τὰς διαδόσεις ποιούμενοι. [c] Ibid. can. 7, & 8. [d] Cod. Can. Afr. 37. al. 40. Conc. African. c. 4. [e] Naz. Ep. 80. [f] Conſtit. lib. 8. c. 40.

into

into which all the Oblations of particular Churches were put, as into a common Fund, that from thence there might be made a general Diſtribution. That thus it was at Conſtantinople till the middle of the fifth Century, is evident from what we find in Theodorus Lector, who ſays [a], that Marcian the Oeconomus or Guardian of that Church under Gennadius, An. 460, was the firſt that ordered the Clergy of every particular Church to receive the Offerings of their own Church, whereas before the great Church received them all.

SECT. II. And by his Care diſtributed among the Clergy.

Now this being the ancient Cuſtom, it gives us a clear Account how all the Revenues of the Church came to be in the hands of the Biſhop, and how it was made one Part of his Office and Duty by the Canons to concern himſelf in the Care and Diſtribution of them. Of which becauſe I have already [b] ſpoken elſewhere, I ſhall ſay no more in this Place, ſave only that the Biſhop himſelf, to avoid Suſpicion and prevent Miſmanagement, was obliged to give an account of his Adminiſtration in a Provincial [c] Synod; as alſo at his Election to exhibit a Liſt of his own Goods and Eſtate, that ſuch things as belonged to him [d] might be diſtinguiſhed from thoſe that belonged to GOD and the Church. And for the ſame Reaſon the great Council of Chalcedon [e] ordered, that every Biſhop ſhould have an Oeconomus, or Guardian of the Church, and he to be choſen by the Vote of all the Clergy, as has been noted in another Place. See Book 3. Chap. 12. Sect. 4.

SECT. III. Rules about the Diviſion of Church-Revenues.

As to the Diſtribution it ſelf, in the moſt Primitive Ages we find no certain Rules about it; but as it was in the Apoſtles days, ſo it contiuued for ſome time after: What was collected, was uſually depoſited with the Biſhop, and Diſtribution was made to every Man according as he had need. But the following Ages brought the matter to ſome certain Rules, and then the Revenues were divided into certain Portions, monthly or yearly, according as occaſion required, and theſe proportioned to the State or Needs of every Order. In the Weſtern Church the Diviſion was uſually into three or four Parts; whereof one fell to the Biſhop; a ſecond to the reſt of the Clergy; a third to the Poor; and the fourth was applied to the Maintenance of the Fabrick and other neceſſary Uſes of the Church. The Council of Bracara [f] makes but three Parts, one for the Biſhop, another for the Clergy, and the third for the Fabrick and Lights of the Church. But then it was ſuppoſed that the Biſhop's Hoſpitality ſhould out of ſuch a Proportion provide for the Neceſſities of the Poor. By other Rules, the Poor, that is all diſtreſſed People, the Virgins and Widows of the Church, together with the Martyrs and Confeſſors in Priſon, the Sick and Strangers, have one fourth [g] in the Dividend expreſly allotted them. For all theſe had Relief (though not a perfect Maintenance) from the Charity of the Church. At Rome there were fifteen hundred ſuch Perſons beſides the Clergy [h] provided for this way in the Time of Cornelius; and above three thouſand at Antioch [i] in the Time of Chryſoſtom: By which we may make an Eſtimate of the Revenues and Charities of thoſe populous Churches.

SECT. IV. In ſome Churches the Clergy lived all in common.

In ſome Churches they made no ſuch Diviſion, but lived all in common, the Clergy with the Biſhop, as it were in one Manſion, and at one Table. But this they did not by any general Canon, but only upon Choice, or particular Combination and Agreement in ſome particular Churches. As Sozomen [k] notes it to have been the Cuſtom at Rinocorura in Egypt, and Poſſidius affirms [l] the ſame of the Church of St. Auſtin. What was the Practice of St. Auſtin and his Clergy we cannot better learn than from St. Auſtin himſelf, who tells us, that all his Clergy [m] laid themſelves voluntarily under an Obligation to have all things in common; and therefore none of them could have any Property, or any thing to diſpoſe of by Will; or if they had, they were liable to be turned out, and have their Names expunged out of the Roll of the Clergy: which he reſolved to do, though they appealed to Rome, or to a thouſand Councils againſt him; by the help of GOD they ſhould not be Clerks where he was Biſhop. For his own part, he tells us, he was ſo punctual to this Rule, that if any one preſented him with a Robe finer than ordinary, he was uſed to ſell it; that ſince his Clergy could not wear the ſame in kind, they might at leaſt [n] partake of the Benefit, when it was ſold and made common. But as this way of Living would not comport with the State of all Churches, ſo there were but few that embraced it; and thoſe that did, were not compelled to it by any general Law, but only by local Statutes of their own appointment.

[a] Theod. Lect. lib. 1. p. 553. [b] Book 2. Chap. 4. Sect. 6. [c] Conc. Antioch. c. 25. [d] Canon. Apoſt. c. 39. al. 40. [e] Conc. Chalced. c. 25. [f] Conc. Bracar. 1. c. 25. Placuit, ut de Rebus Eccleſiaſticis fiant tres æquæ Portiones, id eſt, una Epiſcopi, alia Clericorum, tertia in reparatione vel in Luminariis Eccleſiæ. [g] Gelaſ. Ep. 1. al. 9. ad Epiſc. Lucaniæ. c. 29. Quatuor tam de Redditu quam de Oblatione Fidelium——convenit fieri Portiones: Quarum ſit una Pontificis, altera Clericorum, Tertia Pauperum, Quarta fabriciis applicanda. Vid. Simplici Ep. 3. ad Florent. Gregor. Magn. lib. 3. Ep. 11. [h] Cornel. Ep. ad Fab. ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 43. [i] Chryſ. Hom. 67. in Matth. [k] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 31. [l] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 25. [m] Aug. Ser. 50. de Diverſis ſive de Communi Vita Clericorum. Tom. 10. p. 523. Quia placuit illis Socialis hæc vita, quiſquis cum hypocriſi vixerit, quiſquis inventus fuerit habens proprium, non illi permitto ut inde faciat Teſtamentum, ſed delebo eum de Tabula Clericorum. Interpellet contra me mille Concilia, naviget contra me quo voluerit, ſit certe ubi potuerit, adjuvabit me Deus, ut ubi ego Epiſcopus ſum, illic Clericus eſſe non poſſit. [n] Ibid. Si quis meliorem dederit, vendo, quod & facere ſoleo, ut quando non poteſt veſtis eſſe communis, Pretium veſtis ſit commune.

SECT. V. Alterations made in these matters by the Endowment of Parochial Churches.

YET in one of these two ways the Clergy were commonly provided for out of the Revenues of the great Church, till such times as Endowments and Settlements began to be made upon Parochial Churches; which was not done in all Places at the same time, nor in one and the same way: But it seems to have had its Rise from particular Founders of Churches, who settled Manse and Glebe upon the Churches which they builded, and upon that score were allowed a Right of Patronage, to present their own Clerk, and invest him with the Revenues of the Church, wherewith they had endowed it. This Practice was begun in the Time of Justinian, An. 500, if not before, for there are two of his Laws which [o] authorize and confirm it. About the same time a Settlement of other Revenues, as Oblations, &c. was also made in some Places upon Parochial Churches, as has been observed before out of Theodorus Lector's Accounts of the Churches of Constantinople. Yet the Change is thought by some [p] to be much latter in England: For they collect out of Bede [q], that the ancient course of the Clergy's officiating only pro tempore in Parochial Churches, whilst they received Maintenance from the Cathedral Church, continued in England more than an hundred Years after the coming of Austin into England, that is, till about the Year 700. For Bede plainly intimates, that at that time the Bishop and his Clergy lived together, and had all Things common, as they had in the Primitive Church in the Days of the Apostles.

SECT. VI. No Alienations to be made of Church-Revenues or Goods, but upon Extraordinary Occasions.

I have but one thing more to observe upon this Head, which is, That such Goods or Revenues as were once given to the Church, were always esteemed Devoted to God; and therefore were only to be employed in his Service, and not to be diverted to any other Use, except some Extraordinary case of Charity absolutely required it. As if it was to redeem Captives, or relieve the Poor in time of Famine, when no other Succours could be afforded them: In that case it was usual to sell even the Sacred Vessels and Utensils of the Church, to make Provision for the Living Temples of God, which were to be preferred before the Ornaments of the Material Buildings. Thus St. Ambrose melted down the Communion-Plate of the Church of Milan to redeem some Captives, which otherwise must have continued in Slavery: And when the Arians objected this to him invidiously as a Crime, he wrote a most Elegant Apology and Vindication for himself, where among other things worthy the Reader's perusal, he pleads his own Cause after this manner: Is it not better that the Bishop [r] should melt the Plate to sustain the Poor, when other Sustenance cannot be had, than that some Sacrilegious Enemy should carry it off by Spoil and Plunder? Will not our LORD expostulate with us upon this Account? Why did you suffer so many helpless Persons to die with Famine, when you have Gold to provide them Sustenance? Why were so many Captives carried away and sold without Redemption? Why were so many suffered to be Slain by the Enemy? It had been better to have preserved the Vessels of Living Men, than Lifeless Metals. What Answer can be returned to this? For what shall a Man say, I was afraid lest the Temple of GOD should want its Ornaments. But Christ will answer: My Sacraments do not require Gold, nor please me the more for being ministred in Gold, which are not bought with Gold. The Ornament of my Sacraments is the Redemption of Captives: And those are truly Precious Vessels, which redeem Souls from Death. Thus that holy Father goes on to justify the Fact, which the Arians called Sacrilege, but he by a truer Name, Charity and Mercy; for the sake of which he concludes it was no Crime for a Man to break, to melt, to sell the Mystical Vessels of the Church, though it were a very great Offence for any Man to convert them to his own private Use. After the same Example we find [s] St. Austin disposed of the Plate of the Church for the Redemption of Captives. Acacius Bishop of Amida did the same for the Redemption of seven thousand Persian Slaves from the Hands of the Roman Soldiers, as Socrates [t] informs us. From whence we also learn, that in such cases they did not consider what Religion Men were of, but only whether they were Indigent and Necessitous Men, and such as stood in need of their Assistance. We have the like Instances in the Practice of Cyril of Jerusalem, mentioned by Theodoret [u] and Sozomen, and in Deogratias Bishop of Carthage, whose Charity is extolled by Victor Uticensis [w] upon the same Occasion. For he sold the Communion-Plate to redeem the Roman Soldiers, that were taken Captives in their Wars with the Vandals. This was so far from being esteemed Sacrilege or unjust Alienation, that the Law against Sacrilege excepted this case, though they did no other whatsoever. As may be seen in the Law of Justinian, which [x] forbids the Selling or Pawning the Church Plate, or Vestments, or any other Gifts, except in case of Captivity or Famine, to redeem Slaves, or relieve the Poor; because in such cases the Lives or Souls of Men were to be preferred before any Vessels or Vestments whatsoever. The Poverty of the Clergy was a pitiable case of the same Nature: And [o] Justin. Novel. 57. c. 2. Novel. 123. c. 18. [p] Cawdrey Disc. of Patronage. c 2. p. 8. Selden of Tithes. c. 9. p. 255. [q] Bede Hist. Gentis Anglor. Lib. 4. c. 27. [r] Ambros. de Offic. lib. 2. c. 28. [s] Possid. Vit. Aug. c. 24. [t] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 21. [u] Theod. lib. 2. c. 27. Sozom. lib. 4. c. 25. [w] Victor. de Persec. Vandal. lib. 1. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 7. p. 591. [x] Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 2. de sacrosanct. Eccles. leg. 21. Sancimus, nemini licere sacratissima atque arcana Vasa, vel Vestes, cæteraque Donaria, quæ ad Divinam Religionem necessaria sunt ---- vel ad Venditionem vel ad Hypothecam vel ad Pignus trahere ---- Excepta causa Captivitatis & Famis in locis quibus hoc contigerit. Nam si necessitas fuerit in Redemptione Captivorum, tunc & Venditionem præfatarum rerum divinarum, & Hypothecam & Pignorationes fieri concedimus, quoniam non absurdum est, animas hominum quibuscunque Vasis vel Vestimentis præferri.

therefore

therefore if the Annual Income of the Church would not maintain them, and there was no other Way to provide them of Neceſſaries; in that caſe ſome Canons [y] allowed the Biſhop to Alienate or Sell certain Goods of the Church, to raiſe a preſent Maintenance.

SECT. VII. And that with the joynt Conſent of the Biſhop and his Clergy, with the Approbation of the Metropolitan or ſome Provincial Biſhops.

BUT that no Fraud might be committed in any ſuch caſes, the ſame Canons did ſpecially provide, that when any urgent Neceſſity compelled the Biſhop to take this extraordinary Courſe, he ſhould firſt conſult his Clergy, and alſo the Metropolitan, and others his comprovincial Biſhops, that they might judge of the Neceſſity; and whether it were a Reaſonable Ground for ſuch a Proceeding. The 4th Council of Carthage [z] diſanuls all ſuch Acts of the Biſhop, whereby he either gives away, or ſells, or commutes any Goods of the Church, without the Conſent and Subſcription of his Clergy. And the 5th Council of Carthage [a] requires him to intimate the Caſe and Neceſſity of his Church firſt to the Primate of the Province, that he with a certain Number of Biſhops may Judge, whether it be fitting to be done. The Council of Agde [b] ſays, He ſhould firſt conſult two or three of his Neighbouring Biſhops, and take their Approbation. Thus ſtood the Laws of the Church, ſo long as the Biſhop and his Clergy had a common Right in the Dividend of Eccleſiaſtical Revenues: Nothing could be alienated without the Conſent of both Parties, and the Cognizance and Ratification of the Metropolitan or Provincial Synod. So that the utmoſt Precaution was taken in this Affair, leſt under the Pretence of Neceſſity or Charity, any Spoil or Devaſtation ſhould be made of the Goods and Revenues of the Church.

[y] Conc. Carthag. 5. c. 4. Conc. Agathen. c. 7.

[z] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 32. Irrita erit Donatio Epiſcoporum, vel Venditio vel Commutatio rei Eccleſiaſticæ, abſque Conniventia & ſubſcriptione Clericorum.

[a] Conc. Carth. 5. c. 4. Si aliqua neceſſitas cogit, hanc inſinuandam eſſe Primati Provinciæ ipſius, ut cum ſtatuto numero Epiſcoporum, utrum faciendum ſit, arbitretur.

[b] Conc. Agathen. c. 7. Apud duos vel tres Comprovinciales vel Vicinos Epiſcopos, cauſa qua neceſſe ſit vendi, primitus comprobetur.

BOOK

BOOK VI.

An Account of ſeveral Laws and Rules, relating to the EMPLOYMENT, LIFE and CONVERSATION of the PRIMITIVE CLERGY.

CHAP. I.

Of the Excellency of theſe Rules in general, and the Exemplarineſs of the Clergy in Conforming to them.

SECT. I. The Excellency of the Chriſtian Rules atteſted and envied by the Heathens.

I Have in the two foregoing Books given an Account of the great Care of the Primitive Church in Providing and Training up fit Perſons for the Miniſtry, and of the great Encouragements that were given them by the State, as well to honour and diſtinguiſh their Calling, as to excite and provoke them to be ſedulous in the Diſcharge of their ſeveral Offices and Functions. There is one Thing more remains, which is, to give an Account alſo of the Church's Care in making Neceſſary Laws and Canons, obliging every Member of the Eccleſiaſtick Body to live conformable to his Profeſſion, and exerciſe himſelf in the Duties of his Station and Calling. Theſe Rules were many of them ſo excellent in their own Nature, and ſo ſtrictly and carefully obſerved by thoſe who had a Concern in them, that ſome of the chief Adverſaries of the Chriſtian Religion could not but take notice of them, and with a ſort of Envy and Emulation bear Teſtimony to them. Among the Works of Julian there is a famous Epiſtle of his to Arſacius High Prieſt of Galatia, (which is recorded alſo [a] by Sozomen) wherein he takes occaſion to tell him, that it was very viſible that the Cauſes of the great Increaſe of Chriſtianity were chiefly their profeſs'd Hoſpitality toward Strangers, and their great Care in Burying the Dead, joyned with a pretended Sanctity and Holineſs of Life. Therefore he bids him, as High Prieſt of Galatia, to take care, that all the Prieſts of that Region that were under him, ſhould be made to anſwer the ſame Character; and that he ſhould either by his Threatnings or Perſuaſions bring them to be diligent and ſober Men, or elſe remove them from the Office of Prieſthood: That he ſhould admoniſh the Prieſt, neither to appear at the Theatre, nor frequent the Tavern, nor follow any Calling or Employment that was diſhonourable and ſcandalous; and ſuch as were obſervant of his Directions he ſhould honour and promote them, but diſcard and expel the Refractory and Contumacious. This is plainly to ſay (and it is ſo much the more remarkable for its coming from the Mouth of an Adverſary) that the Chriſtian Clergy of thoſe Times were Men that lived by excellent Rules, diligent in their Employment, grave and ſober in their Deportment, charitable to the Indigent, and cautious and reſerved in their whole Converſation and Behaviour toward all Men. Which as it tended mightily to propagate and advance Chriſtianity in the World: So it was what Julian upon that Account could not but look upon with an envious Eye, and deſire that his Idol-Prieſts might gain the ſame Character; thereby to eclipſe the envied Reputation of the other, and reflect Honour and Luſtre upon his beloved Heathen Religion. We have the like Teſtimonies in Ammianus Marcellinus [b] and others, concerning the Frugality, Temperance, Modeſty and Humility of Chriſtian Biſhops in their own Times; which coming from the Pens of profeſt Heathens, and ſuch as did neither ſpare the Emperors themſelves, nor the Biſhops of Rome, who lived in greater State and Affluence, may well be thought Authentick Relations, and juſt Accounts of thoſe Holy Men, whoſe Commendations and Characters ſo ample nothing but Truth could have extorted from the Adverſaries of their Religion.

SECT. II. The Character of the Clergy from Chriſtian Writers.

THIS being ſo, we may the more eaſily give credit to thoſe noble Panegyricks and Encomiums, which ſome ancient Chriſtian Writers make upon the Clergy, and their Virtues and Diſcipline in general. Origen ſays [c], it was the Buſineſs of their Life to traverſe every corner of the World, and make Converts and Proſelytes to Godlineſs both in Cities and Villages: And they were so far from making a Gain hereof, that many of them took nothing for their Service; and those that did, took only what was necessary for their present Subsistence, though there wanted not Persons enough, who in their Liberality were ready to have communicated much more to them. St. Austin [d] gives the like good Character of the Bishops and Presbyters of his own Time, making them the chief Ornament of the Catholick Church, and extolling their Virtues above those of a Monastick Life, because their Province was more difficult, having to converse with all sorts of Men, and being forced to bear with their Distempers in order to cure them. He that would see more of this general Character, must consult the ancient Apologists, where he will find it interwoven with the Character of Christians in general; whose Innocence, and Patience, and Charity, and universal Goodness, was owing partly to the Institutions, and partly to the provoking Examples of their Guides and Leaders; who lived as they spake, and first trod the Path themselves, which they required others to walk in. Which was the thing that set the Christian Teachers so much above the Philosophers of the Gentiles. For the Philosophers indeed discoursed and wrote very finely about Virtue in the Theory, but they undid all they said in their own Practice. Their Discourses, as Minucius [e] observes, were only eloquent Harangues against their own Vices; whereas the Christian Philosophers expressed their Profession not in their Words or Habit, but in the real Virtues of the Soul: They did not talk great, but live well; and so attained to that Glory, which the Philosophers pretended always to be offering at, but could never happily arrive to. Lactantius [f] triumphs over the Gentile Philosophers upon the same Topick: And so Gregory Nazianzen [g], Tertullian [h], Cyprian [i], and many others, whose Arguments had been easily retorted, had not the Christian Teachers been generally Men of a better Character, and free from those Imputations which they cast upon the adverse Party.

[a] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 16. [b] Ammian. Marcel. lib. 27. [c] Origen. cont. Celſ. lib. 3. p. 116.

SECT. III. Particular Exceptions no Derogation to their general good Character.

SOME few Instances indeed, it cannot be denied, are to be found of Persons, who in these best Ages were Scandals and Reproaches to their Profession. The Complaints that are made by good Men will not suffer us to believe otherwise. Cyprian [k] and Eusebius [l] lament the Vices of some among the Clergy, as well as Laity, and reckon them among the Causes that moved the Divine Providence to send those two great fiery Tryals upon the Church, the Decian and the Diocletian Persecutions; thereby to purge the Tares from the Wheat, and correct those Enormities and Abuses, which the ordinary Remedy of Ecclesiastical Discipline through the Iniquity of the Times was not able to redress. The like Complaints are made by Chrysostom [m], Gregory Nazianzen [n], and St. Jerom [o], of some Ecclesiasticks in their own Times, whose Practices were corrupt, and dishonourable to their Profession. And indeed it were a Wonder if all Ages should not afford some such Instances of unsound Members in so great a Body of Men, since there was a Judas even among the Apostles. But then it is to be considered, that a few such Exceptions did not derogate from the good Character, which the Primitive Clergy did generally deserve: And the Faults of those very Men were the Occasion of many good Laws and Rules of Discipline, which the Provincial Synods of those Times enacted; out of which I have chiefly collected the following Account, which concerns the Lives and Labours of the ancient Clergy.

SECT. IV. An Account of some ancient Writers which treat of the Duties of the Clergy.

TO these the Reader may joyn those excellent Tracts of the Ancients, which purposely handle this Subject; such as St. Chrysostom's six Books de Sacerdotio; St. Jerome's second Epistle to Nepotian, which is called, De Vita Clericorum; and Gregory Nazianzen's Apology for his flying from the Priesthood; in which all the Duties of the Clergy are excellently described. Or if any one desires rather to see them exemplified in some living Instances and great Patterns of Perfection, which commonly make deeper Impressions than bare Rules, he must consult those excellent Characters of the most eminent primitive Bishops, which are drawn to the Life by the best Pens of the Age; such as the Life of Ignatius by Chrysostom; the Life of St. Basil and Athanasius by Gregory Nazianzen; the Life of St. Austin by Possidius; the Life of Gregory Thaumaturgus and Meletius by Gregory Nyssen; in all which the true Character and Idea of a Christian Bishop is set forth and described with this Advantage, That a Man does not barely read of Rules, but sees them as it were exemplified in Practice. The chief of these Discourses in both kinds are already translated into our own Language by other [p] Pens, and they are too prolix to be inserted into a Discourse of this nature, which proceeds in a different Method from them. I shall therefore only extract such Observations from them, as fall in with the publick and general Laws of the Church (of which I give an Account in the following Chapters) and leave the rest to the curious Diligence of the Inquisitive Reader.

[d] Aug. de Moribus Eccles. Cathol. c. 32. t. 1. p. 330. [e] Minuc. Octav. p. 110. [f] Lact. lib. 4. c. 23. lib. 3. c. 15. [g] Naz. Invect. 1. in Julian. [h] Tertul. Apol. c. 46. [i] Cyprian. de Bono Patient. p. 210. [k] Cypr. de Lapsis p. 124. [l] Euseb. lib. 8. c. 1. [m] Chrys. Hom. 30. in Act. [n] Naz. Carm. Cygn. de Episcopis. Tom. 2. [o] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. [p] See Bishop Burnet's Pastoral Care. c. 4. And Seller's Remarks on the Lives of the Primitive Fathers.

CHAP

CHAP. II.

Of Laws relating to the Life and Converſation of the Primitive Clergy.

SECT. I. Exemplary Purity required in the Clergy above other Men. Reaſons for it.

THE Laws of the Church which concerned the Clergy I ſhall for Diſtinction's ſake conſider under three Heads; ſpeaking, 1*ſt*, Of ſuch Laws as concerned their Life and Converſation. 2*dly*, Of ſuch as more particularly related to the Exerciſe of the ſeveral Offices and Duties of their Function. 3*dly*, Of ſuch as were a ſort of Out-guards or Fences to both the former. The Laws which related to their Life and Converſation, were ſuch as tended to create in them a Sublimity of Virtue above other Men; foraſmuch as they were to be Examples and Patterns to them; which if good, would be both a Light and a Spur to others; but if Bad, the very Peſts and Banes of the Church. It is Gregory Nazianzen's Reflection [a] upon the different ſorts of Guides which he had obſerved then in the Church. Some, he complains, did with unwaſhed Hands and prophane Minds preſs to handle the holy Myſteries, and affect to be at the Altar, before they were fit to be initiated to any ſacred Service. They looked upon the holy Order and Function, not as deſigned for an Example of Virtue, but only as a way of ſubſiſting themſelves; not as a Truſt, of which they were to give an Account, but a State of abſolute Authority and Exemption. And theſe Mens Examples corrupted the Peoples Morals, faſter than any Cloth can imbibe a Colour, or a Plague infect the Air; ſince Men were more diſpoſed to receive the Tincture of Vice than Virtue from the Example of their Rulers. In oppoſition to ſuch he lays down this as the firſt thing to be aimed at by all ſpiritual Phyſicians, that they ſhould draw the Picture of all manner of Virtues in their own Lives, and ſet themſelves as Examples to the People; that it might not be proverbially ſaid of them, That they ſet about curing others, while they themſelves were full of Sores and Ulcers. Nor were they to draw this Image of Virtue ſlightly and to a faint degree, but accurately and to the higheſt Perfection: Since nothing leſs than ſuch Degrees and Meaſures of Virtue were expected by GOD from the Rulers and Governours of his People: And then there would be hopes, that ſuch Heights and Eminencies would draw the Multitude at leaſt to a Mediocrity in Virtue, and aſſure them to embrace that voluntarily by gentle Perſuaſions, which they would not be brought to ſo effectually and laſtingly by Force and Compulſion. He urges farther [b] the Neceſſity of ſuch a Purity from the Conſideration of the Sacredneſs and Majeſty of the Function itſelf. A Miniſter's Office ſets him in the ſame Rank and Order with Angels themſelves; he celebrates GOD with Archangels; tranſmits the Church's Sacrifices to the Altar in Heaven, and performs the Prieſt's Office with Chriſt himſelf; he reforms the work of GOD's hands, and preſents the Image to his Maker; his Workmanſhip is for the World above: And therefore he ſhould be exalted to a divine and heavenly Nature, whoſe Buſineſs is to be as a GOD himſelf, and make others GOD's alſo. St. Chryſoſtom [c] makes uſe of the ſame Argument, That the Prieſthood, though it be exerciſed upon Earth, is occupied wholly about heavenly Things; that it is the Miniſtery of Angels put by the Holy Ghoſt into the Hands of mortal Men; and therefore a Prieſt ought to be pure and holy, as being placed in Heaven it ſelf in the midſt of thoſe heavenly Powers. He preſſes likewiſe the Danger and Prevalency of a bad Example [d]. Subjects commonly form their Manners by the Pattern of their Princes. How then ſhould a proud Man be able to aſſwage the ſwelling Tumors of others? Or an angry Ruler hope to make his People in Love with Moderation and Meekneſs? Biſhops are expoſed, like Combatants in the Theatre, to the View and Obſervation of all Men; and their Faults, tho' never ſo ſmall, cannot be hid: And therefore as their virtuous Actions profit many, by provoking them to the like Zeal; ſo their Vices will render others unfit to attempt or proſecute any thing that is Noble and Good: For which Reaſon their Souls ought to ſhine all over with the pureſt Brightneſs, that they may both Enlighten and Extimulate the Souls of others, who have their Eyes upon them. A Prieſt ſhould arm himſelf all over with Purity of Life, as with Adamantine Armor: For if he leave any part naked and unguarded, he is ſurrounded both with open Enemies and pretended Friends, who will be ready to wound and ſupplant him. So long as his Life is all of a Piece, he needs not fear their Aſſaults: But if he be overſeen in a Fault, though but a ſmall one, it will be laid hold of and improved to the Prejudice of all his former Virtues. For all Men are moſt ſevere Judges in his caſe, and treat him not with any allowance for being encompaſſed with Fleſh, or as having an Humane Nature; but expect he ſhould be an Angel, and free from all Infirmities. He cannot indeed (as the ſame Father argues [e] in another place) with any tolerable Decency and Freedom diſcharge his Office in puniſhing and reproving others, unleſs he himſelf be blameleſs and without Rebuke. The Prieſt's Office is a more difficult Province [f] than that of leading an Army, or governing a Kingdom, and requires an angelical Virtue. His Soul ought to be purer than the Rays of the [a] Naz. Orat. 1. Apologet. de Fuga. Tom. 1. p. 5. [b] Naz. lib. 3. c. 14. [e] Chryſ. de ſacerd. lib. 5. c. 3. [f] Chryſ. Ibid. p. 31. [c] Chryſ. de ſacerdot. lib. 3. c. 4. [d] Ibid. Ibid. lib. 6. c. 2.

Sun, that the Holy Spirit may never leave him desolate; but that he may be always able to say, I live, yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me. He there goes on to draw the Comparison [g] at large between the Clerical and the Monastick Life, and shews how much more difficult it is to take care of a multitude of Men immersed in secular Business, than of a single Person, that lives retired and free from Temptation. And upon the whole matter he concludes [h], that as God requires greater Purity in those that serve at his Altar, so he will exact a more ample Account of them, and more severely punish their Offences. By these and many other such like Arguments did those Holy Fathers try to raise both in themselves and others a just Sense of that universal Purity, which becomes the sacred Function.

SECT. II. Church-Censures more severe against them than any others.

AND to the Strength of these Arguments the Church added the Authority of her Sanctions; inflicting severer Penalties upon Offending Clergy-Men than any others. For whereas all other Offenders were allowed, by the Benefit of Publick Penance, to regain the Privileges of their Order: this Favour was commonly denied by the Church to such of her Sons among the Clergy, as were Notorious for any scandalous Crimes, whereby they became a Reproach to their Profession. For such Delinquents were usually Deposed from their Office, and sometimes Excommunicated also, and obliged to do Penance among the Laymen; but with this Difference, that though Repentance would restore them to the Peace of the Church, yet it would not qualify them to act in their Office and Station again; but they must be content thenceforth to communicate only as Laymen. Some Canons indeed did not oblige them to do Publick Penance in the Church, because they thought it Punishment enough to Degrade them: Others required them to submit to that Part of Discipline also. But still the Result and Consequence of both was the same, that such Persons for ever after were only to be treated in the quality of Laymen. Those called the Apostolical Canons are sometimes for the former way; for one of them [i] says, If a Bishop, Presbyter, or Deacon is taken in Fornication, Perjury, or Theft, he shall be Deposed, but not Excommunicated: For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not punish twice for the same Crime. I do not now stand to enquire whether there be any such Scripture as these Canons refer to, but only observe what was the Practice of the Greek Church when these Canons were made; which is also taken notice of in St. Basil's [k] canons, and those of Peter of Alexandria [l] and some others, which shew it to have been the customary Practice of their Churches. Yet for Simony [m] and some other [n] Crimes, the same Apostolical Canons order both Deposition and Excommunication. And in the African Church both Punishments were inflicted also for one and the same Crime, in the time of Cyprian, as appears from his Epistle [o] to Cornelius, where speaking of Novatus, who was guilty of Murder, in causing his own Wife by a Blow to miscarry, he says, For this Crime he was not only to be degraded, or expelled the Presbytery, but to be deprived of the Communion of the Church also. From whence we may collect the Severity of the ancient Canons against such Crimes of the Clergy in general, as were committed to the flagrant Scandal of the Church.

SECT. III. What Crimes punished with Degradation: viz. Theft, Murder, Perjury, &c.

HENCE also we may observe in particular, what sort of Crimes were thought worthy to be punished with Degradation, namely such as Theft, Murder, Perjury, Fraud, Sacrilege, Fornication and Adultery, and such like gross and scandalous Offences. For in this case they distinguished between Peccatum and Crimen, little Faults and Crimes of a more heinous Nature. For St. Austin observes [p], it was not all manner of Failings that hindered Mens Ordination at first; for if the Apostle had required that as a Qualification in Persons to be ordained, that they should be without Sin, all Men must have been rejected, and none ordained; since no Man lives without Sin: But he only requires that they should be Blameless in respect to criminal and scandalous Offences. And this was the Rule the Church observed in canvassing the Lives of her Clergy after Ordination, when they were actually engaged in her Service. It was not every lesser Failing or Infirmity that was punished with Degradation; but only Crimes of a deeper Die, such as Theft, Murder, Fraud, Perjury, Sacrilege, Fornication and Adultery. Concerning the last of which there are these two things farther observable in some of the ancient Canons. 1st, That if any Clergyman's Wife was convicted of Adultery, he himself was obliged to shew his Resentment and Detestation of the Fact by putting her away, under Pain of Deposition, if he continued to live with her. For so the Council of Neo-Cæsarea [q] words it: A Man whose Wife is evidently convicted of Adultery while he is a Layman, shall not be ordained: But if she commit Adultery after his Ordination, he ought to put her away; and if he cohabit with her, he may not retain her and his Ministry together. The [g] Ibid. lib. 6. c. 3. [h] Ibid. lib. 6. c. 10, & 11.

[i] Canon. Apost. c. 25. [k] Basil. Ep. Canon. c. 3. 32. 51.
[l] Pet. Alex. Ep. Canon. c. 10. ap. Bevereg. Pandect. Tom. 2.
[m] Canon. Apost. c. 29. [n] Ibid. c. 30, & 51. [o] Cypr. Ep. 49. al. 52. p. 97. Propter hoc se non de Presbyterio tantum, sed & Communicatione prohiberi pro certo tenebat, &c. [p] Aug. Tract. 41. in Joh. Tom. 9. p. 126. Apostolus Paulus, quando elegit ordinandos vel Presbyteros vel Diaconos, & quicunque ordinandus est ad Præposituram Ecclesiæ, non ait, si quis sine Peccato est; hoc enim si diceret, omnis homo reprobaretur, nullus ordinaretur; sed ait, si quis sine Crimine est, sicut est Homicidium, Adulterium, aliqua immunditia Fornicationis, Furtum, Fraus, Sacrilegium, & cætera hujusmodi. [q] Conc. Neo-Cæs. c. 8. ἐὰν ᾖ τὴν γυναῖκα μοιχευθῆ ὀφείλει ἀπολυσαι αὐτήν. ἐὰν δὲ συζῇ, ἃ δύναται ἔχειν ἡ ἐγχειρισθέισης αὐτῷ ὑπηρεσίας.

Council

Council of Eliberis [r] is ſtill more ſevere in the Caſe, denying Communion to ſuch Perſons even at their laſt Hour, who retained Wives guilty of Adultery; becauſe, ſays the Canon, they who ought to be Examples of good Converſation to others, do by this means teach others the Way to Sin. 2*dly*, The other thing to be obſerved is, That if a Biſhop neglected to inflict the Cenſures of the Church upon any of his Clergy, who were guilty of Fornication, he made himſelf liable to be depoſed: As Socrates [s] obſerves the Arians themſelves depoſed Macedonius Biſhop of Conſtantinople for this Reaſon among others, That he had admitted a Deacon to Communion, who had been taken in Fornication.

SECT. IV. Alſo Lapſing in time of Perſecution.

ANOTHER Crime which brought many Clerks under this kind of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure, was, that of Lapſing in time of Perſecution. In which caſe Repentance was allowed to reſtore them to the Peace of the Church as Laymen, if they pleaſed, but not to Officiate or Communicate as Eccleſiaſticks any longer. Thus Trophimus was treated in the time of Cornelius and Cyprian; he was admitted [t] to communicate as a Layman, but not to retain his Office of Prieſthood. And this, Cyprian ſays [u], was then the Rule at Rome and over all the World, If Biſhops or any other Lapſed in time of Perſecution, to admit them to do Penance in the Church, but withal to remove them from the Function of the Clergy and Honour of the Prieſthood: As the African Synod, in whoſe Name he writes to the Spaniſh Churches, determined in the caſe of Baſilides and Martial, two Spaniſh Biſhops, who when they had Lapſed, thought to qualify themſelves by Repentance to retain their Biſhopricks: But this, he tells them, was contrary to the Rule and Practice of the Univerſal Church. He repeats this in ſeveral other [w] Epiſtles, where he has occaſion to ſpeak of Perſons in the ſame unhappy Circumſtances with them. We find the ſame Order in the Canons of Peter [x] Biſhop of Alexandria, and the firſt Council [y] of Arles, where not only ſuch as fell by ſacrificing, or open Denial of their Faith, but alſo all Traditors are included in the Number of Lapſers, that is, all ſuch as either gave up the Bibles, or the Holy Veſſels of the Church, or the Names of their Brethren to the Perſecutors; and all ſuch who were of the Clergy, are for ever excluded from the Exerciſe and Benefit of their Order and Function. Such was the Diſcipline of the ancient Church in reference to thoſe Guides, who ſet their People an ill Example by their Apoſtacy in time of Perſecution: It was not thought fit to truſt them to be Guides and Leaders for the future. Though I do not deny, but that ſome Exceptions may be found to this general Rule, either when the Diſcipline of the Church was not ſo ſtrict, or when it was otherwiſe found more for the Benefit of the Church to reſtore Lapſers to their Honours, than to Degrade and Remove them wholly from them. For I have noted before, that both Lapſers, and Hereticks, and Schiſmaticks were ſometimes more favourably treated, when the Church thought ſhe might find her Account in ſhewing favour to them.

SECT. V. And Drinking and Gaming.

BUT to proceed with the Laws of the Church relating to other Miſdemeanors: as the Life of a Cergyman was a continual Attendance upon the Altar, and conſtantly to be employed in the Exerciſe of Divine and Heavenly things; ſo upon that Account the utmoſt Sobriety was required of him, together with a ſtrict care to ſpend his Time aright, and lay it out uſefully; ſo as might beſt anſwer the Ends of his Calling, and thoſe Spiritual Employments he was daily to be engaged in. And for this Reaſon Drinking and Gaming, thoſe two great Conſumers of Time, and Enemies of all noble Undertakings and generous Services, were ſtrictly prohibited the Clergy under the ſame Penalty of Deprivation. For ſo the Apoſtolical Canons [z] word it, a Biſhop, Preſbyter or Deacon, that ſpends Time in Drinking or Playing at Dice, ſhall either Reform, or be Depoſed. Where we may obſerve this Difference between this and the former Laws, that it does not make every ſingle Act of theſe Crimes ipſo facto Deprivation, but only Continuance therein without Reforming. And by Juſtinian's Law [a] the Penalty for Playing at Tables is changed from Deprivation to a Triennial Suſpenſion, and Intruſion into a Monaſtery for the Performance of Repentance. Some perhaps will wonder at the Severity of theſe Laws in prohibiting the Exerciſe of Tables under ſuch a Penalty: But their Wonder will ceaſe, when they are told, that it was equally prohibited to the Laity under Pain of Excommunication. For the Council of Eliberis [b] orders, That a Chriſtian playing at Dice or Tables ſhall not be admitted to the Holy Communion, but after a Year's Penance and Abſtinence, and his total Amendment. And there was good Reaſon for the Church to make ſuch a Law in thoſe Times, becauſe this kind of Gaming was prohibited both by the old and new civil [c] Law among the Romans, and many other Nations, of which the Reader may find a particular Account in our Learned Biſhop Taylor [d], together with the Reaſons of the Prohibition, viz. The Evils that commonly attended this ſort of Play, Blaſphemies, and Swearing, and Paſſion, and Lying, and Curſing, and Covetouſneſs, and Fraud, and Quarrels, and Intemperance of all ſorts, the Conſumption of Time, and Ruin of many Families; which Exceſſes had made it Infamous and Scandalous among all Nations. So that what was ſo univerſally prohibited at that time by the Laws of all Nations, the Church could not but in Decency prohibit by her own Laws to the Laity, and more eſpecially to the Clergy, to prevent Scandal, and obviate thoſe Objections, which might otherwiſe have juſtly been raiſed againſt her. Not that the Thing was ſimply Unlawful in itſelf, when uſed only as an Innocent Recreation; but the many evil Appendages that commonly attended the Uſe of it, had made it Scandalous, and conſequently Inexpedient; and the ſpending of Time upon it did much alter the Nature of it, and make it ſo much the more Unlawful.

[r] Conc. Eliber. c. 65. Si cujus Clerici Uxor fuerit mœchata, & ſciat eam Maritus mœchari, & eam non ſtatim projecerit, nec in fine accipiat Communionem: Ne ab his qui exemplum bonæ converſationis eſſe debent, videantur Magiſteria ſcelerum procedere. [s] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 42. [t] Cypr. Ep. 52. al. 55. ad Antonian. p. 106. Sic tamen admiſſus eſt Trophimus, ut Laicus communicet - - - non quaſi locum Sacerdotis uſurpet. [u] Id. Ep. 68. al. 67. ad Pleb. Hiſpan. p. 174. Fruſtra tales Epiſcopatum ſibi uſurpare conantur, &c. [w] Cypr. Ep. 55. al. 59. ad Cornel. p. 133. It. Ep. 64. al. 65. ad Epictet. [x] Petr. Alex. Ep. Canon. c. 10. ὅτε ὑ ἔπλαυσαν, ἐκ ἔτι δύνανται λειτουργεῖν. [y] Conc. Arelat. 1. c. 13. De his qui Scripturas Sanctas tradidiſſe dicuntur, vel Vaſa Dominica, vel Nomina Fratrum ſuorum, placuit nobis, ut quicunque eorum ex actis Publicis fuerit detectus, non verbis nudis, ab Ordine Cleri amoveatur. [z] Can. Apoſt. 42. κύβοις γολάζων ἢ μέθαις, ἢ παυσάσθω, ἢ καθαιρείσθω. [a] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 10. [b] Conc. Eliber. c. 79. Si quis Fidelis alea, id eſt, Tabula luſerit, placuit eum abſtinere: Et ſi emendatus ceſſaverit, poterit poſt annum Communione reconciliari.

and

SECT. VI. And Negotiating upon Uſury. The Nature of this Crime enquired into.

ANOTHER Crime for which a Clergyman was liable to be depoſed, was the taking of Uſury; which by the ancient Canons is frequently condemned as a Species of Covetouſneſs and Cruelty, and upon that ſcore ſo ſtrictly prohibited to the Clergy, who were rather to ſtudy to excel in the Practice of the contrary Virtues, Charity, Mercifulneſs, and Contempt of the World and all filthy Lucre. The Laws condemning this Vice are too many to be here tranſcribed: It will be ſufficient to repeat the Canon of the Council of Nice, which contains the Sum, and ſpeaks the Senſe of all the reſt. Now the Words of that Canon are theſe: Foraſmuch [e] as many Clerks following Covetouſneſs and filthy Lucre, and forgetting the Holy Scriptures (which ſpeak of the Righteous Man as one that hath not given his Money upon Uſury) have let forth their Money upon Uſury, and taken the uſual Monthly Increaſe: It ſeem'd good to this great and holy Synod, that if any one after this Decree ſhall be found to take Uſury, or demand the Principal with half the Increaſe of the Whole, or ſhall invent any other ſuch Methods for filthy Lucre's ſake, he ſhall be degraded from his Order, and have his Name ſtruck out of the Roll of the Church. The Reader will find the ſame Practice cenſured by thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [f], the Council of Eliberis [g], the firſt and ſecond of Arles [h], the firſt and third of Carthage [i], the Council of Laodicea [k], and Trullo [l], not to mention private Writers, Cyprian [m], Sidonius Apollinarius [n], St. Jerom [o], and many others. Nor need this ſeem ſtrange to any one, that Uſury ſhould be ſo generally condemned in the Clergy; ſince it is apparent that the Practice of it was no leſs diſallowed in the Laity: For the firſt Council of Carthage [p] condemns it in them both, but only makes it a more aggravating Crime in the Clergy. The Councils of Eliberis alſo [q] that orders Clergymen to be degraded for it, makes it an high Miſdemeanor in Laymen; which, if they perſiſted in the Practice of it after Admonition, was to be puniſhed with Excommunication. We are here therefore in the next Place to enquire into the Nature of this Practice, and the Grounds and Reaſons upon which it was ſo generally condemned both in Clergymen and Laymen. As to the Nature of the thing we are to obſerve that among the ancient Romans there were ſeveral ſorts or degrees of Uſury. The moſt common was that which they called Centeſimæ: The Council of Nice calls it [r] ἑκατοσὰ, and the Council of Trullo [s] uſes the ſame Word, which ſignifies the Hundredth Part of the Principal paid every Month, and anſwers to Twelve in the Hundred by the Year. For the Romans received Uſury by the Month, that is, at the Kalends or firſt Day of every Month. Whence St. Baſil [t] calls the Months the Parents of Uſury. And St. Ambroſe [u] ſays the Greeks gave Uſury the Name of τόκος, upon this Account, becauſe the Kalends bring forth one in the Hundred, and every Month begets new Uſury. And hence, as the Poet [w] acquaints us, it became a Proverb among the Romans, to ſay, A Man trembles, like a Debtor when the Kalends are a coming: Becauſe that was the Time of paying Intereſt. Now this ſort of Uſury is generally proſcribed by the Laws of the Church, becauſe it was eſteemed great Oppreſſion. Tho' the Civil Law allowed the Practice of it: For Conſtantine, An. 325, the ſame Year that the Council of Nice was held, publiſhed a Law, ſtating the Rules and Meaſures of Uſury, wherein [x] the Creditor is allowed to take this Centeſimal Uſury, or one in the Hundred every Month, and no more: For it ſeems the old Roman Laws granted a greater Liberty. Beſide this Regulation of Conſtantine; afterward a new Regulation was made, and it was only allowed in ſome certain Cases, as where the Creditors seemed to run some Hazard, as appears from the Laws of Justinian [y], where he settles the Business of Interest and Usury in his Code. For in Trajectitious Contracts, as the Law terms them, that is, when a Creditor lent Money, suppose at Rome, to receive Interest for it only upon condition of the Debtor's safe Arrival with it at Constantinople: Because in that case the Creditor ran a great hazard, he was allowed to receive a Centesimal Interest upon that account. 2dly, Another sort of Usury was that which the Canons call ἡμιολίαι, or Sescuplum, the whole and half as much more. St. Jerom takes notice [z] of this kind of Usury, and condemns it. For Men, he says, were used to exact Usury for the Loan of Corn, Wine, Oyl, Millet, and other Fruits of the Ground; lending ten Bushels in Winter, on condition to receive fifteen in Harvest, that is, the whole and half as much more. Which sort of Usury, being a very grievous Extortion and great Oppression, is condemned not only in the Clergy by the Councils of Nice [a] and Laodicea [b], under the Name of ἡμιολίαι; but also in Laymen by the Law of Justinian [c], which allows nothing above Centesimal Interest to be taken by any Person in any Case whatsoever. Though Justinian intimates that formerly the Laws allowed it. And it is evident from the Law of Constantine still extant in the Theodosian Code, which determined, That if any Creditor lent to the Indigent any Fruits [d] of the Earth, whether Wet or Dry, he might demand again the Principal, and half as much more by way of Usury: As if he lent two Bushels, he might require three. 3dly, Another sort of Usury is called by the Civil Law, Bessis Centesimæ, which is two thirds of Centesimal Interest, and the same as eight in the hundred. And this the Law allowed Masters [e] of Work-houses and other Tradesmen to take in their Negotiations with others. 4thly, All other Persons were only allowed to receive half the Centesimal Interest by the same Law of Justinian [f]: which is the same as six in the hundred. 5thly, Persons of Quality were bound to take no more but a third part of the Centesima [g], which is only four in the hundred. 6thly, and lastly, Interest upon Interest was absolutely forbidden [h] by the Roman Laws to all Persons in any Case whatsoever, as is evident from an Edict of Justinian's, which both mentions and confirms the ancient Prohibition of it by the Laws of the Emperors that were before him. So that several of these kinds of Usury being prohibited to the Laity in general by the Laws of the State, it was no Wonder that they should be more severely forbidden to the Clergy by the Laws of the Church. Then for the other sorts of Usury, which the State allowed, the Church had two Reasons for discouraging the Practice of them in the Clergy. 1st, Because Usury was most commonly exacted of the Poor, which the Church reckoned an Oppression of them, who were rather to be relieved by the Charity of Lending without Usury, as the Gospel requires. 2dly, The Clergy could not take Usury of the rich and trading part of the World, but that must needs engage them in secular Business and worldly Concerns, more than the Wisdom of the Church in those times thought fit to allow. And this I take to be the true State of the Case, and the Sum of the Reasons for prohibiting the Clergy the Practice of Usury in the Primitive Church. Usury was generally a great Oppression to the Poor, as the ancient Writers who speak against it [i] commonly complain: Or else it was thought to argue, and proceed from, a covetous and worldly Mind; which made Men forsake their proper Employment, and betake themselves to other Business, which was beside their Calling, and could not then be followed without some Reproach and Dishonour to it. Therefore Cyprian speaking of some Bishops, who were the Reproach of his Age, in enumerating their Miscarriages, joins all these things together; That they who ought to have been Examples and Encouragers to the rest, had cast off the Care of Divine Service [k] to manage Secular Affairs; and leaving their Sees, and deserting their People, they rambled into other Provinces, to catch at Business that would bring them in Gain: Mean while the poor Brethren of the Church were suffered to starve without Relief, whilst their Minds were set upon hoarding up Silver in abundance, and getting Estates by fraudulent Arts, and exercising Usury to augment their own Treasures. When Usury was ordinarily attended with such Concomitants as these, it was no wonder it should be utterly proscribed by the [y] Cod. Just. lib. 4. tit. 32. de Usuris. leg. 26. In trajectitiis autem Contractibus, vel specierum fœnori dationibus, usque ad Centesimam tantummodo licere stipulari, nec eam excedere, licet veteribus Legibus hoc erat concessum. [z] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. 18. p. 537. Solent in Agris frumenti & Milii, Vini & Olei, cæterarumque Specierum Usuræ exigi —— Verbi gratia, ut hyemis tempore demus decem modios, & in messe recipiamus quindecim, hoc est, amplius partem mediam. [a] Conc. Nic. c. 17. [b] Conc. Laod. c. 6. [c] Cod. Just. ubi supra It. Novel. 32, 33, 34. [d] Cod. Th. lib. 2. tit. 33. leg. 1. Quicunque fruges, aridas vel humidas, indigentibus mutuas dederint. Usuræ nomine tertiam partem superfluam consequantur: Id est, ut si summa crediti in duobus Modiis fuerit, tertium modium amplius consequantur. [e] Cod. Just. lib. 4. tit. 32. de Usuris. leg. 26. Illos, qui Ergasteriis præsunt, vel aliquam licitam negotiationem gerunt, usque ad Bessem Centesimæ, Usurarum nomine, in quocunque contractu suam stipulationem moderari. [f] Cod. Just. ibid. Cæteros omnes homines Dimidiam tantummodo Centesimæ Usurarum nomine posse stipulari. [g] Ibid. Jubemus Illustribus quidem Personis, sive eas præcedentibus, minime licere ultra Tertiam partem Centesimæ in quocunque contractu stipulari. [h] Cod. Just. lib. 4. tit. 32. leg. 28. Ut nullo modo Usuræ Usurarum à Debitoribus exigantur, veteribus quidem Legibus constitutum fuerat, &c.

[c] Digeſt. lib. 11. tit. 5. de Aleator. It. Cod. Juſtin. lib. 3. tit. 43. de Aleator. [d] Taylor Duct. Dubitant. lib. 4. c. 1. p. 776. [e] Conc. Nic. c. 17. [f] Can. Apoſt. c. 44. [g] Conc. Eliber. c. 20. [h] Conc. Arelat. 1. c. 12. Arelat. 2. c. 14. [i] Conc. Carthag. 1. c. 13. Carthag. 3. c. 16. [k] Conc. Laodic. c. 5. [l] Conc. Trull. c. 10. [m] Cypr. de Lapſis, p. 124. [n] Sidon. lib. 1. Ep. 8. [o] Hieron. in Ezek. cap. 18. [p] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 13. Quod in Laicis reprehenditur, id multo magis in Clericis oportet prædamnari. [q] Conc. Eliber. c. 20. Si quis etiam Laicus accepiſſe probatur Uſuras---- ſi in ea iniquitate duraverit, ab Eccleſia ſciat ſe eſſe projiciendum. Vid. Chryſoſt. Hom. 56. in Mat. [r] Conc. Nic. c. 17. [s] Conc. Trull. c. 10. Chryſoſt. Hom. 56. in Mat. [t] Baſil. in Pſalm. 14. T. 3. p. 137. φεύγειν τὰς μῆνας ὡς τόκων πατέρας. [u] Ambr. de Tobia c. 12. τόκους Græci appellaverunt Uſuras, eo quod dolores partus animæ Debitoris excitare videantur. Veniunt Kalendæ, parit ſors Centeſiman. Veniunt Menſes ſinguli, generantur Uſuræ. [w] Horat. lib. 1. Sat. 3. Odiſti & fugis, ut Druſonem debitor æris--- quum triſtes miſero venere Kalendæ. [x] Cod. Th. lib. 2. tit. 33. de Uſuris. leg. 1. Pro pecunia ultra ſingulas Centeſimas Creditor vetatur accipere.

[i] Vide Chrysost. Hom. 56. in Mat. Basil. Hom. in Psalm 14. p. 136, &c. [k] Cypr. de Lapsis. p. 123. Episcopi plurimi, quos & Hortamento esse oportet cæteris & Exemplo, Divina Procuratione contempta, Procuratores rerum sæcularium fieri, derelicta Cathedra, Plebe deserta, per alienas Provincias oberrantes, negotiationis quæstuosæ nundinas aucupari, esurientibus in Ecclesia fratribus non subvenire, habere Argentum largiter velle, fundos insidiosis fraudibus rapere, Usuris multiplicantibus fœnus augere.

Holy

Holy Fathers of the Church. Beſides St. Chryſoſtom [l] plainly intimates, that in his time all Senators and Perſons of Quality were abſolutely forbidden to take Uſury by the Laws of the Common-wealth. And that conſideration probably ſo much the more inclined the Fathers of the Church to forbid it to the Clergy, leſt they ſhould ſeem to be out-done by Men of a ſecular Life; and it might be objected to them, that the Laws of the Church in this reſpect were more remiſs than the Laws of the State.

SECT. VII. Of the Hoſpitality of the Clergy.

INDEED the Neceſſities of the Poor and Fatherleſs, and Strangers and Widows in thoſe early times, were ſo importunate and craving in every Church, that their Revenues would ſeldom anſwer all their Demands. The Church, as St. Auſtin ſays [m], had very rarely any thing to lay up in bank. And then it did not become a Biſhop to hoard up Gold, and turn away the Poor empty from him. They had daily ſo many Poor Petitioners, ſo many in Diſtreſs and Want continually applying to them; that they were forced to leave ſome in their Sorrows, becauſe they had not wherewith to relieve them all. Now in this caſe, where there was need of greater Charities, than they had Funds or Abilities to beſtow, there could be no room for Uſury, but with great Neglect and Uncharitableneſs to the Poor. And therefore inſtead of Lending upon Uſury, they were obliged to be exemplary in the Practice of the contrary Virtues, Hoſpitality and Charity; which the Ancients call Lending upon Divine Uſury, not to receive [n] One in the Hundred, but an Hundred for One from the hands of GOD. It was then one of the Glories of a Biſhop, St. Jerom tells us [o], to be a Provedore for the Poor; but a Diſgrace to the Holy Function, to ſeek only to enrich himſelf. And therefore he gives this Direction to Nepotian, among other good Rules which he preſcribes him, That his Table ſhould be free to the Poor and Strangers, that with them he might have Chriſt for his Gueſt. St. Chryſoſtom ſpeaks nobly [p] of his Biſhop Flavian upon the account of this Virtue: He ſays, his Houſe was always open to Strangers, and ſuch as were forced to fly for the ſake of Religion; where they were received and entertained with that Freedom and Humanity, that his Houſe might as properly be called, The Houſe of Strangers, as the Houſe of Flavian. Yea, it was ſo much the more his own, for being common to Strangers; for whatever we poſſeſs, is ſo much the more our Property for being communicated to our poor Brethren: There being no Place where we may ſo ſafely lay up our Treaſure, as in the Hands and Bellies of the Poor.

SECT. VIII. Of their Frugality and Contempt of the World.

NOW the better to qualifie them to perform this Duty, every Clergyman was required to lead a Frugal Life; that is, to avoid Profuſeneſs, as well in their own Private Concerns, as in giving great Entertainments to the Rich; which is but a falſe-named Hoſpitality, and a great Uſurper upon the Rights and Revenues of the Poor. We may judge of the Simplicity of thoſe Times by the Character which Ammianus Marcellinus the Heathen Hiſtorian [q] gives of the Italian Biſhops, as 'tis probable, from his own Obſervation: He ſays, Their ſpare Diet, and frugal way of Living, their cheap Clothing and grave Deportment, did recommend them to GOD and his true Worſhippers, as Perſons of pure and modeſt Souls. This made thoſe Country-Biſhops more honourable, in his Opinion, than if they had lived in the Riches, and State, and Splendor of the Biſhops of Rome. By a Canon of the 4th Council of Carthage [r] all the African Biſhops were obliged to live after this manner; not to affect rich Furniture, or ſumptuous Entertainments, or a ſplendid way of living, but to ſeek to advance the Dignity and Authority of their Order by their Faith and Holy Living. Some indeed were for that other ſort of Hoſpitality, for entertaining the rich, and eſpecially the Magiſtrates, on Pretence that they might keep an Intereſt in them, and be able to intercede with them for poor Criminals when they were condemned. But St. Jerom particularly conſiders and anſwers this Pretence in his Inſtructions to Nepotian. You muſt avoid, ſays he [s], giving great Entertainments to ſecular Men, and eſpecially thoſe that are in great Offices. For 'tis not very reputable to have the Lictors and Guards of a Conſul ſtand waiting at the doors of a Prieſt of Chriſt, who himſelf was Crucified and Poor; nor that the Judge of a Province ſhould dine more ſumptuouſly with you, than in the Palace. If it be pretended, that you do this only to be able to interceed with him for poor Criminals; there is no Judge but will pay a greater Deference and Reſpect to a frugal Clergyman, than a rich one, and ſhew

[l] Chryſ. Hom. 56. in Mat. τοὺ γᾶν οι ἀξιώματσιν ὄνλας, καὶ εἰς τὴν μογάλην τελεῖλας βελὴν, ἣν σύγκλητον καλέσιν, ὁ δέμις τοιάτοις κέρδεσιν κατδοχύεσ. Honorius, an. 397, publiſhed a Law which implies the ſame. Cod. Theod. lib. 2. tit. 33. de Uſuris, leg. 3. though by a following Law, an. 405, he allowed Senators half the Centeſimal Intereſt. [m] Aug. Serm. 49. de Diverſis, ſive de Vita Clericor. t. 10. p. 520. Enthecam nobis habere non licet. Non enim eſt Epiſcopi ſervare aurum, & revocare à ſe mendicantis manum. Quotidie tam multi petunt, tam multi gemunt, tam multi nos inopes interpellant; ut plures triſtes relinquamus, quicquod poſſimus dare omnibus, non habemus.

[n] Pet. Chryſolog. Serm. 25. p. 269. Uſura mundi centum ad unum, Deus unum accipit ad centum. Vid. Chryſoſt. Hom. 56. in Mat. 17. p. 507. ed. Commelin. [o] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Gloria Epiſcopi eſt pauperum opibus providere: Ignominia omnium ſacerdotum eſt propriis ſtudero Divitiis.

[p] Chryſ. Serm. 1. in Gen. tom. 2. p. 886. ed. Front. Ducæi.

[q] Ammian. lib. 27. p. 458. Antiſtites quoſdam Proviaciales tenuitas edendi potandique parciſſime. Vilitas etiam indumentorum, & ſupercilia humum ſpectantia, perpetuo Numini veriſque ejus Cultoribus, ut puros commendant & verecundos. [r] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 15. Ut Epiſcopus vilem ſupellectilem & Menſam ac victum pauperem habeat, & Dignitatis ſuæ auctoritatem Fide & Meritis vitæ quærat. [s] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian.

greater

greater Reverence to your Sanctity, than your Riches. Or if he be such an one, as will not hear a Clergyman's Intercessions but only among his Cups, I should freely be without this Benefit, and rather beseech Christ for the Judge himself, who can more speedily and powerfully help than any Judge. St. Jerom in the same place [t] advises his Clerk not to be over-free in receiving other Men's Entertainments neither. For the Laity, says he, should rather find us to be Comforters in their Mournings, than Companions in their Feasts. That Clerk will quickly be contemned, that never refuses any Entertainments, when he is frequently invited to them. Such were the ordinary Rules and Directions given by the Ancients for regulating the Hospitality and Frugality of the Clergy. But many Bishops and others far exceeded these Rules in transcendent Heights of Abstinence, and Acts of Self-denyal, freely chosen and imposed upon themselves, that they might have greater Plenty and Superfluities to bestow upon others. Gregory Nazianzen [u] gives us this Account of St. Basil, That his Riches was to possess nothing; to live content with that little which Nature requires; to despise Delicacies and Pleasures, and set himself above the Slavery of that cruel and sordid Tyrant the Belly: His most delicious and constant Food was Bread and Salt and Water; his Clothing but one Coat and one Gown; his Lodging upon the Ground; not for want of better Accommodations; for he was Metropolitan of Cæsarea, and had considerable Revenues belonging to his Church; but he submitted to this way of Living in imitation of his Saviour, who became Poor for our Sakes, that we through his Poverty might be made Rich. And therefore both the same Author [w], and the Church-Historians also [x] tell us, that when in the time of the Arian Persecution under Valens he was threatned by one of the Emperor's Agents, That unless he would comply, he should have all his Goods confiscated; his Answer was, That no such Punishment could reach him, for he was possess'd of nothing, unless the Emperor wanted his thread-bare Clothes, or a few Books, which was all the Substance he was Master of. St. Jerom gives the like Character of Exuperius Bishop of Tholouse, who made other Men's Wants always his own; and like the Widow of Sarepta, pinch'd and deny'd himself to feed the Poor, bestowing all his Substance upon the Bowels of Christ. Nay, such was his Frugality, that he ministred the Body of Christ in a Basket of Osiers, and the Blood in a glass Cup: But nothing, says our Author [y], could be more Rich or Glorious, than such a Poverty as this. It were easy to give a thousand Instances of the same nature in the Cyprians, the Austins, the Nazianzen's, the Paulinus's, and other such like generous Spirits of the Age they lived in; who contemned the World with greater Pleasure, than others could admire or enjoy it. But as such heights of Heroick Virtues exceeded the common Rule, they are not proposed as the strict Measures of every Man's Duty, but only to excite the Zeal of the Forward and the Good. It may be said of this, as our Saviour says of a parallel Case, All Men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given; but he that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

SECT. IX.
Whether the Clergy were anciently obliged by any Law to part with their Temporal Possessions.

SOME indeed would fain turn this prudential Advice into a Law, and attempt to prove that anciently the Clergy were under an Obligation to quit their Temporal Possessions, when they betook themselves to the Service of the Church. But this is to out-face the Sun at Noon-day. For as there is no just ground for this Assertion, so there are the plainest Evidences to the contrary. Among those called the Apostolical Canons [z], there is one to this purpose: Let the Goods of the Bishop, if he has any of his own, be kept distinct from those of the Church; that when he dies he may have power to dispose of them to whom he pleases, and as he pleases; and not receive damage in his private Effects upon pretence that they were the Goods of the Church. For perhaps he has a Wife, or Children, or Relations, or Servants: And it is but just before GOD and Man, that neither the Church should suffer for want of knowing what belonged to the Bishop, nor the Bishop's Relations be damaged by the Church, or come into Trouble upon that account, which would be to the Scandal and Reproach of the deceased Bishop. Many other Canons both of the Greek and Latin Church [a] are to the same Effect. Nor can it be pretended, that this is to be understood only of such Estates as they got in the Service of the Church. For St. Ambrose plainly intimates, that the Law left the Clergy in the full possession of their Patrimony, or Temporal Estates, which they had before. For he brings in some Male-contents among the Clergy thus complaining: What advantage [b] is it to me to be of the Clergy, to suffer Injuries, and undergo hard Labour, as if my own Estate would not maintain me? This implies, that Men of Estates were then among the Clergy. And indeed there was but one Case, in which any Clerk could be compelled to quit his Possessions, and that was when his Estate was originally tied to the Service of the Empire, of which I have given a full Account before. In all other Cases it was matter of free choice, and left to his liberty, whether he would diſpoſe of his Eſtate to any pious Uſe or not. Only if he did not, it was expected he ſhould be more generous in his Charities, and leſs burdenſome to the Church, his needs being ſupplied another way. Though neither was this forced upon him by any Law, but only urged upon Reaſons of Charity [c]; leaving him Judge of his own Neceſſities, and not forbidding him to have his Dividend in the Church, if in his own Prudence he thought fit to require it. Socrates [d] commends Cryſanthus a Novatian Biſhop upon this account, that having an Eſtate of his own, he never took any thing of the Church, ſave two Loaves of the Eulogiæ, or Offerings on Sunday; though he does not once intimate, that there was any Law to compel him to do ſo. As neither does Proſper, who ſpeaks moſt of any other againſt rich Men's taking their Portion in the Charities of the Church. He reckons it indeed [e] a diſhonourable Act and a Sin in them, becauſe it was to deprive others of the Church's Charity, who ſtood more in need of it: And he thinks, though a rich Clergyman might keep his own Eſtate without Sin, becauſe there was no Law but the Law of Perfection to oblige him to renounce it; yet it muſt be upon condition that he required none of the Maintenance of the Church [f]: But he only delivers this as his own private Opinion, and does not ſignify that there was then any ſuch ſtanding Law in the Church. In Africk they had a peculiar Law againſt Covetouſneſs in the time of St. Auſtin, which was, That if any Biſhop, Presbyter, or Deacon, or any other Clerk, who had no Eſtate when they were ordained, did afterward [g] purchaſe Lands in his own Name, they ſhould be impleaded as guilty of invading the Lord's Revenue, unleſs upon Admonition they conferred the ſame upon the Church. For in thoſe times the Church-Revenues being ſmall, no ones Dividend was more than a competent Maintenance: And therefore it was preſumed, that he who could purchaſe Lands in ſuch Circumſtances, muſt have been ſome way injurious to the Publick Revenues of the Church. But in the ſame Law it was provided, that if any Eſtate was left them by Donation or Inheritance, they might diſpoſe of it as they pleaſed themſelves: For the Church made no Rules, but only gave her Advice, in ſuch Caſes as theſe; exhorting her wealthy Clergy to greater degrees of Liberality, but not demanding their Eſtates to have them at her own Diſpoſal. On the other hand, when Clergymen, who had not viſible Eſtates of their own, and were ſingle Men, and had no poor Families to provide for, were buſily intent upon growing rich out of the Revenues of the Church: This was always eſteemed a ſcandalous Covetouſneſs, and accordingly proſecuted with ſharp Invectives by St. Jerom [h] and others of the ancient Writers. So much of the Laws of Charity, which concerned the ancient Clergy.

[t] Ibid. Facile contemnitur Clericus, qui sæpe vocatus ad prandium, ire non recusat. [u] Naz. Orat. 20. de Laud. Basil. p. 357. [w] Naz. Ibid. p. 349. [x] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 16. [y] Hieron. Ep. ad Rustic. Nihil illo ditius, qui Corpus Domini canistro vimineo, sanguinem portat in vitro.
[z] Can. Apost. c. 40. ἔστω φανερὰ τὰ ἴδια τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ πράγματα (εἰ γε καὶ ἴδια ἔχει) καὶ φανερὰ τὰ κυριακὰ, &c.
[a] Conc. Antioch. c. 24. Conc. Agathen. c. 48. Conc. Carth. 3. c. 49. [b] Ambr. Ep. 17. Quid mihi prodest in Clero manere, subire injurias, labores perpeti, quasi non possit ager meus me pascere.

SECT. X. Of their great Care to be Inoffenſive with their Tongues.

I might here give a Character of their Meekneſs, Modeſty, Gravity, Humility, and ſeveral other Virtues, which Nazianzen deſcribes in the Perſon of his own Father: But I ſhall but take Notice of two things more which concerned the Conduct of their Lives, and thoſe are the Laws relating firſt to their Words, and ſecondly to their Fame and Reputation. For their Words, they who were to teach others the moſt difficult part of humane Conduct, the Government of the Tongue, were highly concerned to be Examples to the People, as well in Word as Action. And to this Purpoſe the Laws were very ſevere againſt all manner of licentious Diſcourſe in their Converſation. The 4th Council of Carthage has three Canons together upon this Head; one of which [i] forbids Scurrility, and Buffoonery, or that fooliſh Talking and Jeſting with Obſcenity, which the Apoſtle calls, Βωμολοχία, under the Penalty of Deprivation. Another threatens [k] ſuch with Excommunication, as uſe to ſwear by the Name of any Creature. And a third Canon [l] menaces the ſame Puniſhment to ſuch as ſing at any Publick Entertainments. St. Jerom particularly cautions his Clerk againſt Detraction, becauſe of the Temptation he may lie under either to commit the Sin himſelf, or give way to it in others, by hearkning to and reporting falſe Suggeſtions after them. Which is much the ſame thing: For no Slanderer tells his ſtory to one [m] that is not willing to hear him. An Arrow, ſays he, never fixes upon a Stone, but often recoils back, and wounds him that ſhoots it. Therefore let the Detracter learn to be leſs forward and buſie, by your Unwillingneſs to hear his Detraction. St. Chryſoſtom [n] takes notice of this Vice, as moſt incident to Inferiors, whom Envy and [c] Vide Can. Apoſt. c. 41. Conc. Antioch. c. 25.

[d] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 12. [e] Proſper. de Vit. Contempl. lib. 2. c. 12. Noverint eſſe deformius, Poſſeſſores de Eleemoſynis pauperum paſci. [f] Ibid. Illi qui tam infirmi ſunt, ut Poſſeſſionibus ſuis renunciare non poſſint; ſi ea quæ accepturi erant, Diſpenſatori relinquant, nihil habentibus conferenda, ſine peccato poſſident ſua. [g] Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 49. Placuit, ut Epiſcopi, Presbyteri, Diaconi, vel quicunque Clerici, qui nihil habentes ordinantur, & tempore Epiſcopatus vel Clericatus ſui, agros vel quæcunque prædia nomine ſuo comparant, tanquam rerum Divinarum Invaſionis crimine teneantur obnoxii, niſi admoniti Eccleſiæ eadem ipſa contulerint. [h] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Nonnulli ſunt ditiores Monachi, quam fuerant Sæculares: Et Clerici qui poſſideant opes ſub Chriſto paupere, quas ſub locuplete & fallace Diabolo non habuerant: Ut ſuſpiret eos Eccleſia Divites, quos mundus tenuit ante Mendicos.
[i] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 60. Clericum Scurrilem, & verbis turpibus joculatorem, ab Officio detrahendum. [k] Ibid. c. 61. Clericum per Creaturas jurantem acerrime objurgandum. Si perſtiterit in vitio, excommunicandum. [l] Ibid. c. 62. Clericum inter Epulas cantantem ſupradictæ ſententiæ ſeveritate coercendum. [m] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. Neque vero illa juſta eſt Excuſatio, Referentibus aliis, injuriam facere non poſſum. Nemo invito auditori libenter refert, &c. [n] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 5. c. 8.

Emulation too often prompt to detract from the Authority and Virtues of their Biſhop; eſpecially when they are grown popular and admired for their own eloquent Preaching; then if they be of a bold and arrogant and vain-glorious Temper, their buſineſs is to deride him in private, and detract from his Authority, and make themſelves every thing by leſſening his juſt Character and Power. Upon this hint our Author alſo takes occaſion to ſhew, what an extraordinary Courage and Spirit, and how Divine and Even a Temper a Biſhop ought to have, that by ſuch Temptations, and a thouſand others of the like nature, he be not overwhelmed either with Anger or Envy on the one hand, or inſuperable Sorrow and Dejection of Mind on the other. St. Jerom recommends another Virtue of the Tongue to his Clerk, which is of great uſe in Converſation; and that is the keeping of Secrets, and knowing when to be ſilent, eſpecially about the Affairs of great Men. Your Office, ſays he, requires you to viſit the ſick, and thereby you [o] become acquainted with the Families of Matrons and their Children, and are entruſted with the Secrets of noble Men. You ought therefore to keep not only a chaſte Eye, but alſo a chaſte Tongue. And as it is not your Buſineſs to be talking of the Beauties of Women; ſo neither to let one Houſe know from you what was done in another. For if Hippocrates adjured his Diſciples, before he taught them, and made them take an Oath of Silence; if he formed them in their Diſcourſe, their Gate, their Meekneſs and Modeſty, their Habit, and their whole Morals; how much more ought we, who have the Care of Souls committed to us, to love the Houſes of all Chriſtians as if they were our own? He means, that the Clergy ſhould be formed to the Art of Silence, as carefully as Hippocrates taught his Scholars; that the Peace and Unity of Chriſtian Families might not be diſturbed or diſcompoſed by Revealing the Secrets of one to another; which it is certain no one will do, that has the Property which St. Jerom requires, of Loving every Chriſtian Family as his own.

SECT. XI. Of their Care to guard againſt Suſpicion of Evil.

2*dly*, As they were thus taught to be inoffenſive both in Word and Deed, and thereby ſecure a good Name and Reputation among Men; which was neceſſary for the due Exerciſe of their Function: So becauſe it was poſſible their Credit might be impaired not only by the Commiſſion of real Evil, but by the very Appearance and Suſpicion of it; the Laws of the Church upon this Account were very exact in requiring them to ſet a Guard upon their whole Deportment, and avoid all ſuſpicious Actions, that might give the leaſt Umbrage or Handle to an Adverſary to reproach them. It was not enough in this Caſe, that a Man kept a good Conſcience in the ſight of GOD, but he muſt provide or forecaſt for honeſt things in the ſight of Men. And this was the more difficult, becauſe Men are apt to be Querulous againſt the Clergy, as St. Chryſoſtom obſerves, ſome through Weakneſs and Imprudence, others through Malice, eaſily raiſing Complaints and Accuſations without any juſt ground, and difficultly hearkning to any Reaſons or Apologies that they can offer in their own Defence. But the more querulous and ſuſpicious Men are, the more watchful it becomes the Clergy to be againſt unjuſt Surmiſes, that they may cut off Occaſion from them that deſire Occaſion to accuſe or reproach them. To this End they are to uſe the utmoſt Diligence and Precaution to guard againſt the ill Opinions of Men, by avoiding all Actions that are of a doubtful or ſuſpicious nature. For, ſays St. Chryſoſtom [p], if the Holy Apoſtle St. Paul was afraid leſt he ſhould have been ſuſpected of Theft by the Corinthians; and upon that Account took others into the Adminiſtration of their Charity with himſelf, that no one might have the leaſt Pretence to blame him; how much more careful ſhould we be to cut off all Occaſions of ſiniſter Opinions and Suſpicions, however falſe or unreaſonable they may be, or diſagreeable to our Character? For none of us can be ſo far removed from any Sin, as St. Paul was from Theft: Yet he did not think fit to contemn the Suſpicions of the vulgar: He did not truſt to the Reputation, which both his Miracles and the Integrity of his Life had generally gained him: But on the contrary he imagined ſuch Suſpicions and Jealouſies might ariſe in the Hearts of ſome Men, and therefore he took care to prevent them; not ſuffering them to ariſe at all, but timely foreſeeing, and prudently foreſtalling them: providing, as he ſays, for honeſt things not only in the ſight of GOD, but alſo in the ſight of Men. The ſame Care and much greater ſhould we take, not only to diſſipate and deſtroy the ill Opinions Men may have entertained of us, but to foreſee afar off from what Cauſes they may ſpring, and to cut off beforehand the very Occaſions and Pretences from whence they may grow: Which is much eaſier to be done, than to extinguiſh them when they are riſen, which will then be very difficult, perhaps impoſſible: Beſides that their being raiſed will give great Scandal and Offence, and wound the Conſciences of many. Thus that holy Father argues upon this Point, according to his wonted manner, nervouſly and ſtrenuouſly, to ſhew the Clergy their Obligations to uſe their utmoſt Prudence to foreſee and prevent Scandal, by avoiding all Actions of a doubtful and ſuſpicious Nature. St. Jerom [q] gives his Clerk the ſame Inſtructions, to guard againſt Suſpicions, and take Care beforehand to miniſter no probable Grounds for raiſing any feigned Stories concerning him. If his Office required him to visit the Widows or Virgins of the Church, he should never go to them alone, but always take some other Persons of known Probity and Gravity with him, from whose Company he would receive no Defamation.

[o] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. [p] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 6. c. 9. [q] Hieron. Ep. 2, ad Nepot. Caveto omnes ſuſpiciones & quicquid probabiliter fingi poteſt, ne fingatur, ante devita, &c.

SECT. XII. Laws relating to this Matter.

NOR was this only the private Direction of St. Jerom, but a publick Rule of the Church. For in the third Council of Carthage this Canon was enacted, That neither Bishop [r] nor Presbyter, nor any other Clerk should visit the Widows and Virgins alone, but in the Company and Presence of some other of the Clergy, or some grave Christians. And in the 1st Council of Carthage [s] and the Council of Epone [t] there are Canons to the same Purpose.

SECT. XIII. An Account of the Agapetæ and συνείσακτοι, and the Laws of the Church made against them.

THE great Council of Nice made another Order upon the same Grounds, to prevent all sinister Opinions, that none of the unmarried Clergy, Bishop, Presbyter, Deacon, or any other [u] should have any Woman that was a Stranger, and not one of their Kindred, to dwell with them; save only a Mother, a Sister or an Aunt, or some such Persons, with whom they might live without Suspicion. They who hence conclude, that the Clergy were forbidden to cohabit with their Wives, which they had married before Ordination, are sufficiently exposed by Gothofred [w], as Ignorant of the true import of the original Word, συνείσακτος, which never denotes a Wife, but always a Stranger, in opposition to those of ones Kindred: And it is evident, the Canon was made not upon the account of the married Clergy, but the unmarried, to prevent Suspicion and evil Reports, that might easily arise from their familiar Conversation with Women that were not of their Kindred or near Relations. We may be satisfied of this from a Law of Honorius and Theodosius Junior, which was made in pursuance of the Nicene Canon, and is still extant in both the Codes [x], where first having forbidden the Clergy to cohabit with any strange Women, who by some were taken in under the Title and Appellation of Sisters; and having named what Persons they might lawfully entertain in their Houses, viz. Mothers, Daughters, and Sisters, because natural Consanguinity would prevent all Suspicion of these: Lest the not excepting of Wives, might seem to exclude them also, a particular Clause is added concerning them, That such as were married before their Husbands were Ordained, should not be relinquished upon Pretence of Chastity, but rather be retained upon that Account; it being but reasonable that they should be joyned to their Husbands, who by their Conversation made their Husbands worthy of the Priestood. The συνείσακτοι then, or Strangers, who in these Laws are forbidden to Cohabit with the Clergy, are not their lawful Wives, but others who were taken in under the Name of Sisters, as that Law of Honorius, and other ancient Writers [y] intimate they were called by those that entertained them. St. Jerom [z] and Epiphanius [a] tell us, they were also known by the Name of Agapetæ, ἀγαπηταὶ, that is, Beloved. So that all these several Names signifie but that one sort of Persons, most commonly called Strangers, Extraneæ, and συνείσακτοι, whose Conversation was suspicious, and therefore so often prohibited by the Laws of the Church. They were commonly some of the Virgins belonging to the Church, whom they that entertained pretended only to love as Sisters with a chast Love. But their manner of conversing was sometimes so very scandalous, that it justly gave great Offence to all sober and modest Persons; and had not the Church always interposed with her severest Censures, it must have made her liable to as great Reproach. For it appears from the Complaints of St. Cyprian [b], St. Jerom [c] and others, that the Practice of some was very intolerable: For they not only dwelt together in the same House, but lodged in the same Room, and sometimes in the same Bed; and yet would be thought Innocent, and called others uncharitable and suspicious, that entertained any hard thoughts of them. But the Church did not regard vain Words, but treated them as they justly deserved, as Persons that used a scandalous and indecent Liberty, and who were the very Pests and Plagues of the Church. Cyprian [d] commends Pomponius for excommunicating a Deacon, who had been found Guilty in this kind. And the Council of Antioch [e] alledged this among other Reasons for their deposing Paulus Samosatensis from his Bishoprick. In the following Ages, besides the Councils of Nice and Ancyra already mentioned, we meet with many other Canons made upon this Account, as in the se[r] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 25. Nec Episcopi aut Presbyteri soli habeant accessum ad hujusmodi fœminas, nisi aut Clerici præsentes sint, aut graves aliqui Christiani. [s] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 3. [t] Conc. Epaunens. c. 20. [u] Conc. Nicen. c. 3. μὴ ἔξεῖναι συνείσακτον ἔχειν, πλὴν εἰ μὴ ἄρα μητέρα, ἢ ἀδελφὴν, ἢ θείαν, &c. [w] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Theodos. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. leg. 44. [x] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. leg. 44. It. Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 3. leg. 19. Eum qui probabilem seculo Disciplinam agit, decolorari consortio sororiæ appellationis non decet. Quicunque igitur cujuscunque gradus Sacerdotio fulciuntur, vel Clericatus honore censentur, Extranearum sibi mulierum interdicta consortio cognoscant; has eis tantum facultate concessa, ut Matres, Filias, atque Germanas intra domorum suarum septa contineant. In his enim nihil sævi Criminis existimari Fœdus naturale permittit. Illas etiam non relinqui castitatis hortatur affectio, quæ ante sacerdotium maritorum legitimum meruere Conjugium. Neque enim Clericis incompetenter adjunctæ sunt, quæ dignos Sacerdotio viros sua Conversatione fecerunt. [y] Vid. Conc. Ancyr. c. 19. [z] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Eustoch. p. 138. [a] Epiphan. Hær. 63. Origen. n. 2. [b] Cypr. Ep. 6. al. 14. Ep. 7. al. 13. Ep. 62. al. 4. [c] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Eustoch. de Virgin. Servand. Unde in Ecclesias Agapetarum Pestis introiit? Unde sine nuptiis aliud nomen uxorum? Imo unde novum Concubinarum genus? Plus inferam: Unde Meretrices Univiræ? Quæ eadem domo, uno Cubiculo, sæpe uno tenentur & Lectulo; & suspicioses nos vocant, si aliquid existimamus. [d] Cypr. Ep. 62. al. 4. ad Pompon. [e] Epist. Syuod. ap. Euseb. lib. 7. c. 30.

cond

cond Council of Arles [f] the first, third and fourth Councils of Carthage [g], the Council of Eliberis [h], and Lerida [i], and many others, prohibiting the Clergy to entertain any Women, who were Strangers, and not of their near Relations, under Pain of Deprivation. The Intent of all which Canons was to oblige the Clergy not only to live innocently in the sight of GOD, but also unblameably, and without Suspicion and Censure in the sight of Men. It being more especially necessary for Men of their Function to maintain not only a good Conscience, but a good Name; the one for their own sake, the other for the sake of their Neighbours [k]: That Men might neither be tempted to Blaspheme the Ways of GOD, by suspecting the Actions of Holy Men to be impure, when they were not so; nor be induced to imitate such Practices, as they at least imagined to be evil: Either of which would turn to the Destruction of their Souls. So that it was Cruelty and Inhumanity, as St. Austin concludes, for a Man in such Circumstances to neglect and disregard his own Reputation.

SECT. XIV. Malevolent and Unavoidable Suspicions to be contemned.

BUT it might happen, that a Man after the utmost humane Caution and Prudence that could be used, might not be able to avoid the Malevolent Suspicions of ill-disposed Men: For our blessed Lord, whose Innocence and Conduct were both equally Divine, could not in his Converse with Men wholly escape them. Now in this case the Church could prescribe no other Rule, but that of Patience and Christian Consolation given by our Saviour to his Apostles. Blessed are ye when Men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil [*] against you falsly for my sake: Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in Heaven. When we have done, says St. Austin [l], all that in Justice and Prudence we could to preserve our good Name; if after that some Men notwithstanding will endeavour to blemish our Reputation, and blacken our Character, either by false Suggestions or unreasonable Suspicions; let Conscience be our Comfort, nay plainly our Joy, that great is your Reward in Heaven. For this Reward is the Wages of our Warfare, whilst we behave ourselves as good Soldiers of Christ, by the Armour of Righteousness on the Right Hand and on the Left, by Honour and Dishonour, by evil Report, and good Report. So much of the Laws of the Church, relating to the Life and Conversation of the ancient Clergy.

CHAP. III.

Of Laws more particularly relating to the Exercise of the Duties and Offices of their Function.

SECT. I. The Clergy obliged to lead a studious Life.

I COME now to speak of such Laws as more immediately related to their Function, and the several Offices and Duties belonging to it. In speaking of which, because many of these Offices will come more fully to be considered hereafter, when we treat of the Liturgy and Service of the Church, I shall here speak chiefly of such Duties as were required of them by way of general Qualification, to enable them the better to go through the particular Duties of their Function. Such was in the first Place their Obligation to lead a studious Life. For since, as Gregory Nazianzen [a] observes, the meanest Arts could not be obtained without much Time, and Labour and Toil spent therein; it were absurd to think, that the Art of Wisdom, which comprehends the Knowledge of things Human and Divine, and comprizes every thing that is Noble and Excellent, was so light and vulgar a thing, as that a Man needed no more but a Wish or a Will to obtain it. Some indeed, he complains [b], were of this fond Opinion, and therefore before they had well passed the time of their Childhood, or knew the Names of the Books of the Old and New Testament, or how well to read them, if they had but got two or three pious Words by Heart, or had read a few of the Psalms of David, and put on a grave Habit, which made some outward shew of Piety, they had the Vanity to think, they were qualified for the Government of the Church. They then talked nothing but of Samuel's Sanctification from his Cradle, and thought themselves profound Scribes, and great Rabbies and Teachers, sublime in the Knowledge of divine Things, and were for interpreting the Scripture not by the Letter, but after a spiritual way, propounding their own Dreams and Fancies, instead of the divine Oracles to the People. This, he complains, was for want of that Study and Labour, which ought to be the continual Employment of Persons who take upon them the Offices of the sacred Function. St. Chrysostom pursues this Matter a little farther, and shews the Necessity of continual Labour and Study in a Clergyman, from the Work and Business he has upon his Hand, each Part of which requires great Sedulity and Application. For first he ought to be qualified to minister suitable Remedies to the several Maladie [f] Conc. Arelat. 2. c. 3. [g] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 3. & 4. Carth. 3. c. 17. Carth. 4. c. 46. [h] Conc. Eliber. c. 27. [i] Conc. Ilerdens. c. 15. [k] Aug. de Bono Viduitat. c. 22. Tom. 4. Nobis necessaria est vita nostra, aliis Fama nostra, &c. [*] Mat. v. 11. [l] Aug. ibid. [a] Naz. Orat. 1. de Fuga. Tom. 1. p. 22. [b] Ibid. p. 21.

and Diſtempers [c] of Mens Souls; the Cure of which requires greater Skill and Labour, than the Cure of their bodily Diſtempers: And this is only to be done by the Doctrine of the Goſpel, which therefore required that he ſhould be intimately acquainted with every Part of it. Then again he muſt be able to ſtop the Mouths of all Gainſayers [d], Jews, Gentiles, and Hereticks, who had different Arts, and different Weapons to aſſault the Truth by: And unleſs he exactly underſtood all their Fallacies and Sophiſms, and knew the true Art of making a proper Defence, he would be in Danger not only of ſuffering each of them to make Spoil and Devaſtation of the Church, but of encouraging one Error, whilſt he was oppoſing another. For nothing was more common, than for ignorant and unskilful Diſputants to run from one Extream to another; as he ſhews in the Controverſies which the Church had with the Marcionites and Valentinians on the one hand, and the Jews on the other, about the Law of Moſes; and the Diſpute about the Trinity between the Arians and Sabellians. Now unleſs a Man was well skilled and exerciſed in the Word of GOD, and the true Art and Rules of Diſputation, which could not be attained without continual Study and Labour, he concludes, it would be impoſſible for him to maintain his Ground, and the Truth, as he ought, againſt ſo many ſubtle and wily Oppoſers. Upon this he inculcates [e] that Direction of St. Paul to Timothy, 1 Tim. iv. 13. Give Attendance to Reading, to Exhortation, to Doctrine; Meditate upon theſe things; give thy ſelf wholly to them, that thy Profiting may appear to all Men. 3*dly*, He ſhews [f] how difficult and laborious a Work it was to make continual Homilies and ſet Diſcourſes to the People, who were become very ſevere Judges of the Preacher's Compoſures, and would not allow him to rehearſe any part of another Man's Work, nor ſo much as to repeat his own upon a ſecond Occaſion. Here his Task was ſomething the more difficult, becauſe Men had generally nice and delicate Palates, and were inclined to hear Sermons as they heard Plays, more for Pleaſure than Profit: Which added to the Preacher's Study and Labour; who though he was to contemn both popular Applauſe and Cenſure, yet was he alſo to have ſuch a Regard to his Auditory, as that they might hear him with Pleaſure to their Edification and Advantage. And the more famed and eloquent the Preacher was, ſo much the more careful [g] and ſtudious ought he to be, that he may always anſwer his Character, and not expoſe himſelf to the Cenſures and Accuſations of the People. Theſe and the like Arguments does that holy Father urge, to ſhew how much it concerns Men of the ſacred Calling to devote themſelves to a ſtudious and laborious Life, that they may be the better qualified thereby to anſwer the ſeveral indiſpenſible Duties of their Functions.

SECT. II. No Pleas allowed as juſt Apologies for the contrary.

SOME indeed, St. Chryſoſtom ſays, were ready to plead even the Apoſtles Authority for their Ignorance, and almoſt value themſelves for want of Learning, becauſe the Apoſtle ſays of himſelf, that he was rude in Speech. But to this the Holy Father juſtly replies, That this was a Miſrepreſentation of the great Apoſtle, and vainly urged to excuſe any Man's Sloth and [h] Negligence in not attaining to thoſe neceſſary Parts of Knowlege which the Clerical Life required. If the utmoſt Heights and Perfections of Exotick Eloquence had been rigidly exacted of the Clergy; if they had been to ſpeak always with the Smoothneſs of Iſocrates, or the Loftineſs of Demoſthenes, or the Majeſty of Thucydides, or the Sublimity of Plato; then indeed it might be pertinent to alledge this Teſtimony of the Apoſtle: But rudeneſs of Stile, in compariſon of ſuch Eloquence, may be allowed; provided Men be otherwiſe qualified with Knowledge, and Ability to Preach and Diſpute accurately concerning the Doctrines of Faith and Religion; as St. Paul was, whoſe Talents in that kind have made him the Wonder and Admiration of the whole World; and it would be unjuſt to accuſe him of rudeneſs of Speech, who by his Diſcourſes confounded both Jews and Greeks, and wrought many into the Opinion that he was the Mercury of the Gentiles. Such Proofs of his Power of Perſwaſion were ſufficient Evidence, that he had ſpent ſome Pains in this way; and therefore his Authority was fondly abuſed to patronize Ignorance and Sloth, whoſe Example was ſo great a Reproach to them. Others again there were, who placed the Whole of a Miniſter in a good Life, and that was made another Excuſe for the want of Knowledge and Study, and the Art of Preaching and Diſputing. But to this St. Chryſoſtom [i] alſo replies, That both theſe Qualifications were required in a Prieſt; he muſt not only do, but teach the Commands of Chriſt; and guide others by his Word and Doctrine, as well as by his Practice: Each of theſe had their Part in his Office, and were neceſſary to aſſiſt one another, in order to conſummate Mens Edification. For otherwiſe, when any Controverſy would ariſe about the Doctrines of Religion, and Scripture was pleaded in behalf of Error; what would a good Life avail in this Caſe? What would it ſignify to have been diligent in the Practice of Virtue, if after all, a Man through groſs Ignorance and Unskilfulneſs in the Word of Truth, fell into Hereſy, and cut himſelf off from the Body of the Church? As he knew many that had done ſo. But admit a Man ſhould ſtand firm himſelf, and not be drawn away by the Adverſaries; yet when the plain and ſimple People, who are under his Care, ſhall obſerve their Leader to be baffled, and that he has nothing to ſay to the Arguments of a ſubtle Oppoſer, they will be ready ready to impute this not so much to the Weakness of the Advocate, as the Badness of his Cause: And so by one Man's Ignorance a whole People shall be carried headlong to utter Destruction; or at least be so shaken in their Faith, that they shall not stand firm for the future. St. Jerom gives also a smart Rebuke to this Plea, telling [k] his Clerk, That the plain and rustick Brother should not value himself upon his Sanctity, and despise Knowledge; as neither should the artful and eloquent Speaker measure his Holiness by his Tongue. For though of two Imperfections it was better to have a holy Ignorance, than a vicious Eloquence; yet to consummate a Priest both Qualifications were necessary, and he must have Knowledge as well as Sanctity to fit him for the several Duties of his Function. Thus did those Instructers plead against Ignorance in the Clergy, and urge them with proper Arguments to engage them upon a studious Life, which was the only Way to furnish them with sufficient Abilities to discharge many weighy Duties of their Function.

[c] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 4. c. 3. [d] Ibid. lib. 4. c. 4. [e] Chryſ. Ibid. lib. 4. c. 8. [f] Ibid. lib. 5. c. 1. [g] Ibid. lib. 5. c. 5. [h] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 4. c. 6. [i] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 4. c. 8, & 9.

SECT. III. Their chief Studies to be the Holy Scriptures, and the approved Writers and Canons of the Church.

BUT it was not all sorts of Studies that they equally recommended, but chiefly the Study of the Holy Scriptures; as being the Fountains of that Learning, which was most proper for their Calling, and which upon all Occasions they were to make Use of. For as St. Chrysostom observes [l], in the way of Administring spiritual Physick to the Souls of Men, the Word of GOD was instead of every thing that was used in the Cure of Bodily Distempers. It was Instrument, and Diet, and Air; it was instead of Medicine, and Fire, and Knife; if Causticks or Incisions were necessary, they were to be done by this: And if this did not succeed, it would be in vain to try other Means. This was it that was to raise and comfort the Dejected Soul, and take down and asswage the swelling Tumors and Presumptions of the Confident. By this they were both to cut off what was superfluous, and supply what was wanting, and do every thing that was necessary to be done in the Cure of Souls. By this all Hereticks and Aliens were to be convinced, and all the Plots of Satan to be countermined: And therefore it was necessary that the Ministers of GOD should be very diligent in studying the Scriptures, that the Word of Christ might dwell richly in them. This was necessary to qualify them especially for Preaching; since, as St. Jerom rightly notes [m], the best Commendation of a Sermon was to have it seasoned well with Scripture rightly applied. Besides, the Custom of Expounding the Scripture occasionally many times as it was read, required a Man to be well acquainted with all the Parts of it, and to understand both the Phrase and Sense, and Doctrine, and Mysteries of it, that he might be ready upon all Occasions to discourse pertinently and usefully upon them. And to this purpose some Canons [n] appointed, that their most vacant Hours, the Times of Eating and Drinking, should not pass without some Portion of Scripture read to them; partly to exclude all other trifling and unnecessary Discourse, and partly to afford them proper Themes and Subjects to exercise themselves upon to Edification and Advantage. St. Jerom commends his Friend Nepotian for this, that at all Feasts [o] he was used to propound something out of the Holy Scripture, and entertain the Company with some useful Disquisition upon it. And next to the Scriptures he employed his Time upon the Study of the best Ecclesiastical Authors, whom by continual Reading and frequent Meditations he had so treasured up in the Library of his Heart, that he could repeat their Words upon any proper Occasion, saying, Thus spake Tertullian, thus Cyprian, so Lactantius, after this Manner Hillary, so Minutius Felix, so Victorinus, these were the Words of Arnobius, and the like. But among Ecclesiastical Writings, the Canons of the Church were always reckoned of greatest Use; as containing a summary Account not only of the Church's Discipline and Doctrine, and Government, but also Rules of Life and Moral Virtues: Upon which account, as some Laws directed that the Canons should be read over at every Man's Ordination: so others required the [p] Clergy afterward to make them part of their constant Study together with the Holy Scripture. For the Canons were then a sort of Directions for the Pastoral Care, and they had this Advantage of any Private Directions, that they were the Publick Voice and Rubricks of the Church, and so much the more carefully to be read upon that Account. In After-ages in the Time of Charles the Great, we find some Laws obliging the Clergy [q] to read, together with the Canons, Gregory's Book de Cura Pastorali.

SECT. IV. How far the Study of Heathen or Heretical Books was allow'd.

AS to other Books and Writings, they were more cautious and sparing in the Study and Use of them. Some Canons [r] forbad a Bishop to read Heathen Authors: Nor would they allow him to read Heretical Books, but only upon Necessity, that [k] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Nec Rusticus & tamen simplex Frater ideo se sanctum putet, si nihil noverit: Nec peritus & eloquens in lingua æstimet sanctitatem. Multoque melius est è duobus imperfectis Rusticitatem sanctam habere, quam Eloquentiam peccatricem. [l] Chrys. de Sacerd. lib. 4. c. 3, & 4.

[m] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. Sermo Presbyteri scripturarum Lectione conditus sit. Nolo te Declamatorem esse, & Rabulam, garrulumque sine ratione, sed Mysteriorum peritum, &c. [n] Conc. Tolet. 3. c. 7. Quia solent crebro mensis otiosæ Fabulæ interponi, in omni sacerdotali Convivio Lectio scripturarum Divinarum misceatur: per hoc enim & animæ ædificantur in bonum, & Fabulæ non necessariæ prohibentur. [o] Hieron. Epitaph. Nepot. Ep. 3. ad Heliodor. sermo ejus & (leg. per) omne Convivium de Scripturis aliquid proponere, &c. [p] Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 24. Sciant Sacerdotes scripturas sanctas, & Canones meditentur------ ut ædificent cunctos tam Fidei scientia, quam operum Disciplina.

[q] Concil. Turon. c. 3. Concil. Cabillon. c. 1.

[r] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 16. Ut Episcopus Gentilium Libros non Legat; Hæreticorum autem pro Necessitate & tempore.

is,

is, when there was Occaſion to confute them, or to caution others againſt the Poiſon of them. But the Prohibition of Heathen Learning, though it ſeem to be more peremptory, was to be underſtood likewiſe with a little Qualification. For Men might have very different Views and Deſigns in reading Heathen Authors. Some might read them only for Pleaſure, and make Buſineſs of that Pleaſure, to the Neglect of Scripture and more uſeful Learning: And all ſuch were highly to be condemned. St. Jerom [s] ſays of theſe, that when the Prieſts of GOD read Plays inſtead of the Goſpels, and wanton Bucolicks inſtead of the Prophets, and loved to have Virgil in their Hands rather than the Bible: They made a Crime of Pleaſure, and turned the Neceſſity of Youthful Exerciſe into a voluntary Sin. Others could not reliſh the Plain and Unaffected Stile of Scriptures, but converſed with Heathen Orators to bring their Language to a more Polite or Attick Dialect. And theſe alſo came under the Cenſures of the Church. It is remarkable what Sozomen [t] tells us of Triphyllius a Cyprian Biſhop, (who was one of the nice and delicate Men, who thought the Stile of Scripture not ſo elegant as it might be made) that having occaſion in a Diſcourſe before Spiridion, and ſome other Cyprian Biſhops, to cite thoſe Words of our Saviour, ἆρον σὸ τὸ κράββατον σὺ περιπάτει, Take up thy Bed and walk, he would not uſe the word κράββατον, but inſtead of it put σκίμποδα, as being a more Elegant word in his Opinion. To whom Spiridion with an holy Indignation and Zeal replied, Art thou better than he that ſaid κράββατον, that thou ſhouldeſt be aſhamed to uſe his Words? Thereby admoniſhing him to be a little more Modeſt, and not to give Humane Eloquence the Preference before the Holy Scriptures. Another ſort of Men converſed with Heathen Authors rather than the Scriptures, becauſe they thought them more for their turn, to Arm them with Sophiſtry to impoſe their Errors upon the Simplicity of others. As the Anonymous Author in Euſebius [u] who writes againſt the Theodotian Hereticks, obſerves of the leading Men of that Party, that leaving the Holy Scriptures, they generally ſpent their Time in Euclid and Ariſtotle, Theophraſtus and Galen; uſing the Quirks and Sophiſms of Infidel Writers to palliate their Hereſy, and corrupt the Simplicity of the Chriſtian Faith. Now in all theſe caſes the Reading of Heathen Authors for ſuch unworthy Ends, was very diſallowable, becauſe it was always done with a manifeſt Neglect and Contempt of the Holy Scriptures, and therefore upon ſuch Grounds deſervedly forbidden by the Canons of the Church. But then on the other hand there were ſome caſes, in which it was very allowable to read Gentile Authors, and the Church's Prohibition did not extend to theſe. For ſometimes it was neceſſary to read them, in order to confute and expoſe their Errors, that others might not be infected thereby. Thus St. Jerom obſerves of Daniel [w], That he was taught in the Knowledge of the Chaldæans, and Moſes in all the Wiſdom of the Egyptians: Which it was no Sin to learn, ſo long as they did not learn it to follow it, but to cenſure and refute it. St. Ambroſe [x] ſays, he read ſome Books that others might not read them; he read them to know their Errors, and caution others againſt them. This was one Reaſon, why ſometimes Heathen Writers might be read by Men of Learning, in order to ſet a Mark upon them. Another Reaſon was, That many of them were Uſeful and Subſervient to the cauſe of Religion, either for Confirming the Truth of the Scriptures, and the Doctrines of Chriſtianity, or for Expoſing and Refuting the Errors and Vanities of the Heathen themſelves. Thus St. Jerom [y] obſerves, that both the Greek and Latin Hiſtorians, ſuch as Diodorus Siculus, Polybius, Trogus Pompeius and Livy, are of great uſe as well to explain as confirm the Truth of Daniel's Prophecies. And St. Auſtin [z] ſays the ſame of the Writings of Orpheus and the Sibyls, and Hermes, and other Heathen Philoſophers, that as they ſaid many things that were true both concerning GOD, and the Son of GOD, they were in that Reſpect very ſerviceable in Refuting the Vanities of the Gentiles. Upon which Account not only St. Auſtin and St. Jerom, but moſt of the ancient Writers of the Church were uſually well verſed in the Learning of the Gentiles, as every one knows that knows any thing of them. St. Jerom in one ſhort Epiſtle [a] mentions the greateſt Part of thoſe that lived before his own Time, both Greeks and Latins, and ſays of them all in general, that their Books are ſo filled with the Sentences and Opinions of Philoſophers, that it is hard to ſay which is moſt to be admired, their ſecular Learning, or their Knowledge in the Scriptures. And herein is compriſed the plain State of this Matter: The Clergy were obliged in the firſt Place to be very diligent in Studying the Scriptures, and after them the Canons, and approved Writers of the Church, according to Mens Abilities, Capacities, and Opportunities: For the ſame Meaſures could not be exacted of all. Beyond this, as there was no Obligation on them to read Human Learning, so there was no absolute Prohibition of it; but where it could be made to minister as an Handmaid to Divinity, and not usurp or incroach upon it, there it was not only allowed, but commended and encouraged; and it must be owned, that though the Abuse of secular Learning does sometimes great harm, yet the Study of it rightly applied did very great Service to Religion in the Primitive Ages of the Church.

[s] Hieron. Ep. 146. ad Damaſum de Filio Prodigo. Tom. 3. p. 129. Sacerdotes Dei omiſſis Evangeliis & Prophetis, videmus Comœdias legere, amatoria Bucolicorum verſuum verba canere, Virgilium tenere; & id quod in pueris neceſſitatis eſt, crimen in ſe facere Voluptatis. [t] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 11. [u] Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 28. [w] Hieron. Com. in Dan. c. 1. Nunquam acquieſcerent diſcere quod non licebat. Diſcunt autem non ut ſequantur, ſed ut judicent atque convincant. [x] Ambroſ. Procem. in Luc. Evang. Legimus aliqua, ne legantur; legimus, ne ignoremus; legimus, non ut teneamus, ſed ut repudiemus. [y] Hieron. Prolog. in Daniel. Ad intelligendas extremas partes Danielis, multiplex Græcorum Hiſtoria neceſſaria eſt, &c. Et ſi quando cogimur Literarum Sæcularium recordari, & alique ex his dicere quæ olim omiſimus; non noſtræ eſt voluntatis, ſed ut ira dicam, graviſſimæ neceſſitatis: Ut probemus ea quæ à Sanctis Prophetis ante multa Sæcula prædicta ſunt, tam Græcorum quam Latinorum & aliarum Gentium literis contineri. [z] Aug. contr. lib. 12. c. 15. Sibyllæ & Orpheus, & neſcio quis Hermes, & ſi qui alii Vates, vel Theologi, vel Sapientes, vel Philoſophi Gentium de Filio Dei, aut de Patre Deo vera prædixiſſe ſeu dixiſſe perhibentur; valet quidem aliquid ad Paganorum vanitatem revincendam. [a] Hieron. Ep. 84. ad Magnum. In tantum philoſophorum Doctrinis atque ſententiis ſuos referciunt Libros, ut neſcias quid in illis primum admirari debeas, Eruditionem ſæculi, an ſcientiam Scripturarum.

not

SECT. V. Of their Piety and Devotion in their Publick Addresses to God.

FROM their Private Studies pass we on next to view them in their more Publick Capacities, as the People's Orators to GOD, and GOD's Ambassadors to the People: In regard of which Offices and Character, I have shewed before [*] they were esteemed a sort of Mediators in a qualified Sense between GOD and Men. In all their Addresses to GOD as the People's Orators, their great Care was to offer all their Sacrifices and Oblations of Prayer and Thanksgiving in such a Rational, Decent, and becoming Way, as best suited the Nature of the Action; that is, with all that Gravity and Seriousness, that Humility and Reverence, that Application of Mind and Intenseness and Fervency of Devotion, as both became the Greatness of that Majesty to whom they addressed, and was proper for raising suitable Affections in the People. This is the true Meaning of that Famous controverted Passage in Justin Martyr's 2d Apology, where describing the Service of the Church, and the manner of Celebrating the Eucharist, he says, The Bishop sent up Prayers and Praises, ὅση δύναμις, [b], with the utmost of his Abilities to GOD. Some misconstrue this Passage, and interpret the Abilities of the Minister officiating so as if they meant no more but his Invention, Expression, or the like; making it by such a Gloss to become an Argument against the Antiquity of Publick Liturgies, or set Forms of Prayer; whereas indeed it signifies here a quite different thing, viz. that Spiritual Vigour, or Intenseness and Ardency of Devotion, with which the Minister offered up the Sacrifices of the Church to GOD; being such Qualifications as are necessary to make our Prayers and Praises acceptable unto him, who requires them to be presented with all our Soul and Might; which may be done in set Forms, as well as any other way: And so Gregory Nazianzen and Justin Martyr himself use the Phrase, ὅση δύναμις, where they speak of set Forms of Praising and serving GOD; of which more hereafter in its proper Place. St. Chrysostom is very earnest [c] in recommending this same Duty to the Priests of GOD, under the Name of σωφρὴ and δι' ἀδείαι, Care and Reverence. With what exact Care, says he, ought he to behave himself, who goes in the Name of a whole City, nay, in the Name of the whole World, as their Orator and Ambassador to intercede with GOD for the Sins of all? But especially when he invocates the Holy Ghost, and offers up τὴν φρικωδεστάτην θυσίαν, the Tremendous Sacrifice of the Altar: With what Purity, with what Reverence and Piety should his Tongue utter forth those Words? whilst the Angels stand by him, and the whole Order of the Heavenly Powers cries aloud, and fills the Sanctuary in Honour of him, who is represented as Dead and lying upon the Altar. Thus that Holy Father argues with a Warmth and Zeal suitable to the Subject, and such as is proper to raise our Devotion, and kindle our Affections into an Holy Flame, whenever we present the Supplications of the Church on Earth to the Sacred Majesty of Heaven.

SECT. VI. The Censure of such as neglected the Daily Service of the Church.

AND this Ardency of Devotion, was continually to be cherish'd and preserved. To which purpose the Church had her daily Sacrifices, wherever it was possible to have them; And on these every Clergyman was indispensibly obliged to attend; and that under Pain of Suspension and Deprivation, whether it was his Duty to officiate or not. For so the 1st Council of Toledo determined for the Spanish Churches, That if any Presbyter or Deacon, or other Clerk, should be in any City or Country where there was a Church, and did not come to Church to the daily Sacrifice or Service [d], he should no longer be reputed one of the Sacred Function. The Council of Agde orders such to be reduced to the Communion of Strangers [e], which at least implies Suspension from their Office. And the Law of Justinian punishes them with Degradation [f], because of the Scandal they give to the Laity by such Neglect or Contempt of Divine Service. So careful were the ancient Law-givers of the Church to cut off all Indecencies and Abuses of this Nature, and make the Clergy provoking Examples of Piety to the People.

SECT. VII. Rules about Preaching to Edification.

NEXT to their Office in addressing GOD as the People's Orators, we are to view them as GOD's Ambassadors, addressing themselves in his Name to the People. Which they did by publick Preaching and private Application; in both which their great Care was to perform the Duty of Watchmen over GOD's Flock, and of good Stewards over his Household. In their Preaching their only Aim was to be, the Edification of the People. To which purpose the great Masters of Rules in this kind, Gregory Nazianzen, Chrysostom, and St. Jerom lay down these few Directions. 1*st*, That the Preacher be careful to make choice of an Useful Subject. Gregory Nazianzen [g] ſpecifies the Rule in ſome particular Inſtances, ſuch as the Doctrine of the World's Creation, and the Soul of Man; the Doctrine of Providence, and the Reſtauration of Man; the Two Covenants; the firſt and ſecond Coming of Chriſt, his Incarnation, Sufferings and Death; the Reſurrection, and End of the World, and future Judgment, and different Rewards of Heaven and Hell; together with the Doctrine of the Bleſſed Trinity, which is the Principal Article of the Chriſtian Faith. Such Subjects as theſe are proper for Edification, to build up Men in Faith and Holineſs, and the Practice of all Piety and Virtue. But then, 2*dly*, They muſt be treated on in a ſuitable way; not with too much Art or Loftineſs of Stile, but with great Condeſcention to Mens Capacities, who muſt be fed with the Word as they are able to bear it. This is what Gregory Nazianzen ſo much commends [h] in Athanaſius, when he ſays, He condeſcended and ſtoop'd himſelf to the mean Capacities, whilſt to the Acute his Notions and Words were more Sublime. St. Jerom alſo obſerves [i] upon this Head, that a Preacher's Diſcourſe ſhould always be Plain, Intelligible, and Affecting; and rather adapted to excite Mens Groans and Tears by a Senſe of their Sins, than their Admiration and Applauſe, by ſpeaking to them what neither they, nor he himſelf perhaps, do truly underſtand. For it is ignorant and unlearned Men chiefly, that affect to be admired for their ſpeaking above the Capacities of the Vulgar. A bold Forehead often interprets what he himſelf does not underſtand; and yet he has no ſooner perſuaded others to they know not what, but he aſſumes to himſelf the Title of Learning upon it: When yet there is nothing ſo eaſy as to deceive the Ignorant Multitude, who are always moſt prone to admire what they do not underſtand. Upon this Account St. Chryſoſtom ſpends almoſt a whole Book in cautioning the Chriſtian Orator againſt this Failing; that he ſhould not be intent on Popular Applauſe, but with a generous Mind [k] raiſe himſelf above it; ſeeking chiefly to advantage his Hearers, and not barely to Delight and Pleaſe them. To this purpoſe, he concludes, it would be neceſſary for him to deſpiſe both the Applauſes and Cenſures of Men, and all other things that might tempt him rather to Flatter his Hearers, than Edifie them. In a Word, his chief End [l] in all his Compoſures ſhould be to pleaſe GOD: And then if he alſo gained the Praiſe of Men, he might receive it; if not, he needed not to court it, nor torment himſelf that it was deny'd him. For it would be Conſolation enough for all his Labours, that in adapting his Doctrine and Eloquence he had always ſought to pleaſe his GOD. 3*dly*, A third Rule given in this Caſe, was, That Men ſhould apply their Doctrine and Spiritual Medicines according to the emergent and moſt urgent Neceſſities of their Hearers. Which was the moſt proper Duty of a Watchman, to perceive with a quick Eye where the greateſt Danger lay; which was Mens weakeſt and moſt unguarded Side; and then apply ſuitable Remedies to their Maladies and Diſtempers. St. Chryſoſtom in ſpeaking of this Part of a Miniſter's Duty, ſays, He ſhould be νηφάλιος καὶ διορατικὸς, Watchful [m] and Perſpicacious, and have a thouſand Eyes about him, as Living not for himſelf alone, but for a Multitude of People. To live retired in a Cell is the Buſineſs of a Monk; but the Duty of a Watchman is to converſe among Men of all Degrees and Callings; to take care of the Body of Chriſt, the Church, and have regard both to its Health and Beauty; curiouſly obſerving, leſt any Spot or Wrinkle or other Defilement ſhould ſully the Grace and Comlineſs of it. Now this obliged Spiritual Phyſicians to apply their Medicines, that is, their Doctrines, as the Maladies of their Patients chiefly required; to be moſt earneſt and frequent in encountering thoſe Errors and Vices which were moſt reigning, or which Men were moſt in danger of being infected by. And this is the Reaſon, why in the Homilies of the Ancients we ſo often meet with Diſcourſes againſt ſuch Hereſies, as the World now knows nothing of; ſuch as thoſe of the Marcionites and Manichees, and many others, which it would be abſurd to combate now in Popular Diſcourſes; but then it was neceſſary to be done, becauſe they were the Prevailing Hereſies of the Age, and Men were in danger of being ſubverted by them. And it is farther obſervable, that the moſt formidable Hereſies, and prevailing Factions, ſuch as that of the Arians, when armed with Secular Power, could never either force or court the Catholick Preachers into Silence, to let the Wolves devour the Sheep by ſuch a tame and baſe Compliance. In this Caſe no worldly Motives could prevail with them, when they ſaw the Danger, not to give Warning of it. They thought they could not otherwiſe anſwer the Character of Watchmen, and Stewards of the Myſteries of GOD, ſince it was required in Stewards that a Man be found Faithful.

[*] Book 2. Chap. 19. Sect. 16. [b] Justin. Apol. 2. p. 98. [c] Chrys. de Sacerd. lib. 6. c. 4. [d] Conc. Tolet. 1. c. 5. Presbyter, Diaconus, &c. qui intra Civitatem fuerit, vel in loco in quo Ecclesia est, si in Ecclesiam ad Sacrificium quotidianum non venerit, Clericus non habeatur. [e] Conc. Agathens. c. 2. Clericis qui Ecclesiam frequentare vel Officium suum implere neglexerint, Peregrina Communio tribuatur. [f] Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Episc. leg. 42. n. 10.

SECT. VIII. Of Fidelity, Diligence and Prudence in Private Addreſſes and Applications.

BUT their Fidelity was not only expreſſed in their Publick Diſcourſes, but alſo in their Private Addreſſes and Applications to Men, who had either cut themſelves off from the Body of Chriſt by Hereſies and Schiſms, or by their Sins made themſelves unſound Members of the Body, whilſt they ſeemed to continue of it. With what [g] Naz. Orat. 1. de Fuga. T. 1. p. 15. [h] Naz. Orat. 21. de Laud. Athan. T. 1. p. 396. [i] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Docente te in Eccleſia, non clamor populi, ſed gemitus ſuſciteturi Lachrymæ Auditorum Laudes tuæ ſint.---- Celeritate dicendi apud imperitum vulgus admirationem ſui facere indoctorum hominum eſt. Attrita Frons interpretatur ſæpe quod neſcit; & cum aliis perſuaſerit, ſibi quoque uſurpat Scientiam. [k] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 5. c. 1. [l] Ibid. c. 7. [m] Chryſ. ibid. lib. 3. c. 12. lib 4. c. 2, & 3.

Fidelity and Meekneſs and Diligence they addreſſed themſelves to the former ſort, we may learn from the good Effects which their Applications often had upon them. Theodoret tells us [n] of himſelf in one place, that he had Converted a Thouſand Souls from the Hereſy of the Marcionites, and many others from the Hereſies of Arius or Eunomius in his own Dioceſe. And in another Place [o] he augments the Number of Converted Marcionites to Ten Thouſand, whom with Indefatigable Induſtry, in a Dioceſe of Forty Miles in length and breadth, containing Eighteen Hundred Churches in it, he had reduced from their Strayings to the Unity of the Catholick Church. What Wonders alſo St. Auſtin wrought in Africk upon the Donatiſts and others the ſame way, by Private Letters and Conferences and Collations with them, the Reader may learn from Poſſidius [p] the Author of his Life, who frequently mentions his Labours in this kind, and the great Advantage that accrued to the Church by this means. For he lived to ſee the greateſt Part of the Manichees, Donatiſts, Pelagians and Pagans converted to the Catholick Church. They were no leſs careful to apply themſelves in private to Perſons within the Church, as occaſion required. And here great Art and Prudence, as well as Fidelity and Diligence, was neceſſary to give Succeſs to their Endeavours. For Mankind, as Nazianzen [q] obſerves, is ſo various and uncertain a ſort of Creature, that it requires the greateſt Art and Skill to manage him. For the Tempers of Mens Minds differ more than the Features and Lineaments of their Bodies: And as all Meats and Medicines are not proper for all Bodies, ſo neither is the ſame Treatment and Diſcipline proper for all Souls. Some are beſt moved by Words, others by Examples; ſome are of a dull and heavy Temper, and ſo have need of the Spur to extimulate them; others that are brisk and fiery, have more need of the Curb to reſtrain them. Praiſe works beſt upon ſome, and Reproof upon others, provided each of them be Miniſtred in a ſuitable and ſeaſonable Way; otherwiſe they do more harm than good. Some Men are drawn by gentle Exhortations to their Duty; others by Rebukes and hard Words muſt be driven to it. And even in the Buſineſs of Reproof, ſome are affected moſt with open Rebuke, others with Private. For ſome Men never regard a ſecret Reproof, who yet are eaſily corrected, if Chaſtiſed in publick. Others again cannot bear a publick Diſgrace, but grow either Moroſe, or Impudent and Implacable upon it; who perhaps would have hearken'd to a ſecret Admonition, and repaid their Monitor with their Converſion, as preſuming him to have accoſted them out of meer Pity and Love. Some Men are to be ſo nicely watched and obſerved, that not the leaſt of their Faults are to be diſſembled; becauſe they ſeek to hide their Sins from Men, and arrogate to themſelves thereupon the Praiſe of being Politick and Craftty: In others it is better to wink at ſome Faults, ſo that ſeeing we will not ſee, and hearing we will not hear, leſt by too frequent Chiding we bring them to Deſpair, and ſo make them caſt off Modeſty, and grow bolder in their Sins. To ſome Men we muſt put on an angry Countenance, and ſeem to contemn them, and deſpair of them as loſt and deplorable Wretches, when their Nature ſo requires it: Others again muſt be treated with Meekneſs and Humility, and be recovered to a better Hope by more promiſing and encouraging Proſpects. Some Men muſt be always conquered, and never yielded to; whilſt to others it will be better ſometimes to concede a little. For all Mens Diſtempers are not to be cured the ſame Way, but proper Medicines are to be applied, as the Matter itſelf, or Occaſion, or the Temper of the Patient will admit of. And this is the moſt difficult part of the Paſtoral Office, to know how to diſtinguiſh theſe Things nicely with an exact Judgment, and with as exact an Hand to miniſter ſuitable Remedies to every Diſtemper. It is a Maſter-piece of Art, which is not to be perfectly attained but by good Obſervation, joyned with Experience and Practice. What our Author thus here at large diſcourſes by way of Rule and Theory, he in another Place ſums up more briefly in the Example of the great Athanaſius, whoſe Pattern he propoſes to Mens Imitation, as a living Image of this admirable Prudence and Dexterity in dealing with Men according to this great Variety of Tempers; telling us [r], that his Deſign was always one and the ſame, but his Methods various; praiſing ſome, moderately correcting others; uſing the Spur to ſome dull Tempers, and the Reins to others of a more hot and zealous Spirit; in his Converſation Maſter of the greateſt Simplicity, but in his Government Maſter of the greateſt Artifice and variety of Skill; Wiſe in his Diſcourſes, but much wiſer in his Underſtanding, to adapt himſelf according to the different Capacities and Tempers of Men. Now the Deſign of all this was not to give any Latitude or Licence to Sin, but by all Prudent and Honeſt Arts to diſcourage and deſtroy it. It was not to teach the Clergy the baſe and ſervile Arts of Flattery and Compliance; to become Time-ſervers and Men-pleaſers, and ſooth the Powerful or the Rich in their Errors and Vices; but only to inſtruct them in the different Methods of oppoſing Sin, and how by joining Prudence to their Zeal, they might make their own Authority moſt Venerable, and moſt Effectually promote the true Ends of Religion. St. Chryſoſtom puts in this Caution, in deſcribing this part of a Biſhop's Character. He ought to be Wiſe, as well as Holy; a Man of great Experience, and one that underſtands the World: And becauſe his Buſineſs is with all ſorts of Men, he ſhould be πολικὸν, one that can appear with different Aſpects, and act with great Variety of Skill. But when I ſay this, I do not mean, ſays he, [s] that he ſhould be a Man of Craft, or ſervile Flattery, or a diſſembling Hypocrite; but a Man of great Freedom and Boldneſs, who knows notwithſtanding how to condeſcend and ſtoop himſelf for Mens advantage, when Occaſion requires, and can be as well mild as auſtere: For all Men are not to be treated in the ſame way: No Phyſician uſes the ſame Method with all his Patients. The true Mean and Decorum, he thinks, which a Biſhop ſhould obſerve in his Converſe and Applications to Men, is to keep between too much Stiffneſs and Abjectneſs. He muſt be Grave without Pride [t]; Awful, but Courteous; Majeſtick as a Man of Authority and Power, yet Affable and Communicative to all: Of an Integrity that cannot be corrupted, yet Officious and ready to ſerve every Man; Humble, but not Servile; Sharp and Reſolute, but yet Gentle and Mild. By ſuch Prudence he will maintain his Authority, and carry any Point with Men, whilſt he ſtudies to do every thing without Hatred or Favour, only for the Benefit and Edification of the Church. We muſt reduce to this Head of Prudence in making proper Addreſs and Application to Offenders, that Direction given by St. Paul, and repeated in ſeveral ancient Canons, That a Biſhop be no Smiter, μὴ πλήκτην, which the twenty-ſeventh of thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons thus Paraphraſes: If any Biſhop, Presbyter, or Deacon ſmite either an offending Chriſtian, or an injurious Heathen, we order him to be depoſed. For our LORD did not teach us this Diſcipline, but the contrary; for he was ſmitten, but did not ſmite any; when he was reviled, he reviled not again; when he ſuffered, he threatned not. Juſtinian forbids [u] the ſame in one of his Novels, as a thing unbecoming the Prieſts of GOD, to ſmite any Man with their own Hands. The Word πλήσσειν ſignifies alſo ſmiting with the Tongue, by reproachful, bitter, and contumelious Language, as St. Chryſoſtom, St. Jerom, and others underſtand it. In which Senſe alſo it was forbidden, as a thing indecent, and unbecoming the Gravity and Prudence of the Chriſtian Clergy.

[n] Theod. Ep. 113. ad Leon. [o] Id. Ep. 145. p. 1026. de Fuga. p. 14. [r] Naz. Orat. 21. de Laud. Athan. p. 396. lib 3. c. 18. [p] Ibid. lib. 3. c. 18. [q] Naz. Orat. 1.

SECT. IX. Of Prudence and Candor in compoſing unneceſſary Controverſies in the Church.

ST. Chryſoſtom enlarges upon ſeveral other Parts of Prudence, which I need not here inſiſt upon, becauſe they have either already been mentioned, or will hereafter be conſidered in other Places; ſuch as Prudence [w] in oppoſing Hereſies: Prudence [x] in managing the Virgins and Widows, and the Revenues of the Church; Prudence [y] in hearing and determining ſecular Cauſes; and Prudence [z] in the Exerciſe of Diſcipline and Church-Cenſures, which laſt will be ſpoken to under another Head. I ſhall here therefore only add one Inſtance more of their Prudence in allaying unneceſſary Diſputes, which roſe among Catholicks and Men of the ſame Opinion in the Church. Which indeed was rather a Complication of many noble Virtues, Prudence, Candor, Ingenuity, Moderation, Peaceableneſs, and Charity, joined together, which like a Conſtellation of the brighteſt Qualities always ſhined with the greateſt Luſtre. This is what Gregory Nazianzen chiefly admired in the Conduct of Athanaſius, and therefore he gives it the higheſt Commendation and Preference before all the other Virtues, as thinking there was no one thing whereby he did greater Service to the Church of GOD. It happened in the time of Athanaſius, that the Catholicks were like to be divided about mere Words; a warm Diſpute ariſing about what Names the three Divine Perſons were to be called by; ſome were for calling them only τρία πρόσωπα, Three Perſons, to avoid Arianiſm; others called them τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις, Three Hypoſtaſes, to avoid Sabellianiſm. Now they all meant the ſame thing, but not underſtanding each others Terms, they mutually charged one another with the Hereſies of Arius and Sabellius. The one Party in the heat of Diſputation could underſtand nothing by Three Hypoſtaſes but three Subſtances or Eſſences in the Arian Senſe, for they made no Diſtinction between Hypoſtaſis and Eſſence, and therefore charged their Oppoſites with Arianiſm. The other Party were afraid that τρία πρόσωπα, ſignified no more than Nominal Perſons, in the Senſe of Sabellius (who himſelf had uſed thoſe very Terms in an equivocal Senſe to impoſe upon the Vulgar) and therefore they inveighed againſt their Adverſaries as deſigning to promote Sabellianiſm. And ſo, ſays Nazianzen [a], this little Difference in Words making a noiſe as if there had been difference in Opinion, the love of Quarrelling and Contention fomenting the Diſpute, the Ends of the Earth were in danger of being divided by a few Syllables. Which when Athanaſius, the true Man of GOD, and great Guide of Souls, both ſaw and heard, he could not endure to think of ſo abſurd and unreaſonable a Diviſion among the Profeſſors of the ſame Faith, but immediately applyed a Remedy to the Diſtemper. And how did he make his Application? Having convened both Parties with all Meekneſs and Humility, and accurately weighed the Intention and Meaning of the Words on both ſides, after he found them agreeing in the things themſelves, and not in the leaſt differing in Point of Doctrine; he ended their Diſpute, allowing the Uſe of both Names, and tying them to Unity of Opinion. This, ſays our Author, was a more advantageous Act of Charity to the Church, than all his other daily Labours and Diſcourſes: It was more honourable than all his Watchings and Humicubations, and not inferior to his applauded Flights and Exiles. And therefore he tells tells his Readers in uſhering in the Diſcourſe, that he could not omit the Relation without injuring them, eſpecially at a time when Contentions and Diviſions were in the Church; for this Action of his would be an Inſtruction to them that were then alive, and of great advantage, if they would propound it to their own Imitation; ſince Men were prone to divide not only from the Impious, but from the Orthodox and Pious, and that not only about little and contemptible Opinions (which ought to make no Difference) but about Words, that tended to one and the ſame Senſe. The Caution is of Uſe in all Ages; and had it always been ſtrictly obſerved, it would have prevented many wild Diſputes, and fierce Contentions about Words in the Chriſtian Church.

[s] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 6. c. 4. ποικίλον αὐτὸν εἶναι δεῖ, ποικίλον δὲ λέγω, οὐ ὑπελον, ὐ κόλακα, ὐκ ὑποκειτὴν, &c. [t] Chryſ. de Sacerd. lib. 3. c. 16. [u] Juſt. Novel. 122. c. 11. Sed neque propriis manibus liceat Epiſcopo quenquam percutere: Hoc enim alienum eſt à ſacerdotibus. [w] Chryſ. ibid. lib. 4. c. 4. [x] Ibid. lib. 3. c. 16. [y] Ibid. lib. 3. c. 18. [z] Ibid. lib. 3. c. 18. [a] Naz. Orat. 21. de Laud. Athan. T. 1. p. 396.

SECT. X. Of their Zeal and Courage in defending the Truth.

BUT now we are to obſerve on the other hand, that as they were eminent for their Candor and Prudence in compoſing unneceſſary and verbal Diſputes; ſo where the Cauſe was weighty, and any material Point of Religion concerned, they were no leſs famous for their Zeal and Courage, in ſtanding up in the defence of Truth againſt all Oppoſers. It was neither the Artifice and Subtlety, nor the Power and Malice of their Enemies could make them yield, where they thought the Faith was in danger to be deſtroyed. In other Caſes, ſays Nazianzen [b], there is nothing ſo peaceable, ſo moderate as Chriſtian Biſhops; but in this Caſe they cannot bear the Name of Moderation, to betray their GOD by Silence and ſitting ſtill; but here they are exceeding eager Warriors, and fighting Champions, that are not to be overcome. He does not mean, that the Weapons of their Warfare were carnal; that they uſed any pious Frauds, or plotted Treaſons or Rebellions, or took up Arms in defence of Religion; but that with an undaunted Courage and brave Reſolution they ſtood up firm in Defence of Truth, and mattered not what Names they were called by (Contentious, Unpeaceable, Immoderate, Factious, Turbulent, Incendiaries, or any thing of the like Nature) nor yet what they ſuffered in any kind, whilſt they contended for that Faith which was once delivered to the Saints. Church-Hiſtory abounds with Inſtances of this Nature; but it will be ſufficient to exemplifie the Practice of this Virtue in a ſingle Inſtance, which Gregory Nazianzen [c] gives us in the Life of St. Baſil, where he relates a famous Dialogue that paſſed between Modeſtus the Arian Governor under Valens, and that holy Man. Modeſtus tryed all Arts to bring him over to the Party, but finding all in vain, he at laſt threatned him with Severity. What, ſaid he, doſt thou not fear this Power which I am armed with? Why ſhould I fear? ſaid Baſil, What canſt thou do, or what can I ſuffer? Whan canſt thou ſuffer? ſaid the other; many things that are in my Power: Confiſcation of thy Goods, Baniſhment, Torment, and Death. But thou muſt threaten me with ſomething elſe, ſaid Baſil, if thou canſt, for none of theſe things can touch me. As for Confiſcation of Goods, I am not liable to it; for I have nothing to loſe, unleſs thou wanteſt theſe tatter'd and thread-bare Garments, and a few Books, which is all the Eſtate I am poſſeſs'd of. For Baniſhment, I know not what it means, for I am tied to no Place; I ſhall eſteem every Country as much my own, as that where I now dwell; for the whole Earth is the LORD's, and I am only a Pilgrim and a Stranger in it. As for Torments, what can they do to him, who has not a Body that can hold out beyond the firſt Stroke? And as for Death, it will be a Kindneſs to me, for it will but ſo much the ſooner ſend me unto GOD, to whom I live and do the Duty of my Station; being in a great meaſure already Dead, and now of a long Time haſtning unto him. The Governor was ſtrangely ſurprized at this Diſcourſe, and ſaid, No Man ever talked at this free and bold rate to Modeſtus before. Perhaps, ſaid Baſil, thou didſt never meet with a Biſhop before: For if thou hadſt, he would have talked juſt as I do, when he was put to contend about ſuch Matters as theſe. In other Things we are mild and yielding, and the humbleſt Men on Earth, as our Laws oblige us to be; we are ſo far from ſhewing ourſelves ſupercilious or haughty to Magiſtrates in Power, that we do not do it to Perſons of the meaneſt Rank and Condition. But when the Cauſe of GOD is concerned, or in danger, then indeed we eſteem all other Things as nothing, and fix our Eyes only upon him. Then Fire and Sword, wild Beaſts and Inſtruments of Torture to tear off our Fleſh, are ſo far from being a Terror, that they are rather a Pleaſure and Recreation to us. Therefore Reproach and Threaten us, do your Pleaſure, uſe your Power to the utmoſt, and let the Emperor know all this: Yet you ſhall never conquer us, or bring us to aſſent to your impious Doctrine, though you threaten us ten thouſand times more than all this. The Governor hearing this, and finding him to be a Man of invincible and inflexible Courage, diſmiſſed him now not with Threatnings, but with a ſort of Reverence and Submiſſion, and went and told the Emperor, that the Biſhop of that Church was too hard for them all; for his Courage was ſo great, his Reſolution ſo firm, that neither Promiſes nor Threatnings could move him from his Purpoſe. Nor was it only open Violence they thus bravely reſiſted, but alſo the more crafty Attempts of the Enemies of Truth, who many times went artificially to work againſt it; partly by blackning the Character of its Champions and Defenders, and repreſenting them as baſe and intolerable Men; and partly by ſmoothing their own Character, and pretending Unity in Faith with the Orthodox, and that their De-

[b] Naz. Orat. 21. de Laud. Athan. p. 388. Οἱ καὶ τἄλλα ὦσιν εἰρηνικοί τε καὶ μέτειοι, τοῦτό γε ἐ φέρουσιν ὑπηκόως ἔχειν, δεῖν παρεῖσθαι διὰ τῆς ἡσυχίας· ἀλλὰ καὶ λίαν ἐσὶν ἐν παρατάξει πολεμικοῖς ἀγῶσι μαχόμενα.

[c] Naz. Orat. 20. de Laud. Baſil. p. 349.

ſigns

ſigns were only Deſigns of Peace, to remove unſcriptural Words and novel Terms out of the way, that all Men might be of the ſame Opinion. Theſe were the two grand Artifices of the Arian Party, whereby the leading and politick Men among them, Euſebius of Nicomedia, Valens, Urſacius, and others, always laboured to overthrow the Truth. Upon this account Athanaſius was forced to undergo a thouſand Calumnies and ſlanderous Reproaches. He was accuſed to Conſtantine, as one that aſſumed to himſelf Imperial Authority to impoſe a Tax upon Egypt; as one guilty of Murder in cutting off the Hand of Arſenius a Meletian Biſhop; as guilty of Treaſon in ſiding with Philumenus the Rebel, and furniſhing him with Money; as an Enemy to the Publick for attempting to hinder the Tranſportation of Corn from Egypt to Conſtantinople: Which Accuſation ſo far prevailed upon the Emperor that he baniſhed him to Triers upon it. In the next Reign he was accuſed again of repeated Murders; and of Sacrilege in diverting Conſtantine's Liberality to the Widows of Egypt and Libya, to other uſes; of Treaſon, in joining Intereſt with Magnentius the Tyrant; and many other ſuch Charges were ſpitefully and diabolically levelled againſt him. St. Baſil was likewiſe variouſly accuſed both by profeſſed Enemies and pretended Friends; who, as is uſual in ſuch Caſes, brought Charges againſt him directly contrary to one another. Some accuſed him of Tritheiſm for defending the Doctrine of three Hypoſtaſes againſt the Sabellians; others, of Semiarianiſm, or Heterodoxy in the Article about the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe in his Church he ſometimes uſed a different Form of Doxology from what was uſed in other Churches. Some again accuſed him of Arianiſm, becauſe he had received Euſtathius of Sebaſtia into Communion upon his profeſſing the Catholick Faith; others ſaid he communicated with Apollinaris the Heretick, becauſe upon ſome occaſions he wrote Letters to him. Thus were two of the greateſt and beſt of Men maliciouſly traduced and wounded in their Reputation; both indeed for the ſame Cauſe, but with this difference, that the one was proſecuted by open Enemies without the Church, the other chiefly by ſecret Enemies within; of whom therefore he had reaſon to take up the Prophet's complaint, and ſay, Theſe are the Wounds, with which I was wounded in the houſe of my Friends. And theſe were ſuch Temptations as might have unſettled any weak and wavering Minds, and made them turn their Backs upon Religion: But true Zeal is above Temptation, and can equally deſpiſe the Wounds of the Sword, and the Wounds of the Tongue; having always the Conſolation, which Chriſt gives in his Goſpel, ready at hand to ſupport it, Bleſſed are ye when Men ſhall revile you, and perſecute you, and ſhall ſay all manner of Evil againſt you falſely for my Sake: Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your Reward in Heaven. Such Examples ſhew us, that Innocency itſelf cannot always exempt Men from Calumny, but ſometimes is accidentally the occaſion of it: But then it has this advantage, that being joined with a ſuitable Zeal, it never ſinks under the Weight and Preſſure of its Burden, but always comes off Conqueror at the laſt, as we ſee in the Inſtances now before us.

The other Artifice, which I ſaid the Arians uſed to deſtroy the Faith, was the ſpecious Pretence of Peace and Unity. The politick and crafty Men among them in the Time of Conſtantine pretended, that they had no Quarrel with the Catholick Doctrine of the Trinity itſelf, but only were aggrieved at the novel and unſcriptural Words, ſuch as the ὁμοούσιον, Conſubſtantial, &c. which the Council of Nice had uſed to expreſs it by: Theſe, they ſaid, were Dividing Terms, and the Cauſe of all the Quarrel and Combuſtion, and therefore they ſtill urged the removing theſe Terms, as the great Stumbling-block, out of the way, that the Peace and Unity of the Church might follow upon it. But Athanaſius and other wiſe Catholicks eaſily perceived whither this ſly Stratagem tended; being very ſenſible that their Deſign was not againſt the bare Terms, but the Faith itſelf, and therefore they always ſtoutly and zealouſly oppoſed it. Nor could the Arians ever gain this Point upon the Catholicks, till at laſt in the Council of Ariminum, An. 359, by great Importunity, and Clamours for Unity and Peace, they were prevailed upon to ſink the Word, Conſubſtantial, and draw up a new Creed without it, yet as they thought, containing the very ſame Doctrine, and in as full Terms as could be expreſſed, ſave that the word Conſubſtantial was not in it. But here it muſt be owned, theſe Catholick Biſhops were wanting in their Zeal, as they themſelves were quickly after convinced. For no ſooner was their Conceſſion made, but the Arians immediately gave out and boaſted over all the World, that the Nicene Faith was condemned, and Arianiſm eſtabliſhed in a general Council, though nothing was leſs intended by the Catholick Biſhops that were preſent at it. But now they were ſenſible they had made a falſe Step, by ſuffering themſelves thus to be impoſed upon by deſigning Men: They now ſaw that they ought to have ſtuck to the Nicene Terms, as well as the Faith, ſince the Faith it ſelf ſo much depended on them. They now began to complain of the Fraud, and asked Pardon of their Brethren for their want of Foreſight, and Caution in a Caſe ſo tender and material. St. Jerom, who gives us this Account of the whole Tranſaction, from the Acts of the Synod and other Records extant in his Time, brings them in making this Apology for themſelves: The Biſhops, ſays he, [d] who had been been impoſed upon by Fraud at Ariminum, and who were reputed Hereticks without being conſcious to themſelves of any Hereſy, went about every where proteſting by the Body of Chriſt, and all that is ſacred in the Church, that they ſuſpected no Evil in their Creed: They thought the Senſe had agreed with the Words, and that Men had not meant one thing in their Hearts, and uttered another thing with their Lips. They were deceived by entertaining too good an Opinion of baſe and evil Men. They did not ſuppoſe the Prieſts of Chriſt could ſo treacherouſly have fought againſt Chriſt. In ſhort they lamented their Miſtake now with Tears, and offer'd to condemn as well their own Subſcription, as all the Arian Blaſphemies. Any one that reads St. Jerom carefully, will eaſily perceive, that theſe Biſhops were no Arians, nor ever intended to ſubſcribe an Arian Creed; but their Fault was want of Zeal in parting with the Nicene Creed, to take another inſtead of it without the word Conſubſtantial; which though they ſubſcribed in the Simplicity of their Hearts as an Orthodox Creed (and indeed the words, as Jerom deſcribes them, in their plain Senſe are Sound and Orthodox, as St. Jerom ſays in their Excuſe) yet the Arians put an equivocal and poiſonous Senſe upon them; giving out after the Council was ended, that they had not only aboliſhed the Word, Conſubſtantial, but with it condemned the Nicene Faith alſo. Which was ſtrange ſurprizing News to the Biſhops that had been at Ariminum. Then, ſays St. Jerom, Ingemuit totus orbis, & Arianum ſe eſſe miratus eſt, The whole World groaned, and was amazed to think ſhe ſhould be reputed Arian. That is, the Catholick Biſhops of the whole World, (for there were three hundred of them preſent at that Council) were amazed to find themſelves ſo abuſed, and repreſented as Arians, when they never intended in the leaſt to confirm the Arian Doctrine. But now by this the Reader will be able to judge, what kind of Zeal the Catholick Church required then in her Clergy, viz. That they ſhould not only contend for the Faith it ſelf, but alſo for thoſe Catholick Forms and Ways of expreſſing it, which had been prudently compoſed and ſettled in general Councils, as a Barrier againſt Hereticks, the giving up of which to ſubtle and dangerous Adverſaries, would always give them Advantage to make fiercer Attacks upon the Faith it ſelf, and prove deſtructive to the Catholick Cauſe; as thoſe Biſhops found by woful Experience, who were concerned in the Conceſſion made at Ariminum. 'Tis Candor indeed, when good Catholicks are divided only about Words, to bring them to a right Underſtanding of one another, which will ſet them at Peace and Unity again: But 'tis Tameneſs to give the main Bulwarks of the Faith to fallacious Adverſaries and deſigning Men, whoſe Arts and Aims, however diſguiſed, are always known to ſtrike at the Foundation of Religion. And therefore though no Man was ever more candid than Athanaſius toward miſtaken Catholicks, yet neither was any more zealous in oppoſing the Arts and Stratagems of the Arian Party; always ſticking cloſe to the Definition of the Nicene Council, and never yielding that any Tittle or Syllable of that Creed ſhould be eraſed or altered.

[d] Hieron. Dial. cont. Lucif. T. 2. p. 143. Concurrebant Epiſcopi, qui Ariminenſibus dolis irretiti, ſine conſcientia Hæretici ferebantur, conteſtantes Corpus Domini, & quicquid in Eccleſia ſanctum eſt, ſe nihil mali in ſua Fide ſuſpicatos. Putavimus, aibant, ſenſum congruere cum verbis; nec in Eccleſiis ubi ſimplicitas, ubi pura confeſſio eſt, aliud in corde clauſum eſſe, aliud in labiis proferri

SECT. XI.
Of their Obligations to maintain the Unity of the Church; and of the Cenſure of ſuch as fell into Hereſy or Schiſm.

WHILST I am upon this Head, I cannot but take notice of the Obligations the Clergy lay under to maintain the Unity of the Church, both in Faith and Diſcipline, and what Penalties were inflicted on ſuch as made a Breach therein, whether by falling into Hereſy or Schiſm themſelves, or giving Encouragement to them in others. I ſhall not need to ſtate the Nature of Church-Unity and Communion in this Place any farther, than by ſaying, That to maintain the Purity of the Catholick Faith, and live under the Diſcipline and Government of a Catholick Biſhop, who himſelf lived in Communion with the Catholick Church, were then as it were the two Characteriſtick Notes of any Man's being in the Communion of the Church: And therefore as every Member was obliged to maintain the Unity of the Church in both theſe Parts; ſo much more the Clergy, who were to be the chief Guardians of it: And if they failed in either kind, that is, if they lapſed either into Hereſie or Schiſm; by the Laws of the Church they were to be depoſed from their Office; and though they repented and returned to the Unity of the Church again, yet they were not to act in their former Station, but to be admitted to communicate only in the Quality of Laymen. This was the Rule of the African Church in the time of Cyprian, as appears from the Synodical Epiſtle [e] of the Council of Carthage, to which his Name is prefix'd. For writing to Pope Stephen, they tell him, their Cuſtom was to treat ſuch of the Clergy as were ordained in the Catholick Church, and afterward ſtood up perfidiouſly and rebelliouſly againſt the Church, in the ſame manner, as they did thoſe that were firſt ordained by Hereticks; that is, they admitted them to the Peace of the Church, and allowed them the Communion of Laymen, but did not permit them to officiate again in any Order of the Clergy. And this, he ſays, they did to put a Mark of Diſtinction between thoſe that always ſtood true to the Church, and thoſe that deſerted it. Yet if any conſiderable Advantage accrued to the Church by the Return of ſuch an Heretick ferri timuimus. Decepit nos bona de malis exiſtimatio. Non ſumus arbitrati ſacerdotes Chriſti adverſus Chriſtum pugnare. Multaque alia quæ brevitatis ſtudio prætereo, flentes aſſerebant, parati & ſubſcriptionem priſtinam & omnes Arianorum Blaſphemias condemnare. [e] Cypr. Ep. 72. p. 197. Si qui Presbyteri aut Diaconi qui vel in Eccleſia Catholica, prius ordinati fuerint, & poſtmodum perfidi ac rebelles contra Eccleſiam ſteterint, vel apud Hæreticos à Pſeudo-Epiſcopis & Antichriſtis contra Chriſti Diſpoſitionem profana Ordinatione promoti ſunt——eos quoque hac conditione ſuſcipi cum reverterentur, ut communicent Laici, & ſatis habeant quod admittuntur ad Pacem, qui hoſtes Pacis extiterint, &c.

or Schismatick; as if he brought over any considerable part of the deluded People with him; or if he was generally chosen by the Church, or the like; in such Cases the Rule was so far dispensed with, that the Deserter might be admitted to his pristine Dignity, and be allowed to officiate in his own Order again. Upon this Account, Cornelius Bishop of Rome received Maximus the Presbyter to his former Honour upon his return [f] from the Novatian Schism. And in After-ages both the Novatians and Meletians were particularly favoured with this Privilege by the Council of Nice, and the Donatists by the African Fathers in the time of St. Austin, as I have had occasion to note [*] more than once before. But if they continued obstinate in their Heresy or Schism, then many times an Anathema was pronounced against them, as in the second Council of Carthage. If a Presbyter, says the Canon [g], that is reproved or excommunicated by his Bishop, being puffed up with Pride, shall presume to offer the Oblation in a separate Assembly, or set up another Altar against him, let him be Anathema. The Council of Antioch [h], and those called the Apostolical Canons [i], have several Decrees of the like Nature. Yea, so careful were the Clergy to be of the Unity of the Church, that they were not to give any Encouragement to Hereticks or Schismaticks, or excommunicated Persons, by communicating with them in Prayer or other holy Offices of the Church, or so much as frequenting their Society, or feasting with them, or the like. But I do not enlarge upon these things here, because being Matters of Discipline, they will come again to be considered under that Head in another Place.

I have now gone through some of the chief general Duties, which more immediately concerned the Office and Function of the Clergy; and by mixing publick Rules with private Directions and great Examples, have made such an Essay towards the Idea and Character of a Primitive Clerk, as may (I hope) in some things excite both the Emulation and Curiosity of many of my Readers, who may be concerned to imitate the Pattern I have been describing. If here it be not drawn so full, or so exactly to the Life in all its Beauties as they could wish, they will find their Account in satisfying their Curiosity, by having Recourse to the Fountains themselves, from whence these Materials were taken. For many Things, that might here have been added, were purposely omitted for fear of drawing out this Part of the Discourse to a greater length, than would consist with the Design and Measures of the present Undertaking: And I had rather be thought to have said too little, than too much, upon this Head, that I might not cloy, but leave an Edge upon the Appetite of the Inquisitive Reader.

CHAP. IV.

An Account of some other Laws and Rules, which were a sort of Out-Guards and Fences to the former.

SECT. I.
No Clergy-man allowed to Desert or Relinquish his Station without just Grounds and Leave.

HAVING thus far discoursed both of such Laws as related to the Life and Conversation of the Primitive Clergy, and of those that more immediately concerned the Duties and Offices of their Function; I come now to speak of a Third sort of Laws, which were like the Jews Sepimenta Legis, a sort of By-Laws and Rules, made for the Defence and Guard of the two former. Among these we may reckon such Laws as were made to fix the Clergy to their proper Business and Calling; such as that which forbad any Clergy-man to desert or relinquish his Station, without just Grounds or Leave granted by his Superiors. In the African Church, as has been shewed before, [†] from the time that any Man was made a Reader, or entered in any of the lower Orders of the Church, he was presumed to be dedicated to the Service of God, so as thenceforth not to be at liberty to turn Secular again at his own Pleasure. And much more did this Rule hold for Bishops, Presbyters and Deacons. Therefore Cyril of Alexandria, as he is cited by Harmenopulus [a], says in one of his Canons, that it was contrary to the Laws of the Church for any Priest to give in a Libel of Resignation: For if he be worthy, he ought to continue in his Ministry; if he be unworthy, he should not have the Privilege of Resigning, but be condemned and ejected. The Council of Chalcedon orders [b] all such to be anathematized, as forsook their Orders to take upon them any military Office or secular Dignity, unless they repented and returned to the Employment, which for God's Sake they had first chosen. The [f] Cornel. Ep. 46. al. 49. ad Cypr. p. 93. Maximum Presbyterum locum suum agnoscere justimus. See other Instances in Socrates, lib. 7. c. 3. [*] Book 4. Chap. 7. Sect. 7 and 8.

[g] Conc. Carth. 2. c. 1. Si quis forte Presbyter ab Episcopo suo correptus vel Excommunicatus, tumore vel superbia inflatus, putaverit separatim Deo sacrificia offerenda, vel aliud erigendum altare—Anathema sit. [h] Conc. Antioch. c. 4, & 5.
[i] Canon. Apost. c. 32. [†] Book 3. Chap. 1. Sect. 5. [a] Harmenopul. Epitom. Can. ap. Leunclav. Jus Græc. Rom. Tom. 1. p. 11. ὥσθ' ὁ τοῦ ἐκκλησιαστικοῦ δεσμοῦ, τὸ λιποστρατήσεων παρασάγειν τινὰς ἀπὸ ἱερατῆς ὧν. &c. [b] Conc. Chalced. c. 7. τοὺς ἅπαξ ἐν κλήρῳ τελεσθέντας, μήτε ἐπὶ στρατείαν μήτε ἐπὶ ἀξίαν κοσμικὴν ἔρχεσθαι, &c.

Council

Council of Tours [c] in like manner decrees, that whoever of the Clergy desert their Order and Office, to follow a secular Life and Calling again, shall be punished with Excommunication. The Civil Law was also very severe upon such Deserters. By an Order of Arcadius and Honorius [d] they are condemned to serve in Curia all their Lives, that they might never have the Privilege of resuming the Clerical Life again. And by a Law of Justinian's [e] both Monks and Clerks so deserting, were to forfeit whatever Estate they were possest of, to the Church or Monastery to which they belonged.

SECT. II.

Yet in some Cases a Resignation was allowed of.

BUT this Rule as it was intended for the Benefit of the Church, to keep the Clergy to their Duty; so when the Benefit of the Church, or any other reasonable Cause required the contrary, might be dispensed with: And we find many such Resignations or Renunciations practised, and some allowed by general Councils. For not to mention the Case of Disability by reason of Old-age, Sickness, or other Infirmity, in which it was usual for Bishops to turn over their Business to a Coadjutor; of which I have given a full Account in a former Book [*]; there were two other Cases, which come nearer to the Matter in hand. One was, when a Bishop through the obstinacy, hatred, or disgust of any People, found himself uncapable of doing them any Service, and that the Burden was an intolerable Oppression to him: In that Case, if he desired to Renounce, his Resignation was accepted. Thus Gregory Nazianzen renounced the See of Constantinople, and betook himself to a private Life, because the People grew factious, and murmured at him, as being a Stranger. And this he did with the Consent and Approbation of the general Council of Constantinople, as not only the Historians, Theodoret [f] and Socrates [g], but he himself testifies [h] in many Places of his Writings. After the same manner, Theodoret says [i], Meletius the famous Bishop of Antioch, when he was Bishop of Sebastia in Armenia, was so offended with the rebellious Temper and Contumacy of a perverse and froward People, that he abandoned them, and retired likewise to a private Life. So Theodorus Lector tells us [k] how Martyrius Bishop of Antioch being offended at the Factiousness of his People and Clergy, upon the Intrusion of Peter Fullo, renounced his Church with these Words: A contumacious Clergy, a rebellious People, a prophane Church, I bid adieu to them all, reserving to my self the Dignity of Priesthood. Another Case was, when in Charity a Bishop resigned, or shewed himself willing to resign, to cure some inveterate Schism. Thus Chrysostom [l] told his People, that if they had any Suspicion of him, as if he were an Usurper, he was ready to quit his Government, when they pleased, if that was necessary to preserve the Unity of the Church. And so Theodoret [m] tells us, that in the Dispute between Flavian and Evagrius the two Bishops of Antioch, when Theodosius the Emperor sent for Flavian, and ordered him to go and have his Cause decided at Rome: He bravely answered, "Great Sir, If any accuse my Faith as erroneous, or my Life as unqualifying me for a Bishoprick, I will freely let my Accusers be my Judges, and stand to their Sentence whatever it be: But if the Dispute be only about the Throne and Government of the Church, I shall not stay for Judgment, nor contend with any that has a mind to it, but freely recede, and abdicate the Throne of my own accord. And you, Sir, may commit the See of Antioch to whom you please." The Emperor looked upon this as a noble and generous Answer, and was so affected with it, that instead of obliging him to go to Rome, he sent him home again, and bad him go feed the Church committed to his Care: Nor would he ever after hearken to the Bishops of Rome, though they often solliciting him to expel him. There is one Instance more of this Nature, which I cannot omit, because it is such an Example of Self-Denial, and despising of private Interest for the Publick Good, and Peace, and Unity of the Church, as deserves to be transmitted to Posterity, and to be spoken of with the highest Commendations. It was the Proposal which Aurelius Bishop of Carthage and St. Austin, with the rest of the African Bishops, made to the Donatists at the opening of the Conference of Carthage; that to put an End to the Schism, wherever there was a Catholick and a Donatist Bishop in the same City, they should both of them [n] resign, and suffer a new one to be chosen. For why, say they, should we scruple to offer the Sacrifice of such an Humility to our Redeemer? Did he descend from Heaven to assume our Nature, and make us his Members? And shall we make any Doubt to descend from our Chairs, to prevent his Members being torn to pieces by a cruel Schism? We Bishops are ordained for the People of Christ. What therefore is most conducive to the Peace of Christian People, we ought to do in reference to our Episcopacy. If we be profitable Servants, why should we envy the eternal Gain of our Lord for our own Temporal Honours? Our Epi[c] Conc. Turon. c. 5. Si quis Clericus, relicto Officii sui Ordine, Laicam voluerit agere vitam, vel se Militiæ tradiderit, excommunicationis pœna feriatur. [d] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Episc. leg. 39. Si qui professum Sacræ Religionis sponte dereliquerit, continuo sibi eum Curia vindicet: Ut Liber illi ultra ad Ecclesiam recursus esse non possit. [e] Cod. Justin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Episc. leg. 55. Quod si illi Monasteria aut Ecclesias relinquant, atque Mundani fiant: Omne ipsorum Jus ad Monasterium aut Ecclesiam pertinet. [*] Book 2. Chap. 13. Sect. 4. [f] Theod. lib. 5. c. 8. [g] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 7. [h] Naz. Orat. 32. it. Carm. de Vita sua. [i] Theod. lib. 2. c. 31. [k] Theodor. Lect. lib. 1. p. 555. [l] Chrys. Hom. 11. in Ephes. p. 1110. ἕτοιμοι παραχωρῆσαι τῆ ἀρχῆς μόνον ἐκκλησία ἕως μία. [m] Theod. lib. 5. c. 23. [n] Collat. Carthag. Die 1. c. 16. Utrique de medio secedamus. —— Quid enim dubitemus Redemptori nostro sacrificium istius humilitatis offerre? An vero ille de cœlis in membra humana descendit, ut membra ejus essemus? Et nos, ne ipsa ejus membra crudeli divisione lanientur, de Cathedris descendere formidamus? &c.

ſcopal Dignity will be ſo much the more advantageous to us, if by laying it aſide we gather together the Flock of Chriſt, than if we diſperſe his Flock by retaining it. And with what Face can we hope for the Honour which Chriſt has promiſed us in the World to come, if our Honours in this World hinder the Unity of his Church? By this we ſee there were ſome Caſes, in which it was lawful for Men to renounce even the Epiſcopal Office, and betake themſelves to a private Life: The grand Rule being in theſe and all other Caſes, to do what was moſt for the Benefit and Edification of the Church, and ſacrifice private Intereſt to the Avantage of the Publick.

SECT. III. And Canonical Penſions ſometimes granted in ſuch Caſes.

IN theſe Caſes, a Biſhop after he had renounced, was not to intermeddle with the Affairs of the Church, to ordain, or perform any Offices of the like Nature, unleſs he was called to aſſiſt by ſome other Biſhop, or was commiſſioned by him as his Delegate: Yet he was allowed the Title, and Honour, and Communion of a Biſhop, as the general Council of Epheſus [o] determined it ſhould be, in the Caſe of Euſtathius Biſhop of Perga and Metroplitan of Pamphylia, who had renounced his Biſhoprick, being an aged Man, and thinking himſelf unable to diſcharge the Duties of it. In ſuch Caſes likewiſe when any one receded with the Approbation of a Council, he was ſometimes allowed to receive a moderate Penſion out of the Biſhoprick for his Maintenance. As it was the Caſe of Domnus Biſhop of Antioch, who having been ejected though unjuſtly by Dioſcorus in the ſecond Synod of Epheſus, yet quietly reſigned the Biſhoprick to Maximus: Upon which account Maximus deſired Leave of the Council of Chalcedon, that he might allow him an annual Penſion out of the Revenues of the Church, which the Council of Chalcedon [p] readily complied with. And this, as Richerius [q] ingenuouſly owns, that the ancient Deſign and Meaning of Canonical Penſions, which were not uſed to be granted but by the Authority or Approbation of a Synod, and only to ſuch as having ſpent the greateſt part of their Life in the Service of the Church, deſired to be disburdened of their Office by reaſon of their Age. For the reſerving a Penſion out of a Biſhoprick, which a Man only reſigns to take another, was a Practice wholly unknown to former Ages.

SECT. IV. No Clergyman to remove from one Dioceſe to another without the Conſent and Letters Dimiſſory of his own Biſhop.

2*dly*, ANOTHER Rule, deſigned to keep all Clergymen ſtrictly to their Duty, was, That no one ſhould remove from his own Church or Dioceſe, without the Conſent of the Biſhop to whoſe Dioceſe he belonged. For as no one at firſt could be ordained ἀπολελυμμένως but muſt be fixt to ſome Church at his firſt Ordination; ſo neither, by the Rules and Diſcipline of the Church then prevailing, might he exchange his Station at pleaſure, but muſt have his own Biſhop's Licence, or Letters Dimiſſory, to qualify him to remove from one Dioceſe to another. For this was the ancient Right, which every Biſhop had in the Clergy of his own Church, that he could not be deprived of them without his own Conſent; but as well the Party that deſerted him, as the Biſhop that received him, were liable to be cenſured upon ſuch a Tranſgreſſion. If any Presbyter, Deacon, or other Clerk, ſay the Apoſtolical Canons [r], forſake his own Dioceſe to go to another, and there continue without the Conſent of his own Biſhop, We decree, that ſuch an one ſhall no longer Miniſter as a Clerk (eſpecially if after Admonition he refuſe to return) but only be admitted to communicate as a Layman. And if the Biſhop, to whom they repair, ſtill entertain them in the Quality of Clergymen, he ſhall be excommunicated as a Maſter of Diſorder. The ſame Rule is frequently repeated in the ancient Councils, as that of Antioch [s], the firſt and ſecond of Arles [t], the firſt and fourth of Carthage [u], the firſt of Toledo [w], and the Council of Tours [x], and Turin [y], and the great Council of Nice [z], to whoſe Canons it may be ſufficient to refer the Reader. I only obſerve, that this was the ancient Uſe of Letters Dimiſſory, or as they were then called, ἀπολυτικαὶ, εἰρηνικαὶ, συσταλτικαὶ and Conceſſoriæ, which were Letters of Licence granted by a Biſhop, for a Clergyman to remove from his Dioceſe to another; though we now take Letters Dimiſſory in another Senſe: But the old Canons call thoſe Dimiſſory Letters, which were given upon the Occaſion that I have mentioned. The Council of Carthage gives them only the Name of the Biſhop's [a] Letters, but the Council of Trullo [b] ſtiles them expreſly, Dimiſſory; when reinforcing all the ancient Canons, it ſays, no Clergyman of what Degree ſoever ſhall be entertained in another Church, ἐκτὸς τῶν τῆς οἰκείας ἐπισκόπου ἐγγράφων ἀπολυτικῶν, without the Dimiſſory Letters of his own Biſhop; which he might grant or refuſe as he ſaw proper occaſion for it. For there was no Law to compel him to grant it, whatever Arts any Clerk might uſe to gain a Diſmiſſion any other way. St. Auſtin mentions a pretty ſtrange Caſe of this Nature, that happened in his own Dioceſe. One Timotheus a Subdeacon of his Church, being deſirous to leave his Poſt under St. Auſtin, and go to Severus a neighbouring Biſhop, proteſts upon Oath to Severus that he would be no longer of St. Auſtin's Church:

[o] Conc. Epheſ. Act. 7. in Epiſt. ad Synod. Pamphyliæ. Habeat Epiſcopi nomen & honorem ac Communinonem, ſic quidem ut neque ipſe ordinet, neque in Eccleſiam propria auctoritate ordinaturus veniat, niſi forte coaſſumatur, &c. [p] Conc. Chalced. Act. 7. al. Act. 10. edit. Labbe. Tom. 4. p. 681. [q] Richer. Hiſt. Concil. Par. 1. c. 8. n. 30. p. 218. Nihil antiquitus conſuetum fieri niſi Synodice comprobatum; hincque jus Penſionum Canonicarum poteſt confirmari; quæ iis tantum tribui conſueverant, qui magnam vitæ partem in Miniſterio conſumſerant, & propter ætatem ſe exonerabant Epiſcopatu. [r] Canon. Apoſt. c. 15, & 16. Vid. Conc. Chalced. Can. 20. [s] Conc. Antioch. c. 3. [t] Arelat. 1. c. 22. Arelat. 2. c. 13. [u] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 5. Carth. 4. c. 27. [w] Conc. Tolet. 1. c. 12. [x] Conc. Turon. c. 11. [y] Conc. Taurin. c. 6. [z] Conc. Nic. c. 16. [a] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 5. Non licere Clericum alienum ab aliquo ſuſcipi ſine Literis Epiſcopi ſui, neque apud ſe retinere. [b] Conc. Trull. c. 17.

Upon

Upon this Severus pretending a Reverence for his Oath, writes to St. Auſtin, and tells him he could not return him his Clerk for fear of making him guilty of Perjury. To which St. Auſtin replied, That this opened a way to Licentiouſneſs, and there was an End [c] of all Eccleſiaſtical Order and Diſcipline, if a Biſhop would pretend to keep another Man's Clerk upon ſuch a Scruple, for fear of being acceſſory to his Perjury. This evidently implies, that there was no Law then to compel a Biſhop to grant Letters Dimiſſory to his Clerk; for if there had been any ſuch, Timotheus needed not to have uſed the Stratagem of an Oath, but might have compelled St. Auſtin to have granted them. But the Church then did not think fit to put it in every Man's Power to remove from one Dioceſe to another at his own Pleaſure, but left every Biſhop ſole Judge in this Caſe, as beſt knowing the Neceſſities and Circumſtances of his own Church, and whether it were expedient to part with the Clergy which were ordained for her Service.

SECT. V. Laws againſt the Βαλάνλιϛοι, or wandering Clergy.

THE Laws were no leſs ſevere againſt all wandering Clergymen, whom ſome of the Ancients call Βαλάνλιϛοι [d], or Vacantivi, by way of Reproach. They were a ſort of idle Perſons, who having deſerted the Service of their own Church, would fix in no other, but went roving from place to place, as their Fancy and their Humour led them. Now by the Laws of the Church no Biſhop was to permit any ſuch to officiate in his Dioceſe, nor indeed ſo much as to communicate in his Church; becauſe having neither Letters Dimiſſory, nor Letters Commendatory from their own Biſhop (which every one ought to have that travelled) they were to be ſuſpected either as Deſerters, or as Perſons guilty of ſome Miſdemeanor, who fled from Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure. Therefore the Laws forbad the admitting of ſuch either to Eccleſiaſtical or Lay-Communion. A Presbyter or Deacon, ſays the Council of Agde [e], that rambles about without the Letters of his Biſhop, ſhall not be admitted to Communion by any other. The Council of Epone [f] repeats the Decree in the ſame words. And the Council of Valentia [g] in Spain orders ſuch wandering and roving Clerks, as will not ſettle to the conſtant Performance and Attendance of Divine Offices in the Church, whereto they were deputed by the Biſhop that ordained them, to be deprived both of the Communion and the Honour of their Order, if they perſiſted in their Obſtinacy and Rebellion. So ſtrict were the Laws of the ancient Church in tying the inferior Clergy to the Service of that Church, to which they were firſt appointed, that they might not upon any account move thence, but at the Diſcretion of the Biſhop that ordained them.

SECT. VI. Laws againſt the Tranſlations of Biſhops from one See to another, how to be limited and underſtood.

NOR were the Biſhops ſo Arbitrary in this Matter, but that they themſelves were under a like Regulation, and liable to Laws of the ſame nature. For as no Clerk could remove from his own Church without the Licence of his Biſhop: So neither might any Biſhop pretend to tranſlate or move himſelf to another See, without the conſent and approbation of a Provincial Council. Some few there were, who thought it abſolutely unlawful for a Biſhop to forſake his firſt See, and betake himſelf to any other; becauſe they looked upon his Conſecration to be a ſort of Marriage to his Church, from which he could not divorce himſelf, nor take another without incurring the Crime of Spiritual Adultery. To this purpoſe they wreſted that Paſſage of St. Paul, A Biſhop muſt be the Husband of one Wife, taking it in a myſtical and figurative Senſe, as St. Jerom [h], informs us. But this was but the private Opinion of one or two Authors, which never prevailed in the Catholick Church; whoſe Prohibition of the Tranſlation of Biſhops was not founded upon any ſuch Reaſons, but was only intended as a cautionary Proviſion to prevent the Ambition of aſpiring Men, that they might not run from leſſer Biſhopricks to greater, without the Authority of a Provincial Synod, which was the proper Judge in ſuch Caſes. Some Canons indeed ſeem to forbid it abſolutely, and univerſally, as a thing not to be allowed in any Caſe. The Council of Nice [i] and Sardica [k] and ſome others prohibit it without any Exception or Limitation. But other Canons reſtrain it to the Caſe of a Biſhop's intruding himſelf into another See by ſome ſiniſter Arts, without any legal Authoriy from a Provincial Synod. So thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [l] diſtinguiſh upon the Matter: It ſhall not be lawful for a Biſhop to leave his Dioceſe, and invade another, though many of the People would compel him to it: Unleſs there be a reaſonable Cauſe, as that he may the more advantage the Church by his Preaching: And then he ſhall not do it of his own Head, but by the Judgment and Entreaty of many Biſhops, that is, a Provincial Synod. The fourth Council of Carthage diſtinguiſhes [m] much after the ſame manner: A Biſhop ſhall not remove himſelf from an obſcure to a more honourable Place out of Ambition: But if the Advantage of the Church require it, he may be tranſlated by the Order and Decree of a Provincial Synod. Schelſtrate [n] and ſome other learned Perſons think, that theſe Canons were a Correction of the former; the one allowing what the other had poſitively forbidden: But this is not at all probable: It is more reaſonable to think, that though in the Nicene and Sardican Canons theſe Exceptions are not expreſſed, yet they are to be underſtood: Becauſe the Council of Nice itſelf tranſlated Euſtathius Biſhop of Berea to Antioch, as Mr. Pagi [o] rightly obſerves out of Sozomen [p], and other Hiſtorians of the Church: Which had been to break and affront their own Rule at the very firſt, had it meant, that it ſhould not be lawful in any caſe to tranſlate a Biſhop from one See to another. We muſt conclude then, that the Deſign of all theſe Canons was the ſame, to prevent Covetouſneſs, Ambition, and love of Pre-eminence in aſpiring Men, who thruſt themſelves into other Sees by irregular Means, by a Faction, or the meer Favour of the People, without ſtaying for the Choice or Conſent of a Synod: Which was the common Practice of the Arian Party in the Time of Conſtantine and Conſtantius, and occaſioned ſo many Laws to be made againſt it. But when a Synod of Biſhops in their Judgment and Diſcretion thought it neceſſary to tranſlate a Biſhop from a leſſer to a greater See, for the Benefit and Advantage of the Church, there was no Law to prohibit this, but there are a thouſand Inſtances of ſuch Promotions to be met with in ancient Hiſtory, as Socrates [q] has obſerved long ago, who has collected a great many Inſtances to this Purpoſe. Thoſe that pleaſe may ſee more in Cotelerius [r] and Biſhop Beveridge [s]: For in ſo plain a Caſe I do not think it neceſſary to be more particular in my Account of them, but proceed with other Laws of the Church, which concerned the Clergy.

[c] Aug. Ep. 240. ad Severum. Aditus aperitur ad diſſolvendum ordinem Eccleſiaſticæ Diſciplinæ, ſi alterius Eccleſiæ Clericus cuicunque juraverit, quod ab ipſo non ſit receſſurus, eum ſecum eſſe permittat; ideo ſe facere affirmans, ne author ſit ejus Perjurii, &c. [d] Syneſ. Ep. 67. [e] Conc. Agathen. c. 52. Presbytero ſive Diacono ſine Antiſtitis ſui Epiſtolis ambulanti communionem nullus impendat. [f] Conc. Epaunenſ. c. 6. [g] Conc. Valentin. c. 5. Vagus atque inſtabilis Clericus, ſi Epiſcopi, à quo ordinatus eſt, præceptis non obedierit, ut in delegata ſibi Eccleſia officium dependat aſſiduum, quouſque in vitio permanſerit, & Communione & Honore privetur. [h] Hieron. Ep. 83. ad Oceanum. Tom. 2. p. 321. Quidam coacte interpretantur uxores pro Eccleſiis, viros pro Epiſcopis debere accipi, &c. [i] Conc. Nic. c. 15. [k] Conc. Sardic. c. 1, & 2. Conc. Antioch. Can. 21. Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 38. [l] Canon. Apoſt. c. 14. [m] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 27. Ut Epiſcopus de loco ignobili ad nobilem per ambitionem non tranſeat —— Sane ſi id utilitas Eccleſiæ fiendum popoſcerit, Decreto pro eo Clericorum & Laicorum Epiſcopis porrecto, per ſententiam Synodi transferatur.

SECT. VII. Laws concerning the Reſidence of the Clergy.

THE next Laws of this nature were ſuch as concerned the Reſidence of the Clergy; the Deſign of which was the ſame as all the former, to bind them to conſtant Attendance upon their Duty. And theſe Laws equally concerned Biſhops and all the inferior Clergy. The Council of Sardica has ſeveral Canons relating to this matter. The ſeventh decrees, that no Biſhop ſhould go εἰς πρατόπεδον, to the Emperor's Court, unleſs the Emperor by Letter called him thither. The next Canon [t] provides, that whereas there might be ſeveral Caſes, which might require a Biſhop to make ſome Application to the Emperor in behalf of the Poor, or Widows, or ſuch as fled for Sanctuary to the Church, and condemned Criminals, and the like: In ſuch Caſes the Deacons or Subdeacons of the Church were to be employed to go in his Name, that the Biſhop might fall under no Cenſure at Court, as neglecting the Buſineſs of his Church. Juſtinian [u] has a Law of the ſame Import with theſe Canons, That no Biſhop ſhould appear at Court upon any Buſineſs of his Church without the Command of the Prince: But if any Petition was to be preferred to the Emperor, relating to any civil Conteſt, the Biſhop ſhould depute his Apocriſarius, or Reſident at Court, to act for him, or ſend his OEconomus, or ſome other of his Clergy to ſollicite the Cauſe in his Name; that the Church might neither receive Damage by his Abſence, nor be put to unneceſſary Expences. Another Canon [w] of the Counil of Sardica limits the Abſence of a Biſhop from his Church to three Weeks, unleſs it were upon ſome very weighty and urgent Occaſion. And another Canon [x] allows the ſame time for a Biſhop, who is poſſeſs'd of an Eſtate in another Dioceſs, to go and collect his Revenues, provided he celebrate Divine Service every Lord's Day in the Country-Church, where his Eſtate lies. And by two other Canons [y] of that Council, Presbyters and Deacons are limited to the ſame Term of Abſence, and tied to the forementioned Rules in the ſame manner that Biſhops were. The Council of Agde [z] made the like Order for the French Churches, decreeing, That a Preſbyter or Deacon, who was abſent from his Church for three Weeks, ſhould be three Years ſuſpended from the Communion. In the African Churches upon the account of this Reſidence, every Biſhop's Houſe was to be near the Church [a] by a Rule of the fourth Council of Carthage. And in the fifth Council there is another Rule [b], that every Biſhop ſhall have his Reſidence at his Principal or Cathedral Church, which he ſhall not leave, to betake himſelf to any other Church in his Dioceſs; nor continue upon his private Concerns, to the neglect of his Cure, and hinderance of his frequenting the Cathedral Church. From this it appears, that the City-Church was to be the chief Place of the Biſhop's Reſidence and Cure: And Cabaſſutius [c] in his Remarks upon this Canon reflects upon the French Biſhops, as tranſgreſſing the ancient Rule, in ſpending the greateſt part of the Year upon their Pleaſure in the Country. Yet there is one thing that ſeems a Difficulty in this Matter; for Juſti-

[n] Schelſtrat. de Concil. Antioch. Can. 21. p. 614. [o] Pagi Critic. in Baron. 324. n. 22. [p] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 2. [q] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 36. [r] Coteler. Not. in Can. Apoſt. c. 14. [s] Bevereg. Not. in eundem Canon. [t] Conc. Sardic. c. 8. [u] Juſt. Novel. 6. c. 2. [w] Conc. Sardic. c. 11. [x] Conc. Sardic. c. 12. [y] Conc. Sardic. c. 16, & 17. [z] Conc. Agathen. c. 64. Diaconus vel Presbyter, ſi per tres Hebdomadas ab Eccleſia ſua defuerit triennio à Communione ſuſpendatur. [a] Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 14. Ut Epiſcopus non longe ab Eccleſia Hoſpitiolum habeat. [b] Conc. Carth. 5. c. 5. Placuit ut nemini ſit facultas, relicta Principali Cathedra, ad aliquam Eccleſiam in Diœceſi conſtitutam ſe conferre: vel intro propria diutius quam opportet conſtitutum, curam vel frequentationem propriæ Cathedræ negligere. [c] Cabaſſut. Notit. Concil. c. 44. Huic Canoni contraveniunt Epiſcopi, qui magna parte anni rure verſantur & deliciantur.

nian [d] says, No Bishop shall be absent from his Church above a whole Year, unless he has the Emperor's Command for it. Which implies that a Bishop might be absent from his Bishoprick a Year in ordinary Cases, and more in extraordinary. But I conceive, the Meaning of this is, that he might be absent a Year during his whole Life; not Year after Year; for that would amount to a perpetual Absence, which it was not the Intent of the Law to grant, but to tie them up to the direct contrary, except the Prince upon some extrarordinary Affair thought fit to grant them a particular Dispensation.

SECT. VIII. Of Pluralities and the Laws made about them

ANOTHER Rule, grounded upon the same Reason with the former, was the Inhibition of Pluralities; which concerned both Bishops, and the inferior Clergy. As to Bishops, it appears plainly from St. Ambrose, that it was not thought lawful for a Man to have two Churches. For speaking of those Words of the Apostle, A Bishop must be the Husband of one Wife, he says, If we look [e] only to the Superficies of the Letter, it forbids a Digamist to be ordained Bishop; but if we penetrate a little deeper to the Profounder Sense, it prohibits a Bishop to have two Churches. That is, whereever there were two Dioceses before, it was not lawful for one Bishop to usurp the both, except where the Wisdom of the Church and State thought it most convenient to join them into one. And it is remarkable, That though there be many Instances of Bishops removing from lesser Sees to greater; yet there is no Example in all ancient History, that I remember, of any such Bishops holding both together; no not among the Arians themselves, who were the least concerned in observing Rules of any other. As to the Case of the inferior Clergy, we must distinguish betwixt Diocesan and Parochial Churches, and between the Office and the Benefit in Parochial Churches. The Circumstances and Necessities of the Church might sometimes require a Presbyter or Deacon to officiate in more than one Parochial Church, when there was a Scarcity of Ministers; but the Revenues of such Churches did not thereupon belong to him, because they were paid into the Common Stock of the City or Cathedral Church, from whence he had his monthly or yearly Portion in the Division of the whole, as has been noted before. And this makes it farther evident, that in those early Ages there could be no such thing as Plurality of Benefices, but only a Plurality of Offices in the same Diocese, within such a District, as that a Man might personally attend and officiate in two Parochial Churches. But then as to different Dioceses, it being ordinarily impossible that a Man should attend a Cure in two Dioceses, the Canons are very expres in prohibiting any one from having a Name in two Churches, or partaking of the Revenues of both. The Council of Chalcedon [f] has a peremptory Canon to this purpose: It shall not be lawful for any Clergyman to have his Name in the Church-Roll or Catalogue of two Cities at the same time, that is, in the Church where he was first ordained, and any other to which he flies out of ambition as to a greater Church; but all such shall be returned to their own Church, where they were first ordained, and only Minister there. But if any one is regularly removed from one Church to another, he shall not partake of the Revenues of the former Church, or of any Oratory, Hospital or Alms-house belonging to it. And such as shall presume, after this Definition of this great and Oecumenical Council, to transgres in this matter, are condemned to be degraded by the holy Synod. And that none might pretend under any other Notion to evade this Law, the same Rule was made for Monasteries, that one Abbot should not preside over two Monasteries at the same time. Which Provision is made by the Council of Agde [g] and Epone, and confirmed by the Imperial Laws of Justinian [h], who inserted it into his Code. Now the Design of all these Laws was to oblige the Clergy to constant Attendance upon their Duty in the Church where they were first ordained; from which if they once removed, whether with Licence or without, to any other Diocese, they were no longer to enjoy any Dividend in the Church or Diocese to which they first belonged. And this Rule continued for several Ages after the Council of Chalcedon, being renewed in the second Council of Nice [i] and other later Councils.

SECT. IX. Laws prohibiting the Clergy to take upon them secular Business, and Offices.

IN pursance of the same Design, to keep the Clergy strict and constant to their Duty, Laws were also made to prohibit them from following any Secular Employment, which might divert them too much from their proper Business and Calling. Among those called the Apostolical Canons there are three to this Purpose. One of which [k] says, no Bishop, Presbyter, or Deacon shall take upon him any worldly Cares, under Pain of Degradation. Another says [l], no Bishop or Presbyter shall concern himself in any secular Offices or Administrations, that he may have more time to attend the Needs and Business of the Church; and [d] Justin. Novel. 6. c. 2. Et illud etiam definimus, ut nemo Deo amabilium Episcoporum foris à sua Ecclesia plusquam per totum annum abesse audeat, nisi hoc per Imperialem fiat jussionem. [e] Ambros. de Dignit. Sacerd. c. 4. Si ad superficiem tantum Literæ respiciamus, prohibet Bigamum Episcopum ordinari: Si vero ad altiorem sensum conscendimus, inhibet Episcopum duas usurpare Ecclesias. [f] Conc. Chalced. c. 10. μὴ ἐξεῖναι κληρικὸν ἐν δύο πόλεων κατ' αὐτὸν καλεῖσθαι ἐκκλησίας, &c. [g] Conc. Agathen. c. 57. Unum Abbatem duobus Monasteriis interdicimus præsidere. Vid. Conc. Epaunens. c. 9. [h] Cod. Just. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Episc. Leg. 40. Non sit vero Abbas duorum Monasteriorum. [i] Conc. Nic. 2. c. 15. [k] Can. Apost. c. 7. κοσμικὰς φροντίδας μὴ ἀναλαμβανέτω, εἰδὲ μὴ, καθαιρείσθω. [l] Ibid. c. 81. ὅτι μὴ χρὴ ἐπίσκοπον ἢ πρεσβύτερον καθίστασθαι ἑαυτὸν εἰς δημοσίας διοικήσεις, &c.

this

this under the ſame Penalty of Degradation. The laſt [m] ſays, A Biſhop, Presbyter or Deacon, that buſies himſelf in any ſecular Office, and is minded to hold both a Place in the Roman Government and an Office in the Church, ſhall be depoſed. For the things of Cæſar belong to Cæſar, and the Things of GOD to GOD. Balſamon and Zonaras take this Canon to mean only the Prohibition of holding military Offices, becauſe it uſes the word στρατεία: But I have ſhewed before out of Gothofred and others, that the word στρατεία and Militia are uſed by the Romans in a larger Signification, to denote all kinds of ſecular Offices, as well Civil as Military: And therefore they more rightly interpret this Canon [n], who underſtand it as a Prohibition of holding any ſecular Office, Civil as well as Military, with an Eccleſiaſtical one, as things incompatible and inconſiſtent with one another. Euſebius [o] informs us from the Epiſtle of the Council of Antioch, that depoſed Paulus Samoſatenſis, that among other Crimes alleged againſt him, this was one, That he took upon him ſecular Places, and preferred the Title of Ducenarius before that of Biſhop. The Ducenarii among the Romans were a ſort of civil Officers, ſo called from their receiving a Salary of two hundred Seſtertia from the Emperor, as Valeſius obſerves [p] out of Dio. And this makes it plain, that the intent of the Canons was to prohibit the Clergy from meddling with civil Offices, as well as military. Only in ſome extraordinary caſes, where the matter was a buſineſs of great Neceſſity or Charity, we meet with an Inſtance or two of a Biſhop's joining an Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Office together without any Cenſure. As Theodoret [q] notes of the famous Jacobus Niſibenſis, that he was both Biſhop and Prince or Governor of Niſibis, or Antioch in Mygdonia, a City in the Confines of the Perſian and Roman Empires. Theodoret repreſents him as a Man of great fame in his Country for his Miracles, by which he ſometimes relieved the City when beſieged by the Perſians: And 'tis probable, in regard to this, the Emperors Conſtantine and Conſtantius pitched upon him, as the propereſt Perſon to take the Government of the City upon him, being a Place in great danger and very much expoſed to the Incurſions of the Perſians. But ſuch Inſtances are but rarely met with in ancient Hiſtory.

SECT. X.
Laws prohibiting the Clergy to be Tutors and Guardians, how far extended.

IN ſome Times and Places the Laws of the Church were ſo ſtrict about this matter, that they would not ſuffer a Biſhop or Presbyter to be left Truſtee to any Man's Will, or a Tutor or Guardian in purſuance of it: Becauſe it was thought this would be too great an Avocation from his other Buſineſs. There is a famous Caſe in Cyprian relating to this matter. He tells us, it had been determined by an African Synod, that no one ſhould appoint any of God's Miniſters a Curator or Guardian by his Will, becauſe they were to give themſelves to Supplications and Prayer, and to attend only upon the Sacrifice and Service of the Altar. And therefore when one Geminius Victor had made Geminius Fauſtinus a Presbyter of the Church of Furni, Guardian or Truſtee by his laſt Will and Teſtament, contrary to the Decree of the foreſaid Council, Cyprian [r] wrote to the Church of Furni, that they ſhould execute the Sentence of the Council againſt Victor, which was, That no annual Commemoration ſhould be made of him in the Church, nor any Prayer be offered in his Name, (according to the Cuſtom of the Church in thoſe times) in the Sacrifice of the Altar. This was a ſort of Excommunication after Death, by denying to receive ſuch a Perſon's Oblations, and refuſing to name him at the Altar among others that made their Offerings, and neither honouring him with the Common Prayers or Praiſes that were then put up to God for all the Faithful that were dead in the Lord; this was the Puniſhment of ſuch as tranſgreſſed this Rule in the Days of Cyprian. And in the following Ages the Canon was renewed, but with a little difference. For though Biſhops were abſolutely and univerſally forbidden [s] to take this Office upon them, both by the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Law; yet Presbyters and Deacons and all the inferior Clergy were allowed to be Tutors and Guardians to ſuch Perſons, as by Right of Kindred [t] might claim this as a Duty from them. But ſtill the Prohibition ſtood in Force againſt their being concerned in that Office for any other, that were not of their Relations, as appears from one of Juſtinian's Novels, which was made to ſettle this Matter in the Church.

SECT. XI.
Laws againſt their being Sureties, and Pleading Cauſes at the Bar in behalf of themſelves or their Churches.

BY other Laws they were prohibited from taking upon them the Office of Pleaders at the Bar in any Civil Conteſt, though it were in their own Caſe, or the Concerns of the Church: Neither might they be Bondſmen or Sureties for any other Man's Appearance in ſuch Cauſes: Becauſe it was thought, that ſuch ſort of Incumbrances might bring Detriment to the Church, in diſtracting her Miniſters from con-

[m] Ibid. c. 83. στρατεία σχολάζων. βιβλιμβίος ἀμφότερα κατέχειν, Ῥωμαϊκὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ ἱερατικὴν διοίκησιν, καθαιρείσθω. [n] Bevereg. Not. in Can. Apoſt. c. 83. [o] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 30. κοσμικὰ ἀξιώματα ὑποδυόμενος, καὶ δικηναίου μᾶλλον ἢ ἐπισκόπου θέλων καλεῖσθαι [p] Valeſius in Loc. Ducenarii dicebantur Procuratores, qui ducenta Seſtertia annui Salarii nomine accipiebant à Principe ex Dione lib. 53. [q] Theod. lib. 2. c. 30. [r] Cypr. Ep. 66. al. 1. ad Cler. Furnitan. p. 3. Ideo Victor cum contra formam nuper in Concilio à ſacerdotibus datam, Geminium Fauſtinum Presbyterum auſus ſit Tutorem conſtituere, non eſt quod pro Dormitione ejus apud vos fiat Oblatio, aut Deprecatio aliqua nomine ejus in Eccleſia frequentetur. [s] Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 18. Ut Epiſcopus Tuitionem Teſtamentorum non ſuſcipiat. [t] Juſt. Novel. 123. c. 5. Epiſcopos & Monachos ex nulla lege Tutores aut Curatores cujuſcunq; Perſonæ fieri concedimus. Presbyteros autem & Diaconos & Subdiaconos, ſi jure ac lege cognationis ad Tutelam aut Curam vocentur, ejuſmodi munus ſuſcipere concedimus. Vid. Concil. Chalced. c. 3.

ſtant

ſtant Attendance upon Divine Service, as appears both from the foreſaid Novel [u] of Juſtinian, and ſome ancient Canons [w], which forbad a Clergyman to become a Sponſor in any ſuch Cauſe under the Penalty of Deprivation.

SECT. XII. Laws againſt their following ſecular Trades and Merchandize.

Now as all theſe Offices and Employments were forbidden the Clergy upon the Account of being Conſumers of their Time, and Hindrances of Divine Service: So there were ſome others prohibited, not only upon this Account, but alſo upon the Notion of their being generally attended with Covetouſneſs and filthy Lucre. Thus in the firſt Council of Carthage [x] we find ſeveral Prohibitions of Clergymens becoming Stewards or Accountants to Laymen. The third Council [y] forbids both that, and alſo their taking any Houſes or Lands to Farm, and generally all Buſineſs that was diſreputable and unbecoming their Calling. The ſecond Council of Arles [z] likewiſe forbids their Farming other Men's Eſtates, of following any Trade or Merchandice for filthy Lucre's ſake, under the Penalty of Deprivation. The General Council of Chalcedon [a] has a Canon to the ſame Purpoſe, That no Monk or Clergyman ſhall rent any Eſtate, or take upon him the Management of any ſecular Buſineſs, except the Law called him to be Guardian to Orphans (in this Caſe that has been ſpoken of before, as being their next Relation) or elſe the Biſhop made him Steward of the Church-Revenues, or Overſeer of the Widows, Orphans, or ſuch others as ſtood in need of the Church's Care and Aſſiſtance. And here the Reaſon given for making this Canon, is, That ſome of the Clergy were found to neglect the Service of God, and live in Lay-mens Houſes as their Stewards for Covetouſneſs and filthy Lucre's ſake. Which was an old Complaint made by Cyprian [b] in that ſharp Invective of his againſt ſome of the Biſhops of his own Age, who were ſo far gone in this Vice of Covetouſneſs, as to neglect the Service of God to follow worldly Buſineſs; leaving their Sees, and deſerting their People, to ramble about in queſt of gainful Trades in other Countries, to the Provocation of the Divine Vengeance, and flagrant Scandal of the Church. So that theſe being the Reaſons of making ſuch Laws, we are to judge of the Nature of the Laws themſelves by the Intent and Deſign of them; which was to correct ſuch manifeſt Abuſes, as Covetouſneſs and neglect of Divine Service, which either as Cauſe or Effect too often attended the Clergy's Engagement of themſelves in ſecular Buſineſs.

SECT. XIII. What Limitations and Exceptions theſe Laws admitted of.

But in ſome Caſes it was reaſonable to preſume, that their Engagements of this nature were ſeparate from theſe Vices. For in ſome Times and Places, where the Revenues of the Church were very ſmall, and not a competent Maintenance for all the Clergy, ſome of them, eſpecially among the inferior Orders, were obliged to divide themſelves between the Service of the Church and ſome ſecular Calling. Others who found they had time enough to ſpare, negotiated out of Charity, to beſtow their Gains in the Relief of the Poor, and other pious Uſes. And ſome, who before their entrance into Orders, had been brought up to an Aſcetick and Philoſophick Life, wherein they wrought at ſome honeſt manual Calling with their own Hands, continued to work in the ſame manner, though not in the ſame meaſure, even after they were made Presbyters and Biſhops in the Church, for the Exerciſe of their Humility, or to anſwer ſome other End of a Chriſtian Life. Now in all theſe Caſes, the Vices complained of in the forementioned Laws, as the Reaſons of the Prohibition, had no Share or Concern: For ſuch Mens Negotiations were neither the Effects of Covetouſneſs, nor attended properly with any neglect of Divine Service: And conſequently not within the Prohibition and Cenſure of the Laws. For firſt, both the Laws of Church and State allowed the inferior Clergy to work at an honeſt Calling in Caſes of Neceſſity, to provide themſelves of a liberal Maintenance, when the Revenues of the Church could not do it.

In the fourth Council of Carthage [c] there are three Canons immediately following one another to this Purpoſe, That they ſhould provide themſelves of Food and Raiment at ſome honeſt Trade or Husbandry, without hindering the Duties of their Office in the Church: And ſuch of them as were able to labour, ſhould be taught ſome Trade and Letters together. And the Laws of the State were ſo far from hindering this, that they encouraged ſuch of the Clergy to follow an honeſt Calling, by granting them a ſpecial Immunity from the Chryſargyrum, or Luſtral Tax, which was exacted of all other Tradeſmen, as I have ſhewed more at large in an another [*] Place. 2dly, It was lawful alſo to ſpend their leiſure Hours upon any manual Trade or Calling, [u] Juſt. Novel. 123. c. 6. Sed neque Procuratorem Litis, aut Fide juſſorem pro talibus cauſis Epiſcoporum, aut alium Clericum, proprio nomine, aut Eccleſiæ ſinimus: Ne per hanc occaſionem ſacra Miniſteria impediantur. [w] Canon. Apoſt. c. 20. Κληρικὸς ἐγγύας διδὺς, καθαιρέσθω. Vid. Conſtitut. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 6. [x] Conc. Carth. 1. c. 6. Qui ſerviunt Deo, & annexi ſunt Clero, non accedant ad Actus ſeu Adminiſtrationem vel Procurationem domorum. Ibid. c. 9. Laicis non liceat Clericos noſtros eligere Apothecarios vel Ratiocinatores. [y] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 15. Clerici non ſint Conductores, neque Procuratores, neque ullo turpi vel inhoneſto negotio victum quærant. [z] Conc. Arelat. 1. al. 2. c. 14. Siquis Clericus conductor alienæ rei voluerit eſſe aut turpis lucri gratia aliquod genus negotiationis exercuerit, depoſitus à Clero, à Communione alienus habeatur. [a] Conc. Chalced. c. 3. [b] Cypr. de Lapſis, p. 123. Epiſcopi plurimi Divina Procuratione contempta, Procuratores rerum Sæcularium fieri, derelicta Cathedra, Plebe deſerta, per alienas Provincias oberrantes, negotiationis quæſtuoſæ nundinas aucupari, &c. [c] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 51. Clericus quantumlibet verbo Dei eruditus, artificio victum quærat. Ibid. c. 52. Clericus victum & veſtimentum ſibi, artificiolo vel agricultura, abſque Officii ſui duntaxat detrimento, præparet. Ibid. c. 53. Omnes clerici, qui ad operandum validi ſunt, & Artificiola & Literas diſcant. [*] Book 5. Chap. 3. Sect. 6.

when

when it was to anſwer ſome good End of Charity thereby: As that they might not be overburthenſome to the Church; or might have ſome Superfluities to beſtow upon the Indigent and Needy; or even that they might ſet the Laity a provoking Example of Induſtry and Diligence in their Callings. Which were thoſe worthy Ends, which the holy Apoſtle St. Paul propoſed to himſelf in labouring with his own Hands at the Trade of Tent-making: After whoſe Example many eminent Biſhops of the ancient Church were not aſhamed to employ their ſpare Hours in ſome honeſt Labour, to promote the ſame Ends of Charity, which the Apoſtle ſo frequently inculcates. Thus Sozomen obſerves [d] of Zeno Biſhop of Maiuma in Paleſtine, that he lived to be an hundred Years old, all which time he conſtantly attended both Morning and Evening the Service of the Church, and yet found time to work at the Trade of a Linen-weaver, by which he not only ſubſiſted himſelf, but relieved others, though he lived in a rich and wealthy Church. Epiphanius makes a more general Obſervation againſt the Maſſalian Hereticks (who were great Encouragers of Idleneſs) that not only thoſe of a Monaſtick Life, but alſo many of the Prieſts of GOD [e] imitating their holy Father in Chriſt, St. Paul, wrought with their own Hands at ſome honeſt Trade, that was no Diſhonour to their Dignity, and conſiſtent with their conſtant Attendance upon their Eccleſiaſtical Duties; by which means they had both what was neceſſary for their own Subſiſtence, and to give to others that ſtood in need of their Relief. The Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions [f] brings in the Apoſtles recommending Induſtry in every Man's Calling from their own Example, that they might have wherewith to ſuſtain themſelves, and ſupply the Needs of others. Which though it be not an exact Repreſentation of the Apoſtles Practice (for we do not read of any other Apoſtle's labouring with their own Hands, except St. Paul, whilſt he preached the Goſpel) yet it ſerves to ſhew what Senſe that Author had of this Matter; that he did not think it ſimply unlawful for a Clergyman to labour at ſome ſecular Employment, when the End was Charity, and not filthy Lucre. And it is obſervable, that the Imperial Laws for ſome time granted the ſame Immunity from the Luſtral Tax to the inferior Clergy, that traded with a charitable Deſign to relieve others; as to thoſe that traded out of Neceſſity for their own Maintenance; of both which I have given an Account in another Place. 3*dly*, We have ſome Inſtances of very eminent Biſhops, who out of Humility and love of a Philoſophical and laborious Life, ſpent their vacant Hours in ſome honeſt Buſineſs, to which they had been accuſtomed in their former Days. Thus Ruffin [g] and Socrates [h] and Sozomen [i] tell us of Spiridion Biſhop of Trimithus in Cyprus, one of the moſt eminent Biſhops in the Council of Nice, a Man famous for the Gift of Prophecy and Miracles, that having been a Shepherd before, he continued to employ himſelf in that Calling out of his great Humility all his Life. But then he made his Actions and the whole Tenor of his Life demonſtrate, that he did it not out of Covetouſneſs. But Sozomen particularly notes, that whatever his Product was, he either diſtributed it among the Poor, or lent it without Uſury to ſuch as needed to borrow, whom he truſted to take out of his Store-houſe what they pleaſed, and return what they pleaſed, without ever examining or taking any account of them. 4*thly*, I obſerve, that thoſe Laws which were moſt ſevere againſt the ſuperior Clergy's negotiating in any ſecular Buſineſs, in Caſes of Neceſſity allowed them a Privilege, which was equivalent to it: That is, that they might employ others to Factor for them, ſo long as they were not concerned in their own Perſons. For ſo the Council of Eliberis [k] words it: Biſhops, Presbyters, and Deacons ſhall not leave their Station to follow a ſecular Calling, nor rove into other Provinces after Fairs and Markets. But yet to provide themſelves a Livelihood, they may employ a Son, or a Freeman, or an hired Servant, or a Friend, or any other: And if they negotiate, let them negotiate within their own Province. So that all theſe Laws were juſtly tempered with great Wiſdom and Prudence; that as on the one hand the Service of GOD and the Needs of his Miniſters and Servants might be ſupplied together: So on the other, no Encouragement ſhould be given to Covetouſneſs in the Clergy, nor any one be countenanced in the Neglect of his proper Buſineſs, by a Licence to lead a wandering, buſie, diſtracted Life, which did not become thoſe that were dedicated to the ſacred Function: 'Tis againſt theſe only, that all the ſevere Invectives of St. Jerom [l] and others of the Ancients [*] are levelled, which the Reader muſt interpret with the ſame Limitations, and Diſtinction of Caſes, as we have done the publick Laws: The Deſign of both being only to cenſure the Vices of the Rich, who without any juſt Reaſon or Neceſſity immerſed themſelves in the Cares of a ſecular Life, contrary to the Rules and Tenor of their Profeſſion.

SECT. XIV. Laws reſpecting their outward Converſation.

ANOTHER ſort of Laws were made reſpecting their outward Behaviour, to guard them equally againſt Scandal in their Character, and Danger in their Converſation. Such [d] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 28. [e] Epiphan. Hær. 80. Maſſalian. n. 6. [f] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 63. [g] Ruffin. lib. 1. c. 5. Hic Paſtor ovium teiam in Epiſcopatu poſitus permanſit. [h] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 12. διὰ δὲ ἀτυφίαν πολλὴν, ἐχόμενος τῆ ἐπισκοπῆς ἑτοιμαίνε κὶ τὰ πρόβατα. [i] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 11. [k] Conc. Eliber. c. 19. Epiſcopi, Presbyteri, & Diaconi, de locis ſuis negotiandi cauſa non diſcedant, nec circumeuntes Provincias, quæſtuoſas Nundinas ſectentur. Sane ad victum ſibi conquirendum, aut Filium, aut Libertum, aut Mercenarium, aut Amicum, aut quemlibet mittant: & ſi voluerint negotiari, intra Provinciam negotientur. [l] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Negotiatorem Clericum quaſi Peſtem fuge, &c. [*] Sulpic. Sever. Hiſt. lib. 1. p. 30. Tanta hoc tempore animos eorum habendi cupido veluti labes inceſſit: inhiant poſſeſſionibus, prædia excolunt, auro incubant, emunt, venduntque quæſtui, per omnia ſtudent, &c.

were the Laws againſt Correſponding and Converſing too familiarly with Jews, and Gentile Philoſophers. The Council of Eliberis [m] forbids them to Eat with the Jews under Pain of Suſpenſion. The Council of Agde [n] has a Canon to the ſame purpoſe, forbidding them to give, as well as receive an Entertainment from the Jews. And thoſe called the Apoſtolical Canons [o] not only prohibit them to Faſt or Feaſt with the Jews, but to receive τῆς ἑορτῆς ξένια, any of thoſe Portions or Preſents, which they were uſed to ſend to one another upon their Feſtivals. And the Laws againſt Converſing with Gentile Philoſophers were much of the ſame Nature. For Sozomen [p] ſays, Theodotus Biſhop of Laodicea in Syria excommunicated the two Apollinarii, Father and Son, becauſe they went to hear Epiphanius the Sophiſt ſpeak his Hymn in the Praiſe of Bacchus; which was not ſo agreeable to their Character, the one being a Presbyter, the other a Deacon in the Chriſtian Church. It was in regard to their Character likewiſe, that other Canons reſtrained them from eating or drinking in a Tavern, except they were upon a Journey, or ſome ſuch neceſſary Occaſion required them to do it. For among thoſe called Apoſtolical Canons [q], and the Decrees of the Council of Laodicea [r] and Carthage [s], there are ſeveral Rules to this Purpoſe; the Strictneſs of which is not much to be wondered at, ſince Julian required the ſame Caution in his Heathen Prieſts, that they ſhould neither appear at the publick Theatres, nor in any Taverns, under Pain of Depoſition from their Office of Prieſthood, as may be ſeen in his Letter to Arſacius High-Prieſt of Galatia, which Sozomen [t] records, and other Fragments of his Writings.

SECT. XV. Laws relating to their Habit.

To this ſort of Laws we may reduce thoſe ancient Rules, which concerned the Garb and Habit of the ancient Clergy; in which ſuch a decent Mean was to be obſerved, as might keep them from Obloquy and Cenſure on both Hands, either as too nice and critical, or too ſlovenly and careleſs in their Dreſs. Their Habit being generally to be ſuch, as might expreſs the Gravity of their Minds without any ſuperſtitious Singularities, and their Modeſty and Humility without Affectation. In this Matter therefore their Rules were formed according to the Cuſtoms and Opinions of the Age, which are commonly the Standard and Meaſure of Decency and Indecency in things of this Nature. Thus for Inſtance, long Hair and Baldneſs by ſhaving the Head or Beard, being then generally reputed Indecencies in contrary Extreams, the Clergy were obliged to obſerve a becoming Mediocrity between them. This is the Meaning of that controverted Canon in the fourth Council of Carthage, according to its true Reading, That a Clergyman ſhall neither indulge long Hair, nor ſhave his Beard. Clericus nec Comam nutriat [u] nec Barbam radat. The contrary Cuſtom being now in vogue in the Church of Rome, Bellarmin [w] and many other Writers of that ſide, who will have all their Ceremonies to be Apoſtolical, and to contain ſome great Myſtery in them, pretend, that the word, Radat, ſhould be left out of that ancient Canon, to make it agreeable to the preſent Practice. But the Learned Savaro [x] proves the other to be the true Reading, as well from the Vatican, as many other Manuſcripts. And even Spondanus himſelf [y] confeſſes as much, and thereupon takes occaſion to correct Baronius for aſſerting, that in the time of Sidonius Apollinaris it was the Cuſtom of the French Biſhops to ſhave their Beards: Whereas the contrary appears from one of Sidonius his Epiſtles [z], that their Cuſtom then was to wear ſhort Hair and long Beards, as he deſcribes his Friend Maximus Palatinus, who of a Secular was become a Clergyman: He ſays, his Habit, his Gate, his Modeſty, his Countenance, his Diſcourſe were all Religious; and agreeably to theſe, his Hair was ſhort, and his Beard long. Cuſtom, it ſeems, had then made it Decent and Becoming; and upon that ground the Ancients are ſometimes pretty ſevere againſt ſuch of the Clergy as tranſgreſſed in this Point, as guilty of an Indecency in going contrary to the Rules and Cuſtoms of the Church, which were to be obſerved, though the thing was otherwiſe in itſelf of an indifferent Nature.

SECT. XVI. The Tonſure of the ancients very different from that of the Romiſh Church.

THE Romaniſts are generally as much to blame in their Accounts of the ancient Tonſure of the Clergy: Which they deſcribe in ſuch a manner, as to make Parallel to that ſhaving of the Crown of the Head by way of myſtical Rite, which is now the modern Cuſtom. Whereas this was ſo far from being required as a matter of Decency among the Ancients, that it was condemned and prohibited by them. Which may appear from that Queſtion, which Optatus puts to the Donatiſts, when he asks them, where they had a Command [a] to ſhave the Heads of the Prieſts? As they had done by the Catholick Clergy in order to bring them to do publick Penance in the Church. In which Caſe, as Albaſpinæus rightly [b] notes, it was cuſtomary to uſe ſhaving to Baldneſs, and ſprinkling the Head with Aſhes, as ſigns of Sorrow and Repentance. But the Prieſts of GOD were not to be thus treated. Which ſhews, that the Ancients then knew nothing of this, as a Ceremony belonging to the Ordination or Life of the Clergy. Which is ſtill more evident from what St. Jerom ſays upon thoſe words of Ezekiel 44. 20. Neither ſhall they ſhave their Heads, nor ſuffer their Locks to grow long, they ſhall only poll their Heads. This, ſays he [c], evidently demonſtrates, that we ought neither to have our Heads ſhaved, as the Prieſts and Votaries of Iſis and Serapis; nor yet to ſuffer our Hair to grow long, after the luxurious manner of Barbarians and Soldiers; but that Prieſts ſhould appear with a venerable and grave Countenance; neither are they to make themſelves bald with a Razor, nor poll their Heads ſo cloſe, that they may look as if they were ſhaven; but they are to let their Hair grow ſo long, that it may cover their Skin. It is impoſſible now for any rational Man to imagine, that Chriſtian Prieſts had ſhaven Crowns in the time of St. Jerom, when he ſo expreſly ſays they had not, and that none but the Prieſts of Iſis and Serapis had ſo. But the Cuſtom was to poll their Heads, and cut their Hair to a moderate degree; not for any Myſtery that was in it, but for the ſake of Decency and Gravity; that they might neither affect the Manners of the luxurious Part of the World, which prided itſelf in long Hair; nor fall under Contempt and Obloquy by an indecent Baldneſs; but expreſs a ſort of venerable Modeſty in their Looks and Aſpects, which is the Reaſon that St. Jerom aſſigns for the ancient Tonſure.

[m] Conc. Eliber. c. 50. Clericus qui cum Judæis cibum ſumpſerit, placuit eum à Communione abſtinere, ut debeat emendari. [n] Conc. Agathen. c. 40. Omnes Clerici Judæorum convivia evitent. Nec eos ad convivia quiſquam excipiat. [o] Canon. Apoſt. c. 70. [p] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 25. [q] Canon. Apoſt. c. 53. [r] Conc. Laodic. c. 24. [s] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 27. [t] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 16. Vid. Julian. Fragment. Epiſt. p. 547. [u] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 44. [w] Bellarm. de Monach. lib. 2. c. 40. [x] Savaro. Not. in Sidonium. lib. 4. Ep. 24. p. 306. [y] Spondan. Epit. Baron. an. 58. an. 58. [z] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 24. Habitus viro, Gradus, Pudor, Color, ſermo religioſus: Tum Coma brevis, Barba prolixa, &c. [a] Optat. cont. Parmen. lib. 2. p. 58. Docete, ubi vobis mandatum eſt radere capita ſacerdotum, cum e contrario ſint tot exempla propoſita, fieri non debere ——. Qui parare debebas aures ad audiendum, paraſti novaculam ad delinquendum. [b] Albaſp. in Loc. p. 141.

SECT. XVII. Of the Corona Clericalis, and why the Clergy called Coronati.

FROM hence we may farther conclude, that the ancient Clergy were not called Coronati from their ſhaven Crowns, as ſome would have it, ſince it is evident there was no ſuch thing among them: But it ſeems rather a Name given them, as Gothofred [d] and Savaro [e] conjecture, from the Form of the ancient Tonſure; which was made in a Circular Figure, by cutting away the Hair a little from the Crown of the Head, and leaving a Round or Circle hanging downwards. This in ſome Councils [f] is called Circuli Corona, and ordered to be uſed in oppoſition to ſome Hereticks, who it ſeems prided themſelves in long Hair and the contrary Cuſtom. But I am not confident, that this was the Reaſon of the Name, Coronati: It might be given the Clergy in general out of Reſpect to their Office and Character, which was always of great Honour and Eſteem: For Corona ſignifies Honour and Dignity in a Figurative Senſe, and it is not improbable but that the Word was ſometimes ſo uſed in this caſe, as has been noted before [*] in ſpeaking of the Form of ſaluting Biſhops, Per Coronam.

SECT. XVIII. Whether the Clergy were diſtinguiſhed in their Apparel from Laymen.

As to the Kind or Faſhion of their Apparel, it does not appear for ſeveral Ages, that there was any other Diſtinction obſerved therein between them and the Laity, ſave that they were more confined to wear that which was modeſt and grave, and becoming their Profeſſion, without being tied to any certain Garb or Form of Cloathing. Several Councils require the Clergy to wear Apparel ſuitable to their Profeſſion; but they do not expreſs any kind, or deſcribe it otherwiſe, than that it ſhould not border upon Luxury or any affected Neatneſs, but rather keep a Medium between Finery and Slovenlineſs. This was St. Jerom's Direction to Nepotian [g], That he ſhould neither wear Black nor White Cloathing: For Gaity and Slovenlineſs were equally to be avoided; the one favouring of Niceneſs and Delicacy, and the other of Vain-glory. Yet in different Places different Cuſtoms ſeem to have prevailed, as to the Colour of their Cloathing. For at Conſtantinople, in the time of Chryſoſtom and Arſacius, the Clergy commonly went in Black, as the Novatians did in White. Which appears from the Diſpute which Socrates ſpeaks of [h] between Siſinnius the Novatian Biſhop, and one of Arſacius's Clergy: For he ſays, Siſinnius going one Day to viſit Arſacius, the Clergyman asked him, Why he wore a Garment which did not become a Biſhop? and where it was written, that a Prieſt ought to be cloathed in White? To whom he replyed, You firſt ſhew me, where it is written that a Biſhop ought to be cloathed in Black? From this it is eaſy to collect, that by this time it was become the Cuſtom at Conſtantinople for the Clergy to wear Black, and that perhaps to diſtinguiſh themſelves from the Novatians, who affected it ſeems to appear in White. But we do not find theſe Matters as yet ſo particularly determined or preſcribed in any Councils. For the fourth Council of Carthage [i] requires the Clergy to wear ſuch Apparel as was ſuitable to their Profeſſion, but does not particularize any farther about it, ſave that they ſhould not affect any Finery or Gaity in their Shooes or Cloathing. And the Council of Agde [k] gives the very ſame Direction. Baronius [l] indeed is very earneſt to perſuade his Reader, that Biſhops in the time of Cyprian wore the ſame Habit that is now worn by the Cardinals in the Church of Rome, and ſuch Biſhops as are advanced from a Monaſtery

[c] Hieron. lib. 13. in Ezek. cap. 44. p. 668. Quod autem ſequitur, Capita ſua non radent, &c. perſpicue demonſtratur, nec raſis capitibus, ſicut ſacerdotes, cultoreſque Iſidis atque Serapis, nos eſſe debere; nec rurſum comam demittere, quod propie luxurioſum eſt, Barbarorumque & Militantium; ſed ut honeſtus habitus ſacerdotum facie demonſtretur; nec calvitium novacula eſſe faciendum, nec ita ad preſſum tondendum caput, ut raſorum ſimiles eſſe videamur; ſed in tantum capillos eſſe demittendos, ut operta ſit cutis.
[d] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Theod. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 38. [e] Savaro Not. in Sidon. lib. 6. Ep. 3. [f] Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 20. Omnes Clerici, detonſo ſuperius capite toto, inferius ſolam Circuli Coronam relinquant, &c. [*] Book 3. Chap. 9. Sect. 5. [g] Hieron. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. Veſtes pullas æque devita, ut candidas. Ornatus, ut ſordes pari modo fugiendæ ſunt; quia alterum Delicias, alterum Gloriam redolet, &c. [h] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 22. [i] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 45. Clericus Profeſſionem ſuam & in Habitu & in inceſſu probet: Et ideo nec veſtibus nec Calceamentis Decorem quærat. [k] Conc. Agathen. c. 20. Veſtimenta vel Calceamenta etiam eis, niſi quæ Religionem deceant, uti aut habere non liceat. [l] Baron. ann. 261. n. 44.

to

to the Episcopal Throne. As if Cyprian had been a Monk or a Cardinal of the Church of Rome. But as the Learned Editor [m] of Cyprian's Works observes, there is scarce any thing so absurd, that a Man who is engaged in a Party-Cause, cannot persuade himself to believe, and hope to persuade others also. For is it likely that Bishops and Presbyters should make their Appearance in Publick in a distinct Habit, at a time when Tyrants and Persecutors made a most diligent Search after them to put them to Death? Do the Clergy of the present Church of Rome use to appear so in Countries, where they live in danger of being discovered and taken? But what shall we say to the Writer of Cyprian's Passion, who mentions Cyprian's [n] Lacerna or Birrus, and after that his Tunica or Dalmatica, and last of all his Linea in which he suffered? Of which Baronius makes the Linea to be the Bishop's Rochet; and the Dalmatica or Tunica, that which they now call the loose Tunicle; and the Lacerna or Birrus the Red Silken Vestment that covers the Shoulders. Why? To all this it may be said, that these are only old Names for new Things. For besides the absurdity of thinking that Cyprian should go to his Martyrdom in his Sacred and Pontifical Robes (which were not to be worn out of the Church) it is evident these were but the Names of those common Garments, which many Christians then used without Distinction.

SECT. XIX. A particular Account of the Birrus and Pallium.

As to the Birrus, it is evident that it was no peculiar Habit of Bishops, no nor yet of the Clergy. That it was not peculiar to Bishops, appears from what St. Austin says of it, that it was the common Garment which all his Clergy wore as well as himself. And therefore if any one presented him with a richer Birrus than ordinary, he would not wear it. For [o] tho' it might become another Bishop, it would not become him, who was a poor Man, and born of poor Parents. He must have such an one, as a Presbyter could have, or a Deacon, or a Subdeacon. If any one gave him a better, he was used to sell it; that since the Garment itself could not be used in common, the Price of it at least might be common. This shews plainly, that the Birrus was not the Bishop's peculiar Habit, but the common Garment of all St. Austin's Clergy. And that this was no more than the common Tunica, or Coat worn generally by Christians in Africk and other Places, may appear from a Canon of the Council of Gangra, made against Eustathius the Heretick and his Followers, who condemned the common Habit, [p] and brought in the Use of a strange Habit in its room. Now this common Habit was the Birrus, or Βῆρος, as they call it in the Canon made against them, which runs in these Words, If any Man [q] uses the Pallium, or Cloak upon the account of an Ascetick Life, and as if there were some Holiness in that, condemns those that with reverence use the Birrus, and other Garments that are commonly worn, let him be Anathema. The Birrus then was the common and ordinary Coat, which the Christians of Paphlagonia and those Parts generally wore: And though the Asceticks used the περιβόλαιον, the Philosophick Pallium, or Cloak, yet the Clergy of that Country used the common Birrus, or Coat. For Sozomen [r] in relating this same History, instead of Βῆρος uses the Word χίτων, which is a more known Name for the Latin Tunica, or Coat: And he also adds, that Eustathius himself, after the Synod had condemned him, changed his Philosophick Habit, and used the same Garb that the secular Presbyters wore. Which plainly evinces, that as yet the Clergy in those Parts did not distinguish themselves by their Habit from other Christians, though the Asceticks generally did. In the French Churches several Years after this we find the Clergy still using the same secular Habit with other Christians: And when some endeavoured to alter it, and introduce the Ascetick or Philosophick Habit among them; Celestine Bishop of Rome wrote a reprimanding Letter to them, asking, Why that Habit the Cloak was used [s] in the French Churches, when it had been the Custom of so many Bishops for so many Years to use the common Habit of the People? from whom the Clergy were to be distinguished by their Doctrine, and not by their Garb; by their Conversation, not their Habit; by the Purity of their Souls, rather than their Dress. But yet I must observe, That in some Places the Asceticks, when they were taken into the Ministry of the Church, were allowed to retain their ancient Philosophick Habit without any Censure. Thus St. Jerom [t] observes of his Friend Nepotian, that he kept to his Philosophick Habit, the Pallium, after he was ordained Presbyter, and wore it to the Day of his Death. He says the same of Heraclas [u] Presbyter of Alexandria, that he continued to use his Philosophick Habit when he was Presbyter. Which is noted also by Eusebius out of Origen, who says, That when Heraclas entered himſelf in the School of Philoſophy under Ammonius, he then laid aſide the common Garb, and took the Philoſophick [w] Habit, with which he ſat in the Presbytery of Alexandria. Upon which Valeſius [x] very rightly obſerves, that there was then no peculiar Habit of the Clergy, foraſmuch as Heraclas always retained his Philoſophick Pallium; which was the known Habit of the Aſceticks, but as yet was very rarely uſed among the Clergy, who wore generally the common Habit, except when ſome ſuch Philoſophers and Aſceticks came among them. For here we ſee it was noted as ſomething rare and ſingular in Heraclas: But in after-Ages, when the Clergy were chiefly choſen out of the Monks and Aſceticks, the Philoſophick Habit came in by Degrees with them, and was encouraged, till at laſt it became the moſt uſual Habit of the Clergy of all ſorts: But this was not till the fifth or ſixth Century, as may be collected from what has been ſaid before on this Subject.

[m] Vide cl. Fell. Not. in Vit. Cypr. p. 13. [n] Passio Cypr. p. 13. Cyprianus in agrum Sexti productus est, & ibi se Lacerna Birro expoliavit. —— Et cum se Dalmatica (al. Tunica) expoliasset, & Diaconibus tradidisset, in Linea stetit, & cœpit spiculatorem sustinere. [o] Aug. Serm. 50. de Diversis. Tom. 10. p. 523. Offeratur mihi Birrum pretiosum, forte decet Episcopum, quamvis non deceat Augustinum, id est, hominem pauperem, de pauperibus natum. —— Talem debeo habere, qualem potest habere Presbyter, qualem potest habere Diaconus & Subdiaconus. —— Si quis meliorem dederit, vendo, quod & facere soleo, ut quando non potest vestis esse communis, pretium vestis sit commune.

[p] Conc. Gangr. in Præfat. ξένα ἀμφιάσματα ἐπὶ καταστάσει τῆς κοινότητος τῶν ἀμφιασμάτων συνάγοντες.

[q] Conc. Gangr. c. 12. εἴ τις ἀνδρῶν διὰ νομιζομένην ἄσκησιν περιβολαίῳ χρῆται, καὶ ὡς ἂν ἐκ τούτου τὴν δικαιοσύνην ἔχων καταψηφίσοιτο τῶν μετ' εὐλαβείας τοὺς βίρρους φορούντων, καὶ τῇ ἄλλῃ κοινῇ καὶ ἐν συνηθείᾳ ὄσῃ ἐσθῆτι κεχρημένων, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. [r] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. [s] Celestin. Ep. 2. ad Episc. Gall. c. 1. Unde hic Habitus in Ecclesiis Gallicanis, ut tot annorum, tantorumque Pontificum in altarum habitum consuetudo vertatur? Discernendi a Plebe vel cæteris sumus Doctrina, non Veste; Conversatione, non Habitu; Mentis Puritate, non Cultu. [t] Hieron. Epitaph. Nepotian. [u] Hieron. de Scriptor. c. 54. Heraclam Presbyterum, qui sub habitu Philosophi perseverabat, &c.

SECT. XX. Of the Collobium, Dalmatica, Caracalla, Hemiphorium, and Linea.

BUT ſome perhaps may think, the Clergy had always a diſtinct Habit, becauſe ſome ancient Authors take notice of the Collobium, as a Garment worn by Biſhops and Presbyters in the Primitive Ages. For Epiphanius [y] ſpeaking of Arius, while he was Presbyter of Alexandria, ſays, he always wore the Collobium or Hemiphorium. And Pius Biſhop of Rome in his Epiſtle to Juſtus Biſhop of Vienna (which by many is reckoned genuine) ſpeaks of Juſtus [z] as wearing a Collobium alſo. But this was no more than the Tunica, of which there were two ſorts, the Dalmatica and Collobium, which differed only in this reſpect, that the Collobium was the ſhort Coat without long Sleeves, ſo called from κολοβὸς, curtus; but the Dalmatica was the Tunica manicata & talaris, the long Coat with Sleeves. Both which were uſed by the Romans, though the Collobium was the more common, ancient and honourable Garment. As appears from Tully, who derides [a] Cataline's Soldiers, becauſe they had their Tunicæ manicatæ & talares; whereas the ancient Romans were uſed to wear the Collobia, or ſhort Coats without long Sleeves. As Servius [b] and St. Jerom [c] after him obſerve from this place of Tully. So that a Biſhop or a Presbyter's wearing a Collobium means no more (when the hard Name is explained) but their wearing a common Roman Garment. Which is evident from one of the Laws of Theodoſius the Great, made about the Habits which Senators were allowed to uſe within the Walls of Conſtantinople, where they are forbidden to wear the Soldier's Coat, the Chalmys, but allowed to uſe the Collobium and Penula [d], becauſe theſe were Civil Habits, and Veſtments of Peace. The Dalmatica, or as it was otherwiſe called, χειρίδωτος, or Tunica Manicata, becauſe it had Sleeves down to the Hands, was ſeldom uſed among the Romans: For Lampridius [e] notes it as a ſingular thing in the Life of Commodus the Emperor, that he wore a Dalmatica in publick, which he alſo [f] cenſures in Heliogabalus, as Tully had done before in Catiline. And that is a good Argument to prove, that the Clergy of this Age did not wear the Dalmatica in publick, ſince it was not then the common Garment of the Romans. And the Conjecture of a Learned Man [g] is well grounded, who thinks that in the Life of St. Cyprian, where the ancient Copies have Tunicam tulit, ſome officious modern Tranſcribers changed the Word, Tunica, into Dalmatica, as being more agreeable to the Language and Cuſtom of their own Time, when the Dalmatica was reckoned among the Sacred Veſtments of the Church, though we never find it mentioned as ſuch in any ancient Author. The Caracalla, which ſome now call the Caſſock, was originally a Gallick Habit, which Antoninus Baſſianus, who was born at Lyons in France, firſt brought into uſe among the Roman People, whence he had the Name of Caracalla, as Aurelius Victor [h] informs us. It was a long Garment, reaching down to the Heels, which Victor ſays, the Roman People put on, when they went to Salute the Emperor: But whether it was alſo a Clerical Habit in thoſe Days, may be queſtioned, ſince no ancient Author ſpeaks of it as ſuch: But if it was, it was not any peculiar Habit of the Clergy; ſince Spartian [i], who lived in the Time of Conſtantine, ſays, they were then uſed by the common People of Rome, who called them Caracalla Antoninianæ from their Author. The ἡμιφόριον, which Epiphanius joins with the Collobium, was either but another Name for the ſame Garment, or one like it: For it ſignifies a ſhort Cloak or Coat, as Petavius [k] and other Criticks explain it: ἥμισυ ἱματείας, or Dimidium Pallium, which anſwers to the Deſcription of the Collobium given before. As for the Linea mentioned in the Life of Cyprian, which Baro-

[w] Orig. ap. Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 19. πρότερον κοινῇ ἐσθῆτι χρώμενος, ὑποδυσαμένου καὶ φιλόσοφον ἀναλαβὼν χῆμα μετὰ τῆς διδασκαλείας. [x] Valeſ. Not. in Loc. Ex his apparet, nullum etiam tum peculiarem fuiſſe Veſtitum Clericorum, quandoquidem Heraclas Philoſophicum Pallium ſemper retinuit, [y] Epiph. Hær. 69. Arian. n. 3. ἡμιφόριον δὲ ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀεὶ καὶ κολλιβίωνα ἐνδυσυνόμενος. [z] Pius Ep. 2. ad Juſt. Vien. Tu vero apud Senatoriam Viennam——Collobio Epiſcoporum veſtitus, &c. [a] Cicero. Orat. 2. in Catalin. n. 22. [b] Servius in Virgil. 9. Æneid. verſ. 616. Et tunicæ manicas, & habent redimicula mitræ. [c] Hieron. Quæſt. Hebraic. in Geneſ. 37. 32. Tom. 3. p. 222. Pro varia Tunica Symmachus interpretatus eſt Tunicam manicatam; ſive quod ad talos uſque deſcenderet, ſive quod haberet manicas; antiqui enim magis Collobiis utebantur. [d] Cod. Theodoſ. lib. 14. tit. 10. de Habitu quo uti oportet intra Urbem. leg. 1. Nullus ſenatorum habitum ſibi vindicet militarem, ſed Chlamydis terrore depoſito, quieta Colloborum ac Penularum induat veſtimenta, &c. [e] Lamprid. Vit. Commodi. p. 139. Dalmaticatus in publico proceſſit. [f] Id. Vit. Heliogab. p. 317. Dalmaticatus in publico poſt cœnam ſæpe viſus eſt. [g] Bp. Fell. Not. in Vit. Cypr. p. 13. [h] Victor Epit. Vit. Caracallæ. Cum è Gallia veſtem plurimam devexiſſet, calareſque Caracallas feciſſet, coegiſſetque plebem ad ſe ſalutandum indutam talibus introire, de nomine hujus veſtis, Caracalla cognominatus eſt. [i] Spartian. Vit. Caracal. p. 251. Ipſe Caracalli nomen accepit à veſtimento, quod populo dederat, demiſſo uſque ad talos, quod ante non fuerat; unde hodieque Antoninianæ dicuntur Caracallæ hujuſmodi, in uſu maxime Romanæ Plebis frequentatæ. [k] Petav. Not. in. Epiphan. Hær. 69. n. 3. Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. T. 1. p. 1334.

nius

nius calls the Biſhop's Rochet, it ſeems to have been no more than ſome common Garment made of Linnen, though we know not what other Name to give it. Baronius ſays pleaſantly, it was not his Shirt, and therefore concludes it muſt be his Rochet: Which is an Argument to make a Reader ſmile, but carries no great Conviction in it. And yet it is as good as any that he produces to prove, that Biſhops in Cyprian's Time appeared in Publick differently habited from other Men. That the Clergy had their particular Habits for Miniſtring in Divine Service, at leaſt in the beginning of the fourth Century, is not denied, but will be proved and evidenced in its proper Place: But that any ſuch Diſtinction was generally obſerved extra Sacra in their other Habits in that Age, is what does not appear, but the contrary from what has been diſcourſed. It was neceſſary for me to give the Reader this Caution, becauſe ſome unwarily confound theſe things together, and alledge the Proofs or Diſproofs of the one for the other, which yet are of very different Conſideration.

CHAP. V.

Some Reflections upon the foregoing Diſcourſe, concluding with an Addreſs to the Clergy of the preſent Church.

SECT. I.
Reflection 1ſt. All Laws and Rules of the ancient Church not neceſſary to be obſerved by the preſent Church and Clergy.

HAVING thus far gone over, and as it were brought into one View, the chief of thoſe ancient Laws and Rules, which concerned the Elections, Qualifications, Duties, and general Offices of the Primitive Clergy; Reſerving the Conſideration of particular Offices to their proper Places, I ſhall cloſe this Part of the Diſcourſe with a few neceſſary Reflections upon it, in reference to the Practice of the Clergy of the preſent Church. And here firſt of all it will be proper to obſerve, that all the Laws and Rules of the Primitive Church are not obligatory to the preſent Clergy, ſave only ſo far as they either contain Matters neceſſary in themſelves, or are adopted into the Body of Rules and Canons, which are authorized and received by the preſent Church. For ſome Laws were made upon particular Reaſons, peculiar to the State and Circumſtances of the Church in thoſe Times: And it would neither be reaſonable nor poſſible to reduce Men to the Obſervance of all ſuch Laws, when the Reaſons of them are ceaſed, and the State of Affairs and Circumſtances of the Church are ſo much altered. Other Laws were made by particular Churches for themſelves only, and theſe never could oblige other Churches, till they were received by their own Conſent, or bound upon them by the Authority of a general Council, where they themſelves were repreſented, and their Conſent virtually taken: Much leſs can they oblige Abſolute and Independent Churches at the Diſtance of ſo many Ages; ſince every ſuch Church has Power to make Laws and Rules about Things of an alterable Nature for herſelf, and is not tied to the Laws of any other. Nor conſequently are any of the Members of ſuch a Church bound to obſerve thoſe Rules, unleſs they be revived and put in force by the Church whereof they are Members. As this is agreeable to the Senſe and Practice of the Catholick Church; ſo it was neceſſary here to be obſerved, That no one might miſtake the Deſign of this Diſcourſe, as if it tended to make every Rule, that has been mentioned therein, become Neceſſary, and Obligatory; or deſigned to reflect upon the preſent Church, becauſe in all things ſhe does not conform to the Primitive Practice: Which it is not poſſible to do, without making all Caſes and Circumſtances exactly the ſame in all Ages.

SECT. II.
Some ancient Rules would be of Excellent Uſe, if revived by juſt Authority.

BUT 2*dly*, notwithſtanding this, I may, I preſume, without Offence take leave to obſerve in the next Place, That ſome ancient Rules would be of excellent Uſe, if they were revived by juſt Authority in the preſent Church. What if we had a Law agreeable to that of Juſtinian's in the Civil Law, that every Patron or Elector, who preſents a Clerk, ſhould depoſe upon Oath, that he choſe him neither for any Gift, or Promiſe, or Friendſhip, or any other Cauſe, but becauſe he knew him to be a Man of the true Catholick Faith, and good Life, and good Learning? Might not this be a good Addition to the preſent Laws againſt Simoniacal Contracts? What if the Order of the ancient Chorepiſcopi were reduced and ſettled in large Dioceſſes? and Coadjutors in caſe of Infirmity and Old-Age? Might not theſe be of great Uſe, as for many other Ends, ſo particularly for the Exerciſe of Diſcipline, and the eaſier and conſtant Diſcharge of that moſt excellent Office of Confirmation? The judicious Reader will be able to carry this Reflection through abundance of other Inſtances, which I need not here ſuggeſt: And I forbear the rather, becauſe I am only acting the Part of an Hiſtorian for the ancient Church; leaving others, whoſe Province it is, to make Laws for the preſent Church, if any Things are here ſuggeſted, which their Wiſdom and Prudence may think fit to make the Matter of Laws for the greater Benefit and Advantage of it.

Thirdly,

SECT. III. Reflect. 3. Some ancient Laws may be complied with, though not Laws of the present Church.

Thirdly, IT may be observed farther, that there were some Laws in the ancient Church, which though they be not established Laws of the present Church, may yet innocently be complied with; and perhaps it would be for the Honour and Advantage of the Clergy voluntarily to comply with them, since there is no Law to prohibit that. I will instance in one Case of this Nature. It was a Law in the ancient Church, as I have shewed [*], that the Clergy should end all their Civil Controversies, which they had one with another, among themselves, and not go to Law in a secular Court, unless they had a Controversy with a Layman. Now though there be no such Law in the present Church, yet there is nothing to hinder Clergymen from chusing Bishops to be their Arbitrators, and voluntarily referring all their Causes to them, or any other Judges whom they shall agree upon among themselves; which must be owned to be the most Christian Way of ending Controversies: Whence, as I have shewed, it was many times practised by the Laity in the Primitive Church, who took Bishops for their Arbitrators by voluntary Compromise, obliging themselves to stand to their Arbitration. And what was so commendable in the Laity, must needs be more reputable in the Clergy, and more becoming their Gravity and Character; not to mention other Advantages, that might arise from this Way of ending Disputes, rather than any other. From this one Instance it will be easy to judge, how far it may be both Lawful and Honourable, for the Clergy to imitate the Practice of the Ancients in other Cases of the like Nature.

SECT. IV. Reflect. 4. Of the Influence of great Examples, and Laws of perpetual Obligation.

4. THE last Observation I have to make upon the foregoing Discourse, is in reference to such Laws of the ancient Church, as must be owned to be of necessary and eternal Obligation. Such are most of those that have been mentioned in the second and third Chapters of this Book, relating to the Life and Duties of the Clergy: In which the Clergy of all Churches will for ever be concerned, the Matter of those Laws being in itself of absolute and indispensible Obligation. The Practice of the Ancients therefore in compliance with such Laws will be a continual Admonition, and their Examples a noble Provocation to the Clergy of all Ages. There is nothing that commonly moves and affects us more than great and good Examples: They at once both pleasantly instruct, and powerfully excite us to the practice of our Duty; They shew us that Rules are practicable, as having already been observed by Men of like Passions with our selves; They are apt to inflame our Courage by an Holy Contagion, and raise us to noble Acts by provoking our Emulation; They as it were shame us into laudable Works, by upbraiding and reproaching our Defects in falling short of the Patterns set before us; They work upon our Modesty, and turn it into Zeal; They raise our several useful Passions, and set us to work by exciting those inbred Sparks of Emulation, and Principles of Activity that are lodged within us. And for this Reason whilst others have done good Service by writing of the Pastoral Office and Care in plain Rules and Directions, I have added the Examples of the Ancients to their Rules; the better to excite us to tread those Paths, which are chalked out to us, by the Encouragement of such instructive and provoking Examples. Who can read that brave Defence and Answer [‡] which St. Basil made the Arian Prefect, without being warmed with something of his Zeal for Truth upon any the like Occasion? How Resolute and Courageous will it make a Man, even against the Calumnies of Spite and Malice to contend for the Faith, when he reads [†] what base Slanders and Reproaches were cast upon the greatest Luminaries of the Church, and the best of Men, Athanasius and Basil, for standing up in the Cause of Religion, against the Arian Heresie? Again, how Peaceable, how Candid, how Ingenuous and Prudent will it make a Man in composing unnecessary Disputes, that arise among Catholicks in the Church, always to have before his Eyes that great Example of Candor and Peaceableness, which Nazianzen describes in the Person of Athanasius, [||] who by his Prudence reconciled two contending Parties, that for a few Syllables and a Dispute about mere Words had like to have torn the Church in Pieces? To instance but once more, who that reads that great Example of Charity and Self-denial in the African Fathers at the Collation of Carthage, [] and considers with what a brave and publick Spirit they despised their own Private Interest for the Good, and Peace, and Unity of the Church, will not be inspired with something of the same noble Temper, and ardent Love of Christ; which will make him willing to do or suffer any thing for the Benefit of his Church, and sacrifice his own private Interest to the Advantage of the Publick; whilst he persuades himself with those Holy Fathers, that he was made for the Church of Christ, and not the Church for him? As it is of the utmost Consequence to the Welfare of the Church, to have these and the like Virtues and Graces planted in the Hearts of her Clergy: so among other Means, that may be used for the promoting this End, there is none perhaps more likely to take Effect, than the Recommending such Virtues by the powerful Provocation of such noble Examples. And he that offers such Images of Virtue to publick View, may at least be allowed to make the Apology, which Sulpicius Severus [l] makes for his Writing the Life of St. Martin: Etsi ipsi non viximus, ut aliis exemplo esse possimus: dedimus tamen operam, ne illi laterent, qui essent imitandi.

[*] Book 5 Chap. 1. Sect. 4. Sect. 10. [†] Ibid. Sect. 10. [‡] See Book 6. Chap. 3. [||] See Chap. 3. Sect. 9. [] Vid. Chap. 4. Sect. 2. [l] Sever. de Vita S. Martin. in Prologo.

BUT

SECT. V. Some particular Rules recommended to Observation. 1st, Relating to the ancient Method of training up Persons for the Ministry.

BUT whilst I am so earnest in recommending the Examples of the Ancients, I must not forget to inculcate some of their excellent Rules. Such as their Laws about training up young Men for the Ministry under the Magister Disciplinæ, whose Business was to form their Morals, and inure them to such Studies, Exercises, and Practices, as would best qualify them for higher Offices and Services in the Church. This Method of Education being now changed into that of Universities and Schools of Learning, it highly concerns them on whom this Care is devolved, to see that the same Ends however be answered, that is, that all young Men who aspire to the sacred Profession, be rightly formed both in their Studies and Morals, to qualifie them for their great Work and the several Duties of their Calling. And they are the more concerned to be careful in the Matter, because Bishops now cannot have that personal Knowledge of the Morals of such Persons, as they had formerly, when they were trained up under their Eyes, and liable to their Inspection: but now as to this part of their Qualification, they must depend first upon the Care, and then upon the Testimony of those who are intrusted with their Education. Besides, a late eminent Writer, [b] who enquires into the Causes of the present Corruption of Christians, where he has occasion to speak of the Pastoral Office, and the ordinary Methods now used for training up Persons to it, makes a double Complaint of the way of Education in several of the Universities of Europe. As to Manners, he complains that young People live there Licentiously, and are left to their own Conduct, and make publick Profession of Dissoluteness: Nay, that they not only live there irregularly, but have Privileges, which give them a Right to commit with Impunity, all manner of Insolencies, Brutalities and Scandals, and which exempt them from the Magistrate's Jurisdiction. Now such Universities as are concerned in this Accusation (which by the Blessing of God those of our Land are not) have great reason to consider how far they are fallen from the Primitive Standard, and what a Difference there is between the ancient way of educating under the Inspection of a Bishop, and the Conduct of a Master of Discipline in every Church, and the way of such Academies, where, if that learned Person say true, "The Care of Masters and Professors does not "extend to the regulating of the Manners of "their Disciples." The other Complaint he makes, is in reference to the Studies, which are pursued at Universities, in which he observes two Faults. One in reference to the Method of Teaching. "Divinity is treated there, and the Holy Scrip- "tures explained altogether in a Scholastical and "Speculative Manner. Common Places are read, "which are full of School-Terms, and of Que- "stions not very material: This makes young "Men resolve all Religion into Controversies, "and gives them intricate and false Notions of "Divinity. The other Fault, he thinks, is "more Essential: Little or no Care is taken, to "teach those who dedicate themselves to the "Service of the Church, several Things, the "Knowledge of which would be very necessary "to them. The Study of History and of Church- "Antiquity is neglected, Morality is not taught "in Divinity-Schools, but in a Superficial and "Scholastick Manner: And in many Academies "it is not taught at all. They seldom speak "there of Discipline, they give few or no In- "structions concerning the Manner of exerci- "sing the Pastoral Care, or of governing the "Church. So that the greater Part of those "who are admitted into this Office, enter into "it without knowing wherein it consists; all the "Notion they have of it, is, that it is a Profes- "sion which obliges them to preach and to ex- "plain Texts." I cannot think all Universities are equally concerned in this Charge, nor shall I enquire how far any are, but only say, That the Faults here complained of were rarely to be met with in the Methods of Education in the Primitive Church; where, as I have shewed, the chief Studies of Men devoted to the Service of the Church, both before and after their Ordinations, were such as directly tended to instruct them in the necessary Duties and Offices of their Function. The great Care then was to oblige Men carefully to Study the Scriptures in a Practical way, and to acquaint themselves with the History and Laws and Discipline of the Church, by the Knowledge and Exercise of which they became Expert in all the Arts of curing Souls and making Pious and Holy Men, which is the Business of Spiritual Physicians, and the Whole of the Pastoral Office: In which therefore their Rules and Examples are proper to be proposed to all Churches for their Imitation.

SECT. VI. 2dly, Their Rules for Examining the Qualifications of Candidates for the Ministry.

ANOTHER sort of Rules worthy our most serious Thoughts and Consideration, were those which concerned the Examination of the Candidates for the Ministry. For by these such Methods were prescribed, and such Caution used, that it was scarce possible for an Unfit or Immoral Man to be admitted to an Ecclesiastical Office, unless a Bishop and the whole Church combined as it were to chuse unworthy Men, which was a Case that very rarely happened. It was a peculiar Advantage in the Primitive Church, that by her Laws ordinarily none were to be ordained but in the Church where they were Personally known; so that their Manners and way of Living might be most strictly canvassed and examined; and a vicious Man could not be ordained, if either the Bishop or the Church had the Courage to reject him. Now though this Rule cannot be practised in the present State of the Church, yet the main Intent of it is of abſolute Neceſſity to be anſwered and provided for ſome other way; elſe the Church muſt needs ſuffer greatly, and infinitely fall ſhort of the Purity of the Primitive Church, by conferring the moſt Sacred of all Characters upon Immoral and unworthy Men. The only Way which our preſent Circumſtances will admit of, to anſwer the Caution that was uſed in former Days, is to Certifie the Biſhop concerning the Candidates known Probity and Integrity of Life, by ſuch Teſtimonials as he may ſafely depend upon. Here therefore every one ſees, without my obſerving it to him, that to advance the preſent Church to the Purity and Excellency of the Primitive Church, there is need of the utmoſt Caution in this Matter; that Teſtimonials in ſo weighty an Affair be not promiſcuouſly granted unto all; nor to any but upon Reaſonable Evidence and Aſſurance of the Things teſtified therein: Otherwiſe we partake in other Mens Sins, and are far from conſulting truly the Glory of GOD and the Good of his Church, whilſt we deviate ſo much from the Exactneſs and Caution that is ſhewed us in the Primitive Pattern.

[b] Ostervald's Causes of the Corruption of Christians. Par. 2. c. 3. p. 333.

the

The other Part of the Examination of Candidates, which related to their Abilities and Talents, was made with no leſs Diligence and Exactneſs. The chief Enquiry was, Whether they were well verſed in the Senſe and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures; whether they rightly underſtood the Fundamentals of Religion, the neceſſary Doctrines of the Goſpel, and the Rules of Morality as delivered in the Law of GOD; Whether they had been converſant in the Hiſtory of the Church, and underſtood her Laws and Diſcipline; and were Men of Prudence to govern, as well as of Ability to teach the People committed to their Charge. Theſe were Things of great Importance, becauſe moſt of them were of daily Uſe in the Exerciſe of the Miniſtry and Paſtoral Care; and therefore proper to be inſiſted on in Examinations of this Nature. Theſe were the Qualifications, which joyned with the burning and ſhining Light of a Pious Life, raiſed the Primitive Church and Clergy to that height of Glory, which we all profeſs to admire in them: And the very naming that is a Sufficient Provocation to ſuch as are concerned in this Matter, to expreſs their Zeal for the Welfare and Glory of the preſent Church, by keeping ſtrictly to the Meaſures, which were ſo Succeſſfully obſerved in the ancient Church; and without which the Ends of the Miniſtry cannot be fully attained in any Church, whilſt Perſons are ordained that want proper Qualifications.

SECT. VII. 3dly, Their Rules about Private Addreſs and the Exerciſe of Private Diſcipline.

I ſhall not now ſtand to inculcate any other Rules about particular Duties, Studying, Preaching or the like, but only beg leave to recommend the Primitive Pattern in two things more. The one concerns Private Paſtors, the other is humbly offered to the Governors of the Church. That which concerns Private Paſtors, is the Duty of Private Addreſs, and the Exerciſe of Private Diſcipline toward the People committed to their Charge. Some eminent Perſons [*], who have lately conſidered the Duties of the Paſtoral Office, reckon this one of the Principal and moſt neceſſary Functions of it; which conſiſts in Inſpecting the Lives of Private Perſons, in viſiting Families, in Exhortations, Warnings, Reproofs, Inſtructions, Reconciliations, and in all thoſe other Cares, which a Paſtor ought to take of thoſe over whom he is conſtituted. "For, as "they rightly obſerve, neither general Exhorta- "tions, nor Publick Diſcipline can anſwer all "the Occaſions of the Church. There are cer- "tain Diſorders, which Paſtors neither can, nor "ought to repreſs openly, and which yet ought "to be remedied by them. In ſuch Caſes Pri- "vate Admonitions are to be uſed. The Con- "cern of Mens Salvation requires this, and it be- "comes the Paſtoral Carefulneſs to ſeek the "ſtraying Sheep, and not to let the Wicked "periſh for want of Warning." But now becauſe this is a nice and difficult Work, and requires not only great Diligence and Application, but alſo great Art and Prudence, with a proportionable ſhare of Meekneſs, Moderation, and Temper, to perform it aright; it is often either wholly neglected, or very ill performed; whilſt ſome think it enough to admoniſh Sinners from the Pulpit, and others admoniſh them indiſcreetly, which tends more to provoke, than reclaim them. To Remedy both theſe Evils, it will be uſeful to reflect upon that Excellent Diſcourſe of Gregory Nazianzen, which has been ſuggeſted in the Third Chapter of this Book [†], where he conſiders that great Variety of Tempers that is in Men, and the Nicety of all Matters and Occaſions, that a skilful Paſtor ought to conſider, in order to apply ſuitable Remedies to every Diſtemper. And there the Reader will alſo find ſome other excellent Cautions and Directions given by Chryſoſtom and others upon this Head, with Examples proper to excite him to the performance of this neceſſary Duty.

SECT. VIII. 4thly, Their Rules for exerciſing Publick Diſcipline upon Delinquent Clergymen, who were Convict of Scandalous Offences.

THE other thing I would humbly offer to the Conſideration of our Superiors, who are the Guardians of Publick Diſcipline, and Inſpectors of the Behaviour of Private Paſtors, is the Exerciſe of Diſcipline in the ancient Church. By which I do not now mean that general Diſcipline, which was exerciſed toward all Offenders in the Church; but the particular Diſcipline that was uſed among the Clergy; by Vertue of which, every Clerk convict of Immorality, or other Scandalous Offence, was liable to be Depoſed, and Puniſhed with other Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures; of which, both [*] Oſtervald's Cauſes of the Corrupt. of Chriſtians. p. 318. See alſo Biſhop Burnet's Paſtoral Care. c. 8. p. 96. [†] See Book 6. Chap. Sect. 8.

Crimes

Crimes and Punishments, I have given a particular Account in the three foregoing Chapters of this Book. 'Tis a thing generally acknowledged by all, That the Glory of the ancient Church was her Discipline: And it is as generally a Complaint of the Misfortune of the present Church, that Corruptions abound for want of Reviving and Restoring the ancient Discipline. Now if there be any Truth in either of these Observations, it ought to be a quickning Argument to all that sit at the Helm of Government in the Church, to bestir themselves with their utmost Zeal, that Discipline, where it is wanting, may at least be restored among the Clergy; that no Scandals or Offences may be tolerated among them, whose Lives and Practices ought to be a Light and a Guide to others. As there is nothing to hinder the free Exercise of it here: So it is but fitting it should be exemplified in them; as for many other Reasons, so particularly for this: That the Laity may not think, they are to be tied to any Discipline, which the Clergy have not first exercised upon themselves with greater Severity of Ecclesiastical Censures. And if either Rules or Examples can encourage this, those of the Primitive Church are most provoking: Her Rules of Discipline were most excellent and exact in themselves, and for the most part as exactly managed by Persons intrusted with the Execution of them.

SECT. IX.

Julian's Design to reform the Heathen Priests by the Rules of the Primitive Clergy, an Argument to provoke our Zeal in the present Age.

AFTER these Reflections made on the Laws and Practice of the Primitive Clergy, it will be needless to make any long Address to any Orders of the Clergy of the present Age. I will therefore only observe one Thing more, That Julian's Design to bring the Laws of the Primitive Clergy into use among the Heathen Priests, in order to Reform them, as it was then a plain Testimony of their Excellency, so it is now a proper Argument to provoke the Zeal of the present Clergy, to be more forward and ambitious in their Imitation. I have already in Part recited Julian's Testimony and Design, out of his Letter to Arsacius High-Priest of Galatia: I shall here subjoin a more ample Testimony from a Fragment of one of his Epistles [c] printed among his Works, where speaking of the Gentile Priests, he says, It was reasonable they should be honoured, as the Ministers and Servants of the Gods, by whose Mediation many Blessings were derived from Heaven upon the World: And so long as they retained this Character, they were to be honoured and respected by all; but if Wicked and Vicious, they should be deposed from their Office [d], as unworthy of their Function. Their Lives were to so regulated, as that they might be a Copy and Pattern of what they were to Preach to Men. To this Purpose they should be careful in all their Addresses to the Gods, to express all imaginable Reverence and Piety [e], as being in their Presence and under their Inspection. They should neither speak a filthy Word, nor hear one; but abstain as well from all impure Discourse, as vile and wicked Actions, and not let a scurrilous or abusive Jest come from their Mouths. They should read no Books tending this Way, such as Archilocus and Hippanax, and the Writers of loose wanton Comedies; but apply themselves to the Study of such Philosophers as Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, Chrysippus and Zeno, whose Writings were most likely to create Piety in Mens Minds. For all sorts of Books were not fit to be read by the Priests: Even among Philosophers, those of Pyrro and Epicurus were wholly to be rejected by them; and instead of these they [f] should learn such Divine Hymns as were to be sung in Honour of the Gods, to whom they should make their Supplications publickly and privately thrice a day, if it might be, however twice at least, Morning and Evening. In the Course of their publick Ministrations [g] in the Temples, which at Rome commonly held for thirty Days, they were to reside all the Time in the Temple, and give themselves to Philosophick Thoughts, and neither go to their own Houses, nor into the Forum, nor see any Magistrate but in the Temple. When their Term of Waiting was expired, and they were returned Home, they might not converse or feast Promiscuously with all, but only with their Friends and the best of Men; they were but rarely then to appear in the Forum, and not to visit the Magistrates and Rulers, except it were in order to be helpful to some that needed their Assistance. While they Ministred in the Temple, they were to be arrayed with a Magnificent Garment; but out of it, they must wear common Apparel, and that not very costly, or in the least savouring of Pride and Vain-glory. They were in no Case [h] to go to see the obscene and wanton Shews of the Publick Theatres, nor to bring them into their own Houses, nor to converse familiarly with any Charioteer, or Player, or Dancer belonging to the Theatre. After this he signifies, out of what sort of Men the Priests should be chosen. They should be the best that could be found in every City, Persons that had true Love for GOD and Man, and then it mattered not whether they were Rich or Poor; there being no difference to be made between Noble and Ignoble in the Case: No one was to be rejected upon other Accounts, who was endued with those two Qualities, Piety to GOD and Humanity to Men. Whereof the former might be evidenced by their Care to make all their Domesticks as Devout as themselves; and the latter, by their Readiness to distribute Liberally to the Poor, out of that little they had, and extending their Charity to as many as was possible. And there was the more Reason to be careful in this Matter, because it was manifestly the Neglect of this Humanity in the Priests, which had given occasion to the Impious Galilæans (by whom he means the Christians) to ſtrengthen their Party by the Practice of that Humanity, which the others neglected. For as Kidnappers ſteal away Children, whom they firſt allure with a Cake: So theſe begin firſt to work upon honeſt-hearted Gentiles with their Love-Feaſts, and Entertainments, and Miniſtring of Tables, as they call them, till at laſt they pervert them to Atheiſm and Impiety againſt the Gods.

[c] Julian. Fragment. Epist. p. 542. [d] Ibid. p. 543. [e] Ibid. p. 547. [f] Ibid. p. 551. [g] Ibid. p. 553. [h] Ibid. p. 555.

Now from this Diſcourſe of Julian, I think, it is very Evident, that he had obſerved what Laws and Practices had chiefly contributed to the Advancement of the Character and Credit of the Chriſtian Clergy, and of the Chriſtian Religion by their Means: And therefore he laboured to introduce the like Rules and Diſcipline among the Idol-Prieſts, and intended to have made many other Alterations in the Heathen Cuſtoms, in Compliance with the envied Rites and Uſages of the Chriſtian Religion, as is obſerved both by Gregory Nazianzen [i] and Sozomen [k], who give us a particular Account of his intended Emendations. The very mentioning which, if I miſtake not, is a loud Call to us, to be at leaſt as zealous as Julian was, in copying out ſuch Excellencies of the Primitive Clergy, as are proper for our Imitation. It is the Argument which the Apoſtle makes uſe of in a like Caſe: I will provoke you to Jealouſie by them that are no People, by a fooliſh Nation will I anger you. Rom. 10. 19. I muſt needs ſay, It will be but a melancholy Conſideration for any Man to find hereafter, that the Zeal of an Apoſtate Heathen ſhall riſe up in Judgment againſt him and condemn him.

SECT. X. The Concluſion by way of Addreſs to the Clergy of the preſent Church.

WE all profeſs (as it is our Duty to do) a great Zeal for the Honour and Welfare of the preſent Church. Now if indeed we have that Zeal which we profeſs, we ſhall be careful to demonſtrate it in all our Actions; obſerving thoſe neceſſary Rules and Meaſures, which raiſed the Primitive Church to its Glory. We are obliged in this reſpect firſt to be Strict and Exemplary in our Lives; to ſet others a Pattern of Sobriety, Humility, Meekneſs, Charity, Self-denyal and Contempt of the World, and all ſuch common Graces, as are required of Chriſtians in general, to adorn their Profeſſion: And then to add to theſe the peculiar Graces and Ornaments of our Function, Diligence, Prudence, Fidelity, and Piety in the whole Courſe of our Miniſtry; imitating thoſe Excellencies of the Ancients, which have been deſcribed; confining ourſelves to the proper Buſineſs of our Calling, and not intermeddling or diſtracting ourſelves with other Cares; employing our Thoughts and Time in uſeful Studies, and directing them to their proper End, the Edification of the Church; performing all Divine Offices with Aſſiduity and Conſtancy, and in that rational, decent and becoming Way, as ſuits the Nature of the Action; making our Addreſſes to God with a ſerious Reverence, and an affecting Fervency of Devotion; and in our Diſcourſes to Men, ſpeaking always as the Oracles of GOD, with Scripture Eloquence, which is the moſt Perſuaſive; in our Doctrine ſhewing Uncorruptedneſs, Gravity, Sincerity, ſound Speech that cannot be condemned: In our Reproofs, and the Exerciſe of publick and private Diſcipline, uſing great Wiſdom and Prudence, both to diſcern the Tempers of Men, and to time the Application to its proper Seaſon, mixing Charity and Compaſſion with a juſt Severity, and endeavouring to reſtore fall'n Brethren in the Spirit of Meekneſs; ſhewing Gentleneſs and Patience to them that are in Error, and giving them good Arguments with good Uſage in order to regain them; avoiding all bitter and contumelious Language, and never bringing againſt any Man a railing Accuſation; treating thoſe of our own Order, whether Superiors, Inferiors, or Equals, with all the Decency and Reſpect that is due to them, ſince nothing is more ſcandalous among Clergymen, than the Abuſes and Contempt of one another; endeavouring here, as well as in all other Caſes, to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace; ſhewing our ſelves Candid and Ingenuous in moderating Diſputes among good Catholicks, as well as Reſolute and Prudent in oppoſing the malicious Deſigns of the profeſt Enemies of Truth; briefly, employing our Thoughts Day and Night upon theſe things, turning our Deſigns this way, and always acting with a pure Intention for the Benefit and Edification of the Church; even neglecting our own Honours, and deſpiſing our own Intereſt, when it is needful, for the Advantage of the Publick. Such Actions will proclaim our Zeal indeed, and draw every Eye to take notice of it. Such Qualities joined with Probity and Integrity of Life, will equal our Character to that of the Primitive Saints: and either give happy Succeſs to our Labours, or at leaſt crown our Endeavours with the Comfort and Satisfaction of having diſcharged a good Conſcience in the ſight of GOD. The beſt Deſigns indeed may be fruſtrated, and the moſt pious and zealous Endeavours be diſappointed. It was ſo with our Lord and Maſter himſelf, and no one of his Houſhold then is to think it ſtrange, if it happen to be his own Caſe. For though he ſpake as never Man ſpake, though he had done ſo many Miracles among the Jews, yet they believ'd not on him. This ſeems to be written for our Comfort, that we ſhould not be wholly dejected, though our Endeavours fail of Succeſs, ſince our Lord himſelf was firſt pleaſed to take his Share in the Diſappointment. It will ſtill be our Comfort, that we can be able to ſay with the Prophet [*] in this Caſe, Though we have laboured in vain, and ſpent our Strength for nought, yet ſurely our Judgment is with the Lord, and our Work with our God: And then though Iſrael be not gathered, yet ſhall we be glorious in the Eyes of the Lord, and our God ſhall be our Strength.

[i] Naz. Invect. 1. in Julian. [k] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 16. [*] Iſa. xlix. 4, 5.

ORIGINES ECCLESIASTICÆ:

OR, THE

ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

To the Right Honourable

And Right Reverend Father in GOD,

JONATHAN,

Lord Biſhop of WINCHESTER,

And PRELATE of the Moſt Noble Order of the GARTER;

This Third Volume of the

ANTIQUITIES

OF THE

CHRISTIAN CHURCH,

Is Humbly Submitted and Inſcribed by the AUTHOR,

His LORDSHIP'S

Moſt Dutiful and

Obedient Servant,

JOSEPH BINGHAM.

BOOK VII.

Of the ASCETICKS in the PRIMITIVE CHURCH.

CHAP. I.

Of the Difference between the first Ascetick and Monks, and of the first Original of the Monastick Life.

SECT. I. Ascetick always in the Church: Monks not so.

THEY who are conversant in the Writings of the Ancients, will very often meet with the Name, Ἀσκηταὶ, Asceticks, applied to some Christians by way of Distinction from others. The generality of Writers in the Romish Church, where-ever they meet with this Word, lay hold of it as an Argument to prove the Antiquity of Monks in the Church; whereas indeed there was a very wide Difference between them: For tho' in the Writers of the fourth and fifth Ages, when the Monastick Life was fully established, Ascetick and Monks often signify the same Persons; yet for the greatest Part of the three first Centuries it was otherwise: For there were always Ascetick in the Chuch, but not always Monks retiring to the Deserts and Mountains, or living in Monasteries and Cells, as in after Ages.

SECT. II. This Difference acknowledged by some ingenuous Writers in the Romish Church.

THIS Difference is freely confessed by some of the more frank and ingenuous Writers of the Romish Church; as Valesius [a] and Mr. Pagi [b] who correct the Mistakes of Baronius, Christopherson, and others in this matter. Eusebius speaking of Philo Judæus his Description of the Egyptian Therapeutæ, says, he therein exactly described the Life of the Christian Asceticks [c] that lived in those Times. Where by Asceticks, Christopherson and Baronius understand Monks and Religious, as they speak in the modern Stile: But Valesius rightly observes, that there were no Monks in the Time of Philo, but both the Name and Institution of them was of much later Date. Ascetick was a more general Name than that of a Monk: For though every Monk was an Ascetick, yet every Ascetick was not a Monk; but anciently every Christian that made Profession of a more strict and austere Life, was dignified with the Name of Ascetick; which is a name borrowed by the Christians from the ancient Philosophers, as Valesius shews out of Arian, Artemidorus, and Philo; and signifies, as the word imports, any one that exercises himself by the severe Rules of Abstinence and Virtue; of which kind there were always Asceticks, without being Monks, from the first Foundation of the Church by the Apostles.

SECT. III. What the Primitive Asceticks were.

SUCH were all those that inured themselves to greater Degrees of Abstinence and Fasting than other Men. As those mentioned by Origen [d], who abstained from Flesh and living Creatures, as well as the Pythagoreans, but upon very different Principles and Designs: The Pythagoreans abstain'd upon the fond Imagination of the Transmigration of Souls, lest a Father should kill and eat his own Son in the Body of a living Creature; but the Asceticks, says he, among us do it only to keep under the Body, and bring it into subjection; to mortify their Members upon Earth, Fornication, Uncleanness, Lasciviousness, and all inordinate Passions and Affections. Such Abstinence the Apostolical Canons call ἄσκησις [e], the Exercise of an Ascetick Life, saying, If any Bishop, Presbyter, or Deacon, or any other of the Clergy, abstain from Marriage, Flesh, or Wine, ὐ διὰ ἄσκησιν, ἀλλὰ διὰ βδελυρίαν, not for Exercise sake, but as abominating the good Creatures of God, &c. let him either reform himself, or be deposed and cast out of the Church. So that all who exercised themselves with Abstinence from Flesh, only for Mortification, and not out of an

[a] Vales. Not. in Euseb. lib. 2. c. 17. [b] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 62. n. 4. [c] Euseb. lib. 2. c. 17. τὸ βίον τῶν παρ' ἡμῖν Ἀσκητῶν ὡς ἔνι μάλιστα ἀκριβέστατα ἱστορῶν, &c. [d] Orig. cont. Cels. lib. 5. p. 264. ὅρα τὴ διαφορὰν τῦ αὐτῦ τὸ ἐμψύχων ἀποχὴς, τῶν ἀπὸ τῦ Πυθαγόρυ, καὶ τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν Ἀσκητῶν. [e] Canon. Apost. c. 51.

Opinion

Opinion of its Uncleanneſs (as ſome Hereticks did) were reckoned Aſceticks, whether they were of the Laity or Clergy. Some of theſe not only abſtained from Fleſh, but often continued their Faſts for two or three days together without taking any Food at all: Of which there are frequent Inſtances in Irenæus [f], and Dionyſius of Alexandria [g], and Epiphanius [h] and others: And ſuch again were called Aſceticks [i] from the ſevere Exerciſe of Faſting, to which they accuſtomed themſelves. Secondly, In like manner they who were more than ordinary intent upon the Exerciſe of Prayer, and ſpent their Time in Devotion, were juſtly thought to deſerve the Name of Aſceticks. Whence Cyril of Jeruſalem [k] ſpeaking of Anna the Propheteſs (who departed not from the Temple, but ſerved God with Faſting and Prayer, night and day) ſtiles her Ἀσκήτρια εὐλαβεστάτη, the Religious Aſcetick, which the common Tranſlations, not ſo correctly, render, Monialis, as if ſhe had been confined to a Monaſtery or Cloyſter, of which we read nothing in thoſe Times in Jeruſalem. Thirdly, The Exerciſe of Charity and Contempt of the World in any extraordinary Degree, as when Men gave up their whole Eſtate to the Service of God or Uſe of the Poor, was another Thing that gave Men the Denomination and Title of Aſceticks. In this Reſpect St. Jerom calls Pierius [l] a wonderful Aſcetick, becauſe among other things he embraced a voluntary Poverty, and lived an Auſtere and Philoſophick Life. And perhaps for the ſame Reaſon he gives Serapion Biſhop of Antioch the ſame Title [m], as having freely given up his whole Eſtate to the Service of the Church upon his Ordination; which was a Practice very common in thoſe days, as appears from the Examples of Cyprian, Paulinus, Gregory Nazianzen, and many others. Fourthly, The Widows and Virgins of the Church, and all ſuch as confined themſelves to a ſingle Life, and made themſelves Eunuchs for the Kingdom of Heaven's ſake, were reckoned into the Number of Aſceticks, though there was then neither Cloyſter nor Vow to keep them under this Obligation. Thus Epiphanius [n] obſerves of Marcion, that before he fell into his Hereſy he lived an Aſcetick Life, profeſſing Celibacy under his Father, who was Biſhop of Sinope in Pontus, by whom he was excommunicated for corrupting one of the Virgins of the Church. Origen in like manner alludes to this Name, when he ſays, the Number of thoſe who exerciſed themſelves in perpetual [o] Virginity among the Chriſtians, was great in compariſon of thoſe few who did it among the Gentiles. And hence in After-ages the Word, Aſcetriæ, in the Civil Law [p] is commonly put to ſignify the Widows and Virgins of the Church. Laſtly, All ſuch as exerciſed themſelves with uncommon Hardſhips or Auſterities for the greater Promotion of Piety and Religion, as in frequent Watchings, Humicubations, and the like, had the Name of Aſceticks alſo. In alluſion to which Athanaſius, or whoever is the Author of the Synopſis Scripturæ among his Works, ſtiles Lucian the Martyr, μέγαν ἀσκητὴν [q] the great Aſcetick, becauſe of the Hardſhips he endured in Priſon; being forced to lodge on ſharp Potſherds for twelve Days together, with his Feet and Hands ſo bound in the Stocks that he could not move; and being denied all Suſtenance, except he would eat Things ſacrificed to Idols; rather than pollute himſelf with which he choſe to die with Famine, as the Acts of his Martyrdom relate the Story. Now from this Account that has been given of the Primitive Aſceticks, it plainly appears, that originally they were not Monks, but Men of all Orders, that freely choſe ſuch a Way of living as ingaged them upon ſome Auſterities, without deſerting their Station or Buſineſs in the World, whether it were Eccleſiaſtical or Secular, that they were otherwiſe ingaged in: And therefore where-ever we read of Aſceticks in the Writers of the three firſt Ages, we muſt not with Baronius dream of Monks and Regulars, but take them for Perſons of another Character, agreeable to this Deſcription. Valeſius [r] makes this Obſervation upon ſeveral Paſſages in Euſebius his Book of the Martyrs of Paleſtine, who ſuffered in the Beginning of the fourth Century in the Diocletian Perſecution. There he terms one of them Peter the Aſcetick [s], and another called Seleucus, a Follower of the Religious Aſceticks [t], whoſe chief Exerciſe was to take care of the Fatherleſs and Widows, and miniſter to the Sick and the Poor. Theſe were no Monks, as Valeſius rightly obſerves: For St. Jerome ſays, there were no Monks in Paleſtine before Hilarian, who brought the Monaſtick Life into uſe in that Country, not till about fifty Years after the Death of thoſe Martyrs. Cotelerius [u] makes the like Remark upon the Author of the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions, who ſpeaks [x] of Aſceticks among other Orders of Chriſtians, but never of Monks: Whence he concludes, not without ſome Probability, that that Author wrote before the Monaſtick Life was ſettled in the Church; elſe it is hardly to be imagined that he ſhould not ſomewhere in his Collections have taken notice of Monks as well as others.

SECT. IV. When the Monaſtick Life firſt began.

ASCETICKS then there were always in the Church: But the Monaſtick Life, neither Name nor Thing, was not known till toward the fourth [f] Iren. ap. Euſeb. lib. 5. c. 24. [g] Dionyſ. Ep. Canon. ap. Bevereg. Pandect. Tom. 2. [h] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 22. [i] Antioch. Homil. 7. in Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 1037. [k] Cyril. Catech. 10. n. 9. [l] Hieron. de Script. Eccleſ. c. 76. Conſtat hunc miræ ἀσκήσεως appetitorem & voluntariæ Paupertatis. [m] Ibid. c. 41. Leguntur ejus breves Epiſtolæ, Auctoris ſui ἀσκήσει & vitæ congruentes. [n] Epiphan. Hær. 42. n. 1. Ὃ δὲ πρῶτον αὐτῷ βίον παρθενίαν ἐνῆθεν ἤσκει μονάζων ὑπ' ὑπῆρξ, &c. [o] Origen. cont. Celſ. lib. 7. p. 365. ἀσκοῦσι τὴν παντελῆ παρθενίαν, &c. [p] Juſtin. Novel. 123. c. 43. [q] Athan. Synop. Tom. 2. p. 157. [r] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. de Martyr. Palæſt. c. 11. [s] Euſeb. de Mart. Pal. c. 10. [t] Ibid. c. 11. [u] Coteler. Not. in Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 13. [x] Conſtit. Apoſt. ibid.

Century.

Century. Mr. Pagi [y] fixes its Original to the Time of Conſtantine, and he cites Holſtenius [z] and Papebrochius [a] for the ſame Opinion. The Riſe of it was thus: In the Decian Perſecution, which was about the Middle of the third Century, many Perſons in Egypt, to avoid the Fury of the Storm, fled to the neighbouring Deſerts and Mountains, where they not only found a ſafe Retreat, but alſo more Time and Liberty to exerciſe themſelves in Acts of Piety and Divine Contemplations; which ſort of Life, though at firſt forced upon them by Neceſſity, became ſo agreeable to ſome of them, that when the Perſecution was over they would not return to their ancient Habitations again, but choſe rather to continue in thoſe Cottages or Cells, which they had made themſelves in the Wilderneſs. The firſt and moſt noted of theſe were Paul and Antonius, two famous Egyptians, whom therefore St. Jerome calls [b] the Fathers of the Chriſtian Hermits. For though ſome deduced them from John the Baptiſt and Elias, yet they who underſtood the Matter beſt, reckon'd Paul the Thebæan the firſt Author, and Antony the great Encourager of that way of living among the Chriſtians: To which Opinion, as the trueſt, St. Jerome himſelf [c] ſubſcribes. But as yet there were no Bodies or Communities of Men embracing this Life, nor any Monaſteries built, or any regular Societies formed into any Method of Government; but only a few ſingle Perſons ſcattered here and there in the Deſerts of Egypt, till Pachomius in the peaceable Reign of Conſtantine, when the Perſecutions were ended, procured ſome Monaſteries to be built in Thebais in Egypt, from whence the Cuſtom of living as Regulars in Societies was followed by degrees in other Parts of the World in the ſucceeding Ages. This is evident from what Papebrochius and Pagi [d] have obſerved out of the ancient Writer of the Acts of Pachomius, where the Author brings in Antony the Hermit thus comparing the different States of Monachiſm together. When I firſt became a Monk, ſays he, there was as yet no Monaſtery [e] in any part of the World, where one Man was obliged to take care of another; but every one of the ancient Monks, when the Perſecution was ended, exerciſed a Monaſtick Life by himſelf in private. But afterward your Father Pachomius (he ſpeaks to one of Pachomius's Diſciples) by the help of God effected this. That is, he brought the Monks to live in Communities, and under Rules, which they had not done before. So that here we ſee at once the Riſe and Progreſs of the Monaſtick Life. Till the year 250, there were no Monks, but only Aſceticks in the Church: From that Time to the Reign of Conſtantine, Monachiſm was confined to the Anchorets living in private Cells in the Wilderneſs: But when Pachomius had erected Monaſteries in Egypt, other Countries preſently followed the Example, and ſo the Monaſtick Life came to its full Maturity in the Church. Hilarion, who was Scholar to Antonius, was the firſt Monk that ever lived in Paleſtine or Syria: For St. Jerom [f] ſays plainly, there was neither Monaſtery nor Monk before he came there, but he was the Founder and Beginner of that Sort of Life in thoſe Provinces. Not long after Euſtathius Biſhop of Sebaſtia brought it into the Regions of Armenia, Paphlagonia, and Pontus, as Sozomen [g] informs us: But as yet there were no Monaſteries in Thrace, or Illyricum, or amongſt the Europeans, as the ſame Author teſtifies. Baronius [h] owns, there were no Monaſteries in Italy or Rome till Athanaſius came thither, An. 340, and taught the Anchorets to live in Societies, after the Example of Pachomius and the Egyptian Monks: Which is confirmed by St. Jerom [i], who ſays, Marcella was the firſt Noble Woman that embraced the Monaſtick Life at Rome, and that ſhe was inſtructed by Athanaſius and Peter his Succeſſor, who fled to Rome for Shelter againſt the Arian Perſecution. It was ſome time after this that St. Martin Biſhop of Tours fixed his Cell in France, and eighty other Monks [k] followed his Example: From whence, ſome Learned Men [l] think, Pelagius brought the Monaſtick Life firſt into Britain in the beginning of the fifth Century; beyond which Period I think it needleſs to carry the preſent Enquiry. They who would know the Riſe and Diſtinction of the ſeveral later Orders, may conſult Hoſpinian, Creccelii, and others, who purſue this Hiſtory through all Ages. Vid. Hoſpinian. de Origin. Monachor. Creccelii Collectanea de Origine & Fundat. Ordinum Monaſtic. &c.

SECT. V. In what the Aſceticks differed from Monks.

BUT it may now be properly enquired, ſince Monks are of ſo much later Date than Aſceticks, how the ancient Aſceticks differed from them? To which it may be replied, chiefly in theſe three Things: 1. That the Monks were Men that retired from the Buſineſs and Converſation of the World: For they either lived in private Cells ſingly by themſelves; or if in Monaſteries and Societies, yet thoſe were remote from Cities in ſome far diſtant Mountain or a deſert Wilderneſs: But the firſt Aſceticks, [y] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 318. n. 12. Initium Monachatûs ætati Conſtantini imputandum. [z] Holſtein. Præf. ad Regulas Veter. Monachor. [a] Papebroch. Com. in Acta Pachomii, Maii 14. [b] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 16. Hujus vitæ auctor Paulus, illuſtrator etiam Antonius. [c] Id. Vit. Pauli, Tom. 1. p. 237. Affirmant Paulum quendam Thebæum Principem iſtius rei fuiſſe: quod non tam nomine quam opinione nos quoque comprobamus. [d] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 318. n. 12. [e] Acta Pachomii c. 77. ap. Papebroch. die 14. Maii. Quo ego primum tempore Monachum cœpi agere, nullum uſpiam extabat Cœnobium, in quo de aliorum ſalute cura aut metus cuiquam erat: ſed quiſque antiquorum Monachorum, perſecutione jam finita, privatim in vita ſeſe Monaſtica exercebat. Poſtea vero Pater veſter (Pachomius) tantum bonum, Deo adjuvante, effecit. [f] Hierom. Vit. Hilarion. c. 11. Necdum enim tunc Monaſteria erant in Palæſtina, nec quiſquam Monachos ante ſanctum Hilarionem in Syria noverat. Ille Fundator & eruditor hujus converſationis & ſtudii in hac Provincia fuit. [g] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. [h] Baron. an. 340. n. 7. [i] Hieron. Ep. 16. Epitaph. Marcellæ. [k] Sever. Vit. Martin. c. 7. [l] Sutlif. de Monach. Inſtitut. c. 6.

as their Names implies, were always Men of an active Life, living in Cities, as other Men, and in nothing differing from them ſave only in this, that they were more Intent and Zealous in attempting greater Heights and heroical Acts of Chriſtian Virtue. 2. The Monks by their firſt Inſtitution, as we ſhall ſee hereafter, were to be no more than Laymen: For being confined to the Wilderneſs, the Clerical and Monaſtick Life were upon that account incompatible States, and for almoſt one whole Age they were ſcarce ever joined together: But the ancient Aſceticks were indifferently Perſons of any Order of Men, Clergy as well as Laity, becauſe the Clerical and Aſcetick Life were then conſiſtent with each other: The Buſineſs of each being to converſe with Men, and exerciſe themſelves in Acts of Piety and Charity among them. 3. The Monks, at leaſt ſuch as lived in Monaſteries and Societies, were always brought under certain Private Rules and Laws of Diſcipline: But the ancient Aſceticks had no Laws but thoſe of the Goſpel, and the Church where they lived, to be governed by; Their Exerciſes were freely choſen, and as freely purſued; in what Manner, and to what Degree they pleaſed, without any binding Laws, or Rules of Compulſion. And theſe Things are a farther Proof, that the firſt Aſceticks were no Monks, however ſome Writers unwarily confound them together.

SECT. VI. What other Names they were called by

THE Reader may take notice of one Thing more concerning the Primitive Aſceticks, that they were ſometimes called by other Names. Euſebius [m] calls them σπουδαῖοι, and Epiphanius [n] uſes the ſame Appellation; meaning Perſons more eminent for their Sanctity, and Diligence in the Exerciſes of Faſting, and Prayer, and Almſdeeds, and the like. Clemens Alexandrinus [o] ſtiles them ἐκλεκτῶν ἐκλεκτότεροι, the Elect of the Elect: For all Chriſtians as has been obſerved in another Place [p] were called the Elect, and therefore the Aſceticks are termed the Elect of the Elect, becauſe they were the more eminent or choice Part of Chriſtian Profeſſors.

CHAP. II.

Of the ſeveral Sorts of Monks, and their Ways of Living in the Church.

SECT. I. Several Sorts of Monks diſtinguiſhed by their different Ways of Living.

HAving hitherto ſhewed the Difference between the firſt Aſceticks and Monks, I come now to ſpeak a little more particularly of the Monks alone, ſo far as may be neceſſary to inform the Reader of the true State of the Monaſtick Life, at its firſt Appearance and Settlement in the Church. And here we are to obſerve that the ancient Monks were not like the Modern, diſtinguiſhed into Orders, and denominated from the Authors and Founders of them; but they had their Names either from the Places where they inhabited, as the Monks of Mount Scethis, Tabenneſus, Nitria, Canopus in Egypt, &c. or elſe they were diſtinguiſhed by their different Ways of Living, ſome in Cells, others on Pillars, others in Societies, and others by a Roving and Rambling kind of Life; which were always reckoned a Diſhonour and Reproach to the Church.

SECT. II. The firſt called Anchorets, ἀναχωρηταί.

THE firſt Sort were commonly known by the Name of Anchorets, from their Retiring from Society, and living in private Cells in the Wilderneſs. Such were Paul, and Antony, and Hilarion, the firſt Founders of the Monaſtick Life in Egypt and Paleſtine; from whom other Monks took their Model. Some of theſe lived in Caves, ἐν σπηλαίοις, as Chryſoſtom ſays [a] the Monks of Mount Caſius near Antioch did; and others in little Tents or Cells, οἰκίσκοι. Evagrius [b] calls them, and Chryſoſtom σκήναι Tabernacles. When many of theſe were placed together in the ſame Wilderneſs at ſome Diſtance from one another, they were all called by one common Name, Laura; which, as Evagrius [c] informs us, differed from a Cœnobium or Community in this, That a Laura was many Cells divided from each other, where every Monk provided for himſelf; but a Cœnobium was but one Habitation, where the Monks lived in Society, and had all things in common. Epiphanius [d] ſays, Laura or Labra was the Name of a Street or Diſtrict where a Church ſtood at Alexandria; and it is probable, that from thence the Name was taken, to ſignify a Multitude of Cells in the Wilderneſs, united as it were in a certain Diſtrict, yet ſo divided as to make up many ſeparate Habitations; whereas a Cœnobium was more like a ſingle Houſe for many Monks to dwell in.

SECT. III. The ſecond, Cœnobites or Synodites.

AND hence aroſe a ſecond ſort of Monks, who from their different Way of Living were commonly called Cœnobitæ; and their Habitations, Cœnobia, κοινόβια, becauſe they lived in common. In the Theodoſian Code [e] they are alſo called Synoditæ; which does not ſignify the Attendants of Monks, as ſome Civilians (f) by miſtake explain the Word, deriving it from σὺν and ὁδίτης, Viator; but it denotes the Monks themſelves, who were ſo called from their Living ἐν συνόδοις, in Communities or Convents. And in this they differed from Anchorets, as has been noted before. Gennadius [g] applies theſe two Names indifferently to this ſecond Sort of Monks, when he ſays, Evagrius wrote a Book concerning Cœnobites and Synodites, containing Rules and Directions for leading a Life in common. St. Jerom [h] ſays, the Egyptians called this Sort of Monks, Sauches, in their proper Tongue, which ſignifies the ſame as Cœnobites in the Greek and Latin Church; and that the Anchorets were of a different Order from them, and had their Name from living in Solitude, or ſingly by themſelves in the Wilderneſs.

[m] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 11. [n] Epiphan. Expoſ. Fid. n. 22. [o] Clem. Alex. Homil. Quis dives ſalv. n. 36. ap. Combefis Auctar. Noviſſim. p. 181. [p] Book 1. chap. 1. Sect. 1. [a] Chryſoſ. Hom. 17. ad Pop. Antioch. p. 215. [b] Evagr. lib. 1. c. 21. [c] Evagr. ibid. [d] Epiph. Hær. 69. n. 1. [e] Cod. Th. lib. 11. Tit. 30. de Appellat. Leg. 57. Addictos ſupplicio, nulli Clericorum vel Monachorum, eorum etiam quos Synoditas vocant, per vim atque uſurpationem vindicare liceat, &c. It. Cod. Juſtin. 1. Tit. 4. de Epiſcopali Audientia Leg. 6.

SECT. IV. The Third, Sarabaitæ.

THERE was another Sort, he ſays, whom the Egyptians called Remboth, who were a Sort of Monks that would live as they liſted themſelves, only two or three [i] together, under no Rule or Government. Theſe did not reſort to the Wilderneſs as the others, but lived chiefly in Cities and Caſtles, where every thing they did might be ſeen and valued by Men, which was the only End they aimed at. For they turned Religion into an Art, and made a real Gain of pretended Godlineſs. Whatever they ſold of the Work of their own Hands, was at an higher Price than any others. And this made them very turbulent and contentious: For living upon their own Labour, they would be ſubject to no Superiors. They faſted to an extraordinary degree; but then they made that which ſhould have been a Private Exerciſe, Matter of Striſe and publick Victory and Triumph. Every Thing about them was affected, looſe Sleeves, wide Stockings, coarſe Clothes, often Sighing, making frequent Viſits to the Virgins, and always bitterly inveighing againſt the Clergy. But if ever there came a Feaſt day, they would indulge themſelves even to Riot and Exceſs. Theſe therefore St. Jerom juſtly brands as the Peſts and Banes of the Church. He that would ſee more of their Character, may conſult Caſſian [k] among the ancient Writers, who expoſes them under the Name of Sarabaitæ; and Spalatenſis [l] among the Moderns, who draws the Parallel between them and the Minorites, Dominicans, Carmelites, Servites, and Minims of the Romiſh Church.

SECT. V. Of the Stylitæ or Pillariſts.

ANOTHER Sort of Monks in the ancient Church (of which there were but a very few) were the Stylitæ or Pillariſts, ſo called from their taking up a ſingular Way of Living perpetually upon a Pillar. Simeon, ſurnamed Stylites, who lived about the Time of the Council of Chalcedon, was the firſt, Evagrius [m] ſays, that introduced this Sort of Life among the Monaſtick Orders. And Theodorus Lector [n] obſerves that the Novelty of it at firſt was ſo offenſive to the Egyptian Monks, that they ſent anathematizing Letters againſt him, but upon better Information, coming to underſtand the Worth and Converſation of the Man, they afterward communicated with him. The Severity of this Way of living was not very inviting, and therefore it made but few Proſelytes. Theodorus Lector [o] mentions one Daniel, a Diſciple of Simeon's, and Evagrius [p] ſpeaks of another Simeon in the time of Mauricius, who lived ſixty eight years upon a Pillar, and is commonly called Simeon Stylites Junior, to diſtinguiſh him from the former. Johannes Moſchus [q] gives an Account of two or three more of this way in the ſame Age. Surius alſo among his Catalogue of Saints has the Life of one Alipius Biſhop of Adrianople, who renounced his See to live upon a Pillar; where, if the Story ſay true [r], he continued ſeventy years; having two Quires of Virgins and one of Monks attending him, with whom he ſang Pſalms and Hymns alternatively Night and Day. Beſide theſe we ſcarce meet with any other of this Way in ancient Hiſtory. An Argument that it was not of any great Eſteem, when it was firſt invented in the Primitive Church.

SECT. VI. Of Secular Monks.

BESIDE theſe Sorts of Monks, who renounced the World, and lived in perpetual Celibacy, Spalatenſis [ſ] thinks there was another Order, which did neither of thoſe Things, but lived in a married State and enjoyed their own Property and Poſſeſſions, only they exerciſed themſelves in Acts of Auſterity and Religion, as the Primitive Aſcetick's were uſed to do, of whom we have given an Account in the former Chapter. Thus much is certain from the expreſs Words of Athanaſius and St. Auſtin, that in their time ſome went by the Name of Monks, who were married Men, and poſſeſt of Eſtates. For Athanaſius writing to Dracontius a Monk, to perſwade him to accept of a Biſhoprick (to which he was averſe, becauſe he thought it would not consist with his Ascetick Way of living) uses this Argument to him: You may still, says he, after you are made a Bishop [t], hunger and thirst with Paul, and abstain from Wine with Timothy, and fast frequently as St. Paul was wont to do. Let not therefore your Counsellors throw such Objections in your Way. For we know many Bishops that fast, and Monks that eat and drink; we know Bishops that drink no Wine, and Monks that do; we know Bishops that work Miracles, and Monks that work none. Many Bishops are not married; and on the other hand many Monks are Fathers of Children; You may also find Bishops that are Fathers of Children, and Monks that are not so; Clergy that eat and drink, and Monks that fast. For these Things are at Liberty, and no Prohibition laid upon them: Every one exercises himself as he pleases; for it is not Mens Station, but their Actions, for which they shall be crowned. From these Words of Athanasius it seems plain, that as yet the Rules of the Monastick Life obliged no Man to renounce either his Possessions or a married State, but he might use both if he pleased, without any Ecclesiastical Censure. And tho' the Case was a little altered with some Monks before St. Austin's time, yet others reserved to themselves their ancient Privilege: For St. Austin writing against the Hereticks, who called themselves Apostolicks, says, They [u] arrogantly assumed to themselves that Name, because they rejected all from their Communion, who had either Wives or Estates, of which sort the Catholick Church had many both Monks and Clergy. So that at least some Monks were still at liberty to enjoy both a Conjugal State and Possessions of their own, without any Impeachment of Apostacy or Breach of Vow in the Catholick Church. For which reason I have given this Sort of Monks the distinguishing Name of Seculars.

[f] Lexicon Juridic. voce Synoditæ. Genev. 1615.
[g] Gennad. de Scriptor. in Evagrio, Compoſuit de Cœnobitis ac Synoditis Doctrinam aptam vitæ communis. [h] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Tria ſunt in Ægypto genera Monachorum: Primum Cœnobitæ, quod illi Sauches gentili lingua vocant; Nos, in commune viventes, poſſumus appellare. Secundum Anachoritæ, quod ſoli habitant per deſerta, & ab eo quod procul ab hominibus receſſerint, nuncupantur. Tertium genus eſt quod Remboth dicunt, deterrimum atque neglectum. [i] Ib. Hi bini vel trini nec multo plures ſimul habitant, ſuo arbitratu ac ditione viventes.—— Habitant autem quam plurimi in Urbibus & Caſtellis: & quaſi Ars ſit ſancta, non vita, quicquid vendiderint majoris eſt pretii. Inter hos ſæpe ſunt jurgia, quia ſuo viventes cibo, non patiuntur ſe alicui eſſe ſubjectos. Revera ſolent certare Jejuniis, & rem ſecreti victoriæ faciunt. Apud hos affectata ſunt omnia, laxæ Manicæ, Caligæ follicantes, Veſtis craſſior, crebra ſuſpiria, Viſitatio Virginum, Detractio Clericorum. Et ſi quando dies feſtus venerit, ſaturantur ad vomitum, &c. [k] Caſſian. Collat. 18. c. 7. [l] Spalat. de Rep. Eccl. lib. 2. c. 12. n. 77. [m] Evagr. lib. 1. c. 13. [n] Theodor. Lect. lib. 2. p. 565. [o] Ibid. lib. 1. p. 554. [p] Evagr. lib. 6. c. 23. [q] Moſch. Prat. Spir. c. 36. 57. 129. [r] Surius Tom. 6. Vid. Hoſpin. de Monach. lib. 2. c. 5. p. 22. [ſ] Spalat. de Rep. lib 2. c. 11. n. 22.

SECT. VII.

All Monks originally no more than Laymen.

THOUGH to avoid Ambiguity in Terms, it must be observed, that all Monks at first might properly be called Seculars, as that Name is opposed to Ecclesiasticks. For Monks in their first Original were generally Laymen, nor could they well be otherwise by their proper Constitution, and the general Laws of the Catholick Church. For the first Monks were generally Hermits, that is, Persons confined by their own Rules to some Desert or Wilderness, where Solitude was thought to help forward the Exercises of Contemplation and Repentance, and they had none to take care of but their own Souls: But the Clerical Life required Men to live in Towns and Cities, where Crowds of People afforded them proper Occasions to exercise the Offices of the Clerical Function: And it was against the Rules of the Catholick Church, as I have shewed [*] in another Place, for any Clerk to be ordained without a proper Cure or Title in some Church, where he might do the Duties of his Function. For this reason it was a thing Impracticable in itself, as well as against the Rules of the two different States of the Clerical and Monastick Life, that the Generality of Monks should be Clergymen; which, to the Confusion of ancient Rules and Discipline, has been the unwarrantable Practice of later Ages, especially since the Time of Clement V. An. 1311, who obliged (w) all Monks to take Holy Orders, that they might say Private Mass for the Honour of God, as he esteemed it; which was in truth a manifest trampling on the Laws of the ancient Church, and an Affront to her Practice. For anciently Monks were put into the same Class with Laymen, as they generally were, and considered only as such. St. Jerom gives us at once both the Rule and the Practice, when he says, the Office of a Monk is not [x] to teach, but to mourn: And that the Case of the Monks and Clergy is very different from each other: The Clergy are those that feed the Sheep, but the Monks (among whom he reckons himself) are those that are fed. 'Tis true, St. Jerom was not only a Monk, but a Presbyter likewise: But being ordained against his Will, and resolving to continue a Monk, he refused to officiate as a Presbyter: Which shews, that he had no great Opinion of joining the Monk and the Clerk together, much less of making all Monks in general become Clerks according to the modern Practice. The Council of Chalcedon once or twice very expressly distinguishes the Monks from the Clergy, and reckons them with the Laymen. In one Canon (y) it says, whoever are instrumental in getting others ordained or promoted to any Office in the Church for Money or filthy Lucre; Such Transactors, if they be Clergymen, shall be deposed; if Laymen or Monks, excommunicated. And another Canon [z] forbids Monks to meddle with Ecclesiastical Affairs. Both which Canons plainly imply, that the Monks then were not of the Clergy, but meerly Laymen. Pope Leo (a) at the same time speaks of them as such, telling Maximus Bishop of Antioch, that he should not permit Monks or Laymen, however Learned, to usurp the Power of Teaching or Preaching, but only the Priests of the Lord. And therefore when any Monk was to be ordained Presbyter or Bishop, he was obliged first to go through all other Orders of the Church, as it was then customary for Laymen to do, before the Superior Orders were conferred upon them. This we learn from a Decree of Pope Gelaſius [b], which orders, that if a Monk of good Life and Learning was minded to be ordained a Prieſt, he ſhould firſt be made a Reader or a Notary or a Defenſor, and after three Months an Acolythiſt, after Six Months a Subdeacon, after Nine Months a Deacon, and at the Year's End a Presbyter. So that the Difference between a Monk and any other Layman was only this, that a Monk by vertue of his Education in a School of Learning and good Diſcipline (ſuch as Monaſteries then were) was ſuppoſed to be a better Proficient than other Laymen, and therefore allowed the Benefit of a quicker Paſſage through the Inferior Orders than other Candidates of the Prieſthood. All which ſhews, that anciently the Generality of Monks were only Laymen, or at moſt but in a middle State betwixt common Laymen and the Clergy; as the learned Men of the Romiſh Church, Habertus [c], Lindanus [d], and others, ſcruple not to confeſs, though they are willing to defend the Modern Practice. Nay even Gratian [e] himſelf, who is moſt concerned for the Moderns, owns it to be plain from Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, that to the Time of Pope Siricius and Zoſimus the ancient Monks were only ſimple Monks, and not of the Clergy.

[t] Athan. Ep. ad Dracont. Tom. 1. p 958. [u] Aug. de Hæref. c. 40. Apostolici se isto nomine arrogantissime vocaverunt, eo quod in suam Communionem non reciperent utentes conjugibus, & res proprias possidentes; quales habet Catholica Ecclesia & Monachos & Clericos plurimos. [*] Book iv. chap. 6. n. 2. [w] Vid. Clementin. lib. 3. Tit. 10. c. 1.
[x] Hieron. Ep. 55. ad Ripar. Monachus non docentis, sed plangentis habet Officium. Id. Ep. 1. ad Heliodor. Alia Monachorum est Causa, alia Clericorum: Clerici pascunt oves, ego pascor.
[y] Conc. Chalced. c 2. [z] Ibid. c. 4. [a] Leo Ep. 60. al. 62. Illud quoque convenit præcavere, ut præter eos qui sunt Domini Sacerdotes, nullus sibi jus Docendi & Prædicandi audeat vendicare, sive sit ille Monachus, sive Laicus, qui alicujus Scientiæ nomine glorietur.

SECT. VIII. In what Caſes the Clerical and Monaſtick Life might be conjoined together.

BUT though Monks did not anciently aſpire to be ordained; nor was it conſiſtent with the Rules of the Church that all of them ſhould be ſo; yet in ſeveral Caſes the Clerical and Monaſtick Life was in ſome meaſure capable of being conjoined. As, firſt, when a Monaſtery happened to be at ſo great a Diſtance from its proper Epiſcopal or Parochial Church, that the Monks could not ordinarily reſort thither for Divine Service; which was the Caſe of the Monaſteries in Egypt and other Parts of the Eaſt, where the Monks lived in great Deſerts ſequeſtred from the reſt of Mankind; then ſome one or more of the Monks were ordained for the Performance of Divine Offices among them. Thus Caſſian often ſpeaks of the Churches of the Monaſteries of Scethis or Scythia in the Deſerts of Egypt, one of which had two Presbyters, Paphnutius [f] and Daniel; and three other ſingle Presbyters reſiding, and performing Divine Offices in them: Theſe were the Abbots or Fathers of the Monaſteries, and Presbyters of the Churches together; whom Caſſian mentions with this remarkable [g] Circumſtance, That all of them, except Paphnutius, being over-run with the Hereſy of the Anthropomorphites, when Theophilus Biſhop of Alexandria ſent one of his Paſchal Letters among them (to give Notice of Eaſter according to Cuſtom) and therein made ſome ſharp Reflections on that abſurd Hereſy, they would not ſo much as ſuffer his Epiſtle to be read in their Churches. Sozomen likewiſe [h] tells us, that Prines the Monk, whom the Arians made Uſe of as their Inſtrument to conceal Arſenius, while they accuſed Athanaſius of his Murder, was a Presbyter of one of the Monaſteries in the Deſerts of Thebais. Where it ſeems the Monaſteries were vaſtly great: For Caſſian [i] aſſures us, that one of them had no leſs than five thouſand Monks in it: And it cannot be thought ſtrange, that ſuch Monaſteries in remote Deſerts ſhould have their proper Churches, and Presbyters to officiate in them. But it was not only in the Deſerts that Monaſteries were allowed Presbyters in them, but in ſome Places the City-Monaſteries (as ſoon as they began to get Footing there) had the ſame Privilege likewiſe. For Eutyches the Heretick was not only Archimandrite, but Presbyter alſo of his Monaſtery at Conſtantinople, as Liberatus [k] and other ancient Writers ſtile him. And that this was no unuſual Thing, appears from hence, that both the Civil and the Canon Law allows the Practice. Juſtinian in one of his Novels [l] has a Proviſo both for ſuch Monaſteries as had Churches of their own, and ſuch as had not: For thoſe which had none of their own, 'tis ordered, that the Monks ſhould repair to the Pariſh Church with their Abbot, and after Divine Service immediately return to their Monaſtery again: But ſuch Monaſteries as had Churches in them, might have four or five of their own Body ordained Presbyters, or Deacons, or of the Inferior Orders, as there was Occaſion. And before this the Council of Chalcedon [n] ſpeaks of Churches in Monaſteries, and Clergy belonging to them; allowing a Deputation to any ſuch Church to be a ſufficient Title to qualify a Man for Holy Orders. So that in theſe Circumſtances there is no Queſtion to be made but that the Clerical and Monaſtick Life were often joined together.

2. Another Caſe in which the ſame Thing was practiſed, was when Monks were taken out of Monaſteries by the Biſhops, and ordained for the Service of the Church. Which Thing was frequently done, and not only allowed, but encouraged both by the Imperial and Eccleſiaſtical Laws; when once Monaſteries were become Schools of Learning and pious Education, they were thought the propereſt Nurſeries for the Church. Therefore Arcadius made it an Inſtruction to the Biſhops, that if at any time [o] they needed to augment their Clergy, they ſhould do

[b] Gelaſ. Ep. 9. ad Epiſ. Lucan. c. 3. Si quis de Religioſo Propoſito, & Diſciplinis Monaſterialibus eruditus, ad Clericale Munus accedat— continuò Lector vel Notarius, aut certe Defenſor effectus, poſt tres menſes exiſtat Acolythus: ſexto menſe Subdiaconi nomen accipiat; nono menſe Diaconus, completoque anno ſit Presbyter. [c] Habert. Archieratic. p. 601. [d] Lindan. Panopl. lib. 4. c. 75. [e] Gratian. cauſ. 16. Q. 1. poſt. cap. 39. Monachos vero uſque ad tempus Euſebii, Zoſimi, & Siricii Monachos ſimpliciter, & non Clericos fuiſſe, Eccleſiaſtica teſtatur Hiſtoria. [f] Caſſian. Collat. 3. c. 1. Collat. 4. c. 1. [g] Collat. 10. c. 2. Ita eſt hæc Epiſtola refutata ab his, qui erant in Eremo Scythi commorantes, ut præter Abbatem Paphnutium noſtræ Congregationis Presbyterum, nullus eam cæterorum Presbyterorum, qui in eadem eremo aliis tribus Eccleſiis præſidebant, nec legi quidem ac recitari in ſuis Conventibus prorſus admitterent. [h] Sozom. lib. 2. c. 23. [i] Caſſian. de Inſtitut. Renunciant. lib. 4. c. 1. [k] Liberat. Breviar. c. 11. [l] Juſtin. Novel 133. c. 2. [n] Conc. Chalced. c. 6. & 8. [o] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Epiſc. Leg. 32. Si quos forte Epiſcopi deeſſe ſibi Clericos arbitrantur, ex Monachorum numero rectius ordinabunt.

it

it out of the Monks. Gothofred in his learned Obſervations on this Law has abundantly ſhewed the Church's Practice from the Teſtimonies of Athanaſius [p], St. Jerom [q], St. Auſtin [r], Epiphanius [s], Palladius [t], St. Baſil [u], Marcellinus Chronicon, and the Code of the African [w] Church. To which may be added the Letters [x] of Siricius, Innocent, and Gelaſius alledged by Gratian, and the Councils of Agde [y] and Lerida, which allow a Biſhop to take any Monk out of a Monaſtery with the Conſent and Approbation of the Abbot, and ordain him for the Service of the Church. And in this Caſe they uſually continued their ancient Auſteries and Aſcetick way of Living, and ſo joined the Clerical and Monaſtick Life together. Upon which Account both theſe and the former Sort were by the Greeks ſtiled ἱερομοναχοὶ, Clergy-Monks, to diſtinguiſh them from ſuch as were only Laymen.

3. It happened ſometimes, that a Biſhop and all his Clergy choſe an Aſcetick way of Living, by a voluntary Renunciation of all Property, and enjoying all Things in Common, in Imitation of the firſt Church under the Apoſtles. St. Ambroſe [z] ſeems to ſay that Euſebius Vercellenſis was the firſt that brought in this way of Living into the Weſtern Church. For before his Time the Monaſtick Life was not known in Cities; but he taught his Clergy to live in the City after the Rules and Inſtitution of Monks in the Wilderneſs. Which muſt be underſtood chiefly, I conceive, of their Auſteries, and renouncing their Property, and having all Things in common, as the other had. St. Auſtin ſet up the ſame way of Living among the Clergy of Hippo, as we learn from his own Words, who ſays [a] he had made the Biſhop's Houſe a Monaſtery of Clergymen, where it was againſt the Rule for any Man to enjoy any Property of his own, but they had all Things in common. Which is alſo noted by Poſſidius in his Life, That his Clergy [b] lived with him in the ſame Houſe, and eat at the ſame Table, and were fed and cloathed at a common Expence. And ſo far as this was an Imitation of the Cœnobites way of Living and having all Things common, it might be called a Monaſtick as well as Clerical Life, as Poſſidius and St. Auſtin call it. But as yet there was no Monaſtery in the World, where all the Monks were ordained only to ſay private Maſs, without being fixed to any certain Cure, where they might perform the ſeveral Offices of the Clerical Function. The Monaſtery of St. Auſtin conſiſted only of ſuch as had publick Offices and Buſineſs in the Church, and were not Men confined to a Cloyſter.

SECT. IX. The Original of Canons Regular.

THEREFORE the Hermits of St. Auſtin, and many other modern Orders which aſſume his Name, do but falſely pretend to derive their Original from him; who, it is certain, never was an Hermit himſelf, nor wrote any Rules for them, though a great many Sermons are fathered on him as preached to the Hermits in the Wilderneſs. They who count the Riſe of Canons Regular from him, as Duarenus [c] and others, have Something more of Probability on their Side: Becauſe, as I have ſhewed, the Clergy of Hippo were under ſome of the Exerciſes of a Monaſtick Life, which made them a ſort of Canons Regular: And yet Onuphrius [d] and Hoſpinian [e], who have enquired very nicely into theſe Matters, make Gelaſius the firſt Founder of them under that Name in the Lateran Church, where they continued to the Time of Boniface VIII. who expelled them thence. How ſoon the Name or Order came into other Churches, Hoſpinian will inform the curious Reader.

SECT. X. Of the Monks called Accœmetæ, or Watchers.

ABOUT the Beginning of the Fifth Century, or, as Baronius [f] thinks, toward the middle of it, at Conſtantinople under Gennadius the Patriarch, one Alexander ſet up an Order of Monks, whom the Writers of that and the following Ages commonly ſtile Ἀκοιμῆται, that is Watchers: The Reaſon of which Name is taken from their manner of performing Divine Offices Day and Night without Intermiſſion. For they divided themſelves into Three Claſſes, and ſo One ſucceeded another at a ſtated Hour, and by that Means continued a perpetual Courſe of Divine Service, without any Interval, as well by Night as by Day, whence they had the Name of Watchers given them. The Piety of this Order procured them great Eſteem and Veneration, and many Monaſteries were builded for their Uſe at Conſtantinople. Among others one Studius, a Nobleman of Rome, and a Man of Conſular Dignity, renounced the World, and became one of their Order; erecting a famous Monaſtery for them himſelf, which from the Founder was [g] called Studium, and the Monks of it Studitæ. And this perhaps is the firſt Time we meet any Monks that took their Denomination from any Founder. But theſe Monks in a little time ſunk in their Credit, becauſe they were many [p] Athanaſ. Ep. ad Dracont. [q] Hieron. Ep. 3. & 4. [r] Aug. Ep. 67, 76, 81. [s] Ephiphan. Expoſ. Fidei. [t] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 21. [u] Baſil. Ep. 403. ad Amphiloc. [w] Cod Afric. c. 80. al. 83. [x] Gratian. Cauſ. 16. Q. 1. c. 20, 22, 28. [y] Conc. Agathen. c. 27. Conc. Ilerd. c. 3. [z] Ambroſ. Ep. 82. ad Eccleſ. Vercel. p. 254. Hæc enim primus in Occidentis partibus diverſa inter ſe Euſebius ſanctæ memoriæ conjunxit, ut & in Civitate poſitus inſtituta Monachorum teneret, & eccleſiam regeret jejunii Sobrietate. [a] Aug. Serm. 49. de Diverſis T. 10. p. 519. Volui habere in iſta domo Epiſcopi meum Monaſterium Clericorum. Ecce quomodo vivimus. Nulli licet in Societate habere aliquid proprium. [b] Poſſid. Vit. Aug. c. 25. Cum ipſo ſemper Clerici, una etiam domo ac menſa, ſumptibuſque communibus alebantur & veſtiebantur. [c] Duaren. de Miniſt. & Benefic. lib. 1. c. 21. [d] Onuphr. Annot. in Platin. Vit. Gelaſ. p. 62. Gelaſius Canonicos, ut vocant, Regularis Ordinis Sti. Auguſtini Laterani primus collocavit, qui ibidem uſque ad Bonifacium VIII. à quo expulſi ſunt, permanſerunt. Ex Archivis Baſilicæ Lateranenſis. [e] Hoſpin. de Orig. Monachat. lib. 3. c. 6. p. 72. [f] Baron. an. 59 ex Actis Marcelli ap. Surium. Dec. 29. [g] Niceph. Hiſt. lib. 15. c. 23.

times

times found to be Favourers of the Hereſy of Neſtorius, for which they are frequently reflected on [*] by Eccleſiaſtical Writers.

SECT. XI. Of thoſe called Βοσκοὶ, or Grazers.

IN the Regions of Syria and Meſopotamia, Sozomen [h] takes Notice of another ſort of Monks, who from their peculiar way of Living were commonly called Βοσκοὶ, the Grazers. For they lived after the ſame manner as Flocks and Herds upon the Mountains, never dwelling in any Houſe, nor eating any Bread or Fleſh, nor drinking Wine, but continuing inſtantly in the Worſhip of God, in Prayers and Hymns, according to the Cuſtom of the Church, till Eating Time was come; and then every Man went with his Knife in his Hand to provide himſelf Food of the Herbs of the Field, which was their only Diet and conſtant way of Living.

SECT. XII. Of the Benedictins, and Gyrovagi in Italy.

I take no Notice here of thoſe called by ſome the Monks of St. Baſil and St. Jerom: For 'tis certain thoſe Fathers never ſet up any diſtinct Orders of their own, though both of them were Promoters of the Monaſtick Life in General. The Rule, which goes under the Name of St. Jerom, is known to be a Forgery of ſome later Writer. And the Aſceticks commonly aſcribed to St. Baſil, are by ſome Learned Men [i] rather thought to be the Off-ſpring of Euſtathius of Sebaſtia. But admitting them to be his, as moſt Learned Men do, they do not argue him the Author of any new Order, but only a Director of thoſe which were already founded. Therefore paſſing by theſe, I ſhall only take Notice of two Orders more, the Benedictins in Italy, and the Apoſtolicks in Britain. The Benedictins had their Riſe from Benedict, a famous Italian Monk, in the Time of Juſtinian, about the Year 530. His firſt Settlement was at Sublaqueum in the Dioceſs of Tibur in Italy, where he erected twelve Monaſteries of twelve Monks apiece in the neighbouring Wilderneſs; one of which in after Ages grew ſo great, that it was not only exempt from Epiſcopal Power, againſt all ancient Rules, but, as a modern [k] Writer obſerves, had no leſs than fourteen Villages under its own proper Juriſdiction. From this Place he removed to Mount Caſſin, where he erected another Monaſtery, from whence he propagated his Order into other Countries with ſo great Succeſs, that for 600 Years after, the greateſt Part of the European Monks were Followers of his Rule; and ſo whatever other Names they went by, Carthuſians, Ciſtercians, Grandimontenſes, Præmonſtratenſes, Cluniacks, &c. they were but different Branches of the Benedictins, till about the Year 1220 the Dominicans and Franciſcans took new Rules from their Leaders. Hoſpinian [l] reckons up twenty three Orders that ſprang from this One, and obſerves out of Volateran, That in his Time it was computed that there had been of the Order 200 Cardinals, 1600 Archbiſhops, 4000 Biſhops, 15700 Abbots, by which it is eaſy to judge of the prodigious Increaſe of this Order. I ſhall not concern my ſelf to give any farther Account of them, but only obſerve one Thing out of the Rule of Benedict himſelf, That he never intend his Monks ſhould be called after his own Name, or reckoned a new Order; much leſs that ſo many new Orders ſhould be derived from it. For he profeſſes only to write in general for the Uſe of the Cœnobites and Anchorets of the Primitive Church, which in his Time were the only two ſtanding Orders that the Churches of Italy allowed. He ſays indeed there were four Sorts of Monks in all, Cœnobites, Anchorets, Sarabaitæ and Gyrovagi: But the two laſt were only Scandals and Reproaches to the Church. Of the Sarabaitæ he gives much the ſame Account that St. Jerom and Caſſian do before him [*]. And the Gyrovagi he thus deſcribes: They were a Sort of Rambling Monks, that ſpent their whole Life [m] in Running about from one Province to another, and Getting themſelves well entertained for three or four Days together at every Cell they came at, being arrant Slaves to their Bellies, and wholly addicted to their Pleaſures, and in all Things worſe than the very Sarabaitæ themſelves. So that he profeſſes to paſs over their miſerable Converſation in Silence, and to write only for the Inſtruction and Uſe of the Ancient Cœnobites of the Church. By which it is plain, that in the Time of St. Benedict, the Monks had not diſtinguiſhed themſelves into very many different Orders allowed in the Weſtern Church.

SECT. XIII. Of the Apoſtolicks in Britain and Ireland.

ABOUT the Year 596 the Benedictins came with Auſtin the Monk into Britain, and ſo all the Monaſteries which the Saxons built, were for Monks of that Order. But the ancient Britains had long before this entertained the Monaſtick Life. Some ſay Pelagius [n] firſt brought it out of the Eaſt into Britain: Others make him alſo Abbot of the College of Bangor, and ſpeak of 2000 Monks under him: But this is juſtly cenſured by Learned Men [o] as a meer Fable of Modern Authors. However, it is certain from Bede, that there was a Monaſtery at Bangor (whoever was the firſt Founder of it is not very material to enquire) before Auſtin and his Monks came into England; and here [*] Vid. Nicephor. ibid. [h] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 33. Vid. Evagr. lib. 1. c. 21. Moſchus Prat. Spir. c. 19. [i] Hoſpin. de Orig. Monach. p. 69. Sutclif. de Monachis c. 7. Vid. Sozomen. lib. 3. c. 14. [k] Baudrand. Lexic. Geograph. Voce, Sublaqueum. [l] Hoſpin. de Monach. lib. 4. c. 5. p. 116. & 132. [*] Vid. Sect. 4. [m] Benedict. Regul. Monachor. c. 1. Quartum Genus eſt Monachorum, quod nominatur Gyrovagum, qui tota vita ſua per diverſas Provincias ternis aut quaternis diebus per diverſorum Cellas hoſpitantur; ſemper vagi & nunquam ſtabiles; propriis voluptatibus & gulæ illecebris ſervientes, & per omnia deteriores Sarabaitis: de quorum omnium miſerrima Converſatione melius eſt ſilere quam loqui. His ergo omiſſis, ad Cœnobitarum fortiſſimum genus diſponendum, adjuva te Dominoveniamus. [n] Hoſpin. de Monach. lib. 4. c. 3. p. 115. [o] Cave Hiſt. Liter. Vol. 1. p. 291.

[p] was

[p] was such a Number of Monks, that the Monastery being divided into Seven Parts, each Part had a Rector and no less than three Hundred Persons in it: All which were wont to live by the Labour of their own Hands. Hospinian and Bale give this the Name of the Apostolick Order; but whether upon good Grounds I cannot say. In one Thing it is certain they make a great Mistake, in that they confound this Monastery of Banochor or Bangor with that of Bencher in Ireland; which was another famous Monastery founded by Congellus about the Year 520. Out of this Monastery sprang many thousand Monks, and many other Monasteries in Ireland and other Nations also. St. Bernard [q] says, Luanus one of the Monks of this Congregation, himself alone founded an hundred Monasteries. And Bishop Usher has observed [r] of Brendanus, one of Congellus his first Disciples, that he presided over three thousand Monks, who by their own Labours and Handy-work did earn their own Living. Columba was another of his Disciples, who having first founded the Monastery of Deermach in Ireland, went and converted the Northern Picts to the Christian Faith, An. 565, and builded a Monastery in the Isle of Hy, from whence many other Monasteries both in Britain and Ireland, as Bede [s] observes, were propagated by his Disciples. Columbanus and Gallus were also Monks under Congellus, the latter of which is famous for founding the Monastery of St. Gall in Helvetia, which is since become an eminent City; and the other for founding that of Lexovium or Lisieux in Normandy, where the Monks (like the Acœmetæ or Watchers of Constantinople mentioned before) were used to divide themselves into several Quires, to succeed one another, and continue Divine Service Day and Night without Intermission, as St. Bernard informs us. I have been the more particular in giving a distinct Account of these two famous Monasteries, Benchor and Bangor, not only because they were the most ancient in Ireland and Britain, but because they are so unhappily by Hospinian and Bale confounded into one.

SECT. XIV. Of some uncommon Names of Monks in the Ancient Church.

I will shut up this Chapter with a few Remarks upon the different Names which the Ancients gave to some, or all Kinds of Monks in general. Beside the Names of Monks and Ascetics, we find them frequently stiled by other Titles, respecting some particular Act of their Profession. In Regard to their Retirement, and quiet Way of Living, some are stiled by Justinian [u] in One of his Novels, ἡσυχασταὶ Hesychastæ, Quietists. Suicerus [w] and Habertus [x] take it to be only another Name for Anchorets. But according to Justinian's Account it seems rather to mean Persons who lived among the Cœnobites, but for greater Exercise were allowed to retire from the Community, and live (though within the Bounds of a Cœnobium) in particular Cells by themselves, and those Cells were called ἡσυχασήρια upon that account. Otherwiles Monks are stiled Continentes, because of their great Abstinence and Continent Life: As in the Third Council of Carthage, which forbids the Clergy and Persons [y] professing Continence, to go to the Virgins or Widows without the Leave of the Bishops or Presbyters. So also in a Law of Valentinian in the Theodosian [z] Code, and other Places. Sometimes again they are noted by the Names ἀποταξάμενοι and Renunciantes, Renouncers, from renouncing the World and a Secular Life; as in Palladius [a], and Cassian [b], who particularly entitles one of his Books, De Institutis Renunciantium. Sometimes they are termed Philosophers, as by Isidore of Pelusium [c], Palladius [d], Theodoret [e] and others, because their Way of Living seemed to resemble the Philosophick Life more than others. The Author under the Name of Dionysius the Areopagite seems to give them the Name of [f] Therapeutæ, though that was once a common Name of Christians in Egypt, if the Accounts of Eusebius and St. Jerom may be trusted [*]. Palladius sometimes uses the Term φιλοθεΐα, for the Monastick Life [g], because they made a Profession of renouncing All for the Love of God: And upon this Account Theodoret [h] gives one of his Books the Title of Philotheus, or Religious History, because it contains the Lives of the most famous Ascetics of his Time. The Reader will sometimes also meet with the Name of Silentiarii, given to some Monks in ancient History: But this was not a Name of any particular Order, but given to some few for their professing a more than Pythagorean Silence; such as Johannes Silentiarius, who was first Bishop of Colonia in Armenia, but renounced his Bishoprick to become a Monk in Palestine, where he got the Name of Silentiarius, from his extraordinary Silence, as Cyril [i] of Scythopolis, the Writer of his Life, informs us. Though it must be noted, that the Name Silentiarii, is more commonly given to another Sort of Men, who were Civil Officers in the Emperor's Palace, and served both as Apparitors to execute Publick Business, and as Guards to keep the Peace about him, whence they had the Name of Silentiarii, under which Title they are spoken of in the [p] Bede Hist. Anglor. lib. 2. c. 2. In Monasterio Bancor tantus fertur fuisse numerus Monachorum, ut cum in Septem portiones esset cum Præpositis sibi Rectoribus Monasterium divisum, nulla harum portio minus quam trecentos homines haberet, qui omnes de labore manuum suarum vivere solebant. [q] Bernard. Vit. Malachiæ, c. 5. p. 1934. [r] Usher, Relig. of the Anc. Irish, c. 6. p. 46. [s] Bede, lib. 3. c. 4. [t] Bernard. ibid. Vit. Malachiæ, c. 5. [u] Justin. Novel. 5. c. 3. [w] Suicer. Thesaur. Eccles. voce ἡσυχαστὴς. [x] Habert. Archierat. p. 588. [y] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 25. Ut Clerici vel Continentes, ad Viduas vel Virgines, nisi jussu vel permissu Episcoporum & Presbyterorum non accedant. Vid. Cod. Can. Afric. c. 38. al. 41. [z] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episcop. Leg. 20. Qui Continentium se volunt nomine nuncupari, &c. [a] Pallad. Hist. Lausiac. c. 15. [b] Cassian. lib. 4. de Institut. Renunc. [c] Isidor. lib. 1. Ep. 1. [d] Pallad. Hist. Lausiac. c. 8. [e] Theodor. lib. 5 c. 24. [f] Dionys. de Hierarch. Eccl. c. 6. p. 386. [*] See Book 1. chap. 1. Sect. 1. [g] Pallad. Lausiac. c. 12. [h] Theodor. φιλοθεὸς, Tom. 4. [i] Apud Papebroch. Acta Sanctorum Maii 13. Tom. 3. p. 234.

Theodosian

Theodosian [k] Code, which joins them and the Decuriones together, where in Gothofred's learned Notes the curious Reader may find a farther Account of them. Another Name which the Historians give to some Egyptian Monks, who were deeply concerned in the Disputes between Theophilus and Chrysostom, is the Title of μακρῲ, or Longi; But this was peculiar to four Brethren, Dioscorus, Ammonius, Eusebius, and Euthymius, who were noted by this Name for no other Reason, as Sozomen [l] observes, but only because they were tall of Stature. In Sidonius Apollinaris they are sometimes called Cellulani, from their living in Cells [m], and Insulani, Islanders, because the famous Monastery in the Isle of Lerins was the Place where most of the French Bishops and Learned Men in those Ages had their Education. So this was a peculiar Name for the Monks of Lerins. The Monasteries, beside the the common Names of μοναστήρια and μοναὶ, were also sometimes termed σεμνεῖα, as Suicerus shews out of Balzamon, and Methodius, and Suidas, though that anciently in Eusebius and Philo signified a Church. They were also called ἡγεμονεῖα and μάνδραι, whence Hegumenus and Archimandrita are Names for an Abbot, who is the chief Father of a Monastery, or Governour of it. And they are sometimes stiled φροντιστήρια, Places of Education and Schools of Learning, because, as I shew in the next Chapter, they were anciently made Use of to that End, and had their φροντισταὶ or Curators particularly designed for that Purpose.

CHAP. III.

An Account of such Ancient Laws and Rules, as relate to the Monastick Life, chiefly that of the Cœnobites.

SECT. I. The Curiales not allowed to turn Monks.

HAVING thus far taken a View of the several Sorts of Monks and their several Titles, I proceed to give a short Account of the Principal Laws and Rules, made partly by the joint Concurrence of the Civil and Ecclesiastical Power, and partly by the Authority of Private Superiors, for the Government of the Cœnobites, or such Monks as lived in Communities, which were chiefly regarded in the Church. And here we must first look to the Laws relating to their Admission: For all Men were not allowed to turn Monks at Pleasure, because such an indiscriminate Permission would have been to the Detriment both of Church and State. Upon this Account the Civil Law forbids any of the Curiales to become Monks, unless they parted with their Estates to some Others, that might bear the Offices of their Country in their Stead. To this Purpose is that Law of Valentinian and Valens in the Theodosian [a] Code, which taking Notice of some Curiales, who pretended to associate themselves with the Monks in Egypt, only to avoid bearing the Offices of their Country, orders them to be fetch'd back from the Monasteries, by Force, and to be compelled to do their Duty in their Civil Station, or else to part with their Estates to Others that should officiate for them. This was agreeable to all those ancient Laws, which forbad any of the Curiales to be ordained among the Clergy, except upon the same Condition of quitting their Estates to others to bear the Offices of their Country in their Stead: And yet Baronius [b] is so offended at this Law, that he reckons it was but the Præludium to a severe Persecution, which Valens shortly after the Death of Valentinian brought upon the Monks in the East, when, as St. Jerom [c] and Orosius inform us, he by another Law obliged them to turn Soldiers, and ordered such as refused, to be bastinadoed to Death. Gothofred [d] by Mistake reckons this Law the very same with the former, but Mr. Pagi [e] corrects both him and Baronius together, and shews them to be distinct Laws, and plainly to refer to different Times and Things; the one being made while Valentinian was alive, the other by Valens alone after his Death; the one a very severe Law, raising a great Persecution against the Monks; the other laying no greater Burthen on them, than was always laid upon the Clergy by other Laws, which prohibit the Curiales to be ordained, unless they found proper Substitutes to bear the Offices of their Country in their Room. And the Reason of these Laws, as they referred both to the Monks and Clergy, was one and the same, That Men, who by their Estates were tied to the Service of their Country, might not ex-

[k] Cod. Th. lib. 6. tit. 23. de Decurionibus & Silentiariis.
[l] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 30. ὅτι μακρῲ ὑ ἐν τῷ σώματ☉ ὠνομάζοντο. [m] Sidon. lib. 9. Ep. 3. ad Faustum. Precum peritus Insulanarum, quas de Senatu Lyrinensium Cellulanorum in Urbem transtulisti. So Eucherius ad Salon. lib. 1. Insulani Tyrones. And Faustus de Natali S. Maximi Stadium Insulanum. Vid. Savaro. Not. in Loc. Sidonii.
[a] Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 63. Quidam ignaviæ Sectatores, desertis Civitatum Muneribus, captant Solitudines ac secreta, & specie Religionis cum cœtibus Monazonton congregantur. Hos igitur atque hujusmodi intra Ægyptum deprehensos, per Comitem Orientis erui è latebris consulta præceptione mandavimus, atque ad munia patriarum subeunda revocari, aut pro tenore nostræ Sanctionis Familiarium rerum carere inlecebris: quas per eos censuimus vindicandas, qui publicarum essent subituri munera functionum. [b] Baron. an. 375. p. 369.
[c] Hieron. Chronic. an. 376. Valens Lege data, ut Monachi militarent, nolentes fustibus jussit interfici. Oros. Hist. lib. 7. c. 33. Tribuni & milites missi, qui sanctos & veros Dei milites alio nomine persecutionis abstraherent, interfecerunt ibi agmina multa Sanctorum. [d] Gothofred. Not. in Cod. Th. lib. 12. tit. 1. de Decurion. leg. 63. [e] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 375. n. 12 & 13.

empt their Eſtates from that Service under Pretence of entering into a Religious Life.

SECT. II. Nor Servants without their Maſter's Conſent.

FOR the ſame Reaſon the moſt ancient Laws both of Church and State forbid any Servant to be admitted into any Monaſtery without his Maſter's Leave, becauſe that was to deprive his Maſter of his legal Right of Service, which by the Original State and Condition of his Servants was his Due. To this Purpoſe Valentinian III. has a Law at the End of the Theodoſian Code, which equally forbids Servants to become either Clerks or Monks [f] againſt their Maſter's Will, to evade the proper Bonds and Duties of their Station. Baronius [g] has a ſour Reflection upon this Law alſo: For he ſays, Nothing ever proſpered with Valentinian after the making of it: And yet he could not but know, that the ſame Thing had been before determined by the Council of Chalcedon [h], and that at the Inſtance of the Emperor Marcion, who himſelf drew up the Law, and deſired the Fathers in Synod to make a Canon of it, as appears from the Acts [i] of that Council. The Words of the Canon are, That no one ſhall be received into any Monaſtery, to continue there as a Monk, without the Conſent of his own Maſter. So little Reaſon was there to charge Valentinian with an Innovation in this Matter, when an Emperor and a General Council had determined the ſame before him. But Juſtinian cancelled all theſe former Laws by a new Edict of his own, which firſt ſet Servants at Liberty [k] from their Maſters, under Pretence of betaking themſelves to a Monaſtick Life. So that what Innovation was made in this Matter, is juſtly to be aſcribed to him as its proper Author.

SECT. III. Nor Husbands and Wives without mutual Conſent of each other.

ANOTHER Caution which the Ancients preſcribed to be obſerved in this Matter, was, That married Perſons ſhould never betake themſelves to a Monaſtick Life without mutual Conſent of both Parties. Thus Ammus and his Wife acted by Conſent, as Socrates and Palladius [l] relate the Story. And ſo Martinianus and Maxima, mentioned by Victor [m]; Paulinus Biſhop of Nola, and Therasia his Wife, by mutual Conſent. But Paulinus inveighs ſeverely againſt the contrary Practice, blaming Celantia and others, who indiſcreetly diſſolved their Marriage Vow, and thereby expoſed their Husbands to the Sin of Adultery, making themſelves [n] Partakers in their Guilt, by acting againſt the Rule of the Apoſtle, which ſays, The Wife hath not Power of her own Body, but the Husband; and likewiſe alſo the Husband hath not Power of his own Body, but the Wife. St. Auſtin [o] argues upon the ſame ground, That ſuch Engagements are not to be made but by mutual Conſent; and if either Party inconſiderably enter into any ſuch Vow, they are rather to repent of their Raſhneſs, than perform their Promiſe. This was his conſtant Senſe, as appears from other Places [p] of his Writings: And herein St. Jerom [q], St. Baſil [r], and all the Ancients agree, except Theonas in Caſſian [s], who having forſaken his Wife to turn Monk, is ſaid to have done it with the Approbation of the Fathers in Scethis, though Caſſian himſelf dares not undertake to excuſe it, as knowing it to have been againſt the general Senſe and Practice of the Catholick Church. Juſtinian indeed gave ſome Encouragement to this unwarrantable Practice by a Law, wherein he authorizes the Deſerting Party, Man or Woman, to claim [t] their own Fortune again, and not be liable to the leaſt Puniſhment for their Deſertion. But the Church never approved of this Law: And 'tis remarked even by Bellarmin himſelf [u] that Gregory the Great wrote againſt it.

SECT. IV. Nor Children without the Conſent of their Parents.

IT was anciently alſo thought unreaſonable to admit Children into the Monaſtick Life without or againſt the Conſent of their Parents. The Council of Gangra [w] ſeems to reflect on this Practice, as encouraged by Euſtathius the Heretick, in a Canon, which decrees, That if any Children under Pretence of Religion forſook their Parents, and did not give them the Honour due to them, they ſhould be Anathematized. St. Baſil's Directions are conformable to the Rule of that Council, That Children ſhould not be received [x] into Monaſteries, unleſs they were offered by their Parents, if their Parents were alive. But Juſtinian a little enervated the Force of this ancient Rule by a new [y] Law, forbidding Parents to hinder their Children from becoming Monks or Clerks, and evacuating their Wills, if they preſumed to diſinherit them upon that Account. And this ſeems to have been the firſt Step toward the [f] Valent. 3. Novel. 12. Nullus Originarius, Inquilinus, Servus, vel Colonus, ad Clericale munus accedat, neque Monachis & Monaſteriis aggregatur, ut vinculum debitæ Conditionis evadat. [g] Baron. an. 452. p. 179. [h] Conc. Chalced. c. 4. μηδένα προσδέχεσθαι ἐν τοῖς μοναστηρίοις ἐπὶ τὸ μονάσαι παρὰ γνώμην τοῦ ἰδίου δεσπότου. [i] Conc. Chalced. Act. 6. p. 609. [k] Juſtin. Novel. 5. c. 2. [l] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 8. [m] Vict. Uticenſ. de Perſec. Vandal. lib. 1. [n] Paulin. Ep. 14. ad Celant. inter Epiſt. Hieronymi. Multa jam per hujuſmodi ignorantiam & audivimus & vidimus ſciſſa Conjugia; quodque recordari piget, occaſione Caſtitatis Adulterium perpetratum, &c. [o] Aug. Ep. 45. Armentario & Paulinæ. Vovenda talia non ſunt a Conjugatis, niſi ex conſenſu & voluntate communi. Et ſi præpropere factum fuerit, magis eſt corrigenda Temeritas quàm perſolvenda Promiſſio. [p] Aug. Ep. 199. ad Ecdiciam. [q] Hieron. Ep. 46. ad Ruſticum. De non divellendo Matrimonio ſine utriuſque conſenſu. [r] Baſil. Regul. Major. Q. 12. [s] Caſſian. Collat. 21. c. 9. [t] Cod. Juſt. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſcop. & Cler. Leg. 53. [u] Bellarm. de Monachis, c. 38. [w] Conc. Gangren. c. 16. εἴ τινα τέκνα γονέων, μάλιστα πιστῶν, ἀναχωρεῖν προφάσει θεοσεβείας, καὶ μὴ τὴν καθήκουσαν τιμὴν τοῖς γονεῦσιν ἀπονέμοι— ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. [x] Baſil. Regul. Major. Q. 15. [y] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. Leg. 55. Ut non liceat Parentibus impedire, quo minus Liberi eorum volentes Monachi aut Clerici fiant, aut eam ob ſolam Cauſam exhæredare, &c.

contrary

contrary Practice; which ſome Learned Writers [z] of the Romiſh Church have been ſo far from approving, that they have with the utmoſt Zeal and Vehemence declaimed againſt it, as repugnant to the Laws of Reaſon and Scripture, and the general Practice of the Primitive Church.

SECT V. Children, though offered by their Parents, not to be retained againſt their own Conſent.

NOR was it only the Parents Right that was to be conſidered in this Caſe, but alſo the Right that every Perſon is preſumed to have in himſelf: For if a Parent offered a Child before he was capable of giving his own Conſent, the Act was of no Force, unleſs the Child confirmed it voluntarily, when he came to Years of Diſcretion: Which the ſecond Council of Toledo reckons to be about the Age of Eighteen, decreeing, That all ſuch as were entered in their Infancy by their Parents [a] into the Clerical or Monaſtick State, ſhould be inſtructed in the Biſhop's Houſe till they came to that Age, and then they ſhould be interrogated, whether they intended to lead a ſingle Life or marry, that accordingly they might now reſolve either to continue in their preſent State, or betake themſelves to a Secular Life again; which by the Decree of this Council they had ſtill Liberty to do. And Virgins had the ſame Liberty till Forty, by an Edict of the Emperors Leo and Majorian [b] at the End of the Theodoſian Code. But the Fourth Council of Toledo [c] was more ſevere in this Reſpect to Infant-Monks: For there it was decreed, An. 633, That whether their Parents Devotion or their own Profeſſion made them Monks, both ſhould be equally binding, and there ſhould be no Permiſſion to return to a Secular Life again. This, as Spalatenſis [d] rightly obſerves, was the firſt Canon that ever was made to retain Children in Monaſteries, who were only offered by their Parents, without requiring their own Conſent at Years of Diſcretion.

SECT. VI. Of the Tonſure and Habit of Monks.

THE Manner of Admiſſion was generally by ſome Change of their Habit and Dreſs, not to ſignify any Religious Myſtery, but only to expreſs their Gravity and Contempt of the World. And in this the ſober Part of them were always careful to obſerve a decent Mean betwixt Vanity and Lightneſs on the one hand, and hypocritical Affectations on the other. Long Hair was always thought an Indecency in Men, and ſavouring of ſecular Vanity: And therefore they poll'd every Monk at his Admiſſion, to diſtinguiſh him from the Seculars; but they never ſhaved any, for Fear they ſhould look too like the Prieſts of Iſis. This then was the ancient Tonſure in Oppoſition to both theſe Extreams. Long Hair they reckoned an effeminate Dreſs, and againſt the Rule of the Apoſtle: Therefore Epiphanius [e] blames the Meſopotamian Monks for wearing long Hair againſt the Rule of the Catholick Church: And St. Auſtin [f] cenſures ſuch under the Name of Criniti Fratres, the long-hair'd Brethren. St. Jerom, according to his Cuſtom, expreſſes himſelf with Satyr and Indignation againſt them: For writing to Euſtochium [g] he bids her beware of ſuch Monks as affected to walk in Chains, and wear long Hair, and Goats Beards, and black Cloaks, and go barefoot in the Midſt of Winter. For theſe were but Arguments and Tokens of a Devil. From which Invective it may be eaſily collected, that ſuch Sort of Affectations in Habit and Dreſs were not approved then by wiſe Men in the Church. But on the other hand, the ancient Tonſure was not a ſhaven Crown: For St. Jerom [h], St. Ambroſe [i], and Others equally inveigh againſt this as a Ceremony of the Prieſts of Iſis: It was only an Obligation on the Monks and Clergy to wear decent and ſhort Hair, as it is evident from all the Canons that appoint it [k]. As to their Habit and Cloathing, their Rules were the ſame, That it ſhould be decent and grave, as became their Profeſſion; not light and airy, nor ſlovenly and affected. The Monks of Tabenneſus in Thebais, which lived under the Inſtitution of Pachomius, ſeem to have been the only Monks in thoſe Days which were confined to any particular Habits: Caſſian [l] has a whole Book among his Inſtitutes to deſcribe them; where he ſpeaks of their Cingula, Cuculli, Collobia, Redimicula, Palliola or Maſortes, Melotes, their Sheep-Skins, and Caligæ, their Saudals; all which, they that are curious in this Matter may find there particularly deſcribed. But he owns, theſe Habits were not in Uſe [m] among the Weſtern Monks; and ſome of them, particularly the Cowle and the Sheep-Skins, would have expoſed them only to Deriſion, to have worn them. St. Jerom often ſpeaks of the Habit of Monks, but he never once intimates that it was any particular Garb differing from others, ſave only in this, that it was [z] Ærodius de Patrio Jure ad Filium, &c. [a] Conc. Tolet. 2. c. 1. De his, quos voluntas Parentum a primis Infantiæ annis in Clericatus officio vel Monachali poſuit, pariter ſtatuimus obſervandum, ut mox cum detonſi vel miniſterio electorum contraditi fuerint, in domo Eccleſiæ ſub Epiſcopali præſentia à Præpoſito ſibi debeant erudiri. At ubi octavum decimum ætatis ſuæ compleverint annum, coram totius Cleri Plebiſque conſpectu, voluntas eorum de expetendo Conjugio ab Epiſcopo perſcrutetur, &c. [b] Leo Novel. 8. [c] Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 48. Monachum aut Paterna Devotio aut propria Profeſſio facit. Quicquid horum fuerit alligatum, tenebit. Proinde his ad mundum revertendi intercludimus aditum, & omnes ad ſeculum interdicimus regreſſus. [d] Spalat. de Repub. lib. 2. c. 12. n. 29. [e] Epiphan. Hær. 80. n. 6. [f] Aug. de Oper. Monach. c. 31. Vereor in hoc vitio plura dicere propter quoſdam Crinitos Fratres, quorum præter hoc multa & pene omnia veneramur. [g] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtochium. c. 12. Viros fuge, quos videris catenatos; quorum fœminei contra Apoſtolum Paulum crines, Hircorum barba, nigrum Pallium, & nudi in patientia frigoris pedes. Hæc omnia Argumenta ſunt Diaboli. [h] Id. Com. in Ezek. c. 44. [i] Ambroſ. Ep. 36. ad Sabin. [k] Vid. Conc. Carthag. 4. c. 44. Conc. Athag. c. 20. Conc. Tolet. 3. c. 12. Tolet. 4. can. 40. [l] Caſſian. lib. 1. de Habitu Monachor. [m] Caſſian. ibid. c. 11. Nam neque Caligis nos neque Collobiis ſeu una Tunica eſſe contentos hyemis permittit aſperitas; & parviſſimi Cuculli velamen vel Melotis geſtio deriſum potius quam ædificationem ullam videntibus comparabit.

a cheaper, coarſer, meaner Raiment [n] than others wore, expreſſing their Humility and Contempt of the World without any Singularity or Affectation. For as to the affecting of Black Cloaks, and appearing in Chains, we have heard him already expreſs himſelf ſeverely againſt them. And he is no leſs Satyrical [o] againſt thoſe who wore Cowls and Sackcloth for their outward Garment; becauſe theſe were vain Singularities, which Religious Perſons ought to avoid, and rather obſerve a becoming Mean in their Habit [p] between Gaiety and Slovenlineſs, without any notable Diſtinction to draw the Eyes of the World upon them. Palladius takes Notice of ſome who loved to walk in Chains, but he ſays [q] Apollo the famous Egyptian Monk was uſed to inveigh ſeverely againſt them. And Caſſian juſtly blames ſome others, as having more Zeal than Knowledge, becauſe they litterally interpreting that Saying of our Saviour, He that taketh not up his Croſs, and followeth me, is not worthy of me, made themſelves wooden Creſſes, and carried them continually about their Necks: Which, as he rightly [r] obſerves, was not to edify, but raiſe the Laughter of all Spectators. Such Affectations were generally condemned by the Ancients, and it was only the Ignorant or Superſtitious that approved them. So that upon the whole Matter it appears, That the Weſtern Monks uſed only a common Habit, the Philoſophick Pallium, which many other Chriſtians in thoſe Times did; whence, as I have noted [*] in another Place, the Heathens called Chriſtians Greeks and Impoſtors: And ſometimes the looſer Sort of Chriſtians gave Monks the ſame Name for the ſame Reaſon, as St. Jerom [s] ſeems to intimate, when he ſays, If a Man did not wear Silk, he was reckoned a Monk; if he did not appear in gay Clothing, he was preſently termed a Greek and Impoſtor. And Salvian [t] reflects on the African People, and eſpecially thoſe of Carthage, for the ſame Treatment of them: For he ſays, They could ſcarce ever ſee a Man with ſhort Hair, and a pale Face, and habited in a Pallium, that is, a Monk, without beſtowing ſome reviling and reproachful Language on him. Theſe Words of Salvian I take to be an exact Deſcription of their ancient Habit and Tonſure.

SECT. VII. No ſolemn Vow or Profeſſion required of them.

As to any ſolemn Vow or Profeſſion required at their Admiſſion, we find no ſuch Thing; for it was not yet the Practice of thoſe Ages: But whatever was done in that Kind, was only a Private Tranſaction between God and themſelves. St Baſil [u] ſays plainly, That there was no expreſs Promiſe of Celibacy taken of any, but they ſeemed only to promiſe it tacitly by becoming Monks. He adviſes indeed, that a Profeſſion ſhould be required of them for the Future: But that implies, that as yet no ſuch Promiſe had been exacted before. There were ſome Monks that lived in a married State, as appears from what has been alledged from Athanaſius and St. Auſtin in the foregoing [*] Chapter: And it is certain a Promiſe of Celibacy cou'd not be exacted of them. And for others that lived in Communities, their way of Admiſſion was not upon any explicit Promiſe, but a Triennial Probation, during which Time they were inured to the Exerciſes of the Monaſtick Life in the greateſt Severity; and if after that Term was expired, they liked to continue the ſame Exerciſes, they were then admitted without any farther Ceremony or Solemnity into the Community, to cohabit as proper Members of it. This was the Method preſcribed by the Rule of Pachomius, the Father of the Monks of Tabenneſus, from which all others took their Model, as the Reader may find in Palladius [w] and Sozomen [x], where the Rule is at large recited.

SECT. VIII. What is meant by their Renunciation of the World.

THERE was as yet no ſolemn Vow of Poverty required neither; tho' it was cuſtomary for Men voluntarily to renounce the World by diſpoſing of their own Eſtates to charitable Uſes, before they entered into a Community, where they were to enjoy all Things in Common. Thus Hilarion divided all his Subſtance between his Brethren and the Poor, reſerving Nothing to himſelf, as St. Jerom (y) and Sozomen report of him. And Paulinus, a Rich Senator's Son, with his Wife Therasia, by mutual Conſent diſpoſed of both their Eſtates (which were very great) to the Poor, and then betook themſelves to a Monaſtick Life at Nola, where Paulinus, after he was made Biſhop of the Place, continu'd the ſame voluntary Poverty ſtill; inſomuch that St. Auſtin (z) ſays of him, that when the Goths were ravaging and plundering the Town, he made this Prayer to God, Domine, ne excrucier propter aurum & argentum; ubi enim ſint omnia mea, tu ſcis: Lord, let not the Barbarians torture me for my Silver or Gold, for thou knoweſt were all my Treaſure is. Such [n] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Sordidæ Veſtes candidæ mentis indicia ſunt. Vilis tunica contemptum ſæculi præbet. Id. Ep. 13. ad Paulin. Tunicam mutas cum animo, nec pleno marſupio glorioſas ſordes appetis, &c. Id. Ep. 15. ad Marcellam de Laud. Aſellæ. Tunica fuſciore induta ſe repente Domino conſecravit. [o] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtochium, c. 12. ſunt quæ Ciliciis veſtiuntur & Cucullis fabrefactis: Ut ad Infantiam redeant, imitantur noctuas & bubones. [p] Ibid. Veſtis ſit nec ſatis munda, nec ſordida, & nulla diverſitate notabilis; ne ad te obviam prætereuntium turba conſiſtat, aut digito demonſtreris. [q] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 52. in Bibl. Patr. G. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 985. [r] Caſſian. Collat. 8. c. 3. Quod quidam diſtrictiſſimi monachorum, habentes quidem Zelum Dei, ſed non ſecundum Scientiam, ſimpliciter intelligentes, fecerunt ſibi cruces ligneas, eaſque jugiter humeris circumferentes, non ædificationem, ſed riſum cunctis videntibus intulerunt. [*] Book 1. chap. 2. n. 4. [s] Hieron. Ep. 23. ad Marcellam. Nos quia Serica veſte non utimur, Monachi judicamur--Si Tunica non caſuerit, ſtatim illud de Trivio, Impoſtor & Græcus eſt. [t] Salvian. de Gubern. lib. 8. p. 295. Inter Africæ Civitates, & maxime intra Carthaginis muros, Palliatum & Pallidium, & reciſis comarum fluentium jubis uſque ad cutem tonſum videre, tam infelix ille populus quam infidelis ſine convicio atque execratione vix poterat. [u] Baſil. Ep. Canon. c. 19. Χ᾽ τὸ σιωπώμενον δοκῶσι παρᾳδεδέχθαι ἡ ἀγαμίαν, &c. [*] See chap. 2. Sect. 6. [w] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 38. [x] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. [y] Hieron. Vit. Hilar. c. 3. Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. [z] Aug. de Civ. Dei. lib. 1. c. 10.

Inſtances

Instances of voluntary Poverty are every where obvious in ancient History. But then one Thing they were very careful to avoid in those early Times, that is, that when they had once renounced their own Estates, they did not afterward seek to enrich themselves, or their Monasteries, by begging or accepting the Estates of Others. 'Twas a remarkable Answer to this Purpose, which Isaac Syrus Bishop of Nineve (a) is said to have given to his Monks, when they desired him to receive some Lands that were offered him for the Use of his Monastery: He replyed, Monachus qui in terra Possessiones quærit, Monachus non est, A Monk that seeks for Possessions on the Earth, is not a Monk. The Western Monks were not always precise to this Rule, as appears from the Complaints of St. Jerom (b) and Cassian (c), and some Imperial Laws [d] made to restrain their Avarice: But the Monks of Ægypt were generally just to their own Pretensions: Their Monasteries had no Lands or Revenues belonging to them, nor would they have any, nor suffer any Monk to enjoy more than was necessary for his daily Subsistance. For they thought it a Contradiction to their Profession, that Men who made a Shew of renouncing the World, should grow rich in Monasteries, who perhaps were poor before they came thither. And therefore if ever they received any Donation, it was not for their own Use; but the Use of the Poor. Nay they would not suffer any Monk to enjoy any Thing to call it his own; but in a Community they would have all Things in Common. And therefore St. Jerom [e] tells a remarkable Story of one of the Monks of Nitria in Egypt, how he was punished for hoarding up but an Hundred Shillings as his own Property, which he had saved out of his daily Labour. At his Death, when the Thing came to be discovered, a Council of all the Monks was called, to advise what should be done with the Money; and they were about Five Thousand who met at this Consultation: Some said it should be distributed among the Poor: Others, that it should be given to the Church; and others, that it should be remitted to his Parents. But Macarius, and Pambo, and Isidore, and the Rest of those called Fathers among them, decreed that it should be buried with him in his Grave, saying, Thy Money perish with thee. So little Regard had those ancient Monks for any Thing more than what was necessary for their daily Sustenance!

SECT. IX. Of the Difference between the Renouncing and the Communicative Life.

SOME indeed did not thus renounce all Property, but kept their Estates in their own Hands, and yet enjoyed no more of them, than if they had actually passed them over to others: For they distributed their whole yearly Revenue constantly to the Poor, and such charitable Uses as Mens daily Needs required. Of this Sort Palladius [f] and Sozomen [g] mention one Apollonius, who kept his Estate in his own Possession, but expended the annual Income in providing Physick and other Necessaries for the sick Monks, as there was Occasion. Palladius also [h] speaks of two Brothers, Paceſius and Esaias, Sons of a rich Merchant, who betaking themselves to a Monastick Life, disposed of their Estates in these different Ways; The one gave away his whole Estate at once to Churches and Prisons, and such Monasteries as needed Relief, and then betaking himself to a small Trade for his own Subsistance, he spent the rest of his Life in Labour and Prayer; but the other kept his Estate in his own Possession, and therewith first building a Monastery, and taking to himself a few Associates, he entertain'd all Strangers travelling that Way, took Care of the Sick, entertain'd the Aged, relieved the Poor, and on every Saturday and Lord's-Day spread three or four Tables for the Refreshment of such as needed. Palladius calls this rightly κοινωνικὸν βίον, the Communicative Life, and the other ἀποταξαμένε βίον, the Life of a Renouncer: And adds, That the Question being put by some Brethren to Pambo the famous Ægyptian, concerning these two Brothers, Whether of them took the better Course? He replied, They were both equally perfect and acceptable in the Sight of God; the one imitating the Hospitality of Abraham, and the other the Zeal of Elias.

SECT. X. All Monks anciently maintain'd by their own Labour.

HENCE it appears that the ancient Monks had no Regard to Estates and Possessions: For one Way or other they discharged themselves of the Burden of them. And then, since Monasteries had no standing Revenues, all Monks whatever were obliged to exercise themselves in bodily Labour, partly to maintain themselves without being burdensome to others, and partly to keep their Souls well guarded, and as it were out of the Way of Satan's strongest Temptations. For Cassian notes it [i] as a very wise Saying of the old Egyptian Fathers, That a Labouring Monk was but tempted with one Devil, but an idle One was exposed to the Devastation of a Legion. And therefore St. Jerom writing to his Friend Rusti-

[a] Vid. Cave Hist. Liter. Vol. 2. p. 185. [b] Hieron. Ep 4. ad Rustic. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. [c] Cassian. Instit. lib. 4. c. 15. [d] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. de Episc. Leg. 20. [e] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Eustoch. c. 14. Quod ante non plures annos Nitriæ gestum sit, referamus. Quidam ex fratribus parcior magis quam avarior, nesciens triginta argenteis Dominum venditum, Centum solidos, quos lina texendo acquisierat, moriens dereliquit. Initum est inter Monachos Consilium [nam in eodem loco circiter quinque millia divisis Cellulis habitabant] quid hinc facto opus esset. Alii pauperibus distribuendos esse dicebant; alii dandos Ecclesiæ; nonnulli Parentibus remittendos. Macarius vero & Pambo & Isidorus, & cæteri quos Patres vocant, sancto in eis loquente Spiritu, decreverunt infodiendos esse cum eodem, dicentes, Pecunia tua tecum sit in Perditionem. [f] Pallad. Hist. Lausiac. c. 14. [g] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 29. [h] Pallad. ibid. c. 15. [i] Cassian. Instit. lib. 10. c. 23. Hæc est apud Ægyptum antiquis Patribus sancta sententia, Operantem Monachum uno Dæmone pulsari; otiosum vero innumeris spiritibus devastari.

cus

cus the Monk, bids him be ſure to exerciſe himſelf in ſome [k] honeſt Labour, that the Devil might always find him employed. This, he tells him, was the Cuſtom of the Egyptian Monaſteries, to admit none without working with their own Hands, as well to ſupply their Bodily Wants, as to preſerve their Souls from Danger. They had then no idle Mendicants among them, as Duarenus himſelf [l] rightly obſerves. They looked upon a Monk that did not work, as no better than a covetous Defrauder. For ſo Socrates [m] tells us the Egyptian Fathers were uſed to expreſs themſelves concerning ſuch as eat other Mens Bread for Nought. We have already heard out of Bede [n] how the Monks of Bangor, two thouſand in Number, maintained themſelves with their own Labour. And Biſhop Uſher has collected [o] a great many other Inſtances of the ſame Nature in relation to the firſt Monaſteries of Ireland and Britain. It would be endleſs to produce all the Paſſages of ancient Writers that relate to this Matter: Therefore I ſhall content my ſelf to refer the Reader to the Places themſelves cited [p] in the Margent, and only obſerve one Thing farther, That anciently Monks by the Labour of their Hands did not only provide themſelves a ſufficient Maintenance, but had Superfluities alſo to relieve the Neceſſities of others. Sozomen [q] ſays, Serapion preſided over a Monaſtery of ten thouſand Monks, near Arſinoe in Egypt, who all thus laboured with their own Hands, going to reap in the Fields in the Time of Harveſt, ſo that they had enough and to ſpare for the Uſe of the Poor. Which is confirmed by St. Auſtin [r] who ſpeaking of the Labour of the Monks of his own Time, aſſures us, they many Times ſent away whole Ships laden with Neceſſaries, to ſupply the Needs of ſuch Countries as were exceeding barren and poor. He means the Deſerts of Libya, of which Caſſian ſpeaks, telling us, That the Fathers in Egypt would never ſuffer their Monks to receive any Thing by way of Maintenance [ſ] from others, but they had ſufficient out of their Labour not only to entertain Strangers and Travellers that came to viſit them, but alſo to ſend Abundance of Proviſions into the famiſh'd Part of Libya, and to ſupply the Wants of Men in Priſon in other Places, reckoning that hereby they offered a reaſonable and true Sacrifice to God of the Fruit of their own Hands by ſuch an Oblation. It ſeems they did not then think that Working was inconſiſtent with the other Duties of a Monk, but one neceſſary Part of his Office and Station. And St. Auſtin wrote a whole Book [t] to prove this to be their Duty, wherein he takes Occaſion to anſwer all the plauſible Objections that have ever been made to the contrary.

SECT. XI. Proper Officers appointed in Monaſteries for this Purpoſe, viz. Decani, Centenarii, Patres, &c.

Now the better to promote this and all their other Duties, the Monaſteries were commonly divided into ſeveral Parts, and proper Officers appointed over them. Every Ten Monks were ſubject to One, who was called the Decanus or Dean, from his preſiding over Ten; and every Hundred had another Officer called Centenarius, from preſiding over an Hundred. Above theſe were the Patres, or Fathers of the Monaſteries, as St. Jerom and St. Auſtin commonly term them; which in other Writers are called Abbates, Abbats, from the Greek Ἀββᾶς, a Father; and Hegumeni, Preſidents; and Archimandrites, from Mandra, a Sheepfold; they being as it were the Keepers or Rulers of theſe ſacred Folds in the Church. The Buſineſs of the Deans was to exact every Man's daily Task, and bring it to the Oeconomus, or Steward of the Houſe, who himſelf gave a monthly Account to the Father of them all, as St. Jerom [u] and St. Auſtin [w] inform us.

SECT. XII. The Power of the Fathers or Abbats very great in Point of Diſcipline over the Reſt.

THE Fathers were commonly of the Order of Presbyters, both for the Performance of Divine Offices, and the Exerciſe of Diſcipline among them. And their Power was very conſiderable: For though it was not abſolute and unlimited, yet it was ſeldom or never diſputed by their Inferiors: It being, as St. Jerom obſerves [x], a prime Part of their Confederation to obey their Superiors, and do whatever they commanded them. And in Caſe of wilful Tranſgreſſion they had Power to inflict both Spiritual and Corporal Puniſhments on them. Their Spiritual Puniſhments were the Cenſures of the Church, Suſpenſions from the [k] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Fac & aliquid operis, ut te ſemper Diabolus inveniat occupatum—Ægyptiorum Monaſteria hunc morem tenent, ut nullum abſque operis labore ſuſcipiant, non tam propter victus neceſſaria, quam propter animæ ſalutem. [l] Duaren. de Miniſter. & Benefic. lib. 1. c. 20. Nec ita otio erant dediti, more Pſeudomonachorum noſtri temporis. [m] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. μοναχὸς, ἐὰν μὴ ἐργάζοιτο, ἐπίσης τῷ πλεονέκτῃ κείσεται. [n] Bed. lib. 2. c 2. [o] Uſher. Relig. of the ancient Iriſh, c. 6. [p] Epiphan. Hær. 80. n. 6. Chryſoſt. de Compunct. Cordis. lib. 1. c. 6. Hieron. Ep. 77. ad Marcum Celedenſem. Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 10. c. 22. Id. Collat. 15. c. 4. Juſtin. Novel. 133. c. 6. Id. Cod. lib. 11. Tit. 25. de Mendicantibus Validis. Pallad. Hiſtor. Lauſiac. cap. 7, 10, 20, 28, 30, 39, 76, 89, 96. 112. Moſchus Prat. Spir. cap. 22, 114, 160, 161, 183, 194. [q] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 28. [r] Aug de Morib. Eccleſ. c. 31. Uſque adeo ut oneratas etiam naves in ea loca mittant, quæ inopes incolunt, &c. [ſ] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 10. c. 22. Non ſolum à nullo quicquam ad uſum victus ſui accipere patiuntur, ſed etiam de Laboribus ſuis non tantum ſupervenientes & peregrinos reficiunt, verum etiam per loca Libyæ, quæ Sterilitate ac fame laborant, nec non etiam per Civitates his qui Squalore carceum contabeſcunt, immanem conferentes dirigunt alimoniæ victuſque ſuſtantiam, de fructu manuum ſuarum rationabile ac verum Sacrificium Domino tali Oblatione ſe offerre credente. [t] Aug. de Opere Monachor. c. 17, &c. [u] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Opus dici ſtatum eſt, quod Decano redditum, fertur ad Oeconomum, qui & ipſe per ſingulos menſes Patri omnium cum magno tremore reddit rationem. [w] Aug. de Morib. Eccleſ. Cathol. c. 31. [x] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Prima apud eos Confœderatio eſt, obedire Majoribus, & quicquid juſſerint facere.

Euchariſt,

Eucharist, and Excommunication. For these Powers were lodg'd in their Hands, as appears from several Passages in Cassian, who often speaks [y] of the Abbots casting the Monks out of the Church, and forbidding the Rest to pray with them, till they had done a very submissive Penance prostrate upon the Ground, and had been reconciled and absolved by the Abbat publickly before all the Brethren. He particularly notes of Paphnutius Abbat of Scethis [z], that he struck a Monk's Name out of the Dyptichs of the Church, and could scarce be prevailed with to let him be mentioned in the Oblation for those that are at Rest in the Lord, because he had murdered himself at the Instigation of Satan, who appeared to him in the Form of an Angel of Light, persuading him to throw himself into a deep Well, with Confidence that no Harm cou'd befal him for the great Merit of his Labours and Virtues. Socrates [a] speaks of the like Power in Arsenius, who used it, he says, with this Discretion, that he never excommunicated the Junior Monks, but only the Seniors, because the Juniors were like to become more refractory by it, and contemn his Discipline, but the Seniors were quickly amended by it. The Reader may find some other Instances in Palladius [b] to the same Purpose. As to their Corporal Punishments, Cassian [c] tells us they were these Two, Whipping and Expulsion; and he particularly enumerates the Crimes for which they were inflicted. Palladius also mentions the Flagellum Monachorum: For he says [d] in the Church of Mount Nitria, there were three Whips hanged upon three Palm-Trees, one for the offending Monks, another for the correcting of Thieves, and a third for the Punishment of Strangers, whom they entertained in an Hospital adjoining. But as yet we read Nothing of voluntary Whipping of themselves by way of Exercise: That is a latter Invention of the Modern Monks, whom Spondanus [e] and Prateolus [f] themselves cannot forbear ranking among Hereticks, and a late French Writer [g] has more fully exposed them in a Discourse on Purpose, entitled, Historia Flagellantium, to which I refer the curious Reader.

SECT. XIII. Allowed also some peculiar Privileges in the Church

THE Abbats or Fathers were also of great Repute in the Church. For many Times they were called to Councils and allowed to sit and vote there in the Quality of Presbyters. As Benedict in the Council of Rome under Boniface II. An. 531. Which I relate upon the Authority of Dr. Cave [h] who has it from Antonius Scipio in his Elogium Abbatum Cassinensium. The like Privilege we find allowed in the Council of Constantinople under Flavian, An. 448, where twenty three Archimandrites subscribe with thirty Bishops to the Condemnation of Eutyches, as appears from the Fragments of that Council related in the Council of Chalcedon [i]. But it is justly noted by Learned Men [k] as a new Thing, to find Abbesses, as well as Abbats, subscribing in the Council of Becanfield in Kent, An. 694, and that before both Presbyters and Temporal Lords, as the Author of the Saxon Chronicle [l] reports it. For this is the first Time we meet with any such Thing in the Records of the Ancient Church.

SECT. XIV. Yet always subordinate to the Power of Bishops.

BUT though such Power and Privileges were granted to Abbats, yet neither they nor their Monasteries were as yet exempt from the Jurisdiction of Bishops. For by the ancient Laws both Ecclesiastical and Civil, no Monastery was to be erected in any Place without the Leave of the Bishop of the Diocese. This was one of those Things which the Emperor Marcian proposed to the Council of Chalcedon, and at his Request it was there enacted into a Canon, That no one should build [m] either Monastery or Oratory without the Consent of the Bishop of the City or Country where it was to be erected. And by Justinian's Law [n] the Bishop was to make a Sort of Consecration of the Ground, before they went to Building. It is further provided in the fore-mentioned Canon, that all Monks shall be subject to the Bishop of the Diocese, and give Attendance to their own proper Duties of Fasting and Prayer, not intermeddling themselves either in Ecclesiastical or Secular Affairs, except upon great and urgent Necessity, and that by the Permission of the Bishop of the City or Diocese to which they belonged. But I have already had Occasion to speak of this Matter more fully in another [o] Place: I shall therefore here only observe two or three Mistakes committed by some Modern Authors in their Descants upon the Words of Bede, which are commonly alledged to prove the contrary. In one Place Bede [p] speaking of the Isle of Huy, and the Monastery founded there by Columba, says, The Island was always governed by a Presbyter Abbat, under whose Power the whole Province, and the Bishops [y] Cassian. Instit. lib. 2. c. 16. Si quis pro admisso quolibet delicto fuerit ab Oratione suspensus, nullus cum eo prorsus orandi habet licentiam, antequam submissa in terram Pœnitentia, Reconciliatio ejus & admissi venia coram fratribus cunctis publice fuerit ab Abbate concessa. Id. lib. 4. c. 16. Tamdiu prostratus in terram veniam postulabit, donec Orationum consummetur Solennitas impetraturus eam, cum jussus fuerit Abbatis judicio de solo surgere. Vid. ibid. c. 20. It. Collat. 18. c. 15. [z] Cassian. Collat. 2. c. 15. Vix à Presbytero Abbate Pafnutio potuit obtineri, ut non inter Byothanatos reputatus etiam Memoria & Oblatione Pausantium judicaretur indignus. [a] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. [b] Pallad. Hist. Lausiac. c. 40. [c] Cassian. Collat. 2. c. 16. Vel. Plagis emendantur, vel Expulsione purgantur. [d] Pallad. Hist. Laus. c. 6. [e] Spondant. an. 1329. n. 6. [f] Prateol. Elench. Hæret. lib. 6. c. 8. [g] Historia Flagellantium, Paris. 1700. 8vo. [h] Cave Hist. Liter. Vol. 1. p. 402. [i] Conc. Chalced. Act. 1. Tom. 4. p. 230. [k] Cave. Hist. Liter. Vol. 2. p. 240. [l] Chron. Saxon. an. 694. [m] Conc. Chalced. can. 4. ἔδοξεν μηδένα μὴ δαμοῦ οἰκοδομεῖν, μηδὲ συνιστᾶν μοναστήριον ἢ εὐκτήριον οἶκον κατὰ γνώμην τοῦ τῆς πόλεως ἐπισκόπου. [n] Justin. Novel. 5. c. 1. Novel. 131. c. 7. [o] Book 2. chap. 4. Sect. 2. [p] Bed. Hist. lib. 3 c. 4. Habere autem solet ipsa Insula Rectorem semper Abbatem Presbyterum, cujus juri & omnis Provincia & ipsi etiam Episcopi ordine inusitato debeant esse subjecti, juxta exemplum primi Doctoris illius, qui non Episcopus, sed Presbyter extitit & Monachus.

alſo, were ſubjected after an unuſual Manner, purſuant to the Example of the firſt Founder, who was not a Biſhop, but only a Presbyter and a Monk. Carolus à ſancto Paulo [q] unluckily miſtakes this Iſland for Hibernia, and ſo makes all the Biſhops of Ireland ſubject to one Abbat: Others miſtake the Province for all Scotland, and ſo make the ſame falſe Deduction in Reference to that: Whereas in Truth Bede is ſpeaking only of one ſmall Part of Scotland, the Country of the Northern Picts, who were converted by Columba, in the Time of King Bridius, who gave him the Iſle of Huy to build a Monaſtery in, whence that Province of the Northern Picts became ſubject to the Abbat of that Monaſtery: But that this Subjection was in Spirituals Bede ſays not, but it ſeems to have been an Acknowledgment of ſome civil Juriſdiction over the Biſhops, which may very well conſiſt with their Superiority in Spirituals, as the learned Biſhop of Worceſter [r] ſhews at large in his Diſcourſe of the Culdees among his Antiquities of the Britiſh Church. Another Paſſage in Bede, which has been groſsly miſtaken, is where he ſpeaks of the Council of Herudford, An. 673. In One of the Canons of this Council, according to ſome corrupt printed Copies of Bede, there is this Decree, That the Biſhops, [ſ] who are Monks, ſhall not wander from one Monaſtery to another without Leave of their Abbat, but continue in that Obedience, which they promiſed at the Time of their Converſion. But this is Nothing but a meer Miſtake of the firſt Editors of Bede, who not minding the Abbreviations of the Manuſcript, read Epiſcopi Monachi, inſtead of Ipſi Monachi, as ſome later Editions rightly have it. So that there is Nothing ſaid in this Place either for the Exemption of Monaſteries, or in Derogation of the Epiſcopal Power, as ſome ſeem wilfully to have miſtaken. Yet I deny not but that before this Time there might be ſome Monaſteries exempt. For Habertus [t] is of Opinion, that the third Council of Arles, An. 455, granted an Exemption to Fauſtus Abbat of the Monaſtery of Lerins, which he thinks was the firſt that was ever granted. But from that Time the Biſhops of Rome took Occaſion to exempt Monaſteries in the Weſt, as other Patriarchs did in the Eaſt, whence ſuch Monaſteries by the later Greeks are called Patriarchal Monaſteries, as being exempt from Epiſcopal Viſitations, and only ſubject to Patriarchal Juriſdiction.

SECT. XV. The Spiritual Exercises of Monks: First, Perpetual Repentance.

BUT I return to the ancient Monks; and having given an Account of their bodily Exercices, I proceed to ſpeak of thoſe that were Spiritual. For the Improvement of the Spiritual Life was the thing originally aimed at by Men's retiring from the World. Here they thought they ſhould have more Leiſure and better Opportunities for the great Buſineſs of Repentance. Upon which Account the Life of a Monk is by St. Jerom [u] and others, ſo often ſtiled the Life of a Mourner. And in Alluſion to this, the Iſle of Canobus near Alexandria, formerly a Place of great Lewdneſs, was upon the Tranſlation and Settlement of the Monks of Tabenneſus there, called Inſula Metanœæ, the Iſle of Repentance; as may be collected from St. Jerom, who ſpeaks of its changing its Name upon the Building of a Monaſtery there [w]: And ſo both Valeſius and others underſtand it [x].

SECT. XVI. Secondly, extraordinary Faſting.

TO their extraordinary Repentance they uſually join'd extraordinary Faſting. For the Egyptian Monks kept every Day a Faſt till Nine a-Clock, that is, till Three in the Afternoon, except on Saturdays and the Lord's-Day, and the fifty Days of Pentecoſt, or other Days when any Brother came to viſit them. For then they had their Relaxations, as we learn from Caſſian and St. Jerom. The fifty Days of Pentecoſt they kept always Feſtival in Compliance with the Publick Rules and Practice of the Catholick Church, whoſe Cuſtom was [y], as Tertullian ſays, to keep all the Time between Eaſter and Whitſuntide Feſtival, in Memory of our Saviour's Reſurrection. Therefore St. Jerom [z] ſpeaking of their daily Faſts, ſays, They faſted every Day alike throughout the Year, except in Lent, when their Faſts were a little more ſtrict, that is, not only till nine a-Clock, but till Evening; and in Pentecoſt, when they turned their Suppers into Dinners, in Compliance with the Cuſtom of the Church. Caſſian [a] often ſpeaks of their daily Faſts till Nine, but then he excepts likewiſe the Time of Pentecoſt [b], for the ſame Reaſon aſſigned by St. Jerom; and Saturdays and Sundays alſo [c], becauſe both theſe Days were always Feſtivals in the Eaſtern Church, being Days of ſolemn Aſſembly, on which they received the Euchariſt at Morning Service. Some indeed exerciſed themſelves with great Auſterities, faſting two, three, four or five Days together; but theſe were not generally approved. St. Jerom [d] and Caſſian [e] both expreſs themſelves againſt ſuch immoderate Faſts; and Caſſian [f] particularly notes it as a wiſe Saying of Macarius the famous Egyptian, That a Monk ſhould ſo faſt and keep under his Body, as if he were to [q] Carol. à St. Paulo Geogr. Sacr. lib. 6. p. 170. [r] Ep. Lloyd's Hiſtorical Account of Church Government, chap. 7. p. 180. [ſ] Bed. Hiſt. lib. 4. c. 5. Ut Epiſcopi Monachi non migrent de loco in locum, hoc eſt, de Monaſterio in Monaſterium, niſi per dimiſſionem proprii Abbatis, ſed in ea permaneant obedientia, quam tempore ſuæ converſionis promiſerunt. [t] Habert. Archierat. p. 595. [u] Hieron. Ep. 53. ad Ripar. Monachus non docentis, ſed plangentis habet officium. [w] Hieron. Prolog. in Regul. Pachomii. In Monaſterio Metanœæ, quod de Canobo in Pœnitentiam felici nominis converſione mutatum eſt, &c. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 15. [x] Valeſ. Not. in Sozomen. lib. 3. c. 14. [y] Tertul. de Coron. Mil. c. 3. [z] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Jejunium totius anni æquale eſt, excepta Quadrageſima, in qua ſola conceditur ſtrictius vivere. A Pentecoſte cœnæ mutantur in prandia, quo & Traditioni Eccleſiaſticæ ſatisfiat, & ventrem cibo non onerent duplicato. [a] Caſſian Collat. 2. c. 25, 26. Collat. 19. c. 16. Collat. 21. c. 23. [b] Caſſian. Collat. 21. c. 11 & 20. [c] Caſſian. Collat. 3. c. 1. [d] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſticum. Ep. 7. ad Lætam. [e] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 5. c. 9. [f] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 5. c. 41. Ita, inquit debere Monachum jejuniis operam dare, ut centum annis in corpore duraturum, &c.

live

live an hundred Years; but ſo kill and mortify the Affections of his Soul, as if he were to die the next Moment. By which it appears, that they did not think exceſſive Abſtinence of any Uſe, but rather a Diſſervice to Religion. And therefore St. Auſtin obſerves, that the ancient Rules [g] impoſed no abſolute Neceſſity in this Matter upon them, but left it to every Man's Power, and every Man's Will, to faſt at Diſcretion; no one condemning others, that could not imitate his own Auſterities, but always remembring that the Scripture had above all Things recommended Charity to Men. The Rule of Pachomius was ſaid to be given him by an Angel, and there one of the Angel's Directions to him was, That he ſhould permit every Man to eat and drink, and labour according [h] to his Strength, and neither forbid them to faſt nor to eat. Accordingly Palladius [i] tells us, there were among his Monks in Tabenneſus ſome that eat at Seven a-Clock, others at Nine, others at Ten, others not till Even; ſome after two Days, others after three, four, or five Days; but all was Matter of Choice, not Compulſion.

SECT. XVII. Thirdly, Extraordinary Devotions.

THEIR Faſtings were accompanied with extraordinary and frequent Returns of Devotion. The Monks of Paleſtine had ſix or ſeven Canonical Hours of Prayer, ſo thoſe in Meſopotamia and other Parts of the Eaſt. Theſe were Morning-Prayer at the firſt Hour of the Day, then the third, ſixth, and ninth Hours, and after that the eleventh Hour, which Caſſian [k] calls the Lucernaris Hora, or Evening-Prayer. Beſides which they had their conſtant Vigils, or Nocturnal Meetings, of which Caſſian gives a particular Account in one whole Book [l] of his Inſtitutions. But he ſays the Monks of Egypt were not tied to all theſe Canonical Hours, but only met twice a Day for publick Devotion, that is, in their Night Aſſemblies, which was their Morning-Prayer: and at Nine a-clock, which was their Evening-Prayer; but then the whole Day was ſpent in Devotion notwithſtanding: For in their Private Cells [m] whilſt they were at Work, they were always repeating the Pſalms and other Parts of the Holy Scriptures, and intermixing Prayers and Supplications continually with their Labour. Which Caſſian prefers before the Obſervation of ſo many Canonical Hours, as being a more free and voluntary Oblation. Some obſerved a Courſe of conſtant Devotion without Intermiſſion, as has been noted before [*] concerning the Monks of Conſtantinople, and thoſe of Liſieux [†] founded by Columbanus, who were uſed to divide themſelves into ſeveral Claſſes or Quires to ſucceed and relieve one another in their continued Stations. And Caſſian tells us that the firſt Monks [n] of Egypt were uſed to obſerve ſuch a perpetual Watch, to guard themſelves againſt the Aſſaults and Incurſions of Midnight Devils: For they durſt not all betake themſelves to Sleep at once, but while ſome ſlept, others kept Watch by Turns, and exerciſed themſelves in ſinging Pſalms, Reading, and Prayer. Whence we may infer, that tho' all Monks then did not obſerve preciſely the Canonical Hours, yet they were no leſs conſtant to their Devotions than thoſe that did; and their intermixing Prayers with their Labour, or Worſhipping by Turns, was equivalent to ſo many Canonical Hours, or rather did exceed it. St. Jerom ſeems alſo to ſay [o] that the Egyptian Monks had a Sermon made by the Abbot every Day after Evening-Prayer: For thus he deſcribes their Devotions: At Nine a-clock they meet together, then the Pſalms are ſung, and the Scriptures are read; and Prayers being ended, they all ſit down, and the Father begins to diſcourſe to them, whom they hear with the profoundeſt Silence and Veneration. His Words make a deep Impreſſion on them, their Eyes overflow with Tears, and the Speaker's Commendation is the Weeping of his Hearers. Yet no one's Grief expreſſes it ſelf in any undecent Strain; but when he comes to diſcourſe of the Kingdom of Chriſt, and future Happineſs, and the Glory of the World to come, then one may obſerve how each of them with a moderate Sigh, and Eyes lift up to Heaven, ſays within himſelf, O that I had Wings like a Dove, for then would I flee away and be at Reſt! This was their continual Exerciſe of Publick Devotion every Day. Their private Vacancies and Intervals of Labour were alſo ſpent in Reading and Prayer; for they daily learned ſome Portion of Scripture, and more eſpecially made it their Meditation on the Lord's-Day, as St. Jerom [p] obſerves of them in the afore-mentioned Place: Inſomuch that many of them became ſo expert and well verſed in the Holy Scripture, that they could re[g] Aug. de Morib. Eccleſ. Cathol. c. 33. Inter hæc nemo urgetur in aſpera, quæ ferre non poteſt; nulli quod recuſat imponitur; nec ideo condemnatur à cæteris, quod in eis ſe imitandis fatetur invalidum, &c. [h] Pachom. Reg. apud Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 38. [i] Pallad. ibid. c. 39. [k] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 3. c. 3. In his horis etiam Evangelicus ille Paterfamilias operarios conduxit in Vineam ſuam. Ita enim & ille primo mane conduxiſſe deſcribitur, quod tempus deſignat Matutinam noſtram ſolennitatem: deinde tertia, inde ſexta, poſt hæc nona, ad extremum undecima, in qua lucernaris hora ſignatur. [l] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 2. [m] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 3. c. 2. Apud illos hæc Officia, quæ Domino ſolvere per diſtinctiones horarum & temporis intervalla cum admonitione Compulſoris adigimur, per totum diei ſpatium jugiter cum operis adjectione ſpontanea celebrantur.— Quamobrem exceptis Veſpertinis horis ac Nocturnis Congregationibus, nulla apud eos per diem Publica Solennitas abſq; die Sabbati vel Dominica celebratur, in quibus hora tertia Sacræ Communionis obtentu conveniunt. [*] Chap. 2. Sect. 10. [†] Chap. 2. Sect. 13. [n] Caſſian. Collat. 7. c. 23. Ita Dæmonum atrocitas graſſabatur, & frequentes ac viſibiles ſentiebantur aggreſſus, ut non auderent omnes pariter noctibus obdormire, ſed viciſſim aliis deguſtantibus ſomnum, alii vigilias celebrantes, Pſalmis & Orationibus ſeu Lectionibus inhærebant. [o] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Manent ſeparati, ſejunctis Cellulis, uſq; ad horam nonam. Poſt horam nonam in commune concurritur, Pſalmi reſonant, Scripturæ recitantur ex more. Et completis Orationibus, cunctiſque reſidentibus, medius, quem Patrem vocant, incipit diſputare, &c. [p] Ibid. Dominicis diebus Orationi tantum & Lectionibus vacant: Quod quidem & omni tempore completis opuſculis faciunt. Quotidie aliquid de Scripturis diſcitur.

peat it by Heart: Which is particularly noted of Hilarion by Sozomen and St. Jerom [q], and of Ammonius, Marcus Junior, Eros, Serapion, Solomon, and ſome others by Palladius [r]. And by this Means they were qualified to entertain their Souls with Spiritual Exerciſes, ſinging of David's Pſalms, and repeating other Parts of Scripture, even at their bodily Labours. Which Practice is often mentioned with great Commendation by Palladius [ſ], Caſſian [t] and St. Jerom, who takes Occaſion upon this Account to extol the quiet Retirement of Chriſt's little Village of Bethlehem above the noiſy Pomp and ambitious Greatneſs of Rome, where ſo much Time was ſpent in ſeeing and being ſeen, in receiving Viſits and paying them, in Praiſes and Detractions, Things diſagreeable to the Life of a Monk: Whereas at Bethlehem [u] there was Nothing to be heard but Pſalms: One could not go into the Field, but he ſhould hear the Plowman ſinging his Hallelujahs, the ſweating Mower ſolacing himſelf with Hymns, and the Vinedreſſer tuning David's Pſalms. Thus the ancient Monks joined their Bodily and Spiritual Exerciſe together, and made their common Labour become Acts of Devotion to God. Their Times of Eating and Refreſhment were managed after the ſame manner. In ſome Places they had the Scriptures read at Table; which, Caſſian ſays, was firſt brought up [w] in the Monaſteries of Cappadocia, to prevent idle Diſcourſe and Contentions: But in Egypt they had no Need of that Remedy, for they were taught to eat their Meat in Silence. But when Supper was ended, St. Jerom [x] ſays, They ſung an Hymn and ſo returned to their Cells. St. Chryſoſtom [y] alſo takes Notice of this, and recommends it to Secular Men, as proper for their Imitation; reciting the Hymn which they uſed, which is in theſe Words: Bleſſed God, that haſt fed me from my Youth, that giveſt Food unto all Fleſh, fill our Hearts with Joy and Gladneſs, that we having always what is ſufficient for us, may abound unto every good Work, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, to whom with Thee and the Holy Ghoſt be Glory, Honour and Power for ever. Amen. Glory be to Thee, O Lord; Glory be to Thee, O Holy; Glory be to Thee, O King, who haſt given us Food for Refreſhment: Fill our Hearts with thy Holy Spirit, that we way be found acceptable in thy Sight, and not be aſhamed, when thou rendereſt to every Man according to his Works. Thus their ordinary Refreſhment, that is, their Suppers, (for Dinners, he ſays, they had none) were ſanctified with the Word of God and Prayer. And to expreſs their Humility, and avoid all Contention about Precedency and Greatneſs, they ſerved one another mutually at Table, all of them taking their Weekly Turns: Whence in Caſſian [z] and St. Jerom [a] they are called Hebdomadarii, Weeks-Men, from their Weekly Service. On the Lord's-Day they were more intent upon their Devotions, and ſpent it wholly upon Reading and Prayer. For no other Employment, St. Jerom [b] ſays, was ever allowed among them on that Day. Then every one received the Communion, unleſs he was under ſome Cenſure and Suſpenſion from it. And not only on Sundays, but on Saturdays alſo, it was cuſtomary for the Egyptian Monks and others of the Eaſt to communicate. For the firſt and laſt Day of the Week were ſo appointed by Pachomius the Father of the Egyptian Monks, to be Communion-Days among them, as appears from his Rule [c] in Sozomen and Palladius. And Caſſian frequently [d] ſpeaks of it as their conſtant Practice. Some were more ſtrict, and let no Day paſs without receiving the Euchariſt: Palladius [e] ſays the Egyptian Monks under Apollo obſerved this Rule; for Apollo was uſed to inſtill this Notion into his Diſciples, That a Monk, if he had Opportunity, ought to communicate every Day; and accordingly he with his Fraternity communicated every Day at nine, or three a-Clock in the Afternoon, which was the Time of their ſolemn Aſſembly, before they went to their ordinary Refreſhment. Palladius [f] mentions one Inſtance more of their Devotion, which was only occaſional, viz. their Pſalmody at the Reception of any Brethren: For that it ſeems was the firſt Entertainment they gave them, to conduct them with ſinging of Pſalms to their Habitation. Which has no Relation to the Proceſſions of Modern Ages, but ſeems to be done in Imitation of our Saviour's Entrance and Reception into Jeruſalem.

SECT. XVIII. Of Laws excluding Monks from Offices both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil.

THESE were the Spiritual Exerciſes of the Ancient Monks, whoſe Life was a Life of Repentance, Faſting and Devotion, which joined with continual Bodily Labour, kept them always virtuouſly and honeſtly employed: And their Laws did not allow them either to wander about as Mendicants, or to intereſt themſelves in Civil or Eccleſiaſtical Offices, or any Publick Affairs relating to Church or State. There are three Canons in the Council of Chalcedon to this Purpoſe. One indifferently [g] forbids both Clergy-men and Monks to take to Farm any Eſtate or Office, or involve themſelves in Secular Affairs, except they be unavoidably required by the Law to take upon them the Guardianſhip of Minors. Another [h] obliges Monks particularly to live in their Retirement, and to give themſelves only to Faſting and Prayer, and not to leave their Monaſteries to ingage themſelves either in Eccleſiaſtical or Secular Affairs, except the Biſhop of the City upon ſome urgent Occaſion permit them ſo to do. And a third Canon [i] forbids both Monks and Clergy to take upon them any Office, Civil or Military; anathematizing ſuch as are guilty, and do not return to their firſt Choice. So that Monks were wholly excluded then from Secular Offices: And though ſome were called to Eccleſiaſtical Employments, yet then they were obliged to quit their Monaſtery, and betake themſelves wholly to a Clerical Life, only retaining ſo much of the former, as would conſiſt with the indiſpenſable Duties of the ſacred Function. Of theſe Caſes I have particularly ſpoken [*] in the foregoing Chapter. But of Monks continuing in their Cloyſters, and taking upon them at the ſame Time the Offices of the Church, which did not concern their own Monaſtery, we have ſcarce any Inſtance in ancient Hiſtory. Pope Pelagius, as he is cited by Gratian [k], would not permit a Monk to be a Defenſor, though that was but a low Office in the Church; becauſe it was contrary to the State of a Monaſtick Life, which was to be ſpent in Retirement, Prayer, and Bodily Labour: whereas the Office of a Defenſor was wholly taken up in Hearing of Cauſes, and other Acts of a Publick and Litigious Nature, which were Things inconſiſtent with one another. 'Till a Monk therefore had firſt bid adieu to his Monaſtery, he was not to be promoted to any ſuch Office in the Church.

[q] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. Hieron. Vit. Hilarion. c. 7. [r] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 12, 21, 29, 83, 96. [ſ] Pallad. ibid. c. 39. [t] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 11. c. 15. [u] Hieron. Ep. 18. ad Marcel. In Chriſti villa tuta Ruſticitas eſt. Extra Pſalmos ſilentium eſt. Quocunque te verteris, Arator Stivam retinens Alleluia decantat, ſudans Meſſor Pſalmis ſe advocat, &c. [w] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 4. c. 17. [x] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Nullus in cibo Strepitus, nemo comedens loquitur.—— Dehinc conſurgunt pariter, & Hymno dicto, ad Præſepia redeunt. [y] Chryſoſt. Hom. 56. in Matth. [z] Caſſian. Inſtit. lib. 4. c. 20. [a] Hieron. Prolog. ad Reg. Pachom. It. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. [b] Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Dominicis diebus Orationi tantum & Lectionibus vacant. [c] Sozom. lib. 3. c. 14. Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 38. [d] Caſſian. Collat. 18. c. 15. Collat. 23. c. 21. [e] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 52. p. 985. [f] Ibid. p. 984. [g] Conc. Chalced. can. 3.

ther

SECT. XIX.
No Monks anciently encroached on the Duties or Rights of the Secular Clergy.

MUCH leſs were they then permitted to encroach upon the Duties, or Rights and Privileges of the Secular Clergy. For we find no Complaints of this Nature in Ancient Hiſtory, as too frequently in after Ages. For the Generality of Monks being only Laymen, and refuſing any other Subſiſtance or Revenues but what aroſe out of their own Labour [as I have fully proved before] they could have no Temptation then to intermeddle either with the Buſineſs and Duties, or the Maintenance and Revenues of the Clergy. And for ſuch of them as were ordained Presbyters or Deacons, they were either only to ſerve their own Monaſtery, or elſe ſuch were taken out of Monaſteries by the Biſhops, and thenceforth reckoned among the Secular Clergy of the Church. Valeſius indeed is willing to have it thought otherwiſe: For he ſays [l] in the latter End of the fourth Century, it was very uſual for Monks to perform the Offices of the Clergy, and he alledges for Proof the Example of Euſebius Vercellenſis and the Church of St. Auſtin, which I have conſidered before [*] and ſhewed that they prove no more, but that ſome Biſhops and their Clergy took up a Way of Living in Common, in Imitation of the Monaſtick Life, which is nothing to Monks in Cloyſters intruding themſelves into Parochial Cures. The only Inſtance that looks any thing this Way, is what Sozomen [m] relates of the Church built by Ruffinus, the great Stateſman under Arcadius, at a Place called Quercus in the Suburbs of Chalcedon, where after he had built his Church, he ſays, he placed ſome Monks near it, whence the Clergy of the Church were ſupplyed. But this may mean no more, but that when there wanted Clergy in that Church, they were to be choſen out of that neighbouring Monaſtery, which indeed was then no unuſual Thing in the Church: But that Monks living in a Monaſtery ſhould perform Divine Offices in other Churches beſide that of their own Monaſtery, is not agreeable to ancient Rules and Practice. And therefore we meet with no Inſtances of that Kind, nor of Tithes being received by Monks, unleſs it was for the Uſe of the Poor; of which there is one Inſtance in Caſſian [n], and beſides that I do not remember any other. Their Way of Living upon their own Labour made them not ſollicitous to receive any Thing from other Men, and therefore ſome of them would not receive Maintenance from their own Parents, as Caſſian [o] relates of Antony, leſt they ſhould ſeem to live upon any Thing that was not the Work of their own Hands.

SECT. XX.
Not allowed at firſt to dwell in Cities, but confined to the Wilderneſs.

BESIDE all this, there was another Reaſon then why Monks could not ordinarily attend Parochial Cures, had they been otherwiſe qualified for them. For by the Laws of their firſt Inſtitution, in all Parts of the Eaſt, their Habitation was not to be in Cities or Places of Publick Concourſe, but in Deſerts and Private Retirements, where they might be ſequeſtred from the Noiſe of the World, and live in Quiet and Solitude, as their Name ſeemed to imply. Whence St. Jerom writing to Ruſticus the Monk, inveighs againſt thoſe who were deſirous [p] to live in Cities, which was contrary to that Singularity they made Profeſſion of. And giving Inſtructions to Paulinus, he ſays, If you deſire to be Really, what you are in Name, that is a Solitary, or One that lives alone, What have you [q] to do in Cities, which are not Habitations for Solitaries, but the Multitude? And it is obſerved both by him and Sozomen [r] of Antonius, That he was uſed to ſay, The Wilderneſs was as natural to a Monk, [h] Ibid. can. 4. [i] Ibid. c. 7. [*] Chap. 2 Sect. 8. [k] Gratian. Cauſ. 16. Quæſt. 1. c. 20. Omnimoda eſt illius Habitus & iſtius Officii diverſitas. Illic enim Quies, Oratio, Labor manuum: At hic Cauſarum Cognitio, Conventiones, Actus, Publica Litigia, &c. [l] Valeſ. Not. in Sozom. lib. 8. c. 17. [*] See Chap. 2. Sect. 8. [m] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 17. πλησίον ὄ μοναχὸς συνῴκισεν, ἐπὶ τῆς ἐκκλησίας κλῆρον ἐπλήρει. [n] Caſſian. Collat. 21. c. 2. [o] Caſſian. Collat. 24. c. 12. [p] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Quid deſideramus Urbium frequentiam, qui de ſingularitate cenſemur? [q] Ep. 13. ad Paulin. Si cupis eſſe quod diceris, id eſt ſolus: Quid facis in Urbibus, quæ utique non ſunt ſolorum Habitacula, ſed multorum? [r] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 13.

as Water to a Fiſh; and therefore a Monk in a City was quite out of his Element, like a Fiſh upon dry Land. By which it appears, that the Monaſtick Life in the firſt Deſign was to exclude Men from having any Thing to do in Cities and Places of Publick Concourſe. And there are Laws in both the Codes to the ſame Purpoſe. Theodoſius enacted, That all that made Profeſſion of the Monaſtick [f] Life, ſhould be obliged by the Civil Magiſtrate to betake themſelves to the Wilderneſs and Deſerts, as their proper Habitation. Baronius by Miſtake reckons [t] this Law a Puniſhment, and next to a Perſecution of the Monks: But Gothofred [u] and Mr. Pagi [w] with better Judgment correct his Error, and obſerve with more Truth, that it was ſo far from being a Puniſhment, that it was only obliging them to live according to the Rules of their firſt Inſtitution. Leo and Anthemius [x], and after them Juſtinian, made Laws to the ſame Purpoſe, forbidding the Eaſtern Monks to appear in Cities; but if they had any Buſineſs of Concern to be tranſacted there, they ſhould do it by their Apochriſarii or Reſponſales, that is, their Proctors or Syndicks, which every Monaſtery was allowed for that Purpoſe.

SECT. XXI. What Exceptions that Rule admitted of.

NOT but that in ſome extraordinary Caſes they took Liberty to diſpenſe with this Rule, when a juſt Occaſion required their Appearance. As in Times of common Danger to the Faith, or great Perſecutions, or when it ſeemed neceſſary for them to interpoſe with the Magiſtrate, and intercede for Criminals in ſpecial Caſes. Thus St. Jerom [y] obſerves of Antonius, that he came to Alexandria at the Requeſt of Athanaſius, to give Teſtimony and Countenance to the Catholick Faith, and to confute the Arian Hereſy. Theodoret makes the like Obſervation [z] upon the Behaviour of Aphraates and Julian, two Syrian Monks, who left their Cells in the Deſert to live in Antioch, when their Preſence was thought neceſſary to ſupport the Catholick Doctrine and its Profeſſors in the Time of the Arian Perſecution under Valens. And of Aphraates, he tells this remarkable Story, That Valens once obſerving him to paſs the Streets in Haſte, though he was an old Man, asked him, Whither he was going with ſo much Speed? To whom he replied, I am going Sir, to pray for your Empire. But, ſaid Valens, it would more have become you to do that at Home in your Retirement, according to the Laws of your Solitary Life. Yes, Sir, ſaid Aphraates, you ſay very true, I ought ſo to do, and I always did ſo, as long as my Saviour's Sheep were in Peace: But now that they are diſquieted and brought into great Danger, very Neceſſity compells me to take another Courſe for their Safety, that they may not be torn in Pieces by wild Beaſts. Were I a Virgin, confined to a ſingle Room, it would not become me to ſit ſtill, when I ſaw my Father's Houſe on Fire, but to run abroad, fetch Water, and extinguiſh the Flame. Now this is our Caſe. You, Sir, have ſet Fire to the Houſe of our common Father, and we have left our Cells with no ſmall Concern, and are come abroad to put it out. Thus bravely did Aphraates anſwer Valens, and apologize for his Appearing in the City in the Time of common Danger, when Valens himſelf was the Occaſion of it. Nor was it only in Defence of Religion they thus made a Publick Appearance, but ſometimes they thought it neceſſary to come and interceed with the Emperors and Judges for condemned Criminals. As Sozomen [a] obſerves of Antonius, that he was frequently compelled by the Complaints and Lamentations of the Diſtreſſed, to come and interpoſe his good Offices with the Princes and Magiſtrates for them, and as ſoon as he had done, he returned to the Wilderneſs again. The Reader may find a more remarkable Inſtance of this Kind in one of St. Chryſoſtom's Homilies [b] to the People of Antioch, where he relates how the City was delivered from imminent Ruin (being under the Diſpleaſure of Theodoſius for having demoliſhed the Imperial Statues, and committing other Crimes of a high Nature) by the Interceſſion of the neighbouring Monks, who left their Tabernacles and Caves in the Mountains, and came into the City, (when other Philoſophers for Fear were fled out of it) and interceding with the Judges, prevailed with them to ſpare the Criminals; telling them, That the Images of the Emperor might eaſily be reſtored to their Priſtine Beauty, and be ſet up again; but if they ſlew the Images of God, it would be impoſſible to raiſe them up again, ſince it was beyond the Art of Man to join Body and Soul together: And if they would not hearken to their Interceſſion, they ſhould execute them too: For if it muſt be ſo, they were reſolved to die with them. After this Manner they were uſed to intercede with the Judges for Criminals in ſome ſuch ſpecial Caſes, as this before us. And they commonly did it with ſuch Prevalency, that they ſeldom failed in their Petition, the Magiſtracy expreſſing a particular Reverence to them upon ſuch Occaſions. But afterward this Thing grew into Abuſe, and they would not be content to petition, but would ſometimes come in great Bodies or Troops, per Drungos, and by Force deliver Criminals, after Sentence of Condemnation was paſſed upon them. To repreſs which tumultuous Way of Proceeding, Arcadius the Emperor was forced to publiſh a Law

[f] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 3. de Monachis, Leg. 1. Quicunque ſub Profeſſione Monachi reperiuntur, deſerta Loca & vaſtas Solitudines ſequi atque habitare jubeantur. [t] Baron. an. 390. n. 67. [u] Gothofred, Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 3. leg. 1. [w] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 390. n. 10. [x] Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 3. de Epiſc. leg. 29. It. Novel. 123. c. 42. [y] Hieron. Ep. 33. ad Caſtruc. [z] Theodor. lib. 4. c. 26, & 27. [a] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 13. [b] Chryſ. Hom. 17. ad Pop. Antioch. p. 215.

[c] ſtrictly

[c] ſtrictly forbidding both the Monks and Clergy to attempt any ſuch Thing, and commanding all Biſhops to proſecute the Authors of ſuch Diſorders, if any Monks happened to be ſo engaged in their Diſtricts, under Pain of his Royal Diſpleaſure.

SECT. XXII. Whether Monks might betake themſelves to a ſecular Life again.

THERE remains but one Enquiry more to be made concerning this Order of Men, which is, Whether ſuch as made Profeſſion of the Monaſtick Life, were afterward at Liberty to alter their State as they thought convenient, and turn Seculars again? To which it may be anſwered, That they were under no Publick Vow to the contrary: Many Men embraced the Life, who never intended to continue all their Days in it. Julian himſelf was once in the Monaſtick Habit, to pleaſe his Couſin Conſtantius, who began to ſuſpect his Inclination toward the Philoſophy of the Gentiles. Socrates ſays of him, that he aſſumed [d] the Tonſure, and feigned the Life of a Monk in Publick, whilſt he privately reſorted to the Lectures of Libanius the Sophiſt. And Oroſius obſerves the ſame [e] of Conſtans the Son of Conſtantine, who uſurped the Empire in Britain in the Time of Honorius, that he was firſt a Monk before his Father made him Cæſar, and ſent him into Spain to promote his Intereſt there. Theſe Men had no Need of the Pope's Diſpenſation to ſet them at Liberty from their Vow; for it does not appear they were ever under any ſuch Obligation. Monaſteries were anciently Schools of Learning, and Places of Pious and religious Education of Youth: Which, though Bellarmin [f] thinks fit to deny it, is evidently proved from St. Chryſoſtom's third Book [g] againſt the Defamers of the Monaſtick Life, which is chiefly ſpent in adviſing Parents to ſend their Children to be educated in Monaſteries, as the ſafeſt Places of good Education; not with a Deſign to oblige them always to continue in the Monaſtick Life, but only to train them up, and ſettle them ſecurely in the Ways of Virtue. And to the ſame Purpoſe it is obſerved by Palladius, that the Monks of Mount Nitria [h] had a Xenodochium or Hoſpital, where for a Week they entertained any one that came to them without working; if he continued longer, they ſet him either to work at ſome Bodily Labour, or to ſtudy; and ſo employed he might continue a Year, or two, or three, among them, till he ſaw his own Time to depart from them. This Palladius [i] calls ἄσκησις γραφικὴ, the Exerciſe of Letters, in Oppoſition to that of Bodily Labour. So that Men might enter a Monaſtery for the ſake of Study, and leave it again when they pleaſed, if they laid upon themſelves no farther Obligation. And they who tied up themſelves ſtricter, and entered the Monaſtick Life with a Deſign to continue in it, were never under any Vow, unleſs a private Reſolution might be eſteemed ſuch, which might be altered at Pleaſure, eſpecially if any unforeſeen Caſe or Accident ſeemed to require a Change in their Way of Living. As Caſſian [k] tells us of one in Egypt who deſpairing to obtain the Gift of Continency, was preparing to enter into a married State, and return to a Secular Life again. The Rule of Pachomius, by which the Egyptian Monks were governed, has nothing of any Vow at their Entrance, nor any Puniſhment for ſuch as deſerted their Station afterward: And there was one Piece of Diſcipline among the Egyptians, which I have mentioned before, that ſeems plainly to intimate that they were under no ſolemn Vow: For one of their Puniſhments was Expulſion out of the Monaſtery, which is inconſiſtent with a Vow of continuing in a Monaſtery for ever. So that at firſt the Monaſtick Life ſeems to have been a Matter of free Choice, not only at Men's firſt Entrance, but in their Progreſs and Continuance alſo: And Men might quit it without any other Puniſhment, unleſs it were a Note of Inconſtancy fixed upon them.

SECT. XXIII. Marriage of Monks anciently not annulled.

HOWEVER, this is certain, that Monks who betook themſelves to a Married State, were not anciently obliged by any Law to diſſolve their Marriage, and put away their Wives, under Pretence of any preceding Obligation, according to the new Rules of the Council of Trent [l], which pronounces ſuch Marriages null and void. In St. Auſtin's Time ſome Virgins and Widows were under the Obligation of a Vow; yet if they married after that, he ſays, They were not to be ſeparated [m] from their Husbands as Adultereſſes: For their Marriage was true Marriage, and not Adultery, as ſome falſly argued. He ſays, They offended highly in breaking their Vow, but yet their Marriage was valid; and in that Caſe to ſeparate them from their Husbands, was only to make their Husbands Adulterers in marrying others whilſt their Wives were living. By Parity of Reaſon then the Marriage of Monks muſt be eſteemed valid alſo, even ſuppoſing them under an equal Obligation. And upon this Account we find no Inſtances of diſſolving Marriage in ſuch Caſes left upon Record in ancient Hiſtory.

SECT. XXIV. What Puniſhments ordinarily inflicted on Deſerters.

YET in Proceſs of Time, becauſe Monks were preſumed to be under ſome Private Obligation by aſſuming this Way of Living, [c] Cod. Th. lib. 9. tit. 40. de Pœnis. leg. 16. Addictos ſupplicio, nulli Clericorum vel Monachorum, eorum etiam quos Cœnobitas vocant, per vim atque uſurpationem vindicare liceat ac tenere, &c. [d] Socrat. lib. 3. c. 1. ἐν χρῶτι κειράμενος, τὸν δὲ μοναχῶν ὑπεχείνετο βίον. [e] Oroſ. Hiſt. lib. 7. c. 40. Conſtantinus Conſtantem Filium ſuum, proh dolor, ex Monacho Cæſarem factum — in Hiſpanias miſit. [f] Bellarm. de Monachis, lib. 2. c. 6. [g] Chryſoſt. adverſ. Vituperatores Vitæ Monaſt. lib. 3. Tom. 4. p. 499. [h] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 6. [i] Pallad. ibid. c. 14. [k] Caſſian. Collat. 2. c. 13. Ut quia Monachus eſſe non poſſet, nec refrænare ſtimulos carnis, & impugnationis Remedia conſequi prævaleret, uxorem duceret, ac relicto Monaſterio reverteretur ad Sæculum. [l] Con. Trident. Seſſ. 24. can. 9. [m] Aug. de Bono Viduitat. c. 10. Qui dicunt talium nuptias non eſſe nuptias, ſed potius Adulteria, non mihi videntur ſatis acute ac diligenter conſiderare quid dicant. Fallit eos quippe Similitudo veritatis, &c.

ving,

ving, ſome Puniſhments were thought of, as proper to be inflicted on ſuch as relinquiſhed their Station and returned to a Secular Life again. By the firſt Council of Orleans, a Monk that had entered himſelf [n] in a Monaſtery, if he afterwards married a Wife, was for ever after uncapable of Holy Orders, but no other Cenſure is paſſed upon him. St. Auſtin was for inflicting the ſame Puniſhment on ſuch as left their Monaſtery without their own Biſhop's Leave, as appears from his Letter to Aurelius [o] Biſhop of Carthage, upon that Subject. The Civil Law likewiſe excludes Deſerters from the Privilege of Ordination: For by a Law of Honorius [p] they were to be delivered up to the Curia, or Civil Court of the City, there to ſerve all their Lives; by which Means they were rendered incapable of any Office in the Church, becauſe Curial and Clerical Offices were inconſiſtent with one another, as has been ſhewed at large [*] in another Place. Juſtinian added another Puniſhment, That if they were poſſeſſed of any Subſtance, it ſhould all be forfeited to the Monaſtery [q] which they deſerted, while they themſelves ſhould be obliged to ſerve perſonally among the Officials of the Judge of the Province where they lived. For by this Time Monaſteries began to have Eſtates and Poſſeſſions in ſome Places, though the moſt exact Rules of the Egyptian Monks were againſt it. The Cenſures of the Church were likewiſe inflicted on deſerting Monks in the fifth Century. Spalatenſis [r] thinks the firſt Council that ever decreed Excommunication againſt them, was the fourth Council of Toledo [ſ] under Honorius, An. 633. But did not advert to a former Canon of the Council of Chalcedon, made near two hundred Years before, which decreed, That neither Virgins conſecrated to God, nor Monks [t] ſhould marry; and ſuch as did ſo, ſhould be excommunicated: Only the Biſhop of the Place might moderate the Cenſure; that is, if I rightly underſtand that Canon, which is by ſome miſtaken, He might ſhorten the Term of their Penance at his Diſcretion; which was the only way of granting Indulgencies in the Primitive Church. And from hence again it appears, that when it was thought a Crime for a Monk to marry, yet they did not think it a Nullity when done, or preſume to void it upon that ſcore, but only oblige him to do Penance for ſuch a Term as the Biſhop ſhould think fit to impoſe upon him. And I ſuppoſe the Canons of St. Baſil [u], and the Council of Trullo [w], which ſpeak of a Penance of Seven Years or more, are to be underſtood with this Limitation.

I have now put together all that I could think material to be ſaid upon this Subject of the Monaſtick Life: And ſome perhaps will think I have ſaid too much, and others too little upon it: But I content my ſelf to have ſaid ſo much as ſeemed neceſſary to my own Deſign, which was to give an Account of ancient Cuſtoms, and explain ſeveral Laws and Rules of the Church. They whoſe Curioſity leads them farther, may eaſily have Recourſe to Caſſian's Inſtitutions and Collations, and Palladius's Hiſtoria Lauſiaca, and Theodoret's Philotheus, or Religious Hiſtory, Books written particularly upon this Subject by profeſt Admirers of the Monaſtick Life. My Method now leads me to ſay ſomething briefly of the Virgins and Widows, that were alſo reckoned among the Aſceticks of the Church.

CHAP. IV.

The Caſe and State of Virgins and Widows in the Antient Church.

SECT. I. Of the Diſtinction between Eccleſiaſtical and Monaſtical Virgins.

AS I have ſhewed before that there were Aſceticks in the Church long before there were any Monks; ſo it muſt here be noted, that there were Virgins who made publick and open Profeſſion of Virginity, before the Monaſtick Life, or Name was known in the World. This appears from the Writings of Cyprian and Tertullian, who ſpeak of Virgins Dedicating themſelves to Chriſt before there were any Monaſteries to receive them. Theſe for Diſtinction's ſake are ſometimes called Eccleſiaſtical Virgins by the Writers of the following Ages, Sozomen [a] and others, to diſtinguiſh them from ſuch as embraced the Monaſtick Life, after Monaſteries began to multiply in the World. The Eccleſiaſtical Virgins were commonly enrolled in the Canon or Matricula of the Church, that is, in the Catalogue of Eccleſiaſticks, as we learn from Socrates [b], who ſpeaks of them under that Title: And hence they were ſometimes called Canonicæ, Canonical Virgins from their being regiſtred in the Canon or Books of the Church. They differed from the Monaſtick Virgins, chiefly in this, that they lived privately in their Fathers Houſes, and [n] Conc. Aurel. 1. c. 23. Monachus in Monaſterio converſus, ſi Pellici poſtea vel Uxori fuerit Sociatus, tantæ Prævaricationis reus, nunquam Eccleſiaſtici gradûs Officium ſortiatur. [o] Aug. Ep. 76. ad Aurel. Ordini Clericorum ſit indigniſſima injuria, ſi Deſertores Monaſteriorum ad militiam Clericatus eligantur, &c.

[p] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 2. Leg. 39. Si qui Profeſſum ſacræ Religionis ſponte dereliquerit, continuo ſibi eum Curia vindicet, &c.

[*] Book 4. Chap. 4. Sect. 4. [q] Juſtin. Novel. 5. c. 6. Si relinquens Monaſterium, ad quandam veniat Militiam, aut ad aliam vitæ figuram: Subſtantia ejus in Monaſterio remanente, ipſe inter Officiales Clariſſimi Provinciæ Judicis ſtatuetur, &c. It. Cod. lib. 1. Tit. 3. Leg. 56. [r] Spalat. de Repub. lib. 2. c. 12. n. 48. [ſ] Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 54. [t] Conc. Chalced. can. 16. [u] Baſil. can. 60. [w] Conc. Trull. c. 44.

[a] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 23. παρθένοι ἐκκλησιαστικαί.

[b] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 17. τὰς παρθένους τὰς ἀναγεγραμμένας ἐν τῷ τῆς ἐκκλησιῶν κανόνι, &c.

had had their Maintenance from their Fathers, or in cases of Necessity from the Church; but the other lived in Communities and upon their own Labour, as we learn from the third Council of Carthage [c] and the Writings of St. Austin [d]. Spalatensis long ago observed [e] this Difference, and it is since acknowledged by Albaspinæus [f], Valesius [g], Cotelerius [h], and other learned Men of the Romish Church. So that it is now out of Dispute, that as the Asceticks for the first three hundred Years were not Monks, so neither were the sacred Virgins of the Church Monastical Virgins, or Nuns confined to a Cloyster, as in After-Ages.

SECT. II. Whether they were under any Profession of perpetual Virginity.

IF it be enquired how these were distinguished from other Virgins, that were meerly secular, I conceive it was by some Sort of Profession of their Intention to continue in that State all their Lives: But whether that was a solemn Vow, or a simple Profession, is not agreed among learned Writers. The Learned Editor [i] of St. Cyprian reckons they were under no Obligation of any Formal Vow in the Age of Cyprian, but yet were some Way bound by the Resolution and Purpose of their own Mind, and the Publick Profession of Virginity: And in this he seems to speak not only the common Sense of Protestant Writers, but the Sense of that ancient Author [k], who says, They dedicated themselves to Christ, yet so as that if either they could not, or would not persevere, it was better for them to marry than to burn, or to be cast into Fire for their Offences, as his Words may literally be translated. From whence it may be collected, that then the Profession of Virginity was not so strict as to make marrying after be thought a Crime worthy of Ecclesiastical Censure.

SECT. III. When first made liable to the Censures of the Church for marrying against their Profession.

BUT in the following Ages, the Censures of the Church were inflicted on them. The Council of Ancyra [l] determined universally against all such as having professed Virginity, afterward went against their Profession, that they should be subjected to the same Term of Penance, as Digamists were used to be; that is, a Year or two, as we learn from one of the Canons of St. Basil [m]. The Council of Chalcedon [n] orders them to be excommunicated, if they married, but leaves the Term of their Penance to the Bishop's Discretion. The Council of Valence in France is still more severe, forbidding [o] them to be admitted immediately to Penance; and when they were admitted, unless they made full and reasonable Satisfaction to God, their Restoration to Communion was still to be deferred. Now from these Canons, to mention no more, it evidently appears, That in the following Ages next after the Time of St. Cyprian, that is, in the fourth and fifth Centuries, the Censures of the Church were severer against the Marriage of profest Virgins than they were before: And they seem to have risen in Proportion to the Esteem and Value, which Men began to set upon Celibacy and the Monastic Life.

SECT. IV. The Marriage of profest Virgins never declared null.

YET two Things are very observable amidst all the Severity and Rigour of those Ages: First, That there never was any Church Decree for Rescinding, or Pronouncing Null such Marriages. The Emperor Jovian indeed, as Sozomen [p] relates, made it a capital Crime by Law for any one to commit a Rape upon a Devoted Virgin, or so much as to sollicit her to forsake her present Sate of Life, and forgoe her Resolution and Purpose: Which Law is still extant in both the Codes [q]. But then, as Valesius himself rightly observes, this Law was only made against Ravishers, and such as sollicited those Virgins to marry against their own Will: But if a Virgin did voluntarily quit her Purpose and Station, and then marry after that, there was nothing in this Law [r] to prohibit her, much less to punish her for so doing. And for the Laws of the Church, though they appointed a Spiritual Punishment, yet they did not cancel or disanul the Act, but confirmed and ratified such Marriages, though done against the Rules then prevailing in the Church. Of which the Testimony of St. Austin [s] alledged before in the last Chapter, Sect. 23. is abundant Proof: Not to mention the Silence of all ancient Laws in the Case, which speak of no other Punishment beside Excommunication, and Penance as the Consequence of that, in order to be received into the Communion of the Church again. Epiphanius [t] is very expreſs and particular in the Caſe, that if any profeſſing Virginity fell from their State by Fornication, they had better marry publickly according to the Laws, and then ſubmit themſelves to a Courſe of Penance, in order to obtain the Communion of the Church again, rather than live perpetually expoſed to the ſecret Darts of the Devil. Which, I think, he would not have ſaid, had it then been the Cuſtom of the Church to diſannul the Marriages of profeſt Virgins under pretence of any preceding Vow or Obligation.

[c] Conc. Carthag. 3. can. 33. Ut Virgines Sacræ, si Parentibus, à quibus custodiebantur, privatæ fuerint, Episcopi providentia vel Presbyteri, si Episcopus absens est, in Monasterio Virginum gravioribus Fœminis commendentur, &c. [d] Aug. de Morib. Eccles. c. 31. Lanificio corpus exercent, atque sustentant, Vestesque ipsas Fratribus tradunt, ab iis invicem quod victui opus est resumentes. [e] Spalat. de Repub. lib. 2. c. 11. n. 25. [f] Albaspin. Not. in Conc. Eliber. can. 13. [g] Vales. Not in Sozom. lib. 8. c. 23. [h] Coteler. Not. in Constitut. Apost. lib. 8. c. 13. [i] Fell. Not. in Cypr. Ep. 4 Animi proposito & publica Virginitatis professione, non Voto astrictæ. [k] Cypr. Ep. 62. al. 4. ad Pompon. Si ex fide se Christo dicaverunt, pudice & caste sine ulla fabula perseverent; ita fortes & stabiles præmium Virginitatis expectent. Si autem perseverare nolunt, vel non possunt; melius est nubant, quam in ignem delictis suis cadant. [l] Conc. Ancyr. can. 19. ὅσοι παρθενίαν ἐπαγγελλόμενοι, ἀθετοῦσι τὴν ἐπαγγελίαν, τὸν πρῶτον διγαμίας ὅρον ἐκπληρώτωσαν. [m] Basil. Ep Canon. c. 4. [n] Conc. Chalced. can. 16. [o] Conc. Valentin. can. 2. De Puellis, quæ se Deo voverunt, si ad terrenas nuptias sponte transierint, id custodiendum esse decrevimus, ut Pœnitentia his non statim detur: Et cum data fuerit, nisi plene satisfecerint Deo, in quantum ratio poposcerit, earundem Communio differatur. [p] Sozom. lib. 6. c. 3. [q] Cod. Justin. lib. 1. Tit. 3. Leg. 5. Si quis non dicam rapere, sed attentare tantum jungendi causa Matrimonii Sacratissimas Virgines ausus fuerit, Capitali Pœna feriatur. Vid. Cod. Th. lib. 9. Tit. 25. de Raptu Sanctimonialium, leg. 2. [r] Vales. Not. in Sozom. lib. 6. c. 3. Lex Joviani adversus Raptores Virginum lata est; sed si Sanctimonialis relicto Proposito postea nubere voluisset, non prohibebatur hac Lege. [s] Aug. de Bono Viduit. c. 8, 9, 10.

SECT. V.
Liberty granted by ſome Laws to marry, if they were conſecrated before the Age of Forty.

THE other Thing proper to be conſider'd in this Caſe, is, That by the Imperial Laws great Liberty and Indulgence was granted to all Virgins that were conſecrated before the Age of Forty. For though ſome Canons [u] allowed them to be conſecrated at Twenty five, and others [w] at Sixteen, or Seventeen, which were reckoned to be Years of Diſcretion; yet Time quickly ſhew'd, that neither of thoſe Terms were ſo conveniently fix'd as they might be: And therefore other Canons required Virgins to be Forty Years old [x] before they were veiled, as may be ſeen particularly in the French and Spaniſh Councils of Agde and Saragoſſa. And the Imperial Laws not only required that Age in conſecrated Virgins, but farther decreed, That if any Virgin was veiled before that Age, either by the Violence or Hatred of her Parents (which was a Caſe that often happen'd) ſhe ſhould have Liberty to marry: As appears from the Novel of Leo and Majorian [y] at the End of the Theodoſian Code, which ſays, That no Virgin in ſuch Circumſtances ſhould be judged Sacrilegious, who by her honeſt Marriage declared, that either ſhe never intended to take upon her any ſuch Vow, or at leaſt was not able to fulfil it: Foraſmuch as the Doctrine and Inſtitutes of the Chriſtian Religion have declared, That it is better for a Virgin to marry, than to burn, and forfeit her Virtue by leading an unchaſt Life after ſhe has made Profeſſion of Virginity. Now if theſe two Things be rightly conſidered, Firſt, That the Conſecration of a Virgin was not to be reputed valid till ſhe was forty Years of Age: And Secondly, That if ſhe married after her Conſecration at that Age, yet her Marriage was then reputed valid and never diſannulled: There will appear a very wide Difference between the Practice of the Antient Church, and that of the Church of Rome in this Matter: For which Reaſon I have ſpoken diſtinctly of this Profeſſion of Virgins, both to explain the Nature of their Vow, and ſhew the Meaſures of its Obligation.

SECT. VI.
Of their Habit, and Form, and Manner of Conſecration.

AS to their Conſecration it ſelf, it had ſome Things very peculiar in it. For it was uſually performed publickly in the Church, and that with ſome Solemnity, by the Biſhop himſelf, or at leaſt ſome Presbyter, particularly deputed by the Biſhop for that Purpoſe. For by the ancient Canons this Act among others was reſerved to the Office of the ſupream Miniſter of the Church, and therefore a Preſbyter without his Commiſſion, or Leave, was not to intermeddle in it. The ſixth Canon in the African Code [z] ſeems univerſally to prohibit Presbyters theſe three Things, the making of Chriſm, the Publick Reconciliation of Penitents, and the Conſecration of Virgins. But this laſt Point is to be interpreted by what is ſaid in the third Council of Carthage, That a Presbyter is not to conſecrate a Virgin without [a] the Biſhop's Leave. Which implies, That he might do it by his Direction. And ſo Ferrandus in his Abbreviation [b] underſtands it. So that this was one of thoſe Things which Biſhops thought fit to reſerve to themſelves in thoſe Times, and did not allow their Presbyters, without ſpecial Direction, to perform it. Whence I conclude, it was a Thing eſteemed of ſome Weight, and the Biſhop's Character was concerned in it, to uſe an exact Caution in the conſecrating of Virgins, as St. Ambroſe [c] words it, that Nothing might be done raſhly to the Diſhonour of the Church. Now when a Virgin had ſignified her Purpoſe to the Biſhop, and her Deſire of the uſual Conſecration, ſhe was wont to come and make a Publick Profeſſion of her Reſolution in the Church; and then the Biſhop, or Presbyter appointed at the Altar, put upon her the accuſtomed Habit of Sacred Virgins, by which they were known and diſtinguiſhed from all others. The Matter is thus repreſented by St. Ambroſe, who ſpeaking of his Siſter Marcellina, who was conſecrated at Rome by Liberius, ſays, That on Chriſtmas-Day [d] in St. Peter's Church ſhe ſignify'd the Profeſſion of Virginty by the Change of her Habit, Liberius making an Exhortation or Diſcourſe of her, ſuitable to the Occaſion, containing the Duty of Virgins, which the Reader may find there recorded. This Change of Habit is frequently [e] mentioned in the Ancient Councils, and the Civil Law alſo [t] Epiphan. Hær. 61. Apoſtolic. [u] Conc. Carthag. 3. can. 4. [w] Baſil. Ep. Canon. c. 18. [x] Conc. Agathen. can. 19. Sanctimoniales, quantumlibet Vita earum & mores probati ſint, ante annum ætatis ſuæ Quadrageſimum non velentur. Conc. Cæſarauguſt. can. 8. Non velandas eſſe Virgines, quæ ſe Deo voverunt, niſi Quadraginta annorum probata ætate, &c. [y] Leo & Majorian, Novel. 8. Neque enim Sacrilega judicanda eſt, quæ ſe hoc ante noluiſſe aut certe non poſſe complere ad petiti Conjugii honeſtate prodiderit; cum Chriſtianæ Religionis Inſtituta atque Doctrina melius eſſe cenſueret Virginem nubere, quam impatientiæ ardore naturali profeſſæ pudicitiæ non ſervare virtutem. [z] Cod. Afric. c. 6. κορῶν καθιέρωσις ἀπὸ πρεσβυτέρων μὴ γίνηται, &c. [a] Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 36. Ut Presbyter inconſulto Epiſcopo Virgines non conſecret, Chriſma vero nunquam conficiat. [b] Ferrand. Breviat. Canonum, c. 91. [c] Ambroſ. de Virgin. lib. 3. p. 124. Neque ego abnuo, ſacerdotalis eſſe Cautionis debere, ut non temere Puella valetur. [d] Ambroſ. de Virgin. lib. 3. p. 112. Cum in Salvatoris Natali, ad Apoſtolum Petrum, Virginitatis Profeſſionem Veſtis quoque mutatione ſignares, &c. V'd. Ambroſ. ad Virginem Lapſam, c. 5. [e] Conc. Carthag. 4. can. 11 & 104. Conc. Arauſic. 1. c. 27.

takes takes Notice of it, forbidding [f] all Mimicks and lewd Women the Publick Uſe of ſuch Habit, as was worn by Virgins conſecrated to God. Which implies plainly, That ſuch Virgins were known by ſome particular Habit peculiar to themſelves. One Part of this was a Veil, called the Sacrum Velamen, whence the Phraſe, Velare [g] Virginem, to veil a Virgin, is the ſame as Conſecrating her to God, in ſome antient Writers. Though I muſt note, that Tertullian's Book de Velandis Virginibus is not ſo to be underſtood; for he writes not to devoted Virgins, but to all Virgins in general, perſwading them to uſe the grave Habit of Matrons, that is, to go veiled, according to the Apoſtle's Direction. Whence we muſt ſay, that the Veil of conſecrated Virgins had ſome Note of Diſtinction from the common Veil of others, and thereupon the Name of Sacred affixed to it, becauſe it was a Token or Indication of their Reſolution. Optatus particularly obſerves this of another Part of their Habit, which he calls their Purple and Golden Mitre. He ſays, They did not uſe it for any Sacrament, or Myſtery, but only as a Badge of Diſtinction, and to ſignify to whoſe Service they belonged, that no one might pretend to raviſh, or ſo much as court them. And therefore he blames [h] the Donatiſts for their blind and mad Zeal in making the Virgins of Chriſt do Penance, and caſt away their Veils, and change their Mitres, which were only innocent Tokens of their Profeſſion. Euſebius takes Notice of the ſame Habit under the Name of Coronet: For ſpeaking of one Ennathas a Virgin of Scythopolis in Paleſtine, who ſuffered Martyrdom in the Dioclefian Perſecution, he ſays of her, [i] That ſhe was adorned with the Coronet of Virginity; alluding to what Optatus calls their Golden Ribband, or little Mitre; unleſs he ſpeaks metaphorically, and means the Crown of Virginity added to the Crown of Martyrdom in another World; of both which great Things are often ſaid in the antient Writers. Albaſpiny [k] thinks Optatus ſpeaks of another Cuſtom, which he ſays is ſtill in Uſe in the Conſecration of Virgins, which is untying the Hair, as was cuſtomary in Secular Marriages, in Token of the Woman's Subjection to her Husband. But Optatus's Words [l] ſeem only to be a bare Alluſion to that Secular Cuſtom: For the Marriage of Virgins to Chriſt was only Figurative, or as he words it, Spiritual and Heavenly: And conſequently the Cuſtom referred to muſt be underſtood to be of the ſame Nature, that is, not real and proper, but figurative only; which ſeems to be moſt agreeable to the Mind of the Author. Baronius [m] and Habertus [n] expreſs themſelves Patrons of another Cuſtom, which began to creep in among ſome, but was never allowed or approved by the Catholick Church. Euſtathius the Heretick was for having all Virgins ſhorn, or ſhaven at their Conſecration: But the Council of Gangra immediately roſe up againſt him, and anathematized the Practice, paſſing a Decree in theſe Words, If any [o] Woman under Pretence of an Aſcetick Life cut off her Hair, which God hath given her for a Memorial of Subjection, let her be Anathema, as one that diſannuls the Decree of Subjection. Habertus and Baronius pretend, That this Decree was made only againſt married Women and Seculars, and not ſuch as betook themſelves to a Monaſtick Life: But the Words of the Canon are poſitively againſt ſuch as did it upon Pretence that they were entered upon an Aſcetick, or as ſome call it, a Religious Life; and Valeſius [p] ingenuouſly confeſſes this to be the true Senſe of the Canon, proving hence, That anciently the Sacred Virgins were not ſhaven: As neither were they in France to the Time of Carolus Calvus, as he ſhews from other Canons, citing Hugo Menardus [q] for the ſame Opinion. But the Council of Gangra was not of ſufficient Force to repreſs this Cuſtom in all Places: For in St. Jerom's Time it prevailed in ſome Monaſteries of Syria and Egypt, though upon another Principle of Cleanlineſs, not Religion, as appears [r] from his Epiſtle againſt Sabinian the Deacon: Yet it did not prevail every where in Egypt in the Days of Athanaſius: For Sozomen [s] giving an Account of the barbarous Uſage which the Holy Virgins met with from the Heathen at Heliopolis, ſays, they added this Indignity above all, that they ſhaved them alſo. Which plainly implies, that it was not then any approved Cuſtom of the Church. Nor did it ever prevail by any Law: For Theodoſius the [f] Lex Arcadii in Cod. Juſtin. lib. 1. tit. 4. de Epiſc. Audient. leg. 4. Mimæ & quæ ludibrio corporis ſui quæſtum faciunt, publice habitu earum Virginum, quæ Deo dicatæ ſunt, non utantur. Vid. Cod. Th. lib. 15. tit. 17. leg. 12. [g] Innoc. Ep. 2. ad Victric. c. 13. Hæ vero quæ necdum Sacro Velamine tectæ, &c. Gelaſ. Ep. 9. ad Epiſc. Lucaniæ, c. 14. [h] Optat. cont. Parmen. lib. 6. p. 96. Jam illud quam ſtultum, quam vanum, ut virgines Chriſti agerent Pœnitentiam, ut jamdudum profeſſæ ſigna voluntatis capitibus, poſtea vobis jubentibus, immutarent; ut Mitellas aureas projicerent, alias acciperent &c. [i] Euſeb. de Martyr. Palæſt. c. 9. παρθενίας στέμματι καὶ αὐτὴ κεκοσμημένη. [k] Albaſpin. Not. in Optat. lib. 6. p. 159. [l] Optat. lib. 6. p. 97. Spiritale nubendi hoc genus eſt: In nuptias Sponſi jam venerant Voluntate & Profeſſione ſua, & ut Sæcularibus nuptiis ſe renunciaſſe monſtrarent, ſpiritali ſponſo ſolverant crinem, jam cœleſtes celebraverant nuptias. Quid eſt quod eas iterum crines ſolvere coegiſtis? [m] Baron. an. 57. n. 93. [n] Habert. Archieratic. p. 598. [o] Con. Gangr. can. 17. εἴτις γυναικῶν διὰ τὸ νομιζομένην ἄσκησιν ἀποκήψειτο τὰς κόμας, ἃς ἐδωκεν ὁ θεὸς εἰς ὑπομνησιν τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ὡς ἀναλύσασα τὸ πρόσαγμα τῆς ὑποταγῆς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. [p] Valeſ. Not. in Sozomen. lib. 5. c. 10. Porro Sciendum eſt, ſacras Virgines olim intonſas fuiſſe, ut conſtat ex concilio Gangrenſi. Idque etiam in Gallia uſitatum fuit temporibus Caroli Calvi, ut docet Canon. 7. Concilii in Verno Palatio. [q] Menard. Not. in Sacramental. Gregor. [r] Hieron. Ep. 48. cont. Sabinian. Moris eſt in Ægyptiis & Syris Monaſteriis, ut tam Virgo quam Vidua, quæ ſe Deo devoverint, & Sæculo renunciantes omnes delicias Sæculi conculcarint, mundanum crinem Monaſteriorum Matribus offerant deſecandum, &c. [s] Sozom. lib. 5. c. 10. τὸ τελευταῖον ἀνέκειρον αὐτάς.

Great added a Civil Sanction [t] to confirm the Eccleſiaſtical Decree made againſt it, commanding all Women, that under Pretence of their Profeſſion cut off their Hair, to be caſt out of the Church, and not to be allowed to partake of the Holy Myſteries, or make their Supplications at the Altar: And farther, laid the Penalty both of Depoſition and Excommunication upon any Biſhop that ſhould admit ſuch Women to Communion. From all which it manifeſtly appears, that the pretended Tonſure of Virgins and Widows was anciently no allowed Cuſtom of the Church, but rather an Abuſe, which both the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Laws endeavoured to correct and exterminate, however it came to prevail in the contrary Practice of later Ages. The Ordo Romanus has alſo a long Form of Prayer, and the Ceremony of a Ring and a Bracelet at their Conſecration: But the antient Liturgies having Nothing of this, their Silence ſeems to be an Argument againſt the Antiquity of them. And leſt any one ſhould think the Virgins were ordained to ſome ſpecial Office in the Church, as the Deaconneſſes were, 'tis particularly remarked by the Author of the Conſtitutions, [u] that their Conſecration was not an Ordination, and therefore Impoſition of Hands, for ought that I can find, was not any antient Ceremony belonging to it. I muſt note, farther, that as the Society of Virgins was of great Eſteem in the Church, ſo they had ſome particular Honours paid to them.

SECT. VII. Of ſome Privileges beſtowed on them.

VIRGINS and Widows were commonly excuſed Capitation-Money, together with the Clergy, [w] by the Imperial Laws of Valentinian and others. Their Perſons were ſacred; and ſevere Laws were made againſt any that ſhould preſume to offer the leaſt Violence to them: Baniſhment, and Proſcription, and Death, were the ordinary Puniſhments [x] of ſuch Offenders. Conſtantine paid them a particular Reſpect by charging his own Coffers and Exchequer with their Maintenance. And his Mother Helena [y] was uſed to entertain them her ſelf, and wait upon them at her own Table. The Church gave them alſo a Share in her own Revenues, and aſſigned them by way of Reſpect a particular Place or Apartment in the Houſe of God, whither as St. Ambroſe ſays, [z] the moſt Noble and Religious Matrons were uſed to reſort with ſome Earneſtneſs to receive their Salutations and Embraces. But of this I ſhall have Occaſion to diſcourſe farther in the next Book, when I come to treat of Churches, and the diſtinct Places of every Order in them.

SECT. VIII. Of the Name παρθένος and Nonnæ, and its Signification.

I have but one Thing more to obſerve, which relates to an antient Name of theſe Virgins, παρθένος and Nonnæ, whence I preſume comes our Engliſh Name, Nun. Moniales, and Aſcetriæ, and Sanctimoniales are common Names for them in Antient Writers. St. Jerom once uſes the Name, Nonnæ, and Palladius of Meurſius's Edition [a] παρθένος, but in Fronto-Ducæus's Edition it is γραῦς, an Old Woman. Hoſpinian [b] ſays it is an Egyptian Name, and ſignifies a Virgin: But St. Jerom [c] ſeems to extend the Signification a little farther, to denote indifferently Widows profeſſing Chaſtity after a firſt Marriage, as well as Virgins; for he particularly applies it to Women living in Widowhood after their firſt Husband's Deceaſe. The Names Agapete and Sorores I paſs over, as being rather Names of Reproach, and deriving their Original from a ſcandalous Abuſe and unwarrantable Practice of ſome vain and indiſcreet Men in the Church, of which I have given a full Account [*] in another Place.

SECT. IX. Some particular Obſervations relating to the Widows of the Church.

CONCERNING the Widows of the Church we have not many Things farther to be obſerved diſtinctly, they being generally under the ſame Laws and Rules as the Eccleſiaſtical Virgins were, as to what concerned their Habit, Conſecration, Profeſſion, Maintenance and the like: The Sum of which is thus expreſſed in one of the Canons [d] of the firſt Council of Orange, That a Widow having made Profeſſion of continuing in her Widowhood before the Biſhop in the Church, and having her Widow's Garment put on by the Presbyter, ought never after to violate her Promiſe. That which was particular in their Caſe, was, 1. That they muſt be ſuch Widows as had a long Time ago loſt their Husbands, and lived many Years a chaſt unblameable Life, ruling their own Houſes well, as the Author [e] of the Conſtitutions expreſſes himſelf almoſt in the Words of the Apoſtle: But ſuch Widows as had but lately buried their Husbands, were not to be truſted for fear their Paſſions ſhould one time or other prove too ſtrong for their Promiſe. 2. It may hence be reaſonably concluded that the younger Widows were generally refuſed by the Church, and not allowed to make any ſolemn Profeſſion before they were Forty or Fifty [t] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 27. Fœminæ quæ crinem ſuum, contra Divinas Humanaſque Leges, inſtinctu perſuaſæ Profeſſionis, abſciderint, ab Eccleſiæ foribus arceantur. Non illis fas ſit ſacra adire Myſteria, neque ullis ſupplicationibus mereantur veneranda omnibus altaria frequentare. Adeo quidem, ut Epiſcopus, tonſo capite fœminam ſi introire permiſerit, dejectus loco etiam ipſe cum hujuſmodi Contuberniis arceatur.

[u] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 24. παρθένος δὲ χειροτονεῖται, &c.

[w] Cod. Th. lib. 13. tit. 10. de Cenſu leg. 46. [x] Cod. Th. lib. 9. tit. 25. de Raptu Sanctimon. leg. 2 & 3. [y] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 17. [z] Ambroſ. ad Virgin. Lapſam, c. 6.

[a] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 46. al. 86. [b] Hoſpin. de Monach. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 3. [c] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 6. Maritorum expertes dominatu, Viduitatis præferunt libertatem. Caſtæ vocantur & Nonnæ, & poſt cœnam dubiam Apoſtolos ſomniant. [*] Book 6. Chap. 2. Sect. 13.

[d] Conc. Arauſican. can. 27. Viduitatis ſervandæ Profeſſionem coram Epiſcopo in ſecretario habitam, impoſita à Presbytero Veſte Viduali, non eſſe violandam. [e] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 25.

Years

Years Old, though this Term be no where preciſely fix'd. For ſince, as I have ſhewed before, Virgins in ſome Ages were not allowed to make their Profeſſion before Forty, it is probable the ſame Term was generally obſerved in the Caſe of Widows, or perhaps Sixty required according to the Rule of the Apoſtle. The Widows that were choſen to be Deaconeſſes in the Church, were to be Fifty or Sixty Years of Age, as I have ſhewed before [†] in ſpeaking of their Order; who though they were not the Widows we are now ſpeaking of, yet being generally choſen out of them, and thence termed Widows alſo, it may be preſumed there was no great Difference in point of Age betwixt them. 3. Widows were to be ſuch only as had been the Wives of one Man, that is, only once married, as the Ancients generally underſtand it, though Theodoret gives a different Senſe of the Words, only excluding ſuch as had ſcandalouſly married a ſecond Time after having divorced themſelves from a former Husband; which ſeems to be the true Senſe and Meaning of the Apoſtle, as learned Men [*] now underſtand it. 4. There was ſome Difference between Widows and Virgins in the Ceremony of their Conſecration, at leaſt in the Church of Rome in the Time of Gelaſius. For in one of his Canonical Epiſtles [f] where he ſpeaks of Veiling of Virgins on certain Holidays, and not at other Times, except in caſe of Sickneſs, he peremptorily forbids the Veiling of Widows at any Time, as contrary to Cuſtom and Law, for no Canon had preſcribed it. Which ſeems to argue, that this particular Ceremony was not uſed in their Conſecration. Though it came into Uſe by the Time that the Ordo Romanus was written: For there the Form [g] of Conſecrating Widows preſcribes that they ſhall be veiled by the Preſbyter, or elſe take a Veil conſecrated by the Biſhop from the Altar, and veil themſelves. But it is no Wonder to find ſuch a Change as this in the Roman Church: A diligent Enquirer may find many other that are more conſiderable, which I ſhall no farther purſue, but here put an End to the Diſcourſe concerning the Aſceticks of the Antient Church.

[†] Book 2. Chap. 22. Sect. 4. [*] See Book 2. Chap. 22. Sect. 5. [f] Gelaſ. Ep. 9. ad Epiſc. Lucan. Devotis Virginibus, niſi aut in Epiphaniarum die, aut in Albis Paſchalibus, aut in Apoſtolorum Natalitiis ſacrum minime Velamen imponatur, &c. Viduas autem velare Pontificum nullus attentet, quod nec Authoritas Divina delegat, nec Canonum forma præſtituit. Ibid. c. 15. [g] Ordo Roman. de Conſecr. Viduæ, p. 167. Vidua, ſi ſeipſam vult Deo dare, debet & à Presbytero velari, vel etiam conſecratum ab Epiſcopo velamen de altari accipere, & ipſa ſibi, non Epiſcopus, illud debet imponere.

BOOK VIII.

An Account of the ANTIENT CHURCHES, and their ſeveral Parts, Utenſils, Conſecrations, Immunities, &c.

CHAP. I.

Of the ſeveral Names and firſt Original of Churches among Chriſtians.

SECT. I. Of the Name Eccleſia, and Ἐκκλησιαστήριον.

HAVING hitherto given an Account of the Perſons, as well Clergy as Laity, that made up the great Body of the Chriſtian Church, I now proceed to ſpeak of Churches in another Senſe, Firſt, As taken for the Material Buildings, or Places of Aſſembly ſet apart for Divine Worſhip; and Secondly, As taken for certain Diviſions, or Diſtricts of Dioceſes, Provinces, Pariſhes, &c. into which the Church Catholick was divided. In ſpeaking of the Firſt it will be proper to begin with their Names, and make a little Enquiry into the firſt Original of Churches among Chriſtians. One of the moſt common Names of Churches, as taken for the Structures or Buildings, is that of Eccleſia; which yet among the Antient Greek Writers often ſignifies the Aſſembly or Convocation of People met together, either upon Sacred or Civil Affairs, and ſo it is ſometimes uſed in Scripture, Acts xix. 40. Mat. xviii. 17. And ſo Iſidore of Peluſium uſes it likewiſe, diſtinguiſhing thus between ἐκκλησιαστήριον, and ἐκκλησία; the ἐκκλησιαστήριον [a] is the Temple or Building made of Wood and Stone, but the ἐκκλησία is the Congregation of Souls, or People that meet therein. And in this Senſe, as St. Cyril [b] obſerves, there is a Sort of Pheronymy in the Name ἐκκλησία, which is ſo called ἀπὸ τῦ ἐκκαλεῖν, becauſe it is a Convocation of Men ſolemnly called together. But though this be a very antient and common Signification, yet it no leſs uſually occurs in the other Senſe, denoting the Place, or Building it ſelf, [c] where the Congregation met together; and in this Acceptation it is commonly oppoſed both to the Synagogues of the Jews, and the Temples of the Gentiles; as appears from that noted Paſſage in the Epiſtle of Aurelian [d] the Heathen Emperor, where he chides the Senate for demurring about the Opening of the Sibylline Books, as if they had been upon a Debate in a Chriſtian Church, and not in the Temple of all the Gods: And from another Paſſage in St. Ambroſe [e] where pleading with Theodoſius in Behalf of a Chriſtian Biſhop, who had cauſed a Jewiſh Synagogue to be ſet on Fire, he asks him, Whether it was fitting that Chriſtians ſhou'd be ſo ſeverely animadverted on for burning a Synagogue, when Jews and Heathens had been ſpared who had made Havock of the Churches?

SECT. II. Of the Names Dominicum and Κυριακὸν, (whence comes Kyrk and Church) and Domus Columbæ.

ANOTHER common Name among the Latins is Dominicum, or Domus Dei, God's Houſe, which anſwers to the Greek Κυριακὸν, whence with a little Variation we have the Saxon Name Kyrik, or Kyrch, and the Scotch and Engliſh Kyrk and Church, which are all Words of the ſame Import, denoting a Place ſet apart for the Uſe and Service of God. The Name Dominicum is at leaſt as old as Cyprian, but he applies it not only to the Church, but to the Lord's Supper [f], and [a] Iſidor. Peluſ. lib. 2. Ep. 246. ἄλλο ἐστὶν ἐκκλησία, καὶ ἄλλο ἐκκλησιαστήριον, &c. [b] Cyril. Catech. 18. n. 11. p. 270. ἐκκλεσία ἡ καλῶ φερωνύμως, διὰ τὸ πάντας ἐκκαλεῖῦς, καὶ ὁμῦ συνάγειν. [c] Vide Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. voce, ἐκκλησία. [d] Apud Vopiſcum. Vit. Aurelian. Miror vos, Patres ſancti, tamdiu de aperiendis Sibyllinis dubitaſſe Libris; perinde quaſi in Chriſtianorum Eccleſia, non in Templo Deorum omnium, tractaretis. [e] Ambroſ. Ep. 29. ad Theodoſ. Synagoga incenſa eſt, perfidiæ Locus.——Eccleſia non vindicata eſt, vindicabitur Synagoga? [f] Cypr. de Opere & Eleemoſ. p. 203. Locuples & dives es, & Dominicum celebrare te credis, quæ Corbonam omnino non reſpicis? Quæ in Dominicum ſine Sacrificio venis; quæ partem de Sacrificio, quod pauper obtulit, ſumis?

perhaps the Lord's Day. For as the Learned Editor [g] and others [h] have obſerved, the Word Dominicum ſignifies three Things in ancient Writers, 1. The Lord's Day. 2. The Lord's Supper. 3. The Lord's Houſe. And Cyprian's Words may be conſtrued to either Senſe: For he thus addreſſes himſelf to a rich Matron. Do you think you rightly celebrate the Dominicum, the Lord's Day, or the Lord's Supper, who have no Regard to the Corban? Who come into the Lord's Houſe without any Sacrifice, and eat Part of the Sacrifice which the Poor have offered? The ſame Name occurs frequently in other Latin Writers, as in Ruffin, who brings in the Biſhop who converted the Philoſopher in the Council of Nice thus addreſſing himſelf to his new Convert, "Ariſe and follow [i] me to "the Dominicum, and there receive the Seal of "your Faith, viz. Baptiſm in the Church. And St. Jerom [k] tells us, that the famous Church of Antioch, which was begun by Conſtantine, and finiſhed and dedicated by Conſtantius, had the Name of Dominicum Aureum, the Golden Dome, for its Richneſs and Beauty. The Greek Name Κυριακὸν is frequently to be met with in the Councils of Ancyra [l], and Neocæſarea [m], and Laodicea [n], and Euſebius, who ſays [o] the perſecuting Emperor Maximinus reſtored the Chriſtians their Churches under that Appellation in his Edicts. And Conſtantine having built ſeveral Churches, gave them all the Name of Κυριακά, as being dedicated not to the Honour [p] of any Man, but him who is Lord of the Univerſe. This is a plain Account of the Name: But whether we may hence conclude with a Learned Man [q], that the Greeks, and not the Latins, were the firſt Planters of Chriſtianity in Britain, becauſe of the near Affinity between the Names Κυριακὸν and Kyrk, is what I think not ſo plain; but I leave it to every Reader's Judgment to determine.

Tertullian once uſes the Name of Domus Columbæ, the Houſe of the Dove, for a Church. For writing againſt the Valentinian Hereticks, who affected Secrecy in their Doctrines, he compares them to the Eleuſinian Myſteries, whoſe Temple was ſo guarded with Doors and Curtains, that a Man muſt be five Years a Candidate, before he could be admitted to the Adytum of the Deity, or Secrets of the Sanctuary. Whereas, ſays he, the Houſe of our Dove [r] is plain and ſimple, delights in high and open Places, affects the Light, loves the Figure of the Holy Ghoſt, (that is, Fire and Light, as I think Junius rightly interprets it) and the Orient or Morning Sun, which is the Figure of Chriſt. The Houſe of the Dove ſeems here to be the ſame as the Houſe of Chriſt, who is pointed out by the Dove, as Tertullian words it in the ſame Place, Chriſtum Columba demonſtrare ſolita eſt: Or elſe, as Mr. Mede [ſ] explains it, we may take it for the Houſe of the Dove-like Religion, or the Dove-like Diſciples of Chriſt. For every Way it will be the Name of a Church, as Tertullian plainly intended it.

SECT. III. Of the Diſtinction between Domus Dei, Domus Divina, and Domus Eccleſiæ.

THERE are two other Names of near Affinity with the former, which ſome Readers may be apt to miſtake for Names of Churches, when they are not always ſo; and therefore I cannot let them paſs in this Place without taking Notice of them. The one is Domus Divina, and the other Domus Eccleſiæ. The firſt of which is of frequent Uſe in the Civil Law, whence it ſignifies not a Church, but the Emperor's Palace, or his Houſe and Family, according to the Stile of thoſe Times, when every Thing belonging to them had the Name of Divine. As Conſtitutiones Divinæ, Divale Præceptum, Lex Divalis, Literæ Sacræ, Oraculum Cæleſte, and ſuch other Terms, do not ſignify (as one would haſtily imagine) the Sacred Inſpired Writings, or the Laws and Oracles of God, but the Edicts and Conſtitutions of the Emperors, who themſelves were called Divi, and thence all Things relating to them ſtiled Divine. Agreeably to this Stile, when the Emperor Theodoſius, Jun. decrees [t], That no one, no not of his own Divine Houſe, ſhould receive Corn in Specie out of the publick Store-Houſes, before it was made into Bread by the publick Bakers: It is plain, by his own Divine Houſe he does not mean the Houſe of God, the Church, but his own Family of Palatins, as Gothifred rightly explains it. The other Name, Domus Eccleſiæ, οἶκος ἐκκλησίας, The Houſe of the Church, is uſed by Euſebius in relating the Hiſtory of the Heretick Paulus Samoſatenſis, who notwithſtanding that he was depoſed by the Council of Antioch, would not remove out of the Houſe of the Church [u], and therefore the Fathers appealed to the Emperor Aurelian againſt him, who determined, That that Party to whom the Biſhops of Italy and Rome ſhould write, ſhould have the Houſe delivered up to them; and ſo Paul was turned out of the Church with great Diſgrace by the Secular Power. The Queſtion here is, What Euſebius means by the Houſe of the Church. Mr. Mede [w] takes it for the Church it ſelf, and gives a very probable Reaſon for it, becauſe Euſebius expounds himſelf, when he ſays, [g] Bp. Fell. in Loc. [h] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 3. n. 2. [i] Ruffin. Hiſt. lib. 1. c. 3. Si hæc ita eſſe credis, ſurge & ſequere me ad Dominicum, & hujus fidei Signaculum ſuſcipe. [k] Hieron. Chron. Olymp. 276. an. 3. In Antiochia Dominicum quod appellatur Aureum, ædificari cœptum. [l] Conc. Ancyr. can. 15. [m] Conc. Neocæſar. c. 5. [n] Conc. Laodic. c. 28. [o] Euſeb. lib. 9. c. 10. [p] Id. de Laud. Conſt. c. 17. [q] Beverege Not. in Can. 15. Conc. Ancyr. [r] Tertul. contra Valentin. c. 3. Noſtræ Columbæ Domus Simplex, etiam in editis & apertis, & ad lucem. Amat figuram Spiritus Sancti, Orientem Chriſti figuram, &c. [ſ] Mede Diſc. of Chur. p. 329. [t] Cod. Th. lib. 14. Tit. 16. de Frumento Urbis Conſtantinop. leg. 2. Nulli, ne Divinæ quidem Domui noſtræ, frumentum de horreis publicis pro annona penitus præbeatur, ſed integer Canon Mancipibus conſignetur, annonam in pane cocto domibus exhibendo. [u] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 30. [w] Mede's Diſc. of Churches, p. 333.

Paul

Paul was turned out of the Church: And he uſes the ſame Expreſſion in another Place, where it can ſignify Nothing but the Church, or Houſe of Sacred Aſſembly. For ſpeaking of the Perſecutor Maximinus [x], he ſays, He neither allowed the Chriſtians to hold Aſſemblies, nor build Houſes of Aſſembly; which evidently refers to the Building of Churches. But yet in other Places Domus Eccleſiæ ſeems to ſignify no more than the Biſhop's Houſe, as in the ſecond Council [y] of Toledo, where it is decreed, That ſuch Children as were dedicated by their Parents, in their Infancy, to a Clerical, or Monaſtick Life, ſhould be educated and inſtructed in the Houſe of the Church, under the Biſhop's Eye, by the Provoſt, or Governor, that was ſet over them. This in other Canons is called Domus Sacerdotalis, the Biſhop's Houſe, to diſtinguiſh it from the Church.

SECT. IV. Churches called Oratories, or Houſes of Prayer.

BUT to proceed: As the Temple of God at Jeruſalem is frequently in Scripture ſtiled the Houſe of Prayer; ſo Chriſtian Churches, in Regard that Prayer was one of the principal Offices performed in them, were uſually termed προσευκτήρια, and οἶκοι εὐκτήριοι, Oratories, or Houſes of Prayer; of which there are innumerable Inſtances in Euſebius [z], Socrates [a], Sozomen [b] and other antient Writers. But in ſome Canons the Name, Oratories, ſeems to be reſtrained to private Chapels, or Places of Worſhip ſet up for Convenience in private Families, ſtill depending upon the Parochial Churches, and differing from them in this, That they were only Places of Prayer, but not for celebrating the Communion; or if that was at any Time allowed there to private Families, yet at leaſt upon the Great and Solemn Feſtivals, they were to reſort for Communion to the Pariſh Churches. Gratian [c] cites a Canon of the Council of Orleans, which allows ſuch Oratories, but forbids any one to celebrate the Euchariſt there. The ſame Privilege is granted in one of Juſtinian's Novels [d], with the ſame Exception. And ſo I think we are to underſtand that Canon of the Council of Trullo [e], which allows the Clergy to uſe the publick Offices or Liturgy in ſuch Oratories, provided they did it with the Conſent and Approbation of the Biſhop of the Place. For no Mention is made there of adminiſtring the Sacraments in thoſe Places, though the Latin Tranſlations put in the Word Baptizing, which is not in the Original, and is expreſly forbidden in another Canon [f] of the ſame Council, requiring all Perſons to be baptized in the Catholick, that is, Publick Churches. But the Council of Agde [g] in France allows the Euchariſt to be adminiſtred in Private Oratories, except upon Eaſter-Day, or Chriſtmas, or Epiphany, or Aſcenſion, or Pentecoſt, or ſuch other of the greater Feſtivals, and upon theſe too, if they had the Biſhop's Licence and Permiſſion for it. So that in thoſe Ages an Oratory and a Catholick Church ſeem to have differed, as now a Private Chapel and a Parochial Church, though the firſt Ages made no Diſtinction between them.

ANOTHER common Name of Churches is that of Baſilicæ, which we may Engliſh Palaces of the Great King. This Name frequently occurs in St. Ambroſe [h], St. Auſtin [i], St. Jerom [k], Sidonius Apollinaris [l], and other Writers of the fourth and fifth Ages, before which Time we ſcarce meet with it in any Chriſtian Author. For originally the Baſilicæ among the Romans were the Publick Halls, or Courts of Judicature, where the Princes or Magiſtrates ſat to hear and determine Cauſes; and other Buildings of Publick Uſe, ſuch as State-houſes, and Exchanges for Merchants, &c. went by the ſame Name among them. But upon the Converſion of Conſtantine, many of theſe were given to the Church, and turned to another Uſe for Chriſtian Aſſemblies to meet in; as may be collected from that Paſſage in Auſonius [m], where ſpeaking to the Emperor Gratian, he tells him, The Baſilicæ which heretofore were wont to be filled with Men of Buſineſs, were now thronged with Votaries praying for his Safety. By which he muſt needs mean that the Roman Halls or Courts were turned into Chriſtian Churches. And hence, I conceive, the Name Baſilicæ came to be a general Name for Churches in After-Ages. Though I know Durantus and Bona [n] have other Reaſons beſide this for the Appellation, as that it was becauſe Churches were Places where Sacrifice was offered to God the King of all the Earth; or becauſe they were only the more ſtately and magnificent SECT. V. Why called Baſilicæ, and ἀνάκτορα.

[x] Euſeb. lib. 9. c. 9. ὃ μὲ σωιόδους ἐπικελεῦον ποιεῖῶς, ἀλ' οἴκους ἐκκλησιῶν οἰκοδομεῖν, &c. See lib. 8. c. 13.

[y] Conc. Tolet. 2. can. 1. De his quos voluntas Parentum à primis infantiæ annis in Clericatus Officio vel Monachali poſuit, pariter ſtatuimus obſervandum, ut in Domo Eccleſiæ ſub Epiſcopali præſentia à Præpoſito ſibi debeant erudiri. [z] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 3. It. de Laud. Conſtant. cap. 17. De Vit. Conſt. lib. 3. c. 48. [a] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 18, 19. [b] Sozom. lib. 2. c. 5. [c] Gratian. de Conſecrat. Diſt. 1. c. 33. Unicuique Fidelium in domo ſua Oratorium licet habere, & ibi orare: Miſſas autem ibi celebrare non licet. [d] Juſtin. Novel. 58. [e] Conc. Trull. c. 31. τοὺ ἐν τοῖς εὐκτηρίοις οἴκοις ἔνδον οἰκίας τυγχάνουσι λειτυργοῦντας κληρικούς, ὡὸ γνώμῳ τοῦτο ποιεῖσθαι τοῦ κατὰ τόπον ἐπισκόπου. [f] Conc. Trull. c. 58. al. 59. μηδαμῶς ἐν εὐκτηρίῳ οἴκῳ ἔνδον οἰκίας τυγχάνοντι βάπτισμα ἐπιτελεῖσθω, &c. [g] Conc. Agathen. can. 21. Si quis etiam extra Parochias, in quibus legitimus eſt ordinariuſque Conventus. Oratorium in agro habuerit, reliquis Feſtivitatibus ut ibi miſſas teneat propter fatigationem Familiæ juſta Ordinatione permittimus: Paſcha vero, Natali Domini, Epiphania Domini, Aſcenſione Domini, Pentecoſte, & Natali S. Johannis Baptiſtæ, & ſi qui maximi dies in Feſtivitatibus habentur, non niſi in Civitatibus aut in Parochiis teneant, &c. [h] Ambroſ. Ep. 33. ad Marcellinam de tradendis Baſilicis. [i] Aug. de Diverſis Serm. 12 & 122. [k] Hieron. Ep. 7. ad Lætam. Ep. 53. ad Riparium. [l] Sidon. lib. 5. Ep. 17. Euſeb. in his Panegyrick, c. 9. uſes the Greek Name, Ἀνάκτορον. [m] Auſon. Gratian. Actio ad Gratian. pro Conſulatu, p. 190. Baſilica olim negotiis plena, nunc Votis Votiſque pro tua ſalute ſuſceptis. [n] Durant. de Ritib. Eccl. lib. 1. 4. 1. n. 9. Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 19. n. 4.

Churches

Churches which had the Title; which is not true in Fact, for ever ſince it came firſt into Uſe, it appears to have been the common Name of all Churches.

SECT. VI. When firſt called Temples.

THE like Obſervation is to be made upon the Name, Temples, which for the three firſt Ages is ſcarce ever [o] uſed by any Chriſtian Writer for a Church, but only for the Heathen Temples, which were Receptacles of Idols, and Cloyſters of their Gods. But when Idolatry was deſtroyed, and Statues every where demoliſhed, and Temples purged and conſecrated into Chriſtian Churches, then the Writers of the following Ages make no Scruple to give them the Name of Temples. As when St. Ambroſe [p] ſays, He could not deliver up the Temple of God, he certainly means the Church, and not an Idol-Temple. So does alſo Lactantius [q], when he ſays, he taught Oratory in Bithynia, when the Temple of God was deſtroyed; meaning the Church of Nicomedia, which was the firſt that was demoliſhed in the Dioclefian Perſecution. Euſebius ſpeaking of the Churches that were rebuilt after that Perſecution was over, gives them [r] the Name of Temples, and particularly the Church built by Paulinus, he calls the Temple of Tyre [ſ]. Not to mention other Paſſages of Chryſoſtom [t], Theodoret [u], Prudentius [w], St. Hilary [x], St. Auſtin [y], and a thouſand more to the ſame Purpoſe; which ſhew that they had no averſion to the Name Temple, when they could ſafely uſe it without Ambiguity, and not be miſtaken to mean the Temples of the Heathen. But from the Name Phanum they more religiouſly abſtained, and never uſed it, unleſs it were by way of Contempt, to ſignify their Reſentments againſt ſome Conventicle of Hereticks, whom they uſually put into the ſame Claſs with Heathens. As we may obſerve in St. Ambroſe [z], who having occaſion to ſpeak of a Conventicle of the Valentinians, will not vouchſafe it the Name of a Temple, or a Church, but a Phanum; a Name always appropriated to the Idol-Temples of the Heathens, with whom he parallels the Valentinians, as no better than a Pack of Idolatrous Gentiles met together, for they worſhipped Idols and Images as the Heathen did.

SECT. VII. Churches ſometimes called Synodi, Concilia, Conciliabula, Conventicula.

THERE is one general Name more for Churches, which I muſt not omit, becauſe the Ambiguity of the Expreſſion has led ſome Learned Men into ſtrange Miſtakes about it. Conſtantine in one of his Laws in the Theodoſian [a] Code calls the Church Sanctiſſimum Catholicæ Concilium, which Alciat the great Lawyer by miſtake interprets an Eccleſiaſtical Synod; whereas indeed, as Gothofred rightly obſerves, it ſignifies there the Church, as in many other Places of the antient Writers. For theſe Words, Concilium, Synodus, Conventiculum, Conciliabulum, and the like, are Words of various Acceptation. For though they commonly ſignify Eccleſiaſtical Synods and Councils, yet ſometimes they denote other Aſſemblies of the Church for Divine Service, and thence the Name was transferred from the Aſſembly to denote the Place of the Aſſembly, or the Church, as has been obſerved before upon the Word Eccleſia. Thus when St. Jerom commends Nepotian for adorning the Conciliabula Martyrum with Flowers and Branches, he cannot mean Councils of Martyrs, but Churches called by the Names of Martyrs [b]. And ſo again when he ſays, the Perſecutors Rage and Barbarity was ſo exceeding fierce againſt us, that they proceeded to deſtroy our Conciliabula, it is evident he means the Chriſtian Churches [c]. As Gaudentius muſt be underſtood in one of his Sermons upon the Dedication of a Church [d] which is called Concilium Martyrum. The Church-Aſſembly it ſelf is often called by the ſame Name Concilium. As in the Paſſion of Cyprian, written by Pontius his Deacon [e], the Chriſtians are commanded by the Emperor to leave off their Conciliabula, or Meetings and Aſſemblies in the Cemiteries for the Worſhip of God. So the Word is uſed by St. Jerom [f] ſpeaking of the Monks meeting in the Church for Divine Service; and by Tertullian [g] for any Church-Aſſembly, when he ſays, the Book of Hermes Paſtor was reckoned to be Apocryphal by the univerſal Conſent of every Aſſembly of the Chriſtian Catholick Churches. Now what the Latins call Concilia, the Greeks call σύνοδοι, and therefore it is obſervable, that the Stile of the Imperial Edicts, which in the Paſſion of Cyprian forbids Chriſtians Conciliabula facere, is in Euſebius [h] συν-[o] Ignatius, Ep. ad. Magneſ. n. 7. once uſes the Name with ſome Reſtriction, calling the Church ναὸν θεοῦ, the Temple of God.

[p] Ambroſ. Ep. 33. ad Marcellin. Reſpondi quod erat Ordinis, Templum Dei tradi à Sacerdote non poſſe. [q] Lactant. lib. 5. c. 2. Cum ego in Bithynia Literas Oratorias accitus docerem, contigiſſetque ut eodem tempore Dei Templum everteretur, &c. [r] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 2. νεὼς, οὗτις ἐκ βάθρων εἰς ὕψος ἄπειρον ἐγειρομένους. [ſ] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. ἐν Τύρῳ νεὼς, &c. [t] Chryſoſt. Hom. 4. de Verbis Eſaiæ. Tom. 3. p. 865. [u] Theodor. Hiſt. lib. 1. c. 31.
[w] Prudent. Paſſio Laurentii & Hippolyti. [x] Hilar. Com. in Pſalm. 126. [y] Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. 8. c. 27.
[z] Ambroſ. Ep. 29. ad Theodoſ. Vindicabitur etiam Valentinianorum Phanum incenſum? Quid enim eſt niſi Phanum, in quo eſt Conventus Gentilium? [a] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 2. de Epiſc. leg. 4. [b] Hieron. Ep. 3. Epitaph. Nepotian. Quod Baſilicas Eccleſiæ & Martyrum Conciliabula diverſis floribus & arborum comis, vitiumque pampinis adumbrarit, &c. [c] Hieron. Com. in Zechar. cap. 8. In tantam rabiem Perſecutorum feritas excitata eſt, ut etiam Conciliabula noſtra deſtruerent.
[d] Gaudent. Serm. 17. in Dedicatione Baſilicæ Martyrum.
[e] Pontii Paſſ. Cypr. Juſſum eſt, ut nulla Conciliabula faciant, neque Cœmiteria ingrediantur. [f] Hieron. Ep. 22. ad Euſtoch. c. 15. Poſt hoc Concilium ſolvitur, & unaquæque Decuria cum ſuo Parente pergit ad menſam. [g] Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 10. Cederem tibi, ſi Scriptura Paſtoris non ab omni Concilio Eccleſiarum etiam veſtrarum inter Apocrypha & falſa judicaretur. [h] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 11. Vid. lib. 9. c. 2 & 9.

δόσιν ποιᾶδζ, which is a Prohibition not of Eccleſiaſtical Synods, but of all Church-Aſſemblies. For Synodus and Eccleſia, as Chryſoſtom [i] obſerves, are Words of the very ſame import and ſignification, and therefore the one may denote a Church, or Church-Aſſembly, as well as the other. And becauſe the Latin Name Conventiculum in its Original Notation, ſignifies no more than an Aſſembly, it is frequently uſed by ancient Writers for a Church: As by Lactantius [k], who ſpeaking of the Perſecutors in the Time of Diocleſian, ſays, They were eagerly ſet upon ſhedding Chriſtian Blood; for one of them in Phrygia burned a whole People together with their Conventiculum, or Church, where they were met together. And Arnobius [l] expreſſes himſelf in the ſame manner, making a like Complaint, "Why did our Bibles "deſerve to be thrown into the Flames? Why "did our Churches, our Conventicula, deſerve to "be ſo barbarouſly pulled down? By which it appears that the Name Conventicula was not as yet appropriated to Heretical Meetings, but when the Ancients had Occaſion to ſpeak of them, they commonly joined the Epithet of Heretical to them, to diſtinguiſh them from the Catholick Churches, as may be ſeen in ſeveral Laws of Theodoſius [m], and Arcadius, and Honorius in the Theodoſian Code.

SECT. VIII. Why ſome Churches called Martyria, Memoriæ, Apoſtoleia, and Propheteia.

ALL theſe were general Names of Churches: But there were ſome which had particular Appellations given them upon Reaſons which could not extend to all. And it will not be amiſs in our Paſſage to take Notice of them alſo. Such as were built over the Grave of any Martyr, or called by his Name to preſerve the Memory of him, had uſually the diſtinguiſhing Title of Martyrium, or Confeſſio, or Memoria given them for that particular Reaſon. Thus Euſebius [n] obſerves of Conſtantine, That he adorned his new City of Conſtantinople with many Oratories and ample Martyries, by which he at once did Honour to the Memory of the Martyrs, and as it were conſecrated his City to the God of the Martyrs. And from this Time in all Chriſtian Writers of the following Ages, a Martyry is always put to ſignify ſuch a Church. Socrates ſpeaks [o] of the Martyry of Thomas the Apoſtle at Edeſſa, and of Peter and Paul [p] at Rome, and of the Martyry of Euphemia [q] at Chalcedon, where the Body of that Martyr lay buried, which was the Church where the famous Council of Chalcedon was held, whence in the Acts of that Council it is ſo often ſtiled μαρτύριον Εὐφημίας, the Martyry of Euphemia. And upon the ſame Reaſon, becauſe our Saviour Chriſt was the chief Sufferer, and great Martyr of his own Religion, therefore the Church which Conſtantine built at Mount Golgotha in Memory of his Paſſion and Reſurrection, is uſally by Euſebius [r] and others ſtiled Martyrium Salvatoris, the Martyry of our Saviour, of which the Reader that pleaſes may find a more ample Account given by the Learned Valeſius in a particular Diſſertation [ſ] about it at the End of Euſebius's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. The Latins inſtead of Martyrium commonly uſe the Name of Memoria Martyrum for ſuch kind of Churches. As in that noted Paſſage of St. Auſtin [t], where he ſays, We do not build Temples to our Martyrs as Gods, but only Memorials of them, as dead Men, whoſe Spirits ſtill live with God, nor do we erect Altars to them in thoſe Memorials, or offer Sacrifice thereon to our Martyrs, but to the only God, both theirs and ours. So that when St. Auſtin in another Place [u] commends Eradius his Presbyter for building a Memorial of an Holy Martyr at his own Expence, we are to underſtand, not a Monument, or a Sepulchre, but a Church. And ſo the Name is uſed by Optatus [w] and ſeveral others. But if the Perſon, in Memory of whom the Church was built, was either a Prophet, or an Apoſtle, then the Church reſpectively took the Name of Ἀποστολεῖον or Προφητεῖον. As we may ſee in Sozomen [x], who ſpeaks of the Apoſtoleum of Peter in Rome; and again of the Apoſtoleum of Peter and Paul at Quercus in the Suburbs of Chalcedon, which Ruffin the great States-man under Arcadius built to the Honour of the Apoſtles, and called it [y] an Apoſtoleum from them. So in the Council of Conſtantinople under Mennas there is mention [z] made of the Propheteum of St. Eſaias the Prophet; as alſo in Theodorus Lector [a], who ſays, the Reliques of Samuel the Prophet were laid up ἐν τῷ προφητείῳ αὐτοῦ, in his Propheteum, which can mean nothing elſe but Churches called by their Names, as Valeſius rightly expounds it.

[i] Chryſoſt. Hom. in Pſal. 149. Tom. 3. p. 632. Ἐκκλησία συστήματός ἐστι καὶ σωμοῦ τὸ ὄνομα. [k] Lactant. lib. 5. c. 11. Aliqui ad occidendum præcipites exiterunt, ſicut unus in Phrygia, qui univerſum Populum cum ipſo pariter Conventiculo concremavit. [l] Arnob. cont. Gent. lib. 4. p. 152. Noſtra quidem Scripta cur ignibus meruerunt dari? Cur immaniter Conventicula dirui? in quibus ſummus oratur Deus, &c. Item Ambroſiaſter in Epheſ. 4. p. 948. Ubi omnia loca circumplexa eſt Eccleſia, Conventicula conſtituta ſunt, & Rectores & cætera Officia in Eccleſiis ordinata ſunt. [m] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 5. de Hæreticis. leg. 10. A Conventiculis ſuis Hæreticæ Superſtitionis turba propulſetur. It. lib. 16. tit. 4. leg. 4. [n] Euſeb. de Vit. Conſtant. lib. 3. c. 48. ἐυκτηρίοις πλείοσιν, μαρτυρίοις τε μιμήσοις. [o] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 18. [p] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 23. [q] Id. lib. 6. c. 6. [r] Euſeb. lib. 4. de Vit. Conſtant. c. 40. [ſ] Valeſii Epiſtola de Anaſtaſi & Martyrio Hieroſolymitano. [t] Aug. de Civ. Dei lib. 22. c. 10. Nos Martyribus noſtris non Templa ſicut Diis, ſed Memorias ſicut hominibus mortuis, quorum apud Deum vivunt Spiritus, fabricamus; nec ibi erigimus altaria, in quibus ſacrificemus Martyribus, ſed uni Deo & Martyrum & noſtro. [u] Aug. Hom. 50. de Diverſis. Tom. 10. p. 522. De opera ejus & expenſa pecunia Memoriam ſancti Martyris habemus. [w] Optat. cont. Parmen. lib. 2. p. 1. Præſentes ſunt ibi duorum Memoriæ Apoſtolorum, &c. [x] Sozom. lib. 9. c. 10. ἤγαγε εἰς τὸ Ρέτεξ Ἀποστολεῖον, &c. [y] Id. lib. 8. c. 17. Ἀποστολεῖον δὲ ἐυτῶν ὠνόμασε. [z] Conc. Conſtant. ſub Menna. Act. 3. Tom. 5. p. 67. [a] Theodor. Lector. lib. 2. p. 568.

SECT. IX. Why called Cœmiteria, and Menſæ, and Areæ.

MUCH the like Account is to be given of two other Names, Cœmiterium, and Menſa, which we find ſometimes uſed to ſignify Churches. The Chriſtians in times of Perſecution were uſed to meet in private Vaults, or Burying-places, and eſpecially at the Graves, or Monuments, of their Martyrs; as is evident both from the Canons of the Council of Eliberis [b], which was held in the Heat of the Dioclefian Perſecution, and often ſpeaks of their aſſembling in ſuch Places; as alſo from the Edicts of the Perſecuting Emperors, forbidding Chriſtians to hold Aſſemblies in their Cœmiteries, as has has been noted [*] before. Now when the Perſecutions were over, Churches were actually erected over the Graves of the Martyrs, and in the Places where the Cœmiteries were, and ſo a Cœmitery, or a Grave, of a Martyr came to be uſed for the Name of a Church. Thus in the Writings of St. Auſtin there is frequent Mention of a Church called Menſa Cypriani, where St. Auſtin preached ſeveral [c] of his Sermons. This was the Place where Cyprian ſuffered Martyrdom, which being the Altar on which Cyprian was offered a Sacrifice to God, a Church was afterward built there, and an Altar, or Communion-Table, erected therein, for the Chriſtian Sacrifice to be offered to God: And both theſe being a Memorial of Cyprian's Paſſion, they were jointly called by his Name [d] Menſa Cypriani, Cyprian's Altar, or Cyprian's Church. For though it primarily ſignifies the Altar, yet it is plain it was extended to be the Name of the Church alſo, where St. Auſtin preached ſo many Sermons on Cyprian's Day to the People of Carthage. The Name Cœmitery continued alſo to be uſed in After-Ages for a Church: As appears from one of the Canons of the Council [e] of Laodicea, which forbids Catholicks to frequent the Cœmiteries or Martyries of Hereticks, upon Pretence of Prayer, or Divine Service. St. Chryſoſtom often uſes the Word τάφοι μαρτύρων, Sepulchres of Martyrs, for Churches. As where he ſays [f], "One "might ſee whole Cities running to the Monu- "ments of the Martyrs. And again [g], "We "depart not from their Sepulchres; here Kings "lay aſide their Crowns, and continue praying "for Deliverance from Dangers, and for Victo- "ry over their Enemies. Nay he triumphs in this both over Jews and Gentiles, "That the "Apoſtles in their Deaths were more honoura- "ble than the greateſt Kings upon Earth: For "even at Rome [h], the Royal City, Emperors, "and Conſuls, and Generals left all, and ran to "the Sepulchres of the Fiſherman and Tent- "maker: And at Conſtantinople it was thought "Honour enough by thoſe that wore the Dia- "dem, to lie buried not with the Apoſtles, but "before their Porches, and Kings themſelves "were the Fiſhermens Door-keepers. In all which Places, it is evident, he means Churches by the Sepulchres of the Apoſtles. And ſo Athanaſius [i], and Socrates, and others take the Word Cœmitery for a Church. And perhaps St. Jerom intends the ſame by the Sepulchres of the Martyrs, when he ſays [k] "It was his Cuſtom "when he was a Boy at School in Rome, on "Sundays to go about and viſit the Sepulchres "of the Apoſtles and Martyrs: But I will not be poſitive of this, becauſe he joins the Cryptæ, or Suterraneous Vaults, with them, which in his Time were not Churches; though they were in Tertullian's Time, who calls them Areæ [l] Sepulturarum, telling us, That Hilarian the Perſecutor forbad them to hold Aſſemblies there: But this was remarkably puniſhed by the Providence of God: For they who denied the Chriſtians the Liberty of their Areæ, had their own Areæ, meaning their Store-houſes, or Barn-Floors (which is another Signification of the Word Area) taken from them: For they had no Harveſt that Year by the juſt Judgment of God upon them. The Reader will meet with the Name Area for a Place of Prayer in the Acts of Purgation of Cecilian [m] Biſhop of Carthage, and other Records of that [n] Age of Perſecutions, when they were forced to fly from their Churches above Ground, to their Vaults underneath, and make a Sort of Temporary Churches of them.

SECT. X. Why Caſæ, Trophæa, and Tituli.

CASA is another Name in the ſame Acts of Purgation of Cecilian and Felix, which I take to be the Name of a Church alſo [o]. For though it might be ſomething doubt-

[b] Conc. Eliber. c. 34. Cereos in Cœmiteriis per diem placuit non incendi, &c. It. can. 35. Placuit prohiberi, ne fœminæ in Cœmiterio pervigilent, eo quod ſæpe ſub obtentu Orationis ſcelera latentur committant. [*] See Sect. 7. Vid. Onuphrium de Cœmiteriis, cap. 11. [c] See Serm. 94 & 237. de Diverſis. Serm. 26. ex Editis a Sirmondo. Ser. 38 & 80. in Pſal. All Preached ad Menſam Cypriani. [d] Aug. Ser. 113. de Diverſis. Sicut noſtris, quicunque Carthaginem noſtris, in eodem loco Menſa Deo conſtructa eſt, tamen Menſa dicitur Cypriani, non quia ibi eſt unquam Cyprianus epulatus, ſed quia ibi eſt immolatus, & quia ipſa immolatione ſua paravit hanc Menſam, non in qua paſcat ſive paſcatur, ſed in qua Sacrificium Deo, cui & ipſe oblatus eſt, offeratur. [e] Conc. Laodic. can. 9. περὶ τῶ μὴ συγχωρεῖν εἰς τὸ κοιμητήεια, ἢ εἰς τὰ λεγόμενα μαρτύεια πάντων τῶν αἱρετικῶν τοῦ τ ἐκκλησίας, ευκῆς ἢ θεραπείας ἕνεκα, ἀπιέναι. [f] Chryſ. Com. in Pſal. 115. Tom. 3. p. 404. σκόπει ὡ ὅπ τ μαρτύρων τοῦ τάφους τὰς πόλεις σωρεχέσας. [g] Id. Hom. 1. in Pſal. 48. ibid. p. 812. ἐκ ἀναχωρεῖμεν τ τάφων αὐτῶν, &c. [h] Chryſ. Demonſtr. Quod Chriſtus ſit Deus, Tom. 5. p. 839. [i] Athan. Apol. 2. ap. Socrat. lib. 2. c. 28. [k] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. c. 40. Dum eſſem Romæ puer, & liberalibus ſtudiis erudirer, ſolebam cum cæteris ejuſdem ætatis & propoſiti, diebus Dominicis Sepulchra Apoſtolorum & Martyrum circuire, crebróque Cryptas ingredi, &c. [l] Tertul. ad Scapul. c. 3. Sicut ſub Hilariano Præſide, cum de Areis Sepulturarum noſtrarum adclamaſſent, Areæ non ſint: Areæ ipſorum non fuerunt: Meſſes enim ſuas non egerunt. [m] Geſta Purgat. Cæcilian. ad Calcem Optati, p. 272. Cives in Area Martyrum fuerunt incluſi. Item p. 277. Tollat aliquis de veſtris in Aream ubi orationes facitis. [n] Vide Acta Concilii Cirtenſis ap. Baron. an. 303. n. 24. Paſſio Cypriani. Ejus corpus poſitum eſt in Areis Macrobii Candidi. [o] Geſta purgat. p. 272. Nunquid Populus Dei ibi fuit? Saturninus dixit, in Caſa majore fuit incluſus. It. p. 274. Præſens cum populo incluſus in Caſa majore.

ful from that Place alone, yet finding it ſo uſed in other Authors, I conclude it was one of the antient Names of their Churches. For Bede tells us [p], "The Town of St. Martins in Berni- "cia, a Province of Britain, came to be vul- "garly called Candida Caſa, Whitern, or Whit- "church, from the Church of Stone which Bi- "ſhop Ninyas built in it. And I leave it as a Query, Whether Caſæ Nigræ in Africk, where Donatus was Biſhop, be not beholden to ſome ſuch Circumſtance for its Denomination alſo? But why Churches ſhould be called Caſæ, is not very eaſy to conjecture. 'Till a better Reaſon can be found, let us ſuppoſe it to be from the Plainneſs and Simplicity of them, of which we ſhall have ſomething more to ſay in the next Chapter. Mr. Mede has obſerved another Name for Churches (which is not very common) in Caius Romanus, an ancient Writer, in Euſebius, who uſes the Term Trophæa Apoſtolorum, as Mr. Mede conjectures, to denote two Churches of St. Peter and St. Paul in Rome [q]. But I confeſs there is ſome Reaſon to queſtion, whether in that Place it means Churches, and not rather the Monuments or Sepulchres of thoſe Apoſtles. For Euſebius is only ſpeaking of their Bodies being buried at Rome; to confirm which Opinion he quotes that antient Writer in theſe Words; "We can yet [r] ſhew the Trophies "of the Apoſtles; for whether you go to the "Vatican, or the Via Oſtienſis, you may there "ſee the Trophies of thoſe who founded this "Church: Meaning the Church of Rome, which was founded by St. Peter and St. Paul, whoſe Sepulchres were then to be ſeen, the former in the Vatican Hill, and the other in the Way from Oſtia to Rome. However in After-Ages, when Churches were built over their Sepulchres, then their Trophies became a Name for thoſe Churches, as we may learn from thoſe Words of St. Jerom [s] to Marcella, who lived at Rome: "You have there an Holy Church, "you have there the Trophies of the Apoſtles "and Martyrs. For now 'tis certain their Sepulchres were advanced into Churches, and both together called Trophies, as being manifeſt Tokens and Evidences of the Victory which they had gained over their Enemies, by Reſiſting unto Blood, and Triumphing after Death. There is yet another Name, of which it is not eaſy to give ſo exact an Account: That is, Why ſome Churches had the Name of Tituli given them peculiarly in Rome. In the Pontifical, in the Life of Marcellus [t], it is ſaid of him, That he appointed Twenty Five Tituli in Rome, for the Convenience of baptizing new Converts. And in the ſame Place one Lucina, a Widow, is ſaid to have dedicated her Houſe [u] to be made a Titulus or Church, where they worſhiped Chriſt Day and Night with Prayers and Hymns, till Maxentius the Tyrant hearing of it, turned the Church into a Stable, and forced Marcellus to be the Keeper of it. Theſe are ſuppoſed to be the ſame as Pariſh Churches, erected for the Convenience of adminiſtring Divine Offices, as the Multitude of Converts encreaſed in Rome. But why they were called Tituli, is not exactly agreed among learned Men. Baronius [w] will have them to be ſo called, becauſe they had the Sign of the Croſs upon them, by which Sign or Title they were known to belong to Chriſt, as Things which belonged to the Emperor's Exchequer were known to be his by an appendant Veil, which had either his Image, or his Name, by way of Title, inſcribed upon it. But it does not appear that the Sign of the Croſs was ſo early fix'd upon Churches; or if it were, that it was the peculiar Diſtinction of a Pariſh-Church; for no doubt the Cathedral, or Biſhop's Church, had that Sign as ſoon as any others. Mr. Mede [x] offers two other Reaſons, and leaves the Reader to determine, whether they were ſo called, becauſe by their Dedication the Name of Chriſt our Lord was as it were inſcribed upon them, as the Manner then was to ſet the Names or Titles of the Owners upon their Houſes and Poſſeſſions; and ſo it would concur in Notion with thoſe other Names of Κυριακὸν and Baſilica, the Lord's, and the King's; or whether becauſe they gave a Title of Cure, or Denomination to the Presbyters to whom they were committed. This laſt I take to be the true Reaſon of the Name, till one more probable can be thought of. As to the Fancy of Onuphrius, that the Number of theſe Tituli [y] was exactly the ſame with that of Cardinal-Presbyters now, and never exceeding the Number of Twenty Eight, it is an Imagination without ground: For Optatus ſpeaks of above Forty Churches in Rome before the Time of the laſt Perſecution, as I ſhall have Occaſion to ſhew more fully in the next Book.

SECT. XI.

Of Tabernacles, and Minſters, and ſome other leſs uſual Names of Churches.

THERE are ſeveral other leſs uſual Names of Churches in antient Writers, which I need not ſtand upon. Such as Limina Martyrum, the Houſes of the Martyrs, uſed [z] by St. Jerom; σηκὸς and τέμενος, Words

[p] Bed. Hiſt. lib. 3. c. 4. Qui locus ad Provinciam Bernicioruin pertinens, vulgo vocatur, Ad Candidam Caſam, eo quod ibi Eccleſiam de lapide, inſolito Britonibus more, fecerit.
[q] Mede's Diſcourſe of Churches, p. 328. [r] Euſeb. lib. 2. c. 25. ἐγὼ δ' τὰ τρόπαια τῶν Ἀποστόλων ἔχω δεῖξαι, &c. [s] Hieron. Ep. 18. ad Marcellam. Eſt quidem tibi ſancta Eccleſia, ſunt Trophæa Apoſtolorum & Martyrum. So Gildas de Excid. Britan. & Bede Hiſt. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 8. call them ſigna Victricia Martyrum. Euſebius de Laud. Conſtant. c. 17. τρόπαια νικητήρια. [t] Pontifical. Vit. Marcelli: Hic fecit Cœmiterium Via Salaria, & viginti quinque Titulos in Urbe Roma conſtituit, quaſi Diœceſes, propter Baptiſmum & pœnitentiam multorum, qui convertebantur ex Paganis, & propter Sepulturas Martyrum. [u] Pontifical. ibid. Lucina domum ſuam nomine Tituli beati Marcelli dedicavit. ubi die noctuque hymnis & orationibus Domino Jeſu Chriſto confitebantur, &c. Vid. Pii Epiſt. 2. ad Juſtum Vien. Presbyter Paſtor Titulum condidit. &c. [w] Baron. an. 112. n. 6. [x] Mede's Diſc. of Churches, p. 328. [y] Onuphr. Interpret. Vocum Eccleſiaſtic. p. 91. [z] Hieron. Ep. 15. ad Marcellam.

of

of the ſame Import with Temple, which we ſometimes meet with in Theodoret [a], Syneſius [b], and Evagrius [c]. In Euſebius Domus Synaxeos [d] ſometimes occurs in the Reſcripts of Heathen Emperors for Chriſtian Churches, which ſignifies no more but Houſes of Aſſembly. Chryſoſtom ſtiles them the Seat of Doctrine [e] from the Exerciſe of Preaching therein. And many ſuch Names are to be met with, which need no Explication. But there are two Names more uſed by Euſebius, which ſome Learned Men have greatly miſtaken. In one Place, ſpeaking of the Therapeutæ in Egypt, whom he reckons the firſt Chriſtians converted by St. Mark, and deſcribed covertly by Philo-Judæus, he gives their Churches the Names of σεμνεῖα and μοναστήρια, which ſome miſtake for Monaſteries in the Modern Senſe; whereas Euſebius [f] ſays expreſly, it was the Name which Philo gave, not to their Habitations, but their Churches. For, ſays he, Philo having deſcribed their Habitations, afterward ſpeaks thus of their Churches in that Region: "In every one of their Dwellings there is a "Sacred Houſe or Chapel, which they call their "Semneum or Monaſtery, where they perform "the Religious Myſteries proper to their holy "Life. For hither they bring nothing ever of "Meat, or Drink, or other Bodily Neceſſaries, "but only their Laws, and inſpired Oracles of "their Prophets, their Hymns, and whatever "elſe tends to augment and conſummate a Life "of Piety and Knowledge." This is not the Deſcription of a Monaſtery in the Modern Senſe, but of a Church, and ſo we ſee the Name was firſt uſed, as it is at this Day among the Germans, who hence call ſome of their Churches Munſters, as we do Minſters, which were heretofore Collegiate Churches and Schools of Learning, like St. Auſtin's Monaſtery-Church, of which I have given an Account in the former Book. This is farther confirmed, becauſe Euſebius joins the Name σεμνεῖον to Monaſtery to explain it, which by the beſt Criticks, antient and modern, Heſychius, Budæus, Suicerus and others, is reckoned to ſignify a Temple or Place of Divine Service. Euſebius has yet another Name for a Church, which I mention only becauſe it is liable to the ſame Miſtake. He gives it the Name of Tabernacle: Which is only a private Appellation, belonging peculiarly to moveable, or travelling Churches. For Euſebius ſpeaking of Conſtantine's intended Expedition againſt the Perſians, ſays, "That among his other Preparations for that "War, he erected himſelf [g] a Tent, or Tabernacle, in the Form of a Church, in which "he might continually make his Supplications "to God, the Giver of Victory, with the Biſhops and Clergy that were to attend him in "his Expedition." Socrates [h] ſpeaking of the ſame Thing, compares it to the Tabernacle that Moſes ſet up in the Wilderneſs, and ſays, "Conſtantine did it, that he might have a decent "and convenient Oratory, εὐκτήριον ἡυτρεπισμένον, in the moſt deſert and barbarous Places "through which he was to travel." And from this Example, as Sozomen [i] obſerves, it became a Cuſtom throughout the Roman Army, for every Legion to have their Tabernacle, and Prieſts, and Deacons appointed to attend the Service of it.

SECT. XII. Of the Diſtinction between Eccleſia Matrix and Diœceſana.

WHILST I am upon this Head, it will not be amiſs to give the Reader an Account of two other Words, which have ſome Relation to this Subject, and by their Ambiguity are often miſtaken and confounded, that is, Eccleſia Matrix and Diœceſana, which ſeem to be Words of the ſame Importance, but are often very different from one another. Eccleſia Matrix, a Mother-Church, is ſometimes taken for an Original Church planted immediately by the Apoſtles, whence others were derived and propagated afterward. So Tertullian [k] calls thoſe Churches, to which the Apoſtles preached either viva voce, or by their Epiſtles, by which all Doctrines are to be judged. And in this Senſe the Church of Jeruſalem is called the Mother of all Churches in the World by the ſecond general Council of Conſtantinople [l]: And Arles the Mother-Church of France, becauſe ſuppoſed to be planted [m] by the Apoſtles Miſſionary, Trophimus, firſt Biſhop of the Place. At other times a Mother-Church denotes a Metropolis, or the Principal Church of a ſingle Province, as in ſome of the African [n] Canons, where Matrix is uſed ſometimes for the Primate's See, to which other Biſhops were to have recourſe for Judgment and Deciſion of Controverſies. But moſt commonly it ſignifies a Cathedral, or Biſhop's-Church, which was uſually termed the Great Church, and the Catholick Church, and the Principal See, in oppoſition to the leſſer Tituli, or Pariſh Churches committed to ſingle Presbyters. Thus in the African Code, the matter is plain, in one Canon every Biſhop is prohibited to alienate, or ſell the Goods of the Mother-Church [o]; and Presby-

[a] Theodor. ſer. de Martyr. [b] Syneſ. Ep. 58. [c] Evagr. lib. 1. c 14. lib. 6. c. 8. [d] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 8. Vid. Geſta Purgationis Cæciliani. [e] Chryſoſt. Hom. 2. in Joh. [f] Euſeb. lib. 2. c. 17. Εἶθ' Ἑξῆς, τὰς οἰκήσεις αὐτῶν ὁποῖαί τίνες ἦσαν διαγράψας, ἐπεὶ καὶ κατὰ χώραν ἐκκλησιῶν ταῦτα σφίσιν. ἐν ἑκάστῃ δ' οἰκίᾳ ἔστιν οἴκημα ἱερὸν, ὃ καλεῖται σεμνεῶν καὶ μοναστήριον. ἐν ᾧ μυούμενοι τὰ τῆς σεμνῆς βίου μυστήρια τελοῦσιν, &c. [g] Euſeb. de Vit. Conſtant. lib. 4. c. 56. Τὴν σκηνὴν τῷ τῆς ἐκκλησίας χήματι πρὸς τὴν ἐκείνε τοῦ πολέμου ἐξέτασιν σὺν πολλῇ φιλοτιμίᾳ κατεσκάζετο. [h] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 18. [i] Sozom. lib. 1. c. 8. [k] Tertul. de Præſcript. c. 21. Conſtat proinde omnem Doctrinam, quæ cum illis Eccleſiis Apoſtolicis Matricibus & Originalibus fidei conſpiret, veritati deputandam. [l] Epiſt. Synodic. ad Damaſum ap. Theodoret. lib. 5. c. 9. τὴ δὲ γε μητρὸς ἁπασῶν τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν τὴν ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις, &c. [m] Libellus Precum Epiſcopor. Gallor. ad Leon. ap. Baron. an. 450. p. 125 Cujus honoris obtentu Eccleſiam Arelatenſem omnes Deceſſores, Prædeceſſoreſque noſtri vel ut Matrem debito ſemper honore coluerunt, &c. [n] Cod. Afric. can. 119. al. 120. μὴ προκριμαλιεῖῃ ἐν τῇ ματρικῇ. Non præjudicetur in Matrice, &c. [o] Cod. Afric. can. 33. Non habente neceſſitatem, nec Epiſcopo liceat Matricis Eccleſiæ, nec Presbytero rem Tituli ſui uſurpare.

ters the Goods belonging to their Titles. The Greek Translation of this Canon is here imperfect and corrupt, as Suicerus [p] has rightly obſerved, and by it Cujacius and others have been led into a Miſtake to expound Matrix by Matricula, the Catalogue or Books of the Church, whereas it means the Cathedral, or Biſhop's Church. As alſo in another Canon [q], which ſays, If any Biſhop is negligent to deal with Hereticks in the Mother-Church, he ſhall be admoniſhed of his Fault by the Neighbouring Biſhops, that he may have no Excuſe. The Mother-Church is here the Biſhop's-Church, or that which required both his Care and Reſidence, as the Principal Church of the Dioceſe. This by Fulgentius Ferrandus [r] is plainly oppoſed to other inferior Churches in the Dioceſe, upon which only Presbyters reſided, both when he ſays, That the Judgment of the Mother-Church ſhall be ſufficient in the Election of a Biſhop: And again, That the Biſhop of the Mother-Church ſhall not uſurp any Thing that is given to the Churches in the Dioceſe. Theſe Churches in the Dioceſe are the ſame as we now call Pariſh-Churches; though they themſelves are ſometimes termed Dioceſes, in the Pontifical [s] and the African [t] Canons; and in ſome other Canons [u] Eccleſiæ Diœceſanæ, Dioceſan Churches; as in the Council of Tarraco, which obliges all Biſhops to viſit their Dioceſes, once a Year; to ſee that no Dioceſan Church, that is, no Church within the Dioceſe, was out of Repair. So that a Mother-Church and a Dioceſan-Church in that ancient Stile, differ'd as now a Cathedral and a Pariſh-Church with us. The Mother-Church being otherwiſe called the Principal See [w], Principalis Cathedra, where the Biſhop was obliged continually to reſide: And ſometimes the Catholick Church, as Valeſius has obſerved [x] out of Epiphanius [y] and Nicephorus [z], in oppoſition to the leſſer Churches that were ſubject to it. Though, as I noted before, the Council of Trullo calls every Baptiſmal Church a Catholick [a] Church, in oppoſition to private Oratories, where Baptiſm was not allowed to be adminiſtred. It was neceſſary for me to be thus particular about the Names of Churches in the Entrance upon this Book, becauſe ſome of them are curious, and others ambiguous, that the Reader might find them explained at once, and not be at a loſs about Terms upon every Occaſion in the following Diſcourſe.

SECT. XIII. Proofs of Churches in the Firſt Century, collected by Mr. Mede.

OUR next Enquiry is into the Original of Churches, that is, when Chriſtians began to ſet them a-part for Divine Service? A very ſingular Paradox has been advanced by ſome Learned Men in theſe laſt Ages, that for the three Firſt Ages the Chriſtians had no ſuch diſtinct Places of Worſhip; grounding upon ſome miſtaken Paſſages of Origen, Minucius Felix, Arnobius and Lactantius, who ſay, The Chriſtians had no Temples; which they take for a Denial of their having any Churches. Which Opinion, tho' advanced with ſome ſhew of Learning by Vedelius [b], Suicerus [c], and others, is altogether without ground, contradicted by the Authors which they allege, and by themſelves who aſſert and maintain it. Mr. Mede has an Elaborate Diſcourſe in confutation of this Opinion, wherein he has learnedly collected the Authorities of the Ancients, which for the three Firſt Ages prove the Being of Chriſtian Churches. I ſhall briefly, for the ſake of thoſe who have not that Author at hand, relate the Subſtance of his Proofs, and add ſome others to his Collections. In the firſt Place he ſhews that the Ancients, St. Auſtin [d], St. Baſil [e], and the Author under the Name of St. Jerom, St. Chryſoſtom, Sedulius, Oecumenius, and Theophylact, in their Comments on that Paſſage of St. Paul, 1 Cor. xi. 22. Have ye not Houſes to eat and drink in? or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? took the Word Church there not for the Aſſembly, but for the Place ſet apart for ſacred Duties. And that the Apoſtles always met together in a certain Place for Prayer and Supplication upon Mount Sion, which was the Hyperoon, or Cœnaculum, the upper Room ſo often mentioned in the Acts of the Apoſtles; where the Apoſtles were aſſembled, when the Holy Ghoſt came upon them, Acts ii. where our Saviour celebrated his laſt Supper; where he appeared to his Diſciples two Sundays one after another after his Reſurrection, Joh. xx. The Place where the Seven Deacons were elected and ordained, Acts vi. And where the firſt Council of Jeruſalem was held, Acts xv. Which Place was afterwards encloſed with a goodly Church, called the Church of Mount Sion, and the upper Church of the Apoſtles in the Time of Cyril [f] Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and St. Jerom [g]. That this was the οἶκος, or Houſe of Aſſembly mentioned Acts ii. 46. where the Apoſtles continued breaking of Bread; that is, celebrating the Euchariſt after their return from the Temple. For he thinks with many other Criticks, that the Word ἐν οἴκῳ, is not to be tranſlated, from Houſe to Houſe, but in the Houſe, or Place where the Aſſembly was uſed to [p] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. voce μάτριξ. [q] Cod. Afr. can. 123. Si in Matricibus Cathredis Epiſcopus negligens fuerit adverſus Hæreticos, conveniatur à vicinis Epiſcopis, &c. [r] Ferrand. Breviat. Canon c. 11. Ut ad eligendum Epiſcopum ſufficiat Matricis arbitrium ex Concil. Septimunicenſi & Concil. Macrianenſi. Item c. 38. Ut Epiſcopus Matricis non uſurpet quicquid fuerit donatum Eccleſiis, quæ in Diœceſi conſtitutæ ſunt. Ex Concil. Hipponiregienſi. [s] Pontifical. Vit. Marcelli. Hic viginti quinque Titulos in Urbe Roma conſtituit, quaſi Diœceſes propter Baptiſmum, &c. [t] Cod. Afric. can. 53 & 56. [u] Conc. Tarracon. can. 8. Reperimus nonnullas Diœceſanas Eccleſias eſſe deſtitutas. Ob quam rem hac Conſtitutione decrevimus, ut annuis vicibus ab Epiſcopo Diœceſes viſitentur. [w] Con. Carthag. 5. c. 5. Placuit, ut nemini ſit facultas relicta Principali Cathedra, ad aliquam Eccleſiam in Diœceſi conſtitutam ſe conferre. [x] Valeſ. Not. in Theodor. Lector. lib. 1. p. 553. [y] Epiphan. Hæreſ. 69. n. 1. [z] Niceph. lib. 22. c. 15. [a] Conc. Trull. c. 58. al. 59. [b] Vedel. Exercit. in Ignat. Ep. ad Epheſ. c. 4. [c] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. voce ναὸς, p. 388. [d] Aug. Quæſt. 57. in Levitic. [e] Baſil. Regul. Major. Q. 30. Regul. Minor. Q. 310. [f] Cyril. Catech. 16. [g] Hieron. Ep. 27. Epitaph. Paulæ.

meet

meet together. His next Argument is drawn from what Euſebius [h] obſerves of the Θεραπευταὶ in Egypt, whether Eſſens or Chriſtians, that they had their σεμνεῖα, or Places appropriated for Divine Worſhip, from the Days of St. Mark. And that ſuch Places are to be underſtood in all thoſe Paſſages of St. Paul, which ſalute [i] the Churches in ſuch or ſuch an Houſe; that is, the Congregations that met in the Houſes of ſuch pious Chriſtians, as had beſtow'd ſome part of their Dwellings, to be an Oratory for the Church to aſſemble in. Such a Cœnaculum is deſcribed by Lucian, or whoever was the Author of the Dialogue called Philopatris, about the Time of Trajan, where he brings in one Critias telling how the Chriſtians carried him into an Hyperoon, the Place of their Aſſembly, with a Deſign to make him a Proſelyte to their Religion. He argues farther, from the Tradition of the Church derived from the antient Author of the Recognitions under the Name of Clemens Romanus, which [k] ſays that Theophilus, to whom St. Luke is ſuppoſed to inſcribe his Goſpel, at Antioch, did convert his Houſe into a Church. And the like is reported of the Houſe of Pudens, a Roman Senator and Martyr, in the Acta Pudentis, that it was turn'd into a Church after his Martyrdom. He concludes this firſt Century with the Teſtimony of Clemens Romanus, in his genuine Epiſtle to the Corinthians, which ſays, [l] That God has ordained as well appropriate Places where, as appropriate Times and Seaſons when and whereby he would be ſolemnly ſerved, that all Things might be done religiouſly, and in order.

SECT. XIV. Proofs in the Second Century.

IN the next Age he ſhews, That Ignatius in his Epiſtle to the Magneſians [m] exhorts them to meet together in one Place, which he calls τὸν ναὸν Θεοῦ, the Temple of God; and in his Epiſtle to the Philadelphians [n] he ſays, there was one Altar to every Church, and one Biſhop with his Presbytery and Deacons. The preſent Greek Copies, indeed, read it a little different from Mr. Mede, leaving out the Word Church, but the mentioning one Altar is ſufficient to intimate they had then a ſtated Place for their Eccleſiaſtical Aſſembly. In the ſame Age Pius Biſhop of Rome wrote two ſhort Epiſtles to Juſtus Biſhop of Vienna in France; in the firſt of which one Euprepia [o], a pious Matron is ſaid to have conſigned the Title of her Houſe over to the Church to celebrate Divine Offices in: And in the other, one Paſtor a Presbyter, is commended for erecting a Titulus, that is, a Church, before his Death [p] Clemens Alexandrinus toward the End of this Century uſes the Name Eccleſia for the Place of the Aſſembly, as well as the Congregation. For ſpeaking of the Church, he ſays, I call not now [q] the Place, but the Congregation of the Elect, the Church. And ſo in his famous Homily, Quis dives ſalvetur, he brings in the Aſian Biſhop, to whom St. John committed the young Man to be trained up in the Chriſtian Diſcipline, complaining, that the Youth was become a Villain and a Robber, and now inſtead of the Church [r] had betaken himſelf to the Mountains, with a Company like himſelf. By this it is plain, that in his Time the Word Eccleſia was taken for a Place of Sacred Aſſembly, as well as for the Aſſembly it ſelf.

SECT. XV. Proofs in the Third Century.

IN the Third Century the Teſtimonies are both more numerous and plain. Tertullian clearly intimates they had Churches, when complaining againſt Chriſtians who followed the Trade of Idol-making for the Gentiles, only excuſing themſelves that they did not worſhip them, he ſays, "The Zeal of Faith [s] cannot but declaim all "the Day long upon this Point, bewailing that "any Chriſtian ſhould come from among his "Idols into the Church, that he ſhould come "into the Houſe of God from the Shop of his "Enemy, and lift up thoſe Hands to God the "Father, which were the Mothers, or Makers, "of Idols." In another Place [t] he calls the Church Domus Columbæ, the Houſe of the Dove, meaning either Chriſt, or his Dove-like Religion, as I have explain'd it [*] before. And again he expreſly diſtinguiſhes between the Baptiſtery and the Church, which, in thoſe Days, were Places ſeparate one from another, ſaying, "When "we are come to the Water [u] to be baptiz'ed, we not only there, but alſo ſomewhat "before in the Church, under the Hand of the "Miniſter, make a publick Declaration, That "we renounce the Devil, and his Pomp, and "his Angels." Tertullian is followed by Hippolytus [w], who deſcribing the Signs of the Coming of Antichriſt, ſays, "The Temples of God "ſhall be as common Houſes, the Churches "ſhall every where be deſtroyed." But I lay no Streſs upon this Paſſage, becauſe the Work is ſpurious, and of later Date than it pretends to be, as Biſhop Uſher has proved, and Combefis confeſſes as much, who publiſhed the genuine Piece of Hippolytus de Chriſto & Antichriſto, where no ſuch Paſſage is to be found [x]. But we have [h] Euſeb. lib. 2. c. 17. [i] See Rom. 16. 3, 5. Coloſ. 4. 15. 1 Cor. 16. 19. Philem. 1, 2. [k] Recognit. lib. 10. n. 71. [l] Clem. Ep. 1. ad Cor. n. 40. [m] Ignat. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 7. [n] Epiſt. ad Philadelph. n. 4. [o] Pii Ep. 1. ad Juſtum. Soror noſtra Euprepia Titulum domus ſuæ Pauperibus aſſignavit; ubi nunc cum Pauperibus noſtris commorantes, Miſſas agimus. [p] Id. Ep. 2. Presbyter Paſtor Titulum condidit, & digne in Domino obiit. [q] Clem. Alex. Strom. 7. ἐ νῦν τὸν τόπον. ἀλλὰ τὸ ἄθροισμα τῶν ἐκκλεκτῶν, ἐκκλησίαν καλῶ. [r] Ap. Euſeb. l. 3. c. 17. & in Bibl. Patrum Combefis. νῦν ἀντὶ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ὄρη καλεῖται, &c. [s] Tertul. de Idol. c. 17. Tota die ad hanc partem zelus fidei perorabit, ingemens Chriſtianum ab Idolis in Eccleſiam venire, de adverſaria officina in Domum Dei venire, attollere ad Deum Patrem manus matres Idolorum. [t] Tertul. adv. Valent. c. 2. [*] See before Sect. 2. [u] Tertul. de Coron. Mil. c. 3. Aquam adituri, ibidem, ſed & aliquanto prius in Eccleſia, ſub Antiſtitis manu, conteſtamur nos renunciare Diabolo, & Pompæ, & Angelis ejus, &c. [w] Hippolyt. de Conſummat. Mundi. Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 346. οἱ ναοὶ τοῦ θεοῦ ὡς οἶκοι ἔσονται, ὃ καταρρᾳὰ τῆς ἐκκλησιῶν παντάχοῦ γενήσονται. [x] Vid. Combefis. Auctuar. Noviſſim. p. 57.

an authentick Teſtimony in the ſame Age, from an Heathen Author. For Lampridius in the Life of Alexander Severus [y] reports of him, "That "there happening a Diſpute between the Chri- "ſtians and the Victuallers, but a certain pub- "lick Place, each Party challenging it as their "own; the Emperor's Reſcript determin'd it "thus in Favour of the Chriſtians, That it was "better that God ſhould be worſhipped there "after any Manner, than that it ſhould be given "up to the Victuallers." About the Middle of this Age lived the famous Gregory of Neocæſarea, ſirnamed Thaumaturgus, who himſelf built ſeveral Churches in Neocæſarea, and the adjacent Parts of Pontus, as Gregory Nyſſen [z] reports in his Life; and alſo wrote a Canonical Epiſtle, wherein are deſcribed the ſeveral Claſſes, or Stations [a] of Penitents, in the reſpective Parts of the Church: But becauſe ſome Learned Men queſtion, whether that Part of his Epiſtle be not rather a Comment and Addition by ſome other Hand, I lay no greater Weight upon it than it will bear, but only obſerve, That the ſame Claſſes of Penitents may be collected from other Canons in that Epiſtle, which are allowed to be Genuine. About the ſame Time St. Cyprian ſpeaks of the Place of their Aſſembly under the Name of Dominicum [b], The Lord's Houſe, as has been noted before; and in another Place oppoſes the Church and the Capitol, the Altar of the Lord, and the Altars of Images and Idol-Gods to one another: For ſpeaking againſt ſome that had lapſed, and without due Penance were for intruding themſelves into the Church again; if this were once permitted, ſays he, "What "then remains [c] but that the Church ſhould "give way to the Capitol, and the Prieſts "withdraw, and take away the Altar of the "Lord with them, and let the Images and Idol- "Gods, with their Altars, ſucceed and take "Poſſeſſion of the Sanctuary, where the vene- "rable Bench of our Clergy ſit?" About this Time alſo Dionyſius, Biſhop of Alexandria, ſpeaks of Churches as appropriate to the Service of God, reſolving this Queſtion, "Whether a Wo- "man in the Time of her Separation might en- "ter [d] into the Houſe of God?" It appears farther from the Reſcript of Gallienus the Emperor, recorded by Euſebius [e], where he reſtores the Chriſtians their Churches, under the Name of τόποι θρησκεύσιμοι, worſhipping Places: And from what has been noted before out of the Letter of Aurelian [f], which chides the Senate for demurring about opening the Sibyllin Books, as if they had been conſulting, not in the Capitol, but in a Chriſtian Church: As alſo that other Reſcript of his in Euſebius [g], which at the Requeſt of the Council of Antioch, ordered Paulus Samoſatenſis to be turned out of the Houſe of the Church. But the Teſtimony of Euſebius goes far beyond all others: For ſpeaking of the peaceable Times, which the Chriſtians enjoyed from the Perſecution of Valerian to that of Diocleſian, he obſerves, "That the Num- "ber of Chriſtians ſo grew and multiplied in "that Fifty Years, that their ancient Churches "were not large enough to receive them, and "therefore they erected from the Foundations "[h], more ample and ſpacious ones in every "City.

SECT. XVI. The Objection from Lactantius and Arnobius anſwer'd.

THE only Objection againſt all this, made with any Colour, is drawn from ſome of the ancient Apologiſts, Origen [ij] Minucius Felix [i], Arnobius [k], and Lactantius [l], who ſeem to ſay, "That the Chriſtians in "their Time had no Temples, or Altars, nor "ought to have any. But, as Mr. Mede ſhews at large, this is only ſpoken againſt ſuch Temples as the Heathens pleaded for, in the Notion of Encloiſtering the Deity by an Idol. For otherwiſe, the very Authors, from whom the Objection is drawn, muſt ſtrangely contradict themſelves. For Arnobius [m] owns they had their Conventicula, Houſes of Aſſembly, which he complains were barbarouſly deſtroyed in the laſt Perſecution. And Lactantius [n] ſays the ſame, giving them alſo the Name of the Temples of God, which Diocleſian order'd to be demoliſh'd, when he taught Oratory in Bithynia. And Origen himſelf ſpeaks [o] of adorning the Chriſtian Churches and Altars, in one of his Homilies upon Joſhua, tranſlated litterally by Ruffin.

SECT. XVII. Some Additional Collections upon this Head.

THUS far Mr. Mede goes in his Collections, and Anſwer to this Objection; to which I ſhall add a few Things which he has not obſerved. Lactantius, in another Place of his Inſtitutions [p], ſpeaks of one of the Chriſtian Conventicula, in a Town in Phrygia, which the Heathen burnt, with the whole Aſſembly in it. And in his Book de Mortibus Perſecutorum, publiſh'd ſince Mr. Mede's Death, he gives a more particular Account of the Deſtruction of Churches throughout the World. For he not only mentions the Demoliſhing the ſtately Church of Nicomedia [q], but intimates that the ſame Fate attended the Churches over all the World. For even in France, where the mild Conſtantius ruled, the Perſecution went ſo far as to pull [y] Lamprid. Vit. Alex. c. 49. Cum Chriſtiani quendam locum, qui publicus fuerat, occupaſſent, contra Popinarii dicerent, ſibi eum deberi; reſcripſit, Imperator, Melius eſſe ut quomodocunque illic Deus colatur, quàm Popinariis dedatur. [z] Greg. Nyſſ. Vit. Greg. Thaumatur. Tom. 3. p. 567. [a] Gregor. Thaumaturg. Epiſt. Canon. c. 11. [b] Cypr. de Oper. & Eleemoſ. See Sect. 2. [c] Cypr. Ep. 55. al. 59. ad Cornel. Quid ſupereſt, quam ut Eccleſia Capitolio cedat, & recedentibus Sacerdotibus, ac Domini Altare removentibus, in Cleri noſtri Sacrum venerandumque Conſeſſum Simulacra atque Idola cum aris ſuis tranſeant? [d] Dionyſ. Ep. Canon. c. 2. [e] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 13. [f] See before Sect. 1. Ex Vopiſco Vit. Aurelian. [g] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 30. cited Sect. 3. [h] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 1. [ij] Origen. cont. Celſum, lib. 8. p. 389. [i] Minuc. Octav. p. 29. [k] Arnob. adv. Gent. lib. 6. [l] Lactant. lib. 2. c. 2. [m] Arnob. lib. 4. p. 152. cited before Sect. 7. [n] Lactant. lib. 5. c. 2. cited Sect. 6. [o] Origen. Homil. 10. in Joſhua. [p] Lact. l. 5. c. 11. [q] Lact. de Mort. Perſecut. c. 13. Illud editiſſimum paucis horis ſolo adæquarunt.

down

down the Churches [r], though the Men, the true Temples of God, were ſpared, and ſheltered under his gentle Government. Lactantius lived in France at this Time, being Tutor to Criſpus the Son of Conſtantine, and Grand-ſon of Conſtantius, and therefore he could not be miſtaken in his Relation. So that we muſt interpret Euſebius by him, when he [s] ſays, "Con-" ſtantius deſtroyed no Churches: That is, He gave no poſitive Orders, as the other Emperors did, to deſtroy them, but he connived at ſuch as pulled them down, in Policy to ſatisfy the other Emperors, and make the Walls compound for the Lives and Safety of the Perſons. However it was, both Euſebius and Lactantius agree in this, That there were Churches in France before the laſt Perſecution. We have the like Account of the Churches of Britain, given by Gildas, who ſays [t] in general of laſt the Perſecution, "That "it occaſioned Churches all over the World to "be deſtroyed, and particularly in Britain; for the "Chriſtians built them new again from the "Ground when the Perſecution [u] was over, "and founded others beſide them, to be as ſo "many publick Monuments and Trophies of "their Martyrs. Optatus [w] takes Notice of Forty Churches in Rome before the laſt Perſecution, which being taken from the Chriſtians, were afterward reſtored to them, by the Order of Maxentius, as St. Auſtin [x] more than once informs us. In Africk we read of ſome Churches that were demoliſhed in this Perſecution, as at Zama and Furni, mentioned in the Geſta [y] Purgationis of Cecilian and Felix. Others were taken away, and in the mean time, 'till they were reſtored again, both Councils, and Church-Aſſemblies, were held in Private Houſes, as Optatus [z] obſerves of the Council of Cirta, and St. Auſtin after him, who ſays, "It was not to "be wonder'd at, that a few Biſhops ſhould "hold a Council [a] in a Private Houſe in the "Heat of Perſecution, when the Martyrs made "no Scruple in the like Caſe to be baptized in "Priſon, and Chriſtians met in Priſon, to cele-"brate the Sacrament with the Martyrs. But not to multiply Inſtances of this Nature, the very Tenor of the Imperial Edicts, which raiſed the laſt Perſecution, is undeniable Evidence, That the Chriſtians in all Parts of the World had then their publick Churches, to which they reſorted ſo long as they had Opportunity to frequent them. For Euſebius [b] ſays, "The "Edicts were ſent over all the World, com-"manding the Churches to be levell'd with the "Ground, and the Bibles to be burnt." Which is alſo noted by Theodoret [c], St. Jerome [d], and the Acts of Purgation of Cecilian and Felix [e], at the End of Optatus. So that a Man might as well queſtion, Whether the Chriſtians had Bibles, as whether they had Churches before the laſt Perſecution. The Defenders of the contrary Opinion here, always give up the Cauſe, and contradict themſelves: For when they have urged the Authority of Arnobius and Lactantius, againſt Chriſtians having any Temples, they are forced to confeſs from the aforeſaid Evidences, That they had Churches whilſt Arnobius and Lactantius lived, that is, within the third Century; which is to grant and deny the ſame Thing, and load both themſelves and thoſe ancient Authors, with a manifeſt Contradiction. To the Teſtimonies cited by Mr. Mede in the Middle of the third Century, the Reader may add that remarkable Story told by Euſebius, concerning the Martyr Marinus, An. 259. in the Time of Gallienus. "Marinus being a Candi-"date for a Roman Office at Cæſarea, was in-"formed againſt as a Chriſtian by an Antagoniſt, "who pleaded, That he ought not to have the "Office upon that ſcore: The Judge upon Ex-"amination finding it to be ſo, gives him three "Hours time to conſider, whether he would "quit his Religion, or his Life. During this "Space, Theotecnus, Biſhop of Cæſarea, meets "with him, and taking him by the Hand, car-"ries him [f] to the Church, and ſets him by "the Holy Table, then offers him a Bible and "a Sword, and bids him take his Choice. He "readily, without any Demur, lays his Hand "upon the Bible; whereupon the Biſhop thus "beſpake him: Adhere, ſays he, adhere to God, "and in his Strength enjoy what thou haſt choſen, "and go in Peace. With this he immediately "returns from the Church to the Judge, makes "his Confeſſion, receives his Sentence, and dies "a Martyr." Who that reads this Story, can queſtion, whether the Worſhipping Places which Gallienus is ſaid a little before [g] to have reſtored to the Chriſtians, were properly Churches, with Holy Tables or Altars in them? To the Teſtimonies cited from Tertullian, may be added one more, where he plainly diſtinguiſhes the Parts of their Churches, as the Diſcipline of their Penitents then required. For, ſpeaking of the Unnatural Sins of Uncleanneſs, he ſays, "All "ſuch [h] Monſters were excluded, not only [r] Ibid. c. 15. Conſtantius, ne diſſentire videretur a majoribus Præceptis, Conventicula, id eſt, Parietes, qui reſtitui poterant, dirui paſſus eſt, verum autem Dei Templum, quod eſt in hominibus, incolume ſervavit. [s] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 13. μήτε τοὺς οἴκους τῶν ἐκκλησιῶν καθελών. [t] Gildas de Excid. Britan. in initio. Ad perſecutionem Diocletiani Tyranni novennem, in qua ſubverſæ per totum mundum ſunt Eccleſiæ, &c. [u] Ibid. Renovant Eccleſias ad ſolum u que deſtructa, Baſilicas ſanctorum Martyrum fundant, conſtruunt, perficiunt, ac veluti victricia ſigna paſſim propalant. Vide Bedæ Hiſt. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 6 & 8. who ſpeaks almoſt in the Words of Gildas. [w] Optat. lib. 2. p. 49. Quadraginta Baſilicas. [x] Aug. Brevic. Collat. 3. die. c. 18. It. lib. poſt Collationem c. 13. [y] Geſta Purgat. p. 276. Et Zama & Furnis dirui Baſilicas & uri Scripturas vidi. [z] Optat. lib. 1. p. 39. Apud Cirtam Civitatem, quia Baſilicæ necdum fuerant reſtitutæ, in domum Urbani Chariſi Conſederunt, &c. [a] Aug. Brevic. Collat. Die 3. c. 17. Non eſſe incredibile, quod in privatam domum pauci illi Epiſcopi Perſecutionis tempore convenerunt, ut fervente Perſecutione etiam in carcere doceantur Baptizati Martyres, & illic à Chriſtianis celebrata Sacramenta, ubi Chriſtiani propter eadem Sacramenta tenebantur incluſi. [b] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 2. [c] Theodor. lib. 5. c. 39. [d] Hieron. Com. in Zecha. cap. 8. [e] Geſta Purgat. p. 277. Ubi Scripturæ inveniuntur, ipſa Domus diruitur. [f] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 15. ὁπὶ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν παραγει, εἶσω τε παρὰ αὐτὸν σήσας τῷ ἁγιάσματι, &c. [g] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 13. [h] Reliquas autem Libidinum furias impias, & in Corpora & in ſexus, ultra jura naturæ, non modo Limine, verum omni Eccleſiæ Tecto ſubmovemus, quia non ſunt delicta, ſed Monſtra. Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 4.

"from

" from the Nave, or Body of the Church, but " from every Part of it; they were obliged to " ſtand without Door in the open Air, and not " allowed to come under the Roof of it. This Diſcipline was in the Church of Antioch, in the Time of Babylas, An. 247, when, according to the Account given by St. Chryſoſtom [i] and Euſebius [k], Babylas excluded the Emperor Philip from the Church, with all his Guards about him, on Eaſter-Eve, and would not ſuffer him to pray with the Faithful, 'till he had ſet himſelf in the Place of the Penitents, μετανοίας χώρα Euſebius calls it, and there made Confeſſion of his Crimes. I ſtand not now critically to enquire into the Truth of this Hiſtory, which ſome Learned Men [l] queſtion, and others defend [m]: It is ſufficient to our preſent Purpoſe, that both Euſebius and St. Chryſoſtom give us ſuch an Account of the antient Churches, as neceſſarily ſuppoſes them diſtinct from common Habitations, in the Middle of the Third Century. Nay, St. Auſtin [n], and the Author of the Comments, under the Name of St. Ambroſe [o], ſay expreſsly, " That " as ſoon as the Religion of Chriſt was planted " in the World, Churches were built, to pray " for Kings, and all that are in Authority, &c. according to the Apoſtle's Direction, 1 Tim. ii. 1. upon which St. Auſtin founds the Uſe and Building of Churches. I lay no Streſs upon the Martyrologies, nor ſuch Writers as Abdias Babylonius, and Anacletus, which ſpeak of Churches built in Perſia by Simon and Jude, and at Alexandria by St. Mark, and at Rome by St. Peter, becauſe theſe are late and ſpurious Writings: But yet, if we may judge of the Firſt Converſions, by thoſe that happened in the Time of Conſtantine, we may conclude, that as ſoon as any People were converted, they provided themſelves Churches for Divine Service. As when Frumentius had converted the Indians, Socrates [p] ſays, " He im- " mediately built Churches among them; which is confirmed by Ruffin, who not only takes Notice of that, but ſays farther, " That before he " had converted them, meeting with ſome Roman " Merchants that were Chriſtians, he encouraged " them to build themſelves [q] Oratories in all " Places, whither they might reſort for Prayer, " after the Cuſtom of the Romans. Theodoret [r], and Socrates, and Ruffin obſerve the ſame in the Converſion of the Nation of the Iberians, by a Captive Woman, who taught them to build Churches after the Roman Form; which they did, and then ſent Ambaſſadors to Conſtantine [in whoſe Time both theſe Converſions happened] to deſire him to ſend them Prieſts, to carry on the Work they had thus begun, and to miniſter in their Churches. Now we may reaſonably conclude, That ſome ſuch Thing was obſerved in all Converſions from the very firſt, allowing for the Difference betwixt Times of Perſecution and Times of Peace. For though they had not ſuch publick and ſtately Edifices at ſome Times, as they had at others; yet they always had Places peculiarly ſet apart for Divine Worſhip, before the peaceable Reign of Conſtantine, as the Evidences, produced above, do undeniably prove.

CHAP. II.

Of the Difference between Churches in the Firſt Ages, and thoſe that followed: And of Heathen Temples and Jewiſh Synagogues converted into Chriſtian Churches.

SECT. I. The Firſt Churches very ſimple and plain.

THE only remaining Objection againſt what has been advanced in the laſt Chapter, is taken from a Paſſage or two of the Ancients, which ſeem to imply, that there was a great Difference between the Apoſtolical Age and thoſe that followed, in Reference to this Buſineſs of Churches. Iſidore of Peluſium treating of this Matter, ſays, " In the Apoſtles Days there " were [a] no Churches, that is, Buildings, or " Temples, when Spiritual Gifts abounded, and " an Holy Converſation was the bright Ornament of the Church: But in our Days the " Buildings are adorned more than is neceſſary, " whilſt the Church is faln into Diſgrace: And " therefore, were I at Liberty to chuſe, I ſhould " rather have wiſhed to have lived in thoſe Days, " when there were no ſuch beautified Temples, " but yet the Church was crowned with Divine " and Heavenly Graces; than in theſe Days, " when Temples are adorn'd with all kinds of " Marble, but the Church is depriv'd of all thoſe " Spiritual Gifts. Theſe Words, if they be taken in the ſtricteſt Senſe, may ſeem to import, that in the Age of the Apoſtles there were no Churches builded; for beyond the Apoſtolical Age he carries not the Compariſon: But I rather take him to mean, that the Apoſtles had not ſuch Churches as they had in his Time, that is, ſo ſtately and magnificent, ſo rich and beautiful as many in [i] Chryſoſt. cont. Gentil. Tom. 1. p. 741. ἡ βατιλέα τῶ τ ἐκκλησίας πρϑύρων ἐξήλασε, &c. Vid. p. 748. [k] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 34. [l] Cave Prim. Chriſt. p. 46. [m] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 247. n. 6. Huetius Origenian. lib. 1. c. 3. n. 12. [n] Aug. cont. Fauſt. lib. 12. c. 36. Ex hoc quippe illis credentibus conſtructa ſunt Domicilia Pacis, Baſilicæ Chriſtianarum Congregationum. [o] Ambroſ. in Epheſ. 4. Ubi omnia loca circumplexa eſt Eccleſia, Conventicula conſtituta ſunt, &c. [p] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 19. ἐυκτήρια πολλὰ ἱδρύσε, &c. [q] Ruffin. lib. 1. c. 9. Monere cœpit, ut Conventicula per loca ſingula facerent, ad quæ Romano Ritu Orationis cauſa confluerent. [r] Theod. lib. 1. c. 23. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 20. Ruffin. lib. 1. c. 10. [a] Iſidor. Peluſ. lib. 2. Ep. 246. ὅτι μὲ τῶ Ἀποςόλων ἐκκλησιας ἦεια ἐκ ἦῶ, &c.

After-ages. Which is certainly true: For in the firſt Converſion of any Nation, the Churches were always anſwerable to the State and Condition the Converts were in, which was commonly a State of Perſecution, when not many Rich, not many Noble were called. Nay, even in thoſe Places, where Kings gave Encouragement to the Propagation of the Faith, Churches were another Thing from what they are now, as we may learn from the Hiſtory of our own Nation. "There was a Time, Bede tells us, when there "was not a Stone-Church in all the Land, but "the Cuſtom was to build them all of Wood: "And therefore when Biſhop Ninyas built a "Church of Stone, it was ſuch [b] a Rarity "and unuſual Thing among the Britains, that "they call'd the Place Candida Caſa, Whitern, "or Whitchurch upon it. The ſame Author tells us [c], "That Finan, the Second Biſhop of "Lindisfarne, or Holy Iſland, ſince call'd the Bi-"ſhoprick of Durham, built a Church in the Iſland "fit for a Cathedral See, which yet was not of "Stone, but only Timber ſawed, and covered "with Reed; and ſo it continued, 'till Eadbert "the Seventh Biſhop took away the Reed, and "cover'd it all over, both Roof and Sides, with "Sheets of Lead. No one after this will wonder at the Account which Sulpitius Severus [d] gives of the Churches of Cyrene, in the Deſerts of Libya, when he tells us, "He went with a "Presbyter into one of them, which was made "of ſmall Rods interwoven one with another, "and not much more ſtately and ambitious than "his own Houſe, in which a Man could hardly "ſtand upright. But the Men who frequented "theſe Churches were Men of the Golden Age "and Pureſt Morals; they neither bought or "ſold any Thing; they knew not what Fraud "or Theft was; they neither had, or deſir'd to "have Silver or Gold, which other Mortals ſet "ſuch a Value upon. For, ſays he, when I "offer'd the Presbyter Ten Pieces of Gold, he "refuſed them, telling me with ſome Greatneſs "of Mind, That the Church was not built with "Gold, but rather unbuilt by it, Eccleſiam auro "non ſtrui, ſed potius deſtrui, altiore Conſilio po-"teſtatus: Theſe Inſtances may ſerve to explain Iſidore's Meaning when he ſays, "The Apoſto-"lical Age had no Churches, or not ſuch rich "and noble Structures, as the Peace, and Affluence, and Emulation of After-ages commonly "produced.

SECT. II. Reaſons for enlarging and altering the State of Eccleſiaſtical Structures.

INDEED there were many viſible Reaſons, why the State of the Structures muſt needs alter in Proportion to the Advancement of the State of Religion it ſelf. For Times of Peace and Perſecution looked with a very different Aſpect, and had a very different Influence upon the Affairs of the Church. Perſecution was always attended with Poverty, Paucity of Believers, and unſettled Hopes: So that either they needed not ſtately and ſumptuous Buildings, or they were not able to erect them; or at leaſt they had no Invitation and Encouragement to do it, whilſt they were under daily Apprehenſions of ſeeing them plundered or demoliſhed almoſt as ſoon as they had erected them. But in Times of Peace great Multitudes of Converts forſook the Temples, and came over to the Church, and thoſe many times Perſons of Fortune and Quality: And in ſome of the Heathen Reigns the Church enjoyed a more ſerene and un-interrupted Gale of Tranquillity, as in that happy Interval of near Fifty Years, between the Death of St. Cyprian and the laſt Perſecution: And then there was a Neceſſity to build more ample and ſtately Churches, and they had Ability to do it, and were not without Hopes of continuing to enjoy their Works of Piety in a ſettled and laſting Peace. So that then, in that promiſing Interval, as Euſebius [e] obſerves, when Diocleſian's Court and Family were almoſt all become Chriſtians, and great Multitudes of Believers in all Cities came over daily to the Faith; their antient Fabricks could not contain them, but they built them more ample and ſpacious Churches in every City from the Foundation. And when many of theſe had been deſtroyed in the long Decennial Perſecution, they were again rebuilt from the Ground more lofty and beautiful than they were before, as the ſame Euſebius [f] words it, as ſoon as Conſtantine had revived the Chriſtians Hopes, by publiſhing his Edicts in Favour of their Religion.

SECT. III. Particularly the Munificence of Chriſtian Emperors contributed toward this.

BUT now there were two other Reaſons concurred, after the Emperors were become Chriſtians, which contributed much toward the State and Magnificence of Chriſtian Churches. Which were, Firſt, The great Liberality and Munificence of the Emperors themſelves, who were at great Expence in erecting many Noble Fabricks in ſeveral Cities to the Honour of Chriſt: And, Secondly, Their Orders for converting Heathen Temples into Churches. Conſtantine ſpared no Charge to erect, beautify and adorn Churches in all Parts of the Eaſt, as at Jeruſalem, Antioch, Nicomedia, Mambre, Heliopolis in Phœnicia, and many other Places, of which the Reader, that pleaſes, may find a particular Account in Euſebius and [g] Socrates: But eſpecially at Conſtaminople, where, among others, he built the Beautiful Church called Eccleſia Conſtantiniana, to the Memory of the Twelve Apoſtles; which, as Euſebius [h] deſcribes it, [b] Bede, Hiſt. lib. 3. c. 4. Vulgo vocatur, Ad Candidam Caſam, eo quod ibi Eccleſiam de Lapide, inſolito Britonibus more, fecerit. [c] Bede, lib. 3. c. 25. Finan in Inſula Lindisfarnenſi fecit Eccleſiam Epiſcopali Sedi congruam. Quam tamen more Scotorum, non de Lapide, ſed de Robore Secto, totam compoſuit atque arundine texit.—— Sed Epiſcopus loci illius Eadbert, ablata arundine, eam totam, hoc eſt, & Tectum & ipſos quoque Parietes ejus plumbi laminis co-operire curavit. [d] Sulpit. Sever. Dial. 1. c. 2. Erat vilibus contexta virgultis, non multo ambitioſior quàm noſtri Hoſpitis tabernaculum, in quo niſi incurvus quis non poterat conſiſtere, &c. [e] Euſeb. lib. 8. c. 1. [f] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 2. [g] Euſeb. de Vita Conſtant. lib. 3. c. 50 & 51. Socrat. lib. 1. c. 16, 17, 18. [h] Euſeb. de Vit. Conſt. lib. 4. c. 58.

" was vaſtly high, and yet had all its Walls co" ver'd with Marble, its Roof overlaid with " Gold, and the Outſide, inſtead of Tiles, co-
" ver'd with gilded Braſs. He alſo laid the Foundation of the famous Temple call'd Sancta Sophia, and Magna, which was finiſhed and dedicated Thirty Four Years after by his Son Conſtantius, An. 360, who joined the Temple of Peace to it (which was another Church built by Conſtantine) including them both in one, as Socrates [i] and the Author of the Chronicon [k] Alexandrinum inform us. Conſtantine's Example was followed by the ſucceeding Emperors, but more eſpecially by Juſtinian, who among many other Works of this nature, rebuilt the Church of St. Sophia, which had been burnt down in the Time of Anaſtaſius. And now it became the Glory of the World for its Greatneſs, curious Architecture, Richneſs and Beauty; inſomuch that Juſtinian himſelf, having finiſh'd it, was heard to ſay νενίκηκά σε Σολομών, I have outdone Thee, Solomon. They who are deſirous to read the particular Deſcription of this Church, may find it briefly delineated in Evagrius [l], Procopius [m] and Agathias [n], but more fully and exactly by Paulus Silentiarius, and his Learned Commentator Du Freſne, whoſe accurate Knowledge in theſe Matters exceeds all that ever came before him. I have extracted out of him ſuch Obſervations as I thought neceſſary to my own Deſign, but they that pleaſe to peruſe the whole, may find it at the End of Johannes Cinnamus, among the Byzantine Hiſtorians publiſh'd at Paris, 1670.

SECT. IV. As alſo their Orders for converting Heathen Temples into Churches.

THE other Reaſon, which I ſaid contributed toward the Magnificence of Chriſtian Churches, was the Orders of ſeveral Emperors for converting Heathen Temples into Churches. At firſt indeed, whilſt the Reformation from Heatheniſm was in its Infancy, no Idol-Temples were made Uſe of as Churches, but they were either permitted to the Heathen for ſome Time, or elſe ſhut up, or demoliſhed. 'Till the 25th Year of Conſtantine, i. e. An. 333, the Temples were in a great meaſure tolerated; but in that Year he publiſh'd his Laws, commanding Temples, Altars and Images to be deſtroyed, which Laws are ſometimes referr'd to in the Theodoſian [o] Code. And purſuant to theſe Laws a great many Temples were defaced in all Parts of the World, and their Revenues confiſcated, as appears not only from the Chriſtian Writers, St. Jerom [p], and Euſebius [q], and others, but alſo from the Complaints of the Heathen Writers, Eunapius [r], Libanius [s] and Julian [t]. In ſome of the following Reigns alſo the ſame Method was taken, to ſhut up, or to deface the Temples, as is evident from the Account which Ruffin [u] gives of the general Deſtruction of them in Egypt, by the Order of Valentinian. But in the next Reign, in the Time of Theodoſius, another Method was taken with ſome of them. For, as Gothofred obſerves [w] out of the Chronicon Alexandrinum, An. 379, " Theodoſius turned the famous Temple of Helio-
" polis, called Balanium, into a Chriſtian Church,
" ἐποίησε αὐτὸ ἐκκλησίαν χριστιανῶν. And about the ſame Time, Socrates tells us, " That when " Valens had baniſhed the two Macarii, the " Heads of the Egyptian Monks, into a Pagan " Iſland, they converted all the Inhabitants, and " turned [x] their Temple into the Form of a " Church. The like was done by the famous Temple of the Dea Cœleſtis at Carthage, by Aurelius the Biſhop, in the Time of Honorius, An. 399, which the Author of the Book de Prædictionibus, under the Name of Proſper [y], tells with this remarkable Circumſtance, " That it had been " dedicated before by one Aurelius an Heathen
" High-Prieſt, with this Inſcription, Aurelius
" Pontifex dedicavit, which our Author ſays was " left in the Frontiſpiece, to be read by all the " People, becauſe by God's Providence it was " fulfill'd again in Aurelius the Biſhop, for whom " it ſerved as well as the former Aurelius when " he had once dedicated it to the Uſe and Ser" vice of the Chriſtian Religion, and ſet his Chair
" in the Place of the Goddeſs. Not long after this, Honorius, An. 408, publiſh'd two Laws in the Weſtern Empire, forbidding the Deſtruction of any more Temples in Cities, becauſe they might ſerve for Ornament, or Publick [z] Uſe, being once purg'd of all unlawful Furniture, Idols and Altars, which he ordered to be deſtroyed, where-ever they were found. Theſe Laws, as Gothofred rightly obſerves, ſeem to have been publiſhed at the Inſtance of the African Fathers, who, as appears from one of the Canons [a] of the African Code, petitioned the Emperor, that ſuch Temples as were in the Country only and private Places, not ſerving for any Ornament, might be deſtroyed. Arcadius publiſhed ſuch another Law for the Eaſtern Empire, which relates only to the Deſtruction of Temples in [i] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 16. [k] Chron. Alex. an. 360. p. 685. [l] Evagr. lib. 4. c. 31. [m] Procop. de Ædific. Juſtin. lib. 1. c. 1. [n] Agath. lib. 5. [o] Cod. Th. lib. 9. Tit. 17. de Sepulchris violatis, Leg. 2. [p] Hieron. Chronic. an. 332. [q] Euſeb. de Vit. Conſt. lib. 3. c. 54. [r] Eunap. Vit. Ædeſii. [s] Liban. Orat. pro Templis, p. 9. Et Orat. Apologetic. 26. p. 591. [t] Julian. Orat. 7. p. 424. [u] Ruffin. lib. 2. c. 28. [w] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 10. de Pagan. Leg. 25. [x] Socrat. lib. 4. c. 24. τὸ δὲ σχῆμα τῶν ναῶν εἰς ἐκκλησίας τύπον μεταποιήσαντες, &c. [y] Proſper. de Promiſſion. lib. 3. c. 38. Antiſtes Aurelius, cœleſtis jam Patriæ civis, Cathedram illic loco Cœleſtis & habuit, & ſedit. Ipſe tunc aderam cum ſociis & amicis, atque [ut ſe adoleſcentium ætas impatiens circumquaque vertebat] dum curioſi ſingula quæ prò magnitudine inſpicimus, mirum quoddam & incredibile noſtro ſe ingeſſit aſpectui, Titulus æneis grandioribuſque literis in Frontiſpicio Templi conſcriptus, Aurelius Pontifex dedicavit. Hunc legentes populi mirabantur. Præſago tunc Spiritu acta, quæ præſcius Dei ordo certo iſto ſine concluſerat. [z] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 10. de Pagan. leg. 18. Ædes inlicitis rebus vacuas, ne quis conetur evertere. Decernimus enim, ut Ædificiorum quidem ſit integer Status. It. Leg. 19. Ædificia ipſa Templorum, quæ in Civitatibus vel oppidis, vel extra oppida ſunt, ad Uſum publicum vindicentur: Aræ locis omnibus deſtruantur. [a] Cod. Afric. Can. 58.

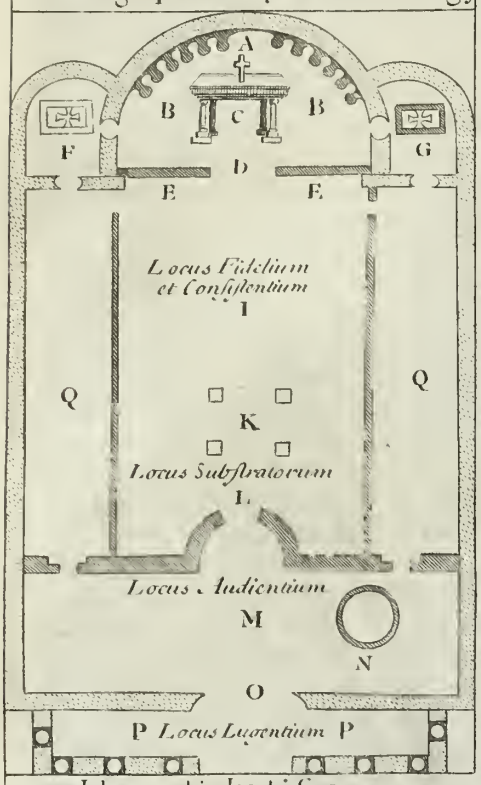
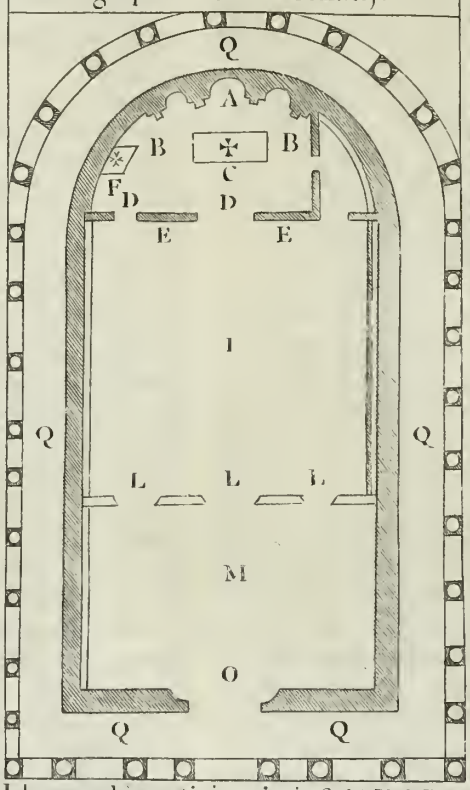
Country-

ICHNOGRAPHIA TEMPLORUM ORIENTALIUM.

Ichnographia Templorum Beveregij



Ichnographia Leonis Allatij.



Ambo.

A Synthronus
B S Bema
C Altare
D Porta Sancta
E Cancelli Bematis
F Prothesis
G Diaconicum
H Solea
I Naos
K Ambo
L Portæ Speciosæ
M Narthex
N Baptisterium
O Magnæ Portæ
P Porticus
Q Circuitus
R Locus Episcopi extra S. Bema
S Locus Diaconorum
T Locus Lectorum
V Pulpitum
X Sedes Imperialis
Y Locus Mulierum
Z Ciborium

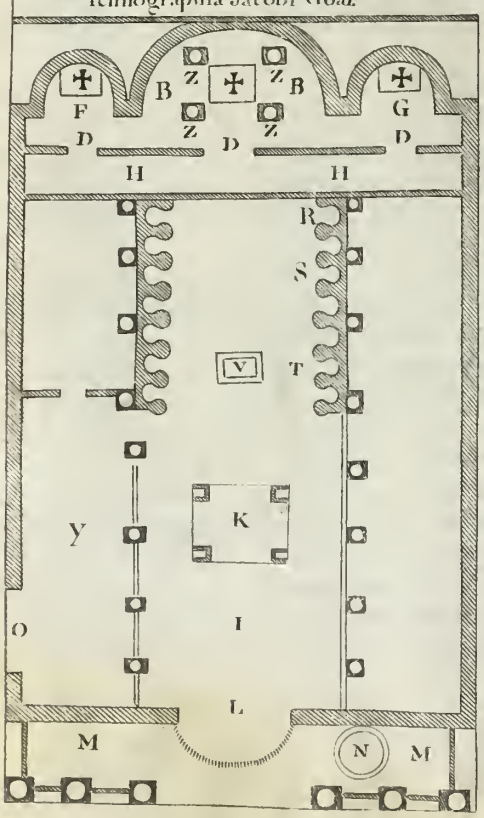
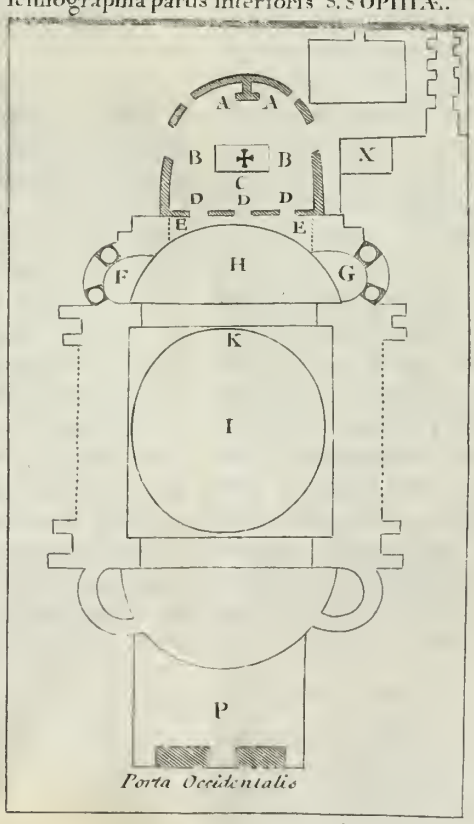
Ichnographia Jacobi Goar



Ichnographia partis interioris S. SOPHIÆ.



Sturt sculp.

Country-Places, [b] and not in Cities, where now there was no such Danger of Superstition, since they might be converted to a better Use. And upon this ground the Author under the Name of Prosper [c] commends Honorius for his Piety and Devotion, because he gave all the Temples with their adjacent Places to the Church, only requiring the Idols to be destroyed. 'Tis true indeed, after this we find a Law of Theodosius Junior, [d] commanding all Temples to be destroyed. But as Gothofred seems rightly to interpret it, "The Word Destroying in that Law "is to be understood only of Despoiling them of "their Superstition; because it follows in the "same Law, that they were to be expiated by "placing the Sign of the Cross upon them, "which was a Token of their being turned into "Churches. And his Observation may be confirmed farther from what Evagrius [e] reports of Theodosius, "That he turned the Tychæum, or "Temple of Fortune at Antioch, into a Church, "called by the Name of Ignatius. The like was done by a great Temple at Tanis in Egypt, as Valesius [f] has observed out of the Itinerary of Antoninus the Martyr. Cluver also in his Description of Italy, takes notice of a Place in the Jerusalem Itinerary, called Sacraria, betwixt Fulginum and Spoletum, near the Head of the River Clitumnus, which he thinks [g] was originally no other than the Temple of Jupiter Clitumnus; though another Learned Antiquary [h] makes it something doubtful as to the present Church now standing there. However, we have seen Instances enough of this Practice; and Bede [i] tells us, "That Gregory the Great gave Austin the Monk "Instructions of the same nature, about the "Temples here among the Saxons in Britain, "That if they were well built, they should not "be destroyed, but only be converted from the "Worship of Devils to the Service of the True "God. And so he observes it was done at Rome, where not long after Boniface IV. turned the Heathen Temple, called the Pantheon, into the Church of All Saints [k], in the Time of the Emperor Phocas. Sometimes the Temples were pulled down, and the Materials were given to the Church, out of which new Edifices were erected for the Service of Religion, as Sozomen [l] and Russin [m] particularly observe of the Temples of Bacchus and Serapis at Alexandria. I have already shewed [*] out of Ausonius, that the Roman Halls, or Basilicæ, were likewise turned into Churches. The like is reported of some Jewish Synagogues by the Author of the Chronicon Alexandrinum, who takes notice particularly [n] of a Synagogue of the Samaritans in a Place called Gargarida, which Zeno the Emperor converted into a large Christian Church.

And tho' it is not agreed by Learned Men, whether the Temples said to be built by Hadrian, were intended for the Worship of himself, or the Worship of Christ; for Casaubon [o] and Pagi [p] think he designed them for himself, whilst Huetius [q] defends Lampridius his Relation, who says, "He design'd them for the Ho-"nour of Christ; yet it is certain, that after they had been used to other Purposes, they were at last, some of them, turned into Christian Churches. For Epiphanius [r] says, "There was "a great Temple at Tiberias, called the Hadria-"num, which the Jews made use of for a Bath, "but Josephus Comes, the converted Jew in the "Time of Constantine, turned it into a Church. And the like was done by another of them by Athanasius at Alexandria, having before been the Hall or Palace of Licinius, as the same Epiphanius [s] informs us. So that now, partly by the Munificence of the Emperors, building Churches at their own Charge, and partly by their Orders for converting Heathen Temples into Churches, and partly by the great Liberality and Zeal of Private Christians in Times of Peace, Churches became another Thing from what they were in former Ages, that is, more noble and stately Edifices, more rich and beautiful; under which Advantage we are next to take a View of them in the following Part of this Book.

CHAP. III.

Of the different Forms and Parts of the Antient Churches: And First of the Exterior Narthex, or Ante-Temple.

SECT. I. Churches antiently of different Forms.

IT may easily be collected from what has been discoursed in the former Chapter, that antiently Churches were not all built precisely in one Form, or Figure. For since both Heathen Temples and Publick Halls were turned into Churches, it can hardly be imagined, that all these should happen to be built exactly in the same Form. Nor indeed was there any Universal Rule among Christians about this Matter. The Author of the Constitutions seems to intimate that they were generally Oblong in the Figure of a Ship [a]. This Figure was otherwise called Dromical, δρομικὸν, because as Leo Allatius [b] and Suicerus [c] after him conjecture, Churches built in this Form had void Spaces for Deambulation. And this is said to be the Figure of the famous Church of Sancta Sophia, at Constantinople, by Paulus Silentiarius, and other Writers. But this Figure was not so general but that we meet with Churches in other Forms. For the Church which Constantine built over our Saviour's Sepulchre, at Mount Golgotha, was round, as we learn from Eusebius [d] and Walafridus [e] Strabo. That which he built at Antioch, Eusebius [f] says, was an Octagone: And such was the Church of Nazianzum, built by Gregory, the Father of Gregory Nazianzen, as we find in the Son's Funeral Oration [g] upon his Father, who describes it as having eight Sides equal to one another. Other Churches were built in the Form of a Cross, as that of Simeon Stylites mentioned by Evagrius [h]. And the Church of the Apostles built by Constantine at Constantinople, was in this Form likewise, as we learn from Gregory Nazianzen in his Somnium Anastasiæ, who thus describes it: Carm. 9. Tom. 2. p. 79.

[b] Cod. Th. lib. 16. tit. 10. de Pagan. Leg. 16. Si qua in agris Templa sunt, sine turba & tumultu diruantur. His enim dejectis, omnis superstitionis materia consumetur. [c] Prosper de Promiss. lib. 3. c. 38. Honorius Christiana Religione ac Devotione præditus. Templa omnia cum suis adjacentibus spatiis, Ecclesiis contulit: Simulque eorum simulacra confringenda in potestatem dedit. [d] Cod. Th. ibid. Leg. 25. Cuncta eorum Fana, Templa, Delubra, si qua nunc etiam restant integra, præcepto Magistratuum destrui, Conlocationeque venerandæ Christianæ Religionis signi expiari præcipimus. [e] Evagr. lib. 1. c. 16. σηκὸς ἐναγὴς ἢ τέμενος ἅγιον τοῦ Ἰγνατίου τὸ πάλαι τυγχάνον γένους. [f] Vales. Not. in Sozomen. lib. 5. c. 21. Immensum fuit ibi Templum, quod modo est Ecclesia. [g] Cluver. Ital. Vetus, p. 702. [h] Holsten. Annot. in Cluver. p. 124. [i] Bede lib. 1. c. 30. [k] Bede lib. 2. c. 4. [l] Sozomen. lib. 7. c. 15. [m] Ruffin. lib. 2. c. 17. [*] See Chap. 1. n. 5. [n] Chron. Alex. an. 10. Zenon. p. 757. ἐποίησε τὴν συναγωγὴν αὐτῶν, ἣν ἦσαν εἰς τὸ καλούμενον γαργαρίδιν, ἐκκλησίαν οἶκον μέγαν, &c. [o] Casaubon. Not. in Lamprid. Vit. Alex. Severi. p. 170. [p] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 134. n. 4. [q] Huet. Demonstrat. Evangel. Propos. 3. p. 65. [r] Epiphan. Hær. 30. Ebionit. n. 12. [s] Epiphan. Hær. 69. Arian. n. 2.

Σὺν τοῖς κ᾽ μεγάλαχον ἕδος Χριστοῦ μαθητῶν, Πλευραῖς τετραχὰ τετμόμβρον.

"Among these stood the stately Church of "the Apostles of Christ, dividing it self into four "Wings in the Form of a Cross." These were sometimes made so by the Addition of a Wing of Building on each Side (which Wings the Greeks call Apsides) as Cedrenus [i] and Zonaras observe in the Life of Justin, Junior, who added two of these Apsides to the Church of Blachernæ, and so made it resemble the Form of a Cross. Valesius has also observed [k] out of the Itinerary of Antoninus the Martyr, "That the Church which "Constantine built at Mambre, was in a Qua"drangular, or Square Figure, with an open "Court in the Middle, so as one Part of it was "made use of by the Jews, and the other by "the Christians." Some Churches were also called Octachora, but, as Valesius rightly observes, those were the same with the Octagones, as appears from this ancient Inscription in Gruter [l], Octachorum Sanctos Templum surrexit in usus, Octagonus fons est munere dignus eo.

Suicerus and Allatius take notice also of another Form of Churches, which they call τρελλωτὰ, κυλινδρωτὰ, σκολωτὰ and κυκλοειδῆ, that is, Round, in the Figure of an Arch, or Sphere, or a Cylindre, or a Shield, or a Circle, as the Pantheon at Rome was said to be. But this, properly speaking, was not so much the Form of a Church, as the Figure of one Part of some Churches, as particularly that of Sancta Sophia, the Body of which was built in the Form of a Trulla, that is, a great round Arch or Sphere, but yet the whole was Oblong, resembling the Form of other Churches, as the Reader may judge by comparing the several Figures in the following Table, whereof one is that of Sancta Sophia, taken from Du Fresne's Constantinopolis Christiana, another from Dr. Beverege in his Pandects, a Third from Leo Allatius, and a Fourth from Goar; all which being contracted and put together by Schelstrate in his Concilium Antiochenum, are here represented from his Copy, with the proper Names referring to each Part of them. To these I have added another Figure representing the stately Church of Tyre, built by Paulinus, and described by Eusebius [m] in his Panegyrical Oration upon the Church and the Founder of it, which the curious Reader may see at large in the Tenth Book of his Ecclesiastical History. I shall here in a great Measure follow his Description, as one of the most ancient and authentick that we have, only intermixing such other Things as are necessary to explain the Forms and Parts of other Churches, since, as I have observed, they were not all alike, but differed in Form, in Site, and in several Parts from one another.

SECT. II. And different Situation from one another.

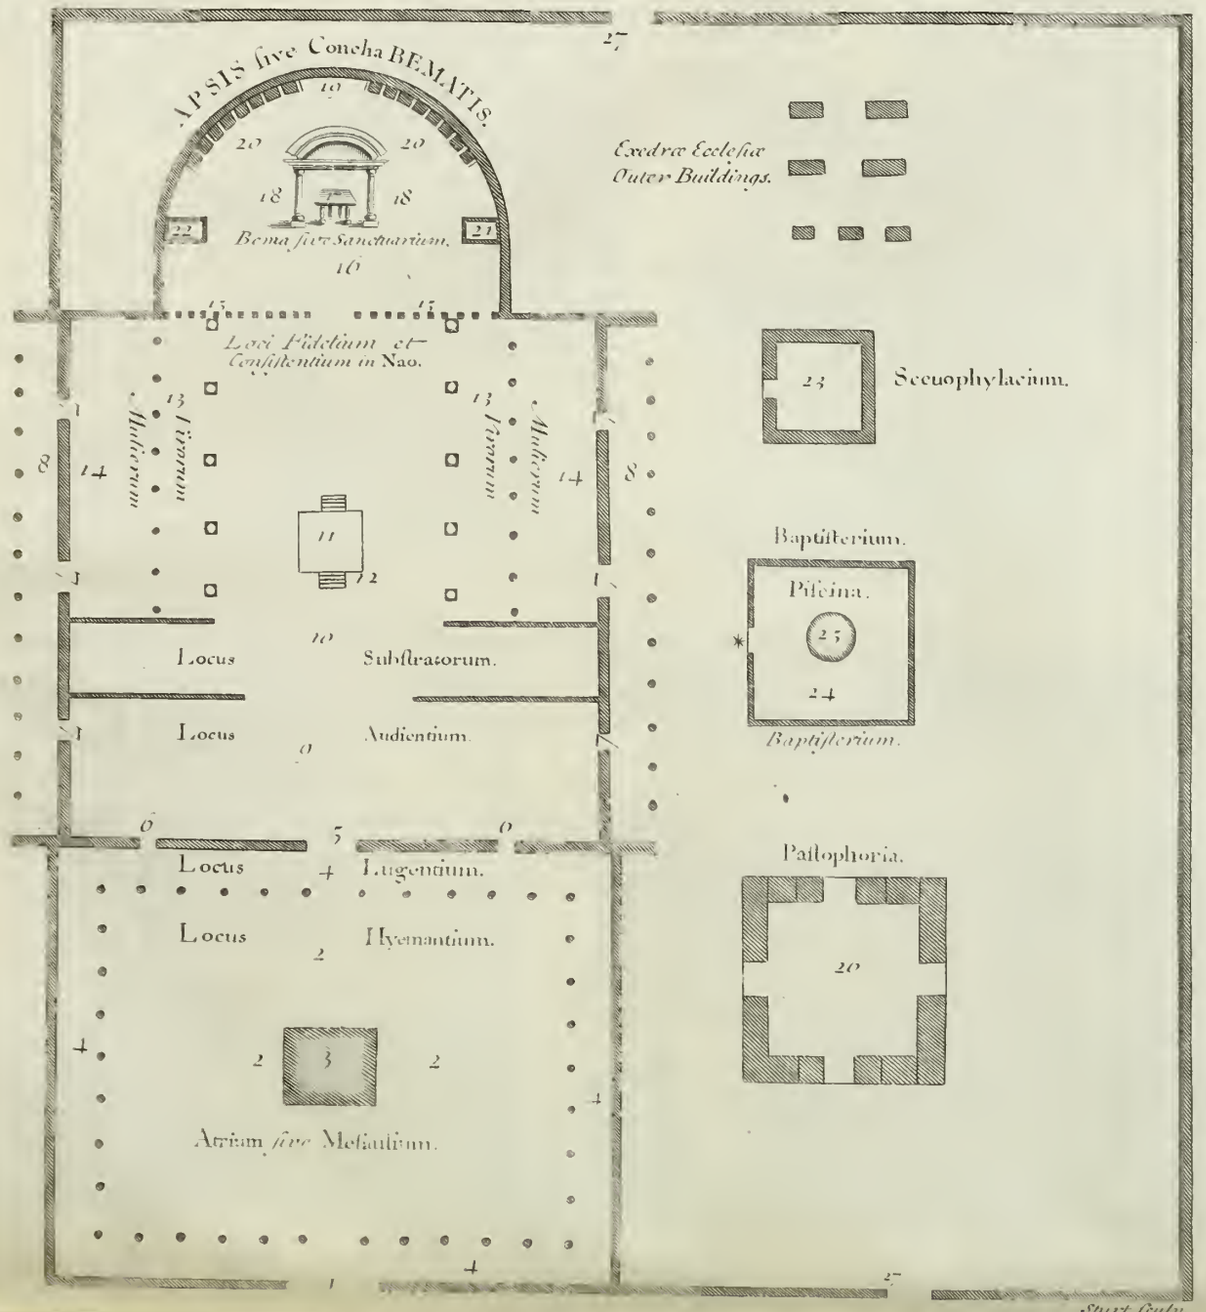
To begin with their Situation, or Posture: They were commonly so placed, as that the Front, or chief Entrances, were toward the West; and the Sanctuary, or Altar-Part, toward the East: Yet in some Churches it was otherwise, as is evident from the Observation made by Socrates [n] upon the Church of Antioch, "That it stood in a different Posture from "other Churches; for the Altar did not look "toward the East, but toward the West. Which Observation is also made by Paulinus [o] Nolanus upon one of his own Structures. And the Temple of the other Paulinus at Tyre seems to have stood the same Way. For Eusebius describes the Entrance to it, and not the Altar-Part, as fronting the Rising Sun. So that though the Author of the Constitutions [p], among other Rules of this nature, gives Directions for building Churches toward the East, yet it appears from these Instances, that the Practice was not so universal, but that it admitted of Exceptions, as Necessity, or Expediency, required. Which Observation has been made not only by Bishop

[a] Constit. Apost. lib. 2. c. 57. ὁ οἶκος ἔσω ἐπμήκης, ὅσις ἔοικε νηΐ. [b] Allatius de Templis Græcorum. [c] Suicer. Thesaur. Eccles. voce ναός. [d] Euseb. Vit. Const. lib. 3. c. 38. [e] Strabo de Rebus Eccles. c. 4. [f] Euseb. Vit. Constant. lib. 3. c. 5. ἐν ὀκταέδρῳ σχήματι. [g] Naz. Orat. 19. de Laud. Patr. p. 313. [h] Evagr. lib. 1. c. 14. [i] Cedren. Vit. Justin. in Compend. Hist. p. 390. [k] Antonin. ap. Vales. Not. in Euseb. de Vit. Const. lib. 3. c. 53. Est ibi Basilica ædificata per Quadrum, & Atrium in medio disco-opertum, &c. [l] Gruter. Thesaur. p. 1166. [m] Euseb. lib. 10. c. 4. [n] Socrat. lib. 5. c. 22. ἡ ἐκκλησία διαφέρον ἔχει τὴν θέσιν ἢ γὰρ πρὸς ἀνατολὴν τὸ θυσιαστήριον, ἀλλὰ πρὸς δύσιν ὁρᾷ. [o] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. Prospectus Basilicæ non, ut usitatior mos est, Orientem spectat, sed ad Domini mei beati Felicis Basilicam pertinet, Memoriam ejus aspiciens. [p] Constit. Apost. lib. 2. c. 7.

Usher

The Plan of an Ancient CHURCH with its Exedræ as described by Eusebius and other Writers.



Stuart sculp.

1 Propylæum or Vestibulum Magnum The great Porch or first Entrance into the Area before the Church.

2 The Μεσαύλιον, Atrium or Area leading from the Porch to the Church.

3 Cantharus or Phiala, the Fountain of Water in the middle of the Square.

4 The Portico's or Cloysters about the Area, otherwise call'd the Exterior Narthex of the Church and Place of Mourners.

5 The great Gate into ye Church.

6 The two lesser Gates on each side of the other.

7 The Northern & Southern Gates.

8 The Cloysters on the North and South side the Church.

9 The Ferula or inner Narthex where the Catechumens and Hearers stood with Jews and Gentiles.

10 The Place of the Substrati or 3d Degree of Penitents behind the Ambon.

11 The Ambon or Reading Desk.

12 The Ascent on both sides the Ambon.

13 The Inner Portico's or Cloysters for Men below.

14 The Catechumenia or Hyperoa, Upper Galleries for Women above & Portico's of the Men upon Pillars.

15 Cancelli Bematis & Rails of the Chancel.

16 The Bema or Chancel.

17 The Altar or Communion Table.

18 The Pyxnus or Ciborium, the Arch'd Canopy built round the Altar.

19 The Bishops Throne with & 20 second Thrones of Presbyters in a Semicircle about the Altar.

21 Diaconicum minus The Inner Vestry.

22 Prothesis, or Paratorium.

23 Scevophylacium or Diaconicum Magnum The great Repository or Erecting House.

24 Baptistery. * The Porch.

25 The Font in the middle of the Baptistery.

26 Pastophoria, Dwelling Houses for the Clergy, with Schools Libraries etc on each side & Church.

27 The περίβολος or utmost Bounds allowed for Refuge or Sanctuary.

Uſher [q] and Cardinal Bona [r], but long before them by Walafridus Strabo, who ſays [s], "The "Ancients were not nicely curious which way "their Churches ſtood, but yet the moſt uſual "Cuſtom was for Chriſtians to pray toward the "Eaſt, and therefore the greateſt Part of the "Churches were built with a Reſpect to that "Cuſtom. But St. Patrick in Ireland, as Biſhop Uſher obſerves [t] out of Jocelin the Writer of his Life, varied from all others: "For he built "a Church in Sabul, hard by Down in Ulſter, "which fronted neither Eaſt nor Weſt, but "ſtood from North to South, ab Aquilonali parte "verſus meridianam plagam. So that Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory affords us Inſtances, if we make a curious Enquiry, of Churches ſtanding in all Poſtures.

SECT. III. Commonly divided into Three Parts, and ſometimes Four or Five.

NEXT to conſider the ſeveral Parts of the antient Churches, we are to obſerve, that as in the Temple of God at Jeruſalem, not only the Holy and the moſt Holy were reckoned Parts of the Temple, but alſo the outward Courts, and even the Court of the Gentiles, which is expreſly called the Houſe of God and the Houſe of Prayer; ſo in Chriſtian Churches, which were built with ſome Regard to the Jewiſh Temple, the whole Ambitus, or Circumference about them was eſteemed in a large Senſe as Part of the Church; and accordingly when Churches became Aſylums, or Places of Refuge under Chriſtian Emperors, not only the inner Buildings, but the outer Courts and Boundaries were reckoned a ſufficient Sanctuary, as we ſhall ſee in the latter Part of this Book. Now hence aroſe a twofold Diviſion of Churches, as taken in a ſtricter, or a larger Senſe. In the ſtricteſt Senſe, including only the Buildings within the Walls, they were commonly divided into three Parts, 1. The Narthex, or Ante-Temple, where the Penitents and Catechumens ſtood. 2. The Naos, or Temple, where the Communicants had their reſpective Places. And, 3. The Bema, or Sanctuary, where the Clergy ſtood to officiate at the Altar. But in a larger Senſe there was another Ante-Temple, or Narthex, without the Walls, under which was comprized the πρόπυλον, or Veſtibulum, the outward Porch; then the Atrium, or Area, the Court leading from that to the Temple, ſurrounded with Portico's, or Cloyſters, as we ſhall preſently ſee in the Temple of Paulinus. There were alſo ſeveral Exedræ, ſuch as the Baptiſtery, the Dirconica, the Paſtophoria, and other adjacent Buildings, which were reckoned to be either without, or within the Church, according as it was taken in a ſtricter, or a larger Acceptation.

SECT. IV. And theſe ſubdivided into other Parts. The Outward Narthex or Ante-Temple included firſt the προπύλοι, or Veſtibulum, the Porch.

EUSEBIUS in deſcribing the Church of Paulinus takes it in the largeſt Senſe, and therefore he begins his Deſcription with the περίβολον, or Wall that encloſed the whole Circumference of the Outward Courts, which we may call the Ante-Temple, or Exterior Narthex, to diſtinguiſh it from the Narthex within the Church. In the Front of this ſacred Encloſure toward the Eaſt, at ſome Diſtance from the Church, the firſt Building that preſented it ſelf was a great and lofty Porch, which Euſebius and other Greek Writers call the πρόπυλον μέγα, and the Latins Veſtibulum Magnum, the Great Porch, to diſtinguiſh it from the leſſer Porches, which joined to the Church. He calls it alſo πρώτην εἴσοδον, the Firſt Entrance, to diſtinguiſh it from the Second, which were the Gates of the Church.

SECT. V. 2. The Atrium, or the Area, or Court before the Church, ſurrounded with Portico's or Cloyſters.

BETWEEN this Porch and the Church was a large Area, or ſquare Plat of Ground which Euſebius [u] calls αὔλειον, and Paulus Silentiarius αὐλὴν [w] in his Deſcription of Sancta Sophia; the Latins term it Atrium and Impluvium, becauſe it was a Court open to the Air without any Covering, ſave only on each Side of the Square, which was ſurrounded with Portico's, or Cloyſters, ſuch Euſebius calls them, and theſe built upon Columns, whence as Du Freſne [x] obſerves, "This Place is called ſome- "times τετράστυλον, and Quadriporticus in Modern "Authors." In this Place ſtood the firſt Claſs of Penitents according to Euſebius, who ſays [y] expreſly, "It was the Manſion of thoſe who "were not allowed to enter farther into the "Church." That is, they ſtood either in the Porch, or the Portico's, to beg the Prayers of the Faithful as they went into the Church. Or perhaps, if they were more notorious Criminals, they were caſt out of theſe alſo, and obliged to wait in the Court, or open Air, and ſtand there expoſed to the Weather, as Part of their Penance: Which ſeems to be intimated by Tertullian [z], when ſpeaking of ſome monſtrous Sinners, he ſays, "They were expelled not only "from the Doors of the Church, but from every "Place that might afford them any Shelter, or "Covering." So that the Atrium was always an open Place, or Court, before the Church: And therefore thoſe Authors who confound the Atrium, or Veſtibulum, and Porticus into one, wholly miſtake the Form of the antient Churches; for theſe, as I have ſhewed, were diſtinct Parts of the Ante-Temple.

[q] Uſher. Letter. 49. ad Selden. [r] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 20. n. 4. [s] Strabo de Rebus Eccl. c. 4. [t] Uſher's Letters, Ep. 49. [u] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. It. de Vit. Conſt. lib. 3. c. 35. [w] Paul. Silent. Par. 1. ver. 174. [x] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silent. p. 536. [y] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. πρώτη αὕτη διατριβὴ, τοῖς τ πρώτων εἰσαγωγῶν ἔτι δεομένοις, κατάλληλον τ μονὴν παρεχομένη. [z] Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 4. Reliquas autem Libidinum furias——non modo Limine, verum omni Eccleſiæ Tecto ſubmovemus, quia non ſunt delicta, ſed Monſtra.

SECT. VI.

3. In the Middle of which ſtood a Fountain for waſhing as they entered into the Church, called Cantharus and Phiala in ſome Authors.

IT is farther to be noted, that in the Middle of the Atrium there was commonly a Fountain, or a Ciſtern of Water, for People to waſh their Hands and Face, before they went into the Church. Euſebius expreſly mentions this in the Temple of Paulinus. He ſays, "In the Court over-againſt the Church he placed Κρήνας, Fountains of Water, as Symbols "of Purification, for ſuch to waſh as entered "into the Church." Paulinus Biſhop of Nola takes Notice of the ſame Thing, but gives it the Name of Cantharus [a], which ſignifies any capacious Veſſel that will hold much Water, and ſometimes a Statue made to ſpout out Water at its Mouth: As Du Freſne has obſerved, "That "in ſome Places the Fountain was ſurrounded "with Lions thus ſpouting out Water;" whence this Place has the Name of Leontarium in ſome Modern Greek Writers. It is alſo called by ſome Nymphæum, ἐμβάτης and κολυμβεῖον, which all ſignify a Fountain. Paulus Silentiarius in his Deſcription of Sancta Sophia, gives it the Name of φιάλη, Phiala, which we may Engliſh, the Baſin. And Socrates calls it φρεὰρ, the Spring. For ſpeaking of a Skirmiſh that happened between the Catholicks and Macedonian Hereticks in the Church of Acacius at Conſtantinople, he ſays, "Such a Slaughter was made, that the αὐλὴ, the "Atrium, or Court of the Church, was filled "with Blood, inſomuch that the φρεὰρ, the "Fountain that ſtood in it was overflowed [b] "therewith, and ran through the adjoining στοὰ, "the Portico, or Cloyſters, even into the Street." St. Chryſoſtom [c] alſo ſpeaks of theſe Fountains, as of Things of common Uſe in the Atria, or Courts before the Churches. And frequently in his Popular Diſcourſes alludes to the Cuſtom of waſhing their Hands before they went into Church [d]. Which is alſo done by Tertullian [e], who expoſes the Abſurdity of going to Prayers with waſhed Hands, whilſt Men retained a filthy Spirit and polluted Soul. In like Manner Syneſius [f] ſpeaks of the Ciſterns or Veſſels of Water ſet for Waſhing in their Ante-Temples.

SECT. VII.

Whether the Superſtitious Uſe of Holy-Water be a Corruption of this ancient Cuſtom?

THE Writers of the Church of Rome, Baronius [g] and others, commonly derive and defend the Uſe of their Holy-Water from this antient Cuſtom: But Du Freſne [h] ſeems to ſpeak more properly, when he ſays, "Their Luſtral Water "rather ſucceeded in its Room." For the Waſhing of the Ancients had nothing of Expiation in it, but was only an indifferent Ceremony of Corporal Decency, or at moſt but an admoniſhing Emblem of that Purity of Soul, with which Men ought to enter the Courts of the moſt Holy God. And therefore any one that compares theſe Matters nicely together, muſt conclude, That the latter Cuſtom is but a fond Imitation, or meer Corruption of the former; if it owe not rather its Original to a worſe Fountain, the περιραντήρια, or Sprinkling with Holy Water, ſo often ſpoken of among the Heathen. The Things are ſo like one another, that ſome Modern Tranſcribers of Sozomen have miſtaken them for one another. For whereas Sozomen ſpeaking of Julian's going into a Temple to Sacrifice in Gaul, with Valentinian to attend him, ſays, "The Prieſt ſprink-"led them [i] with Water as they went in, ac-"cording to the Heathen Cuſtom;" Valeſius has obſerved, that in ſome Copies it is read, according to Eccleſiaſtical Cuſtom, inſtead of Heathen Cuſtom: Which he imputes to ſome Modern Tranſcribers, who were minded to make Church-Holy-Water of it; whom he ingenuouſly chaſtiſes for their Ignorance, or Impudence, in corrupting good Authors, as they juſtly deſerved.

SECT. VIII.

The Atrium and Portico's in the Ante-Temple, only made Uſe of for Burying the Dead.

BUT to return to the Buſineſs of the antient Churches: Whilſt we are ſpeaking of the Ante-Temple, it will not be improper to obſerve, That for many Years after Burying-Places were allowed in Cities, they were ſtill kept out of that which was ſtrictly and properly called the Church, and only allowed in thoſe Parts of the Ante-Temple, the Atrium and Portico's, which we have been deſcribing: As appears from a Canon of the Council of Nantes, An. 658. which prohibits any to be buried [k] in the Church, but allows of it in the Atrium, or Portico's, or Exedræ of the Church. Which I note, only to ſhew what Uſe theſe Parts of the Ante Temple were put to. But of this more when we come to treat of Cœmiteries, and the Funeral Rites of the antient Church.

[a] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. Sancta nitens famulis interluit Atria Lymphis Cantharus, intrantumque manus lavat amne miniſtro. [b] Socrat. lib. 2. c. 28. [c] Chryſoſt. Homil. 57. Tom. 5. Edit. Savil. p. 390. τὰς κρήνας εἰ) ἐν ταῖς αὐλαῖς τῶν ἐυκ[ηρίων οἰκων νενόμισαι, [d] Chryſ. Hom. 52. in Matth. Hom. 72. in Johan. Hom. 3. in Epheſ. Hom. 36. ad Popul. Antioch. Hom. in Pſal. 140. [e] Tertul. de Orat. c. 11. Quæ ratio eſt, manibus quidem ablutis, Spiritu vero ſordente, orationem obire? [f] Syneſ. Ep. 121. Anaſtaſio. τὰ ἐν τοῖς προ[μυίσμασι χέρνιβα, &c. [g] Baron. an. 57. n. 111. [h] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 539. [i] Sozomen. lib. 6. c. 6. ὁ ἱερεὺς νόμω ἑλληνικῶ περιέῤῥανε τὰς εἰσιόντας. [k] Conc. Nannetenſ. c. 6. In Eccleſia nullatenus ſepeliantur, ſed in Atrio, aut Porticu, aut in Exedris Eccleſiæ.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Interior Narthex, and the Parts and Uſes of it.

SECT. I. Of the leſſer πρόπυλα, or Porches before the Doors of the Church.

HAVING taken a View of the Exterior Narthex, or outward Ante-Temple, we are next led by Euſebius into the Interior Narthex, or Ante-Temple within the Church. For in ſuch ſtately Structures as that of Paulinus was, the Narthex, or νάρθηξ, which I Engliſh Ante-Temple, was a Name common to more Parts than one. And in ſome of the moſt magnificent Churches, as that of Sancta Sophia, as Du Freſne has obſerved out of Procopius and Paulus Silentiarius, there were no leſs than four diſtinct Nartheces. The Entrance into the Interior Narthex in the Church of Paulinus, was out of the Portico's, or Cloyſters, before the Church, by three Inner Porches (τὰ ἐνδοτάτω Πρόπυλα Euſebius calls them) and as many Gates opening out of them, the middle one being the greateſt and higheſt of the Three, as we commonly ſee in our Modern Cathedrals, only with this Difference, that thoſe fronted to the Eaſt, and ours to the Weſt. It had alſo Portico's adjoining on the North and [a] South, and as many Porches and Doors to enter out of them. Theſe Porches in ſuch Churches as had no other Ante-Temple, ſerved to receive the firſt Claſs of Penitents, called, The Mourners, which otherwiſe were remitted to the Atrium and Portico's before the Church, as I have ſhewed already in the Temple of Paulinus. And theſe Things are accurately to be obſerved by thoſe, who would not miſtake the Ancients, when they ſeem to ſpeak differently of the Place of the Mourners. Du Freſne has alſo obſerved out of Paulinus Nolanus [b], that theſe Porches and Gates are ſometimes called Arcus, from the Manner of their Structure, which was Arch-work; and Apſides for the ſame Reaſon, for Apſis denotes any Thing that is framed in the Figure of an Arch, or a Convex, as the Heavens: And therefore he thinks the 32d Canon of the third Council of Carthage is to be underſtood of this Place, when it ſays, [c] "That ſuch Penitents as had committed "very notorious and ſcandalous Crimes, known "to the whole Church, ſhould have Impoſition "of Hands before the Apſis, that is, before the "Porch, or Doors of the Church." Here it was alſo that the Poor of the Church placed themſelves both before and after Divine Service, to ask Alms of ſuch as came from the Altar. Which Cuſtom is mentioned by Gregory Nazianzen [d] and St. Chryſoſtom [e], who elegantly, after his Manner, upon this Account ſtiles the Poor, and Aged, and the Lame and the Blind, the Guards of the Royal Palace, meaning the Church.

SECT. II. Of the Narthex, Pronaos, or Ferula.

BEING entered by theſe Gates into the Church, the Firſt Place that occurs to our View, is the νάρθηξ, or Ante-Temple within the Walls. This in the Modern Greek Rituals is always called the Narthex, and is peculiarly allotted to the Monks, or Women, and uſed to perform the Offices of Rogations, and Supplications, and Night-Watches in. Here alſo they place dead Corpſes, whilſt their Funeral Rites are performing, as Suicerus [f] ſhews at large out of their Triodion, Pentecoſtarium and Typicum, and other Authors. Morinus thinks [g] the ancient Churches for above five Hundred Years had no Narthex, but were divided only into two Parts, the Sanctuarium and Aula Laicorum, the Place of the Clergy, and the Place of the Laymen, and that the Narthex was firſt introduced by the Eaſtern Monks in the ſixth Century: But in this he is evidently miſtaken; for though the Name perhaps be not very ancient, yet the Thing it ſelf is: For this was always a diſtinct and ſeparate Part of the Church, as any one will eaſily imagine, that conſiders the ancient Uſe of it.

SECT. III. The Uſe of it for the Catechumens and Penitents of the Second Order.

FOR the Church, ever ſince ſhe firſt divided her Catechumens and Penitents into diſtinct Orders and Claſſes, had alſo diſtinct Places in the Church for them. And this lower Part of the Church was the Place of the Energumens, and ſuch of the Catechumens and Penitents, as were commonly called ἀκροώμενοι, or Audientes, that is, Hearers, becauſe they were allowed to ſtand here, to hear the Pſalms and Scriptures read, and the Sermon made by the Preacher, after which they were diſmiſſed without any Prayers, or Solemn Benediction. As may be ſeen in the Author of the Conſtitutions [h], and the Canons of St. Baſil [i], Gregory Nyſſen [k], and ſeveral others.

SECT. IV. Alſo for Jews, Heathens, Hereticks and Schiſmaticks to hear in.

HITHER alſo both Jews and Heathens, and Hereticks and Schiſmaticks were ſometimes allowed to come, to hear the Scriptures read, and the Sermon preached, becauſe this Part of the Service was for their Edification and Inſtruction. The Council of [a] See alſo Euſeb. de Vita Conſt. lib. 3. c. 37. Of the Church of Jeruſalem. [b] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. Alma domus triplici pater ingredientibus Arcu. [c] Conc. Carthag. 3. c. 32. Cujuſcunque Pœnitentis publicum & vulgatiſſimum crimen eſt, quod univerſa Eccleſia noverit, ante Apſidem manus ei imponatur. [d] Naz. Orat. 16. de Amore Pauperum. Tom. 1. p. 246. [e] Chryſoſt. Hom. 10. in 1 Theſſ. p. 1484. [f] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccleſ. voce νάρθηξ. [g] Morin. de Pœnit. lib. 6. c. 1 [h] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 5. [i] Baſil. Can. 75. [k] Nyſſen. Ep. ad Letoium, c. 5.

Laodicea indeed [l] prohibits Hereticks to come within the Church. But in Africk and other Places it was allowed. For in the Fourth Council of Carthage [m] there is a Canon expreſs to this Purpoſe, "That the Biſhop ſhall not pro- "hibit any, whether Heathen, Heretick, or "Jew, to come into the Church, and ſtay there "to hear the Word of God, 'till the Time of "the Diſmiſſion of the Catechumens. And it appears farther from ſeveral, both of St. Chryſoſtom's and St. Auſtin's Homilies, that this was the common Practice. Now then it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that all theſe had their Station together in the lower Part of the Church, called the Narthex, or whatever other Name it went by.

SECT. V. This not the Place of the Font, or Baptiſtery, as in our Modern Churches.

DR. Beverege, and ſome others, ſeem here alſo to place the Font, or Baptiſtery, as in our Modern Churches. But there is nothing more certain, than that for many Ages the Baptiſtery was a diſtinct Place from the Body of the Church, and reckoned among the Exedræ, or Places adjoyning to the Church. For which Reaſon I omit ſpeaking any farther of it here, intending to do it more fully in the latter Part of this Book, when I come to the Exedræ of the Church.

SECT. VI. Why called Narthex, and of the different Sorts of Nartheces in ſeveral Churches.

IF it be enquired, Why this Part of the Church was called Narthex, I anſwer, becauſe the Figure of it was ſuppoſed to reſemble a Ferula, which was the Latin Name for it, that is, a Rod, or Staff: For any Oblong Figure, or Dromical, as the Greeks called it, was by them called a Narthex, as Suicerus and Du Freſne have obſerved out of Theodoſius Zigomala [n]. And therefore this Part of the Church being a long, but narrow Part, croſs the Front of the Church, was termed Narthex, or Ferula, upon that Account. And it is farther to be obſerved, that ſome Churches had Three or Four Nartheces, but thoſe without the Walls: For the Portico's, or Cloyſters, of ſuch Churches as Sancta Sophia, which were built to the North, and Weſt, and South of them, were called Nartheces, as Du Freſne [o] ſhews out of Procopius, and Paulus Silentiarius, and the Sixth general Council, becauſe theſe were long narrow Buildings, in Figure, or Shape, of a Narthex. And ſuch Churches, he thinks, had no other Narthex within the Walls, but theſe Portico's were the proper Station of the Penitents, and ſuch others as were not allowed to come within the Nave of the Church. But in ſuch Churches, as had no Portico's adjoining to them, the Narthex was the lower Part of the Church within the Walls, which was made to anſwer the Uſe of Portico's in other Churches. And this ſeems to be the true State of the Matter, and the only Way to reconcile the different Accounts that are given by Authors of the Antient Narthex of the Church.

CHAP. V.

Of the Naos, or Nave of the Church, and its Parts and Uſes.

SECT. I. Of the Beautiful and Royal Gates: Why ſo called.

AFTER the Narthex followed that Part which was properly called νάος, the Temple, and Navis, the Nave, or Body, of the Church. This was ſeparated from the Narthex by certain Rails of Wood, as all other Places in the Church were commonly diſtinguiſhed. The Entrance into it from the Narthex was by the Gates, which the Modern Rituals, and Greek Writers, call πύλαι ὡραῖαι and βασιλικαὶ, the Beautiful and Royal Gates; which ſeem to be ſo named in alluſion to the Name Baſilica, as denoting the Royal Palace of God, his Houſe and Temple. Though perhaps another Reaſon might be aſſigned for it among the Modern Greeks, who might call it the Royal Gate, becauſe here their Kings were uſed to lay down their Crowns, before they proceeded farther into the Church. Which is obſerved by Leo Grammaticus, in The Life of Michael [a] the Emperor, where he notes it as an Inſolent and Indecent Thing in him, "That when he came to "the Royal Gates, he did not lay aſide his "Crown, as Kings were uſed to do. Some Feſtivals among them were for a like Reaſon called Crown Days, ἑορταὶ Στεφανικαὶ, Dies Coronati, becauſe the Emperors were uſed to go in their Regalia to the great Church of Sancta Sophia, on thoſe Days, which were Twelve particular Days in a Year. So that as theſe Days, ſo thoſe Gates of the Temple might have their Denomination from ſome particular Ceremony, uſed by the Imperial Powers at their Entrance by them: But I take the other Reaſon to be more probable, and had ſcarce mentioned this, had it not been to explain a Cuſtom or two, which fall in our Way upon the Mention of it.

SECT. II. The Nave of the Church uſually a Square Building, called by ſome, The Oratory of Laymen.

THIS Part of the Church ſeems to have been uſually a ſquare Building, in the Middle between the Sanctuary and the Narthex; as we find it deſcribed in a Letter of Theodoſius and Va- [l] Conc. Laodic. can. 6. [m] Conc. Carth. 4. c. 84. Ut Epiſcopus nullum prohibeat ingredi Eccleſiam, & audire Verbum Dei, ſive Gentilem, ſive Hæreticum, ſive Judæum, uſque ad Miſſam Catechumenorum. [n] Zygomal. ap. Crucium Turco-Græc. πᾶν δεξιὸν νάρθηξ καλεῖται. [o] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 634. [a] Leo Grammat. Chronograp. p. 466.

lentinian,

lentinian, at the End of the Council of Epheſus [b], and inſerted alſo into the Theodoſian Code [c], where ſpeaking of Churches as Places of Refuge, they divide them into theſe three Parts, 1. The Θυσιαστήριον, the Altar-Part, or Sanctuary, 2. The εὐκτήριον τὸ λαὸ τετράγωνον, the Four-ſquared Oratory of the People, and 3. The remaining Part from that to the outer Doors of the Church. Now as this laſt is a plain Deſcription of the Narthex afore-mentioned, though it be not called by that Name, ſo is the Second a Deſcription of the Nave, or Middle of the Church, called the People's Oratory, becauſe the People chiefly filled this Place, having their different Stations, or Apartments in it, according to the Difference of Age, or Sex, or Quality, or State and Condition; which Diſtinctions were antiently obſerv'd in ſome, tho' perhaps not in all Churches.

SECT. III. In the loweſt Part of which ſtood the Subſtrati, or Penitents of the Third Order.

FOR here firſt of all, at the very Entrance of the Royal Gates, in the loweſt Station of this Part, behind the Ambo ſtood the ὑποπίπτοντες, or Subſtrati, the Penitents of the Third Order, ſo called from the Cuſtom of Proſtrating themſelves before the Biſhop, or Prieſt, as ſoon as the Sermon was ended, to receive his Benediction with Impoſition of Hands, and be made Partakers of thoſe Prayers which the Congregation particularly offered to God for them, after which they were obliged immediately to depart before the Communion-Service. This ſort of Penitents are mentioned in the Council of Nice [d], tho' no particular Place is aſſigned them: But we may collect from Tertullian and Sozomen, that their Station was in this Part of the Church. For Tertullian [e] ſpeaking of the Roman Diſcipline ſays, "Pope Zephyrin brought Penitents "into the Church in Sackcloth and Aſhes, and "proſtrated them in the midſt before the Wi- "dows and Presbyters, to implore their Com- "miſeration, and excite their Tears. This muſt be a different Station of Penitents from thoſe called Mourners, for their Station (as we have ſeen before) was without the Church-Doors, but theſe before the Widows and Presbyters in the Middle of the Church. And ſo Sozomen (f) plainly repreſents it, when he ſays, "The Bi- "ſhop fell proſtrate with them, and all the "Congregation wept with Tears, and then the "Biſhop riſing up, made the proper Prayers "for them, and diſmiſſed them." Theſe were Exerciſes to be performed in the Church, and not at the Church-Door: And therefore this Order of Penitents are not without Reaſon placed by all Expoſitors within the Royal Gates, behind the Ambo of the Church.

SECT. IV. And the Ambo, or Reading-Desk.

THE Ambo it ſelf was what we now call the Reading-Desk, a Place made on Purpoſe for the Readers and Singers, and ſuch of the Clergy a miniſtred in the firſt Service, called Miſſa Catechumenorum. It had the Name of Ambo, not as Walafridus Strabo imagines, ab ambiendo, becauſe it ſurrounded them that were in it; but from ἀναβαίνειν, becauſe it was a Place of Eminency, to which they went up by Degrees, or Steps. For the original Name is Ἄμβων, which as Valeſius and Habertus have rightly obſerved, in old Greek Writers, Æſchylus and Euſtathius, ſignifies the Aſcent or Height of a Mountain, and thence it comes to ſignify this Place of Eminency in the Church. Sozomen [g] gives it the Name of Βῆμα upon the ſame Account, but to diſtinguiſh it from the other Bema, which was the Sanctuary, or the Altar, he calls it Βῆμα γνωστῶν, the Reader's Bema, as the other was more properly the Biſhop's and Presbyters. In St. Cyprian it is called Pulpitum, and Tribunal Eccleſiæ, and the Uſe of it is alſo explained by him to be a Reading-Desk: For here it was the Readers ſtood to read the Goſpels and Epiſtles, as we learn from the Account which he gives of Celerinus and Aurelius, two famous Confeſſors, whom [h] he ordained Readers, that they who had made Confeſſion of Chriſt's Goſpel from the Rack, might read it alſo from the Pulpit, or Tribunal of the Church. Here it was alſo that the Singers had their Station, as is evident from that Canon of the Council of Laodicea [i] which forbids all others to ſing in the Church, beſide the Canonical Singers, who went up into the Ambo, and ſung by Book. Here alſo the Diptychs, or Book of Commemoration, were read, as appears from a noted Paſſage in the Council of Conſtantinople, under Mennas [k], where the People cry out, τὰ Δίπτυχα τῷ Ἄμβωνι, Let the Diptychs be laid upon the Reading-Desk. Bona [l] thinks the Biſhop and Presbyters here alſo made their Sermons to the People. For which he cites Prudentius [m], and Sidonius [n] Apollinaris, from whoſe Words he farther concludes, that the Ambo was ſometimes called Ara, or Altar. But this Obſervation ſeems to be founded on a Miſtake. For the Biſhops anciently did not uſe to preach from the Ambo, but more commonly from the riſing Steps of the Altar, as Valeſius ſhews [o] that the Cuſtom continued in France to the Time of King Chil-

[b] Conc. Tom. p. 1236. [c] Cod. Th. lib. 9. tit. 45. de his qui ad Eccleſ. confugiunt. leg. 4. p. 366. [d] Conc. Nicen. can. 11. [e] Tertul. de Pudicit. c. 13. Pœnitentiam Mœchi ad exorandam fraternitatem in Eccleſiam inducens, conciliatum & concineratum cum dedecore & horrore compoſitum proſternis in medium ante Viduas, ante Presbyteros, omnium lachrymas ſuadentem, &c. [f] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 16. [g] Sozom. lib. 8. c. 5. lib. 9. c. 2. [h] Cyprian. Ep. 33. Ad Pulpitum poſt Cataſtam venire, &c. It. Ep. 34. Quid aliud quam ſuper Pulpitum, id eſt, Tribunal Eccleſiæ, oportebat imponi, &c. [i] Conc. Laodic. c. 15. [k] Conc. Conſtant. 5. Act. 5. [l] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 2. c. 6. n. 3. [m] Prudent. Hymn. de Hippolyta. Fronte ſub adverſa gradibus ſublime tribunal tollitur, Antiſtes prædicat unde Deum. [n] Sidon. Carm. 16. ad Fauſtum. Seu te conſpicuis gradibus venerabilis Aræ, Concionaturum plebs ſedula circumſiſtit. [o] Valeſ. Not. in Socrat. lib. 6. c. 5.

debert. And therefore both Socrates [p], and Sozomen, ſeem to ſpeak of Chryſoſtom's Preaching in the Ambo as an unuſual Thing; but he did it for Conveniency, Socrates ſays, that he might be the better heard by the People. We cannot hence therefore conclude, that the Ambo was the ordinary Place of Preaching, but rather the Altar; and that when we read of Biſhops preaching from the Aſcent of the Ara, it is rather to be underſtood of the Altar, than the Ambo. Yet in Africk St. Auſtin ſeems to have made his Diſcourſes to the People from the Ambo, which he ſometimes calls Exedra [q], and ſometimes Apſis [r]; which I the rather note, becauſe theſe Words are of various Signification among the Ancients, ſometimes denoting the Ambo, perhaps from its Orbicular Form, and at other Times the Croſs Wings, and outer Buildings of the Church. Some take the Apſis for the Ambo in that Canon of the Third Council of Carthage, which ſays, "Notorious and ſcandalous "Criminals [s] ſhall do Penance before the Ap-"ſis. But Du Freſne, as I have noted [*] before, takes it in another Senſe, for the Porch of the Church, and it is not always eaſy to determine exactly the Meaning of it.

SECT. V. And above this the Communicants, and Fourth Order of Penitents, call'd Conſiſtentes, had their Places.

BUT to proceed: In this Part of the Church, all the Faithful, or ſuch as were in the Communion of the Church, had their Place aſſigned them; and among them the Fourth Order of Penitents, whom they called Conſiſtentes, becauſe they were allowed to ſtay, and hear the Prayers of the Church, after the Catechumens, and other Penitents, were diſmiſſed, but yet they might not make their Oblation, or participate of the Sacrifice of the Altar. In which Reſpect they are ſaid to ſtand and communicate with the reſt of the People, but in Prayers only, without the Oblation, as the Canons of Nice [t], and St. Baſil [u], word it. Whether they were ſeparate from other Communicants, in a diſtinct Place by themſelves, I find not in any other Author, ſave only Eligius Noviomenſis, who lived about the Year 640. He, in one of his Homilies [w] to the Penitents, tells them, "They were placed on the left Side of the "Church, becauſe the Lord, at the Day of "Judgment, would place the Sheep, that is, the "Righteous, on his Right Hand; and the Goats, "that is, Sinners, on his Left. But becauſe this is a later Writer, and Learned Men [x] are alſo doubtful about his Homilies, whether they be genuine or not, we can determine nothing from this Paſſage, concerning the original Cuſtom of the Church.

SECT. VI. The Places of Men and Women uſually ſeparate from each other.

ONLY this is certain from good Authors, that antiently Men and Women had their different Places in this Part of the Church. The Author of the Conſtitutions ſpeaks of it as the Cuſtom [y] of the Church in his Time, when he gives Directions about it, that Women ſhould ſit in a ſeparate Place by themſelves; and accordingly makes it one Part of the Office of Deaconneſſes to attend [z] the Womens Gate in the Church; "Let the Door-"keepers ſtand at the Gate of the Men, and "the Deaconneſſes at the Gate of the Women. St. Cyril [a] alſo takes Notice of this Diſtinction, as cuſtomary in his own Church at Jeruſalem, ſaying, "Let a Separation be made, that "Men be with Men, and Women with Wo-"men in the Church." The like Intimation is given us by St. Auſtin, that each Sex [b] had their diſtinct Places in the Church: And he particularly mentions the Womens Part, as diſtinct alſo in the Baptiſtery [c] of the Church. Paulinus [d] takes Notice of the ſame in the Life of St. Ambroſe, telling us, "How St. Am-"broſe was once furiouſly aſſaulted in a Church "by an Arrian Woman, who getting up into "the Tribunal to him, would needs have haled "him by his Garments to the Womens Part, "that they might have beat him, and made him "fly the Church. This Diſtinction was ſo generally obſerved in the Time of Conſtantine, that Socrates [e] ſays, "His Mother Helena always "ſubmitted to the Diſcipline of the Church in "this Reſpect, praying with the Women in "the Womens Part. And it was uſually made by Rails, or Wooden Walls, as St. Chryſoſtom terms them, who has theſe remarkable Words concerning the Original of this Cuſtom: "Men "ought to be ſeparated [f] from Women, ſays "he, by an inward Wall, meaning that of the "Heart: But becauſe they would not, our Fore-"fathers ſeparated them by theſe wooden Walls; "for I have heard from our Seniors, that it "was not ſo from the Beginning; for in Chriſt "Jeſus there is neither Male nor Female. Do [p] Socrat. lib. 6. c. 5. Sozomen. lib. 8. c. 5. [q] Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. 22. c. 8. In gradibus Exedræ, in qua de ſuperiore loquebar loco, feci ſtare ambos fratres, cum eorum legeretur Libellus. [r] Aug. Ep. 225. Honoratiores & graviores in Apſidem aſcendentes, cum Epiſcopo colloquuntur, &c. It. Ep. 203. In futuro Chriſti Judicio nec Apſides gradatæ nec Cathedræ velatæ, &c. [s] Conc. Carth. 3. c. 32. ante Apſidem ei manus imponatur. [*] Chap. 4. n. 1. [t] Conc. Nicen. c. 11. [u] Baſil. Ep. Canon. c. 56. Conc. Ancyr. can. 8. [w] Eligius Hom. 8. ad Pœnit. Bibl. Patr. tom. 2. p. 99. Cur ergo in ſiniſtra parte Eccleſiæ poſiti eſtis? Non ſine cauſa uſus Eccleſiæ hoc obtinuit, ſed quia Dominus in Judicio oves, id eſt, juſtos, a dextris; hædos vero, id eſt, peccatores a ſiniſtris ponet. [x] Vid. Albertin. de Euchar. lib. 3. p. 906. [y] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib 2. c. 57. αἱ γυναῖκες κεχωρισμένως καὶ αὗται καθεζέσθωσαν. [z] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. lib. 8. c. 20. & 28. [a] Cyril. Præfat. in Catech. n. 8. διεσάλδω τὰ πρόγματα, ἀνδρες μὲν ἀνδρῶν, καὶ γυναῖκες μὲν γυναικῶν. [b] Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. 2. c. 28. Populi confluunt ad Eccleſias caſta celebritate, honeſta utriuſque ſexus diſcretione. [c] Ib. lib. 22. c. 8. Admonetur in ſomnis Innocentia, appropinquante Paſcha, ut in Parte Fœminarum obſervanti ad Baptiſterium, quæcunque illi baptizata primitus occurriſſet, eundem locum ſigno Chriſti ſignaret. [d] Paulin. Vit. Ambroſ. p. 3. Tribunal conſcendens, apprehenſo veſtimento Sacerdotis, cum illum attrahere vellet ad Partem mulierum, &c. [e] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 17. ὡς καὶ σωφρόνεσαι ἐν τῷ τῶν γυναικῶν τάγματι. [f] Chryſoſt. Homil. 74. in Matth.

we not read that Men and Women prayed together in their upper Rooms? Yet Euſebius [g] makes this Diſtinction as antient as Philo Judæus and St. Mark, and many Learned Men think it came from the Jewiſh Church into the Chriſtian not long after the Days of the Apoſtles. Some are a little too curious in fixing this Womens Part always preciſely to the North or Right Side of the Church. For though this might be the Cuſtom of the Weſtern Churches in later Ages, when Amalarius Fortunatus, and Radulphus Tungrenſis, and the Authors of the Micrologus and Ordo Romanus lived, which Writers are cited by Durantus [h] for it; yet it appears to have been otherwiſe antiently in many of the Greek Churches. Nor does that Funeral Inſcription, which ſome produce out of the Roma Subterranea, prove the contrary, which ſpeaks [i] of Perſons lying interr'd Siniſtra Parte Virorum, on the South or Left Side of the Church, where the Men ſat. For not to enquire into the Antiquity of that Inſcription, it proves no more but that the Men ſat on the Left Side in the Roman Churches: Which does not hinder the Women from having their Apartment on that Side too, if the ſame Cuſtom was at Rome which was at Conſtantinople and other Greek Churches, which was for the Men to ſit below, and the Women in Portico's, or Galleries, above them, on the Left Side of the Church, if not on the Right alſo. For thus Gregory Nazianzen [k] deſcribes his Temple of Anaſtaſia, making the Men to ſtand by the Rails of the Chancel, and the Virgins and Matrons to be hearkening from their upper Galleries above the other. And ſo it was in the Church of Sancta Sophia, and many other Churches.

SECT. VII. Why theſe Places of the Women were called κατηχέμενα and ὑπερῶα.

UPON this Account theſe Places of the Women are, by ſuch Greek Writers as ſpeak of them, termed ὑπερῶα, upper Rooms, as by Evagrius [l] in his Deſcription of the Temple of Sancta Sophia, and more particularly by Paulus Silentiarius [m], who ſtiles them expreſly θηλυτέρων ὑπερώια, the upper Galleries of the Women. Theſe were alſo called κατηχέμενα, as appears from an Edict of the Emperor Leo [n], which makes theſe upper Rooms and the Catechumena to be the ſame Thing. Suicerus [o] and Hoſpinian, and many other Learned Men miſtake theſe for the Place where the Catechumens ſtood, and where the Catechetical Books were kept: But Du Freſne [p] more truly obſerves, "That they were ſo called, "becauſe they were Places of Hearing, where "the Women ſat in their upper Galleries to "hear Divine Service. In one of theſe the Empreſs commonly had her Apartment, as Du Freſne obſerves out of Evagrius. And by that one may eaſily underſtand what Paulus Diaconus [q] means, when ſpeaking of the Empreſs Eirene, he ſays, "She went up by the Aſcent of the Brazen "Gate into the Catechumenia of the Church, that is, into the Place of Hearing among the Womens Apartments in the Church. Theſe Galleries were ſometimes alſo made uſe of for Councils to ſit in, as Leo Allatius [r] has obſerved of the Council of Conſtantinople in the Time of Johannes Comnenus, An. 1165, "That it was "held ἐν τοῖς δεξιοῖς κατηχεμένοις, in the Right-"hand Galleries of the Church of Alexius: And ſome others are mentioned [s] as held in the ſame Place.

SECT. VIII. Private Cells for Meditation, Reading, and Prayer on the Back of theſe.

THE Inner Parts of theſe Portico's were ſometimes divided into little Cells, or Places of Retirement on the Walls of the Church, and that not only in the Womens Parts, but the Mens alſo, as may be collected from the Account which Paulinus Nolanus gives of them, who calls them Cubicula, little Chambers, and tells us, "The Uſe of "them [t] was for People to retire into, that "were minded to give themſelves to Reading, "or Meditation, or private Prayer. Theſe were looked upon as Parts of the Catechumenia, and were ſometimes abuſed to prophane Uſes inſtead of pious: For, as we may collect from the Decrees of the Council of Trullo [u] and the Emperor Leo [w], ſome made Uſe of them for Lodgings inſtead of Oratories, and cohabited with their Wives there: To correct which Abuſe, it is ordered in both thoſe Decrees, that all ſuch Perſons ſhould be expelled from the Catechumenia of the Church.

SECT. IX. The Place of the Virgins and Widows diſtinguiſhed from others.

IT is to be noted farther, that not only Men and Women had their diſtinct Places, but alſo Virgins and Widows a peculiar Apartment aſſigned to them. Which we learn from St. Ambroſe's Diſcourſe to a Lapſed Virgin, telling her [x], "That ſhe ought "to have remembred that Place in the Church, "railed out from the reſt, where ſhe was uſed "to ſtand, whither the Religious Matrons and "Noble Women came thronging to receive her "Salutations, which were more holy and bet-

[g] Euſeb. lib. 2. c. 17. [h] Durant. de Ritib. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 18. [i] Roma Subterran. lib. 2. c. 10. n. 23. [k] Nazian. Somnium de Templo Anaſtaſ. Tom. 2. p. 78. αἳ δ' ἄρ' ἀφ' ὑψηλῶν τειχέων ἐυκοσμον ἀκουὴν ἀγναὶ παρθενικαὶ κλῖνον ἄμ' ἐσθλογάμοις. [l] Evagr. Hiſt. lib. 4. c. 31. [m] Paul. Silentiar. Deſcr. S. Soph. Part. 1. ver. 256. [n] Leo Novel. 73. ἐν τοῖς τῆ ἐκκλησιῶν ὑπερώοις ἅπερ ὁ πολὺς ἀνθρωπος κατηχέμενα καλεῖν ἔγνω. [o] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccl. voce κατηχέμενα. [p] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 550. [q] Paul. Diacon. Miſcel. lib. 23. Aſcendit Imperatrix Eirene per æneæ portæ aſcenſum in Catechumenia Eccleſiæ. [r] Leo Allat. de Conſenſu Eccleſ. lib. 2. c. 11. p. 645. [s] Leo Allat. ibid. c. 12. p. 682. [t] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. Cubicula intra Porticus quaternalongis Baſilicæ lateribus inſerta, ſecretis Orantium, vel in Lege Domini mediantium, præterea memoriis Religioſorum ac familiarium accommodatos ad pacis æternæ requiem locos præbent. [u] Conc. Trullan. can. 97. [w] Leo Novel. 73. [x] Ambroſ. ad Virgin. Lapſam. c. 6. Nonne vel illum locum Tabulis ſeparatum, in quo Eccleſia ſtabas, recordari debuiſti? Ad quem religioſæ Matronæ & Nobiles certatim currebant, tua Oſcula petentes, quæ ſanctiores & meliores te erant.

" ter than her ſelf. This appears alſo from the Author [y] of the Conſtitutions, who ſpeaking of the Order in which Perſons were appointed to ſit in the Church, firſt places the Virgins, Widows and aged Women in the higheſt Rank; then Married Women below them in a Place by themſelves; then their Children; Daughters with their Mothers, and Sons with their Fathers, or next behind them; and laſt of all young Men according to their Age in different Stations. This was the Order in ſuch Churches as had none of thoſe Hyperoa, or Galleries before ſpoken of: For otherwiſe, as has been noted out of Nazianzen, the Virgins and Matrons had their diſtinct Places in the Portico's above. I do not here alledge Origen, after Durantus and Bona, becauſe they plainly miſtake the Senſe of their Author, who ſpeaks not of the Chriſtian Church, but of the Jewiſh Temple, and that with ſuch a formal Story, that it is a wonder any Learned Men could miſtake him. He tells us, " He had " it from an old Tradition, [z] that there was " a Place in the Temple peculiar for Virgins to " worſhip God in, whither no married Wo- " man was allowed to come. But the Virgin " Mary, after ſhe had brought forth our Saviour, " went and ſtood to worſhip there: Which " when they that knew ſhe had born a Son, " would not allow of; Zacharias, the Father of " St. John Baptiſt, ſtood up and ſaid, She is " worthy to ſtand in the Place of Virgins, for ſhe " is yet a Virgin. Upon which they roſe up a- " gainſt Zacharias, as a Breaker of the Law, " in permitting a married Woman to ſtand in " the Place of Virgins, and ſlew him between " the Temple and the Altar. I make no farther Reflection on this Paſſage at preſent, but leave it, as I find it, to the Judgment of the Reader. As to the Place of Virgins in the Chriſtian Church, I have only this one Thing more to remark out of St. Ambroſe, which is, That uſually ſome profitable Texts of Scripture [a] were written upon the Walls of the Church in this Place, proper to the Virgin-State, ſuch as that of St. Paul, 1 Cor. vii. 34. There is Difference between a Wife and a Virgin: The unmarried Woman careth for the Things of the Lord, that ſhe may be Holy both in Body and in Spirit. Which Leſſon, St. Ambroſe tells the Virgin he writes to, ſhe ought to have remembred, becauſe it was written before her Eyes upon the Walls of the Church.

SECT. X.

The σωλεῖον or Solea, that is, the Magiſtrates Throne in this Part of the Church.

THERE is one Place more to be taken Notice of in ſome Churches, before we leave this Part of the Temple to go into the Sanctuary, which is, what Codinus [b] and ſome other Modern Greeks call the σωλεῖον, a Place of ſome Note in the Church of Sancta Sophia, but not exactly agreed upon by Learned Men, either what or where it was, or what uſe it was put to. Gretſer in his Notes upon Codinus [c], fancies it to be nothing elſe but the Pavement at the Entrance of the Sanctuary, or ſome ſuch Thing adjoining to it: Morinus [d] and Allatius [e] ſay it was ſome Place between the Bema and the Ambo. Schelſtrate is a little more particular [f], " That it was the Place before the Rails " of the Sanctuary, where the Emperor had his " Seat on the right Hand, and the Readers " and Subdeacons on the left. But Suicerus [g] and Meurſius are more poſitive, " That it " was only the Emperor's Throne, and called " σωλεῖον from the Latin Solium. And Dr. Beverege [h] inclines to the ſame Opinion. Du Freſne [i] allows of this as probable likewiſe, but he alſo fancies it might ſignify the Limina Cancellorum, the Threſhold, or raiſed Foundation upon which the Rails of the Chancel were erected, and be ſo called from Solum, whence comes the French Name Seuil, and the Engliſh, Sill, or Groundſil. This was uſually adorned and beautified very richly, he thinks, with Gold and precious Stones, and ſometimes reverenced with the Kiſſes and Salutations of the People; whence the Phraſes, Exoſculari Limina, & Liminibus Martyrum affundi, in Sidonius and Prudentius, are by him interpreted to this Purpoſe. But I conceive the former Opinion moſt probable, which takes it for the Emperor's Throne, which was toward the Eaſt End of the Church in the Men's Portico, over-againſt the Altar, where now the Sultan has his Seat among the Turks. For that Place which Dr. Beverege calls the Embolus, and others the Circuitus, or ſide Iſles on both Sides, were in the Temple of Sancta Sophia Portico's for Men below, and Women above. And as the Empreſs had her Seat in the upper End of the Womens Apartment, ſo the Emperors had theirs in the Mens Apartment next to the Chancel, from the Time that Sozomen [k] tells us Theodoſius ſubmitted to the Reproof of St. Ambroſe, who blamed him for taking his Seat within the Rails of the Sanctuary (though it had been cuſtomary for the Emperors ſo to do:) After which Admonition both he and his Succeſſors always took their Place without the Rails, whence that Place ſeems to be called the Solium, the Royal Seat. Which is confirmed a little by what Suicerus obſerves out of Cedrenas and Codinus, " That Juſtinian " made the Solea of Gold and Onyx Stone; which are proper Materials to adorn a Throne, but not ſo proper to be laid in the Pavement of a Church. Not far from this Du Freſne [l] obſerves in ſome Modern Churches, a Place [y] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. αἱ παρθένοι καὶ αἱ χῆραι, καὶ πρεσβύτιδες, πρῶται πασῶν στήκετωσαν, ἢ καθεζέσθωσαν. [z] Origen. Hom. 26. in Matth. p. 162. [a] Ambroſ. ad Virgin. Lapſam. c. 6. Nonne vel illa Præcepta, quæ oculis tuis ipſe Scriptus Paries ingerebat, recordari debuiſti? Diviſa eſt Mulier & Virgo, &c. [b] Codin. Origin. Conſtant. lib. 3. c. 12. [c] Gretſer. Not. in Loc. [d] Morin. de Ordinat. Par. 2. n. 52. [e] Allat. de Templis Græcor. Diſſert. 2. [f] Schelſtrat. Concil. Antioch. p. 192. [g] Suicer. Theſaur. & Meurſius in Gloſſar. [h] Bevereg. Not. in Conc. Nicen. c. 11. [i] Du Freſne Not. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 585. [k] Sozom. lib. 7. c. 25. [l] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 560.

called

called the Senatorium, which ſome take to be only another Name for the Seats of the Biſhop and Presbyters, who were the Senate of the Church: But Du Freſne thinks it was rather the Seat of the Magiſtrates, called Senators, whence their Apartment had the Name of Senatorium in the Church.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Bema, or Third Part of the Temple, called the Altar and the Sanctuary, and the Parts and Uſes of it.

SECT. I. The Chancel antiently called Bema, or Tribunal.

THE Third, and innermoſt Part of the antient Churches, was that which we now call the Chancel; but originally it was known by many other Names. One of the moſt common Names was that of Βῆμα, or Tribunal, which, as I have noted before, is a Word of various Signification, denoting ſometimes the Ambo, or Reading-Desk, and ſometimes the Altar, and ſometimes the Seats, or Thrones, of the Biſhop and Presbyters, and ſometimes the whole Space where theſe Thrones and the Altar ſtood. In which Senſe I underſtand that Canon of the Council of Laodicea [a], which forbids Presbyters to go into the Bema, and ſit there before the Biſhop comes. Suicerus has obſerved it [b] frequently to be thus uſed in the Liturgies of St. Chryſoſtom and St. Baſil. And Chryſoſtom [c], in one of his Homilies, more particularly deſcribes it to be the Place whither the Biſhop went by an Aſcent into it, to Preach, to Pray, to ſtand by the Holy Temple, and offer the tremendous Sacrifice for the People. By which it is eaſy to underſtand, that he takes it not barely for the Altar alone, or the Biſhop's Throne, but for the whole Place where they ſtood, and where theſe ſeveral Offices were performed. And the Reaſon of the Name Bema was what Chryſoſtom alſo intimates, when he ſays, "They went up by an "Aſcent into it. For Bema and Ambo have both the ſame Original, from ἀναβάναν, becauſe they were Places exalted above the reſt, and like the Tribunals of Judges, had an Aſcent by Steps into them. Now the Bema was more peculiarly allotted to the Clergy, and upon that Account, as I have noted before in [*] a former Book, the Clergy were ſometimes ſtiled οἱ τοῦ Βήματος, and τάξις τοῦ Βήματος, the Order of the Bema, or the Sanctuary.

SECT. II. Alſo Ἅγιον or ἱερατεῖον, and Sacrarium, the Holy, or the Sanctuary.

FOR the Name Sanctuary was alſo appropriated to this Part of the Church. The Greeks peculiarly ſtiled it Ἅγιον, the Holy; and from thence the Altar was called Ἅγιον Ἁγίων, the Holy of Holies, which is the Term that Euſebius [d] uſes in deſcribing the Temple of Paulinus. In other Places [e] he calls it Ἁγιασμα, which is the Name whereby the Seventy call the Sanctuary in the Old Teſtament. The Latins called it Sacrarium, the Sanctuary. As in the Firſt Council of Bracara, which forbids Laymen [f] to come into the Sanctuary to communicate: And the Council of Vaiſon, which [g] ſpeaks of the Office of Ordering or Diſpoſing the Things of the Sanctuary: And the Fourth Council of Carthage, which forbids the Oblation of ſuch as are at Variance one with another, to be received [h] either in the Treaſury, or the Sanctuary.

SECT. III. And Θυσιαστήριον, the Altar Part.

THE Greeks alſo termed it Θυσιαστήριον, the Altar Part. For tho' that Word commonly ſignifies the Altar it ſelf, or the Lord's Table, yet in ſome antient Canons, and Eccleſiaſtical Writers, as Habertus [i] and Mr. Mede [k] have obſerved, it is uſed to denote the whole Sanctuary within the Rails, where none but the Clergy were allowed. As in the Councils of Laodicea [l] and Trullo [m], which forbid Women and Laymen to come into the Θυσιαστήριον, it muſt mean the whole Altar Part, or Chancel. And ſo in Socrates [n], and Theodoret [o], and many others, who ſpeak of St. Ambroſe excluding Theodoſius the Emperor from within the Rails of the Sanctuary.

SECT. IV. Presbyterium and Diaconicum.

ST. Cyprian, in his 55th Epiſtle, calls it Conſeſſus Cleri, the Preſbytery. And Forbeſius [p], and ſome other Learned Men, think it was alſo called Diaconicum, from the Presbyters ſitting, and the Deacons miniſtring there. Thus they underſtand the Council of Laodicea [q], which forbids Sub-deacons to have any Place in the Diaconicum, or to touch the Sacred Veſſels of the Lord's Table. But I muſt note, that though the Name Diaconicum in that Canon may ſignify the Chancel, or Sanctuary, yet it more commonly means the Veſtry, or Repoſitory of the Sacred Veſſels, of which we are to give a farther Account, when we come to ſpeak of the Exedræ of the Church.

[a] Conc. Laodic. can. 56. [b] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccl. voce Βῆμα. [c] Chryſoſt. Hom. 36. de Pentecoſt. Tom. 5. p. 553. [*] Book 1. Chap. 5. Sect. 11. [d] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. p. 381. [e] Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 18. [f] Conc. Bracar. 1. c. 31. Ingredi Sacrarium ad communicandum non liceat Laicis, niſi tantum Clericis. [g] Conc. Vaſenſ. c. 3. Cujus Officium eſt Sacrarium diſponere & Sacramenta ſuſcipere. [h] Conc. Carth. 4. can. 93. Oblationes diſſidentium fratrum, neque in Sacrario, neque in Gazophylacio recipiantur. [i] Habert. Archierat. p. 663. [k] Mede Comment. Apocalyp. p. 479. [l] Conc. Laodic. c. 44. [m] Conc. Trull. can. 69. [n] Socrat. lib. 1. c. 25. [o] Theodor. lib. 1. c. 14. [p] Forbeſ. Irenic. lib. 2. c. 11. p. 221. [q] Conc. Laodic. can. 21.

SECT. V. Also Chorus, or Quire.

IN ſome Canons it ſeems alſo to have had the Name of Chorus, whence comes our Engliſh Quire. As in the Fourth Council of Toledo, which thus appoints [r] the Order and Manner of Mens communicating in the Church, ſo as that the Prieſts and Deacons ſhould communicate before the Altar, the Inferior Clergy in the Quire, and the People without the Quire. Though ſome take the Chorus to ſignify rather the Place of the Singers and Readers in the other Part of the Church.

SECT. VI. This Place ſeparated from the reſt by Rails called Cancelli, whence comes Chancel.

EUSEBIUS, deſcribing this Part of the Temple of Paulinus, "It was divided from the reſt "by certain Rails [ſ] of "Wood, curiouſly and artificially wrought in the Form of "Net-Work, to make it inacceſſible to the "Multitude. Theſe the Latins call Cancelli, whence comes our Engliſh Name, Chancel. In other Greek Writers they are termed Κιγκλίδες. Whence in Theodoret [t] τὰ ἔνδον τῶν Κιγκλίδων, the Place within the Rails, is but another Name for the Altar-Part, or Chancel. And to lay hold of the Rails, in the Phraſe of Syneſius [u], is the ſame Thing as to take Sanctuary at the Altar.

SECT. VII. And kept inacceſſible to the Multitude. Whence it was called Adyta.

BY theſe Rails, as Euſebius words it, "This whole Altar-"place was kept inacceſſible to "all but the Clergy in time of "Divine Service. The Council of Laodicea has one Canon [w] particularly forbidding Women to come within the Altar-part. And another in more general Terms, allowing none but the ἱερατικοὶ to communicate there [x]. In which Canon ſome take the Word, ἱερατικοὶ, to mean all the Clergy, Inferior as well as Superior: But Habertus [y] thinks it means only the Superior Clergy, Prieſts and Deacons; and that all the Inferiors, Sub-deacons, Readers, &c. were excluded from this Part as well as the People. However, it is agreed on all Hands that the People in that Age had no Place there. For St. Ambroſe would not permit the Emperor Theodoſius himſelf to communicate [†] in this Part, but obliged him to retire, as ſoon as he had made his Oblation at the Altar. Which Cuſtom continued for ſome Ages after. As appears from what Theodoſius Junior ſays of himſelf, in the Acts of the Council of Epheſus [z], "That he "only went up to the Altar, to make his Obla-"tion, and having done that, retired again to "the Exterior Court, or Atrium of the People. And ſo we find it decreed, correſpondent to this Practice, in the Council of Trullo [a], "That "no Layman whatſoever ſhould come into the "Altar-Part, except only the Emperor, when "he had made his Oblation to the Creator, ac-"cording to antient Cuſtom. And hence it was that this Part of the Church was called Ἄβατα, and Ἄδυτα, by Theodoret [b], and Euſebius, and other Greek Writers, and Adyta by the Latins, that is, Inacceſſible; becauſe there was no Place of Acceſs here for the People, who were wholly excluded from it. Though I muſt note, that according to the Difference of Times and Places, different Cuſtoms ſeem to have prevailed in this Matter. For the moſt antient Cuſtom was both for Men and Women to come up to the Altar, and communicate there, as it appears to have been in the Third Century, in the Time of Dionyſius of Alexandria, who ſpeaks both of Men [c] and Women [d] ſtanding at the Holy Table, and reaching forth their Hands to receive the Euchariſt there. And ſo Valeſius underſtands it [e]. And the ſame Privilege was allowed the People in France, in the ſixth Century. For the Second Council of Tours, An. 567, orders the Holy of Holies [f] to be open both for Men and Women, to pray and communicate in, at the Time of the Oblation; though at other Times, when there was any other Service without the Communion, they were not allowed to come within the Chorus of the Singers, or Rails of the Chancel. By which alſo we learn what Part of the Church in this Age, in France, was called the Chorus, namely, that which was immediately within the Rails of the Chancel, where the Inferior Clergy had their Station in the Time of the Oblation.

SECT. VIII. The Holy Gates, and Veils, or Hangings dividing the Chancel from the reſt of the Church.

THE Modern Greeks call the Entrance into this Part the Holy Gates, becauſe they open from the Body of the Church into the Holy of Holies. But there is little mention made of theſe in antient Writers. But they often ſpeak of the Uſe of Veils, or Hangings in this Place, to cover the Proſpect of the Altar. Athanaſius calls them Βῆλα τῆς ἐκκλησίας, the Hangings of the Church. For ſpeaking of the Fury of the Arrians, and their ravaging a Church in the Time of Conſtantius, he ſays, "They took the Biſhop's "Throne, and the Seats of the Presbyters [g], "and the Table which was of Wood, and the "Veils of the Church, and whatever elſe they "could, and carried them out and burnt them. In Syneſius [h] they are called καταπέτασμα μυσικὸν, the myſtical Veils. And in Chryſoſtom and Eva- [r] Conc. Tolet. 4. c. 17. Sacerdotes & Levitæ ante altare communicent, in Choro Clerus, extra Chorum Populus. Vid. Conc. Turon. 2. can. 4. [ſ] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. p. 381. ὡς ἂν ἔξω τοῖς πολλοῖς ἄβατα, ἀπὸ ζύλα περιφραξάμενος δικτύοις, &c. [t] Theodor. lib. 5. c. 17. [u] Syneſii Cataſtaſi, p. 303. [w] Conc. Laodic. c. 44. ὅτι οὐ δεῖ γυναῖκας ἐν τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ εἰσέρχεσθαι. [x] Ibid. can. 19. μόνον δὲ τοῖς ἱερατικοῖς εἰσιέναι εἰς τὸ θυσιαστήριον καὶ κοινωνεῖν. [y] Habert. Archieratic. Par. 10. Obſer. 9. p. 268. [†] Vide Theodor. lib. 5. c. 17. Sozom. lib. 7. c. 24. [z] Edict. Theodoſ. ad calcem Conc. Epheſ. Tom. 3. p. 1237. τῷ ἁγιωτάτῳ θυσιαστηρίῳ διὰ μόνων τῶν τῶν δώρεῶν προσφορᾶν ἐφαπτόμεθα. [a] Conc. Trull. can. 69. [b] Theodor. lib. 5. c. 17. [c] Dionyſ. ap. Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 9. τραπέζῃ ἑστῶντα, &c. [d] Dionyſ. Epiſt. Canon. can. 2. [e] Valeſ. Not. in Euſeb. lib. 7. c. 9. [f] Conc. Turon. 2. can. 4. Ad orandum & communicandum Laicis & Fœminis, ſicut mos eſt, pateant Sancta Sanctorum. [g] Athan. Ep. ad Solitar. Tom. 1. p. 847. [h] Syneſ. Ep. 67. ad Theophil. p. 240.

grius,

grius, ἀμφίθυρα, from their opening in the middle as folding Doors. These were sometimes richly adorned with Gold, as that which Evagrius [i] says Chosroes gave to the Church of Antioch. The Use of them was partly to hide the Prospect of this Part of the Church, from the Catechumens and Unbelievers, and partly to cover the Sacrifice of the Eucharist, in the time of Consecration, as we learn from these Words of Chrysostom, "When the Sacrifice is brought "forth, when Christ the Lamb of God is offer-"ed, when you hear this Signal given, Let us "all join in common Prayer, when you see the "Veils [k] withdrawn, then think you see Hea-"ven opened, and the Angels descending from "above. There were also several other Veils, to note this by the way, in other Parts of the Church. For Paulinus [l] speaks often of Veils before the Doors of the Church. And St. Jerom commends Nepotian, for that among other Parts of his Concern for the Decency of the Church, as he took care that the Altar, and the Walls, and the Pavement should be kept clean, so also that the Doors should have their Keepers, and the Gates [m] their Veils. In like manner Epiphanius [n] speaking of the Church of Anablatha in Palestine, says, "He found a Veil hanging be-"fore the Doors of the Church, which he tore "in Pieces, not because it was a Veil, but be-"cause it had the Image of Christ, or some Saint "painted on it, which was contrary to the Rules "of the Christian Church. He therefore or-dered the Guardians of the Church to bury some Poor Man in it, and sent them at his own Expence another plain one in its stead. There were also Veils between the Pillars of the Hyperoa, or Womens Galleries, to be drawn in Time of the Oblation, as Du Fresne [o] has observed out of Paulus Silentiarius, and Amphilochius, in the Life of St. Basil. And some others of like nature will easily be observed by a curious Reader.

SECT. IX. The highest Part of the Chancel called Apsis, Exedra, or Conchula Bematis.

AT the upper End of the Chancel was commonly a Semicircular Building, which from the Figure and Position of it, is by some Authors called Apsis, and Exedra, and Conchula Bematis. For these are Words that signify any Arched or Spherical Building, like the Canopy of Heaven, to which St. Jerom applies the Name of Apsis [p]. It was called Concha, because in Figure it resembled something the Fashion of a Shell, as Du Fresne shews out of Procopius, and Paulus Silentiarius, and Paulinus, and other Writers. Du Fresne [q] thinks it is also called Exedra by St. Austin, who says, "The Conference between the Catholicks, "and Emeritus the Donatist Bishop, was held "in the Exedra of the Church; which he in-terprets the Place where the Bishop and Presbyters had their usual Residence in the upper End of the Bema, beyond the Altar. But Valesius [r], and other Learned Men, take Exedra here in the common Sense for one of the outer Buildings of the Church. And it is not easy to determine so nice a Controversy between them.

SECT X. This antiently the Place of the Thrones of the Bishop, and his Presbyters.

HOWEVER, this is certain, that the Bishop's Throne, with the Thrones of his Presbyters on each Side of it, were always fixt in this Part of the Church, in a Semicircle above the Altar. For antiently the Seats of the Bishop and Presbyters were joined together, and all called Thrones, as is evident from Eusebius his Description of the Temple of Paulinus, who [s] says, "He adorned it with "Thrones set on high for the Honour of the "Presidents, or Rulers, of the People, that is, "the Bishop and Presbyters together. Hence it is that Nazianzen, speaking of the Presbyters [t] as the Rulers of the People, and venerable Senate of the Church, calls their Seats the Second Thrones. Constantine in his Letter to Chrestus, Bishop of Syracuse, summoning him to the Council of Arles, uses the same Phrase, bidding [u] him bring with him Two of the Second Throne, that is, Two Presbyters. I know indeed Carolus a Sancto Paulo [w] by those of the Second Throne understands Bishops, in Opposition to Primates, or Metropolitans, which he reckons to be those of the First Throne. But the Use of the Phrase, both in Eusebius and Nazianzen [x], leads us rather to believe that he meant Presbyters, who sat with their Bishop in the Church upon Thrones, as they stile them, of the Second Order. For this, as I have had Occasion to shew in another [*] Place, was the Difference between them, that the Bishop's was generally termed the High Throne, and the Presbyters the Second Throne; or as Athanasius [y] calls them, the Throne, and the Joint-Chairs, or Seats of the Presbyters. The Bishop's Throne was otherwise called Βῆμα, the Tribunal, as we may see in Eusebius [z], where he relates the Censure of the Council of Antioch, passed on Paulus Samosatensis for erecting his Throne, or Tribunal, too stately, with a Veil, or Secretum

[i] Evagr. lib. 6. c. 21. [k] Chrysost. Hom. 3. in Ephes. p. 1052. ὅταν ἴδῃς ἀνελκόμενα τὰ ἀμφίθυρα, &c. [l] Paulin. Natal. Felic. 3. Aurea nunc niveis ornantur limina velis. Id. Natal. 6. Pulchra tegendis Vela ferant foribus. [m] Hieron. Epitaph. Nepotian. Erat sollicitus, si niteret altare, si parietes absque fuligine, si pavimenta tersa, si janitor creber in Porta, Vela semper in Ostiis, &c. [n] Epiphan. Ep. ad Johan. Hierosolym. Inveni ibi Velum pendens in foribus ejusdem Ecclesiæ, &c. [o] Du Fresne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 551. [p] Hieron. lib. 2. in Ephes. c. 4. p. 223. In summo Cœli fornice, & ut ipso verbo utar, Apside. [q] Aug. de Gestis cum Emerito, Tom. 7. p. 250. Cum Deuterius Episcopus Metropolitanus—— una cum cæteris Episcopis in Exedram processissent, præsentibus Presbyteris & Diaconis & universo Clero, ac frequentissima Plebe, &c. Vid. Du Fresne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 565. [r] Vales. Not. in Euseb. de Vita Const. lib. 3. c. 50. [s] Euseb. lib. 10. c. 4. θρόνοις τοῖς ἐνοτάτω εἰς τὴν τῶν προέδρων τιμὴν. &c. [t] Naz. Carm. Iambic. 23. πρῶτον μὲν τὰ δεύτερα θρόνων λελογχότες λαοῦ προεδροὶ πρεσβύται, σεμνὴ γερουσία. [u] Ap. Euseb. lib. 10. c. 5. δύο γέτονας ἐκ τῶν δευτέρων θρόνων. [w] Carol. à S. Paulo Geograph. Sacr. p. 47. [x] Vid. Naz. Carm. de Vita sua. It. Somnium de Templo Anastas. [*] Book 2. Chap. 9. n. 7. Book 2. Chap. 19. n. 5. [y] Athan. Ep. ad Solitar. Tom. 1. p. 847. θρόνον καὶ συμβούλια. [z] Euseb. lib. 7. c. 30.

to

to it, in Imitation of the Tribunals of Secular Judges, which they did not allow of in the Christian Church: And hence the whole Chancel was sometimes called the Bema, as I have shewed before. The Latins more commonly use the Names of Sedes and Cathedra for a Bishop's Throne, whence come our English Names of Cathedral and See, for a Church where the Bishop's Chair, or Seat is fix'd. The manner of their Sitting is noted by Gregory Nazianzen, in his Description of the Church of Anastasia, where he speaks of himself as Bishop [a] sitting upon the high Throne, and the Presbyters on lower Benches on both Sides about him. And so it is described by the Author [b] of the Constitutions, and Theodoret [c], who calls the Bishop's Throne the middle Seat upon this Account. And there are some learned Persons [d] who suppose all this to be done in Imitation of the Jewish Synagogues, in which, according to Maimonides, at the upper End looking toward the Holy Land, the Law was placed in the Wall, in an Arch, and on each Side the Elders were seated in a Semicircle. The Bishop's Seat was usually covered with some decent Covering, suitable to the Dignity of his Office and Person; as we learn from Athanasius in his second Apology [e] to Constantius, where he asks, "How they could have any Concern "for the Throne Episcopally covered, who "sought to kill the Bishop that sat thereon." And St. Austin [f] seems plainly to allude to this, when he tells Maximinus the Donatist Bishop, "That when Bishops came to stand be- "fore the Tribunal of Christ at the last Judg- "ment, they themselves would then have no "Tribunals, no lofty Seats or covered Chairs, "though such Honours were exhibited to them "for a Time in this World, for the Benefit and "Advantage of the Church."

SECT. XI. And of the Altar, or Communion-Table.

THIS doubtless was the Posture antiently of the Thrones of the Bishops and Presbyters in the Christian Church, as they are represented in the several Models of the primitive Structures. From which it will be easy to observe farther, That the Place of the Communion-Table, or Altar, was not close to the Wall at the upper End, but at some little Distance from it; so as that the Bishop's Throne might be behind it, and room enough left in a void Space to encompass or surround the Altar. This seems pretty plain from an Expression in Synesius [g], who speaking of his being forced to take Sanctuary, says, "He "would fly into the Church, and encompass "the Altar." Which implies, That it was set in such manner, as that he might go round it And this is the Meaning of Eusebius, when having first spoken of the Thrones of the Bishop and Presbyters in the Church of Paulinus, he then adds, "That he set [h] the Holy of Ho- "lies, the Altar, in the middle." Which is not to be interpreted, as some have misunderstood it, of the Altar's being placed in the middle of the Nave, or Body of the Church, but in the middle of the Bema, or Sanctuary, at such a distance from the upper End, as that the Synthronus, the Seats of the Bishop and Presbyters might be behind it. St. Austin seems to refer to the same Thing, when he says, "The Table of the "Lord [i] stood in the middle." And in the Council of Constantinople, under Mennas [k], it is represented in such a Posture, as that it might be encompassed round. For 'tis said, when the Names of Pope Leo and some others which had been struck out of the Diptychs were inserted again, the People for joy at the Time when Diptychs were read, after the repetition of the Creed, ran round about the Altar for to hear them. Dr. Hammond [l] and some other learned Men, think not improbably, that this Posture of the Altar in Christian Churches, was something in Imitation of the Altar in the Jewish Temple, to which the Psalmist alludes, when he says, I will wash my Hands in Innocency, and so will I compass thine Altar, Psal. xxvi. 6. from whence they suppose the Phrase περικυκλῶν θυσιαστήριον, compassing the Altar, in the antient Rituals to be taken.

SECT. XII. Both these Names indifferently used in the Primitive Church.

GREAT Dispute has been raised in the last Age about the Name of the Communion-Table, Whether it was to be called the Holy Table, or an Altar. And indeed any Thing will afford Matter of Controversy to Men in a disputing Age: But we never read of any such Dispute in the Primitive Church. For the antient Writers used both Names indifferently; some calling it Altar; others the Lord's Table, the Holy Table, the Mystical Table, the Tremendous Table, &c. and sometimes both Table and Altar in the same Sentence together. Mr. Mede thinks it was usually called Altar for the two first Ages, and that the Name Table [m] is not to be found in any Author of those Ages now remaining. Ignatius uses only the Name [n] θυσιαστήριον, Altar, in his Genuine Epistles, three of which are alledged by Mr. Mede, to which the Reader may add another Testimony out of his Epistle [o] to the Magnesians, where he uses

[a] Nazian. Somn. Anastas. Tom. 2. p. 78. ἐζέσθαι δοκείσκον ὑπέρθρονον,—οἱ δ' μοὶ ἀμφοτέρωθεν ὑφεδριόνιο γερασῖσι ποίμνης ἡγεμόνες, &c. [b] Constit. Apost. lib. 2. c. 57. [c] Theodor. lib. 5. c. 3. [d] See Bishop Hooper Disc. of Lent, Par. 2. Chap. 6. p. 249. [e] Athan. Apol. 2. Tom. 1. p. 736. πῶς οἱ θρόνον τ' ἐσολισμένον ὑπσκοπικῶς ὁδυρόμενοι, τ' ἐν αὐτῷ καθήμενον ὑπίσκοπον ἀνελεῖν ζητῶσιν. [f] Aug. Ep. 203. In futuro Christi Judicio nec Apsidæ gradatæ, nec Cathedræ velatæ——quæ pro tempore propter Ecclesiæ utilitatem honori nostro exhibentur. [g] Synes. Catastasis. p. 303. κυκλώσομαι τὸ θυσιαστήριον, &c. [h] Euseb. lib. 10. c. 4. τὸ τ' ἁγίων ἅγιον θυσιαστήριον ἐν μέσῳ θεῖς. [i] Aug. Serm. 46. de verbis Domini. Tom. 10. p. 68. Christus quotidie pascit. Mensa ipsius est illa in medio constituta. [k] Conc. Constantinop. Act. 5. Conc. Tom. 5. p. 185. τῷ ἁγίᾳ μαθήματι καὶ τῷ σωτηρίῳ λειχθέντι καιρῷ τ' διπλύχων σωέδρημον ἅπαν τὸ πλῆθος κύκλῳ τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ. [l] Hamond. cont. Blondel. Dissert. c. 13. n. 8. [m] Mede Disc. of Altars. p. 386. [n] Ignat. Ep. ad Ephes. n. 5. Ep. ad Trallian. n. 7. Ep. ad Philad. n. 4. [o] Ignat. Ep. ad Magnes. n. 7.

both

both the Name Temple and Altar. Irenæus [p] and Origen [q] uſe the ſame Name, when they ſpeak of the Communion-table. Tertullian frequently applies to it the Name of Ara Dei and Altare. Will not your Station, or Faſt, ſays he [r], be more ſolemn, if you ſtand at the Altar of God? That is, receive the Communion on a Faſt-day? So alſo in his Book [s] ad Uxorem and de Caſtitate [t]. But they are led into an Errror by the corrupt Edition of Rhenanus, who cites his Book de Pœnitentia for the ſame thing: For though in that Edition we find mention made [u] of Kneeling at the Altar, Aris Dei adgeniculari; yet better Editions ſince teach us to read it more truly, Charis Dei adgeniculari, Kneeling down to the Beloved of God: Alluding to the Cuſtom of the Penitents falling down at the Church-doors, to beg the Prayers of the Faithful as they went in. Cyprian, the Diſciple of Tertullian, ſometimes uſes both Names, Table, and Altar, as when he ſays thoſe Words of Solomon, Prov. ix. 2. Wiſdom hath furniſhed her Table, &c. typified the Chriſtian [w] Altar. But more commonly he uſes the Name Altar alone [x], which argues that to have been at leaſt a very uſual Name in his time in the African and Latin Churches. Mr. Mede cites alſo Zeno Veronenſis as an Author of the third Century, cotemporary with Cyprian, who is indeed one that ſpeaks plain enough both of the Cancelli [y] and the Altar; but now learned Men [z] are agreed to thruſt him down a whole Century lower, ſo that he is not a competent Witneſs for the third Age, but he may ſerve for the fourth; in which Age, one may venture to ſay, there is ſcarce an Author that ſpeaks of the Lord's-table, but he alſo calls it Altar. On the other hand it is certain they did not mean by the Altar, what the Jews and Heathens meant, either an Altar dreſt up with Images, that is, Idol-gods, as the Heathens commonly had theirs adorn'd; or an Altar for bloody Sacrifices, which was the Uſe of them both among Jews and Gentiles.

SECT. XIII. In what ſenſe the Ancients ſay, they had no Altars.

IN the firſt Senſe they always rejected Altars, both Name and Thing. For their Altars had no Images either above, or about, or upon them, as the Heathen Altars always had. And upon that account the antient Apologiſts, Origen [a], Minutius Felix [b], Arnobius [c] and Lactantius [d], when the Heathens object to them, that they had no Altars, roundly and freely confeſs it in the Senſe that the Objection was made; that is, that they had no Altars furniſhed with Idol-gods, and fitted for Idol-worſhip, ſuch as the Heathen pleaded for. In like manner they denied that they had any Altars in the Jewiſh Senſe, for offering Bloody Sacrifices upon: But for their own Myſtical Unbloody Sacrifice, as they called the Euchariſt, they always owned they had an Altar, which they ſcrupled not to term indifferently θυσιαστήριον, Ara, Altare, and ſometimes βωμὸς: For though Mr. Mede thinks they never uſed that Name, yet it appears, that with the Addition of ἀναίμακτον, they ſometimes did; for Syneſius [e] ſpeaking of the Holy Table, expreſly ſtiles it ἀναίμακτον βωμὸν, the Unbloody Altar.

SECT. XIV. Of the Names, Holy Table, Myſtical Table, &c.

YET theſe ſame Authors, to diſtinguiſh their Notion more exactly, commonly uſe the Name Table for the Altar, with the Addition of ſome ſingular Epithet, implying the peculiar Uſe of it in the Chriſtian Church. In Chryſoſtom [f] it is moſt uſually termed τράπεζα μυστικὴ and φρικτὴ, the Myſtical and Tremendous Table; ſometimes the Spiritual, Divine, Royal, Immortal, Heavenly Table; of which the Reader may find Inſtances enough collected by Suicerus [g] out of that Author. St. Auſtin [h] uſually gives it the Name of Menſa Domini, the Lord's Table; whence Menſa Cypriani in that Author ſignifies either [i] the Altar, or the Church erected in the Place of St. Cyprian's Martyrdom. It were eaſy to add a thouſand other Teſtimonies out of Athanaſius, Sineſius, Socrates, Sozomen, Paulinus, and the reſt of that Age, where the Altar is called the Holy Table, to ſignify to us their Notion of the Chriſtian Sacrifice and Altar at once, that it was Myſtical and Spiritual, and had no Relation either to the Bloody Sacrifices of the Jews, or the more abſurd Idolatries of the Gentiles, but ſerved only for the Service of the Euchariſt and Oblations of the People.

SECT. XV. Altars generally made of Wood till the time of Conſtantine.

IF any is deſirous to know the Matter and Form of the ancient Altars, or Tables, St. Auſtin will inform him, that they were of Wood in his Time in the African Churches. For ſpeaking of a great Outrage committed by the Donatiſts againſt a Catholick Biſhop, whilſt he ſtood miniſtring at the Altar, he ſays, "They beat him cruelly with Clubs "and ſuch like Weapons, and at laſt [k] with "the broken Pieces of the Timber of the Altar." This is farther confirmed by the Teſtimony of Optatus, who objecting to the Donatiſts, their [p] Irenæ. lib. 4. c. 34. Nos quoque offerre vult munus frequenter ad Altare, &c. [q] Origen. Hom. 10. in Num. T. 1. p. 207. [r] Tertul. de Orat. c. 14. Nonne Solennior erit Statio tua, ſi & ad Aram Dei ſteteris. [s] Tertul. ad Uxor. lib. 1. c. 7. [t] Tertul. de Exhort. Caſtit. c. 10. [u] Tertul. de Pœnitent. c. 9. [w] Cypr. Ep. 63. ad Cæcil. It. Teſtimon. adv. Judæos lib. 2. c. 2. [x] Vid. Cypr. Ep. 40, 42, 55, 64, 63, 60, 70. [y] Zeno Serm. 9. ad Neophyt. Eccleſia Sacri Altaris fœliciter enutrita Cancellis. [z] Cave Hiſt. Literar. p. 176. [a] Orig. cont. Celſ. lib. 8. p. 389. ἡμᾶς βωμὸς καὶ ἀγάλματα καὶ νεὼς ἱδρύσαι φεύγει. [b] Minuc. Octav. Cur. nullus Aras habent, Templa nulla, nulla nota Simulacra? [c] Arnob. cont. Gentes lib. 6. Non altaria fabricemus, non Aras. [d] Lactant. lib. 2. c. 2. Quid ſibi Templa, quid Aræ volunt, &c. [e] Syneſ. Cataſtaſis, p. 303. [f] Chryſoſt. Hom. 21. Quod oportet Hæreſes eſſe T. 5. p. 313. It. Hom. 36. de Pentecoſt. p. 553. [g] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccl. voce τράπεζα. [h] Aug. Ep. 59. ad Paulin. Hom. 26. de Verbis Domini. [i] Hom. 26. ex editis a Sirmondo, ad Menſam Cypriani. [k] Aug. Ep. 50. ad Bonifac. p. 84. Stantem ad altare fuſtibus & hujuſmodi telis, lignis denique ejuſdem altaris effractis, immaniter ceciderunt.

ſacrilegious Abuſe of the Catholick Altars, ſays, "They broke them in [l] pieces in ſuch Places, "as would afford them plenty of Wood to make "new ones of; but in Places where there was "a ſcarcity of Wood, they contented them-"ſelves with ſcraping, or ſhaving them by way "of pretended Expiation." Nay, the Workmen, who wrought in this egregious Service, had Wine given them, heated with Fires made of the Fragments of the Altars. Athanaſius has likewiſe Occaſion to tell us, their Communion-tables were of Wood, in a parallel Story upon the Arians, who in one of their mad Humours, as he complains, went into a Church, and took the Throne and Seats of the Presbyters, and the Table, which was of Wood [m], and the Veils, and whatever other combuſtible Matter they could find, and carried them out, and burned them. So that there is no queſtion to be made, but that about this Time the Altars were only Tables of Wood in Africk and Egypt, as theſe Teſtimonies plainly imply. Bona [n] thinks they had Stone-Altars before, even in Times of Perſecution, but he offers no Proof but his own Opinion. Yet it is generally thought, by Hoſpinian [o] and other Learned Men, that they began to come in from the Time of Conſtantine, together with the Statelineſs and Magnificence of Churches. The Pontifical ſpeaks of Silver Altars dedicated by Conſtantine: And Gerſon, and others alledged by Hoſpinian, make Pope Sylveſter, who lived in the Time of Conſtantine, to be the Author of a Decree, That all Altars ſhould be of Stone: But theſe Authorities are of no Weight, and the Stories contradict one another. What is certain in the Caſe is this: That about the Time of Gregory Nyſſen, Altars in ſome Places began to be of Stone; for he in his Diſcourſe of Baptiſm ſpeaks of a Stone Altar. "This "Altar, ſays he, whereat we ſtand, [p] is by "Nature only common Stone, nothing different "from other Stones, whereof our Walls are "made, and our Pavements adorned; but after "it is conſecrated and dedicated to the Service "of God, it becomes an Holy Table, an Immaculate Atar, which may not be promiſcuouſly "touch'd by all, but only the Prieſts in time "of Divine Service." In the next Age in France we find a general Decree made in the Council of [q] Epone, An. 509, "That no Al-"tars ſhould be conſecrated but ſuch as were "made of Stone only." And this ſeems to be the firſt Publick Act of this nature, that we have upon authentick Record in antient Hiſtory. And from the time of this Change in the Matter of them, the Form, or Faſhion of them, changed likewiſe. For whereas before they were in the Form of Tables, they now began to be erected more like Altars, either upon a ſingle Foot, or Pillar, in the midſt, or upon an Edifice erected like a Tomb, as if it were ſome Monument of a Martyr, as Bona tells us there are ſome ſuch now to be ſeen in the Catacombs of Rome [r], and other Places.

SECT. XVI. But one Altar anciently in a Church.

IT will perhaps be ſomething more material to remark here, that antiently there was never above one Altar in a Church. One Biſhop and one Altar [s] in a Church, is the known Aphoriſm of Ignatius. And Euſebius is ſuppoſed upon this account to call the Altar in the Church of Paulinus at Tyre, μονογλὲς θυσιαςήριον, the ſingle Altar, [t] as Habertus truly obſerves upon it, who ingenuouſly confeſſes, that it has ever been the conſtant Cuſtom of the Greek Churches to have but one Altar in a Temple; in confirmation of which he cites Athanaſius, Nazianzen, Syneſius, Socrates, Theodoret, Evagrius, and many others. Cardinal Bona [u] alſo owns, he could find no Footſteps of the contrary Practice 'till the Time of Gregory the Great, and then only in the Latin Church. For the Greeks have always kept to the antient Cuſtom. He thinks indeed the contrary Cuſtom was in the Latin Church of Old, but he only ſhews his Willingneſs to believe it without Proof: And Schelſtrate [w] very juſtly cenſures him for it, ſhewing out of Optatus and St. Auſtin, that the Latins, as well as the Greeks, had then but one Altar in a Church. For Optatus [x] ſpeaks of the Altar of Cyprian's Church, as one only and no more, both in the Time of Cyprian and afterward, and thence concludes that the Donatiſts were Schiſmaticks, becauſe they went from Cyprian's Altar, and ſet up another Altar againſt it. And St. Auſtin argues againſt them [y] upon the ſame Foundation, that there ought not to be two Epiſcopal Altars in one City. This ſuppoſes then but one Altar in a Church among the Latins, as well as the Greeks; and ſo Chriſtianus Lupus [z], and Pagi [a], the Learned Corrector of Baronius, affirm it to have been the conſtant Practice of the Primitive Church. Though now (to ſee what Improvement has been made in later Ages) there are no leſs than twenty five Altars, beſides the Great Altar, in St. Peter's Church at Rome; and the Great Altar it ſelf is no leſs than twenty five Foot ſquare, with a Croſs of twenty five Inches long upon it, as Dr. Potter obſerves out of Onu-

[l] Optat. lib. 6. p. 94. Alio loco copia Lignorum frangi juſſit; alio, ut altaria raderent, lignorum inopia imperavit.—Ibid. Calida de Fragmentis Altarium facta eſt. Vid. p. 95 ibid. [m] Athan. Ep. ad Solitar. Vitam agentes. Tom. 1. p. 847. ἁρπάσαντες τὰ συμψέλλια, καὶ θρόνον, καὶ τ' τραπέζαν, ξυλίνη ὄ ση, &c. [n] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. cap. 20. n. 1. [o] Hoſpin. de Templis, lib. 2. cap. 6. p. 34. [p] Nyſſen. de Baptiſmo Chriſti. Tom. 3. p. 369. [q] Conc. Epaunenſ. can. 26. Altaria, niſi Lapidea, infuſione Chriſmatis non ſacrentur. [r] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 20. n. 1. [s] Ignat. Ep. ad Philadelph. n. 4. ἓν θυσιαςήριον πάσῃ τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ϗ ἑὶς ἐπίσκοπ⊖. Vid. Ep. ad Magneſ. n. 7. [t] Habert. Achierat. p. 661. ex Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. [u] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 14. n. 3. [w] Schelſtrat. Concilium Antiochen. p. 193. [x] Optat. lib. 1. p. 42. Erat Cathedra Epiſcopalis, erat altare loco ſuo, in quo pacifici Epiſcopi retro temporis obtulerunt, Cyprianus, Lucianus & cæteri. Sic exitum eſt foras & altare contra altare erectum eſt. [y] Aug. Hom. 3. in 1 Johan. Si in unitate ſumus, quid faciunt in hac Civitate duo altaria? [z] Lupus Concil. Tom. 3. Reſponſ. ad Michael. Cerular. [a] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 313. n. 15.

phrius

phrius and Angelus Roccha, in his ingenious Book [b] of the Number six hundred sixty six.

SECT. XVII. And sometimes but one in a City, tho' several Churches, according to some Authors.

SOME improve this Observation, of one Altar in a Church, a little farther, and think that antiently there was but one Altar in a whole City, or Diocese, and Country-Region, belonging to a Bishop; though there might be many lesser Churches, as there were many Synagogues among the Jews, though but one Temple, and one Altar. Mr. Mede [c] is of Opinion, that it was so when Justin Martyr wrote his second Apology, because of those Words of his, "On Sundays all "that live in the Towns, or in the Country, "meet together in one Place, for the Celebra- "tion of the Eucharist. And he concludes the same from several of Cyprian's Epistles [d], where Bishop and Altar are made Cor-relatives. Christianus Lupus and Pagi seem to think [e] it continued the Custom within the Walls of Rome to the Time of Pope Innocent I. For he seems to say in one of his Epistles [f] "That the "Presbyters of the several Tituli, or lesser "Churches within the City, had the Sacrament "sent to them every Sunday from the Bishop's "Altar: But the Presbyters of the Cœmiteries, "or Churches without the Walls, had Liberty "to consecrate the Eucharist in them, because "the Sacraments were not to be carried to "Places at too great a Distance." But Dr. Maurice [g] and other Learned Men think the Roman Tituli had always Communion-tables, and the Communion administred in them from the Beginning, only the consecrated Bread was sent to them from the Oblations made at the Bishop's Altar. For the Oblations, they think, at first were only made at the Bishop's Altar, and always blessed at the Bishop's Altar, though not always consecrated there. Upon which account the Name of Altar might be appropriated to that of the Bishop's Church. I shall not pretend to make any Judgment, or Decision in this Dispute, being a Matter involved in great Obscurity, but leave the Reader to judge for himself: Dr. Hammond heretofore passed [h] the same Censure on it, thinking it too dark a Point to be over-boldly determined. All I shall say farther upon it is only this, That it makes nothing for the Congregational Way (as some pretend) though it were certain there was but one Altar in a Diocese at the first. For there might notwithstanding be many Churches. Or if there was but one Church in a Diocese, while the Number of Believers was very small; yet it does not follow that there ought to be no more, when their Number so encreased in any City, or Territory, that one Church would not contain them.

SECT. XVIII. Of the Ciborium, or Canopy of the Altar.

BUT I return to the Business in hand. In some of the more stately Churches, as that of Sancta Sophia, the Altar was overshadowed with a sort of Canopy, which from the Fashion of it is termed by Paulus Silentiarius [i] Πύργος, the Turret; by others [k] Umbraculum; but among the Greeks most commonly κιβώριον, which Durantus [l], and other Modern Ritualists usually mistake for the Pyxis where the Host is kept; but Du Fresne shews [m] it to have been antiently quite another thing, viz. an ornamental Canopy hanging over the Altar. This was raised in the form of a little Turret upon four Pillars at each Corner of the Altar. The Heads of the Pillars were adorned with Silver Bowls, which was an usual Ornament in those Days, as is evident from the Description which Eusebius [n] gives of the twelve Pillars in Constantine's Church at Jerusalem. The Top of it was in the form of a Sphere, adorned with graven Flowers, whence it has sometimes the Name of Sphæra, Lilia, and Malum. Above the Sphere stood the Cross, as Paulus Silentiarius [o] represents it. And the several Arches below, between the Pillars, were hanged with Veils, or Curtains, called as some others, ἀμφίθυρα, which served also to cover or conceal the whole Altar. I have been the more particular in describing this ornamental Structure about the Altar, after Du Fresne, because the common Ritualists so generally apply the Name Ciborium only to their Pyxe, whereas in the most antient Writers it signifies this beautiful Fabrick about the Altar.

SECT. XIX. Of the Peristerion, or Columbæ.

IN some Places, after Images and Pictures began to be allowed in Churches, the Holy Ghost was represented in the Effigies of a silver Dove hovering over the Altar; and their Baptisteries had the same, as we learn from the Complaint against Severus Bishop of Antioch, in the Council of Constantinople, under Mennas, An. 536, where he is accused for diverting [p] to his own Use, among other Treasures of the Church, the silver and golden Doves that hanged over the Baptistery and the Altar, as Types, or Symbols of the Holy Ghost. And this, I think, is the first Time we meet with any Thing of this kind.

[b] Vid. Synops. Criticor. in Apocal. 13. 18. [c] Mede Disc. of Churches, p. 326. [d] Cyprian. Ep. 40, 72, 73. [e] Pagi Crit. in Baron. an. 313. n. 15. [f] Innocent. Ep. 1. ad Decent. c. 5. De Fermento, quod Die Dominica per Titulos mittimus, superflue nos consulere voluisti, cum omnes Ecclesiæ nostræ intra Civitatem sunt constitutæ. Quarum Presbyteri, quia die ipso propter Plebem sibi creditam, nobiscum convenire non possunt, idcirco fermentum a nobis confectum per Acolythos accipiunt, ut se à nostra Communione, maxime illa die, non judicent separatos. Quod per Parochias fieri debere non puto, quia non longe portanda sunt Sacramenta. Nec nos per Cœmiteria diversa constitutis Presbyteris destinamus, sed Presbyteri eorum conficiendorum jus habent atque licentiam. [g] Maurice. Diocес. Episc. p. 38. Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 23. n. 9. differs in this, that he thinks every Church had her own Oblations, and the Eucharist consecrated out of them. [h] Hamond. Differt. cont. Blondel. 3. c. 8. n. 15. In re incomperta non est audacter nimis pronunciandum. [i] Paul. Silent. par. 2. ver. 303. [k] Ordo Romanus. [l] Durant. de Ritib. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 16. [m] Du Fresne Com. in Paul. Silent. p. 569. [n] Euseb. de Vit. Const. lib. 3. c. 38. [o] Paul. Silent. ibid. ὕψωθι δ' αὐτῆς σταυρὸς ὑπερτέλλων ἀναζάνεται. [p] Conc. Const. Act. 5. Tom. 5. p. 159.

For no Credit is to be given to the Author of the Life of St. Basil, under the Name of Amphilochius, when he says, St. Basil was used to reserve the Eucharist in one of these silver Doves; because he is known to be a spurious Writer. However, when the Thing came to be in Use, the Place over the Altar where it hanged, was called Peristerion, from περιστερὰ, the Greek Name for a Dove, as Du Fresne and others have observed. If it be enquired where the Eucharist was reserved, according to ancient Custom; I answer, In Times of Persecution the Priests seem to have had it [q] in their own private Custody at home, as may be collected from an Epistle of Dionysius in Eusebius, where he relates how Serapion had the Eucharist sent him in the Night by a Boy, the Presbyter being sick, and not able to attend upon him. At other Times it was kept in one of the Pastophoria, which were certainly Places distinct from the Altar. For so the Author of the Constitutions [r] plainly informs us. In process of time it came to be kept at the Altar, either in those silver Doves we have been speaking of, or in an Ark, or Pyxe, at the foot of the Cross, which by some Canons is ordered to be placed upon the Altar. For in the second Council of Tours, An. 567, a Decree was made [s] that the Eucharist should not be kept in the Armarium, but under the Figure of the Cross upon the Altar. And so in process of time the Pyxe took the Name of Ciborium, which originally is an Egyptian Name for the husk of a Bean, as Suicerus [t] notes out of Hesychius, and thence used by the Greeks to signifie a large Cup, or Bowl, broad at the Bottom, and narrow at the Top, and from that Resemblance perhaps it came also to be the Name of this Turret or Spiral Structure about the Altar.

SECT. XX. When first the Figure of the Cross set upon the Altar.

FROM the forementioned Canon of the Council of Tours it is plain, that in the French Churches the Figure of the Cross was another Part of the Ornament of the Altar, since the Eucharist, or Sacramental Body of Christ, is ordered to be laid under it. But when Crosses came first to be set in Churches is not so easy to be determined. That they were not in Use for the three first Ages, seems evident enough from the Silence of all the Writers of those Times, and from Eusebius, who has frequent occasion to describe minutely the Churches of Constantine and others, but never once mentions a Cross erected in them, though he speaks frequently of Crosses set up in other publick Places, as a learned Writer [u] has judiciously observed out of him, who thinks they began not to be set up in Churches 'till after the Year 340. Chrysostom [w] speaks of the Sign of the Cross as used at the Lord's Table, in the Consecration of Priests, and Celebration of the Eucharist; but that seems to be meant of the transient Sign made in the Forehead (which St. Austin [x] and the Author of the Constitutions [y] speak of likewise) and not of any material Cross set upon the Altar. But Sozomen [z] speaks of material Crosses lying upon the Altar, though not in the Time of Constantine, (as Gretser [a] mistakes, whose Error is justly corrected by Valesius) but in his own Time. And after him Evagrius speaks of silver Crosses given by [b] Chosroes to one of the Churches of Constantinople, to be fixt upon the Altar. So that the Original of this Custom is not to be deduced from Constantine, as many suppose, but from the following Ages of the Church.

SECT. XXI. Of some other Ornaments and Utensils of the Altar.

BUT it is more certain that the Altars were always covered with some decent Cloth, used for Ornament, not for Mystery as in After-ages. Optatus pleading against the Donatists, that the Altars could not be polluted by the Catholicks touching them (as the Donatists vainly pretended) uses this Argument to confute them, That if any Thing was polluted, it must be the Coverings, and not the Tables; for every one knew, that the Tables [c] were covered with a Linen Cloth in time of Divine Service: So that while the Sacrament was administring, the Covering might be touched, but not the Table. And for this Reason they pretended to wash the Palls (as he calls them in another Place) in order to give [d] them an Expiation. Victor Uticensis makes a like complaint of one Proculus, an Agent of King Geisericus, who having plundered the Catholick Churches in Zeugitana, made himself [e] a Shirt and Breeches of the Palls of the Altar. Isidore of Pelusium takes notice also of the Sindon, [f] or fine Linen upon which the Body of Christ was consecrated; but sometimes they were of richer Materials and more sumptuous. Palladius speaks [g] of some of the Roman Ladies, who renouncing the World, bequeathed their Silks to make Coverings for the Altar. And Theodoret [h] says of Constantine, "That amongst "other Gifts which he bestowed upon his new-"built Church of Jerusalem, he gave Βασιλικὰ [q] Euseb. lib. 6. c. 44. [r] Constit. Apost. lib. 2. c. 57. lib. 8. c. 13. [s] Conc. Turon. 2. can. 3. Ut corpus Domini in Altari, non in Armario, sed sub Crucis titulo componatur. So it is read in Crab's Edition. But others instead of Armario, read it in Imaginario Ordine, and explain it by Ciborium. See Du Fresne, p. 575. [t] Suicer. Thesaur. voce κιβώριον. [u] Dallæus de Cultu Relig. lib. 5. c. 8. p. 773. [w] Chrysost. Demonstrat. Quod Christus sit Deus, c. 9. Tom. 5. p. 840. [x] Aug. Hom. 118. in Joh. Quid est signum Christi nisi Crux Christi? Quod signum nisi adhibeatur sive Frontibus credentium, sive ipsi aquæ ex qua regenerantur, sive oleo quo Chrismate unguntur, sive Sacrificio quo aluntur; nihil horum rite perficitur. [y] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 12. [z] Sozom. lib. 2. c. 3. says of one Probianus, that he saw in a Vision, σαυρὸν σύμβολον τῶν ἀνακειμένων τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ. [a] Gretser. de Cruce, lib. 2. c. 13. [b] Evagr. lib. 6. c. 21. [c] Optat. lib. 6. p. 95. Quis Fidelium nescit in peragendis Mysteriis ipsa Ligna Linteamine cooperiri? Inter ipsa Sacramenta Velamen potuit tangi, non lignum. [d] Optat. ibid. p. 98. Laviftis proculdubio Pallas, &c. [e] Victor. de Persec. Vandal. lib. 1. p. 593. De Pallis altaris, proh nefas camisias sibi & femoralia faciebat. Qui tamen Proculus frustatim sibi comedens linguam, in brevi turpissima consumptus est morte. [f] Isidor. Pelus. lib. 1. Ep. 123. [g] Pallad. Hist. Lausiac. c. 119. [h] Theodor. lib. 1. c. 31.

" ὑπερτασματα a Royal Pall, or piece of rich " Tapeſtry for the Altar." But that may ſignify the Curtains, or Hangings, of the Ciborium, as well as the Covering of the Altar; and ſo every Utenſil, or Ornament about the Altar, may be ſuppoſed to be rich and ſplendid in ſuch Churches as were of a Royal Foundation. The Holy Veſſels which they made uſe of to adminiſter the Euchariſt in, were another part of the Ornament of the Altar. But the Richneſs of theſe was not always eſtimated from the Materials they were made of, but from the Uſe they were put to. For the Materials were ſometimes no better than plain Glaſs, or Wood. Irenæus [i] and Epiphanius [k] after him, ſpeaking of Marcus, the Father of the Marcoſian Hereticks, ſay, he uſed a Glaſs Cup in the Celebration of the Euchariſt: Which is not noted as any ſingular Thing in him; for both Baronius [l] and Bona [m] think it was then the common Cuſtom of the Church. And it is evident, it continued in ſome Places to the Time of St. Jerom. For he ſpeaking of Exuperius, Biſhop of Tholouſe, and commending his Frugality, tells us [n], " That he miniſtred the " Body of Chriſt in a Basket of Oſiers, and " the Blood in a Glaſs Cup. Baronius and Bona will furniſh the Reader with a great many other Inſtances to the ſame Purpoſe. I ſhall only add, that in one of our own Synods here in England, the Synod of Calcuth, An. 787, there is a Canon [o] which forbids the Uſe of Horn Cups in the Celebration of the Euchariſt; which ſeems to imply that they were in uſe before. But yet I muſt note, that it was commonly Neceſſity that drove the Church to uſe Veſſels of ſuch ordinary Materials; either when ſhe laboured under extream Poverty, or thought fit to diſpoſe of her Silver and Gold Plate for the Redemption of Captives, or the Relief of the Poor, of which I have given a great many Inſtances [*] in another Place, which ſhew that the Church had her Veſſels of Silver and Gold, elſe ſhe could not have melted them down for ſuch pious Uſes. Nay even in Times of Perſecution, when there was ſome Danger of being plundered and deſpoiled, the wealthier Churches had their ſacred Veſſels of Silver and Gold. This is evident from what Prudentius obſerves in the Roman Church, in the Time of Laurentius the Martyr, who ſuffered in the Perſecution of Valerian. It was Part of his Crime, that he would not deliver up the Golden Plate [p], in which they were uſed to celebrate their ſacred Myſteries. And that we may not think he ſpake only with a Poetical Flouriſh, we may ſee the ſame Thing obſerved by Optatus, of the Church of Carthage, in the Dioclefian Perſecution. For when Menſurius the Biſhop was forced to go to Rome, to have his Tryal there, he was at ſome Loſs [q] what to do with the Plate, and other Silver and Gold Ornaments of the Church, which he could neither hide in the Earth, nor carry with him. At laſt he comes to this Reſolution, to leave them with the Elders of the Church, firſt taking an Inventory of them, which he gave to a Deaconneſs, with theſe Inſtructions, that if he never returned, ſhe ſhould, when Times of Peace returned, give it to the Perſon whom ſhe found ſeated on the Biſhop's Throne. Which ſhe did as ſoon as Cæcilian was choſen Biſhop, who calling upon the Elders to deliver up their Truſt, they having embezelled the Things, denied that ever they had received them, and to be revenged of Cæcilian, they joined with his Antagoniſts, Botrus and Celeuſius, who were Competitors with Cæcilian for the Biſhoprick, and the firſt Authors of the Schiſm of the Donatiſts. What this Inventory contain'd we may judge by another about the ſame Time, given up to the Perſecutors by Paul, Biſhop of Cirta, who was one of thoſe called Traditors upon that account. There we find two [r] Gold Cups, ſix Silver Cups, ſix Silver Water-pots, a ſilver Cucumellum, which I take to be a Flaggon, or Bowl, ſeven ſilver Lamps, &c. All which were Veſſels, or Utenſils belonging to the Service of the Church and the Altar. For as they had Veſſels for the Wine, ſo they had alſo Veſſels for the Water, which in thoſe Days was always mingled with the Wine, and was uſed alſo for waſhing their Hands in the Time of the Oblation; of which Cuſtoms it will be more proper to ſpeak in another Place. Theſe Veſſels we here ſee were of Silver in the Church of Cirta, as well as others. Their Candleſticks, or Lamps, were of the like precious Subſtance, and ſome Golden, as Prudentius [s] repreſents them, when he brings in the Tyrant demanding of Laurentius the Roman Deacon, the golden Lamps which they uſed in their Night Aſſemblies. Theſe are frequently mentioned by Athanaſius [t], and the Apoſtolical Conſtitutions [u] which allows Oyl to be offered for the Lamps. Paulinus alſo [w] and St. Jerom [x] ſpeak of them, and ſeem to intimate that in their Time they were lighted by Day as well as by Night: Which was an Innovation upon the old Cuſtom: For the firſt and primi-

[i] Irenæ. lib. 1. c. 9. [k] Epiphan. Hær. 34. num. 1. [l] Baron. an. 216. [m] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 1. [n] Hieron. Ep. 4. ad Ruſtic. Nihil illo ditius, qui Corpus Domini caniſtro vimineo, ſanguinem portat in vitro. [o] Synod. Calchuthenſ. c. 10. apud Spelman. Conc. Brit. Tom. 1. p. 291. [*] Book 5. Chap. 6. Sect. 6. [p] Prudent. περὶ στεφανῶν, Hymn. 2. Hunc eſſe veſtris Orgiis moremq; & artem proditum eſt, Hanc diſciplinam fœderis, Litent ut auro Antiſtites. Argenteis Scyphis ferunt fumare ſacrum Sanguinem, &c. [q] Optat. lib. 1. p. 41. Erant Eccleſiæ ex auro & argento quamplurima Ornamenta, quæ nec defodere terræ, nec ſecum portare poterat. [r] Geſta Purgation. Cæciliani, ad Calcem Optati, p. 266. Calices duo aurei: Item calices ſex argentei: Urceola ſex argentea: Cucumellum argenteum: Lucernæ argenteæ ſeptem: Careofala duo, &c. [s] Prudent. de Coron. Hymn. 2. Auroque nocturnis ſacris Adſtare fixos cereos. [t] Athanaſ. Ep. ad Orthodox. Tom. 1. p. 946. [u] Canon. Apoſt. c. 3. [w] Paulin. Natal. 3. S. Felicis. Clara coronantur denſis altaria lychnis: Lumina ceratis adolentur odora papyris: Nocte dieque micant, &c. [x] Hieron. Ep. 53. Ripar. Accenſique ante eorum tumulos Cerei, Idololatriæ inſignia ſunt? &c. Id. cont. Vigilant. Tom. 2. p. 123. Aliqui propter imperitiam & ſimpliciratem ſæcularium hominum—— hoc pro honore Martyrum faciunt.

tive

tive Use of them was owing to Necessity, when Christians were forced to meet in nocturnal Assemblies for fear of Persecution. At which time they did not allow, or approve of lighting them by Day. Nor does St. Jerom say, there was any Order of the Church, or so much as general Custom to authorize it; but only it was tolerated in some Places, to satisfy the Ignorance, and Weakness, and Simplicity of some Secular Men: and all he pretends to offer in justification of it, is only, that there was no Idolatry in it, as Vigilantius had heavily laid the Charge upon it. However, there was this difference between the Age of St. Jerom, and those which went before, that the former Ages positively condemn it. For not to mention what Lactantius [y] and others say, to expose the like Custom among the Heathens, the Council of Eliberis expressly forbids it in a very plain Canon [z], though the Reason be something dark that is given for the Prohibition: "Let no one presume to set up Lights "in the Day-time in any Cœmitery, or Church: "for the Spirits of the Saints are not to be mo- "lested." I shall not now stand to enquire into the Meaning of this Reason; it is sufficient that the Thing was then prohibited in plain Terms: From whence it is evident the contrary Custom must be new, though prevailing both in the East and West in the Time of Paulinus and St. Jerom. Some also plead hard for the Antiquity of Censers and Incense, deriving them down from Apostolical Custom and Practice. So Cardinal Bona [a] and others of the Romish Church. But there are no Footsteps of these Things in the three first Ages of the Church. The Canons under the Name of the Apostles indeed [b] mention Incense in the Time of the Oblation: But it still remains a Question, Whether those Canons belong to any of the three first Ages. Hippolytus Portuensis is another Author produced by a learned Person [c] of our own Church in this Cause. But besides that his Authority is as questionable as the former, all that he says may be interpreted to a spiritual or figurative Sense. For speaking of the Times of Antichrist, and the Desolations of the Church in those Days, he says, "The Church shall "mourn with a very great Mourning, because "her Oblation and Incense is not duly [d] "performed. Which may mean no more than that the Liturgy, or Service of the Church will be abolished. For the Prayers and Worship of the Saints are called the Christian Incense, Rev. v. 8. And so I think we are to understand those Words of St. Ambrose [e] also, who speaking of the Angel's appearing to Zacharias, standing on the Right-side of the Altar of Incense, says, "I wish the Angel may stand by us when "we incense the Altar, and offer our Sacrifice. "Yea, doubtless the Angel stands by us, at the "Time that Christ stands there and is offered "upon the Altar." Here, I take it, the Sacrificing of Christ, and the Incensing of the Altar, are both of the same Nature, that is, Spiritual and Mystical: And therefore hence nothing can be concluded for the Use of Incense and Censers in the most strict and literal Sense as yet in the Christian Church. Neither do we find any mention made of Censers in any part of the Constitutions under the Name of the Apostles, which is an Argument, That when the Author of those Collections wrote, they were not yet become Utensils of the Altar, as they were when Evagrius [f] wrote his History; for he mentions golden Censers, as well as golden Crosses, given by Chosroes to the Church at Constantinople. By which we may guess that Crosses and Censers were the Product of one and the same Age, and came into the Church together. Images and Relicks upon the Altar are Usages also of later Ages. And so are many Utensils of the present Greeks, as the Lancea, Asteriscus, Dicerion, Tricerion, and Cochlear, which Bona [g] says were never known in the Latin Church, much less in the antient Church. So I shall not stand to explain them; nor say any thing here of the Bible, the Diptychs, and their Ritual Books, which were both Utensils and Ornaments of the Altar, because these will be spoken of in other Places. The Altare Portatile, or moveable Altars of the Latins, and the Antimensia, or consecrated Cloths of the Greeks, to be used in Places which have no Altars, I omit likewise, as being a modern Invention of later Ages. Habertus [h] indeed is very sollicitous to have their portable Altars thought as old as St. Basil, because St. Basil in one of his Epistles speaks of ἰδίαις τραπέζαις, private Tables, in some Churches. But he wholly mistakes his Author's Meaning; for he is only speaking of the Rudeness of some Hereticks, who according to their usual Custom, pulled down the Catholick Altars, and set up their own Altars, or Tables in the Room. So that it is not those portable Altars he is discoursing of, but heretical Altars set up in Opposition to the Catholicks, which Habertus would hardly own to be the Altars of the Romish Church. Durantus [i] and Bona [k] do not pretend to find them in any Author before the Time of Bede and Charles the Great, and therefore we may conclude they were a modern Invention. But the ῥιπίδια, or Flabella, are somewhat more antient, being mentioned by the Author of the Constitutions [l], who makes [y] Lactant. lib. 6. c. 2. Accendunt Lumina, velut in tenebris agenti Deo, &c. [z] Conc. Eliber. c. 34. Cereos per diem placuit in Cœmiterio non incendi. Inquietandi enim Sanctorum Spiritus non sunt. [a] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 9. [b] Canon. Apost. c. 3. Θυμίαμα πῦ καιρῷ τῆς ἁγίας προσφορᾶς. [c] Bever. Cod. Canon. Vindic. lib. 2. c. 1. n. 5. [d] Hippol. de Consum. Mundi. Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 357. Note, The Words are not in the genuine Hippolytus published by Combefis Auctario Noviſſimo.

[e] Ambrof. Com. in Luc. 1. 11. p. 599. Utinam nobis quoque adolentibus altaria, sacrificium deferentibus, assistat Angelus, imo præbeat se videndum. Non enim dubites assistere Angelum, quando Christus assistit, Christus immolatur. [f] Evagr. lib. 6. c. 21. [g] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 6. [h] Habert. Archieratic. p. 664. Portatilia illa altaria videntur dici à Basilio ἰδίαις τραπέζαις, Ep. 72. [i] Durant. de Ritib. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 7. [k] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 20. n. 3. [l] Constit. Apost. lib. 8. c. 12.

it one Part of the Deacon's Office in the Time of the Oblation, to ſtand on each Side of the Altar; and with theſe Inſtruments in their Hands, (Bruſhes, or Fans, we may Engliſh them) to drive away all ſuch little Inſects as might drop into the Cups, or infeſt the Altar. The Author of the Faſti Siculi, or Chronicum Alexandrinum [m], calls them τίμια ῥιπίδια, and reckons them among the Holy Utenſils of the Altar, which were laid up among the reſt in the Sceuophylacium, or Veſtry of the Church. For which Reaſon I thought it not improper to mention them, whilſt we are ſpeaking of the Utenſils of the Altar.

SECT. XXII. Of the Oblationarium, or Prothesis.

IN many Churches, beſides the Communion-table, in one of the leſſer Receſſes, or Concha's of the Bema, there was a Place where the Offerings of the People were received, out of which the Bread and Wine was taken that was conſecrated at the Altar. In the Liturgies, under the Names of Chryſoſtom [n], and St. James [o], and other modern Greek Writers, this is called προθέσις and παραπέζιον, the Side-table. In the Ordo Romanus it has the Name of Oblationarium and Protheſis alſo, for the one is made the Explication of the other. And here alſo it is termed Paratorium, becauſe when the Offerings were received, Preparation was made out of them for the Euchariſt. There is little queſtion to be made but that the antient Churches had ſomething anſwerable to this, but it went under other Names; for we never meet with a Protheſis, or Paratorium, or Oblationarium, in expreſs Terms, in any antient Writer. But the Thing it ſelf we often find. Cyprian [p] ſeems to ſpeak of it under the borrowed Name of the Corban, rebuking a rich and wealthy Matron for coming to celebrate the Euchariſt without any Regard to the Corban, and partaking of the Lord's Supper without any Sacrifice of her own, but rather eating of the Oblations which the Poor had brought. In the Fourth Council [q] of Carthage, this Place goes by the general Name of the Sacrarium or Sanctuary, as being that Part of the Sanctuary where the Oblations for the Altar were received. For they had two Repoſitories for the Offerings of the People, the one without the Church, called the Gazophylacium, or Treaſury, and the other within the Church, which was this Sacrarium, or Corban. And therefore it is, that that Council forbids the Offerings of ſuch Chriſtians as were at Variance one with another, to be received either in the Treaſury, or the Sanctuary. Paulinus is more exact in deſcribing this Place than any other antient Writer, yet he gives it a different Name, calling it one of the Secretarium of the Church. For he tells us [r], "There were two Secreta- "riums, one on the Right Hand, and the other "on the Left Hand of the Altar. That on the Right Hand was the ſame with the Protheſis, or Paratorium we are ſpeaking of, and the Uſe of it he deſcribes in theſe Verſes, which were ſet over it:

Hic locus eſt veneranda penus qua conditur, & qua
Promitur alma ſacri pompa Miniſterii.

This is the Place where the Holy Food is repoſited, and whence we take Proviſion and Furniture for the Altar. That on the other Side was the ſame with the Diaconicum Bematis, the Uſe of which he deſcribes in part, in theſe two other Verſes, ſet over it alſo:

Si quem Sancta tenet meditandi in Lege voluntas, Hic poterit reſidens ſanctis intendere Libris.

If any one (that is, any of the Prieſts, whoſe Apartment this was) is minded to meditate in the Law of God, here he has Room to ſit and read the Holy Books. A little before [s] he makes the like Deſcription of theſe two ſecret Apartments in Proſe, telling us, That the one was the Place which prepared the Hoſt, or Oblation of Joy for the Prieſt: (Whence doubtleſs in After-ages, as I noted before, it got the Name of Paratorium:) And the other was a Place, whither the Clergy retired, after the Sacrifice was ended, and the People were diſmiſſed, to make their concluding Prayers in private.

SECT. XXIII. Of the Sceuophylacium, or Diaconicum Bematis.

THIS latter Place was a ſort of Veſtry within the Church, whither the Deacons brought the Veſtments, and Veſſels, and Utenſils belonging to the Altar, out of the greater Diaconicum, to be in a Readineſs for Divine Service. And in this reſpect it had alſo the Name of σκευοφυλάκιον, the Repoſitory of the Sacred Utenſils, becauſe hither they were carried back immediately by the Deacons, as ſoon as the Service was ended, or whilſt the Poſt-Communion-Pſalm was ſinging by the People, as the Author of the Chronicon [t] Alexandrinum repreſents it. Here the Prieſts alſo put on their Robes they uſed to officiate in: And hither they came again, when the Publick Service was ended, to make their private Addreſſes to God, as has been noted already out of Paulinus; and in the Liturgies aſcribed to St. James, St. Mark, St. Chryſoſtom [u], there are the Forms of [m] Chronic. Alexandr. p. 892. [n] Chryſoſt. Liturg. Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 74. [o] Miſſa Jacobi, ib. p. 21. [p] Cyprian. de Opere & Eleemoſ. p. 203. Locuples & dives es, & Dominicum celebrare te credis, quæ Corbonam omnino non reſpicis; quæ in Dominicum ſine Sacrificio venis; quæ partem de Sacrificio, quod pauper obtulit, ſumis?

[q] Conc. Carthag. 4. can. 93. Oblationes diſſidentium fratrum, neque in Sacrario, neque in Gazophylacio recipiantur.
[r] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. p. 154. [s] Paulin. ibid. p. 152. Una earum immolanti hoſtias jubilationis patet. Leg. Parat. Altera poſt Sacerdotem. Leg. poſt Sacrificium, capaci ſinu receptat orantes. [t] Chron. Alexand. p. 892. Vid. Coteler. Not. in Conſt. Apoſt. lib. 8. c. 12. [u] Liturg. Marci, Bibl. Patr. Gr. Lat. Tom. 2. p. 41. Liturg. Chryſoſt. ibid. p. 88.

Prayer

Prayer appointed to be uſed in this Place, one of which particularly in St. James's Liturgy is uſher'd in with this Title, or Rubrick [w], "The Prayer to be ſaid in the Sceuophylacium, "after the Diſmiſſion of the People. The Deacons commonly had the Care of this Place, and thence it is often called the Diaconicum, and Bematis Diaconicum, to diſtinguiſh it from another Diaconicum, which we ſhall find in the next Chapter among the Exedræ, or outer Buildings of the Church. Du Freſne [x] thinks alſo, that the Name Diaconicum was ſometimes more peculiarly given to that Part of the Bema, or Chancel, which was between the Veils of the Chancel, and the Veils of the Ciborium, or Altar; and that the Place within the Veils of the Altar was diſtinguiſhed particularly by the Name of Presbyterium, becauſe it was the Place of the Presbyters, as the other was the Place of the Deacons, alleging for this a Canon of the Council of Laodicea [y], which others underſtand in a different Senſe [*], for the whole Chancel, or Sanctuary of the Church.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Baptiſtery, and other Outer Buildings, called the Exedræ of the Church.

SECT. I. Baptiſteries antiently Buildings diſtinct from the Church.

WE have hitherto taken a View of the ſeveral Parts of the antient Churches within the Walls: It now remains that we conſider a little ſuch Buildings as were diſtinct from the main Body, and yet within the Bounds of the Church taken in the largeſt Senſe, which Buildings are all comprized under one general Name of the Exedræ of the Church. For Euſebius, ſpeaking of the Church of Paulinus at Tyre, ſays, "When that curious Artiſt had fi-"niſhed his famous Structure within, he then "ſet himſelf about the Exedræ, or Buildings "[a] that joined one to another by the Sides "of the Church;" By which Buildings, he tells us, he chiefly meant the Place which was for the Uſe of thoſe who needed the Purgation, and Sprinkling of Water and the Holy Ghoſt; that is, doubtleſs, the Baptiſtery of the Church. He deſcribes the Church of Antioch built by Conſtantine, after the ſame manner, telling us, "That it was ſurrounded with Exedræ "[b], and Buildings that had lower and upper "Stories in them." So that, as Valeſius and other Criticks have rightly obſerved, Exedra is a general Name for any Buildings that ſtand round about the Church. And hence it is eaſy to conclude, that the Baptiſtery, which Euſebius reckons the Chief of the Exedræ, was antiently a Building without the Walls of the Church. Which Obſervation, becauſe I find it queſtioned by ſome, who place the Font, after the modern Way, in the Narthex of the antient Churches, it will not be improper here to confirm by a few plain Inſtances out of other Authors. Paulinus Biſhop of Nola, ſetting forth the great Munificence of his Friend Severus, ſays, "He built "two Churches, and a Baptiſtery between "them [c] both. And ſo Cyril of Jeruſalem deſcribes the Baptiſtery as a Building by it ſelf, which had firſt [d] its προαύλιον οἶκον, that is, its Porch, or Ante-Room, where the Catechumens made their Renunciation of Satan, and Confeſſion of Faith; and then its ἐσώτερον οἶκον, its inner Room [e], where the Ceremony of Baptiſm was performed. Sidonius Apollinaris alſo ſpeaks of it [f] as a diſtinct Building, and St. Auſtin ſeems to intimate [g] that there were diſtinct Apartments in it for Men and Women likewiſe. Which perhaps is the Reaſon why St. Ambroſe ſpeaks of it in the Plural, ſtiling it [h] the Baptiſteries of the Church. In the Time of Juſtin Martyr, and Tertullian, we are not certain that the Church had any of theſe Baptiſteries; but this is paſt all doubt however from their Authority, that the Place of Baptiſm was not in the Church, but ſomewhere diſtinct from it. For Tertullian ſpeaking of the Ceremonies of Baptiſm, ſays, "It was their Cuſtom "to renounce the Devil, and his Pomp, and "his Angels, firſt in the Church, and then [i] "again when they came to the Water. Which implies, that the Place of Baptiſm was without the Church. And ſo Juſtin Martyr [k] repreſents it, when he ſpeaks of carrying the Catechumen to the Place where there was Water; which perhaps was unlimited in thoſe Days; it being an indifferent Thing, as Tertullian [l]

[w] Liturg. Jacobi, ibid. p. 23. ἐυχὴ λεγομένη ἐν τῷ σκευοφυλακίῳ μετὰ τὴν ἀπόλυσιν. [x] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 581. [y] Conc. Laodic. can. 21.

[*] See before Sect. 4. of this Chapter.

[a] Euſeb. lib. 10. c. 4. p. 328. ἐπὶ τὰ ἐκτὸς τοῦ νεὼ μετὰ πάσης ἐξέδρας καὶ οἴκους τοὺς παρ' ἑκάτερα μεγίστους ὑπισκοδομοῦν, &c. [b] Euſeb. de Vit. Conſtant. lib. 3. c. 50.

[c] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. Tu vero etiam Baptiſterium Baſilicis duabus interpoſitum condidiſti. [d] Cyril. Catech. Myſtag. 1. n. 2. εἰσίει τις πρῶτον εἰς τὸ προαύλιον τοῦ βαπτισηρίου οἶκος, &c. [e] Id. Catech. 2. n. 1. [f] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 15. Baptiſterium quod olim fabricabamini, ſcribitis jam poſſe conſecrari. [g] Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. 22. c. 8. In parte Fœminarum obſervanti ad Baptiſterium, &c.

[h] Ambroſ. Ep. 33. Symbolum aliquibus Competentibus in Baptiſteriis tradebam Baſilicæ. [i] Tertul. de Coron. Mil. c. 3. Aquam adituri, ibidem, ſed & aliquanto prius in Eccleſia ſub Antiſtitis manu conteſtamur nos renunciare Diabolo & Pompæ & Angelis ejus. [k] Juſtin. Apol. 2. p. 93.

[l] Tertul. de Bapt. c. 4. Nulla diſtinctio eſt, mari quis an Stagno, Flumine an Fonte, Lacu an Alveo diluatur, nec quicquam refert inter eos quos Johannes in Jordane, & quos Petrus in Tiberi tinxit.

words

words it, whether a Man was baptized in the Sea, or in a Lake; in a River, or in a Fountain; in Jordan, or in Tiber, as St. Peter and St. John baptized their Converts. So that the firſt Ages all agreed in this, that whether they had Baptiſteries or not, the place of Baptiſm was always without the Church. And after this manner Baptiſteries continued to the Sixth Age, as appears from what Durantus obſerves out of Gregory [m] of Tours, That he ſpeaks of Baptiſteries ſtill without the Walls of the Church. Though ſome now began to be taken into the Church-porch, as that wherein he ſays [n] Remigius baptized King Clodoveus, and thence they were afterward removed into the Church it ſelf. Though now the Baptiſtery of St. John Lateran, at Rome, is ſtill after the antient Model, if Durantus rightly informs us.

SECT. II. Theſe very capacious, and why.

THESE Baptiſteries were antiently very capacious, becauſe, as Dr. Cave truly [o] obſerves, the ſtated Times of Baptiſm returning but ſeldom, there were uſually great Multitudes to be baptized at the ſame Time. And then the Manner of Baptizing by Immerſion, or dipping under Water, made it neceſſary to have a large Font likewiſe. Whence the Author of the Chronicon Alexandrinum [p] ſtiles the Baptiſtery, whither Baſiliſcus fled to take Sanctuary, μέγα φωτισήριον, the great Illuminary, or School of Baptiſm. And in Venantius Fortunatus [q] it is called Aula Baptiſmatis, the large Hall of Baptiſm. Which was indeed ſo capacious, that we ſometimes read of Councils meeting and ſitting therein, as Du Freſne [r] ſhews out of the Acts of the Council of Chalcedon, and Suicerus has obſerved the ſame in the Acts of the Council of Carthage [s], which ſpeaks of a Council at Conſtantinople held in the Baptiſtery of the Church.

SECT. III. Why called φωτισήρια, Places of Illumination.

WE may obſerve alſo in the before-mentioned Authors, how the Baptiſteries were commonly called φωτισήρια, Places of Illumination, that is, Baptiſm. For Baptiſm it ſelf in antient Writers is very uſually ſtiled φώτισμα; and hence the Place of Baptiſm called φωτισήριον, from the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm there, which was always attended with a Divine Illumination of the Soul; whence Perſons baptized were alſo called, the Illuminate, as has been obſerved [*] in another place. But the Baptiſteries might alſo have this Name for another Reaſon, becauſe they were the places of an Illumination, or Inſtruction, preceding Baptiſm. For here the Catechumens ſeem to have been trained up, and inſtructed in the firſt Rudiments of the Chriſtian Faith. At leaſt they were here taught the Creed, as is evident from that noted Paſſage of St. Ambroſe [t], where he ſays, "That after the Leſſons and Homily he went into the Baptiſtery "of the Church, to make the Candidates of "Baptiſm learn the Creed. Therefore from this Illumination preceding Baptiſm, as well as that which was conſequent to it, the Baptiſteries might reaſonably be called φωτισήρια, and as ſome think, φροντισήρια, Schools of Learning, or the Illuminatories of the Church.

SECT. IV. Of the Difference between a Baptiſtery and a Font. And why the Font called Piſcina and κολυμβήθρα.

IT will be eaſy now for the Reader to obſerve, from what has been ſaid, what difference there was antiently between a Baptiſtery and a Font, though the Names be ſometimes confounded together. For the Baptiſtery, properly ſpeaking, was the whole Houſe of Building, in which the Font ſtood, and where all the Ceremonies of Baptiſm were performed; but the Font was only the Fountain, or Pool of Water, wherein Perſons were immerſed, or baptized. This in the Greek Writers is commonly [u] called Κολυμβήθρα, and by the Latins [w] Piſcina, and is ſometimes expreſly diſtinguiſhed from the Baptiſtery, as a Part from the Whole. For Socrates [x] expreſly ſtiles it Κολυμβήθραν τῦ βαπτισηρίυ, the Pool of the Baptiſtery. Which Name Dr. Beverege [y] thinks was given to the Font by way of Alluſion to the Pool of Bethesda. But Optatus [z] has a more myſtical Reaſon for it: He ſays, it was called Piſcina in Alluſion to our Saviour's Technical Name ἰχθὺς, which was an Acroſtick compoſed of the initial Letters of our Saviour's ſeveral Titles, Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of God our Saviour, of which I have given an Account [*] in another place. But whether either of theſe Reaſons be true, or whether the Font was not rather ſo called, becauſe Piſcina and Κολυμβήθρα are commonly Names of Fountains and Baths and Pools in Greek and Latin Writers, I leave to the Determination of the judicious Reader. Du Freſne has obſerved ſeveral other Names [a]; ſuch as ὑποδόμη, Lavacrum, Natatoria, and Cloaca, a Term peculiar to Gregory the Great: But theſe are modern Names, and ſo I paſs them over, only remarking one Thing out of him, that whereas Procopius in his Hiſtoria Arcana gives it the Name of ἀλεξαμβρή, the Receptacle, Suidas miſtakes it for the Communion-table; which [m] Durant. de Ritib. Eccl. lib. 1. c. 19. n. 4. Greg. Turon. Hiſtor. lib. 6. c. 11. [n] Gregor. Turon. lib. 2. c. 21.

[o] Cave Primit. Chriſt. Par. 1. c. 10. p. 312. [p] Chron. Alexandr. in Baſiliſco, p. 753. [q] Fortunat. de Baptiſter. Moguntin. Biblioth. Patr. Tom. 8. p. 780. [r] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 592. Conc. Chalced. Act. 1.
[s] Suicer. Theſaur. Eccl. voce φωτισήριον, ex Actis Concilii Carthag. p. 118. ἐν τῷ φωτισηρίῳ τῆ ἁγίᾳ Κωνσαντινόπολιν ἁγιωτάτης καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας καθεδέντων τῶν ἁγιωτάτων ἐπισκόπων. [*] Book 1. Chap. 4. n. 1. [t] Ambroſ. Ep. 33. ad Marcellin. Poſt Lectiones atque Tractatum, dimiſſis Catechumenis, Symbolum aliquibus competentibus in Baptiſteriis tradebam Baſilicæ. [u] Vid. Cyril. Catech. Myſtag. 2. n. 4. Catech. 3. n. 1. Chryſoſt. Hom. 64. Tom. 5. p. 970.
[w] Optat. l. 3. p. 62. [x] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 17.
[y] Bevereg. Pandect. Not. in Concil. Nicen. c. 11.
[z] Optat. lib. 3. p. 62. Hic eſt Piſcis qui in baptiſmate per invocationem fontalibus undis inſeritur, ut quæ aqua fuerat, a Piſce etiam Piſcina vocitetur. [*] Book 1. Chap. 1. Sect. 2.
[a] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 593.

I note, only becauſe it is eaſy for any one to be led into the like Miſtake by the Authority of that celebrated Writer.

SECT. V. How Fonts and Baptiſteries anciently adorned.

WHAT Form the antient Baptiſteries were built in, I find no where mentioned in any antient Writer; and almoſt as little of their Ornament, that may be depended on as genuine. Durantus indeed has a very formal Story out of the Pontifical, under the Name of Damaſus, how Conſtantine gave a rich Font to the Church, wherein he himſelf was baptized; it was made, [b] the Author ſays, of Porphyretick Marble, overlaid with Silver; in the middle of it was a Marble Pillar, and on it a Vial of pure Gold, filled with Balſam to burn as in a Lamp. On the Brim of the Font was a Lamp of pure Gold pouring out Water. On the Right-hand of that a ſilver Image of Chriſt, and on the Left-hand a ſilver Image of St. John Baptiſt, holding a Label with this Inſcription, Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the Sins of the World. Beſides all theſe, there were ſeven ſilver Harts pouring out Water into the Fountain. But now all this is a mere fabulous Legend, and has juſt as much Truth in it, as the Story of Conſtantine's Leproſy, and his being cured by Pope Silveſter's baptizing him in this Font at Rome. And I only mention it to ſhew what ſort of Tales are urged by the Romiſh Ritualiſts many times for antient Hiſtory. For every one now knows this Mock-Damaſus to be a ſpurious Author. Perhaps in the ſixth or ſeventh Century ſuch ſort of Ornaments might be ſet up in the Baptiſteries of the Church: For in the Acts of the Council of Conſtantinople [c] under Menas, An. 536, there is mention made of ſilver and gold Doves hanging in the Baptiſtery, as well as at the Altar. But as no Pictures, or Images, were ſet up in Churches in the Time of Conſtantine, ſo we cannot ſuppoſe any Roman Baptiſteries to be adorned by him according to the aforeſaid pretended Deſcription: But if the Garments of the Miniſters baptizing, or the white Robes of Perſons newly baptized, which were reſerved in theſe Baptiſteries, as Monuments and Tokens of their Profeſſion, or the Veſſels of Chriſm uſed for Unction in Baptiſm, may be reckoned Ornaments of theſe Places; the Baptiſteries had always theſe Things from their firſt Erection, as will be ſhewed more particularly when we come to treat of the Rites of Baptiſm in its proper Place.

SECT. VI. Baptiſteries anciently more peculiar to the Mother-Church.

ALL that I have farther to add about Baptiſteries here, is an Obſervation made by ſome learned Men, that antiently there was but one Baptiſtery in a City, and that at the Biſhop's Church. Vicecomes [d] thinks it was ſo even at Rome it ſelf for many Ages. Dr. Maurice [e] ſays, "No City had "more, unleſs where the Magnificence of Em- "perors, or Biſhops made, as it were, many "Cathedrals. And therefore when the Author [f] of the Pontifical under the Name of Damaſus ſays of Pope Marcellus, "That he made "twenty-five Titles in Rome, as ſo many Dio- "ceſes, for Baptiſm and Penance;' that learned Perſon thinks it imports, that thoſe Services indeed belonged only to a Cathedral; and therefore the granting of thoſe Privileges to Pariſhes made them ſeem like Dioceſes. Some Remains of this antient Cuſtom are yet to be obſerved in ſeveral great Cities of Italy. For both Durantus [g] and Vicecomes [h] tells us, "That at "Piſa, Bononia, Orvieto, Parma, and even at Flo- "rence it ſelf, they have but one Font, or Baptiſtery "for a whole City at this Day.' Which is alſo noted by Onuphrius [i] and Du Freſne [k], and by Dr. Maurice out of Leander Alberti, Mercator, Laſſels, and ſome other modern Writers. I have obſerved [*] before, that this Diſtinction was antiently made between a Catholick Church and a private Oratory; that the one was a Place of publick Baptiſm, and the other not; which argues, that every Church had not a diſtinct Baptiſtery, but only ſuch as were called Baptiſmal Churches. And this is the Reaſon why antiently Men commonly reſorted for Baptiſm to the Biſhop's Church, at the two great Feſtivals Eaſter and Pentecoſt, which were the two ſolemn Times of its Adminiſtration. In After-ages, Baptiſteries were ſet up in Country Pariſhes: For the Council of Auxerre [l] ſpeaks of Baptizing in Villages at Eaſter by Allowance; but this Privilege was not granted to every Place, but only to ſuch as the Biſhop appointed, except in Caſes of Neceſſity, as Vicecomes [m] has obſerved out of the Synod [n] of Meaux, and the Council [o] in Verno Palatio. Whence probably theſe got the Name of Mother-Churches alſo, in reſpect of ſuch others as depended on them for the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm, as anciently all Churches did on the Biſhop's Church. Thus much of the Baptiſteries of the antient Church.

SECT. VII. Of the Secretarium, or Diaconicum Magnum, the Veſtry.

ANOTHER noted Building, commonly reckoned among the Exedræ of the Church, was that which is uſually called Secretarium, or Diaconicum, concerning which learned Men are not exactly agreed. For Valeſius takes it [p] for a place within the [b] Damaſ. Pontifical. Vit. Sylveſtri. [c] Conc. Conſtant. Act. 5. Tom. 5. p. 159. [d] Vicecom. de Ritib. Bapt. lib. 1. c. 8. [e] Maurice Dioceſ. Epiſc. p. 41. & 43. [f] Pontifical. Vit. Marcelli. Viginti quinque Titulos in Urbe Roma conſtituit, quaſi Dioceſes, propter Baptiſmum & Pœnitentiam multorum, &c. [g] Durant. de Ritib. Eccleſ. lib. 1. c. 19. n. 3. [h] Vice-comes de Ritib. Bapt. lib. 1. c. 8. [i] Onuphr. de Eccleſiis Urb. Romæ. [k] Du Freſne Gloſſar. voce Baptiſterium. [*] Book 8. Chap. 1. n. 4. [l] Conc. Antiſſiodor. an. 578. can. 18. [m] Vicecom. ibid. c. 9. [n] Concil. Meldenſ. can. 48. [o] Conc. in Verno Palatio, c. 7. [p] Valeſ. Not. in Philoſtorg. lib. 7. c. 3.

Church; Gothofred [q] and others for a place without; but Du Freſne [r] ſeems more juſtly to determine the Controverſy between them, by diſtinguiſhing the Diaconicum Bematis within the Chancel, which we have ſpoken of before, from the Diaconicum Magnum without the Church, which is to be conſider'd here. 'Tis of this Philoſtorgius is to be underſtood, when he ſays, the Chriſtians of Paneas, or Ceſarea Philippi, tranſlated the Statue of our Saviour, erected by the Woman whom he cured of an Iſſue of Blood, into the Diaconicum [s] of the Church, that is, into the Veſtry or Repoſitory of the Church. It was ſo named, becauſe all Things here repoſited were under the care of the Deacons, part of whoſe Office was to look after the Veſtments, Veſſels, and Utenſils belonging to the Altar, and all Things of value given to the Church; the chief Overſeer of which ſeems generally to have been a Presbyter, dignified with the Title of Ceimeliarches, or Sceuophylax, as I have ſhewed before [*] in another Place. And hence the Diaconicum, or rather as Du Freſne [t] obſerves out of an antient Greek Writer, the innermoſt part of it was the Ceimeliarchium, or Sceuophylacium of the Church, the Repoſitory of the ſacred Veſſels, and ſuch Anathemata, or Preſents, as were reputed among the chiefeſt Treaſures of the Church. It was otherwiſe called Secretarium, as Du Freſne [u] conjectures, becauſe the Conſiſtory, or Tribunal of the Church was here kept; the Secretum, or Secretarium, being a known Name for the Courts of the Civil Magiſtrate, whence this perhaps might take its Denomination. The whole Building was large and capacious enough to receive, not only a private Conſiſtory, but a provincial, or general Council; many of which we find have been held in this Apartment of the Church, as the third, fourth, fifth, and ſixth Councils of Carthage are ſaid to be kept in Secretario Baſilicæ Reſtitutæ, with a great many others collected by Du Freſne, who obſerves the Seſſions of Councils to be called Secretaria upon this account, from the place of their Seſſion or Convention.

SECT. VIII. Why called Receptorium, or Salutatorium.

IT was otherwiſe called Receptorium and Salutatorium, as we find in Sidonius [w] Apollinaris, Sulpicius [x] Severus, the firſt Council of Maſcon [y], Theodoret, and many others. Particularly Theodoret (z) ſpeaking of Theodoſius coming to St. Ambroſe to petition for Abſolution, ſays, "He found him ſitting ἐν τῷ "δικῳ ἀσπαστικῷ, in the Saluting Houſe;" which Scaliger miſtakes for the Biſhop's Houſe, where Strangers were entertained; whereas it was a place adjoyning to the Church, where the Biſhop and Presbyters ſat to receive the Salutations of the People, as they came to deſire their Bleſſing, or Prayers, or conſult them about important Buſineſs. As appears from Sulpicius Severus, who ſpeaking of St. Martin, ſays, "He "ſat in one Secretarium, and the Presbyters (a) "in another, receiving the People's Salutes, "and hearing their Cauſes.

SECT. IX. Of the Decanica, or Priſons of the Church.

Du Freſne thinks theſe Secretaria, or at leaſt ſome part of them, were alſo uſed as Eccleſiaſtical Priſons, or places of Confinement ſometimes for delinquent Clergy-men; and that then they were called Decaneta, or Decanica; which is a Term uſed in both the Codes and ſome Councils, as Gothofred [b] and ſome others explain it, for a Priſon belonging to the Church. In the Theodoſian Code there is a Law of Arcadius, which orders Hereticks to be expelled from all Places which they poſſeſſed [c], whether under the Name of Churches, or Diaconica, or Decanica. Now, that the Decanica here means a place of Cuſtody, or Reſtraint for Delinquents belonging to the Church, Gothofred proves from another Law among Juſtinian's Novels [d] which orders ſuch Delinquents to be ſhut up in the Decanica of the Church, there to ſuffer condign Puniſhment. And by this we are led to underſtand what is meant by the Decanica ſpoken of in the Acts of the Council [e] of Epheſus, which the Latin Tranſlator by miſtake renders Tribunal, whereas it ſhould be the Priſon of the Church. Some take it to be no more but another Name for the Diaconicum, or a Corruption of it: Others derive it from δίκη, and ſo make it denote a Tribunal: which are Errors both alike. For it ſeems to have been a more general Name than the Diaconicum, including all ſuch Places of the Church, as were made uſe of to put offending Clerks into a more decent Confinement, which was not any one Place, but ſeveral that were made uſe of to that purpoſe; ſuch as the Catechumenia, as well as the Diaconica, or Secretaria, in which reſpect they had all the Name of Decanica, or Carceres, the Priſons of the Church. Which ſeems pretty evident from what Du Freſne has [f] obſerved out of an Epiſtle of Pope Gregory II. to the Emperor Leo Iſaurus, where he ſays, "When any one had offended, the Biſhops were [q] Gothofred ibid. [r] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 593. [s] Philoſtorg. lib. 7. c. 3. [*] Book. 3. Chap. 13. n. 3. [t] Paſſio ſſ. Patrum Sabaitarum ap. Du Freſne Com. in Paulum Silentiar. p. 597. ἐσώτερον ὃ τῇ διακονικῇ κειμηλιαρχεῖον ἤτοι σκδοφυλάκιον. [u] Du Freſne ibid. p. 594. ex Geſtis de nomine Acacii. [w] Sidon. lib. 5. Ep. 17. [x] Sulpic. Dialog. 2. c. 1. [y] Concil. Matiſcon. 1. can. 2. [z] Theodor. lib. 5. c. 18. [a] Sulpic. Dial. 2. c. 1. Cum in alio Secretario Presbyteri ſederent, vel Salutationibus vacantes, vel audiendis negotiis occupati, &c. [b] Gothofred. Com. in Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 5. de Hær. leg. 30. [c] Cod. Th. lib. 16. Tit. 5. leg. 30. Cuncti Hæretici proculdubio noverint, omnia ſibi loca hujus urbis adimenda eſſe, ſive ſub Eccleſiarum nomine teneantur, ſive quæ Diaconica appellantur, vel etiam Decanica. [d] Juſtin. Novel. 79. c. 3. καθειργέσθωσαν ἐν τοῖς καλουμένοις δεκανικοῖς, ποιναὶς τὰς καθηκούσας ὑπέξοντες. [e] Libell. Baſilii Diaconi ad Theodoſ. in Conc. Epheſ. Par. 1. c. 30. Conc. Tom. 3. p. 427. ἐν τῷ δικανικῷ τῷ λαῷ τυπτηθέντῳ διαφόρως, &c. [f] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 594.

"uſed to confine him as in a Priſon in one of the "[g] Secretaria, or Diaconia, or Catechumena of "the Church." Which implies, that all theſe places were made uſe of upon occaſion for the Confinement and Puniſhment of Delinquents, and then they had peculiarly the Name of Decanica, or Priſons of the Church.

SECT. X. Of the Mitatorium, or Meſatorium.

THERE is another Name for a Place belonging to the Church in Theodorus [h] Lector, which has as much puzzled Interpreters as the former. That is μιτατώριον, or μεταπώριον, as the modern Greeks call it. Goar in his Notes upon the Euchologium thinks it ſhould be Minſatorium, from μίνσ@ a Diſh, or Menſa a Table, and ſo he expounds it a place of Refreſhment for the Singers, where they might have Bread and Wine to recreate them after Service. Du Freſne [i] deduces it from Metatum, which is a Term of frequent Uſe in the Civil Law, and ſignifies a Station in the Curſus Publicus, where Entertainment was given to thoſe that travelled upon publick Buſineſs. Suicerus makes it [k] to be the ſame with the Diaconicum, or Salutatorium, the Saluting-Houſe, and thinks with Goar, it ſhould be read Minſatorium from Menſa, becauſe here was a Table erected, not for Entertainment, but for receiving ſuch Things as were brought and laid upon it. But I like beſt the Conjecture of Muſculus, who renders it Mutatorium, as ſuppoſing it to be a Corruption of that Latin Word, which ſignifies what we call an Apodyterium, or Veſtry, where the Miniſters change their Habit: And ſo it is agreed on all hands, that it was a part of the Diaconicum, or but another Name for it, though Men differ ſo much in their Sentiments, when they come to account for the Reaſon of it.

SECT. XI. Of the Gazophylacium, and Paſtophoria.

THE Author of the Conſtitutions, in his Deſcription of the Church, mentions alſo certain Places [l] called Paſtophoria, which according to his Account, were Buildings on each Side of the Church, toward the Eaſt End of it. But what Uſe they were put to we can learn no farther from that Author, ſave only that he tells us in another place, the Deacons [m] were uſed to carry the Remains of the Euchariſt thither when all had communicated. Whence Durantus meaſuring antient Cuſtoms by the Practice of his own Times, abſurdly concludes, that the Paſtophoria was the Ark where the Pyxe and Wafer (n) were laid; as if there was any Similitude betwixt a Pyxe, and a Building on each ſide of the Temple. Bona (o) with a little more Reaſon thinks the Paſtophorium was only another Name for Sceuophylacium, or Diaconicum. But indeed it ſeems to have been a more general Name, including not only the Diaconicum, but alſo the Gazophylacium, or Treaſury, and the Habitations of the Miniſters, and Cuſtodes Eccleſiæ, or as ſome think they are otherwiſe called, Paramonarii, Manſionarii, and Martyrarii, the Manſionaries, or Keepers of the Church. For the Word Paſtophorium is a Name taken from the Septuagint Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, Ezek. xl. 17, where it is uſed for the Chambers in the outward Court of the Temple. And St. Jerom in his Comment [p] upon the Place, obſerves, that what the Septuagint call Paſtophoria, and the Latins from them Cubicula, is, in the Tranſlations of Aquila and Symmachus, render'd Gazophylacium and Exedra; and he tells us they were Chambers of the Treaſury, and Habitations for the Prieſts and Levites round about that Court of the Temple. Therefore I think there is no queſtion to be made, but that the Paſtophoria in the Chriſtian Church were places put to the ſame Uſe as in the Jewiſh Temple, from which the Name is borrowed. For the Church had her Gazophylacia, or Treaſuries, as well as the Temple; which appears from a Canon of the Fourth Council of Carthage [q], which forbids the Offerings of Perſons at Variance one with another to be received either in the Treaſury or the Sanctuary. So that the Treaſury was a diſtinct place from the Corban in the Sanctuary, and therefore moſt probably to be reckoned among the Paſtophoria of the Church. Here all ſuch Offerings of the People were laid up, as were not thought proper to be brought to the Altar, but rather to be ſent to the Biſhop's Houſe, as ſome antient Canons give Direction in the caſe. Particularly among thoſe called the Canons of the Apoſtles we find two to this Purpoſe, "That beſide Bread and "Wine nothing [r] ſhould be brought to the "Altar, ſave only new Ears of Corn and Grapes, "and Oyl for the Lamps, and Incenſe for the "Time of the Oblation: But all other Fruits "ſhould be ſent εἰς οἶκον, to the Repoſitory, or "Treaſury it may be, as Firſt Fruits for the "Biſhop and Presbyters, and not be brought "to the Altar, but be by them divided among "the Deacons and other Clergy." The Paſtophoria were alſo Habitations for the Biſhop and Clergy, and the Guardians, or Keepers of the [g] Greg. Ep. 2. ad Leon. Iſaur. Concil. Tom. 7. p. 26. Pontifices ubi quis peccarit, eum tanquam in Carcerem, in Secretaria, ſacrorumque vaſorum Æraria conjiciunt in Eccleſiæ Diaconia & in Catechumena ablegant. [h] Theodor. Lector. lib. 2. p. 559. [i] Du Freſne Com. in Paul. Silentiar. p. 595. [k] Suicer. Theſaur. voce μετατώριον. [l] Conſtit. Apoſt. lib. 2. c. 57. ἐξ ἑκατέρων τῶ μερῶν τὰ παστοφόρια πρὸς ἀνατολήν. [m] Ibid. lib. 8. c. 13. λαβόντες οἱ διάκονοι τὰ προσφερόμενα. ἀπέρχεται εἰς τὰ παστοφόρια. [n] Durant. de Ritib. Eccleſ. lib. 1. c. 16. n. 8. [o] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 24. n. 2. [p] Hieron. Com. in Ezek. 40. 17. p. 640. Pro Thalamis triginta quos vertere Septuaginta, ſive Gazophylaciis atque Cellariis, ut interpretatus eſt Aquila, Symmachus poſuit ἐξέδρας··· quæ habitationi Levitarum atque Sacerdotum erant præparatæ. Id. Com. in Ezek. 42. 1. p. 652. Eductus eſt in Gazophylacium, ſive ut Symmachus & LXX. tranſtulerunt Exedram, vel ut Theodotio παστοφόριον, quod in Thalamum vertitur. [q] Conc. Carthag. 4. can. 93. Oblationes diſſidentium fratrum, neque in Sacrario, neque in Gazophylacio recipiantur, [r] Canon. Apoſt. c. 4. & 5.

Church, as Schelſtrate [s] rightly concludes from another Paſſage in St. Jerom [t], where he explains Paſtophorium to be the Chamber, or Habitation, where the Ruler of the Temple dwelt. So that it ſeems to have been almoſt as general a Name as that of the οἶκοι, or Exedræ of the Church.

SECT. XII. Of the Schools and Libraries of the Church.

WHETHER the Libraries belonging to the Churches were any part of theſe Paſtophoria, is not eaſy to determine; but thus much we are certain of, that there were ſuch Places antiently adjoining to many Churches, from the Time that Churches began to be erected among Chriſtians. Alexander Biſhop of Jeruſalem, in the third Century built a Library for the Service of that Church, where Euſebius tells us [u] he found the beſt part of his Materials to compoſe his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. Julius Africanus founded ſuch another Library at Cæſarea in Paleſtine, which Pamphilus and Euſebius much augmented. St. Jerom [w] ſays, "Pamphilus "wrote out almoſt all Origen's Works for the "Uſe of this Library, which were reſerved there "in his Time. And he often mentions [x] his own conſulting it upon neceſſary Occaſions, in his Emendations of the Text of the Holy Scriptures; telling us farther [y], "That there was "a Copy of St. Matthew's Goſpel in the Origi- "nal Hebrew, as it was firſt written by him, ex- "tant in his Time. Another of theſe Libraries we find mentioned in the Acts of Purgation of Cæcilian and Felix, belonging to the Church of Cirta Julia, or Conſtantina, in Numidia [z], where Paulus the Biſhop is accuſed as a Traditor, for delivering up the Goods of the Church, in the Time of the Dioclefian Perſecution. Theſe were all founded before the Church had any ſettled Times of Peace. In the following Ages we find St. Auſtin making mention of the Library [a] of the Church of Hippo, and St. Jerom [b] commending Euzoius the Arian Biſhop of Cæſarea for his Care in repairing the Library of Pamphilus, which was fallen to decay. St. Baſil [c] ſpeaks of the Roman Libraries, or Archives at leaſt. And the Author of the Pontifical [d], if any Credit may be given to him, aſcribes the building of two to Pope Hilary, near the Baptiſtery of the Lateran Church. But that which exceeded all the reſt, was the famous Library of the Church of St. Sophia, which Hoſpinian [e] thinks was firſt begun by Conſtantine, but was afterward vaſtly augmented by Theodoſius Junior, who was another Ptolemy, in whoſe Time there were no leſs than an hundred thouſand Books in it; and an hundred and twenty thouſand in the Reign of Baſiliſcus and Zeno, when both the Building and its Furniture were all unhappily conſumed together, by the firing of the City in a popular Tumult. He that would ſee a more ample Account of theſe Foundations in other Ages, muſt conſult Lomeier's Diſcourſe de Bibliothecis, where he purſues the Hiſtory of Libraries [f] from firſt to laſt, as well among Jews and Heathens, as every Age of Chriſtians. It is ſufficient to my preſent purpoſe to have hinted here briefly a ſuccinct Account of ſuch of them, as were antiently reckoned Parts, or Appendants of the Chriſtian Churches. And for the ſame Reaſon I take notice of Schools in this place, becauſe we find them ſometimes kept in the Churches, or Buildings adjoining to the Church: Which is evident from the Obſervation which Socrates makes upon the Education of Julian the Apoſtate, "That in his Youth he frequented the "Church [g] where in thoſe Days the Schools "were kept. He ſpeaks of the Schools of Grammar and Rhetorick, which it ſeems were then taught at Conſtantinople in ſome Apartment belonging to the Church. Here alſo it is probable, thoſe famous Catechetick Schools of Alexandria and Cæſarea were kept. For Demetrius Biſhop of Alexandria is ſaid by Ruffin [h] to have authorized Origen to teach as Catechiſt in the Church. Which, as I have noted in another [*] Place, cannot be underſtood of Preaching publickly in the Church; for Origen was then but eighteen Years old, and not in Orders, when he firſt entered upon the Catechetick School; but it muſt mean his private teaching in the School of the Church. Which whether it was in the Catechumenia within the Church, or in the Baptiſteria, or Paſtophoria without the Church, is not very eaſie nor very material to be determined, ſince it appears to have been in ſome place belonging to the Church, but not preciſely determined by any antient Writers. Whilſt I am upon this Head, I cannot but take notice of a Canon attributed to the ſixth general Council of Conſtantinople, which promotes the ſetting up of Charity Schools in all Country Churches. For among thoſe nine Canons which are aſcribed to this Council in ſome antient Collections, and publiſhed by Crab, there is one to this purpoſe [i], "That Presby- "ters in Country-Towns and Villages ſhould have [s] Schelſtrat. Concil. Antiochen. p. 186. [t] Hieron. Com. in Eſai. [u] Euſeb. lib. 6. c. 20. [w] Hieron. Catalog. Scriptor. Eccleſ. c. 75. [x] Id. Ep. ad Marcel. Tom. 3. p. 113. It. Com. in Tit. c. 3. [y] Hieron. de Scriptor. c. 3. Ipſum Hebraicum habetur uſque hodie in Cæſarienſi Bibliotheca, quam Pamphylus Martyr ſtudioſiſſime confecit. [z] Geſta Purgat. Cæciliani ad calcem Optati, p. 267. Poſtea quam perventum eſt in Bibliothecam, inventa ſunt Armaria inania, &c. [a] Aug. de Hæreſ. c. 80. Audivi de Hæreſibus ſcripſiſſe ſanctum Hieronymum, ſed ipſum ejus Opuſculum in noſtra Bibliotheca invenire non potuimus. [b] Hieron. Catal. Scriptor. c. 113. Plurimo labore corruptam Bibliothecam Origenis & Pamphili in membranis inſtaurare conatus eſt. [c] Baſil. Ep. 82. Tom. 3. p. 152. [d] Pontifical. Vit. Hilarii. Fecit Oratorium S. Stephani in Baptiſterio Lateranenſi. Fecit autem & Bibliothecas duas in eodem loco. [e] Hoſpin. de Templis, lib. 3. c. 7. p. 101. [f] Lomeier de Bibliothecis, Ultrajecti, 1680. 8vo. [g] Socrat. lib. 3. c. 1. εἰς βασιλικὸν, ἔνθα τότε τὰ παιδευτήρια ἦν. &c. [h] Ruffin. lib. 6. Hiſt. Euſeb. c. 3. Demetrius Catechizandi ei, id eſt, Docendi Magiſterium in Eccleſia tribuit. [*] Book 3. Chap. 10. n. 4. [i] Conc. 6. General. can. 5. ap. Crab. Tom. 2. p. 415. Presbyteri per Villas & Vicos Scholas habeant. Et ſi quis Fidelium ſuos Parvulos ad diſcendas Literas eis commendare vult, eos non renuant ſuſcipere, &c. Nihil autem ab eis pretii exigant, nec aliquid ab eis accipiant, excepto quod eis Parentes eorum charitatis ſtudio ſua voluntate obtulerint.

"Schools

" Schools to teach all ſuch Children as were ſent " to them, for which they ſhould exact no Re- " ward, nor take any thing, except the Parents " of the Children thought fit to make them any " charitable Preſent by way of voluntary Obla- " tion. And another of thoſe Canons [k] ſpeaks of Schools in Churches and Monaſteries, ſubject to the Biſhop's Care and Direction. From which we may conclude, that Schools were antiently very common Appendants both of Cathedral and Country Churches; and therefore it was not improper to hint thus much of them here, though a more full Account of other Things relating to them will make a Part in this Work hereafter, in its proper Place.

SECT. XIII. In what Senſe Dwelling-houſes, Gardens, and Baths, reckoned Parts of the Church.

EUSEBIUS, in his Deſcription of the Church of the Twelve Apoſtles, built by Conſtantine at Conſtantinople, takes notice of ſome other Buildings and Places belonging to the Church. For that Church, he ſays, was ſurrounded with a large Atrium, or Area, on each Side of which were Portico's, or Cloyſters, and along by them [l] firſt οἶκοι βασίλειοι, which Valeſius renders Baſilicæ, but I think Muſculus ſomething better, Domus Baſilicæ; for they ſeem not to mean Royal Palaces, but the Houſes of the Clergy adjoining to the Church. Then he adds λουτρὰ, which in this place neither ſignifies the Baptiſtery, nor the Fountain before the Church, but Baths belonging to the Church, which in a Law of Theodoſius [m], that ſpeaks alſo of the ſeveral parts of the Church, where Men ſhould be allowed to take Sanctuary, is called more plainly Balnea, and in the Greek Copy λουτρὰ, as well in the Code, as in the Acts of the Council of Epheſus, where the ſame Law is recited. Euſebius adds to theſe ἀναλαμπτήρια, which Muſculus tranſlates Deambulatorii Receſſus, taking them, I preſume, for Walks about the Church: But Valeſius more properly renders them Diverſoria; for they ſeem to mean the little Hoſpitals, or Houſes of Entertainment for the Poor and Strangers; which are the Cellulæ, the little Cells, or Lodgings, if I miſtake not, ſpoken of in the aforeſaid Law of the Theodoſian Code. And perhaps they might ſerve as Lodgings alſo for ſuch as fled to take Sanctuary in the Church. For theſe might neither eat nor lodge within the Church, but only in ſome of theſe outward Buildings, which upon that account were made as ſafe a Retreat, as the very Altar it ſelf, by the afore-mentioned Law of Theodoſius. And ſo were the κατηχήσια, as Euſebius calls them, the Habitations of the Porters, or Keepers of the Church; and likewiſe the Gardens, and Area, and Cloyſters enjoyed the ſame Privilege, being within the Bounds of the περίβολος, or outward Encloſure of the Church. And ſo far, as to what concerns the Privilege of yielding Sanctuary, all theſe Places were reckoned as parts of the Church. But of this more in the laſt Chapter, which treats particularly of the Laws relating to the Aſyla, and the Privilege of taking Sanctuary in the Church.

SECT. XIV. When Organs firſt came to be uſed in the Church.

I ſhould here have put an End to this Chapter, but that ſome Readers would be apt to reckon it an Omiſſion, that I have taken no notice of Organs and Bells, among the Utenſils of the Church. But the true Reaſon is, that there were no ſuch Things in Uſe in the antient Churches, for many Ages. Muſick in Churches is as antient as the Apoſtles, but Inſtrumental Muſick not ſo: For 'tis now generally agreed by learned Men, that the Uſe of Organs came into the Church ſince the Time of Thomas Aquinas, An. 1250. For he in his Summs has theſe Words, " Our Church does [n] not uſe Muſical " Inſtruments, as Harps and Pſalteries, to praiſe " God withal, that ſhe may not ſeem to Judaize. From which our learned Mr. Gregory, in a peculiar Diſſertation [o] that he has upon this Subject, concludes, That there was no Eccleſiaſtical Uſe of Organs in his Time. And the ſame Inference is made by Cajetan [p], and Navarre [q], among the Romiſh Writers. Mr. Wharton [r] alſo has obſerved, that Marinus Sanutus, who lived about the Year 1290, was the firſt that brought the Uſe of Wind Organs into Churches, whence he was ſirnamed Torcellus, which is the Name for an Organ in the Italian Tongue. And about this Time Durandus, in his Rationale [s], takes notice of them as received in the Church, and he is the firſt Author, Mr. Gregory thinks, that ſo takes notice of them. The Uſe of the Inſtrument indeed is much antienter, but not in Church-Service; the not attending to which Diſtinction is the Thing that impoſes upon many Writers. In the Eaſt the Inſtrument was always in Uſe in the Emperor's Courts, perhaps from the Time of Julian, who has an Epigram [t] giving an handſome Deſcription of it. But in the Weſtern Parts the Inſtrument was not ſo much as known 'till the Eighth Century. For the firſt Organ that was ever ſeen in France, was one ſent [k] Ibid. can. 4. Si quis ex Presbyteris voluerit Nepotem ſuum aut aliquem Conſanguineum ad Scholas mittere in Eccleſiis Sanctorum, aut in Cœnobiis, quæ nobis ad regendum commiſſa ſunt, licentiam id faciendi concedimus. [l] Euſeb. Vit. Conſtant. lib. 4. c. 59. οἶκοί τε βασίλειοι ταῖς σοαῖς, λουτρά τε, καὶ ἀναλαμπτήρια παρεξετέτατο, ἀλλά τε πλεῖστα καταγώγια τοῖς τῆ τότε ὁρμῆς, &c. [m] Cod. Th. lib. 9. tit. 45. De his qui ad Eccleſias confugiunt, Leg. 4. Ut inter Templum quod parietum deſcripſimus cinctu, & januas primas Eccleſiæ, quicquid fuerit interjacens ſive in Cellulis, ſive in Domibus, Hortulis, Balneis, Areis atque Porticibus, Confugas interioris Templi vice tueatur. [n] Aquin. 2da 2dæ Queſt. 91. Artic. 2. Eccleſia noſtra non aſſumit Inſtrumenta Muſica, ſicut Citharas & Pſalteria in Divinas laudes, ne videatur judaizare. [o] Gregory Diſcourſe of the Singing of the Nicene Creed. Inter Opera Poſthuma, p. 51. [p] Cajetan. in Loc. Aquin. & in ſummula. [q] Navar. de Orat. & Horis Canonicis, cap. 16. [r] Wharton. Append. ad Cave Hiſtor. Literar. p. 13. Marinus Sanutus, cognomento Torcellus, Germani cujuſdam artificis opera uſus, Organa illa Pneumatica, quæ hodie uſurpantur, Italice Torcellos dicta, primus omnium in Eccleſiam induxit: inde datum ei Torcelli nomen. [s] Durand. Rational. lib. 4. c. 34. lib. 5. c. 2. [t] Vide Vitam Juliani per Morentinum, p. 11.

as a Preſent to King Pepin, by Conſtantinus Copronymus the Greek Emperor, An. 766, as Bona himſelf [u] ſhews out of Sigebert [w], and the antient Annals [x] of France, and M. Gregory adds Marianus Scotus, Martin Polonus, Aventine, Platina, and the Pontifical for the ſame Opinion. But now it was only uſed in Princes Courts, and not yet brought into Churches. Nor was it ever received into the Greek Churches, there being no Mention of an Organ in all their Liturgies, antient or modern, if Mr. Gregory's Judgment may be taken. But Durantus however contends for their Antiquity both in the Greek and Weſtern Churches, and offers [y] to prove it, but with ill Succeſs. Firſt, From Julianus Halicarnaſſenſis, a Greek Writer, An. 510, whom he makes to ſay, "That Organs were uſed in the Church in his "Time. But he miſtakes the Senſe of his Author, who ſpeaks not of his own Times, but of the Times of Job and the Jewiſh Temple. For commenting upon thoſe Words of Job xxx. 31. My Harp is turned to Mourning, and my Organ into the voice of them that weep, he ſays, "There was "no Prohibition to uſe Muſical Inſtruments, or "Organs [z], if it was done with Piety, be-"cauſe they were uſed in the Temple. By which it is plain, he ſpeaks of the Jewiſh Temple in the Singular, and not of Chriſtian Temples, or Churches in the Plural, as Durantus miſtakes him. Next for the Latin Church he urges the common Opinion, which aſcribes the Invention of them to Pope Vitalian, An. 660. But his Authorities for this are no better than Platina and the Pontifical, which are little to be regarded againſt clear Evidences to the contrary. That which ſome urge out of Clemens Alexandrinus [a] I ſhall not anſwer as Suicerus [b] does, (who with Hoſpinian [c], and ſome others, wholly decrying the Uſe of Inſtrumental Muſick in Chriſtian Churches, ſays, "It is an Interpolation and "Corruption of that antient Author) but only obſerve that he ſpeaks not of what was then in uſe in Chriſtian Churches, but of what might lawfully be uſed by any private Chriſtians, if they were diſpoſed to uſe it. Which rather argues, that Inſtrumental Muſick, the Lute and Harp, of which he ſpeaks, was not in uſe in the publick Churches. The ſame may be gathered from the Words of St. Chryſoſtom, who ſays [d], "It was only permitted to the Jews as Sacrifice "was, for the Heavineſs and Groſſneſs of their "Souls; God condeſcended to their Weakneſs, "becauſe they were lately drawn off from Idols. "But now inſtead of Organs [e] we may uſe "our own Bodies to praiſe him withal. Theodoret [f] has many the like Expreſſions, in his Comments upon the Pſalms, and other Places. But the Author, under the Name of Juſtin Martyr, is more expreſs in his Determination, as to Matter of Fact, telling us plainly, "That the "Uſe [g] of Singing with Inſtrumental Muſick "was not received in the Chriſtian Churches, "as it was among the Jews, in their Infant State, "but only the Uſe of plain Song. So that there being no Uſe of Organs 'till the twelfth Century, I could not ſpeak of them as Utenſils of the antient Churches.

SECT. XV. Of the Original of Bells, and how Church-Aſſemblies were call'd before their Invention.

FOR the ſame Reaſon I reckon not Bells among the antient Utenſils, becauſe they are known to be a modern Invention. For the firſt Three Hundred Years it is certain, the Primitive Chriſtians did not meet in their Aſſemblies, by the Notice of any publick Signal: Though Amalarius [h] fancies they had ſome ſounding Inſtruments of Wood for this purpoſe. But this is ſo abſurd a Fancy, and altogether groundleſs Dream, to imagine, that in an Age of Perſecutions, when they met privately in the Night, they ſhould betray themſelves as it were, and provoke their Enemies to deſtroy them, that neither Bona [i] nor Baronius [k] himſelf could digeſt it. But Baronius has another Fancy, which is not much better grounded. He ſuppoſes there was an Order of Men, appointed on purpoſe to give private notice to every Member, when and where the Aſſembly was to be held; and theſe, he ſays [l], are called Curſores, or Διάδρομοι, Couriers, in the antient Language of the Church. His ſole Authority for this is Ignatius [m] in his Epiſtle to Polycarp, where he has indeed the Name, but in a quite different Senſe from what Baronius explains it to be. For he ſpeaks not of Perſons employed in calling together Religious Aſſemblies, but of Meſſengers to be ſent from one Country to another, upon the important Affairs of the Church, as any one that looks carefully into Ignatius will eaſily diſcern. Theſe he in another Place [n] calls πρεσβύτας, divine Ambaſſadors, as all learned Men agree that it ought to be read; and ſo the old Latin Tranſlation has it, Sacros Legatos; and Polycarp [o] uſes the ſame Name when he ſpeaks of thoſe Meſſengers of the Churches. Theſe were commonly ſome Deacons, or others of the inferior Clergy, whom the Biſhop thought fit to ſend upon the Embaſſies of the Church. But as to calling of Religious Aſſemblies, we are not ſure how it was then performed, ſave only that it was done in a private way: And perhaps the Deaconneſſes were the fitteſt Perſons to be employed therein, as being leaſt known or ſuſpected by the Heathen; but for want of Light we can determine nothing about it. In the following Ages we find ſeveral [u] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 25. n. 19. [w] Sigebert. an. 766. [x] Annales Metenſes, an. 757. [y] Durant. de Ritib. lib. 1. c. 13. n. 2. [z] Julian. Catena in Job 30. p. 465. ἀλλὰ κεχρῆσθαι ὀργάνοις ἀπείρητο, μετ' εὐσεβείας γινομένης ὅπερ γε ἐν τῷ ναῷ τούτοις ἐκέχρηντο. [a] Clem. Alex. Pædag. lib. 2. c. 4. [b] Suicer. Theſaur. voce Ὄργανον, p. 501. [c] Hoſpin. de Templis lib. 2. c. 11. p. 74. [d] Chryſoſt. in Pſal. 149. Tom. 3. p. 634. [e] Id. in Pſal. 144. [f] Theod. in Pſal. 32. & 150. [g] Juſtin. Quæſt. & Reſponſ. ad Orthodox. Q. 107. ἐν ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις προῃρέτου ἐκ τῶν ἀσμάτων ἡ χρῆσις τῶν τοιούτων ὀργάνων, διὰ τὸ ἄλλων τῶν νηπίων ὄντων ἀρμοδίων, διὰ τοῦτο ἐλείφθη τὸ ἆσμα ἁπλῶς [h] Amalar. de Officiis lib. 4. c. 21. [i] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 22. n. 1. [k] Baron. an. 58. n. 108. [l] Ibid. n. 102. [m] Ignat. Ep. ad Polycarp. n. 7. [n] Ignat. Ep. ad Smyrn. n. 11. [o] Polycarp. Ep. ad Philip. n. 13.

other

other Inventions before Bells to call Religious Aſſemblies together. In Egypt they ſeem to have uſed Trumpets after the manner of the Jews. Whence Pacomius [p] the Father of the Egyptian Monks makes it one Article of his Rule, That every Monk ſhould leave his Cell, as ſoon as he heard the Sound of the Trumpet calling to Church. And the ſame Cuſtom is mentioned by Johannes Climachus [q], who was Abbot of Mount Sinai in the ſixth Century, whence we may conjecture, that the old Uſage continued 'till that Time in Paleſtine alſo. But in ſome Monaſteries they took the Office by Turns of going about to every one's Cell, and with the Knock of an Hammer calling the Monks to Church; which Cuſtom is often mentioned by Caſſian [r], and Palladius [s], and Moſchus [t], as uſed chiefly for their Night-Aſſemblies, whence the Inſtrument is termed by them the Night-Signal, and the Wakening-Mallet. In the Monaſtery of Virgins, which Paula the famous Roman Lady ſet up and governed at Jeruſalem, the Signal was uſed to be given by one going about, and ſinging Hallelujah: For that Word was their Call to Church, as St. Jerom [u] informs us. In other Parts of the Eaſt they had their ſounding Inſtruments of Wood, as Bona [w] ſhews at large out of the Acts of the ſecond Council of Nice, and Theodorus Studita, and Nicephorus Blemides, and ſeveral other Writers. And the Uſe of Bells was not known among them, as he obſerves out of Baronius [x], 'till the Year 865, when Urſus Patriciacus Duke of Venice made a Preſent of ſome to Michael the Greek Emperor, who firſt built a Tower to the Church of Sancta Sophia to hang them in. But whether it be that this Cuſtom never generally prevailed among the Greeks, or whether it be that the Turks will not permit them to uſe any Bells, ſo it is at preſent that they have none, but follow their old Cuſtom of uſing Wooden Boards, or Iron Plates full of Holes, which they call σήμανδρα, and χειροσήμανδρα, becauſe they hold them in their Hands, and knock them with their Hammer or Mallet, to call the People together to Church, as we are informed by Allatius, and a late learned Writer [y] of our own, who has been an Eye-witneſs of their Cuſtoms. Who firſt brought Bells into Uſe in the Latin Church, is a Thing yet undetermined; ſome aſcribing them to Pope Sabinianus, St. Gregory's Succeſſor, An. 604, and others to Paulinus Biſhop of Nola, Cotemporary with St. Jerom. This laſt is certainly a vulgar Error, and ſeems to owe its Riſe to no other Foundation, but only that he was Biſhop of Nola in Campania, (where Bells perhaps were firſt invented, and thence called Nolæ and Campanæ) and ſome bold modern Writer thence concluded, that he was therefore the Author of them. And it might make the Story look a little more plauſible, becauſe that he alſo founded a Church in Nola. But then it happened unluckily for this Fiction, that he himſelf deſcribes his Church, and that very minutely, in his twelfth Epiſtle to Severus, but takes no notice of Tower, or Bells, though he is exact in recounting all other leſſer Edifices belonging to his Church. Which, as Bona truly obſerves, is a ſhrewd Argument, joined with the Silence of all other antient Writers, to prove that he was not the Inventor of them. Yet Bona, after all, would have it thought, that they began to be uſed in the Latin Church, immediately upon the Converſion of Chriſtian Emperors, becauſe the Tintinnabula, or leſſer ſort of Bells, had been uſed before by the Heathens to the like Purpoſe. Which is an Argument, I think, that has very little Weight in it, ſince there is no antient Author that countenances his Conjecture. For he produces none before Audoenus Rothomagenſis, that mentions the Uſe of the Tintinnabula, nor any before Bede, that uſes the Name Campana: Both which Authors lived in the ſeventh Century, and that is an Argument that theſe Things were not come into Uſe among Chriſtians long before, elſe we might have heard of them in Writers before them, as we frequently do in thoſe that follow after. I need not now tell any Reader, that the Popiſh Cuſtom of conſecrating, and anointing, and baptizing of Bells, and giving them the Name of ſome Saint, is a very modern Invention. Baronius carries it no higher than the Time of John XIII. An. 968, who conſecrated the great Bell of the Lateran Church, and gave it the Name of John [z], from whence he thinks the Cuſtom was authorized in the Church. Menardus [a] and Bona [b] would have it thought a little more antient, but yet they do not pretend to carry it higher than one Age more, to the Time of Charles the Great, in whoſe Time ſome Rituals, Menardus ſays, had a Form of bleſſing and anointing Bells, under this Title or Rubrick, Ad Signum Eccleſiæ benedicendum, a Form for bleſſing of Bells. And it is not improbable but that ſuch a Corruption might creep into the Rituals of thoſe Times; becauſe we find among the Capitulars of Charles the Great, a Cenſure and Prohibition of that Practice, Ut Clocas non baptiſent [c], That they ſhould not baptize Clocks, which is the old German Name for a Bell. But what was then prohibited, has ſince been ſtifly avowed and practiſed, and augmented alſo with ſome additional Rites, to make Bells a ſort of Charm againſt Storms and Thunder, and the Aſſaults of Satan, as the Reader

[p] Pachom. Regula. c. 3. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 15. p. 629. Cum audierit vocem Tubæ ad Collectam vocantis, Statim egrediatur.
[q] Climac. Scala Paradiſi, Gradu 19. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 5. p. 244.
[r] Caſſian. Inſtitut. lib. 2. c. 17. lib. 4. c. 12. [s] Pallad. Hiſt. Lauſiac. c. 104. Ξυπνιασήειον σφυείνο. [t] Moſchus Prat. Spirit. Nocturnum pulſare ſignum, &c. [u] Hieron. Ep. 27. Epitaph. Paulæ, p. 178. Poſt Alleluya cantatum, quo ſigno vocabantur ad Collectam, nulli reſidere licitum erat.
[w] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 22. n. 2. [x] Baron. an. 865. Tom. 10. p. 319. [y] Dr. Smith's Account of the Greek Church, p. 70. [z] Baron. an. 968. Tom. 10. p. 810.
[a] Menard. Not. in Sacramental. Gregor. p. 207. [b] Bona Rer. Liturg. lib. 1. c. 22. n. 7. [c] Capitular. Caroli Magni, cited by Durantus de Ritibus, lib. 1. c. 22. n. 2.

that

that pleaſes may ſee the Ceremony deſcribed by Sleidan [d], and Hoſpinian [e], out of the old Pontificals of the Romiſh Church. But I fear my Readers will begin to accuſe me now, inſtead of an Omiſſion, of making too long a Digreſſion upon this Subject, and therefore I return to the Buſineſs of Antient Churches.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Anathemata, and other Ornaments of the Antient Churches.

SECT. I. What the Ancients meant by their Anathemata in Churches.

AFTER having taken a diſtinct Survey of the chief Parts and Buildings, and common Utenſils of the antient Churches, it will not be amiſs to caſt our Eyes upon the ornamental Parts thereof, and conſider a little after what manner the firſt Chriſtians beautify'd their Houſes of Prayer. The Richneſs and Splendor of ſome of their Fabricks, and the Value of their Utenſils belonging to the Altar, many of which were of Silver and Gold, I have already taken notice of: What therefore I ſhall farther add in this Place, concerns only the remaining Ornaments of the Church, ſome of which were a little uncommon, and but rarely mentioned by modern Writers. The general Name of all ſorts of Ornaments in Churches, whether in the Structure it ſelf, or in the Veſſels and Utenſils belonging to it, was antiently Anathemata; which, though it moſt commonly ſignifies Perſons Devoted, or Accurſed by Excommunication, or Separation from the Church, yet it ſometimes alſo denotes Things given to God, and devoted to his Honour and Service. In which Senſe all the ſacred Veſſels, and Utenſils of the Church, and all Gifts and Ornaments belonging to it, were called Anathemata, becauſe they were ſet apart from common Uſe, to God's Honour and Service. Some of the Greeks diſtinguiſh thus between ἀναθήματα and ἀναθέματα, as Suicerus has [a] obſerverved out of Chryſoſtom [b], and Heſychius [c], and Balzamon [d], and Zonaras, making the firſt to ſignify Ornaments of the Church, or Things devoted to God's Honour; and the other, Things accurſed, or devoted to Deſtruction. But others of them do not ſo nicely obſerve this Diſtinction, but uſe the ſame Word to ſignify both, Things devoted to God's Uſe, and Things devoted to Deſtruction, as Suicerus ſhews in the ſame place out of Theodoret, Cyril of Alexandria, the Author of the Queſtions ad Orthodoxos, under the Name of Juſtin Martyr, and ſome others. Here I take both Words only as ſignifying Gifts or Ornaments of Churches. In which Senſe ἀναθήματα is uſed by St. Luke, xxi. 5. for the Gifts and Ornaments of the Temple. And ſo Euſebius, deſcribing the Hemiſphere, or Altar-part of the Church of Jeruſalem, and the twelve Pillars which ſupported and ſurrounded it, ſays, "The Heads of the Pillars were adorned with "Silver Bowls, which Conſtantine ſet up as his "beautiful ἀνάθημα, that is, his Gift or Offer-"ing [e] to his God." And a little after he ſays again, "He adorned it [f] with innumerable "Gifts of Silver, and Gold, and precious Stones." So that all the rich Veſſels, and Utenſils of the Altar, the rich Veſtment which the Biſhop put on when he adminiſtred the Sacrament of Baptiſm, which was interwoven with Gold, and which, as Theodoret [g] and Sozomen [h] tell us, was one of Conſtantine's Gifts to the Church of Jeruſalem; theſe, I ſay, and all other ſuch like Ornaments belonging to the Church, as well as what contributed to the Beauty and Splendor of the Fabrick it ſelf, were all reckoned among the Anathemata of the Church. But in a more reſtrained Senſe, the Anathemata ſometimes denote more peculiarly thoſe Gifts, which were hanged upon Pillars, and ſet in publick View, as Memorials of ſome great Mercy which Men had received from God. In Alluſion to which Socrates [i] thinks the Term Anathema is uſed for Excommunication, becauſe thereby a Man's Condemnation is publiſhed and proclaimed, as if it were hanged up upon a Pillar. St. Jerom alſo had his Eye plainly upon this Cuſtom, when he ſpeaks of Mens Gifts [k] hanging in the Church upon golden Cords, or being ſet in golden Sockets, or Sconces. For the word Funale ſignifies both. And tho' he rather adviſes Men to offer their Gifts to the true Temples of Chriſt, meaning the Bodies and Souls of the Poor; yet that implies another way of offering their Gifts to be in common Uſe, that is, hanging up their Anathemata, or Donaria (as he, with other Latin Writers, calls them) in the material Temples. Vide Sidon. Apollinar. lib. 4. Ep. 18. & Paulin. Natali 6. Felicis.

SECT. II. One particular Kind of theſe, called ἐκτυπώματα, when firſt brought into Churches.

AMONG theſe there was one particular kind of Gifts, which they called ἐκτυπώματα, becauſe they were a ſort of Symbolical Memorials, or Hieroglyphical Repreſentations of the Kindneſs and [d] Sleidan. Commentar. lib. 21. p. 388. [e] Hoſpin. de Templis lib. 4. c. 9. p. 113.

[a] Suicer. Theſaur. voce ἀνάθημα. [b] Chryſoſt. Hom. 16 in Rom. [c] Heſych. Lexicon. [d] Balzamon. & Zonar. in Can. 3. Concil. in Templo Sophiæ. [e] Euſeb. de Vita Conſtant. lib. 3. c. 38. ἀνάθημα κάλλιστον ἑτοιμάζετο τῷ αὐτοῦ θεῷ. [f] Ibid. c. 40. ἐκόσμει δ' αὐτὸν ἀσήμοις κάλλεσι ἀναθημάτων χρυσοῦ, &c. [g] Theodor. lib. 2. c. 27. [h] Sozom. lib. 4. c. 25. [i] Socrat. lib. 7. c. 34. [k] Hieron. Ep. 27. ad Euſtoch. in Epitaphio Paulæ. Jactent alii pecunias & in Corbonam Dei æra congeſta, funalibuſque aureis Dona pendentia, &c. Id. Ep. 13. ad Paulin. Verum Chriſti Templum anima credentis eſt.——Illi offer Donaria.

Favour, which in any kind they had received. When first they began to be offered and set up in Churches, is not very easy to determine: But I think Bochart's Conjecture [l] is very probable, that it was about the middle of the fifth Age, because Theodoret is one of the first Writers that takes notice of them. He tells us, in one of his Therapeuticks, or Discourses to the Gentiles [m], "That when any one obtained the Benefit of a "signal Cure from God, in any Member of his "Body, as his Eyes, or Hands, or Feet, &c. he "then brought his ἐκτύπωμα, the Effigies or "Picture of that Part in Silver or Gold, to be "hanged up in the Church to God, as a Memo"rial of his Favour." This Bochart thinks was done by way of Emulation of the Gentiles, among whom it was customary for such, as had escaped any great Peril or Disaster, to consecrate some Monument of their by-past Evils, to their Gods that delivered them. As they that had escaped a Shipwrack, dedicated a Tablet to Neptune, or Isis, representing the manner of their Shipwrack. So Gladiators hanged up their Arms to Hercules; and Slaves and Captives, when they got their Liberty, and were made free, offered a Chain to the Lares. And so we read (1 Sam. vi. 4.) that the Philistines sent their golden Emrods and Mice, Figures of the Things by which they had suffered, as an Offering to the God of Israel. I shall make no farther Observation upon this Practice, but only remark how far the Romish Church is degenerate in this Matter from the antient, who offer now to Men more than they do to God, and fill their Churches with Gifts, acknowledging some Tutelar Saints as their chief Patrons and Benefactors.

SECT. III. Churches antiently adorned with Portions of Scripture written upon the Walls.

BUT to proceed with the antient Churches: Another Ornament, which served for Use as well as Beauty, was their comely and pertinent Inscriptions, many of which are preserved, and still to be read in antient Authors. These were of two sorts, some taken out of Scripture; others, useful Compositions of Mens own Inventing. The Walls of the Church seem commonly to have had some select Portions of Scripture written upon them, containing some proper Admonition and Instruction for all in general, or else more peculiar to that Order of Persons who had their Station in such a particular Part, or Division of the Church. Thus I have observed before [*] out of St. Ambrose [n], that the Place of the Virgins had that Text of St. Paul sometimes written by it on the Walls, There is Difference between a Wife and a Virgin; the unmarried Woman careth for the Things of the Lord, how she may please the Lord, &c. And by this one Place we may judge, how other Parts of the Church were embellished, and adorned with proper Instructions out of the Holy Scripture.

SECT. IV. And with other Inscriptions, of Human Composition.

BUT besides these Lessons out of the inspired Writings, it was very usual to have other Inscriptions, of Human Composure, written on the several Parts, and Utensils of many Churches. Of which I have already given some Instances out of Paulinus, speaking of the Catechumenia and Secretaria [*] of the Church. And the curious Reader may find abundance more of the same nature, upon the Baptistery, and the Altar, and the Frontispiece [o], too long to be here inserted. I shall only here repeat two short Distichs, written over the Doors of the Church, one on the Out-side, exhorting Men to enter the Church with pure and peaceable Hearts, on this wise:

Pax tibi sit, quicunque Dei Penetralia Christi
Pectore pacifico candidus ingrederis.

And the other on the Inner-side of the Doors, requiring Men, when they go out of the Church with their Bodies, to leave at least their Hearts behind them.

Quisquis ab æde Dei perfectis ordine votis Egrederis, remea corpore, corde mane.

Many other the like Inscriptions may be seen in Sidonius [p] Apollinaris, and other Writers of that Age; but I will only add one more, which for the Curiosity of it may deserve to be here inserted. It is the Inscription which the Emperor Justinian is said to have written round about the Altar of the Church of Sancta Sophia. The Altar it self, Cedrenus tells us, was a most inimitable Work: For it was artificially composed of all sorts of Materials that either the Earth, or the Sea could afford; Gold, Silver, and all kinds of Stones, Wood, Metals, and other Things: Which being melted, and mixed together, a most curious Table was framed out of this Universal Mass; and about it was this Inscription: We thy Servants [q], Justinian and Theodora, offer unto thee, O Christ, thy own Gifts out of thy own, which we beseech thee favourably to accept, O Son and Word of God, who wast made Flesh, and crucified for our Sakes; Keep us in the true Orthodox Faith; and this Empire, which thou hast committed to our Trust, augment and preserve it to thy own Glory, πρεσβείαις τ ἁγίας Θεοτόκυ, by the Intercessions of the Holy Mother of God, and Virgin Mary. The Reader will not wonder at this last Part of this Inscription, in the sixth Age, when the Prayers of Saints in Heaven were thought available, without directly praying to them.

SECT. V. Gilding and Mosaick Work used in the ancient Churches.

ANOTHER considerable Part of the Ornament of Churches, was the Beautifying of the Roof, or Camera, as they then called it.

[l] Bochart. Hierozoic. Part 1. lib. 2. cap. 36. p. 368. [m] Theodor. Serm. 8. de Martyr. Tom. 4. p. 606. [*] Book 8. Chap. 5. Sect. 9. [n] Ambros. ad Virgin. Lapsum. [*] Chap. 6. Sect. 22. [o] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. [p] Sidon. lib. 4. Ep. 18. [q] Cedren. Hist. Compend. an. 32. Justin. p. 386. τὰ σὰ ἐκ τῶν σῶν σοι προσφέρομεν οἱ δοῦλοί σε χριστέ, &c.

This

This was done two ways, either by Moſaick Work, which they call Muſivum; or by Lacunary Work, dividing the Roof into ſeveral Pannels, by Architects termed Laquearia, or Lacunaria, from Lacus, ſome of which were round, and ſome ſquare, (as Valeſius obſerves [r] out of Iſidore) and divided either with Wood, or Plaiſter, or Colours from each other, and then either gilded, or painted, as Mens Fancies led them. Both theſe were uſed to adorn the antient Churches. The Temple of Sancta Sophia was curiouſly wrought in Moſaick, or Checquer Work, as Procopius [s] relates; and Conſtantine's Church at Jeruſalem was Lacunary: For Euſebius [t] ſays, "The whole Roof was divided in- "to certain carved Tables, or Pannels, and all "laid over with ſhining Gold." And this he calls a little before καμάραν λακωναρίαν, a Lacunary Roof adorned with Gold. Some Churches, as that of Paulinus [u] of Nola, were beautified both ways. For Paulinus ſays, "The Roof of "his Apſis, or Altar-part, was Moſaick Work; "but the Body of the Church, and the Galle- "ries on both ſides the Church were Lacunary: that is, divided into Pannels, as we ſee in many of our modern Churches. The Reader that pleaſes may ſee a great deal more of this matter in St. Jerom, who often ſpeaks of their Lacunary [w] Golden Roofs, and Walls adorned with Cruſt of Marble; and Pillars with their Chapiters of ſhining Gold; and Gates inlaid with Ivory and Silver; and Altars diſtinguiſhed and beſet with precious Stones and Gold. Though he was no great Admirer of theſe Things himſelf, but a greater Friend to Charity.

SECT VI.
No Pictures, or Images, allowed in Churches for the firſt 300 Years.

THEY of the Romiſh Church, when they are deſcribing the antient Churches, commonly add to theſe other Ornaments, that of Pictures and Images, according to the modern Cuſtom: And nothing will content them, but to have them as antient as Churches themſelves, that is, to be derived from Apoſtolical Practice. To this purpoſe they have invented an Apoſtolical Council at Antioch, wherein not only the Uſe, but the Worſhip of Images is pretended to be authorized by the Apoſtles. And the Credit of this Council is ſtifly defended by Baronius [x], and Turrian, and Binius, and many ſuch over-zealous Writers. But Petavius [y], and Pagi [z], and other Writers of Candor and Judgment, give it up as a meer Forgery, and freely confeſs it to be a Fiction of the modern Greeks. Petavius alſo [a] owns, that for three or four of the firſt Ages there was little or no uſe of Images in Churches. And indeed the Evidences are ſo plain, that none but they who reſolve to wink hard can deny them. The Silence of all antient Authors is good Evidence in this Caſe. The Silence of the Heathen is farther Confirmation: For they never recriminated, or charged the Uſe of Images upon them. Nay, in the laſt Perſecution, when they often plundered and pillaged their Churches, we never read of any Images ſeized in them, though we have ſeveral particular Catalogues, or Inventories, of what they found there, left upon Record by the Heathen. It is a very full one which Baronius [b] firſt publiſhed, and is ſince inſerted among the Collections [c] at the End of Optatus. There is a particular Breviat of all Things, found by the Perſecutors in the Church of Paul, Biſhop of Cirta, in Numidia, where we find mention made of Cups, and Flaggons, and Bowls, and Water-pots, and Lamps, and Candleſticks, and Torches, and Coats, and other Clothing for Men and Women, which in thoſe Days ſeem to be laid up in Store, either for the Poor, or the Aſceticks of the Church: But of Images, or Pictures there is not a Syllable, which is at leaſt a good Negative Argument, that there was no ſuch Thing then in their Churches. Nay, there are poſitive Proofs in the fourth Age, that in ſome Places they were not then allowed to be ſet up in Churches. As in Spain, in the time of the Council of Eliberis, An. 305, there was a poſitive Decree againſt them. For one of the Canons of that Council runs in theſe Words: "We de- "cree [d], that Pictures ought not to be in "Churches, leſt that which is worſhipped and "adored be painted upon the Walls." And it was certainly ſo in Cyprus to the End of this Century, as appears from that famous Epiſtle of Epi-

[r] Iſidor. Origen. lib. 19. Laquearia ſunt quæ Cameram ſubtegunt & ornant: Quæ & Lacunaria dicuntur, quod Lacus quoſdam quadratos vel rotundos, Ligno vel Gypſo vel Coloribus habeant pictos, cum ſignis intermicantibus. [s] Procop. de Ædificiis Juſtin. lib. 1. cited by Valeſius Not. in Euſeb. de Vit. Conſt. lib. 3. c. 36. [t] Euſeb. lib. 3. de Vit. Conſt. c. 36. τὰ ὑπὲρ τὸν ἔσω σέγης γλυφαῖς φατνωμάτων ἀπηρτισμένα, &c. Vid. c. 32. [u] Paulin. Ep. 12. ad Sever. p. 150, & 151. Apſidem ſolo & parietibus marmoratam Camera Muſivo illuſa clarificat. —— Totum vero extra Concham Baſilicæ ſpatium alto & lacunato culmine geminis utrinque Porticibus dilatatur. [w] Hieron. lib 2. in Zechar. 8. Non ſolum Laquearia & Tecta fulgentia auro, ſed Parietes diverſi Marmoris cruſtis veſtiti. Id. Ep. 2. ad Nepotian. Marmora nitent auro, ſplendent Laquearia, Gemmis altare diſtinguitur, &c. It. Ep. 30. Epitaph. Fabiolæ, c. 4. Sonabant Pſalmi, & aurata templorum tecta reboans in ſublime quatiebat Alleluya. It. Ep. 8. ad Demetriad. Virgin. Alii ædificent Eccleſias; veſtiant parietes marmorum cruſtis; Columnarum moles advehant, carumque deaurent Capita, pretioſum ornatum non ſententia; Ebore argentoque valvas, & gemmis aurata diſtinguant altaria. Non reprehendo, non abnuo. Unuſquiſque in ſenſu ſuo abundet. Meliuſque eſt hoc facere, quam repoſitis opibus incubare. Sed tibi aliud Propoſitum eſt, Chriſtum veſtire in Pauperibus, &c. [x] Baron. an. 102. n. 19, & 20. Binius Not. in Conc. Antioch. Conc. Tom. 1. p. 62. [y] Petav. Dogmat. Theol. de Incarnat. lib. 15. c. 14. n. 5. Quod ad illum canonem Apoſtolicum attinet, quem primus edidit in lucem Franciſcus Turrianus, cum puto ſuppoſititium eſſe, &c. [z] Pagi Critic. in Baron. an. 56. n. 3. [a] Petav. ibid. c. 13. n. 3. Pagi. ibid. Certum eſt, Imagines Chriſti, & maxime ſtatuas, primis Eccleſiæ Sæculis non fuiſſe ſubſtitutas loco Idolorum, nec Fidelium venerationi expoſitas. [b] Baron. an. 303. n. 12. [c] Geſta Purgation. Cæcilian. ad calcem Optati, p. 266. In Brevi ſic: Calices duo aurei: Item Calices ſex argentei: Urceola ſex argentea: Cucumellum argenteum: Lucernæ argenteæ ſeptem: Cereofala duo: Candelæ breves æneæ cum lucernis ſuis ſeptem: Item Lucernæ æneæ undecim cum catenis ſuis. Tunicæ muliebres 82: Mafortea 38: Tunicæ viriles 16: Caligæ viriles paria 13: Caligæ muliebres paria 47: Coplæ ruſticanæ 19. [d] Conc. Eliber. c. 36. Placuit Picturas in Eccleſia eſſe non debere, ne quod colitur aut adoratur, in parietibus depingatur.

